FAIR DIRECTORS AGAIN ON "EASY STREET";
RECEIPTS ARE NOT LESS THAN $30,000Estimated That Over 100,000
People Attended Exhibition
—Close in Heavy Rain.

The Western Fair of 1905 was brought to a close last night, and once again success has crowned it. It is the same old story. The Fair has such a hold on the people of Western Ontario that this year, as in previous years, they flocked to the big show in such crowds that last night President Reid was able to announce to The Advertiser that in the five days in which the exhibition has been in full swing, 105,000 persons passed through the gates. He also stated that the receipts would total not less than $30,000, so that, as far as money is concerned, the directors are on "easy street."

The splendid weather conditions which characterized the Fair for four days gave yesterday to a dismal downpour. In the afternoon the rain fell in torrents, and as it continued into the evening, the directors were compelled to call off the special attractions, and at night the grand stands were closed.

In the afternoon, despite the rain, the full list of attractions was put on, though several of the performers proved thoroughly unentertaining, they could not work in the rain. But the directors held them to their agreements and the people were not disappointed. Friday's attendance was very small—somewhere between four and five thousand. After the big crowds of Wednesday and Thursday the grounds appeared deserted, though the number of people in the stands made quite a respectable showing.

At night the exhibitors began to pack up, and though they could have been compelled to leave everything untouched until after 10 o'clock, the directors winked at the exhibitors, for they were not over a couple of hundred people on the grounds at 9 o'clock. In the Main Building the exhibitors were asked to leave their things, and it was necessary to talk to themselves in order to keep awake, and at last someone proposed a dance. Chairman Reid immediately endorsed the proposal.

A great many buildings were locked, too, when it was seen that the rain had killed the last day, and certain exhibitors who wanted to get away, and who felt that they had good reason to break the rules and leave the grounds, were around Secretary Neles for permission to open the buildings. Nevertheless, the majority of the exhibitors were compelled to abide the edicts, and wait until this morning for the removal of their goods.

President Reid's Statement.

Sitting in his office in the Fair grounds, President Reid made the following statement to The Advertiser: "At the close of this very successful Fair—the 48th in the history of the exhibition—I wish to thank most warmly all those who have so generously and so faithfully worked for its success. Only the generous support of the citizens and exhibitors, and the hard work of the directors and officers, could have made it what it is. It stands out above the other fairs, for probable exception of the Fair of 1898, when the cheap rates were in force on all the railways, in point of attendance, and as a clean exhibition it has never been beaten. There was a slight falling off in the exhibits of cattle, and the Midway, which was the main feature in former years, but from the standpoint of all, as a first-class, clean, instructive and edifying exhibition should be, the Western Fair of 1905 stands out alone.

"To the directors who have labored so assiduously with me, I wish to give special credit, and to tender them my personal thanks. Everything went along with a smoothness and goodwill which was highly commendable.

"To the representatives from the city council I also desire to give thanks, for this year they one and all did everything in their power to help along the success of the exhibition. They realize thoroughly that the success of the Western Fair is London's success also.

"The splendid record of the week shows how well the police of London, under Chief Williams, have the crowd fraternized under control. Pocket-picking was practically unknown during the week, and visitors to the Fair were given every protection.

"To the different steam lines entering London, and to the London Street Railway Company, the thanks of the Fair Board are due. Each did its share towards helping the exhibition, and the directors are consequently deeply indebted to them.

"In point of attractiveness the Fair was certainly a grand success. In fact, the special attractions, the high order of the show, and that they were eminently pleasing to the people is evidenced by the fact that this year the attendance in the stands was far in excess of that of any previous year.

"To the employees of the board, who have so faithfully discharged their duties, the board also extends its hearty thanks.

"From every standpoint the big show was a success, and we believe the exhibitors, as well as the visitors, to be thoroughly pleased with it."

Last of Contests.

A large crowd listened to Prof. Barr lecture in the Dairy Building during yesterday afternoon.

The consolation matter-making contest went off very successfully. Miss Carriek, of Galt, captured the silver tea service valued at $30, which was offered as first prize. The second prize went to Mrs. Ross, of Holmesville; the third to Miss Johnston, Bowood, Ont.; while Miss Hunter, Brookton, got fourth prize.

The Team Race.

The team race yesterday kept everyone on the keen edge all the time. It is not often that team races such as yesterday's are seen here. Four fast teams of "basters" faced the flag.

Johnnie K. and Clipper were hitched together. They won the race in straight heats. They paced a very fine race, going in grand style. This team did not have a walk-over, however. Little Joe and Miss Ingles chased them all the way the first two heats. Although Little Joe broke badly in the stretch on one occasion, Miss Ingles was not fast enough for Joe. N. McLeod's team made a challenge in the third heat, and the big bay team had

PIERCE ATTACK

ON THE ZEMSTVOV
Russian Minister of Interior
Charges Falsification of Czar's Words.

London, Sept. 16.—According to the Standard, the Russian Ministry of the Interior has sent a circular to the governors of provinces and the mayors of towns ordering them to closely watch the Zemstvos everywhere, with the view to arresting them in specified instances.

This action is aimed at the Zemstvo Congress at Moscow in June, to which the circular refers in the most condemnatory terms. It accuses the Zemstvos who attended the congress of fraudulently misinterpreting and falsifying the words of the decree issued by the Czar in March. "The aim of which," according to the circular, "was to improve the laws of the country and the economic conditions of the nation by maintaining the actual form of government based on unrestricted absolutism."

The circular accuses the congress of contemptuously rejecting "the free offer of the Czar's bounty," of working out a project of government based on universal suffrage, and of attempting now to seduce the nation by propagating their decision through the country, thereby declaring "that the Zemstvos are the only legitimate representatives of the nation."

"Let, therefore, the nation, which is loyal to the autocracy, might be seduced by the lying statements of these enemies of the Czar, the persons to whom the circular is addressed are bidden to take the strictest measures against them. Every Zemstvo must be specially watched by secret service agents, and must be prevented from issuing or distributing any publication whatever. If detected in doing so, the Zemstvos must be arrested and handed over to the courts, while the people must not be allowed to attend their meetings."

After further directions of a similar tenor the circular says: "Once the Zemstvo is abolished the disorders of the country will cease."

NUMBER OF WEDDINGS AT THE SOO THAT CAUSE CONCERN.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 16.—The number of young people from this city who have been married at the Canadian Soo during the past year, kept secret, is causing considerable anxiety and concern among parents here.

It is known that in some cases it would have been impossible for the participants to secure permits to wed on the American side, owing to their youth.

DEATH OF E. F. BLAKE

Deceased Was a Son of Hon. Edward Blake—Illness Brief.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Mr. E. F. Blake, of Messrs. Lash, Blake & Cassels, and son of Hon. Edward Blake, died yesterday morning at his residence, 449 Jarvis street, after a short illness.

When Mr. Blake left with his family in July last to spend a vacation at Murray Bay he did not complain of feeling indisposed, but on his return to the city on Sept. 5, while able to be around, he was suffering from an ailment in the nature of anemia, which proved fatal.

After graduating at the University of Toronto in 1885, he served his apprenticeship in the law firm with which the family name is so well associated, and since being called to the bar in 1888 has practiced as a member of the firm. His life was devoted to the practice of his profession.

Deceased leaves a widow, daughter of Judge Benson, of Port Hope, and four small children.

Applying for Divorce.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 16.—Julia Macklen Dover, of Toronto, is applying for divorce from her husband, Wm. Arthur Frederick Dover, also of Toronto.FAIR WILL HAVE A NICE SURPLUSTen Thousand Dollars to the Good—Where Treasury
Suffered Severely.

The Western Fair Association this year will be able to show a surplus of not less than $10,000. This sum is made up by the receipts carried over from last year, and by the surplus of this year, which, it is estimated, will reach the sum of $3,000.

This year the gate receipts were far ahead of those of a year ago, but there was a conspicuous falling-off in the Midway, the result being that the association's exchequer suffered severely. Had the Midway been lined up with shows, and had the usual number of booths and games been allowed in, the receipts would have been several thousand dollars greater. But the president and directors feel more than satisfied, for despite all the unfavorable conditions, the Fair has come out ahead.

From year to year the board lays by a sum for a rainy day, the sum generally being laid down at $5,000. Last year, after the Fair, the board was able to carry over $7,000 to the good. This amount, of course, included the rainy-day allowance from the years previous.

It is the intention of the board of directors to take up the matter of improvement of the grand stands this year. It has been found that the stands are not more than half large enough, especially on big days of the Fair like Wednesday and Thursday. It is proposed to increase the covered capacity, and also to provide better toilet accommodations.

It will be six weeks or two months before the board will be able to definitely announce its financial standing. It takes a long time to clean up the aftermath of the Fair.

Today Secretary Neles and his efficient staff have been kept busy paying out prize money.

The Fair grounds are deserted. The gates are thrown open wide, and the small boy wanders at liberty over the grounds for hours before he is sent home.

All morning drays and lorries have been carrying exhibits away, and in every building the noise of hammers heard. At the south end sleek carriages and thoroughbred horses were loaded into long lines of cars. The Midway, though never did dazzle visitors with its brilliancy, was a "dead end" today. The few tents which had sheltered the barker and monstrosities were carted away, and the vacant ground alone greeted the eye of the visitors. Everywhere the demolition work was in progress.

It is estimated that the Grand Trunk brought forty thousand people to the Fair, while the Pere Marquette, the Michigan Central and the Canadian Pacific must have carried another twenty thousand.

Business has been brisk in the city. The hotels, cafes and eating-houses were as busy as during Old Boys' week, and the local wholesalers were kept on the move attending to customers. It is estimated that the retail merchants also profited largely by the Fair.

ASSESSOR SWORN IN

Mr. Archie Black to Assist in Work in Ward Three.

Mr. Archibald Black was today sworn in as an assessor to assist Mr. C. W. Andrus, who has been assessing No. 3 ward, and is now somewhat behind in the work.

Mr. Black has been for many years connected with the assessment department, and is well qualified for his new position.

Assessor O'Sullivan will have finished his work next week. He has assessed 19 out of the 43 subdivisions in the city.

The rolls, under the law, must be returned not later than Oct. 1.

WILL BE HEARD FROM

Edward Street Residents to Send a Deputation to Council.

It is understood that the people of Edward street will send a deputation to the city council at its meeting Monday night to oppose the construction of the proposed line which is now known as the Edward street belt. It is said around the city hall that the street is being built like to back out of building the line, but the city should be growing that the city should be the almost useless roadway stub, and thus insure a much-needed accommodation for a large and growing section of a very important part of the city.

The Power Problem.

