YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

This famous national park offers to the tourist and sightseer more novelties and curiosities than perhaps any other spot on earth. The stage ride from Monida is through scenery hardly inferior to the park itself, and this ride is one of the very many enjoyments of the trip. The new route to the Yellowstone is via the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line Railroads to Monida, Montana, thence daily by palatial Concord Stage Company to all points in the Yellowstone National Park. JOCKEY'S FUNERAL London, Aug. 2.—Funeral services in memory of J. Watts, the one-time well-known and successful jockey, were held at Newmarket to-day in the presence of a remarkable gathering. The King sent Lord Marous Eversford specially to represent him, and wreaths were sent by the King, Lord Rosebery, Sir Edgar Vincent and others. Many notable persons and almost the entire town of Newmarket marched in the funeral procession. John Watts was known as the "Grand old man" of the English turf, although he was only 41 years old at the time of his death. He rode the Derby winner four times in ten years. In 1891 he rode 114 winners. When he became too stout to ride he became a trainer and served in that capacity for the King.

OPPOSED TO MULOCK'S BILL

Railway Unions Strongly Disapprove it—Men Would be Made Slaves.

Companies Would Rule and the Men Would Have no Redress Against Grievances.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 3.—A meeting of railway men was held here on Saturday behind closed doors to discuss Mr. Mulock's Railway Disputes Bill, introduced at the last session of Parliament. Mr. P. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, was present, and organizations represented were the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and the Trackmen's Union. The delegates were strong in their expression of disapproval of the Mulock Bill, claiming that it gives the companies which have all the influence in Parliament unlimited power. Clause 5, which proposes to make strikes and lockouts illegal, came in for consideration. The delegates contended that if it were passed, the railway employees would be made slaves of the companies, as they would have no redress against grievances. It was decided to report to the lodges on the matter, and have the bill discussed at further meetings with the purpose of having a memorial prepared for presentation to Parliament, embodying the employees' views of the bill and the modifications and amendments they think desirable.

RECEIVES MANY VISITORS DAILY

And Dines With Members of Royal Family—The King's Condition.

General Lucas Meyer and Wife Invited by His Majesty to Witness Coronation.

London, Aug. 3.—Up to yesterday King Edward had taken all his meals alone, but then for the first time since his recent illness, he lunched and dined with members of the royal family. His Majesty now receives numerous visitors daily and grows to be becoming crowded with fashionable notables.

Gen. Lucas Meyer, who was recently in command of the Orange Free State forces, and Mrs. Meyer, luncheon with Colonel Secretary Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain yesterday. King Edward has invited Gen. and Mrs. Meyer to witness the coronation ceremony at Westminster Abbey next Saturday, but as Gen. Meyer goes to Dresden upon medical advice, to take the waters, they were unable to accept.

Former President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, who, with his family, arrived at Scheeveningen. Mr. Kruger has sent him a message in which he prays for his early recovery.

MORGAN'S LATEST

London, August 2.—J. Pierpont Morgan has just purchased from Georgina, the Countess of Dudley, her handsome house at No. 53 Grosvenor street. The house stands at the corner of Davies street, and is most conveniently situated. Lady Dudley had her house beautifully decorated recently at a cost of nearly $300,000. Grosvenor street is in the heart of the fashionable Mayfair, while Mr. Morgan's present house at No. 13 Prince's Gate is merely on the fringe of the smart district. His new house will enable him to display to perfection his great store of exquisite art treasures, the decorative possibilities of which are lost at Prince's Gate, where they are heaped together, because there is not sufficient room to show them off properly. Mr. Morgan's purchases recently are said to have reached an enormous sum.

SUNDAY CYCLONE STRIKES THE CITY OF ST. CATHERINES

Thousands of Dollars Damage to Property—Buildings Unroofed and Chimneys Destroyed—A Family Imprisoned.

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 3.—This city was struck by a cyclone at 1.40 this afternoon, and several thousands of dollars damage was done to property. No lives were lost, but some very narrow escapes are reported. A large funnel-shaped cloud formed in a northerly direction and moved over the city with great rapidity. At Welland avenue it started its destruction, moving south by Court and Geneva streets. It first blew out the end of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Thorold, Railway car barns. The building is a new brick structure and it is badly smashed. It picked up a freight car (in the N., St. C. and T. railway yards) and threw it against the building, which was wrecked and under it. At this point huge trees were torn up and the road blocked. All along Court street, parts of roofs are gone and the yards and roads are completely blocked. Mrs. Captain Murray's brick barn was unroofed and almost wrecked. Slate shingles were stripped off and driven into frame houses. There is scarcely a chimney left standing in this vicinity.

