For friends and foes Holding in their dark damp fold, Infancy, childhood, young, and old While we sit camly by. Old year, thou art sear and hoary, But thou still canst tell the story, Of the scenes of battle and strife. Of the havor of human life.

Of deadly sickness, pain, and woe. Chrushing juy from out the heart Of the onward march of sorrow, Bringing humanity under the smart

That like lightning's flash, Severs the soul. Old year, there were joys with thee, Childhood with its gambols free, Youth and manhood with their pleasures. And thy gifts of earthy treasures : While for some, the spirits' hope Lightened sorrow of its rod,

Binding with a silken cord Lowly mortals to their God, Their only good. Old year, thy last day has fled, Thy last hours have by us sped, Onward, and onward still they fiee Mixed with sorrow, mingled with glee, To the fathomiese depths

Of the shoreless sea. Sadly we sing thy funeral dirge. Full in sound of the boiling surge, Watching the rapid-rolling tide, As safely we stand on the hither side. While the mad waves leap, And the spray dashes high,

To fall on the sand. And retreat with a sigh. For the dead old year. The chill north wind howls and groans. Mingles its rough notes with our tones, Passes by the rich man's door, Lifts the latch of the humble poor Searches out the hidden places,

Where the wanderers toil and pant, Whisks the snow wreath in their faces, As it sings its wild, sad chant For sixty three!

One by One. One by one the sands are flowing, One by one the moments fall Some are coming, some are going Do not strive to keep them all.

Let thy whole strength go to each; Let no future dreams elate thee: Learn thou first what these can teach. One by one-bright gifts from heaven-

Joys are sent thee here below;

One by one-thy duties wait thee;

Take them readily when given, Ready too to let them go. One by one thy gifts shall meet thee; Do not fear an armed band;

One will fade as others greet thee-Shadows passing through the land. Do not look at life's long sorrow; See how small each moment's pain';

God will help thee for to-morrow;

Every day begin again. Every hour that flits so slowly Has its task to do or bear; Luminous the crown, and holy,

If thou set each gem with care. Do not linger with regretting, Or for passing hours despond; Nor the daily toil forgetting. Look too eagerly beyond.

Hours are golden links, God's token, Reaching heaven, but one by one Take them, lest the chain be broken Ere thy pilgrimage be done.
