The Mystery of Rutledge Hall OR "The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER IX.

Finally Mrs. Rutledge's maid was summoned, in the vain hope that she might throw some light upon the flight of her mistress, an event which seemed wrapped in mystery; but the woman had but little to say about it. She had waited up for her mistress on the night of the ball; but she had fallen asleep in the bedroom her mistress occupied, and, sleeping heavily, had only awoke when the day had dawned. To her surprise, she saw that the bed had not been slept in, and, in some alarm, she hurried into her mistress's dressing-room, which adjoined it. There she saw a scene of confusion which increased her terror; the costly white dress her mistress had worn at the ball lay upon the floor, the wardrobe was thrown open and its contents were scattered about the room; while half way down the broad staircase she had found the gold-embroidered wrap which Mrs. Rutledge had worn on the previous night. But beyond this she could say nothing.

And beyond this there was nothing to learn, save that since that night nothing had been heard or seen, in spite of all inquiry and research, of Frank Greville or of Sibyl Rutledge. If he were innocent, he was not there to assert his innocence; if he were guilty, he was not there to take measures for his defense; and in the eyes of the men assembled there the thought of his flight with the murdered man's wife was even more horrible than the murder itself, for a shot is quickly fired in a passion or a fit of jealous rage, or even by accident—the deed itself might have been excused.

DOCTOR ADVISED AN OPERATION

Read Alberta Woman's Experience With Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. After taking three bottles I became much better and now I have a bonny baby girl four months old. I do my housework and help a little with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter."—Mrs. A. A. ADAMS, Box 54, Provost, Alberta.

Lachine, Quebec.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my left side and back and with weakness and other troubles women so often have. I was this way about six months. I saw the Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Montreal Standard' and I have taken four bottles of it. I was a very sick woman and I feel so much better I would not be without it. I also use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I recommend the medicine to my friends and am willing for you to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. M. W. ROSE, 550 Notre Dame St., Lachine, Quebec.

If the choice had been offered to Stephen Daunt to cut off his right hand, and so spare Sidney Arnold the terrible tidings which awaited her, or to retain that member and import the information to her, he would, in his then mood, not have hesitated for a moment. As he strode up and down the platform, his head bent forward on his breast, his hands thrust deep into his pockets, he was wondering how he could break the terrible news to her, and how—ah, poor Sidney—how she would bear it!

The suffering which he himself endured at the thought of Sidney's suffering had awakened him to a knowledge of the fact that he had not by any means conquered his love for her. During his absence abroad after Sidney's engagement, he had struggled and fought desperately against it, and had returned home, as he thought, cured; and, perhaps, if Sidney had seemed happy in her engagement, he might have succeeded in stamping out his passionate love for her. But the wistful face, the sweet yearning eyes, the girl's evident unrest and unhappiness, had made him think more of her than ever; and thinking of the woman one is trying not to love, and pitying her from morning till night, is hardly the way to cure a hopeless passion.

He was thinking of her now very sadly, and to the exclusion of all consideration of the personal discomfort he was enduring. How would she bear this trouble? Would she be incredulous, and utterly refuse to believe what had happened? He himself had done so at first; it would only be natural that Sidney's mind should recoil with horror and refuse credence to such a crime. Ah, how terrible it would be to see the pain upon her face, the horror, the misery! How would she bear it? Could she live through such a trial? How—

"The train is coming, sir," said the porter, touching his cap respectfully; and Stephen started and stared at the man for a moment, as if he did not understand the meaning of his words; then, muttering a hasty word of thanks, he went forward to meet Sidney.

She was the only passenger who alighted at Ashford, and one or two of the railway officials glanced at her curiously as she stood for a moment on the platform, in her soft furs, the fair young face looking very pale as the light of the station-lamps fell upon it, although a faint color rose in it as Stephen met her.

"Why do you come to meet me?" she said, giving him her little gloved hand for a moment. "I telegraphed to Frank. Is he here?"

"I—I have not seen him," Stephen muttered. "Your father sent me to meet you, Sidney," he added, hastily. "Your train is very late."

"Yes," Sidney said, looking at him wistfully. "Is papa engaged?"

"Yes; will you come? The brougham is here."

He hurried her out of the station to the waiting carriage, folding her wraps carefully around her.

"Papa is not ill, Stephen?" she said, suddenly, looking up at his haggard face.