The storm passed south, crossing Church, King and St. Paul streets. Here it turned east on Division street. The Belmont House, corner of St. Paul and Geneva, was unroofed and damaged. Wise's lumber yard was slightly damaged, and windows broken. Division street is probably the worst. Although the houses are standing, bars on all sides are unroofed. The Bell Telephone Company and other wires are tangled in a mass. Some large poles were picked up, laden with wires, and thrown on top of other poles and there they hang in the air. Several men are engaged in cutting up the poles and carrying away chimneys and verandahs stripped off. The storm, after leaving Division street, struck across the Welland Canal, throwing the water high in the air. Mr. Chas. Steele, who lives just

TRIVIAL CASE

On Saturday morning last Mrs. Chas. T. Cherry, wife of the King street grocer, laid a charge of assault against Miss Mamie Howell. The case came up before Judge Houston this morning. J. B. O'Flynn appearing for complainant and O. L. Lewis for the defendant. It appears on Friday last the above named litigants were passing on the street when Miss Howell says, Mrs. Cherry violently rubbed against her unhealed vaccination, and she struck her in the back with her hand. Mr. Cherry wanted to settle the thing out of court, but Mrs. Cherry disagreed with him, and said that the only way it could be done was to have an apology. Hence the police court case. After hearing evidence in the case, which lasted two hours, the judge said he would not give his decision for a week, but would look up similar cases in the meantime. But if he did fine the defendant, it would be only a dollar without costs.

GASHED THROAT

An Old Man Attempts to Commit Suicide by Severing Windpipe With Razor.

The Sarnia Observer of Saturday, says:—About noon to-day, a man, aged probably between 50 and 60 years, walked into J. J. Clements's drug store and asked for a razor. He selected one from among those shown him. In payment for the same he tendered Dr. Clements an envelope with the remark, take your pay out of that, at the same time walking out of the store. Dr. Clements suspected that there was something wrong, and he hurried out of the store and followed the man down the Lochiel street toward the river. When he saw the man cut his throat with the razor, he rushed to the Lambton Loan Company building, and was just in the act of cutting his throat. Dr. Clements grabbed the man's arm and called for assistance. Several men responded, and the man was restrained from inflicting any more injuries upon himself. He fought desperately and seemed bound to destroy himself.

Dr. Morrison was summoned and attended to the cuts in the man's throat. In his attempt at suicide, Gravelle, for such his name proved to be, managed to make two cuts in his throat—one about three inches long and another of about one inch in length—but neither of them was deep enough to cause death. Gravelle was removed to the hospital, where Dr. McDonald dressed his wounds.

Following is the copy of the letter which Gravelle left at Clements's drug store:—August 2nd.—My dear wife, Maggie, that I love, I have been looking for you and Joseph night and day. I forgive you with all my heart. I love you, Maggie. Kiss Joseph and Maggie. Tell them a broken-hearted and loving father has gone to heaven. I kiss you all in my distress. In a few minutes I will meet my judge, not the one that stole the children. I do not blame you. God told me to forgive. Please kiss the children. One more minute and I am gone to heaven.—Augustin Gravelle.

I kiss you all. God be merciful to you. You have killed me and my dear children.

The letter was addressed to Mrs. A. Gravelle, Sarnia, Ont., Dundas street. The doctors expressed the belief that the man was insane and dangerous to be at the hospital. Information was laid against him, and he was removed to the county jail.

THREE BOYS DROWNED.

Pittsburg, Pa., August 3.—Three boys here were drowned today in the Allegheny river at the foot of Thirty-sixth street. They are Wm. J. Carroll, aged 14; Amiel Kolenski, aged 12, and an unknown boy, aged about 12. None of the boys could swim, and were winged about two of them got beyond their depth in a hole made by a dredge boat. The Carroll boy lost his life in attempting to save his companions.

A CLASH

Clericals and Anti-Clericals are Showing Disposition to Mix-up at Paris.

Paris, Aug. 2.—Several Nationalist deputies representing Paris, waited on the Premier, M. Combes, today, to ascertain the Government's further attitude towards the religious schools. M. Combes informed them that application for authorization by the closed schools could not suspend the action of the association's law and such schools would not be allowed to reopen until the Council of State had rendered decisions regarding these applications. They might, however, reopen with lay staffs, and he was considering means to expedite the consideration of applications by the Council of State. The Premier said there were 12,000 such applications waiting attention. The Socialists have arranged an anti-clerical demonstration for the Place Maubert, in the Latin quarter, to-morrow, and the clericals also announce a meeting to protest against M. Combes's circular, to be held in a hall in the Rue Danton, in the same quarter. A collision is feared, and the police intend to take extensive preventative measures. The peasantry in Western Brittany continue to guard the schools, and a determination to prevent the closing of them.

