St. Louis, April 8.—Sparks from a switch engine yesterday set fire to the big ele-vator on the river front at the foot of Biddle street, owned by the St. Louis Elevator and Storage Company, and within less than two hours the building was reduced to ashes, entailing a loss of nearly $650,000.

H. C. Haarstick, president of the com-

The burned building was the second largest in St. Louis. The building was insured for $90,000, and the storage company's grain for $550,000. Other insurances on private storage will aggregate $50,000.

Aylmer Express: The charter provides for branch roads in any and every direction, single or double tracks, connections with other roads, and the route will be about as follows, but may be varied somewhat: London to Nilestown, Belmont, Mapleon; thence east to first turn south to the townline between Malahide and South Dorchester; thence east to the gravel road, thence south past the M. C. R. to Aylmer, where the power house, car sheds and repair shops will be located; thence south to the fourth concession, and east through Luton to Bennet's Son, and east through Mount Corners; thence south through Mount Salem to the first concession, and east to Port Burwell. This is an ideal route for such a line, and it will pay from the ment the first wheels turn. It has a city of about 40,000 people at one end, and perhaps the finest natural summer resort on the northern shore of Lake Erie at the other, and passes through as fine, rich and well settled a farming section as can be found anywhere on t nent, to say nothing of Aylmer, the best town of 2,500 people on earth. Everybody wants the road, and the only kick comes from those who want the route change to bring it closer to their own doors. We expect to see work commenced on the grading on the road within the next 30 days, and hope to have a ride over it to Port Burwell in August.

ABOUT POLICE PROTECTION.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
In your issue of March 30 last, your reporter appears to have had an interview with Chief of Police Williams in relation to the petition of the Real Estate Owners' Association for a reduction of the police estimates. The chief is reported to have stated that the R. E. O. "only tell half the facts."

done on provocation. The prisoner, on being asked if he had anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be pronounced against him, answered: "I am not guilty." During the trial a mysterious personage known as May Wright was shown to be one of the principal operatives in connection with drawing the confession from Todd. It now turns out that ABOUT POLICE PROTECTION. the R. E. O. "only tell half the facts. They instance Winnipeg, where 55,000 May was a boy dressed up for the ocpeople are kept in order by 25 police-men." Well, yes, Mr. Chief, that part of the statement is correct. The chief then states that "they should have explained that Winnipeg policemen are paid $70 to $80 per month." No, Mr. Chief, the Real Estate Owners did not want to say that; they wanted to confine their remarks strictly to facts. The Mine their remarks strictly to facts. The Winnipeg policemen receive $60 per month, not $70 or $80, as stated by you. The statement may also be made that the cost to Winnipeg for police protection for one year was $24,168 79, and the cost to London for the same time was not less than $34,000. Winnitime was not less than $34,000. Winnipeg has no patrol wagon. Some years ago it was stated that the acquisition of a patrol wagon for London would be a great saving, and that fewer men would be required. The chief further states: "It is easy for the Real Estate Owners to talk, as they have no responsibility." The people who are paying the money are just as greatly interested in the restate of the res terested in the welfare of London as the police commissioners, and they certainly are responsible for the paynent of the taxes, and are at least en titled to be heard when a respectable communication is sent to the city council asking for a reduction of the amount of money expended in police protection. Crime is not to any great extent kept down by the number of ext to hear the address- men patrolling the streets on well-demen patrolling the streets on well-de-fined beats. Crime is principally kept down by the prompt manner in which the criminal is brought to justice and punished. London's detectives and po-licemen have succeeded very well in r. Another serious landslide occurred Thursday afternoon on the Ottawa and Gatineau Railway near Ironsides, and as a result the upgoing train had to be canceled.

Bradstreet's crime is committed, and the criminal discovered after the act by the detectives and policemen. Mutual Arrangement Between the Canadian and the United States Government. Washington, April 8.-As a result of negotiations between Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and the Canadian minister of agriculture, an agreement has been reached between the two administrations by which Canada is to have a first-class veterinarian stationed in England to test for tuberculosis all British cattle shipped to this country via Canada. It is offi-cially explained that about 10 per cent of live stock in the United States and about 40 per cent in Great Britain have tuberculosis. The cattle on the continent of Europe are so diseased that this government will not permit the admission of any animals from there.

"It's a bad time to swap horses when you are crossing a stream."

That was Lincoln's famous reply to those who urged him to make a change in generals at a critical period of the Civil war.

Lincoln's saying is worth remembering, especially when you are asked to "swap" Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a bootless bargain, described as "just as good," at the critical time when health is at stake.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine which has a record of ninety-eight per cent. of cures. It is an absolutely reliable family medicine, nonhelps; it almost always cures. Why should any one who is seeking a cure for sickness, and is persuaded that the Discovery" will cure him, "swap" the substance for the shadow at the risk of

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. What is popularly termed "weak" stomach is the common cause of various forms of physical weakness,—such as "weak" heart, "weak" lungs, "weak" or sluggish liver, "weak" nerves, etc. The entire body and its several organs are dependent for strength upon the food prepared in the stomach. The "weak" stomach cannot provide the foodstrength for the various organs, which in their turn become "weak" and unable to accomplish the work for which they were designed. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures through the stomach diseases which have their cause in a diseased condition of the stomach and the allied organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimulation of food by which the body is built up into a condition of sound

"Have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it did me more good than anything I could get," writes Mrs. Julia A. Wilcox. of Cygnet, Wood Co., Ohio, Box 25. "I doctored with three different doctors for weak heart, but they did me no good. I was so tired and discouraged if I had had my choice to live or die I would have prefered to die. My husband heard of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and he bought me a bottle. I took that and the first half seemed to help me. I took six bottles before I stopped, I am perfectly well and am cooking for boarders (I have six), and am taking in washing besides. I will truly say I think your medicine will do all it is recommended to do, and more. It has been a God-send to me. I will be willing to answer any letters of inquiry that any one wishes me to. If you think this will be the means of helping any poor suffering woman to obtain relief you may print it and make any honest use of it you wish to." "Have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Dis-Was Bedfast.

"I had been sick for more than a year with kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Lucy Hayter, of Jacksboro, Jack Co., Texas. "Several different doctors treated me, but none did me any good. One doctor said I never could be cured, that I had Bright's Disease. I suffered nearly death at times; had spells the doctor called spasms. Was bedfast most of the time for six mouths. My mother begged me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. With but little hope I wrote to Dr. Pierce and he said he could cure me. I began to take his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and although I had given up to die, I began to improve from the start, and by the time I had taken twenty-two bottles I was entirely cured. I thank God for the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I weigh more than ever before in my life, and believe I am entirely well."

Little Queenie's Gide to Dollhouse Ettiket -A Complete Manual of Nurser Maners and Custums."

Punch recently, under the heading, "Little Queenie's Gide to Dollhouse Ettiket (A Complete Manual of Nursery Manners and Customs)," had the following: When a new doll comes to the nursery it is customary, provided alcoholic and non-narcotic. It always the doll is unconnected with Trade and unobjecshunable in other ways, for all the leding members of Sosiaty to leve

Sometimes you leve cards on New cumers that, although they are not strictly dolls, still they may be desirable acquaintances and useful people to know, like a plaster fygure full of sweties or the casteyon purson with the monybox who takes a place on the nursery mantlepiece.

But to leve a card on a mere animil, like a white rabit or wooly cokatoo, would betray grose ignirans of the usiges of good Sosiaty.

After a sutible interval, which should never exede five minutes, the new cumer has to leve a card or a historicle domano on each inhabbitent in return, but does not ask if they are at home, which would be bad taste. Then each inhabbitent leves another card and the new cumer leves one on them, and so they go on till they are Praps you may think there is not tired out.

Let us suppose it is your best doll and she wishes to pay a formal caul. Having thursly washed her face (unless it is paint that comes off) and put her hat strate, and seen that she has both shoes on and properly butoned, you acompany her to wherever the new doll is and inquire if she is at home, and if the anser is No, it means that she does not desire to continue the acquaintance, so you simply say lukky!" and go away. At least mother does, so it must be all rite. But supose she is in, then you will have to do the tauking for both dolls, because they are always shy about conversing outloud.

It is most important to sellect just the rite toppic, as dolls hate to be made to tauk about anything they don't understand, like novils and pollywhich are never discused in realy good Sosiaty.
Some people, such as my sister Mable, generally make their dolls begin with the weather, but this is a sily stufy topic and should be left to What dolls do enjoy is tauking about their servants. You can make your doll say she has a purfec tresher of a cook, only she will spend most of her time lying under the kitchen dreser, and how thoughtless of the nurse to go and leve the mekanikle pig all night in baby's cradel, etsetra. Then the new doll says no one would believe the truble she had with hers, and her parlurmade is leaving her just when she has lernt to dress hare to marry the plaster groom in Brother Frankey's stabels, but servants are so inconsidrate and never studdy anybody's convinence except their own, and you kin go on like that ever so long if nurse is out of the room.