It is certain that any scheme of production or distribution of Niagara electrical power by the Provincial Government will bring about a clash of local interests. The Hamilton papers are already warning Western Ontario municipalities that they must expect to pay more for Niagara power than places situated nearer the Falls. Says the Herald:

"It is certain that strong pressure will be brought to bear upon the Ontario Government with a view to having rates equalized so that the distance from the source of power will not be an element in the cost of Niagara power. It is even believed that the hydro-electric power commission now investigating the subject will report in favor of such an arrangement. Against that every Hamilton influence should be directed. It should be an element in the duty of the Government to deprive any municipality of its natural advantages for the sake of less favored communities."

The Times is equally emphatic, and says the Government must be given to understand that the equalization of rates will not be tolerated. It is opposed to Provincial ownership, and asks why the people of Ontario should incur enormous liability and operate power works that can be useful only to a section of the Province.

Hamilton is in the enjoyment of cheap electrical energy, and will view with jealousy any extension of the same advantage to other municipalities, whether by public or private enterprise. It is exceedingly unlikely that the Government will undertake to generate or distribute Niagara power. If it did so it would be under the necessity of developing every important water power in the Province. The financial outlay and the rivalry of municipalities would create problems which politicians would rather avoid. But if the Government decided to control the distribution of Niagara power, money should not be employed to give one municipality, through no enterprise or outlay of its own, a permanent advantage over another in the matter of power rates. Once the transmission lines were built, it would cost no more to send electricity to London or Burlington than to Hamilton. There would be a loss of power corresponding with the distance from the point of production, but the electricity is generated by water, which costs nothing, and the power plant would, in any event, be on a scale sufficient for all needs. The extra expense would be chiefly the initial one of building the power lines, and toward this each municipality might fairly be required to contribute in proportion to its distance from the Falls. If the city of London, for instance, were required under a scheme of Government ownership, to pay for all time considerably more for electrical energy than towns or cities further east, it would be much better off if the Government left the business alone. Neither should the Government permit the power companies to unfairly discriminate between municipalities, if the field is to be left to private enterprise.

Rockefeller's Awakening.

The public utterances of Mr. Rockefeller are eagerly chronicled by the press, because he is the richest man in the world, and one of the most inscrutable. Of late he has become less sphinxlike. He has actually consented to be interviewed by a newspaper reporter, and the other day entertained at his home in Cleveland a company of newspaper humorists, who doubtless had made him the subject of many a biting paragraph. He is reported to have made a humorous speech. If he was not actually witty he might have claimed, with Falstaff, that he was the cause of wit in others. It is suggested that Mr. Rockefeller is revealing himself to the public in this ingratiating mood as an offset to the merciless portraiture of Miss Tarbell and other assailants of the oil king and his methods. He has hitherto wrapped himself in silence and secrecy, apparently indifferent to the detraction showered upon him as upon no other man in the world of affairs. He has been more written about and less known than any of his contemporaries. People began to conceive of Mr. Rockefeller as one apart from the human species, a money-making machine, without a heart, or soul, or conscience. Not long ago Mr. Rockefeller confessed that he suffered from a sense of isolation and yearned for the sympathy of his fellow men. It has come as a welcome surprise that he does care for the world's opinion. He winces at the picture which his critics have drawn of him, and wishes the public to see him as a human being, with human feelings and affections. Mr. Rockefeller throws a sidelight on his own personality in an address to his Sunday school class, warning young men to shun "good fellowship." He is reported as saying: "Don't be a good fellow. Don't be convivial—always ready to pitch in and help the crowd. Be moderate. Be very moderate. Don't let good fellowship get the least hold on you. It is my conviction that every downfall is traceable directly to the victim's good fellowship, to his good cheer among his friends. We have to apologize every day for this class of men. Look on them, and don't be a good fellow." There is a medium of good advice in this, but in exaggerating the dangers of sociability Mr. Rockefeller furnishes a clue to his present loneliness of spirit, and his pathetic longing for sympathy in his old age. He has all his life practiced an aloof-

sary to his success in business. He has not spared time to cultivate friendships and mingle with his fellow men, with the result that his social instincts became atrophied. He has allowed this better part of his nature to be absorbed by the master passion which has made him the modern Croesus. And now, late, he finds himself out of touch with humanity, and complains that he is misunderstood. Mr. Rockefeller is indeed an object of pity.

Togo's Flagship.

The Japanese navy has become a synonym for efficiency, so that the destruction of Admiral Togo's flagship, the Mikasa, appears to be inexplicable. One report says the fire had been under way for a long time before it was discovered. This is not reconcilable with the discipline which the Japanese have shown from first to last. Another report says the flames broke out at midnight, and reached the magazine two hours later, after the crew had exhausted every effort to quench them. The magazine of a battleship can be flooded in a few minutes. Is it likely the lives of the entire crew would be imperiled in the hope of saving the explosives? The theory is gaining ground that the story of the fire was an invention to cover up an act of treachery, and that the Mikasa was wrecked by a sudden explosion. The Japanese people are dissatisfied with the peace terms, and it is probable this feeling is intense among Togo's victorious seamen. Have one or a number of perverted patriots employed this frightful method of displaying resentment and taking revenge on the Government?

The Mikasa was a British-built ship, as most of the Japanese war vessels are. British naval men are interested in knowing whether the Mikasa was so inflammable as reports would indicate. No details have been received, and none may be forthcoming if the Japanese authorities prefer to conceal the facts. They are past-masters in the art of secrecy, which was one factor in their successes on land and water.

A Recipe.

[Buffalo News.]

Of course, we don't know whether you have a wife.

And if you have, we don't know whether she's always on her vacation.

And if she is, we don't know whether you want her back right away.

But if you HAVE a wife, and if she IS on her vacation, and you want to get her home again, here's how:

Write her a letter, containing money out of all proportion to your income, cordially inviting her to stay as long as she wants to.

Repeat this about four times at intervals of three or four days. After the fourth letter, select a good clean local paper, take an ordinary pair of shears, and clip out some little item, not a large item, you understand—just a little short one that may be hid away down in one corner. Clip it out where its absence will be noted.

Then carefully fold and wrap the paper and send it to her address.

Then go down and sit on the railroad track and wait. If it doesn't appear on the first train, WAIT—IT'S coming.

Of course, you will have a lot of trouble explaining the missing clipping, but don't you care—so low that woman's curiosity is a great thing.

Mr. Fielding Comes of Age.

[Toronto Globe.]

On the 20th of August twenty-one years ago Hon. W. S. Fielding became Premier of Nova Scotia. From that day until the present the career of the Dominion Finance Minister has been one of unhesitating success. He held the premiership of the eastern province for twelve years, longer than any other man has occupied the office, and being transferred by Sir Wilfrid to Ottawa in 1896, has had charge of the treasury of Canada for a longer period than any previous statesman. There are few Canadians who can show a more brilliant record.

How to Get Consumption.

Ninety per cent of the "lungers" contract consumption by allowing a favor-able condition for the development of the bacilli is provided. In a healthy system consumption can't take root. But where there is weakness and debility, there you find tuberculosis, resisting strength and building up the weak, nothing equals Ferrone's.

It makes the blood nutritious and the nerves enduring. The way it converts food into nutriment, the appetite it gives is surprising. Just what the man verging on consumption needs—that's Ferrone's. If tired and weak don't get out. Fifty cents buys a box.

cord. The surplus of his nine years of office at Ottawa total $66,000,000, and represent each year, save the first, when he inherited a Conservative budget and a deficit. Mr. Fielding may well go down to posterity as the Minister of Good Times.

Had Popular Sympathy.

[London Globe.]

Percy Barry, twenty-five, an organ-grinder with wooden arms and no legs, living at Carlton Road, Kentish town, was carried into a hospital, today, to answer to the charges of being drunk and disorderly, using bad language, and assaulting P. C. Horn. The previous afternoon, P. C. Welch, sixty-seven, found him in the mews of the Maiden road, Kentish town, with a barrel organ. He was drunk and using disgraceful language, and as he persisted refused to let anyone remove him, and put his false arm between the spokes of the wheel of the organ to prevent it from turning. When he was carried away, he was arrested. P. C. Horn carried him part of the way to the station, and on the way the prisoner was carried into a hospital. The amount of sympathy he evoked by reason of his affliction was enormous. He could collect no less than $20 and $25 a day.

The Day of Rest.

[Hamilton Times.]

Those newspapers and people who rail at those who are anxious to preserve the Day of Rest from being broken may be interested to know that salesmen employed in retail stores on the lower East Side of New York, who year in and year out work from 14 to 16 hours a day, and on Sunday, have determined to form an organization with the object of compelling the police to enforce the Sunday closing law. The workers are being deprived of day of rest both in Canada and the States, many of them engaged in work that is neither more nor less merciful. The Day of Rest is worth fighting for. It is the workman's day, and he should take care that he does not lose it.

THE TWO UNIONS DID NOT UNITE

Failure of Car Workers and Car Men to Amalgamate

—The 8-Hour Fight.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—The International Union of Steam Engineers decided yesterday that next year's convention should be held in Milwaukee.

The demands of Typographers' union demanding more stringent regulations against the admission of pauper labor from Europe was unanimously carried. It was stated that every effort was being made to unload on the United States and Canada the paupers of Europe.

BIG PAY SHEET.

Pittsburg, Sept. 16.—The Carnegie Steel Company today had the biggest semi-monthly payroll in the history of the Pittsburg district, $2,000,000 being paid to the workers.

Weekly pay amounts to $1,000,000, this time double and sometimes triple time has been made by the workmen.

THE PRINTERS' BATTLE.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Steps for the formation of an organization composed of many of the leading independent printing firms which will work in conjunction with the Chicago Typographers' union, have been taken.

According to the Typographers' officials 75 per cent of the output of book for the city of Chicago and a majority of the 300 firms which will be asked to sign the union agreement will join in the fight against the union. Many other printers, it is announced, are ready to aid in defeating the union. A bitter war is predicted by leaders on both sides.

FAILED TO UNITE.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—The proposed amalgamation of the Brotherhood of Car Men and the International Association of Car Workers has failed, and after brief local sessions the two unions met in separate halls.

President Richardson, of the Car Workers, denounced the Brotherhood men to resist the union, and the joint convention immediately rescinded its action of Thursday, when it voted to join the Car Workers' union.

The chairman informed President Richardson that the convention would not be resumed. The Car Workers' union then left the convention.

It is said that influence brought to bear by President Compagnon of the American Federation of Labor, caused the Car Workers' union to face about.

OTHERS IN THE FIGHT.