MONDAY, AUGUST 4.

HAVE CHANGED THEIR TONE.

A very noticeable change has taken place in the tone of the press of Paris in its references to the achievements of the British army in South Africa, and many of the newspapers are now complimentary as they were formerly abusive. Le Temps, for instance, pays the following tribute to Lord Kitchener, which, coming from such a source, is high praise, indeed—“Viscount Kitchener has done his work well, and he has accomplished even more in the just and honorable peace he has arranged than in the brilliant military skill with which he made it possible. The British have good reason, therefore, to be proud of this great general, for he is both able in diplomacy and brilliant in the field.”

BOER GOOD FEELING.

In a letter which was quoted recently in The London Chronicle, a British officer now in South Africa says that it is a common saying among the Boers that they and the British together could beat any other nation in the world. There seems, indeed, to be the best of feeling between the conquered and the conquerors, and the same officer says that after the surrender the Boers flocked to the officers' quarters asking for salt, which some of them had not tasted for two years. Indeed, he continues, they ate salt with their former adversaries in the eastern sense of the term, professing loyalty for the future and showing instant good-will by taking the British officers out stag-hunting with them, and this within a week of the termination of the war.

THE POOR OLD BANNER IN HOT WATER AGAIN.

The Woodstock Express, Independent, takes the following apt round out of our erratic and amusing contemporary:

Our esteemed contemporary, the Chatham Banner-News, rebukes the Rev. Dr. MacKay, of Woodstock, in this fashion, for his speech at the meeting of the Alliance:

“The annual address of the president, Rev. Dr. MacKay, of Woodstock, would have stirred up a more saintly assembly. The doctor, while a pronounced prohibitionist, is anything but temperate in his language and his address was just of that kind to stir up strife. So far as it applied to the Government it was not only abusive but libellous. It is true that he made a show of impartiality, hitting out viciously, right and left, in dealing out his compliments, but of course pleased nobody, as loud cries of angry dissent were heard throughout the audience. Both political parties, he said, are prostrate before the liquor traffic and ‘shamefully corrupted before that power.’ The doctor knows that this statement, while probably fitting the Opposition, is wholly untrue when applied to the Ross Government, who went as far as the constitution permitted in prohibition legislation.”

Rev. Dr. MacKay may be trusted to look after himself; at any rate we are not sure that he wants any assistance from The Express. We do not refer to the matter at all for the purpose of defending Dr. MacKay, but because the last sentence quoted is too good to let pass—the Government went as far as the constitution permitted in prohibition legislation. That's about as funny a thing as we have seen outside the columns of the Sentinel-Review. And what adds to the humor of the situation is the fact that the Banner-News is doubtless terribly in earnest. Other Grit papers have frankly admitted that the Government went as far as the Liberal party—and they might have added the liquor interests—would allow; but the Banner-News has evidently discovered some new freak of the constitution, heretofore unknown. If the constitution would not permit Hon. G. W. Ross to keep his pledge, why did he not say so himself and save much trouble and bitter feeling? Nobody would expect him to do the impos-

THE GALLANT CAPTAIN.
Hamilton Spectator.
After seeing the girls of England, Scotland, Ireland and France—to say nothing of the Boer girls—Capt. Morrison, of the Ottawa Citizen, delivers the verdict that the Canadian girl beats all of 'em.

AH, THERE GIRLS!
Ottawa Citizen.
The girls want the bank clerks, salary or no salary. At least such would appear to be the opinion of the London Advertiser, which remarks: “In raising the salary limit for marriage it is quite evident the Bank of Montreal did not consult the ladies.”

THE WINDY CHAIRMAN.
Exchange.
Harry Furniss tells of a testy but popular Scotch lecturer, who, on a tour of the Lowlands, met with a chairman so impressed with the importance of his office that in introducing the visitor he actually talked to the audience for an hour. The gathering, a large one, bore it all patiently. This was the chairman's peroration:
“It is unnecessary for me to say more; so I call upon the distinguished gentleman who has come so far to give up his address to-night.”
The gentleman who had come so far arose, stepped forward, bowed, pulled out and looked at his watch, and then said:
“You want my address. It is 322 Rob Roy Crescent, Edinburgh. A letter will find me there. Good-night!”
Saying which he left the stage and the hall before anybody could interpose.