Then your doll asks the other has she got to know many of the naburs than they do in midwinter

ENTANGLING ALLIANCES

Curious Marital Mixup and Double Elopement-Woodstock's Latest Scandal.

Woodstock, April 8.—A queer matri-monial tie-up has developed here. Last fall a woman of mature years came to Woodstock from St. Charles, Mich., with a man much her junior in age. They set up housekeeping on Henry street as Mr. and Mrs. Bailey. They bought furniture on the installment plan. A few days later another couple showed up from Michigan. The newcomers, who were about of an age, were sister to the alleged Mr. Bailey and son of Mrs. Bailey respectively. They called themselves Mr. and Mrs. Arthur. They went to live in the Bailey dovecote as man and wife also. On Wednesday a fifth person appeared on the scene. It was no less than the elderly Mrs. Bailey's husband. His name is Frank B. Hughes. Hughes went down to the Henry street abode as soon as he got here, and there was a hot time for a while. Hughes said later that he won out, also told the correspondent a remarkable story of female duplicity. Thirty years ago he married his wife, he said, in St. Charles, Mich. They bought a farm in her name and cleared it. They lived happily until about a year ago, when Hughes had reason to suspect that his wife was on too friendly terms with the hired man, Frank Hill. He, however, did nothing further than chide her for her supposed unfaithfulness Frank Hill the young hire man had a mother and sister living in St. Charles. The Hughes grown on, Arthur, fell in love with her. Last summer the Hughes house was burned mysteriously. Mrs. Hughes col-lected $50 insurance. Then one day she and Frank Hill disappeared; so did the $500 and deed of the farm. few days later young Arthur Hughes and Miss Hill were missing. Hughes did not know where any of them had gone, but he intercepted a letter from Woodstock sent to the elder Mrs. Hill, who, he says, arranged the double elopement, and found out the quartet were in Woodstock. He came here to get the deed of his farm. He did not want his wife. His wife gave up the deed when she was threatened with arrest on a charge of bringing stolen goods into Canada. Hughes has gone back to St. Charles. The young Hill girl has been taken to the Detroit Indigents' Home. Both young Hill and Arthur Hughes left when they heard Hughes was here, and have not been seen since. Mrs.

Hughes, sen., is still here. WANTED AT LANSING. The paragraph regarding Frank Hill and Frank Hughes, who have been living at Woodstock since last November, gave the officers at Lansing, Mich., the first clue they had been able to discover of the whereabouts of the two men charged with crime in that county. The men named were arrested at Mason last fall on a charge of counterfeiting. The dies were discovered in their possession, and they had attempted to pass some of the spurious coins in Corunna and other towns. The men obtained bail ostensibly for the purpose of going to the polls to vote on election day, but took leg bail and have not been heard from since. It is more than probable that this fact accounts for their mysteridisappearance from Woodstock their whereabouts became

NEW LIGHT ON OLD EGYPT.

Important Relics Recently Found at Ancient Abydos.

The Burial-Places of the Earliest Kings Show a Civilization That Existed Many Centuries Ago. [Washington Star.] If ancient monarchs made history, by their discoveries, and the most not modern explorers are creating it anew able triumph in that direction is one just achieved by Prof. W. M. Flinders-Petrie, the explorer of the Egypt exploration fund at Abydos in Egypt, famous in the inscriptions as one of the most ancient settlements in that land of remote dates. Abydos has been visited before, and so late as 1895, by M. E. Amedineau, a French explorer, who claimed to have swept the ground clean and found whatever was worth finding. Mr. Petrie was struck by the importance of Frenchman's discoveries, but did not believe that the ground had been exhausted, and his work on the same site ha sestablished the value of this preconception. Amelineau did find the tombs, but he worked in such an unscientific way that although he did astonish the learned world he did not add as much positive knowledge regarding the ancient kings whose tombs were found as has since been brought to light by the careful work of the greatest archaeologist now living.

The work which Mr. Petrie did at Abydos has been hinted at in the public prints from time to time since its announcement. But the first authoritative account of this work from him is fust appearing in England. only does it fill in the spaces in the history of Egypt with the names of authentic kings, but it tells the 20th century how mankind lived 100 cen-turies ago. Fortunately it was the ustom of the ancient Egyptians to reproduce the life of the people in their tombs, burying with their kings many of the jewels and utensils by which they were surrounded in life.

A VERY ANCIENT TOMB. One of the most interesting and important of the tombs identified by Mr. Petrie is the tomb of Menes, the first king of united Egypt, who is now by this discovery reclaimed from the limbo of myths to which modern historians had consigned him. The date of his reign is not determinable, for Egyptologists differ widely in the chronology of their kings, but it certain that he lived not later than 5000 3.C., and perhaps as early as 6000

At this remote period one might suppose that civilization was in its in fancy, but the finds in this and other tombs give evidence of an art that must have taken many centuries for its development up to that point. Menes' tomb and those of his successors, constituting the eight kings of the first dynasty and two of the se cond let in a flood of light upon the life of that very ancient day.

Of course, the hieroglyphs of that period are very primitive, and may be read variously, but it will be gener-ally taken for granted that Mr. Petrie is right in identifying Menes. Athothis, Kenkenes, Uenefes, Usafais, Miebis Semenpses and Bienekhes of the list given by Manetho, the ancient Egyptian historian, with the persons buried at Abydos, the great royal cemetery. Manetho says of the place that the site selected for the royal tombs was on a low spur from the hills, slightly raised above the plain, with a deep ravine on the west of it, so that it could never be flooded. accounts for the perfect preservation

PRICELESS RELICS.

The articles found by Mr. Petrie are infinite in number and variety. tween 10,000 and 20,000 pieces of vases were found, ranging in date from the earliest to the latest times Some two hundred of these vases have been restored. SHOW AN EARLY ORGANIZATION. The most perfect stele of a private person found was discovered near the tomb of King Qa, and belonged to Sabef. The block of stone was ground all over with rounded edges, and the inscription was sketched on it in red ink, and then drawn in black ink. This ground was roughly hammered but the final dressing and scraping of the stone was omitted. It is plain from the inscription that Sabef was keepe

WONDERFUL POTTERY. The pottery ranges all the way from the coarse, ill-formed bowls and jugs, made simply by putting a lump of mud into a hole scooped out of the ground and trimming and wiping the vessel with the hand, up to those formed with the art of the potter's wheel, the earliest invention made by mar The art of the potter made rapid strides, and was succeeded by that of the sculptor, who cut crystal vases and hard marble into artistic shapes. Alabaster bowls and jars of almost classic shape, produced at a very early period, were found.

One of the most astonishing facts in connection with the inscription found at Abydos, dating from the first dynasty, is that, differing as they do from the later scrip, the principles and many of the characters seem to be already generally established. This is additional proof that with the civilization even of the remote first dynasty we have not yet reached the dawn of civilization, although we have come nearer to it by a few thousand years

That Mr. Petrie could come after the French excavator and find so much of value, reading many of the inscriptions which baffled the earliest investigators and finding places for all the kings in lists which have been known but never corroborated, is a great triumph for English scholarship. Instead of a number of tombs of unknown persons, we have now a new chapter in early history extracted from the sands of ancient Egypt.

Gerrymander in North Bruce.

It turns out that if there had been good weather for the voting in North Bruce, Mr. Campbell, the Liberal candidate, would have been elected in the late bye-election, despite the most questionable tactics pursued by his opponents, evidenced in a marked degree by the race and religious cries put in rirculation in the Opposition newspapers in the riding, and promulgated in every corner of the constituency. On the day before polling, a train on which were 28 voters, who were anxious to poll their votes for good government, got snow-bound, and what was a majority for the Liberal candidate was converted into a minority. The transition that has taken place In North Bruce within the last year pr two has been marked. Bruce county has a Liberal majority of nearly 1,200, but it was subjected to the infamous gerrymander, and the "Grits were hived" in the west riding, while the other two divisions were carved up with the object of making them safe Conservative seats. But neither of them can be regarded as such. At last Plection, it took Mr. Cargill all his time to hold his own in the center riding, and Mr. McNeil, the one-time-suppos-Pd-to-be-invincible, was really defeated in the north, though he held the seat till the means whereby he was elected were investigated by the courts. Now because of the snowstorm, and by virtue of the race and religion cry, Mr. Halliday manages to squeeze in. We do not believe that he can continue to hold the seat, if the means whereby he was elected are investigated, as they most certainly ought to be, for the reports from the riding are that he has not been elected fairly.

lowing in the footsteps of his father

where we hope he will find as much real service with less vulgar sensa-He contributed to the Daily News special number a brief history of the United States during the nineteenth century, and in a paragraph headed, "The Rush of Immigration," he shows with what tremendous speed that great country has advanced since "the war," which he speaks of as "the most costly and effective advertisement," "In all, about nineteen millions have left Europe to settle in the United States. Tens of thousands of these immigrants were the offscouring of the continent. But the United States has an immense digestive capacity for raw human material. It has absorbed into its national life the most heterogeneous and antagonistic elements and, after a generation, has turned them out American citizens, devotedly loyal to their adopted country, speaking English and thinking English. American institutions have proved a potent dissolvent of national and sectional prejudices. The Chinese and the negro alone have withstood this overwhelming power of assimilation. They alone have refused to be stamped with the Anglo-

Saxon hall mark." The following figures given by Mr. Stead speak volumes as to "the progress of the species" in the United States. The population is 76,295,220; the flag flies over 3,846,595 square miles of territory, a larger area than the whole of Europe, including Russia. There are almost 200,000 miles of railway. "A network of almost three million miles of telegraph, and 600,000 miles of telephones cover the union." The schools accommodate 17,000,000 pupils, taught by nearly a half million of teachers. But what need have we of further testimony that "this is the greatest country on earth," we who live so near to it? Those who dwell in the little island across the sea can scarcely realize the meaning of these figures, unless one has a very vivid imagination; touch is necessary to make one understand the immensity of space and vastness of resources that are possible to a country which has a great part of one of the largest continents to itself. There is no doubt that the United States is destined to place and wield a mightier influence in the world. It is just as well to recognize the fact; the sooner it is recognized the better. We have admirain bulk, numbers and wealth.