"No—oh, no! You must be very cold and very tired, Sidney."

"Yes, I am very cold." She was shivering under her sealin and furs, but not with cold only; and the fear upon her face struck him.

"Sidney, why did you come home?" he said, almost passionately.

CHAPTER X.

"The train is very late, Morton."

"Yes, sir; but that is not to be wondered at. A few hours more of such snow would block the lines altogether."

The afternoon train from Lindhurst was fully an hour late; but as the station-master told Stephen Daunt, with a sympathetic glance at the young man's worn haggard face, it was not to be wondered at. All day long the snow had been falling heavily, and it was snowing still, and the wind whistling through the station brought many a heavy flake with it to the platform on which Stephen Daunt had been pacing restlessly for an hour or more, waiting impatiently for, yet dreading the arrival of the train which was to bring Sidney Arnold back to the terrible trouble which awaited her at Ashford.

Ten minutes before the late train had started with its load of passengers and luggage and the evening mails, the station had relapsed into stillness and solitude, and only a couple of porters stood waiting about for the late train to make its tardy appearance, while Stephen Daunt, in his long rough ulster, a tall gloomy-looking figure, paced restlessly up and down the platform, with a look of pain almost amounting to anguish on his face.

By Ruth Cameron.

THE CAMARADERIE OF THE ROAD.

"She loved the rush of the on-rush of the speeding motor, the flashing by of fields and towns, the stopping at a village inn for a night's rest, the early start in the morning, the new sights, new sounds, and best of all the camaraderie of the road."

I quote from memory a passage from a book long since forgotten all but the last few words, "the camaraderie of the road." Alluring phrase! It conjures up memories of that freemasonry of strange places and things that everyone has experienced. It is in the friendly feeling that prompts you to a greeting to the family in the car with a license plate of a distant date as they pass on the road; that draws you into animated conversation with a stranger at the rail of the steamer over the sight of the flying fishes in some Southern Sea; the pleasant talk with fellow travellers as you view the beauties of sea and mountain from the rear of the observation car; the kindly office of some comrade of the road when disaster overtakes you.

But Not For the Next Street Stranger.

Why do we have a freer greeting for these strangers whose lives touch ours only for a short time than for the neighbor in the next block who waits with us for the car at the corner, or brushes past us in the neighborhood grocery, and whom we never speak to because we have never been formally introduced? We wave to the airman as he swoops low in his flight over our hilltop, so low that we can see his friendly smile as he waves back, and yet we'd never think of bowing to him on the street!

The camaraderie of the road! What an alluring thing it is! That surge of gregarious feeling that shakes us out

Defense Guns Prove Deadly

Targets only five feet wide and 19 feet long, towed behind airplanes traveling 70 miles an hour at a height of 6000 feet, were comparatively easy marks for the United States Coast Artillery anti-aircraft guns in a recent test.

The recorded percentage of the hits scored was 5.6, which meant one hit for each 18 shots fired. That is about six times as many hits as were claimed for the firing at the end of the World War, say government officials.

An Imposter Arrested in the Holy City

A POLISH SOLDIER OF FORTUNE POSING AS A MONSIGNOR OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

ROME, Sept. 9.—An audacious attempt to pay a Holy Year visit to Rome has proved the undoing of a Polish soldier of fortune, John Tarnowski, who for twenty years has been an ecclesiastical imposter in the cities of Europe.

Tarnowski was arrested when he aroused the suspicions of the priest of a Polish Church, to whom he posed as a Monsignor. In 1914 he posed successfully in Italy as the Bishop of Warsaw, later being expelled from the country.

Although by profession a cook, the false prelate is dignified, has perfect manners, a thorough knowledge of the Church history and ritual and speaks half a dozen languages.

He completely fooled Florentine ecclesiastics, by whom he was received with great respect and whose guest he was until he was shown up accidentally.

His strange record shows a career of successful impostures, covering a period of two decades, in Polish, German, French, Austrian and Italian cities, in which he reaped the usual

Underworld Weapons
A London magistrate recently commented on the numerous razor assaults committed by hooligans. He said the razor is a distinctly un-English weapon, and that it belongs really to the American Negro, who specializes in throwing it. Criminals are known by their weapons and their methods of attack. In London the metal knuckle-duster is a fairly common weapon. The Paris apaches use a knife, and generally carries a revolver as well. The desperadoes of Italy and Spain favour the stiletto and knife respectively. The knife of the Spantard is a deadly implement; it consists of a sharp, broad blade that folds into the handle and can be drawn and opened in one movement. Weighted belts are sometimes used by the London "tough." A gang at Lambeth was known as the "New Girdle Gang" because its members were armed with this type of weapon.