CANADIAN COMPETITION.
Ottawa Journal, Ind.
Official figures from Washington show that the foreign trade of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30 last, decreased by $25,992,441. The imports, or purchases, by the United States increased by $79,739,143 over the preceding year, but the exports, the sales, decreased by $105,731,584.
For the same fiscal year, the foreign trade of Canada increased by $36,827,653. Exports and imports both were greater than in the previous year. The imports were more by $21,566,202; the exports were $18,466,048 more.
While some people in the United States are talking about depriving Great Britain of commercial supremacy, they might also figure on a little brush with Canada in due time, and not so far distant as history goes.

CORSET WAR IN ROUMANIA.
London Daily Graphic.
The outbreak which threatens Roumania has been caused by the Minister of Public Instruction forbidding girls in the higher and secondary schools to wear corsets, and, in case of refusal, directing the forcible removal of the offending article. The future mothers of Roumania, remembering that the ancient Romans, from whom they claim indirect descent, wore a kind of stays (does not Martial make fun of fat women, and does not Ovid tell us that a big waist kills love), and that the corset, with a short interval, has been worn ever since, are naturally up in arms against the arbitrary decree. It is a case of war to the hilt, and it is pretty safe to prophesy that the school girls will win.

HARD WORKED MINISTERS.
Moncton, N. B., Times.
Of the overworked members of the Laurier cabinet, five of them, sent over to see the coronation honors, still linger in England. These are the Premier himself, Postmaster-General Sir William Mulock, Finance Minister Fielding, the Minister of Militia, Sir Frederick Borden and Hon. Wm. Patterson. A continental tour is in prospect, and the ministers will not return to Canada until September. Of the other ministers, Mr. Tarte has been pleasuring about Canada and the United States. Mr. Blair has been dividing his time between inspection of the Intercolonial from recrosses of his private car, yachting trips, etc., and Mr. Sifton is preparing for a laborious trip to the Yukon.

ROYAL MUSKOKA NOW OPEN
Guests Are Arriving Daily at the New Summer Resort.

The opening of the new Royal Muskoka Hotel on Lake Rosseau, Muskoka Lakes district, for the season of 1902, has been a source of satisfaction to the proprietors, and the reservations that have been made up to the present for accommodation at this resort assure the success of the venture. Guests are arriving daily, and by next week, hundreds of people will be enjoying the beauties of Muskoka with the advantage of sojourning in one of the best summer hotels in America.

Among the guests at the hotel now are prominent people from Buffalo, Chicago, New York, and other American cities, as well as many Canadians. The Ontario Government, in conjunction with the Grand Trunk Railway system, is continuing the policy inaugurated last year of restocking the Muskoka lakes with parent bass. The first carload was deposited in lake Rosseau, June 20, and a finer lot of bass have seldom been seen. Last year 10,000 fish were transplanted into the Northern Lakes with much success. The fishing this year in the Muskoka Lakes is good, some excellent catches having been made, the bass weighing from two to four pounds, and picked from two to eight pounds.

There is no region in America richer in mineral springs than Colorado, while throughout the state there are pleasure resorts and splendid places of attraction of various kinds in great numbers. It has been truly said that all of Colorado is a health resort, and this statement is sustained by the most eminent physicians of the country. What with its beautiful cities on the plains, its gorgeous mountain peaks and lovely valleys, its awful canyons and their rushing torrents, its forests and streams, its broad green parks, and charming crystal lakes amid the mountains, what more could nature provide or man desire for his welfare or his delights. Not only the health-giving mineral and thermal springs, which gush spontaneously from the mountain sides invite the invalid and weary, but in all the rest of these charms of nature is found a panacea for the ill and cares of body and mind diseased.

To enable persons to reach these favored localities without unnecessary expenditure of time or money, the Union Pacific has put in effect very low rates and splendid train service, three trains leaving Missouri River daily for Denver, one of which is “The Colorado Special,” which is the finest train in the West. Accommodations are provided for all classes of passengers, the equipment including free reclining chair cars, dining cars, buffet, smoking cars, drawing room sleepers and day coaches.

HOME AGAIN

Theodore Pettier Chats With The Planet on His Recent Trip to B. Columbia.

Theodore Pettier, of Dover, returned last week from a trip to British Columbia. He was visiting his son, E. J. Pettier, formerly of Ridgetown.

"Winnipeg is a fine city. The main street is very wide, twice as wide as King street. I saw Riel's tomb. A little stone marks the grave. It was all as he deserved. They should have stated on the stone what he was.

"The people in the west have lots of money. There are no coppers there. They think no more of a five dollar bill than we do of 50 cents.

"I saw the North Star mine owned by McKenzie and Mann. You have read of them. They tried to get hold of the Yukon railroad. I returned by way of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Half and Half.