London's New Armory.

It is now settled that the London

Armory to be erected by the Dominwill be made to have it complete in every respect. That is the statement made by Hon. Mr. Tarte, Minister of Public Works, when the question was before Parliament the other day, when the money necessary for paying for the site was being voted. Hon. Mr. Tarte was quite within the truth when he told Dr. Sproule, who was in a criticising mood, that "London is a very important place, it is the center of a military district, and perhaps it may be found good policy to buy more ground and have a larger area." It would be indeed false economy to put up a splendid structure in so suitable a locality, and have the building cramped for lack of room that may be obtained by purchasing one or more additional lots. As to the amount to be expended, it will range from $80,000 to $100,000, and it is expected that the structure will be commodious enough to accommodate all branches of the service.

Some of the Opposition members were disposed to condemn the Government for being too liberal in its treatment of London. Dr. Sproule, for example, held that as other cities had been so anxious to have new armories that they offered free sites, or were ready to pay a portion of the cost of the structure, London should be made to do the same. Mr. Gilmour, a fellow Opposition member, however, refused to lend his sympathy to the view that London was being unduly favored, for he rose and backed up Hon. Mr. Tarte in a short and effective

London will have an armory in due course, that for point of situation and completeness will be second to none in the country, and it will have it without any "huckstering" as to cost or site of building. The military corps located in the city and neighborhood deserve this much consideration, and the Government will fully recognize Labby on the Royal Civil List.

At the beginning of a new reign, it is usual to readjust the civil list; that appointed to consider the matter brought in a report suggesting a net increase of £67,000. Henry Labouchere, editor of London Truth, with a courage which deserves recognition, brought in a minority report of one, taking ground tical education of which, first of ali, against the increase. What he neatly they are in need. says against King Edward VII. at- ed the good purpose of setting people tempting to compete with the "new rich," is worthy of reproduction:

"The committee did not deem it within the scope of their inquiry to consider whether a continuance of the pomp of pride and ceremony of the court is desirable. Suggestions have been rife that the cost of living has gone up among the wealthier classes since her late Majesty ascended the throne. This idea seems to be due to the present ostentatious expenditure of some of those who have suddenly acquired large fortunes. But your committee does not believe the sovereign would desire to enter into monetary ompetition with such persons or encourage by his example such vainglorous prodigality on the part of his

We do not say the amount of the new King's civil list is excessive; probably it is not; but Mr. Labouchere thought differently, and it is greatly to his credit that he had the courage to be sufficiently uncourtierlike to say exactly what he thought in his minority report of one. But Britain is not Russia.

A Sad Wail. We have heard very much lately about "the British workingman," and not all of it, we are very sorry to say, to his credit. Now there is another pitiful cry, from one who professes to know. Mr. William Woodward, A. R., I. B. A., writes in The Nineteenth Century and After, on "The British Workman and His Competitors," and the net result of his deliverance is that a great many of the workingmen are playing the part of enemies to themselves and their country. These are the words of a friend, we are told: "I, with most Englishmen, have the utmost sympathy with the men in their many trials and hardships. I know that, at bottom, they are as good as any in the world; but their conduct during the last ten years has tended to alienate all sympathy with, and regard for, them.' That is certainly a very strong statement from a friend. The writer then proceeds to sum up under two heads, the dictation of trades unions, and the laziness and self-indulgence of the men. Wages have increased, and hours of labor have been shortened; but according to this authority the men are not better off. We grow still more, to occupy a larger trust that this view is too pessimistic, or at least that there are many brilliant exceptions. Here, however, is the statement given in a somewhat sarcastic tone: "We know that the men are tion for this great growing nation, and paid at noon on Saturday, and that we trust it will grow in moral power | many of them are not seen again on and humanitarian feeling as well as the building until the Tuesday morning following. It may be that they have been studying the handiwork of their A report of the weather in Dawson, predecessors at the South Kensington shows that the thermometer was below zero the greater part of the month, going as low as 64.5 on the 16th. his family. Instances are then given of alleged arbitrary rules on the part of the same unions, which hamper the employers and do no good to anyone. This architect thinks that the money spent on technical education, so far as the building artisan is concerned, has been wasted. "There never has been, and there never will be, any good substitute for the old-fashioned apprentice-

The Discussion of the Carnegie Library Question.

[New York Sun.] A correspondent, whose letter on the Carnegie library question we regret that we are unable to publish because of its great length, makes in the course of it the true and strong point that the library which serves the best use for the reader is the little shelf of books which the boy or youth gathers as his own possession. These books become his friends and companions, and the more self-denial their purchase has cost him the more he prizes them and the more thoroughly he reads them.

The greatest men in our American history have obtained in that way first introduction to literature. They began with a few books, but they mastered them, reading them over and over again. Books taken from a circulating library and hurried through in two or three days serve no such purpose. Reading them be-comes a form of dissipation, or certainly it is of no better educating influence than seeing a play, even if it is good. Such reading does not cultivate the studious habit, but rather prevents its growth. It is reading for provision by the public is desirable only so far as efforts generally to entertain the people at the public expense may be called desirable. The reading of good newspapers is of far more substantial advantage.

Moreover, the point made today in the letter from a German correspondent that there is already too much reading is not without force, in view of the quality of the great mass of popular reading, for it is apt to divert attention from serious duties of prime importance to the development of character and the successful pursuit of the work of life. The knowledge most requisite for the run of people is not got out of books, but by observation and in experience. It is the world of fact and not of fiction into which they need to go for the prac-

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE B. Y. P. U.

Necessity for More Systematic Manner of Giving-Officers Chosen-Next Year's Meeting To Be Held in London.

Toronto, April 6.-The Baptist Young People's Union of Ontario and Quebec met here at the Dovercourt Road Baptist Church yesterday afternoon and last evening. There was a fair attendance of delegates and friends. The financial report of retiring officers at Jarvis Street convention, showed a deficit of $245 50, due largely to the distribution of free literature and the failure of societies to meet the request for a collection for the Provincial Union. In view of the deficit tee board of management considered t inadvisable to enter upon any special work that involved the expenditure of money. The main feature of the year's work were the emphasis given to the daily Bible reading, the holding of fall rallies and the organization of societies. The treasurer's statement showed that last year, including outstanding accounts, there was a deficit of $245 57 Subscriptions this year were $190 66, and disbursements $181 83. There is a deficit of $170 27.

A committee appointed to consider the manager's report, with Chancellor Wallace as chairman, reported in favor of a more systematic manner of giving, so that the deficit should be cleared off.

The new officers for the year were unanimously elected on the following report of the nominating committee: President, Rev. George T. Webb; vice presidents, W. H. Blair, Ottawa; W. E. Robertson, Ottawa; A. S. Wood-burn, London; recording secretary, J. A. Bathgate, York Mills; corresponding secretary, D. A. Atkinson, ronto; treasurer, Rev. L. Brown, Pe-

PLAGUE RELICS.

A curious stratum of ancient London has been unearthed during the recent work of widening the Strand around the churches of St. Clement, Danes and St. Mary le Strand, by unearth-ing old graves. Many historic remains have thus been brought to light. The strictest secrecy has been maintained regarding the identity of the bodies exhumed. Throughout the day not a vestige of the activity is apparent inside the high boarding, and a tar-paulin is even stretched across the open space to prevent the inquisitive spectators in surrounding windows from seeing anything. In addition to famous vaults opened, the workmen amusement merely, and practically its provision by the public is desirable ground of victims of the great London plague huddled together in trenches. CHOICE CIGARETTE HOLDERS.