Britain's Royal Envoy in South America

(By WOODBINE PARISH, Lieut.-Col., British Army Chaplain; Chairman of the Argentine Club, London; Director of several Anglo-Argentine Railway and other Companies.)

The visit of the Prince of Wales to South America is of great historic and political interest in the light of past and present relations between Great Britain and Latin America. Moreover, to me personally, there is an added and peculiar interest in the event—an interest derived from the fact that I was born in Buenos Aires and am at once a British subject and a citizen of the Argentine Republic. My father, too, was for many years British Consul General and Charge d'Affaires in the country with whose fortunes my family have so long maintained an intimate association. Perhaps I may be permitted to recall at least the origin of that association. It has an historic interest for North Americans because, to a very large extent, the work which my grandfather, Sir Woodbine Parish, accomplished in 1825, when he negotiated and signed the treaty between Great Britain and Argentina, was the furtherance of a policy to which Britain and the United States subscribed. This was also accomplished, if not actually in co-operation with the diplomatic representatives of the United States, at least concurrently with their efforts to achieve precisely similar objects as those pursued by my grandfather.

There is no need to relate in detail all the steps leading to the recognition by the British and United States Governments of the independence of the South American republics. The two Anglo-Saxon nations followed a common policy in opposition to that favored by Europe and in direct antagonism to the pretensions and purposes of the Holy Alliance. The leaders of this policy were, on the British side, George Canning, Foreign Secretary, and on the American side President Monroe. They were determined that a group of young nations should be recognized, and that their independence, won after a long and bitter struggle, should be respected. Behind President Monroe stood a united nation, but Canning had to play almost a lone hand, for not only were some of his Cabinet colleagues unsympathetic, but King George IV. was openly hostile to the policy. It is this fact that made Canning's attitude toward South America so bold, and gave it so much political importance. Canning may be alleged to have prompted, if he did not inspire, the Monroe Doctrine. Through Richard Rush, then United States Minister in London, he made overtures for the possible co-operation of the United States with Great Britain to prevent a hostile enterprise of the European powers against Spanish America. He also urged Rush to endeavor to secure a firm declaration in American policy. In October 1823, Canning notified France and the United States that Great Britain intended to recognize the new Republics. In December President Monroe promulgated his famous doctrine. Great Britain's formal recognition of the republics was announced to the world on January 1, 1824.

Sir Woodbine Parish, who had been in the foreign service of England since he was a boy of sixteen and was now only 37, had already been selected by Canning to proceed to the River Plate and report on conditions among the settled colonies. In anticipation of a treaty with them. He sailed for Buenos Aires on Dec. 21, 1823, reaching his destination three and a half months later. At Buenos Aires the little colony of British and Americans gave the first British Consul-General a warm welcome. He found a genial and sympathetic colleague in Caesar A. Rodney, Minister for the United States, who was also looking for a treaty of commerce with "the United Provinces of the River Plate," as Argentina was then designated. At the official celebration of May 25, the anniversary of the first revolt of 1810, Rodney and Parish were the joint guests of honor. Rodney, speaking in English, proposed the toast of "The State of Buenos Aires," but Parish, who had been quicker to learn Spanish, made a great hit by delivering his speech in that tongue. Rodney was taken ill some days after the banquet and died just when about to enter into a friendly battle with my grandfather to be the first to secure a treaty. Parish went ahead with his negotiations and after months of very strenuous work—during which he found the Argentines exacting in their demands and unversed in diplomatic procedure—the famous treaty of "amity, commerce and navigation" was at last signed on Feb. 2, 1825. Those who are familiar with South American history attach considerable significance to the fact that the Prince of Wales is visiting several of the republics in the year that marks the centenary of the treaty with Argentina, and the foundation of British political and commercial relations with practically the whole of Latin America. In the hundred years that have passed there has been no serious difficulty between Great Britain and her South American friends. This Treaty has been faithfully observed on both sides and still stands as the basis of the good-will, mutual understanding, and close commercial relations that now obtain.

REASON OF PRINCE'S VISIT.