New York, N. Y., Sept. 15.—A resolution calling upon the members of the National Association of Manufacturers to support the employing printers in resisting the movement of the Typographical Union for an eight-hour day was adopted today by the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers.

TRADE OUTLOOK IS SATISFACTORY

Good Reports From All Points—Large Demand in Many Lines of Goods.

Toronto, Sept. 15.—Bradstreet's trade review: Wholesale trade continues to show activity in all lines. The demand for all lines of heavy goods is more active. Millinery and fancy goods are also large. Collections in all lines are fair and country remittances show some improvement. Country retail trade is more active, although the farmers are still busy finishing the harvest. Shipments of dairy produce from this part are heavier than those of a year ago and the demand for butter and cheese continues active, although prices are somewhat higher.

Toronto reports say: The volume of wholesale trade in all departments continues to compare favorably with that of this time in previous years. All parts of the country are sending out orders for the yield for wide distribution of lines. All lines are being sent out and retailers are making good inquiries for winter goods. There is a demand for collections, although country remittances are some cases a little slow. The western demand in all departments of trade is a heavy and large shipments are going to that part of the country.

Ontario crops are now all well housed and the general result has been to give the brightest tone to the trade.

At Quebec: The trade is very active and the country storekeepers are busy and working freely. However, rain is badly needed and reports of butter and cheese are not up to last season.

Industries appear to be well employed. Active preparations are being made for the new direct line between this port and London and Winnipeg.

Winnipeg reports say: At least 90 per cent of the western wheat crop has been cut and deliveries to the exporters are being rushed forward.

Between this port and London and Winnipeg, the trade is very active. The harvest country retail trade has been quiet, but in anticipation of a busy fall and winter, they are sending big orders to the wholesalers in all lines. Collections are generally fair.

Advices from Victoria and Vancouver say: A long time since there was so much money in circulation throughout the province as there is now, and as a result, times along the coast are very busy. Wholesalers find business very brisk, and they are making large shipments to the interior and to northern countries. Collections, too, are being made. The industries generally are busy engaged.

The outlook for future trade conditions continues bright. Reports from London say: Trade is generally active and activity is continuing. The promises of a good fall and winter trade are being borne out on all hands. Collections are better owing to more activity in country trade.

Ottawa advises say: Wholesale and retail business has a fairly brisk tone. Fall and winter goods are moving well. There is but little complaint on the score of collections. Local industries continue active.

CROOKED FISHERMEN

Another Yankee Tug Captured and Taken to Port Dover.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 16.—An Erie dispatch says the Keystone Fish Company received a telegram from Port Dover, Ont., late yesterday, sent by Captain Mearns, of the tug Scoville, a crew of 10, saying the fish tug had been captured and towed into port by the Canadian cruiser Vigilant, while fishing in Canadian waters.

The captain, engineer and four men on the boat were taken to Port Dover and will be released.

The tug, valued at $3,000, will be held pending settlement of the case.

PEACE CONGRESS OF THE POWERS

President Roosevelt's Final Step in Connection With the Russo-Jap War.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt will, within a week, take his final step in connection with the Russo-Japanese war. He will issue a call to the powers to hold an international conference, which will amend the treaty of commerce between the two nations to go to war, and should they do so, to compel them to adopt more humane tactics than were observed during the struggle which has just closed.

The idea to call such a conference has been in the President's mind for more than a year—almost, in fact, from the time the war between Russia and Japan began. The action of the belligerents in planting mines so that they drifted in the path of neutral commerce, causing the loss of innocent shipping and the death of persons who had no interest whatever in the hostilities; the capture and sinking of neutral vessels because they had aboard what was construed to be contraband of war; the immense damage done to private property all these things of first importance to every people in the world—determined the President to use his efforts to induce the powers to make a large amendment to The Hague treaty.

He communicated with the powers last year as to the advisability of holding a conference, but while there was provisional acceptance, it was evident that fear of offending Russia and Japan by adopting proposals which might reflect upon their course and limit their future action made several nations hesitate before appointing representatives. Russia and Japan were not prepared to participate in the conference while they were engaged in a struggle which might compel them to take measures in self-defense which would be contrary to the decisions reached at The Hague.

Finding an indisposition to take part in the congress, President Roosevelt notified the powers that he would issue a call when the war should end. He left, however, to the permanent court of arbitration, constituted under The Hague treaty signed in 1899, the duty of preparing a programme which would set forth in extensive detail to be discussed, and, if possible, settled.

Most of the ministers of the powers now accredited to the Netherlands, of which The Hague is the capital, are members of the court of arbitration, but they have not shown any energy in connection with the work placed in their hands. The President has decided, therefore, to issue a second call, and to suggest some time during the winter. The congress will hold its sessions in The Hague, and it is considered likely that each government will be represented by five commissioners, as was the case in 1899.

A RIVER OF OIL UNDER NEW YORK

Standard Oil Company to Pipe 440,000 Gallons Daily From Oil Region.

New York, Sept. 16.—The Standard Oil Company is now engaged in laying another pipe line from the oil regions to New York, the eastern seaboard. The pipes are being quietly put down across the state by Mr. Rockefeller's trusted agents, in almost a straight line from Olean. The workmen have laid the pipe as far as Middletown.

From there the line will follow the Erie Railroad to the west shore of the Hudson, above Westchewen. Thence it will be brought under the river and across Manhattan Island and under the East River to the Astoria refineries. The pipe will carry 10,000 barrels, or 440,000 gallons, a day.

A special agent of the Standard Oil Company, known as the "Gum Shoe Man," is going ahead of the pipe men, laying the new pipe line, settling with the property owners and farmers across whose land the pipe is being laid.

Some of the honest old farmers along the route, who have read of Mr. Rockefeller's fabulous wealth, have bothered his confidential adjusters a good deal by their claims.

One of the old farmers near New York, the oil comes here by gravity, under tremendous pressure. It will pour along under Manhattan in a steady stream.

DELAY EXPLAINED

Why the Anglo-Jap Alliance Treaty Is Kept Back.

Paris, Sept. 15.—The foreign office has received a dispatch from the French minister at Tokio saying that the treaty continues under military guard. It is the present intention to postpone making public the text of the new treaty between Great Britain and Japan.

The officials here were advised that the British plan was to make it public in London and Tokio last Monday, but Japan asked for further time, probably on account of the internal disorders, and it was arranged to let the publication go over for a month, when the peace and the alliance treaty may be published together, as the two are expected to counter-balance each other with the Japanese public.

COBALT'S WEALTH NOT EXAGGERATED

An Interesting Description of Assaying Ore Worth $30,000 Per Car.

Cobalt, Sept. 15.—A man who probably knows more than anyone else about the composition and nature of the ores of the cobalt mines is Dr. Albert R. Ledoux, of 39 West Fifth street, New York. Dr. Ledoux is the head of the firm that has done all the sampling of the ore sent from Cobalt to New York. Practically the whole of the output of the camp has passed through his hands at New York. He therefore ought to know something about Cobalt ores. Dr. Ledoux arrived at Cobalt last Saturday, having come here partly to spend his holidays and partly to see the camp. Regarding the final destination and treatment of the ore that has been shipped from here there exists a great deal of ignorance, which Dr. Ledoux has as last cleared up.

I saw him yesterday, and during an interview with him got the information that follows: When a car of Cobalt ore that has been shipped to New York arrives there it is immediately sent to Ledoux & Co.'s sampling works in Jersey City. There the whole of the ore in the car is crushed to the fineness of chestnuts. It takes about a week to crush a car of ore, because it is necessary to put Cobalt's rich ores through the machinery two or three times. After being crushed the ore is divided into four parts and a sample is taken from each of these quarters. The samples are assayed, and if the assays agree pretty closely they take the average of the four and call that the assay of the car. If there is much of a difference in the assays further steps are taken to make the assay more satisfactory to all concerned. After the sampling is done the ore is put back in the bags it came in and sent on to the smelter.

The ore is paid for on the certificate of Ledoux & Co.

Some week or two ago several leading officers of the company that is to erect the new smelter at Sudbury visited the camp and inspected the mines. One of the officials made the statement that about $2,000,000 had been paid over to Cobalt mine owners for ore shipped to New York. If one hundred cars have been shipped, and each car contains the average per car would be $20,000, which seems to be no extravagant estimate, according to local valuation. These figures agree with the estimate of $2,500,000 as the returns of the camp up to that date.

SNAP-SHOTS AT VARIOUS SPORTS.

Dan McEwen has Texas Rooker right on edge now, and the big bay is traveling very fast. He took a record of 2:06 1-4 yesterday at Syracuse. He ought to get close to 2:03 this season.

The matinee races are over for this season, with the exception of the finals for the trophies. Among this season's "finds" none have shown more improved form than N. McLeod's fine pacer, Walter S. He has gone faster every time out, and would, if taken to the circuits, make good in fast company. He's a wonderfully improved horse since spring. Young McLeod handled him all season.

Gordon Butler, the secretary-treasurer of the Rugby Club, has been transferred from this city to the accountancy of the Merchants' Bank at Chatham. No one has done more for Rugby in this city than Gordon Butler, and no one has given more of his time to boom the game. His place will be hard to fill.

That western mare, The Broncho, 2:02 1-4, again established her claim to queen of pacer race mares at Galesburg by pacing the third heat of her race there in 2:02 1-4. It is really too bad The Broncho was not brought east, for, while it looks as though she would have been able to beat the pacers in the first class on the Grand Circuit tracks, it is also likely that before the circuit followers reached Cincinnati some of the pacing cracks would have developed form to make her place her record below 2:02 1-4. Possibly the Broncho mare may yet get mixed up with the pacers now in the east, in which case it is likely that she will have to give the public a true line on her speed limit.—Horse World.

A bulletin came out some time ago, signed by a physician, stating that Territorial Terry McGovern was again strong mentally and physically. We almost thought so until we read the challenge he had in the papers the other day, in which he declared he would be supremely happy to meet Battling Nelson. Don't do it, Terry. The Dan would not like to be arrested for manslaughter. Terry would see more things than he did when he was in the "bush."

A 200 to 1 shot got home at Gravesend the other day, and we were not aboard. And the worst of it was that the bookies were relieved of their summer's earnings. From where we sit, it's a safe bet that only a few pickers saw it at all, and the killing was only made that night in some plunger's dream. It was ever thus.

The New York Giants won a game from Brooklyn the other day by scoring seven runs in one inning on two hits. That's about as bad as that St. Thomas team would do. They are bound to present the rag to McGraw's gang.