Another grewsome find in connection with these trenches was a number of short clay pipes, which are known to have been used by the gravediggers, who regarded tobacco smoke as a certain protection against infection. These pipes are scarcely larger than an ordinary cigarette holder. Some, indeed, which have been cleaned, are now actually in use among friends of the excavators as cigarette holders. When the authorities discovered the use made of them every effort was made to obtain possession of the pipes pre-sented to outsiders, but it is more than probable not half were recovered.

THE DREIBUND. It is learned reliably that the German foreign office regards it as probable that Signor Zanardelli, the Italian premier, will ask for certain modifications of the Dreibund conditions which seem to hinder the bettering of the relations between Italy and France, though in themselves the paragraphs are now Francophobe. The German foreign office believes that mutually agreeable arrangements may be effected. The Dreibund expires May 6, 1903, eight months before the commer cial treaty.

AUSTRIA AND ITALY BUILDING WARSHIPS.

Berlin, April 8.—Commander William H. Beehler, United States naval attache at Berlin. Vienna and Rome, has returned from inspecting the navy yards of Austria and Italy. Commander Beehler found Austria and Italy fully alive in naval matters. At Trieste, Austria is building three large battleships on the latest model. He found the navy to be in excellent condition. Italy will launch two new battleships during 1901, and will begin the construction of two others in the yards at Spezia.

Wonders of the Nerves

Unmistakable Proof That Many Serious the Nervous System-The Astonishing Success of Dr. Chase's Nerve

It is only in recent years that physicians have come to understand the nervous system, and to recognize that many diseases which affect the head, heart, lungs, stomach and other organs are due to an impoverished and exhausted condition of the nerves.

Overwork, worry, care, anxiety and severe mental strain are sure to be followed by headache, neuralgia, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart trouble, indigestion and serious functional disorders. Gradually the symptoms grow worse; pains and aches increase and one organ after another gives evidence of derangement, until finally there comes collapse of the nerves and prostration or paralysis.

The family physician seldom gets at the cause of these ailments. He gives a powder for headache, some form of opium to cause sleep, or a stimulant to whip up the debilitated system. Such treatment is only of temporary benefit; and the trouble soon returns in an aggravated form. The tired brain, the worn-out nerves, the wasted strength, must be nourished and built up before nature can have power to drive out disease. No prescription was ever filled that can do this so thoroughly as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is only a few years since Dr. Wood pulp boards are also Chase's Nerve Food first became known in Canada, and now it is universally acknowledged by doctors, as well as others, to be of unsurpassed value as a therough restorative for weakened and run-down systems and nerve-shattered bodies. It is possible that you have a wrong treatment. MR. STEAD ALARMED. London, April 8.-W. T. Stead, who is now devoting part of his energy to starting a British movement designed to further the aims of The Hague conference, said that he regarded the far eastern situation as fraught with extreme peril. He points to the indignant outspokenness of Japan's leading newspapers and public men as auguring ill for the peace of the world, unless the czar speedily lays a restraining hand on his political and military representatives in connection with Manchuria. Continuing, Mr. Stead says he be ieves that, for the first time since its outbreak, the war in South Africa 13 proving of benefit to Great Britain Speaking to a correspondent, he said: "Only our entanglement with the Boers prevented us from getting into trouble with Russia over the Tien Tsin siding question. The Cologne Volks Zeitung says Emperor William's words to the Emperor Alexander Grenadier nmistakable Proof That Many Serious Regiment, upon the occasion of their installation in their new barracks, near them his life guards, etc., have been received everywhere with dismay and amazement, but sadder still is the fact that the emperor had the regiment's barracks built in close proximity to the castle, which shows that the emperor meant what he said upon that occasion. The paper then dissects the emperor's toast concerning Russo-German relations, and says it is evident that somebody has been systematically trying to embroil these hitherto friendly relations. As a fact, the emperor's utterances have been interpreted in all ways to suit everybody's taste and partyism.

London, April 6.-The depopulating of India through famine and cholera is assuming alarming proportions. The latest advices from Simla say the census returns of the central provinces show a decrease of over a million since 1897, when an increase of a million and a half might have been expected. It is estimated that five millions have died in India since 1896 from causes directly due to the famine. In Western India things are even worse. In Parliament.

[From the London Chronicle.] The printing and stationery vote for the Houses of Parliament is a large item, but it will not be appreciably increased by the concession which has just been made to strangers by supplying them with a copy of the orders of truth there was in the statement published by the Daily Express, that he long ago, when the supply of this it was sometimes difficult to find a spare copy even in the press gallery. But there is now an almost unlimited distribution. Hitherto strangers have had to depend upon the generosity of the members who introduced them for a copy; they could not even buy them It is doubtful, however, whether the innovation will be of much practical value, for the programme is designed on a rather cryptoc plan , and it takes a good deal of training in order to fol-

The disinclination on the part of the authorities to take this step was not on the score of economy, but because an unwritten law of the house lays it down that while members are speaking there shall be no reading. A copy of the orders, especially when there are a hundred questions on the paper, which is now frequently the case, is of such proportions that it might easily conceal a newspaper, and a newspaper is strictly taboo in the chamber. A member who introduced a newspaper into the house, unless with the purpose of quoting it, has often been called to or der. In the press gallery newspaper reading has to be done furtively, but here, of course, the boxes in which the journalists sit conceal the breach of parliamentary decorum. The ladies behind the grille are a law unto themselves. Their harem-like position enables them to read newspapers or novels, and even to do needlework, or eat sandwiches, without bringing down the thunders of the sergeant-at-arms upon their heads.

RUSSIAN PROPOSALS WITHDRAWA

Czar Nicholas Wishes to Avoid War With Japan.

Russia's Real Position in Manchuria in No Way Impaired by This Course.

Paris, April 6 .- According to information that has reached Paris from a source regarded as of undeniable authenticity, Russia has withdrawn the proposed Manchurian treaty with China. This step is attributed to the personal instigation of Emperor Nicholas, and is accepted as evidence of his determination to avoid, at the present juncture, any conflict with Japan. Coupled with this news comes the statement that Russia does not deem it expedient to withdraw any of her troops now in Manchuria, and intends to maintain the status quo there until a Chinese government can be established at Pekin strong and stable enough to inspire Russian confidence for the future. This courteous and un-expected withdrawal of the proposed Manchuria convention, until now so aggressively urged upon China, is regarded as an exceedingly clever movement on the part of Russia, because that treaty, which could only be wrung from China by renewed drastic pressure, would, after all, only secure an empty international sanction of position which Russia already holds in Manchuria, and the significance of the treaty might render war with Japan inevitable. The conviction prevails in diplomatic circles here that the international peace negotiation with China will be facilitated by Russia's withdrawal of the convention, which, by postponing the settlement of the Manchurian difficulty, reduces it to an affair of local interest. At the same time the present Russian occupation of Manchuria is regarded here, rightly or wrongly, as a parallel case to the British occupation of Egypt, as de facto possession that will approach permanency as each year elapses.

PUNISHMENT OF OFFICIALS. Shanghai, April 6.—The China Asso-iation has cabled to London a protest against the proposal to pay the Chinese indemnity by an increase of the tariff. The association claims that although such an increase is possibly practicable, it should remain for future settlement, as increased tariff is calculated to deprive the commercial powers of means of redress for treaty grievances, and is also detrimental to the expansion of trade. The associa-tion considers that the honest collection of the present native sources of revenue will adequately provide for the payment of the indemnity.

BRITISH PRESS COMMENT. Ludlum and Lewis, Professional Pickpockets, Go Across the Line to Stand Trial.

The most unconcerned and nonchalant members of the little group that faced the police magistrate Saturday were Park Lewis and Frederick Lewis, whose aliases for London were Ludlum and Fredericks, respectively, yet the charges preferred against cessary, bringing stolen goods into Canada, and smuggling. Awaiting the magistrate's disposal of the case was Detective Larkin, a well-known Dewill not cut or turn bad color, with troit officer, whose visit to the city threw a little light upon the prisoners' rather shadowy past. Substantially, his story was as follows: "Detective Nickle did a good thing when he nabbed these two fellows. I recognized them when I saw them yesterday. Both are professional criminals, and are pretty well known to the police, especially in Michigan. Frederick Lewis is Frederick Green, of Detroit. He just left the Michigan penitentiary after serving a three-year term for pocket. serving a three-year term for pocket-picking. I arrested him myself. That other chap, Ludlum, has served two years at Toronto. He was sent down for one year, but he escaped. Then he was caught and given an extra year.

They both have long records."

Mr. Thomas Moran, a Detroit commercial man, accompanied Larkin and recognized the diamond that Detective Rider discovered in a down-town jewelry store. He went to the Wonderland Theater on March 27, with one of the Detroit police commissioners. The pri-Detroit police commissioners. Ludlum pleaded not guilty to the charge of actual stealing, but acknowledged the attempt, while his companion admitted being a vagrant. As Detective Larkin was eager to secure the men, and they preferred Detroit justice, Police Magistrate Love allowed them to go on their own bail. If they should ever come here again they will be sentenced on this charge. Both waived extradition proceedings, and returned to Detroit.