It is rather remarkable, bearing in mind Britain's century-old friendship for South America, that this is the first time she has sent there such an important Ambassador as the Prince of Wales. Even that statement needs correction, for the Prince is not being "sent," but is responding to an invitation that came originally from Argentina, to which Chile and Uruguay have also subscribed. Great Britain has maintained the usual diplomatic relations with the South American countries, and on rare occasions has sent out special missions, but has not done as much in this direction as some of us would like, and has lagged behind the United States in recognition of the importance of Latin America from the political standpoint. For instance, South America has been visited by such prominent Americans—frequently in their public capacity—as the late President Roosevelt, Bainbridge Colby, ex-Secretary of State, and General Pershing. The United States has an Embassy in Argentina, while Britain still maintains only a legation. Another significant feature of the Prince's visit is that it is the first time a member of the British Royal family has formally and officially set foot in South America. Forty-five years ago King George, then a young naval officer, spent two or three days in Buenos Aires, and before him his uncle, the late Duke of Edinburgh, also visited some of the republics, but these visits were merely incidental to cruises on which they happened to be engaged. The Prince of Wales is making his tour under quite different auspices. He is the invited guest of a group of republics and is visiting them as official representative of the British Nation.

There is neither mystery nor motive nor strangeness of purpose in the visit of the Prince to South America. Apart from the fact that Great Britain is a very old friend of South America, it is natural that, having travelled very widely and having visited all parts of the world except Latin America, he should see that quarter of the globe. It is indeed surprising, in view of the Anglo-South American relations, that periodical visits of British royalties have not long since been regular incidents. That Great Britain is a monarchy and the South American countries republics has nothing to do with it. To the South American peoples we British attribute a genuine desire to welcome a man who has attracted world-wide attention, and we take it nationally as a compliment that they are really sincere in their wish to receive the Prince as the official representative of their oldest friend amongst the European powers. To look beyond this simple explanation for a motive, or political object for the visit, seems to be as unnecessary as it is futile. There can be no political consequences of the visit other than to strengthen already existing relations. Great Britain throughout the war received sympathetic support and material assistance from South America, and everybody is aware that when the United States gave a strong lead several of the republics came in on the side of the Allies.

The economic purposes of the Prince's visit, however, are of considerable importance. Valuable publicity must accrue both to Great Britain and South America as one result. Despite the fact that British investments in South America are enormous; that Great Britain looks so keenly to the maintenance of trade with the republics and that Great Britain is so largely dependent upon them for food supplies and stocks of raw materials, British ignorance of those countries is simply appalling—an ignorance that extends to the simplest facts of history and geography and that very frequently does grave injustice. For instance, the South American nations are regarded as being always in a state of upheaval and revolution, when the truth is that they are orderly, highly civilized, cultured, democratic and progressive. If we can disregard the disposition of such ignorance in Great Britain as a political consequence which will follow the Prince's visit, then he is undertaking the finest political mission that was ever entrusted to anybody. The value of the publicity which Great Britain is likely to derive from the tour should not be overlooked. It will be a logical and natural consequence of an event of wide public interest if the South Americans come to know more about Great Britain and the British than they know to-day. I am not suggesting that the Prince is a sort of mutual publicity agent, though he has, indeed, good-humoredly described himself as a national asset in this sense. Nevertheless, publicity inevitably follows from his movements.

that so far as the Argentine Republic is concerned Great Britain had a record year in 1924, and was easily first among the nations in the matter of sales of merchandise. Great Britain's position in Argentina, in comparison with her biggest trade competitors, is easily seen from the following figures showing the exports from the Argentine Kingdom, the United States and Germany for four vital years in commercial history. These figures are from Argentine official statistics, the values being in gold pesos, which are almost equivalent to American dollars:

1910—Great Britain, $117,908,881; United States, $52,195,566; Germany, $65,896,941.

1913—Great Britain, $154,053,513; United States, $73,012,668; Germany, $83,953,786.

1918—Great Britain, $124,960,402; United States, $169,506,945; Germany, $221,625.

1924—Great Britain $173,340,072; United States, $169,512,720; Germany, $82,286,400.