But one hit was made off Waddell up to the ninth inning of a recent game in Boston, and both the hits in that inning were of the scratchy order. He struck out eleven men in nine innings, and seventeen in the game, and of these strike-outs, twelve were in the last seven innings. He retired Pitcher Winter five times on strikes, and Burdett three times in succession. The runs made off him in the ninth inning were the first scored off him in 44 innings. "Rube" added this feat of seventeen strike-outs to a long list of achievements this season. He holds the record, fourteen strike-outs in a nine-inning game with the Chicago White Sox. He has struck out thirteen of the Nationals in a game, eleven of the Nationals and Browns, ten of the New Yorks and Detroit, twelve of the Bostonians in the twenty-inning game, twelve of the Browns in a sixteen-inning game, and eleven of the Sox in a fourteen-inning game. In the 43 innings in which his opponents failed to score off him up to the ninth inning Tuesday, but nineteen hits were made off "Rube's" delivery.

Sleever was in great form in the afternoon game and came near equaling the association record of 11 strike-outs in one game. From the way he started out the fans thought he was going to break the record. Hickey, Berger, Kellum and Goodwin are the pitchers who have made 11 strike-outs in one game this year. Last year the association record was 12.—Minneapolis Tribune.

It's horseless carriages, boneless ham, smokeless cities, etc., ad infinitum, but now they are going to give us "girlless" phones. This is more than we can bear. Oh, take not, take not, our hello girls from our midst.

The London Rowing Club are to have another bowling tournament on Tuesday, Sept. 19, Friday, Sept. 22, and Wednesday, Sept. 27. Some fine prizes are given, and the interest shown so far is keen. Keep the date posted in your hat.

Fred Roche, of the Merchants Bank, this city, has been transferred to the Souris, Man., branch. Fred was a smooth hockey player, and it was hoped that he would be kept here for the team this winter. He played a great right wing the last two winters with Watford and Preston in the intermediate O. H. A.

Jack Wood drove a good race with Clipper on Thursday at the fair. He handled the horses well for a young driver. He's not the easiest one in the world to handle, at that.

Surnia has organized its Rugby Club, and dull rumblings will be heard from the Tunnel Town from this on. Petrolia is down to work already, and these two towns ought to put up some good work. Here are the officers of the Surnia Club: Honorary president, Col. Neil McMillan; honorary vice-president, W. J. Ryder; president, J. M. Diver; first vice-president, W. D. Lumis; second vice-president, R. L. Towers; third vice-president, James Kittermaster; manager, K. B. Mackenzie; assistant manager, Charles Fleming; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Kenny; finance committee, K. B. Mackenzie and James Merrison.

In explanation of the reason why the Canadian horses show such poor summer and fall form, it is due largely to the hard work they do in the early season, especially for the Ontario Jockey Club meets. The trotters and pacers have demonstrated that wintering in our northern climate does not affect the speed of a horse at all—in truth, the horses wintered in the north have simply swept the circuits this year, as shown by the triumphs of Sadie Mac, Katherine L., Maud Kewick, Texas Rooker and others. In picking up a paper the other day it was shown that Maud Kewick was distanced one day in June in 2:20. They take more time to develop the speed of the trotters and pacers, and when the season of the rich stakes is on, they simply take the big share. Our Canadian breeders of the rich stakes is for the spring meet, and as soon as that meet is over, the horses go stale and lose form altogether. Maybe it would not be a bad idea for the trainers of runners to copy the methods of Stinson, James and other teamsters.

M'EWEN DRIVES TEXAS ROOKER IN A FINE RACE AT SYRACUSE

Won $1,200 Event in Straight Heats—Geary Not in Money in Empire Stake.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 15.—At the Grand Circuit races held today on the State Fair grounds 20,000 persons witnessed Audobon Boy, in the rain, pace a mile without wind shield in 2:06 1-4, in an effort to break the track record of 1:59 1-4.

The first quarter was made in 30 3/4 seconds, the second in 29 3/4, and the third in 29 3/4.

When the time was hung out a mighty cheer swept through the crowd of spectators, although few of them appreciated what the performance really was.

"You have witnessed one of the most remarkable miles ever paced by a horse," shouted Starter Newton, and the cheers were renewed.

Had Audobon Boy been favored by conditions there is little doubt but that the State Fair grounds would have a world's record.

Eight races, bringing together the best horses of the year, gave an indication of what today's sport at the State Fair grounds was like. Every winning horse lowered or equaled his best previous mark, and three-quarters of the heat winners chopped from one-quarter of a second to three seconds from the records they had when brought to Syracuse.

Of the 22 heats trotted and paced 16 were in 2:10 or better.

LONDON AND DISTRICT

Miss Bessie M. Smith, Goderich, has been the guest of Miss Edith H. Hal- liday, Dundas street, for the past week.

—Mr. Thomas McCormick arrived home yesterday from Muskoka, where he was recently taken very ill. He is now resting easily at his home on Grand avenue.

—The annual harvest home services will be held tomorrow at Christ Church, Glenora, and Trinity Church, Lamb- ear, at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. respectively. Rev. Canon Downie, B.D., rector of Port Stanley, will preach.

—Rev. Dyson Hague, of the Croyon Memorial Church, has returned from the general synod, just held in Quebec, and will occupy his pulpit, both morning and evening, tomorrow. Rev. G. B. Sage also returned.

—Mr. Gordon Butler leaves today for Chatham, where he has been made ac- countant in the Merchants' Bank, of which he has been teller in this city. The promotion indicates much success on the part of Mr. Butler, but his many friends in this city, and especially in Rugby circles, are sorry to lose him.

They enjoyed their trip very much and report an excellent time. On Sunday Mr. Pennell will take his full work at the Talbot Street Baptist Church. In the evening he will preach 'Behold the Lamb of God'."

—Hamilton City Council will have an overdraft of not less than $20,000 this today at the grand.

At this evening's performance of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," at the Grand Opera House, London theatre- goers will have the last opportunity of witnessing this splendid play. No one should miss it.

Good early prospects for last year's crop encouraged a landowner on a long in particular tied themselves up with obligations of this nature to an extent that crippled them when the crop did not turn out nearly as well as was expected. Consequently they could not meet their season's bills at country stores, which in turn failed to liquidate with jobbers and wholesalers. The result was that this spring a very acute financial situation existed.

BEWARE THE HORSE THIEF.

"Almost every day," said Chief Gorman, of Galt, "we get notification of horse thefts. Some come from a long distance, but the most are within a radius of 50 miles. Hamilton neigh- borhood particularly seems infested with operatives among the farmers' stables. The horse and cattle thieves are bold. Only a short time ago eight head of fat steers were taken from a field in Wentworth County and never a trace of them has been discovered. The horses are spirited away just as mysteriously. My impression is that a gang of experienced thieves have come over from the States and are systematically working this province. Farmers, and in fact all who own horses, ought to be more on their guard."

A GALLANT RESCUE.

The London Daily Graphic, of a recent date says: "We publish today a photograph of Lieut. Hugh Bogle, R.N., who gallantly rescued a lady from drowning in the Serpentine. Mrs. Greenwood, of Beaufort Mansions, was sculling by herself in a small boat and when near the west end bridge at South Kensington, she stood up in the boat. This caused it to overturn, and Mrs. Greenwood was thrown into about eight feet of water. Lieut. Bogle was crossing the bridge at the time, and without taking off any of his clothes, and with a lighted cigar in his mouth, he jumped over the bridge to the rescue." The handsome young lieutenant was last summer a visitor in this city, where he has a number of friends. He is a son of the late Admiral Bogle, of the British navy, and is not the only member of a family that has earned honorable mention for acts of bravery.

PETE LEWIS WINS

conviction for Having Two Bar-rooms on July 12 Quashed.

A Clinion dispatch says: The con- viction of P. B. Lewis for having more than one barroom on July 12, has been quashed on appeal. The regula- tions of the license commissioners of West Huron include one to the effect that the bar should not consist of more than one room. Lewis, to accommo- date the large number of customers on that holiday, erected a temporary counter in the hallway adjoining the bar. The police magistrate held this to be a breach of the regulation, but Judge Holt, in quashing the conviction, held that the regulation is ultra vires, because to have two barrooms without two bars is inconceivable, and the statute already provides against two bars. The judge further holds that the decisions previously given that the erection of a temporary structure in the hall did not make the hall a bar- room, and that there was no violation of either the regulation or the act.

DAMAGE CLAIMS

WERE REFUSED

Ladies Hurt by Collapse of Stand at Queen's Park Will Have to Sue the City.

The application of the London Rolling Mills for continued exemption from taxation was again laid over by No. 1 committee of the city council at its meeting yesterday. The company is assessed for $5,000 in place of the actual value of the plant, $40,000.

The matter will now go to the council. Ald. Carson thought that the ex- emption should be continued.

Ald. Greenlee held the opposite view. The city solicitor's report said that the council could continue the ex- emption under the new assessment law if they wished.

The London Machine Tool Company were unanimously granted remission of $1,500 in taxes on the burned por- tion of the property.

The matter of selling a strip of north Talbot street to Mr. Alex. Harvey was again laid over, pending discussion re- garding the proposed children's park.

The committee had no power to grant remission of taxes to John Meacham on a proposed new plant.

No action was taken in regard to the requests of Mrs. Arcsott and Mrs. Hicks for compensation for injuries re- sulting from the collapse of part of the platform in Queen's Park during the Old Boy celebration. Letters were re- ceived from the ladies' solicitors, but the committee were under the impres- sion that they had no claim for dam- ages.

Ald. Carson stated that he had heard the people ordered off the unlucky piece of platform several times before it collapsed.

A MUDDY SQUARE CAUSED PROTESTS

Comers to Market Did Not Like Its Condition—Prices Easier.

Farmers, farmers' wives and buyers are heard complaining about the slop- py state of the market square. Today mud was thick on all parts of the square. What makes people feel more like grumbling is the contrast presented on either side by King and Talbot streets, which now are being nicely paved.

"It seems strange," said one woman, "that these streets should be paved for the sake of the whole city, while the market square, where women have to walk, is in a disgraceful condition."

The hole in front of the big scales received the "benedictions" of men with loads of hay when it has been raining.

The size of the market was good, considering Friday night's rain, and the fact that it was the last day of Fair week. The market was about two-thirds the size of last Saturday's "bumper." Offerings were confined to the small lines, but qualities and prices were good.

Butter was just a shade easier than formerly. Pound rolls were going at 22 and 23 cents, while most of the crocks sold at 21 and 22 cents. It is to be noted that in the dairy hall but- ter sells at the same prices as down- town. Pound rolls were selling there at 25 cents.

Eggs were selling at 18 to 20 cents retail. It seems that Londoners are not getting many eggs as they were a couple of weeks ago, and prices are in- clined to be steady.