WAVES OF THE OCEAN

That Are Respectable Hills When Adorning Traveler's Sea Tales-Their Real Height.

We hear persons who go to the sea in ships talk about waves mountain high, but such waves only exist in the imagination, or are hyperbolic, for the purpose of adorning a tale. If, on the land, you see an elevation 38 feet high, you would not call it much of a mountain; yet it is very seldom that an ocean wave reaches that height. Mr. Vaughan Cornish, of London, has recently been measuring waves, and has given an interesting report on their proportions. He didn't measure with two years. After a short time spent his imagination or his sensation when being violently rocked in the cradle of the deep while on a wave-washed deck, but he used unimaginative, unimpressible matter of fact instruments that recorded impressions only in meters and hundredths of meters.

In the southern Indian Ocean, tween the Cape of Good Hope and the Island of St. Paul, he measured thirty waves during a violent northwest gal and they measured nine meters (29.55 feet) in height. years, in which you have acted in this capacity, you have endeavored to be punctual, and willing at all services connected with our church, both as organist and Sabbath school worker, to do whatever good lay in your power. As a slight token of the esteem we hold for your services, we ask you to kindly accept this watch, not that it, by its intrinsic value, will repay you of our church. During the past four by its intrinsic value, will repay you for your services, but to show in some manner other than words, that we appreciate your services. We hope that in the future you will continue in the good work you have so nobly begun, and that when the time comes when you have no need for the time of this world, your reward hereafter may be greater than we can offer.

"MAUD PEARSON." Miss Barnard feelingly responded o this magnificent reminder of the goodwill, esteem and appreciation of ner many friends in church, choir and Sabbath school, for any services she may have rendered.

DORCHESTER STATION.

Dorchester Station, April 8 .- On Tuesday evening, some person having a key to fit nearly all locks, entered J. W. McIntosh's barber shop and took two pairs of hair clippers, two pairs of seissors and a violin. No clue to the thieves.

Mr. J. W. Hunt has gone to Lambeth to attend the funeral of his brotherin-law, Mr. Parker, who died very suddenly at Seaforth.

A large number of people gathered at the home of Mr. John Robertson on Thursday evening last to say farewell to Mr. Robertson and family, who are about leaving this neighborhood, having bought a farm near Delaware. Mr. Robertson has taken quite an interest in municipal matters, having been elected councilman for eight years and having served in the county council in neighborly converse, the gathering was called to order, and Mr. George Wade being appointed chairman, short programme was given, consisting of songs, recitations and speeches, after which Mr. W. H. Shaw read the following address, the presentation being made by T. McFarlin and D.

Sutherland: your departure from our midst to your new home in Delaware, we, your friends and neighbors, are gathered together to spend a social evening and o express in some degree the feelings that rise in our hearts.

As a kind friend, neighbor and counsellor, for many years you have been tried and not found wanting. May you be prosperous in every way in your new home, both in spirit, soul and body. Your path will be a strange one if you meet with no obstacles or disappointments, but these are always well met, when we look above the darkness that these may beget and see God's sunshine, and by his grace let it flood the life; for it will always darkness that these may beget and see God's sunshine, and by his grace

Composers Try to Imitate the Notes of Birds and Beasts.

[London Mail.

Not a few animals and birds can sing Not a few animals and birds can sing in some way or another. Country people who have occupied rooms near a frog pond and have heard the vocalization of these "Dutch nightingales," know and probably appreciate that fact. But all animal songs cannot be set to music, and only a few composers have triumphed over the difficulties that beset any attempts of the kind. Animal sounds, however, have been scientifically studied, and a German naturalist goes so far as to maintain that even the donkey's bray moves in true musical progression.

This is, however, rather a far-fetched proposition, and, true ar otherwise, it would require a good deal of devotion to scientific research to enable a man to to scientific research to enable a man to remain for long in the vicinity of a don-key that had been seized with a fit of braying.

Birds, of course, produce musical sounds which can be written out in musical notation. One of the best-known passages in Beetheven is the introduction of bird.

sages in Beethoven is the introduction of bird notes—a nightingale, a quail and cuckoo—in the slow movement of his "Pastoral" symphony. Insects also give out musical sounds, and the Greeks kept locusts in cages as we do birds. There was a pretty tradition among the Greeks that when Terpander was playing the lyre at one of the Olympic games so beautifully that he was sure of the prize. dress was as follows:

"Miss Julia Barnard: Dear Friend,—
We, the members and friends of the Nilestown Methodist church and choir, have met here tonight for the purpose of showing our appreciation of your untiring efforts in the past as organist for the purpose of the strings of the instrument broke. But just at that moment a locust perched on his lyre, chirped the right note and Terpander won the prize.

Whoever has been in a menageric about an hour after the animals have been fed knows what a curious concert suddenly begins at that time. There is the an hour what a curious the fed knows what a curious denly begins at that time. There is the denly begins at that time ion, the tenor deep, rumbling bass of the lion, the tenor the tiger, the alto of the hyena, and the tiger, the alto wild cat, with a lion, the neigh of the horse and the drag-ging rustle of the serpent; and he also tries to realize musically the buoyant bound of the tiger and the leap of the deer. A famous piece of salon music in De Kontski's day was that pianist's ef-fective "Reveil du Lion" ("The Awaken-ing of the Lion"). It ends with a trefective "Reveil du Lion" ("The Awakening of the Lion"). It ends with a tremendous tour de force, which is supposed to realize the fully awakened roar of the king of the beasts. A composition which is quite popular among German vocal societies is a quartet for a cat, a hen, a dog and a pig, accompanied by a monkey at the piano. Of course, it is not done by real animals. The performers wear papier mache heads and dress up in cos-at the piano. Of course, it is not only by real animals. The performers wear papier mache heads and dress up in costumes, which are kept in music stores for the purpose. If well done the piece is irresistibly funny.

There are animal sounds which will probably never be fully expressed in music. Of such is the call of the cownoose, weirdly echoing over the moonlit water of a lake deep in the Maine on. Canadian wilderness. Such, too, are the howls of a pack of wolves as they signal to one another to join in the chase of some unfortunate deer floundering in the deep snow; a coyote sending his message over the plains, an invitation to his comrades to feast on the carrion it has discovered; a fox wakening the stillness of the forest, summoning its cumming comthe forest, summoning its cunning com-rades to a raid—these are some of the rare noises of the wilderness which may be imitated, but cannot be confined with in the rigid limits of musical notation.

TO WITHDRAW FROM CHINA!

The Trend of Events in the Far East Is Pacific.

French Careful to Avoid a Conflict-Russia's Decision Net to Press the Manchurian Agreement Gives General Relief.

London, April 8. - The trend events in the far east is distinctly pacific. With their punishment reduced, a number of Chinese officials will follow the demands of the powers and the indemnity question will be worked out by Sir Robert Hart more speedily than has recently seemed possible. The Yangtse viceroys who are new in control of the Chinese Government are anxious to hasten the settlement of all outstanding questions with the powers and remove every prewith the powers and remove every pre-text for the continuance of foreign oc-cupation. Earl Li, with his secret un-derstanding with Russia was the mar-plot, so far as the concert was con-cerned. Now that he has been discred-ited and set aside better progress, may ited and set aside, better progress may be expected in the adjustment of the various questions in which the powers are interested. The viceroys are bent upon getting rid of the foreign troops as soon as possible, and the powers are eager to recall their legions and collect their claims for damages. Weeks, and perhaps months, of delay may intervene, but there is a hopeful feeling among those watching Chinese affairs closely that the processes of diplomacy will be quickened and a speedy settlement be reached.

AVOIDING A CONFLICT. London, April 8.-The Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post says: The French are still opposed by the Chinese near Hai Lu, but are careful to avoid a conflict because any advance would be anticipated by the Germans, whose patrols are 30 miles within the Province of Shan Si, and can reach Tai Yuen Fu at any moment. At Ching Ting Fu the French intercepted a letter from Li Hung Chang to the Governor of Shan Si, complaining that the Manchurian convention must be signed because the European powers were willing to sit down as usual to watch Russia devour China. It is asserted on good authority that Russia is willing to give Japan a free hand in Corea with a view to preventing her assuming a hostile attitude. "The empress dowager and the grand councilors have asked the Yang Tse viceroys," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Standard, "what course they recommend the court to adopt in the event of Russia retaining Manchuria.

GIVES RELIEF.

Yokohama, April 8.-The news of Russia's decision not to press the Manchurian agreement was received here with a feeling of relief. In anticipation of complications that might ensue, the government had resolved to postpone a number of important state undertakings involving large ex-penditures.