THE RESCUE TOMORROW

Extinguishing Demonstration Succeeds

The remarkable expansion of the United States in South America naturally provokes the question whether this expansion has been at the expense of Great Britain. No doubt it has been so to some extent, but before a definite answer to the question could be given one would require to analyze the returns as they affect all exporting countries. Clearly it is impossible for a powerful competitor like the United States to enter any field without her activity militating in some measure against those who also operate in that field, and clearly, also, she must have influence in the development of the victorious development of the world to put it in another way, the United States were not so successful in Great Britain's share of the world would be larger than it already is. But Great Britain is not so unchangeable as to expect any nation to lapse into inactivity for its own benefit. It is also to be remembered that Latin America is uniformly prosperous, progressive and developing. Hence the volume of trade in all nations may participate in steadily growing. There is no doubt, also, that much of the trade of the United States is new trade—the sale of special machinery, automobiles, typewriters and other lines in which the British manufacturer has never held pre-eminence in South American trade.

Whatever might be the conclusion of those who, unlike myself, claim to be trade experts, the fact remains that Great Britain holds a very strong position in South America. It is a position in which she is entrenched by reason of her enormous investments in public service utilities such as railways, tramways, gas, light and power installations. In Argentina, for instance, these investments represent over $1,500,000,000 and British capital necessarily have first consideration in the part of those operating the utilities. It has been said that the early association with the development of South America the British gained a virtual monopoly of the trade. That may be true, but it is equally true that the British have never abused the privilege which they create for themselves, nor ruthlessly exploited their monopoly. To-day this stands to the credit and advantage of Great Britain, who possesses the good-will and appreciation derived from a century of solid trade. Great Britain neither desires nor expects to have a vast and rich field like South America entirely to herself. She is in competition with the world and she knows it.

Erosion at Niagara

Engineers report the rapid breaking down of the escarpment at the foot of the famous Horseshoe Falls. It is to say, the Canadian side of Niagara Falls—creating a new notch through which an increasing volume of Niagara's water is passing, to the detriment of the American side of the falls. With the co-operation of the Canadian Government, without which nothing can be done, Secretary Herbert Hoover proposes that a small engineering works be undertaken at a point just above the notch to divert the water more evenly over the width of the falls on the American and Canadian sides, and prevent a further breakdown by erosion of the escarpment, estimated to-day as progressing at this place at the rate of five feet per year. American engineers demonstrated by a working model that Mr. Hoover's statement is, at least theoretically true, and unless something is done the "falls will commit suicide from a scenic point of view."

Dying Secret of Hugo Stinnes

When Hugo Stinnes, the great industrialist, died he was still in the prime of life. His fatal illness had been many months of a mysterious lassitude. Daily he watched him moving about his multitudinous affairs, his pallid cheeks shrinking, his eyes receding beneath his brows, writes Leonard London paper.

Stinnes was a millionaire, and the most powerful man in Europe was at his disposal. He had no rivals in the world. He had no equals in the world. He had no superiors in the world. He had no inferiors in the world. He had no equals in the world. He had no superiors in the world. He had no inferiors in the world.

Extinguishing Demonstration Successful

An unusual and interesting fire extinguishing demonstration was held yesterday afternoon at Fort Towns. The Inspector General, Rev. Canon Jeeves, and other department officials, Secretary of the Board of Fire Underwriters, and several business men.

The demonstration was under the direction of B. W. Desotell, Eastern representative of the Foamite-Childs Corporation at Boston, Mass., assisted by Pratt, of the "Direct Agencies," Newfoundland representative of the Foamite-Childs Corporation, who is the largest holder of fire extinguishing equipment in the world.

A brief explanation by Mr. Desotell covering the various methods of extinguishing fires, the torch applied to two tanks containing kerosene and to a pile of straw saturated with gasoline. In the first three fires were blazing and the onlookers were forced to move away because of the intensity of the flames. The first attempt to extinguish the gasoline fire was made by the use of the local Fire Dept. Carbon-Tetrachloride extinguisher, more generally known as "dry powder," his efforts, however, were unsuccessful and a second attempt was made by another fireman using a Soda and Acid Type Extinguisher. This was successful and the fire was extinguished. It is a very strong and common household utility. It is especially useful in the case of gas, kerosene, and other inflammable liquids. In Argentina, it is used to burn burning wood fire.