The dyspeptic may well be represented pictorially as being half masculine and half feminine, and combining the least desirable characteristics of either sex.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and associated organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Discovery" purifies the blood by eliminating the dross and poisonous accumulations from which disease is bred.

"Your Golden Medical Discovery has performed a wonderful cure," writes Mr. M. H. House, of Charleston, Franklin Co., Ark.

BY LAW PASSED

Friday the by-law to give a grant of $500 towards the building of a bridge over the Sydenham at Tupperville, was passed by over one hundred majority. Owing to this being the harvest season and the farmers being behind with their crops, the vote cast in the various divisions, was as follows:

No. 1, 10-2, No. 2, 0-7, No. 3, 3-2

Deana Bridgman was the first deaf blind person ever educated.

Decanters. Decanters and carafes may be cleaned easily on the inside by using a mixture of salt and vinegar.

The Eyeball. The eyeball is white because its blood vessels are too small to admit of the red corpuscles of the blood passing through them.

The Stamped Wrapper. The stamped newspaper wrapper was first adopted in 1861, and the department sold 1,000,000 of these during the first three months following their issue.

Weight of the Sun. The sun is one and a half times as heavy as the bulk of water and would outweigh 326,000 of our planet.

Our First Carpets. The growth of the carpet industry in Philadelphia owes its origin to the enterprise of Peter Sprague, who manufactured the first carpet in the United States there in 1791.

The Money of Babylon. The great and ancient empires of Assyria and Babylonia adhered to primitive blocks of copper and ingots of gold and silver and did not, therefore, have an imperial coinage.

The Foot. The foot is named from the length of that member in the full grown man. It was a standard of measurement used by the ancient Egyptians.

Don't Like Chickens. In many parts of Saxony the peasants will not raise chickens, even though they could double their investment many fold.

Cheap Living. Six dollars to $8 a month buys food, fuel and clothing for a family of five persons in Japan.

Melons. Melons were first called canteloupes from being cultivated at Canteluppi, a village near Rome, where they had been introduced from Armenia by missionaries.

The Silk Loom. The Chinese empress Cao Ling She is supposed to have invented the first silk loom, while twenty-six centuries before Christ the rearing of silkworms was the favorite amusement of the royal and noble ladies of the Flowery Kingdom.

The Wankle Coalfield. One small portion of the Wankle coalfield in Rhodesia is estimated to be capable of yielding 1,000 tons per day for 100 years.

Fresh and Stale Eggs. A fresh egg has a somewhat rough shell, while the shell of a stale egg is very smooth. When cooked, the contents of a fresh egg stick to the shell and must be removed with a spoon, but a stale egg when boiled hard permits the shell to be peeled off like the skin of an orange.

Celluloid Collars. To clean celluloid collars use an ink eraser. This will remove all dirt and prevent the collar from getting yellow.

The Chinese Laugh. The Chinese laugh is not as hearty or as expressive as the European or American. It is oftener a titter than a genuine outburst of merriment. There is little character or force in it.

A Sun Belief. A belief existed among the ancient Mexicans, the Natchez of the Mississippi valley, the Peruvians and the Apalachians of Florida that the sun was the radiant abode of chiefs and braves who had died in attempting some valorous deed.

The Locomotive. A railroad engine may be roughly said to be equal in strength to 900 horses.

Water Hammer. Many steam pipe explosions are due to water hammer action. A plug of water only six inches long, propelled only two feet under a pressure of fifteen pounds, can exert a pressure of 6,400 pounds on being suddenly stopped.

Stained Hands. Hot water and soda will remove stains from the hands.

Artists. It has often been noticed that artists who have begun life by painting imaginative pictures, genre pictures, historical scenes or religious subjects gradually work less and less in these lines and settle down to portraiture.

Apricots and Figs. The apricot, if soaked in its own bulk of cold water for forty-eight hours, is said to be almost like the fresh fruit. Figs should be immersed in hot water for an hour.

Sprinkling Carts. Road sprinkling carts were in use in England in 1748. They were sent before the king's carriages.

A Night Cap. Before retiring at night a glass of CLUB OLD TOM GIN. It will bring you a Sound Refreshing Sleep.

WE are not public benefactors. WE are not snatching people from the grave. WE cannot say that we are restoring to health those who have been given up by anywhere from three to thirty eminent Doctors. WE make only the very modest claim that IRON-OX TABLETS are an invaluable nerve tonic, a cure for indigestion and constipation, a blood maker and purifier, a corrective of sluggish liver and derangements of the kidneys. ONLY THAT! but perhaps that is enough for 25c.

Halle, who was a bartender, killed his sweetheart, because she had refused to marry him. He sought her at her work for a final interview. He was seen to whisper to her and she replied: "No, no." Then Halle drew a revolver and fired several times. After she fell he calmly awaited arrest.