RUSSIA'S NOTE. London, April 6.-A dispatch from St. Petersburg says it is learned from a trustworthy source that Russia's diplomatic agents abroad were instructed on April 3 to communicate to the governments to which they are accredited an identical note in same terms as that presented by Count Cassini (the Russian minister Washington), to Secretary Hay, as follows:

"That in the present circumstances special agreement in the Manchuria affair, instead of being an open testimonial of friendly sentiments on the part of Russia towards China, and might entail various difficulties for the neighboring state, Russia does not in any way insist upon the conclusion of such agreement, and even abandons all possible negotiations in this matter. Inasmuch as the Imperial Gov-ernment ever adheres faithfully to its original and oft-repeated programme, it will quietly await the further course of events.

AS TO COREA.

London, April 7.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Sunday special says it has transpired that Russia recently proposed to Japan the neutralization of Corea, but that Japan refused the proposition, as insufficiently safeguarding her interests.

INTERVIEW WITH LI. Pekin, April 7.-Mr. Rockhill, United States special commissioner in Pekin, had a long interview yesterday with Li Hung Chang, who satisfied him that there is not likely to be any furthee important hites in the negotiations for a settlement between China and the powers. Li Hung Chang says the court is extremely anxious to return to Pekin as soon as the foreign troops evacuate the capital.

AN IMPORTANT JUVENILE

Child of Europe.

Although he is in complete ignorance of the fact, little Prince Edward of York is the most important juvenile in Europe. On the death of Queen Victoria he succeeded to his father's title of heir presumptive to the throne of Great Britain and Ireland. As soon as the title of Prince of Wales is bestowed on the Duke of Cornwall and York, young Edward will become Duke of ed on the Duke of Cornwall and York, young Edward will become Duke of York, Earl of Inverness, and Baron Killarney, and parliament will be asked to provide him with an income sufficiently large to keep up the dignity of his position. It is not likely that he will be informed of his new rank, nor will his allowance of pocket money be increased. He will have to be addressed as "Royal Highness," and will be shown to the people on certain public occato the people on certain public occa-sions, but the significance of this will hardly be impressed on his mind for some time to com When the new King and Queen made their first appearance in London Prince Edward rode in the carriage with them, and was enthusiastically greeted by the crowds. He smilingly saluted from side to side, and enjoyed himself hugely, but he did not dream that he was being hailed as a future king. Neither did he understand why he was so conspicuously placed at the funeral ser-vices at St. George's Chapel. He stood next the Queen and held tightly to her hand during the solemn ceremonies.

The real importance of the little prince's position lies in the probability of his succeeding to the throne before he reaches his majority. King Edward is 60 years old, and no one imagines that he will last beyond 70. The Duke of Cornwall and York has never been robust, and of late his delicate health has caused considerble anxiety. He was not able to attend the late Queen's funeral nor was he present at the open-ng of parliament. Prince Edward is an unusually bright and attractive child, healthy, and large for his age. He is a born leader, and dominates the York nursery just as far as he is permitted. There are four chil dren in the family, only one of whom is a girl. They are all pretty, lively youngsters, having inherited the ruddy health of their mother, "Princess May," as she is still affectionately called. She is a most devoted mother and deplores the necessity of leaving her children at home while she and her husband are making state visit to the colonies. They will be left in charge of Mme Bricka, an old and intimate friend of the Duchess and her family, the Tecks. In addition they will have the grandnotherly care of Queen Alexandra, who is devoted to them all, especially Prince Little Prince Edward of York the "First English Curate Was Relieved of the Charge of Having Stolen It.

A curate up north, says Modern Society, has furnished another example of the pseudo apology at his own expense. Having preached a very clever sermon on the Sunday, he called upon a certain colonel on the Monday especially to ask his opinion.

"How did I like the sermon?" said the colonel. "Very much, indeed. It's one of my favorites."

"Sir!" said the curate, and he spoke from out the whirlwind of his righteous indignation. "I am not in the habit, sir, of stealing my sermons. I fear you are laboring under a mistake, and—er—forgetting yourself, sir. I must ask you to apologize."

The colonel was silent for a moment. Then he said: "It may be that I have made a mistake. Wait a moment. I will make sure."

CLOTHING MADE OUT OF FISH SKINS

An Exhibit Showing What Siberian Women Can Do.

Several garments made entirely of fish skins, and made to be worn, too, were recently put on exhibition in the Museum of Natural History in New York in a remarkable collection of curios gathered in Eastern Siberia by Prof. Berthold Laufer, of the Jesup North Pacific expedition. These fish skin clothes are the work of the women of the remote Gilyak and Gold tribes of the River Amur, and very odd garments they are.

The tribes live entirely fishing and hunting. Salmon, which ascend the river to spawn, are their staple food, and the salmon skins, after being treated by the women, who are adepts, provide material for their clothes. First the scales are removed so carefully that the skin is not broken. Then the skin is tanned and dressed to make it durable and finally the wo men sew it into garments.

Salmon skin, when made into clothes by the Amur Indians, is like kid in appearance and softness, but it is tougher than kid, in fact, almost as tough as parchment. It is dyed yellow and red and indigo, and some of the garments into which it is made are highly ornate. Curiously enough, most of the ornamentation is on the backs. The garments are sewn together with fine thread, also made of fish skin. Still another use to which fish ster in the west,

> One of the fish skin garments in the collection is a warm weather garment, for it is unlined. If it had been made in Paris it would be called a pelisse. Its front overlaps and it seems to have reached the ankles of the wearer. In color it is a deep manila yellow and it is highly ornamented. The outer edges are bordered with a fish skin band of dark indigo blue, and heading this is a narrow strip of red. Up the side seams blue panels are appliqued in a graceful arabesque design. The edges of the arabesques are fastened to the body with as minute stitches as if sewed by a machine. Bands of simpler design ornament the tops of the sleeves, and there are blue cuffs decorative in outline.

Another gown shows three bands about two inches wide, in dark blue, yellow and red laid close together. This garment is further ornamented with appliqued scroll figures in blue, each about two inches long, over the entire surface. Near the neck in front is a fair imitation of a rooster, tail feathers and all.

A Smallpox Remedy.

An Edinburgh gentleman has found among old papers the following remedy for smallpox: "I herewith append a recipe which has been used to my knowledge in hundreds of cases. It will prevent and cure the smallpox though the pittings are filling. When Jenner discovered the cowpox in England the world of science hurled an avalanche upon his head, but when the most scientific school of medicine in the world— that of Paris—published this recipe as a panacea for smallpox, it passed unheeded. It is as unfailing as fate, and conquers in every instance. It is harm-less when taken by a well person. It will cure scarlet fever. Here is the recipe as I have used it, and cured my children of scarlet fever—here it is as I have used it to cure smallpox when learned physicians said the patient must die, it cured: Sulphate of zinc, one grain; foxglove (digitalis), one grain; half a teaspoonful of sugar; mix with two teaspoonfuls of water. When thoroughly mixed add four ounces of water. Take a teaspoonful every hour. Either disease will disappear in twelve hours. "No, thank you," said Shirley, with quiet politeness, "but I am quite sure it was done on a Wilcox & Gibbs machine, and if you will look on the wrong side, I think you will find the chainstitch."

"I do not care to discuss the point further," was the haughty response, as the proud girl arose and touched, with an imperative hand, the electric bell near her. "Susie, bring me the roll of cloth which you will find lying on mamma's work-table," she said to the servant who answered the summons.

When the girl returned with it, Miss Norwood passed it to Shirley, remark-

You will not mind it, I am sure, and you can bring in a bill for the whole amount when the covers are done. Now I must go, for I have promised to join a party up the river in half an hour."

"Why is it, I wonder," she when on, musingly, "that wealthy people seem to consider it necessary to be so overbearing to certain persons, simply because they are obliged to work for them? If this interview has shown a true specimen of Miss Norwood's manners, then I have been better bred than she. She is handsome, she has a fine figure, she knows how to dress in good taste; but she is no lady, and I will not work for her. How no lady, and I will not work for her. How no lady, and I will list work. Does she selfish and arrogant she was! She thought she would wait until after Clifton's interview with him, for she did not care to have his father think that she would boast of the service which she had rendered him that morning, as he would be likely to do if her lover should bring it up in praise of her while pleading his cause.

CHAPTER IX.

Mr. Vining was at home, and glanced up with some surprise when his son entered the library, where he was busily engaged in writing.

"Hum!—come to eat humble pie; can't make his ends meet, and so wants to draw on the old man," was his inward comment, as he settled himself a little more stiffly in his chair, preparatory to administering a paternal lecture upon the ingratitude of children in general.

"Ahem! Well, Clifton," he began, in repiy to the young man's courteous but "Ahem! Well, Clifton," he began, in reply to the young man's courteous but somewhat cool "good-day, sir," "you have not been very neighborly of late."
"No, sir. I have been quite busy," was the rather constrained response.
"So I hear. I am glad to know that you have come to your senses and are on the right track at last," said his father in a lofty tone.
Then he inquired, with a manifestation of more interest, and a softening of his tene:

"How do you like your position, Clif."
"Very well, sir; Mr. Norwood has been most kind and friendly."
Clifton had no thought of casting a slur at his father in saying this; he was simply thinking of Mr. Norwood's interest in him, and so expressed his appreciation of it; but Mr. Vining winced at it all the same.

preciation of it; but Mr. Vining winced at it all the same.