Equipment is used by nearly all of the largest Oil Companies and is depended upon by them to extinguish the numerous fires which occur in their refineries and storage tanks, departments, garages, filling stations, stores, factories, warehouses, hotels, churches and homes have installed Foamite Extinguishers and the equipment manufactured by the Foamite-Childs Corporation. Inspection of the test expressed most favorable comment and it is expected that at an early date the City Fire Department will be equipped with Foamite Extinguishers which will enable them to successfully extinguish oil, kerosene, paint, varnish or similar inflammable liquids which might occur and prove a valuable addition to the already splendid up-to-date equipment of the Department.

The Old Bay Fishing Trip

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Thank you for your courteous information about the location of that famous fishing scene and the means of transportation. As I said before I have no personal knowledge of these matters and am quite prepared to accept your assurance with regard to the carrying capacity of these motor boats. At the same time there appears to me to be a very decided fishy odor to this trout yarn. Sixty fish, averaging nine pounds each, were landed with the rod, in 4 hours, that is one such fish every four minutes. I do not understand how this could have been done, but the angler being the fishery warden may know a wrinkle or two that I am ignorant of. I would like to know what my friends Jimmie Carmichael, Billy Bartlett and Will Barker think about this. Apologising for again trespassing upon your valuable space, I remain, Yours truly,

S. J. TUCKER.

Sept. 16, 1925.

AND YET ANOTHER DOUBTING THOMAS.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—As an experienced Wal-tonian, I have read with interest your report of the large catch (50 trout) in Fortune Bay, weighing 466 lbs., or over 9 lbs. per trout, in exactly four hours, as per Mr. Warren's letter published in the Evening Telegram of September 14th.

Like Mr. Tucker I must say I doubt very much the veracity of this "Fish Story," but as neither Mr. Tucker nor I have seen the size of the boat or the trout, I will attack the story on a different course, and that course is the time in landing the trout, which stands no argument.

I may say I have landed 25 trout weighing in all 125 lbs., and at another time 8 trout weighing 62 lbs., also a 17½ lb. trout which took me thirty-five minutes to land. The trout referred to in your letter average over nine pounds each, and I defy anyone to land a trout of this size in less than fifteen minutes, and this is the minimum time for this size of fish, caught fairly on a rod as per letter, and not even allowing for the loss of time in taking the fish from the hook or waiting for another rise, the best that could be done would be to land the lot in 12½ hours or fifteen minutes per trout, and not four hours, or under five minutes per trout, and this calculation does not even include the time catching the ten trout that were not weighed.

Yours very truly,

ROBERT H. SIMMS.

Sept. 16, 1925.

NOTE—It is evident that the doubts as to the veracity of the trout fishing story will not be set at rest until incontrovertible evidence has been produced. Perhaps our legal friend, who was primarily responsible for starting the controversy, will have a document prepared for publication, setting forth the facts duly attested, and sworn to before a competent authority, or by some other process which he thinks may meet the case. It is sad, however, to find that fishermen have such little faith in their brother Waltonians. Almost it would make it appear as if the truth was found in none of them.—Ed.

The West Hartlepool Corporation has authorized its borough engineer to experiment with the white safety lines on some of the roads.

The Wood Green, N. District Council has instructed its Works Committee to consider the general adoption of the white line and the "boulevard stop" at all dangerous turnings.

The "Boulevard stop" is a broad white line at all dangerous corners with the word "Stop" marked across the road, and is adopted in California, where all drivers have to stop at the sign before going round a corner.

Safer Roads Campaign

The Manchester Watch Committee is launching a big campaign to teach road sense, with the object of decreasing road accidents.

Sir Robert Peacock, the chief constable, states that nearly one-third of the accidents during the past twelve months have been caused by persons stepping off the footpath in front of approaching vehicles.

Of the 53 fatal accidents, 28 occurred to persons under 21 years, indicating that there must have been great carelessness by children and young persons when using the roads. The total number of fatal and non-fatal accidents during the year ended June 30, was 1,751.

The handbills and posters are intended to teach road sense and to emphasize that the safety rules should be strictly observed by all when using the streets for any purpose.

It is imperative that the number of accidents should be decreased, and the police force have strict instructions to prosecute anyone driv-

The Open Door

In another column will be found full particulars of a series of courses in technical education, which will be conducted in the evenings during the autumn and winter months at the Newfoundland Memorial College and Normal School. In addition to the comprehensive programme outlined, it is proposed to arrange other classes later on, and thus make the sphere of usefulness of the institution as wide as possible.