INJURED EYE

The youngest child—a baby boy—of Lawyer J. G. Kerr, while playing with an oil can yesterday afternoon on the floor of the summer residence at the Eau, fell on the can, the spout penetrating the right eye ball. The little fellow was brought into the city this morning and the wound was dressed by Dr. Garnet Holmes, who has some hope of saving the eye.

BOY'S BIG FALL

A gang of workmen are repairing the sewer in front of Dr. A. W. Thornton's residence on Wellington street. A large hole has been made in order to get at the sewer. A young lad was wheeling down the street one day last week, and seeing a board lying near the edge of the hole, attempted to wheel on it. He, however, lost his balance and tumbled down to the bottom of the sewer, where the men were working, his wheel coming after him. He fell down a distance of 12 feet, fighting on his back in a lot of mud and water. Queer to relate, however, he was uninjured and succeeded in scrambling to the surface again, and proceeded on his ride, a sadder but a wiser boy. It is a mystery to those who saw the accident, how the young fellow escaped without some serious injury.

A Lesson in Anatomy.

How many bones in the human face? Fourteen when they're all in place. How many bones in the human head? Eight, my child, as Yve often said. How many bones in the human ear? Four in each and they help to hear. How many bones in the human spine? Twenty-four, like a climbing vine. How many bones in the human chest? Twenty-four ribs, and two of the rest. How many bones the shoulders bind? Two in each—one before, one behind. In each arm one; two in each forearm. How many bones in the human wrist? Eight in each, if none are missed. How many bones in the palm of the hand? Five in each, with many a band. How many bones in the fingers ten? Twenty-eight, and by joints they bend. How many bones in the human hip? One in each, like a dish they dip. How many bones in the human thigh? One in each, and deep they lie. How many bones in the human knee? One in each, the kneecap, please. How many bones in the leg from the knee? Two in each, we can plainly see. How many bones in the ankle strong? Seven in each, but none are long. How many bones in the ball of the foot? Five in each, as the palms are put. How many bones in the toes half a score? Twenty-eight, and there are no more.

The Swan's Song in His Flight.

And now what is the flight like, the effects of which are so potent? At first there is much commotion; the powerful wings snipe upon the water with percussive sounds that are heard at a long distance and all are found about the broad, bent tail and strongly padding legs. The blow case, but the bird is not yet entirely quit of the water, along which he now runs, or proceeds with a double motion of flying and running, leaving a pathway white as himself, like a milky-way, behind him. The feet, in fact, are for some time an effective help to the wings. Each, as it strikes the water, jerks up the aspiring body till, at length, the proud moment comes when it can float without them, upon which they bend upward and disappear beneath the tail. And now the bird is of air, and the wings, as rejoicing at it, burst instantly forth into music, emitting with each of their strong, swift strokes, a note so clear and ringing, and sky and sea seem to have been caught up by them and translated in sound. The soul of the world seems speaking, and its voice is so sweet-sweet that the heart lifts up. This is the real music—the song-of the swan. True it is that sometimes he sings to his harp as he flies, and the note is then pleasing enough. But it is only occasionally uttered, and so low, in comparison, that it is lost in the other. It is not the clarion it should be to match that. One must be near to hear it—the song of the swan in his flight.—Edward Selous, in London Saturday Review.

Charcoal for Fowl.

The value of charcoal must not be underestimated. It is of much help in keeping fowls in health and preventing looseness. Fed it powdered in the food two or three times a week. Chickens for market will fatten faster if fed charcoal. It has been found that charcoal is not a sedative, strictly speaking. It is an absorbent and as such takes up the poisonous gases in the system, and carries them off. It is practically harmless in any amount.

A GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

"Use the sal volatile again," directed a man's voice, which I seemed to know. It was this which convinced me that I must rouse myself. With an effort I opened my eyes, to look straight up into a face that brought back a whirling rush of recollections. Once more I was in the Lyceum Theater glancing carelessly about, my gaze concentrating at last on the features of a man which appeared strangely dependable. Once more the thought was in my mind: "He would be a good man to ask if you needed help." Why, he had helped me twice! It was curious that I could remember occasions, but not the ways. Then everything flashed back to me. I was in a plain room, not large, but stately compared to those I had known of late in Essex street. The walls were lined with books in dark bindings, that absorbed the light which came from a tall, green-shaded student lamp standing on an open desk. Near this desk I was lying in a deck-chair extended to its full length, while above me bent the face I knew and another face that was strange.