He realized most keenly that he had made a mistake in his government of his son, and would have been very glad to be reconciled to him and have him come home again. But his was a very obstinate nature, and he would not humble his pride enough to make his first advances toward such a result.

He told himself that it would not be long before Clifton would get tired of the monotony of his new life and beg to be permitted to return, under any conditions.

He believed that such was his errand today, and he resolved that he would restore him to all his former privileges, although he meant to humble him pretty well at first. At the same time it cut him keenly to hear Clifton speak so gratefully of Mr. Norwood's kindness to him.

m. 'Yes, Norwood is a good friend, where he takes a liking," he admitted, flushing slightly; "and if you must work for anyone beside me. I could not wish you to be in a better place than his office. I hope he gives you a fair salary," he concluded, with a sly glance at his son's face.

He knew, of course, what he was re-civing, but he wanted to sound him a ceiving, but he wanted to sound him a little.

"He gives me the same that he paid his last clerk." Clifton briefly replied.

"Hum! that is doing pretty well for a greenhorn, I think; but I suppose you, find it a rather hard pull to make both ends meet." Mr. Vining remarked, shooting a searching glance at the young man's face, and wondering what made his usually high-strung son so self-contained and respectfully dignified. "I began to think." he resumed, in a lighter tone, "that it was about time for you to be coming home to dip your fingers in the old man's coffers. How much do you need, Clif? As long as you show a disposition to do the right thing, just so long you will find me ready and willing to stand by you," he concluded in a patronizing tone.

"Thank you, sir." Clifton gravely returned, "but I am doing well. I have managed to live within my income, so far, and had no thought when I came here today, of appealing to you for money."

"Whew! what does the youngster want, then?" was the elder man's inward query, while he regarded Clifton with rereasing surprise.
Then he remarked, aloud, in a would-be friendly tone:

"Really, Clifton, I am both astonished and pleased by what you have told me. I am almost inclined to think that you will yet make a shrewd business man, what can I If you do not want money, what can I do for you? Let bygones be bygones. Cliff, and we will henceforth be friends."

do for you? Let bygones he bygones. Clif, and we will henceforth he friends. Clifton preserved a thoughtful silence for a moment, then he remarked:

"I realize, sir, that I have not been all you could desire in the past, but, while I am sensible of my own shortcomings, I also feel that if you had pursued a different course with me during my child-hood and youth, we need never have become estranged. But I do not wish to cast any reflections upon you; I only want you to know that I have determined to live differently in the future; that I have resolved to start as other people have started in the world, and work my way up to an honorable position among men. I shall be only too glad to be upon friendly terms with you all here at home. I came here today to tell you this in a straightforward way, and also—"Clif!" exclaimed his father, interrupt-by you."

"You are very good, father, and ho doubt are actuated by the best of intentions in proposing that I should go on with you in business; but I could not feel that it would be using Mr. Norwood quite squarely to leave him just now, when he has taken so much pains to familiarize me with the routine duties of his office," Clifton gravely returned.

Mr. Vining frowned.

He could never bear to be opposed in anything; and now, even though he knew that his son was in the right, it irritated him to have him oppose his wishes.

It was not that he objected to his remaining with Mr. Norwood, for his old friend was a sharp business man, and he knew that Clifton could not be under a better tutor; but it galled him to have his son manifest preference for another. THE CANADIAN LOST. New York, April 8.—The annual trap shooting tournament at live birds, which was begun last Monday at Interstate Park, L. I., under the auspices of the Interstate Association, was concluded late Saturday evening in a drenching downpour of rain and the wind blowing half a gale from the southeast. From early morning the rain fell incessantly, and as the day wore on the wind increased to such an extent that at times the trap shooters had to take refuge in the club house, and the storm was so severe that house, and the storm was so severe that they could not face the traps. Two conests were on the programme, one followed the Gilman-Barnes trophy, and the other for the Sportsmen's Association trophy. Both are handicaps, the men being placed from 25 to 33 yards, and each event called for 25 birds per man and $15 entrance. Class shooting governed both contests. The events were shot simultaneously at two sets of trans but owing to the setwo sets of traps, but owing to the severity of the storm it was arranged by mutual consent that the number of birds in each case should be reduced from 25 to 15.

In the Gilman-Barnes trophy contest In the Gilman-Barnes trophy contest nine men tied with straight scores of 15 kills each, and in the Sportsmen's trophy contest there were 17 straights with 15 each. These ties were to have been shot off, "miss and out," but the weather conditions prevented this being done, and the men drew lots to see who should get the trophies. J. L. D. Morrison, of St. Paul, who was the runner-up in the Grand American, won the Gilman-Barnes trophy, and Frank S. Parmelee, of Omaha, Neb., was the lucky man in the draw for the Sportsmen's trophy. THREE CANADIAN

Raided an Acton Resort and Broke Up a Gambling Game.

Acton, April 8 .- For some time rumors have been current to the effect that the old shack on Maine street, between the Dominion Hotel and the Campbell House, was a gambling resort which was frequented by a number of young fellows whose morals were not improved thereby. It was even hinted that liquors were sold there. The illegal practices were evidently not confined to week days, for as people returned home from church Sabbath evening smoke was to be seen issuing from the chimney, and a gleam of light here and there strayed through the windows and wall. '

A trio of married women in town, who suspected that a relative was a frequenter of the premises, deter-mined to raid the place, and proceedd thitherward at 10:30 Sunday night After satisfying themselves presence of a quartet of well-known young men of the town, and that they were engaged in card playing money, they proceeded to effect an entrance. This was accomplished after considerable difficulty, but immediately the door was opened the lights were extinguished. The women identified the inmates, however, and secured possession of the pack of cards in use when the players were disturbed. The three courageous women did a brave and commendable deed in breaking up this den, and it is hoped Acton will not again be disgraced by the presence within her borders of such a disreputable den.-Acton Free Press.

HOW EASTER IS OBSERVED IN RUSSIA

The Great Religious and Social Festival of the Year.

[Washington Star.] When popular Miss Rosebud receives from friends at Eastertide numerous graceful gifts she does not always think of them as Easter eggs, so far has America wandered from tradition in fol-lowing the pretty custom borrowed from Russia, where all Easter offerings go under the name of "a little red egg. Although many nations have adopted the egg-giving custom, nowhere is i carried on with the lavish and picturesque zest that prevails in Russia, where Easter is the great festival, religious, national and social, of the Russian year. There both great and lowly are givers and recipients of Easter eggs, the czar and czarina leading the merry-making, by giving, under the name of "a little red egg," costly presents to their attendants.

The shops of Russian cities provide very dainty Easter novelties for the wealthy donor—gold and silver eggs from Vienna, forming a matchbox, a vinaigrette, or a bonbonniere; oval cases of ivory from Paris, inlaid with a silver monogram and filled with gloves or rich lace; exquisite crystal eggs made in Moscow, a delicate design cut upon them and containing a rare jewel-but whatever the gift may be it is sent under the national title of " little red egg."
Russia is the earliest home of the Easter egg custom; it can be traced back to remotest antiquity there. This may be attributed, perhap ety of the Muscovites, who fast rigid-ly during Lent, refraining from eggs as well as from meat. Consequently, eggs form a large part of the Easter meals.

A Russian physician recently remarked to an American friend that in the dominion of the czar a doctor has two harvests in the year: Butter week-the carnival which ushers in Lent-and Easter week, which follows it; for those two festivals never fail to bring in their train indigestion and kindred It is difficult for Americans to real-

Russian, who has faithfully observed a black fast of forty days, during which he has been weaned from meat, divorced from milk, cheese, eggs and butter, and at daggers' points even with sugar, for the Russian fast is stricter than that of any other nation, and is observed by the rural classes with a rigor to which old and young often succumb. During the last fortnight in Lent people begin to think of merry bells and to sniff the fragrance of savory viands, for thus early the Russian housewife makes daring excursions beyond the pale of Lenten restrictions kooletch, which are her pride. These must be made on Good Friday, of butter, eggs, vanilla and sugar; they

There are two special dishes, called pashka and curds pressed in a dainty manner, mixed with clotted cream, flavored with are eaten with a slice of hard-boiled, blessed egg at the beginning of every meal every day in Easter week. Easter Saturday evening, pashka and kooletch are placed on plates decorated with flowers, and carried to the church inclosure, there to be sprinkled with holy water and blessed by the priest after midnight. It is a picturesque scene-groups of lively peasant maids, in gowns of bright sitting on stones, leaning against trees or resting on the railings that surround the churchyard, chatting, singing or praying while watching the decorated dishes in the fitful light of flickering candles. When the priests march in procession round the grounds it is amusing to note the eagerness of the maid servants to get their burdens blessed as quickly as possible, and to hurry home to the house full of guests who are probably seated at table awaiting the arrival of the blessed food, without which it is one to considered back to be in the blessed food, without which it is not considered lucky to begin the banquet that succeeds the long black fast. In Russian cities the paschal feast is celebrated with the uproar of an American Fourth of July; bells peal from morning till night, cannon are fired, rockets are sent up and grown people and children unite in making as much happy bubbub as possible. Af ter 10 o'clock in the morning it bears social resemblance to our New Year's Day, as it is spent by men in paying visits.