The opportunity which these evening classes place within the reach of all will it is certain be welcomed by many, who for one reason or another have been unable to add to their store of knowledge after completing an elementary course in the schools, or who, engaged in their daily work, are desirous of acquiring a further insight into it, which will enable them to qualify for the higher positions.

Elsewhere, facilities such as are now offered to the community, are eagerly availed of by old and young alike, and a debt of gratitude is due to President Paton and those whose co-operation in this movement makes the arrangement feasible.

In previous articles dealing with the establishment of the College we have stressed the importance of providing the people of Newfoundland with the means of acquiring technical knowledge, in order that our industries might become more highly developed and our youths enabled to qualify for the very highest positions in any of them. The obstacles have been removed, the door is open, and it is for us to enter in and take possession.

A Suggestion

By the acquiring of the property which formerly occupied the corner site at the junction of LeMarchant Road and Pleasant Street the authorities were enabled to straighten out the boulevard and add materially to its appearance and safety. The owners of the property, we understand, were given in exchange the corner lot on the opposite side of the road, that is, the southern side, and recently this land has been enclosed with a temporary fence.

Should a building be erected on this corner lot, it would not only prove a blind for traffic meeting at the junction, but it would also materially detract from the beauty of the thoroughfare, and we trust that the Municipal Council may see their way to acquiring it and keeping it as an open space, which might be converted into a miniature park, and used as a playground for children.

Typhoid Fever at Corner Brook

Typhoid fever has made its appearance in a section of Corner Brook occupied by construction workmen. Twelve cases are being treated in hospital. Fearing a spread of the disease Health Inspector Lawlor has been sent out by the Department to make an investigation. The cause of the outbreak is said to be from contaminated wells.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

Sept. 15th.—Comes Povey to me this day, and makes much complaint of a letter he receives this day about his income tax, being that he is warned that he will be charged with interest and penalties if he do not pay promptly, and he has no money to pay with. So he tries to borrow a little from me which I would have given him willingly, save that I am in like case to himself, having little in the bank, and less hope of seeing more there.

Some one this day sends me the following which is taken from the Hardware Dealer's Magazine, New York: WHAT TITUS SAW IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Halifax, Canada, August 4, 1925. Dear Roy—While waiting for the burger in the office of one of our Newfoundland customers a few days ago, I copied the following from a card on the wall: "It may interest you, as you know, codfishing is the principal industry of that country. The codfish lays a million eggs. While the helpful hen lays one, but the codfish does not cackle. To inform you what she's done."

Apr. so we scorn the codfish cackle. While the helpful hen we prize, which indicates to thoughtful mind that it pays to advertise.

Yours sincerely, CHARLES L. TITUS, Sargent & Co.

This is a most amusing piece, and one that I have not seen before. He do also send me the following epigram: Lady Customer: I would like a pound of sulphur please. How much is it?
Clerk: Fifteen cents.

Lady Customer: I can get it across the street for ten cents.
Clerk: Yes and I can tell you of another place where you can get it for nothing.

Dartmouth Jack-o-Lantern.
The weather might cold all this day, and am in the greatest fear that I may catch a rheum of my head, which troubles me.

Sept. 16th.—This day, the weather fine as I have never seen it this year, being warmer than most days of the summer. So with the Poveys, to the country, and being persuaded against my will, do venture into the salt water which was so cold that I could but bare to get wet all over and so back to the shore again, chilled to the very marrow. Little news all this day, albeit by despatches out of China, do learn how affairs there are mighty unsettled; and indeed, seems how they have never been otherwise. Do arrange with Povey that we go a-shooting next evening, being mighty anxious after my experience of last year, that I should have a few days on the barrens, albeit must see that we have a dog that does not spend most of its time in sleeping.

Dogs and Hunting

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Yesterday a letter signed "Residents" and purporting to come from Blackhead, B.D.V., which appeared in the Daily News, issued a warning to visitors who came to the locality for the shooting season not to bring dogs with them, but to be satisfied to trace the ground as we do.

The writer states that in 1902 a law was enforced by a two-thirds vote prohibiting anybody in that district from keeping dogs, but we cannot find anything in the Act which says that visitors are prevented from hunting with dogs. In fact sec. 31, cap. 148 seems to have been inserted with the special intention of providing for such cases. It reads as follows: "From and after the date prescribed in and by such proclamation or notice it shall not be lawful for any person resident within such area or district to keep, or to have in his possession or under his control any dog..." This provision shall not apply to any person or persons travelling or passing through such areas or districts and having a dog or dogs licensed under this chapter, in his or their possession, charge or control, and not at large. The distinction seems clear, and if the residents are thus placed at a disadvantage and compelled thereby to trace the ground," it was their own desire and accord.