Lots of fine vegetables were offered. Potatoes sold at 65 and 75 cents a bag. Cauliflowers went for any- where between 50 cents and $1 25 per dozen, cabbages at 40 cents, green corn at 7 cents and celery at 35 and 40 cents.

There was the usual quantity of poultry, and from 50 to 80 cents a pair was paid for dressed spring chickens. Twenty-five loads of oats appeared, and sold mostly at 95 cents per cwt.

As for fruit, well, there seems to be no end of it. Fifteen thousand bush- ets came into Western Ontario on a train from the Niagara district, having been collected at Hamilton. The market had its share. Peaches went for 40 and 15 cents a basket cheaper than last week. Apples were a trifle dull at 30 cents to $1 25.

The meeting was finally ad- journed until October, owing to the absence of the division court inspector. The courts, which it is proposed to abolish are at St. John's, East London and Delaware, and it is said that they do so little business that they are scarcely worth maintaining. CONSUELO COMES TO HER OLD HOME

Arrival in New York of Duchess of Marlborough—She Was Incog.

New York, Sept. 16.—The Duchess of Marlborough, whom before her marriage was Consuelo Vanderbilt, arrived here last night on the Campanian. The duchess' presence as a passenger on board of the steamer had been kept a secret, and was not generally known until announced yesterday.

On the pier she was met by her stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Neither her sons nor her husband accompanied her, and it is not expected that the duke will come over during his wife's stay of from two weeks to a month. Mr. and Mrs. Belmont and their daughter went direct to the Belmont country home at Rossmore, L. I. This is the duchess' second visit to her mother since her marriage 10 years ago.

GARNET SERGE COAT WITH METAL BUTTONS.

The Separate Coat Now Returns To Favor

Empire Effects, Which Have Struggled So Long for Acceptance, Have at Last Gained Admittance to Fashion's Realm in the Form of Short-Waisted Coats for General Wear.

Supple Broadcloths of Close Weave, Especially in Black, Shape These Smart Garments, Which Are Light in Weight and Yet Warm Enough to Check the Sharp Advances of Jack Frost.

Silk Coats on Empire Lines for Evening Wear Show Handsome Lacey Embroidery Valours and Stunning Coats for the Business Women Are Rough in Texture and Various Black and White Effects Are Extremely Popular.

[By Katharine Anderson.]

Separate coats for winter wear are decidedly the novel feature of the season's fashions. They have been kept in the background for a number of years by tailored suits, and the rainproof wrap with warm interlining has served in their stead against the invasion of Jack Frost.

This year the separate coat is sweeping everything else before it. As an all-enveloping wrap, which can be worn with any frock and in any and all kinds of weather, it has returned to favor in most fascinating forms. It has little in common with the old-fashioned, ungainly cloak, and its new lightness and suppleness render it as suitable for wear in the chill days of fall as in the icy months of winter. Heavy and bulky, the old garment insured no more warmth than the close weaver of the exceedingly pliable materials which are the foundation of the coat now making its appearance. In grace and comfort the latter offers no comparison.

Chiffon and satin broadcloths lend themselves most favorably to the new coats and they are to enjoy a great popularity, both in light and dark colors. Covert cloth in its myriad shades is also a tremendous favorite and rough chevrot serges in supple weave will be employed for practical coats. Colors there is a wide range of choice in the more sober shades of blue, brown, deep red and green. Black and white in blended stripes and checks appears in some very smart models shown at exclusive shops.

The cut of the garment, however, renders it distinctive and accounts somewhat for its extensive vogue. After many struggles to bring back short-waisted effects of the Napoleonic era, Dame Fashion has succeeded at last. Each season for several years exclusive gowns from Paris have shown empire lines, but the American woman did not find them to her liking. She was too strongly attached to the shapely lines of a tight-fitting garment to see any beauty in loose, flowing coasts. But she is forced out of her beliefs this fall by the potent charms of the empire coat. This is unmistakably the smart, separate wrap for cold days. Suits will have coats to match which shape themselves snugly to the figure, and frocks will be belted in to waists, but the coat for warmth and general use will be nothing more or less than a modification of the Mother Hubbard.

Empire lines, however, are effected in many different ways, and not a few of the lower coats of two years back can be remodeled into this season's styles. The trick is accomplished by braid or stitched bands being applied in bold or simple five or six inches below the arm pit.

A noteworthy example of this is a coat of broadcloth in the egg-fall shade of purple known as aubergine. The cloak might easily be the popular design of 1903 which was plaited over the shoulders and fell with fullness back and front to below the knees. Bishop sleeves with turnback cuffs carry out the same idea. But the new wrinkle is a wide belt of braided above the waistline and passing under the arm, slopes up to the bust line. It enters a slit at either side of the front and allows the coat to fall in princess line from the neck.

What may be called the skirt of the wrap drops in gathers from beneath the velvet band and has open seams at each side faced back with satin to match. Revers, cuffs and belt are of aubergine velvet handsomely braided in black taffeta in raised designs. Cloth covered buttons embroidered in black give a final smart touch to the coat.

Another popular cut for the loose wrap shows a very full skirt applied to a deep, fitted yoke that extends into a long front panel. The fullness of the skirt is plaited in groups and voluminous girth sleeves are laid in tight folds from wrist to elbow. Braid wrought by hand into fantastic patterns finishes the velvet collar and cuffs, and ball-shaped button molds are covered to match. This particular coat is in black satin broadcloth which will be worn late into fall over light-colored frocks.

Silk Hercules braid appears frequently as the only trimming on the loose wrap. In one instance, three-inch wide, finished with a round bolero yoke with Watteau pleat at the back and plaited skirt. Wide, turnback cuffs and elbow sleeves, and a quaintly shaped collar are trimmed in the same simple, but charming manner.

Rough chevrot in deep electric blue shapes a coat similar to this which is being finished by a fashionable tailor for a stylish young miss. Stitched bands of the material ending in brass buttons, replace the braid, and stitched folds, laid one below the other, complete a cuff from elbow to wrist.

Modish as are these empire coats in dark colors, it is in the light shades of broadcloth for afternoon and evening wear that they are most stunning. This style of coat is especially well adapted to slip on over dressy frocks and supplies the warmth of a heavy cloak with the looseness of a theater wrap.

Of all the delicate mode shades, an ivory white is perhaps the most popular. An empire coat evolved from the broadcloth in this shade has a graceful bolero yoke embroidered in trailing leaf design. Ivory velvet collar and deep cuffs show the same handwork from the front of the coat and the leg-of-mutton sleeves.

Heavy gold and silver embroideries are employed in shaping these bolero yokes and an exquisite garnish in champagne color has girdle lace, bolero and long styles both back and front. Pampe coats of silk have long and rolling collar of fur, and as the season advances much fur will be worn as a lining for the practical coat for every day use.

The business woman who does not wish to present too striking an appearance, needs a separate coat which is neither a delicate broadcloth nor cut on extremely empire lines. Her happy medium is the coat of rough mixed goods set off by straps and buttons. Both the tight-fitting coat and the shaped loose coat are open to her use.

A popular model for the latter shows a fitted yoke to the bust line and leg-of-mutton sleeves with very little fullness. Skirt or velvet sometimes finishes the collar and cuffs.

In the tight-fitting, ankle-length coat, which has an uninterrupted vogue for two years, only one change is noticeable and that is in the sleeves. If they do not stop at the elbow, variety in the way of velvet cuffs with buttons are shaped snugly to the forearm and give the effect of an elbow sleeve.

A redingote which will be a favorite with the woman who has a good figure is the paddock coat. The upper part of this garment is cut in the shape of a long, fitted jacket, while the skirt is attached in a flat pointed seam. It clings snugly to the hips and falls in scant ripples to the ankles. Among a certain type of woman the short jacket is always a favorite. In spite of the immense popularity of the long wrap, empire effects are equally evidence in this field, though they are particularly natty when completing a suit of the same material. The bolero coat is by all odds the smart cut when the jacket must be worn with various frocks. One of the very newest of the short coats has a seamed paddock back that reaches just to the hips.

people by the arm and brought them in to "have a look."

"The automobiles caused some rare fun, too. The boy who had a girl with him for the first time in his life, rented one to go round the grounds, and my! but he was the proud boy. He sat, stiff and upright, and tried to look as if he were having the time of his life. Secretly, he was rather scared, lest the auto should blow up or run over somebody, but who cares? This is Fair time and—hang the expense!"

The brides were there in full force, too. Clad in white, with high white veils, and hanging on to their husbands' arms, as if afraid they would set away. They were full of interest for everybody, for all the world loves a bride.

Speaking of lovers, a most pathetic little incident came under my notice at the Fair. Hardly the slack-wire performer, was just about to go on for his turn in front of the grandstand, when his wife came over to him and said: "Goodby."

He turned and gripped her hand, and for a long minute, he stood looking into her eyes. Then he dropped her hand, said "goodby," and mounted the wire, to give his daring act.

One of the newspaper men standing by, turned to Mrs. Hardy and said: "Why do you say goodby like that?" She shrugged, as she replied: "Because, if he ever fell, he would never be able to speak to me, and so I never let him go without saying goodby. It may be the last time I shall ever hear his voice," and she turned away.

And so it goes. The applause of the public must be paid for, sometimes with a bitter and heavy price, and even the Western Fair has its gleams of humor and pathos.

The "barkers" on the Pike were quite as funny. It is much more worth 10 cents to stand outside and listen to them "spiel" than it is to go in and see a show that in nine cases out of ten is not worth a cent.

Over in the Machinery Hall there was one man who was wasting his talent on an ordinary exhibit. He should be out with a circus, for he certainly could have done better.

Effects of Tea-Drinking.

While everyone knows that it is wrong to stew tea, to draw from it as much of its astringent principles as possible, yet there are few who pay any practical regard to the warning not to prepare tea in this way. It is too widely known that not only is the most essential constituent of tea, but also that it is almost as quick-soluble in hot water as in sugar. The making of the infusion is therefore complete in a few minutes, and only tea so prepared is the "strongest beverage." The abuse of tea, like the abuse of any other stimulant, is of course, reprehensible, and the guilty person deserves all the unpleasant symptoms which accompany tea-drinking or the drinking of strong, stewed tea sooner or later brings its train. The use of plenty of milk with tea, it may be added, is a precaution, and must be regarded as a sound physiological proceeding, since the proteids of milk destroy astringency, and probably prevent the otherwise injurious action of tannin on the mucous membrane of the stomach. In the infusion of tea the proteids are separated, and the tannin probably combines with the sodium salts. The immediate cause of the ailment is a question of degree, but on the whole, we are inclined to think that the evils of tea-drinking have been exaggerated. A slightly drawn infusion gives them their money's worth.—London Lancet.