A new and interesting feature in connection with the Chicago and Northwestern and Union Pacific route to California is the announcement that, with the new schedule of the South-ern Pacific Railway, effective March 31, the new Coast Line betwen San Francisco and Los Angeles was open- tion with her parents at Blenheim. ed. This new line, which is sure to become very popular with tourist travel. runs along the Pacific Coast, via San Jose, Santo Cruz, Salinas, San Miguel, Paso Robles, San Luis Obispo, and Santa Barbara, where the finest scenery in California may be witnessed. It is confidently expected that the establishment of this new route will result in a greater part of the Southern California travel at all seasons of the year going via the Northwestern Union Pacific, and the new Pacific Coast Line of the Southern Pacific Railway. Epworth Leaguers going the San Francisco convention in July and who desire to visit Southern California, will have the privilege of using this new Pacific Coast Line.

THE DESPISED DANDELION.

It is not generally known that the non dandelion forms one of the salad vegetables sent to Covent Garden Market, and sold in large or small quantities, as required. It also has a large sale when used in pills, the root being utilized. But for the purposes of salad, the professional cooks are responsible for the increasing demand, as it forms another of the many ingredients used to impart the bitter-ness and flavor so necessary in a wellmade salad. From the general appearance of the roots that are marceted, it is to be presumed that most of the plants are cultivated, although the inferior plants that one sometimes sees are no doubt collected from coundistricts, where they grow in a ild state. In winter the leaves are blanched in the same way as other with or without the root attached. When they are marketed root and all, it is best to lift them with a root fork as is used sometimes for lifting carrots n dry weather, when the roots will rome clear away. The same culture applies to this as to other salad vegetables. If the cultivation of this plant became more general, there is little doubt that it would become more popular with the public, and the excellent virtues of the plant be better known.— London Journal of Greengrocery.

SPECIAL SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES

Solemn Observance of the Easter Festival in London.

Elaborate and Impressive Commemoration of the Resurrection in St. Paul's, St. Peter's and Other Places of Worship.

Easter, the day of solemn rejoicing throughout the Christian world, was observed in nearly 40 churches in the city yesterday. There used to be a legend current in some parts of Ireland that the sun danced in the sky on Easter Sunday morning. If it danced yesterday no one in London sow it, for the day was cloudy and rold. The weather, however, had no effect on the church attendance, which was the largest, probably, in years. Special Easter music was given in a majority of the churches, and in a number the festival was celebrated in an impressive and elaborate manner.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL. In St. Paul's Cathedral Holy Communion was partaken of at 8:30 a.m., and again at 11 a.m. The morning sermon was preached by the Bishop of Huron, from the fourth chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans: "If we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; who was delivered for our offensor and was delivered for our offenses, ed again for our justification.' lordship's sermon was an eloquent description of the greatest event in all history. Dean Innes preached at the evening services. The musical services, conducted by Mr. George B. Sippi, organist and choirmaster, were particularly impressive. MEMORIAL CHURCH. In Memorial Church Rev. C. C. Owen preached an eloquent Easter sermon from I. Corinthians: "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." The Bishop of Huron conducted the even-ing services. The church was appropropriately decorated with lilies and

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. W. J. Clark and Rev. George Gilmore exchanged pulpits yesterday morning, the former preaching in the London Junction Church and the latter in the first Presbyterian. In both churches the morning sermons and musical services were in keeping with the spirit of the day. In the evening Mr. Clark preached on the life of John Knox and its lesson. REV. DR. CARMAN.

The congregations at the Dundas Center Methodist Church yesterday were extremely large, and were addressed at both services by Rev. Dr. Carman, of Toronto, general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada. Though advanced in years, Dr. Carman preached admirably stirring sermons in a vigorous, convincing style that might well be emulated, though hardly surpassed by younger His sermons were collections of dogmatic and original thoughts, surrounded and buoyed up with unquestionable arguments, and expressed with a precision made possible only by his splendid vocabulary.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God," Paul's statement to the Colossians, was the text upon which he spoke in the morning. In it, he said, was embodied the great historic fact was a more historical fact than that Caesar lived, or Hannibal, or Napoleon All doubts concerning Bonaparte. Christ were equally applicable to Napoleon, and all doubts that could be suggested about the resurrection could be applied to the battle of Waterloo. With the resurrection we became sons With the resurrection we became some of God, joint heirs with Christ, were adopted into the home of God. That was a legal, constitutional, governmental relation that no man had any right to be dubious of, and having received it there invariably followed the first indisputable change that must be wrought in man, regeneration, with a eeking after truth, justice, humanity and other qualities of the spirit. Resting on the resurrection of Christ we had that regenerating power or, as Paul put it: "If Christ is not risen is our preaching vain and your morning, and made a strong appeal on behalf of the work among the Telegus of India. At the Communion of the Lord's Supper about 40 young people, who had recently been baptized were received as members of the church. In the evening the pastor gave an earnest, practical address, taking his text from Romans, v., 10. Three more young people were baptized at the close of the evening service.

BEY DR. JOHNSTON'S SEVENTH REV. DR. JOHNSTON'S SEVENTH

YEAR. Yesterday marked the commence-ment of the seventh year of Rev. Dr. Johnston's labors in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Referring to this fact in a sermon, which he said was half for himself and half for his congregation, he expressed the hope that with each succeeding year he might become more helpful to his congregation. He had endeavored at all times tion. He had endeavored at all thicks to avoid sensationalism, and at the same time to speak the truth as he saw it. Referring to musical services he hoped that none of his congregation came to church as they would go

A SERMON TO CHILDREN. Rev. R. D. Hamilton, pastor of the Wellington Street Methodist Church, preached yesterday morning a sermon for children, in the First Methodist Church. The congregation was a very large one and the musical services were appropriate to the season. Rev. Dr. Smith, who exchanged pulpits with Mr. Hamilton in the morning, preached the evening sermon.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH. The services at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church yesterday were of a special character, an unusually large ing and evening. High mass was celebrated at 10:30 by Rev. Father Traher. The music was beautifully rendered by the chair under the chair unde rendered by the choir, under the leadership of Mr. W. T. Mullins, with Mrs. J. P. Murray presiding at the organ, and assisted by an orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Cresswell. Solos were given by Miss Bergin in the morning, and by Mr. Joseph Leech in the evening.

ESTATE EXCHANGE.

Farm Property Recently Sold-Testimonial From a Client.

Mr. Burrows, the manager of the Western Real Estate Exchange, is very well pleased with the success the exchange is making in the sale and exchange of farms during this spring. The method of advertising and selling farms which the exchange has adopted is proving a great success, and very satisfactory to those who wish to sell or buy farm lands in Western Ontario. The following is a letter which Mr. Burrows received lately from one of the patrons of the exchange:

"Rutherford, Postoffice, Ont.,
March 20, 1901. Mr. James Burrows, manager of the Western Real Estate Exchange, Lon-

Dear Sir,—I beg to notify that my farm, which I placed in your hand for sale a few weeks ago, has been sold to Mr. Tinney, by your agent, Mr. John E. Burgess, of Newbury, for $4,000. I am very well pleased with the way you have done the business for me, and I am quite sure those having farms to sell will find that the plan which you have adopted for advertising and selling farms is the best and most satisfactory way they can take for obtaining a ready sale of their farms. You are at ilberty to make such use of this letter as you may see fit, as I think your exchange is a great benefit to those who want to buy or sell real estate in Western Ontario. Yours truly, (Signed) The following farms have been sold through the exchange this week: Mr. Frank Nelson has sold his 50-acre farm at Byron to Mr. Miller, of Port Stanley, for $3,000. Mr. William Gregory has purchased a 50-acre farm in the township of Dawn from the exchange, and Mr. William Small has sold his 50 acre farm in the township of Mosa through the exchange to Mr. Thomas Simpson for $2,600, and Mr. Small has purchased from the exchange a 75-acre farm in the township of Sombra. Mr. Burrows says that there have been over 30 farms sold off the exchange's list of farms for sale and exchange since the 1st of January, and he expects that a good business will be done during the summer in the real estate as there are quite a number looking for farms in Western Ontario. The most of the people who want to sell their farms in Western Ontario are retiring from farming on account of old age or having made sufficient money out of their farms to keep them the rest of their lives. Some wish to sell or exchange for the purpose of getting more land. Very few are selling for the purpose of leaving Ontario.