The latter wore round spectacles that gave the eyes a surprised look, and it had a quaint little nose which turned up in such a comical manner that I found myself smiling. "How did I come here?" I asked, in a low, tired voice. "It was the man who answered. 'In the cab. Just as I was waiting for your decision to know whether I was to go with you or to follow, you settled the question by fainting. So I brought you here, because I knew that Mrs. Jennett would take good care of you. And when I am sure that you are quite well I will go away.' 'Somehow my heart sank at the last words. I did not want him to go away—though I took myself instantly to task for the feeling. 'You're as pale as a little ghost, miss,' said Mrs. Jennett of the turned-up nose. 'Drink this, won't you? I've been making it hot.' She held a cup to my lips, and I drank some chocolate, which tasted better than anything I had ever tasted before. I could feel the blood begin to flow more warmly through my chilled veins. 'And your clothing is soaked through and through, miss,' went on Mrs. Jennett. 'Would you be offended if I should offer you some things of mine till your own can be dried?' 'Of course not,' I protested. 'You are very kind. But I can't stay here to trouble you. I must be going soon.' 'We'll talk about that again to-morrow,' said she. 'If you're strong enough to come to my room, I'll make you comfortable in ten minutes.' She slipped an arm behind my shoulder, and lifted me to my feet. But, as I tried to get on my feet, I discovered that I was not half as strong as I had hoped. Sparks fell in a shower before my eyes; I turned giddy, and would have sunk back again—for Mrs. Jennett was a little woman and could not give much help—had not the man caught me in his arms as if I had been a baby. 'Open the door,' he said. Mrs. Jennett ran to obey, and before I could speak I found myself being carried upstairs. Another door was opened, and I was deposited in an easy-chair, near a clean, white bed. 'Lucky this was my day for changing the linen,' I heard the little woman exclaiming. 'Now everything's all ready for her just as it is.' 'How do you feel?' asked the man, looking at me. In saving me from a fall and catching me in his arms to carry me here from the room below his coat-sleeve had been pushed back. As he spoke he pulled the white cuff and dark brown sleeve into place, his left arm still bared from above the wrist. My eyes fell upon it, and I gave a loud, startled cry. 'What is it? Have I hurt you?' he asked, quickly. By this time he had rearranged both sleeves, and, seeing it no more, I could hardly believe in the actual existence of the strange thing which I had caught sight of for an instant. In my astonishment I had sat up, and continued to stare at him, my lips apart. 'Mrs. Jennett, make haste with the sal volatile!' he exclaimed. 'I'm afraid that she will faint again.' But I gently pushed the sal volatile away which it was obediently presented to my nostrils. I could speak now. 'No, no,' I said. 'I'm not ill. But—' And I looked straight up into the man's anxious face. 'Tell me who you are.' He laughed. 'I ought to have told you that before,' he replied. 'But, you see, I had so little chance. My name is John Bourke.' 'Yes, miss,' proudly broke in Mrs. Jennett. 'And he's the John Bourke. Oh, you may scowl and shake your head, Mr. Bourke—but only fancy her not knowing.' I knew no more now than I had known before, since the name of John Bourke suggested nothing. All my thoughts were concentrated, however. He guessed this, and his eyes questioned mine in a puzzled way. 'Why did you cry out and suddenly ask for my name?' he demanded. 'Don't tell me if you would rather not,' he hastily added. 'But—' 'I would rather tell!' I spoke on the impulse of curiosity, keen as the stab of a knife. 'I cried out because I saw something strange on your arm. A heart-shaped scar.'