THE COLLECTING FAD OF WOMEN TOURISTS

PICKS UP QUAIN TRAYS IN PLACE OF SPOONS.

The latest fad of the woman tourist is the collection of odd service trays. Her souvenir craze began some years ago when she brought home individual coffee cups from each town visited. Another year's fancy was drinking stents, followed by a season when quantity shaped pitchers and jugs were the coveted object for which she was always hunting. During this summer of 1905 she has haunted antique shops and novelty stores in search of all sorts of picturesque and unusual trays.

One vacation resort dealer has made a specialty of these many kinds of wooden trays. Noteworthy among these is a matched wood tray of oak, in which the grain of the oak is joined to show zigzag figures. A rim of brass encircles the circumference of a circular shape, from which rises on either side a perpendicular standard of brass six inches in height, holding handles of highly polished oak.

Oblong trays in similar matched wood have a molding of ebony around the edge, and wooden handles that stand straight out from the ends. Imitation Sheraton trays with their delicately inlaid woods and filigree brass rims are also among this stock. Very decorative also are trays of burnt wood showing flower designs or figures of girls under crystal and inclosed in high nickel rims.

A distinctly new tray is one used for serving cold meats or salads. It stands up from the table like a cake dish and is topped by a flat, circular receptacle. Carving dishes of different kinds, especially of the circular shape, are especially convenient for lunch and Sunday night tea service.

The pride of one woman's collection is a tray of teakwood in cake-dish shape, bearing salad dishes in the form of green beech leaves, with a pink porcelain, peach-shaped bowl for cheese in the central groove. Most artistic in these collections of trays is the German thimble mounted in bright nickel. Wonderful flower designs in rich and exclusively blended coloring decorate the cream white porcelain.

Cured Her Drunken Father.

This young lady says: "My father often promised to stop drinking but returned to it worse than ever. After a terrible spree, he said, 'It's no use ever stopping drinking.' I decided to give him the Tasteless Samaritan Preparation, and did so in his coffee, tea and food until he was without his knowledge. One package removed all his desire for liquor. It is a sure cure for him, and we feel sure the cure will last."

Headaches

it is Biliousness or Constipation. Torpid Liver is at the bottom of the trouble. And it takes Fruit-a-tives to make that lazy liver work.

Fresh fruit is fine for these troubles, but one can't eat enough fruit to do much good. The medicinal elements are in too small proportion in the ripe fruits.

A clever Ottawa physician discovered a method by which fruit juices could be combined so that their medicinal action would be increased many times.

Fruit-a-tives are these fruit juices in tablet form. They sweeten and tone the stomach and liver, cure Constipation and remove all blood impurities. One Fruit-a-tives tablet has the same curative effect on liver and bowels as dozens of oranges, apples, figs and prunes. And this action is as gentle as the fruit juices themselves.

"I have been suffering with Torpid Liver and Constipation, and find that Fruit-a-tives are just what my system requires to relieve these complaints. I hope many more sufferers will try them."

Moreover, so successful has this treatment been that hospitals and sanatoria affording such treatment are daily becoming more numerous and fresh-air movements, on behalf of the tenement dwellers of England, are receiving a growing public interest and support.

For the sake of the increasing interest in the treatment of tenement children for scrofula, the following advertisement is published.

Considering that here are more than 4000 children suffering from bone tuberculosis in the city of New York, in the largest of our districts, it may be easily seen that the attempt to do something for them is no easy task.

The trade of tooth-stainer, followed in Eastern Asia, is as odd a calling as any. The natives prefer black teeth to the white kind, and the tooth-stainer, with a little box of brushes and coloring matter, calls on his customers and stains their teeth. The process is not unlike that of blacking a boot, for a fine polish is given to the teeth. The pleasure he has in his work is evident.

EXAGIL

The Return of Sherlock Holmes

V.—THE ADVENTURE OF THE COPPER BEECHES.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Copyrighted by Scribner and McClure, Phillips & Co., and published by special arrangement with the Canada Newspaper Syndicate, for the exclusive use in this paper.

THE man who loves art for its own sake, remarked Sherlock Holmes, tossing aside the advertisement sheet of the Daily Telegraph, "it is frequently in the least important and lowliest manifestations that the greatest pleasure is to be derived. It is, perhaps, the case with you, Watson, that you have so far grasped this truth that in these little records of our cases which you have been good enough to draw up, and, I am bound to say, occasionally to embellish, you have given prominence not so much to the many cases of extraordinary and sensational crime in which I have figured, but rather to those incidents which may have been trivial in themselves, but which have given room for those faculties of deduction and of logical synthesis which I have made my special province."

"And yet," said I, smiling, "I cannot quite hold myself absolved from the charge of sensationalism which has been urged against my records."

"You have erred, perhaps," he observed, taking up a glowing cedar with the tongue and lighting with it the long cherry-wood pipe which was wont to replace his clay when he was in a disputatious rather than a meditative mood—"you have erred perhaps in attempting to put color and life into each of your statements, instead of confining yourself to the task of placing upon record that severe reasoning from cause to effect which is really the only notable feature about the thing."

"It seems to me that I have done you full justice in the matter," I remarked, with some coldness, for I was repelled by the egotism which had now once observed to be a strong factor in my friend's singular character.

"No, it is not selfishness or conceit," said he, answering as was his wont, "my thoughts rather than my words, if I claim full justice for my art, it is because it is an impersonal thing—a thing beyond myself. Crime is a common logic is rare. Therefore, it is upon the logic rather than upon the crime that you should dwell. You have degraded what should have been a course of lectures into a series of tales."

It was a cold morning of the early spring, and we sat at breakfast on either side of a cherry fire in the room at Baker Street. A thick fog rolled down between the lines of dun-colored houses, and the opposing windows looked like dark, shapeless voids through the heavy yellow wreaths. Our gas was lit, and shone on the white cloth and glimmer of china and metal, for the table had not been cleared, having apparently given up its search, he had emerged in no very sweet temper to lecture me upon my literary shortcomings.

"At the same time," he remarked, after a pause, during which he had sat puffing at his long pipe and gazing down into the fire, "you can hardly be open to a charge of sensationalism, for out of these cases which you have been so kind as to interest yourself in a fair proportion do in fact, at least from a legal sense, at all. The small matter in which I endeavored to help the King of Bohemia, the singular experience of Miss Mary Sutherland, the problem connected with the man with the twisted lip, and the incident of the noble bachelor, were all matters which are outside the pale of the criminal law, and, therefore, avoid the sensational. I fear that you may have been misled on the point."

"The end may have been so," I answered, "but the method of the hold to have been novel and of interest."

"Fshaw, my dear fellow, what do the public, the great, unselective public, who could have anything better, but who might suit me, Westaway was the name of the founder of the business, but it is really managed by Miss Stoper. She sits in her own little office, and the ladies who are seeking employment wait in an anti-room, and are then shown in one by one, when she consults her ledger, and sees whether she has anything which would suit them."

Well, when I called last week I was shown into the little office as usual, but I found that Miss Stoper was not alone. A prodigiously stout man with a very smiling face, and a great heavy chin, which rolled down and folded upon his chest, sat at her elbow with a pair of glasses on his nose, looking very earnestly at the ladies who entered. As I came in he gave quite a jump in his chair, and turned quickly to Miss Stoper.

"That will do," said he: "I could not ask for anything better. Capital! Capital!" He seemed quite enthusiastic, and rubbed his hands together in the most genial fashion. He was such a comfortable-looking man that it was quite a pleasure to look at him.

"In question?"

As he spoke the door opened and a young lady entered the room. She was plainly but neatly dressed, with a bright, quick face, freckled like a plover's egg, and with the brisk manner of a woman who has had her own way to make in the world.

"You will excuse my troubling you, I am sure," said she, as my companion rose to greet her, "but I have had a very strange experience, and as I have no parents or relations of any sort from whom I could ask advice, I thought that perhaps you would be kind enough to tell me what I should do."

"Er—take a seat, Miss Hunter, I shall be happy to do anything I can to serve you."

"I could see that Holmes was favorably impressed by the manner and speech of his new client. He looked her over in his searching fashion, and then composed himself, with his lips drooping and his finger-tips together, to listen to her story."

"I have been a governess for five years," said she, "in the family of Col. Spence-Munro."

Spence-Munro, but two months ago the Colonel received an appointment at Halifax, in Nova Scotia, and took his children over to America with him, so that I found myself without a situation, I advertised, and I answered advertisements, but without success. At last the little money which I had saved began to run short, and I was at my wits' end as to what I should do."

"There is a well-known agency for governesses in the West End called Westaway's, and there I used to call about once a week in order to see whether anything had turned up which might suit me. Westaway was the name of the founder of the business, but it is really managed by Miss Stoper. She sits in her own little office, and the ladies who are seeking employment wait in an anti-room, and are then shown in one by one, when she consults her ledger, and sees whether she has anything which would suit them."

"My accomplishments, sir, may be less than you imagine," said I. "A little French, a little German, music and drawing."

"Tut, tut!" he cried. "This is all quite beside the question. The point is, have you or have you not the bearing and deportment of a lady? There it is in a nutshell. If you have not, you are not fitted for the rearing of a child who may some day play a considerable part in the history of the country. But if you have, why, then, how could any gentleman ask you to condescend to accept anything under the three figures? Your salary with me, madam, would commence at £100 a year."

"You may imagine, Mr. Holmes, that to my destined as I was just an offer seemed almost too good to be true. The gentleman, however, seeing perhaps, the look of incredulity upon my face, opened a pocketbook and took out a note."

"It is also my custom," said he, smiling in the most pleasant fashion, "until his eyes were just two shining slits amid the white creases of his face."

"Dear Miss Hunter—Miss Stoper has very kindly given me your address, and I write from here to ask you whether you have reconsidered your decision. My wife is very anxious that you should come, for she has been much attracted by my description of you, and I am sure that you will find it a very pleasant change. My wife is very exacting, after all. They are not of a particular shade of electric blue, and would like you to wear such a dress indoors in the morning. You need not, however, go to the expense of purchasing one, as we have one belonging to my dear daughter Alice (now in Philadelphia), which would, should think, fit you very well. Then, as to sitting here or there, or amusing yourself in any manner indicated, that need cause you no inconvenience. As regards your hair, it is no doubt a pity, especially as I could not help remarking its beauty during our short interview, but I am afraid that I must remain firm upon this point, and I only hope that the increased salary may compensate you for the loss. Your duties, as far as child is concerned, are very light. Now, do try to come, and I shall meet you with the dog-cart at Winchester. Let me know your train, yours faithfully,

"That is the letter which I have just made up that I will send you. I thought, however, that before taking the final step I should like to submit the whole matter to your consideration."

"Well, Miss Hunter, if your mind is made up, that settles the question," said Mr. Holmes, smiling.

"But you would not advise me to refuse?"

"I confess that it is not the situation which I should like to see a sister of mine apply for."

"Ah, I have no data. I cannot tell. Perhaps you have yourself formed some opinion."

"Well, there seems to me to be only one possible solution. Mr. Rucastle may be a very kind, good-natured man, but I do not think that his wife is a lunatic, that he desires to keep the matter quiet for fear she should be humored by fatherless in any way in order to prevent an outbreak."

"That is a possible solution—in fact, I think, it is the most probable one. But the dear old lady seems to be a nice household for a young lady."

"The money, Mr. Holmes, the money?"

"Well, yes, of course the pay is good—too good. That is what makes me uneasy. Why should they give you £120 a year, when they could so easily pick for £40? There must be some strong reason behind."

"I thought that if I told you the circumstances, you would understand afterward if I wanted your help. I should feel so much stronger if I felt that you were at the back of me."

"Oh, yes, I can carry that all along with you. I assure you that your little problem promises to be the most interesting which has come my way for some time. There is something distinctly novel about some of the features. If you should find yourself in danger, I am in danger—"

"Danger? What danger do you foresee?"

Holmes shook his head gravely. "It would cease to be a danger if we could define it," said I. "But at any day or night, a telegram would bring me down to your help."

"That is very kind of you. She rose briskly from her chair with the air of one who is not at all deterred by the prospect of a long journey to Hampshire quite easy in my mind, and she wrote to Mr. Rucastle at once, and started for Winchester tomorrow. With a few grateful words to Holmes she bade us both good-night and bustled off upon her way."

"At last," said I, as we heard her quick, firm step descending the stairs, "she seems to be a young lady who is very well able to take care of herself."

"And she would need to be," said Holmes, gravely, "for I am much mistaken if we do not hear from her before many days are past."

It was not very long before my friend's prediction was fulfilled. A fortnight went by, during which I frequently found my thoughts turning in her direction and wondering what strange side-sally of human experience this lonely woman had strayed into. The unusual light, the curious conditions, the slight duties, all pointed to something abnormal, though whether a fad or a plot, or whether the man were a philanthropist or a villain, it was quite beyond my powers to determine. As to Holmes, I observed that he sat frequently for half an hour on end, with knitted brows and an abstracted air, but he swept the matter away with a wave of his hand when I mentioned it. "Data! data!" he cried impatiently. "I can't make bricks without straw."

The telegram which we eventually received came late one night. Just as I was thinking of turning in and Holmes was settling down to one of those frequently indulged in, when I would leave him stooping over a retort and a test tube at night and find him in the same position when I came down to breakfast in the morning. He opened the yellow envelope, and then, glancing at the message, threw it across to me. "Just look up the trains in Bradshaw," said he, and turned back to his chemical studies.

The summons was a brief and urgent one. "Please be at the Black Swan Hotel at Winchester at mid-day tomorrow," it said. "Do come! I am at my wits' end."

"Will you come with me?" asked Holmes, glancing up.

"I should wish to."

"There is a train at 9.30," said I, glancing over my Bradshaw. "It is due at Winchester at 11.30."

"That will do very nicely. Then perhaps, I had better postpone my analysis of the acetone, as we may need to be at our best in the morning."

By 11 o'clock the next day we were well upon our way to the old English capital. Holmes had been buried in the morning papers all the way down, but he had passed the Hampshire border he threw them down and began to admire the scenery. It was an ideal spring day, a light-blue sky flecked with little fleecy white clouds drifted over a landscape of rolling green hills and a shining river brightly, and yet there was an exhilarating nip in the air which made one take one's coat. All over the countryside, away to the rolling hills around Aldershot, the little red and grey roofs of the farmsteads gaped open from amid the light green of the new foliage.

"Are they not fresh and beautiful?" I cried with all the enthusiasm of a fresh from the fogs of Baker Street.

But Holmes shook his head gravely. "Do you know, Watson," said he, "that it is one of the curses of a mind with a turn like mine that I must look at everything with reference to my own special subject. You look at these scattered houses and you are impressed by their beauty. I look at them and I only think of what comes to me is a feeling of isolation and of the imminence of what crime may be committed there."

"Good heavens!" I cried. "Who would associate crime with these dear old homesteads?"

"It is always ill me with a certain horror. It is my belief, Watson, founded upon my experience, that the lowliest and vilest abodes in London do not present a more dreadful record of sin than does the smiling and beautiful countryside."

"But the reason is very obvious. The pressure of public opinion can do in the town what the law cannot accomplish. There is no lane so vile that a man with a turn like mine should not beget sympathy and indignation among the neighbors, and then the whole machinery of justice is ever so close that a cry of complaint can set it going, and there is but a step between the crime and the dock. But look at these lonely houses, each in its own field, filled for the most part with poor ignorant folk who know little of the law. Think of the deeds of hellish cruelty, the hidden wickedness which may go on, year after year, in such places, and none the wiser. Had this lady who appeals to us for help gone to live in Winchester I should never have had a fear for her. It is the five miles of country which makes the danger. Still, it is clear that she is not personally threatened."

"No, if she can come to Winchester to meet us she can get away."

"Quite so. She has her freedom."

"What can be the matter, then? Can you suggest any explanation?"

"I have devised seven separate explanations, each of which would cover the facts as far as we know them. But which of these is correct can only be determined by the fresh information which we shall no doubt find waiting for us. Well, there is the tower of the cathedral, and we shall soon learn all that Miss Hunter has to tell."

"Pray tell us what has happened to you."

"I will do so, and I must be quick, for I have promised Mr. Rucastle to be back before 3. I got his leave to come into town this morning, though he little knew for what purpose."

"Let us have everything in its due order," Holmes thrust his long thin legs out toward the fire and composed himself to listen.

"What can you not understand?" "In the first place, I may say that I have met, on the whole, with no actual ill-treatment from Mr. and Mrs. Rucastle. It is only fair to them to say that, but I cannot understand them, and I am not easy in my mind about them."

EVERYONE agrees that the best in anything is always the most economical even if it costs more.

But when you can get the best in tea at the same price you pay for inferior teas, —when you can get that "rich fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea, —when you can get all the good qualities of both Indian and Ceylon teas with none of their weaknesses, —when, in short, you can get Red Rose Tea at the same price as other teas; why not have it?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Used in all parts of the world for over 60 years. Has the unqualified endorsement of the best physicians. A strong nerve tonic. A blood purifier of great power.

NINE-TENTHS of kitchen labor and worry is caused by ill-working cook stoves and ranges; by ranges that draw poorly; that have such complicated drafts that only a skilled mechanic can manage them; whose grates are so constructed that it is a strong man's work to shake them down; ranges which work well when the wind is in a certain direction, but act like a fiend at other times; ranges whose work is so unreliable that the housekeeper is in a constant nerve-racking worry lest the meals be late or the baking spoiled.

The Pandora range is built to make work easy, a child can shake it down; its drafts are so simple that one learns them in a minute; its heat is kept in the range so effectively that you can do a big baking and hardly know there is a fire in it two feet away; it keeps the kitchen cool; it saves you worry; it saves you time and money; it saves you backaches and headaches, because it is so easy to manage and so reliable.

The Pandora makes kitchen work easy.

Our Boys and Girls May the East wind never blow when he goes a-fishing

Conducted by Polly Evans

A Game of Digtail

Catch the Runner by Her Hair

Girls, how would you like to learn a game in which the boys cannot possibly join you? It is one the Chinese boys with their queue loves to play every day. Polly Evans does not see why little American girls should not like it also.

Every girl who wears her hair in a pigtail down her back can join. The more the merrier.

Let all the players stand in a close bunch. At a given signal each throws her hair over her shoulder to the front and edges away from her companions. The object of the game is to catch a girl with her hair down her back as she wears it naturally. To secure this each player must try to so startle some girl that she will turn her head quickly to see who it is, when her hair falls into its usual place. Then all the rest who have been waiting the opportunity can give her a slap and a hair pull.

Girls who are good runners or quick often get to the front and escape, or else learn to bring their plaits quickly around to the front when pursued.

Since, as a rule, nothing makes a girl more angry than hair pulling, this is a splendid way to cultivate control of temper. You might have a forfeit for every girl who gets cross when caught, and another for those catchers who are too rough.

Pongo's Complaint

Now, isn't this a queer world?" chattered Pongo as he politely tipped half over a glass of wine and water for his cousin, Tocheo, the chimpanzee, to take a drink.

Shrieks of joy arose at this sight from dozens of little Germans, close pressed around the monkey cage of the Berlin aquarium, one bright afternoon in the year 1876. These boys and girls had come to see Pongo, the baby gorilla. Pongo was the first of his family of apes ever brought alive from Africa, and during his life in Europe more than 200,000 people visited him to watch his many tricks.

"What queer noises those boy creatures make," Tocheo continued Pongo. "In my dark jungle home, where my mother kept me hidden all day in a tree nest, my father, like as he did my brothers, men ran from me. Now they poke at me and torment me always."

"Would my mother were here," Tocheo said. She would fix those boys. Often the black men pointed the noise-making stick at me, when she gave a terrible roar, crash went her fist on their heads, and they trembled no more."

"Why did I leave my mother? That's a sad tale."

"One day, just as my mother went to cradling a black man, crack! went the gunstick. There was a white blur, and my mother lay all quiet on the ground below my tree perch."

"Then a voice said: 'Now's our chance to turn somersaults or swing on a trapeze? Have you special friends like the fat boy Hans and his dog, who come into my cage each day for a game of tag?'"

"I'll tell you a secret, Tocheo—it is also bad for little boys to smoke. I'll tell you a secret, Tocheo—it is also bad for little boys to smoke. I'll tell you a secret, Tocheo—it is also bad for little boys to smoke."

"Did any one ever try to teach you to write? Well, what if I did swallow my pencil? I made black marks on paper first."

"I like not this strange, cold land, Cousin Chimpanzee, where I am ever shivering. Is it not yet 8 o'clock, that I may be well wrapped up and sleep for twelve hours?"

The Grab Bag

AST WEEK Polly Evans

told you of the troubles between Norway and Sweden. Would you like to hear how the former was allowed to use her own flag? It is a very ancient emblem, this flag of the Norwegians, and as it has led the Norwegians to many a victory, they are just as proud of it as we are of our own.