CHAPTER XIII

John Bourke and a Lady. John Bourke's face changed under my eyes. A slow flush rose to his forehead, and he slightly compressed his lips with an expression which was like the involuntary wince of a stormy, yet sensitive nature beneath an unexpected blow. 'Do you think that so strange?' he said. 'I have got used to it. I have had it for a long time. But at present there's something much more important to think about—the scar on my arm; which is, for Mrs. Jennett to get you into dry clothes. It is late, and you are very, very tired. I shall leave you for to-night, and to-morrow morning, perhaps, you will let me call and see how you are. I felt abashed, as if I had been guilty of an unwarrantable impertinence. He had spoken courteously and kindly, but it was plain that the subject of the heart-shaped scar was forbidden. I was more curious than ever; it even seemed to me that I had a right to my curiosity, if he knew all. But I instantly determined that I would not again ask questions. 'Good-bye, and thank you for all you have done,' I said meekly. At the door he turned. 'Promise me one thing before I go. That you will not leave this house until you have seen me again.' 'I do promise that,' I responded, after an instant's hesitation. 'And I trust you—entirely.' Then he was gone. Mrs. Jennett ministered to all my physical comforts. I was given a delicious hot bath, that drew the aching out of my tired body; I was put into a lavender-scented, old-fashioned night-gown of coarse linen, and at last I was tucked up in bed. 'Could you eat anything before you go to sleep, my dear?' enquired the little woman. 'A wing of cold chicken, now, and a glass of wine?' The suggestion was irresistible. I tried to say, 'Yes, if you please,' without a tell-tale, greedy eagerness. But I had had nothing to eat all day save the one thick slice of stale bread on which I had gloomily made my breakfast. She bustled promptly away, and I was left alone to think, my thoughts roving back over the day which had been so crowded with events that its beginning appeared to have been years ago. After Waterloo Bridge, this waking was like a resurrection, and it seemed the more strange that almost the first thing I saw in the new world should be—the heart-shaped scar. Though I had been permitted to look at it but for a second's time, I could see it still as printed in colors in the air. In size it was slightly smaller than the mark I had such good cause to remember on Lady Cope's arm, or that other which had belonged to the old mystery and created a new one as well. It was of a less deep pansy-purple than its prototype, but otherwise it appeared to be the same. As I pondered, marveling at the strangeness of the coincidence (which must be far more than a mere coincidence), Mrs. Jennett came back. And when I had eaten the chicken and sipped the port, my brain grew shrouded with sleep. I remember nothing more, until I awoke in the morning. At first I thought that I was quite well again, but I soon found out my mistake. I had taken a feverish chill, and though I tried to get up, I was ordered back to bed by Mrs. Jennett. My head ached so dully and my brain felt so weary that I had not the energy to oppose her, or even the desire to ask questions. A doctor was called in, and afterwards sent medicine. For three days and nights I lay in bed, and sometimes I think I must have been slightly delirious, for I heard myself saying words over which my mind had no control, and I saw Mrs. Jennett's face as through a mist, regarding me oddly. But at last the burning heat in my veins and the throbbing in my temples died away. I felt strangely peaceful, though very weak, and Mrs. Jennett said that, if I liked, I might be dressed in a wrapper and lie on the deck-chair in Mr. Bourke's study. 'Why—does he live in this house?' 'Oh, deary me, didn't you know?' exclaimed the little woman. 'Then I suppose I've put my foot into it again.' 'He said he would take me to his relatives, when I told him that I had no one to go to,' I explained, wondering how much of my story—(every day) Bourke knew it—Mrs. Jennett had heard. 'Are you a relative of his?' 'Not exactly,' she faltered. 'I think he's nearly as badly off for people of his own as you seem to be. But I'm just as fond, and proud of him, too, as if I were his mother. And she'd be a lucky woman if she was alive to-day!' 'So he brought me to his house?' I reflected. 'Oh, now, don't you be thinking, my child, that he's done anything imprudent from your way of looking at it, or anything you might ever have to regret. He's too wise for that, and too fond of his house, and his wife, and his lodger, you might say, if that doesn't sound disrespectful or impudent, after all he's done for me.' 'Is he in his study?' I asked, rather shyly. 'That he isn't. He's not been inside the house, except to call and ask after you (which he's done twice every day) since the evening you came. He went that night to an hotel, and there he is at this moment.' 'I've driven him out of his home, then?' I cried. 'He wouldn't like to hear you say that. And it isn't the way he feels about it, my dear. Why, if you'll excuse the expression, since you've been getting better, he's as happy as a child with a new toy. But there! I'm just hindering you. You'd be better off downstairs. It will amuse you, looking at some of his books. Besides, there's something waiting for you in the study that you're sure to like.' My curiosity thus stimulated, I hastened the process of bathing and dressing. Mrs. Jennett brushed my hair, brushing and braiding my hair in a great wavy plait down my back. As she flatteringly exclaimed over its length and thickness, I watched her moving hand that wielded the brush. It was a very pretty brush, with a silver back, and there was a comb to match, which surprised me a little, for Mrs. Jennett's other belongings, so far as I had seen, were as plain as they were neat. 'Now, don't think me an extravagant old body!' she ejaculated, seeing the direction of my eyes. 'These things aren't mine. Mr. Bourke bought them the morning after you came, and told me I was to use 'em for you. The big cut-glass scent-bottle on the table there, too, with the eau de Cologne I put on your forehead when you were so bad; that was his thought. And see here. Your own underthings are ready for you again, but man as he is, he said to me: 'She has nothing loose and comfortable to wear when she's getting better. I'll send something in.' I could have offered you a wrapper, but it would have been a bad fit for a beautiful young thing like you. Which was what he had in his mind, I expect, though he wouldn't risk hurting my feelings by saying so. Now, what do