After Sweden had conquered Norway she had a "Troll's Market," or Troll's Market, and the Norwegians, as it has led the Norwegians to many a victory, they are just as proud of it as we are of our own.

THOUGH it was not until 1897 that the Norwegians flew their own flag, there was one man who did it long before that. This was the poet so dearly loved by the people, Bjornstjerne Bjornson. He was a patriot even more than a poet, and a great political leader.

For years the old flag of Norway floated from his mountain home, though it was a disgrace to the flag of his country. It was a disgrace to the flag of his country. It was a disgrace to the flag of his country.

BOYS, how many of you would be allowed to go to school on the ocean when but 8 years old? Your mothers would be horrified at the very thought.

Perhaps Eskimo mothers may feel that way, too; but that makes no difference. The 8-year-old Eskimo is taught by his father to manage a boat; by the time he is 11, he is quite expert enough to own one of his own.

THAT first boat is usually given a boy by his father, but as he grows taller and wants one to fit him better, he must build it himself. Perhaps it is just as well that the Eskimo boy, who must depend on the kayak for all he eats, drinks or wears, should begin when still a baby to learn its ways, as it is said no one who is not used to it from childhood can ever manage one.

IN one of last week's puzzles was the word "Kayak." Some of you may not know the important part that word plays in an Eskimo boy's life. A kayak is a fast and hunting boat, and every young lad in Greenland is taught to make his own. It is a queer-looking craft of light wooden framework, covered with sealskin. The putting on of this sealskin is done by a woman, often a young girl, and she takes much pride in making her work look better than that of any other boy's mother.

In the upper part of the kayak is an opening into which the fisherman slips, wrapping himself in a sealskin flap, laced close around the hole to prevent the water getting in. These boats are very light and fast, and the Eskimo boy almost lives in them.

OFTEN the Hawaiian school boys and girls swim to school, carrying their clothes high in one hand and paddling with the other. How would you like that? American boys, I fear, are more apt to "play hooky" to go swimming.

YOU read, not long ago, of the wonderful tropical fires with which eyes can read by it. Do you know that these fires are often used by young Cubans to make pocket money? The poorer children gather them to sell to the rich little Cuban girls or their mothers for ornaments. These sparkling little insects are worn in the hair, at the belt or even as a bright spot on a bunch of flowers; of course, under gauze. Children make pets of them, keep them in dainty cages and feed them on sugar.

DOUBTLESS you have all been told that it is not polite to ask people their ages; but how many of Polly Evans' boys and girls can equal the good manners of an old Chinaman called Lau Lal-tze? Though nearly 70, he was so afraid that his candles would be reminded of their own great age if they realized their own no longer young that he used to dress himself in a child's frock and play about the room as an infant. No wonder Lau is held up as a model for all well-trained Chinese children.

A CAKE WALK

JUST A BUNCH of pickaninies.

Only to have a glorious dance; were you judge, now which, I wonder. Were your choice, by any chance?

It is quite too hard a problem. "Mid such gorgeousness and grace, To decide without you helping, Who is worthy of first place."

Here's George Washington and Sambo, Launcelot, Diana, Jake; Lily, Christabel and Mandy. Tell me—Who shall take the cake?

A REGULAR LITTLE PICKLE

OTS was what his father called "a regular little pickle." Do you know what that is? Some people will tell you "a troublesome child," but I fear it means just plain naughty.

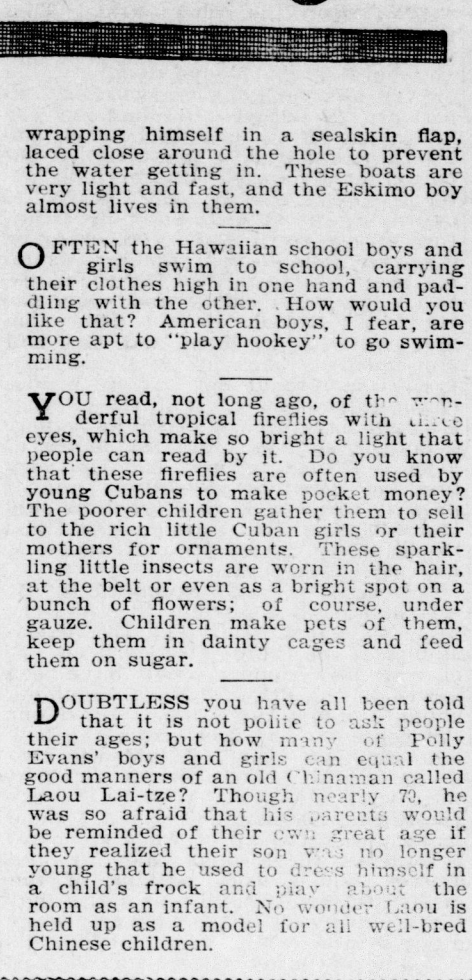

Just 4 was Tots, and the funniest, headiest, red-headed, freckled-faced little chap imaginable. Once his 10-year-old sister Nancy said, "Mither, I love Tots dearly, but he does look so like an orange. Couldn't you make him wear a hat?"

And, really, Tots, with his thick mop of vivid yellow-red hair standing straight up from his round head, with freckles of exactly the same shade, so big and close together as to almost hide the fair, white skin underneath, had very much the coloring of an orange. So Tots was no beauty; but his face was so bright and winsome, and his big, blue eyes behind their red lashes were so merry and mischievous that every one loved him and forgave him for being a "little pickle."

From his mother's side Tots was always in trouble with his pranks. Before he talked he would snatch off grandma's glasses and throw them on the floor; or even up to mother's workbasket and upset it, all the time chuckling with joy, or pull the bright, silver dollars and coins from his pockets to throw down the hall radiator.

Tots had barely learned to walk when he was found outside the yard today as fast as he could go to the railroad track to see the "choo-choo" train. After that he ran off every chance he

PLUM GOES TO DOLL LAND

A Delightful Little Japanese Maid

SHE WAS called Plum because she came to this world in the season of this delicious little fruit. She herself was the most delightful of little Japanese, ever seen. At eight years old, she was no higher than a table, very pretty and a little yellow; from her comical little turned-up nose, eyes, mouth, lively, rough look, while her tiny feet gave her the hopping walk of a bird.

Her gown, with big flowers, and her black hair rising in a pompadour and tight knot, all stuck with long pins, made her look a regular little Japanese woman.

In spite of her numerous toys, the gardens and the birds, and her basin of red fish, little Plum was melancholy. When anyone asked what saddened her, she always answered in a faint trembling voice: "I want to go to see Golden Fly again."

Golden Fly was the daughter of Plum, a doll almost as large as herself, who said papa and mama in very good Japanese, and wore a gown with a big butterfly bow at the back, almost like her mama's.

Plum had other dolls, but this was her favorite, whom she loved with all her little heart.

One bright morning Plum had a frightful shock. Golden Fly had disappeared from her cradle. In her place was a letter on fine rice paper, in which Golden Fly explained that she had been sent to come to take her to doll land. She swore the Plum not to forget her and thanked her for her good care during her stay among men.

From that minute Plum's one thought was to find a way to follow her doll, since the fairy would not let Golden Fly return.

One day walking sadly in the garden she suddenly saw a large sparrow perched on the branch of a plum tree looking at her and tossing its feathers, which every one knows is the sparrow's way of laughing.

Plum was about to walk on when the sparrow began to talk in a loud, clear voice, to listen to him a minute.

"I am," said he, "the good genius of orchards; at the present time I am making my spring tour to see if my fruit trees are in bloom. Live within this plum tree who call himself your godfather; it is he, who, seeing you always sad, has asked me to cheer you up."

"To a tree I would give fine fruit, beautiful leaves, a little rain or a big wind. But in the plum tree, in more difficult, so I will let you make your own choice. Place that plum blossom behind your left ear as a good voice what you most desire. Your wish will be granted immediately, but think well before making it, for it is a long time before I return."

Then the sparrow flew away. Little Plum did not think long. She put the blossom behind her ear and said very clearly:

"I wish to go to see Golden Fly!" At once she felt herself rising in the air. The garden and the house disappeared; then the earth was only a little ball in space; yet still Plum rose.

At last she reached an extraordinary place to find a way to follow her doll, since the fairy would not let Golden Fly return.

RIVAL ARMIES

BOYS and girls do not use slates in another way than the lower corner of a cannon, filling the space above it with o's for the soldiers of the army.

This picture will show you how to do it.

QUEER CUSTOMS

SOME of Polly Evans' boys and girls may have grown-up brothers and sisters who are engaged to be married. If so, you know how excited you were when you first heard the news. If you lived out in Afghanistan, however, such an occasion would be even more exciting, as the custom of becoming engaged there are very strange, indeed.

In that far Eastern country, if a young man wishes to marry, he goes to the father of the girl he has chosen and asks for her hand. Before the father grants it, he seeks a priest and makes an offering to the god of marriage to see if it approves. If the god approves, as it usually does when enough money is given, the priest gets out blood from the arms of the young man and his future father-in-law.

After this the lover lives at the expense of the young woman's father, for a month at the end of which the father invites him to a solemn festival, when the approaching marriage is sealed by making cuts in the arms of both young people, and mixing their blood in a bowl.

Then, what a time follows! A family council is called immediately, at which the engaged young lady appears, all decked with jewels, her face smeared with butter and a cord around her neck. Poor thing! She must now listen while her lover quarrels with her father about how much money he must pay for her.

Sometimes this money question takes a long time, as each tries to get the better of the other. It is not until the lover has paid over the money for his bride that the marriage is considered final.

Now the battle begins. Each player has a sharp-pointed pencil. No. 1, placing the point of his pencil on the mouth of his champion, draws it very quickly across the slate toward No. 2's army. If the mark made by this pencil passes through any of the men of the opposing army, they are killed and the pencil passes to No. 2. It takes his turn at pencil-killing, and so the game goes on until all the men on one side are dead.

This diagram shows the plan of battle, No. 1 having won.

THE CARRIER BEE
YOU often have heard of carrier pigeons and the part they play in war, but how many boys and girls ever heard of the carrier bee? These little honey gatherers have a sense of direction that they can always fly home from any point in a range of four or five miles, he tied tiny notes for his little daughters on the bees and set them loose in a totally unfamiliar place. In a very short time they were back at their own hives, messages and all.

We are told that a few years ago a beekeeper trained some of his insects as message carriers. Knowing they would always fly home from any point in a range of four or five miles, he tied tiny notes for his little daughters on the bees and set them loose in a totally unfamiliar place. In a very short time they were back at their own hives, messages and all.

Some people think bees might be made very useful in war times, even in perfect peace.

Put these eight pieces together to form a perfect cross.