Yours faithfully, SETTER.

Fell From Roof of House

AGED RESIDENT OF LOGY BAY SERIOUSLY INJURED.
Mr. Thomas Dowden, farmer, of Logy Bay, aged 81, fell from the roof of his house yesterday afternoon and sustained a broken collar bone and other bodily injuries which will confine him to his room for some time. As far as can be understood Mr. Dowden was engaged making some repairs on the roof top, and it was while he was in the act of doing so he was either overbalanced or tripped in some way, with the result that he fell to the ground some twenty below. He was picked up by his grandson in an unconscious state, and upon being brought into the house everything possible was done to revive him. Two doctors were hurriedly summoned from the city to his aid, and made an examination of his injuries.

ASK FOR MINARD'S AND TAKE NO OTHER.

Authorities Investigating

The authorities are now investigating cases where men who have been placed on the suspension list are being supplied with liquor. In the greater number of cases the names of those men who are on the suspension list were only put there after careful consideration by their closest friends, in order to prevent them from injuring themselves and neglecting their wives and little children, and the individual who supplies those men with liquor deserves no consideration, and the sooner he is lodged behind the prison walls the better for all concerned. His Honor Judge Morris stated in Court a few days ago that any person brought before him on a charge of this kind, if convicted, would be sent to prison for the longest possible term without the option of a fine. The delivery of liquor to any person whose name is on the suspension list constitutes a sale under the Alcoholic Liquors Act and the penalty for same is very severe.

A Generous Response

Splendid Result of the "Tag Day" Held by The Ladies of The Grace Maternity Hospital Ass'n.

The ladies of the Grace Maternity Hospital Association wish to express their warm thanks to all who so generously helped them with work and donations on "Tag Day," which brought in the splendid result of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00). It would be difficult to give the full list of those who so much towards their success but the attitude of the Association is heartfelt and they feel sure that the benefit which will be reaped by those who are unable to enter the Hospital for treatment without this aid will be the best thanks.

At the Executive meeting held at the Hospital on September 15th, Mrs. Arthur Hiscock, Hon. Treasurer, expressed her gratitude to the ladies, who had so efficiently organized this Tag Day. One or two applications for help were placed before the Committee, one for a tiny child who had already benefited by the monthly treatment in the Hospital, and who, it is hoped, can be cured by the third month's treatment.

A general meeting of the Association will be held at the Grace Maternity Hospital on Sept. 22nd, at 3.30 p.m., when it is hoped that all members will make a point of attending and that any who may wish to become members will be present.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Cooking an egg over a cake of ice by a wireless lamp was one of the several demonstrations of the mysterious radio power given yesterday at the Radio World's Fair.

BELGIAN SOVEREIGNS VISIT INDIA.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The visit of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, who are expected to have reached India to-day, is to be kept as private as possible. They will endeavor to maintain a strict incognito. The request for privacy is due partly to the Queen's health as she needs rest and a change of climate.

Another Trans-Atlantic Flight

PARIS TO NEW YORK VIA ST. JOHN'S.
Waiting in Paris for favourable weather conditions and a strong easterly wind, are two French aviators, Lieuts. Francois Coli and Paul Tarascon, who will attempt to fly from Paris to New York via Newfoundland for a prize of $50,000.00. Word may therefore momentarily be expected of their departure, and their valiant attempt will be watched with interest.

The intrepid aviators reckon the flight will take 30 hours to accomplish flying at a rate of 125 miles an hour, and while confident of success, still have formulated all plans to cope with disaster through being wrecked at sea. They are prepared to spend 15 days on the water while awaiting help as they have ingeniously converted their machine into a life-preserver. They have arranged to lighten their 420 h.p. plane so that it will float indefinitely, and will carry compressed provisions and an apparatus for the distillation of sea water. Their machine, including 5000 litres of gasoline, will weigh 4 tons at the start.

The first ballast to be dropped will be the running gear, when they reach the sea, as the gallant Hawker did when he left here in his brave attempt to cross the Atlantic. If they are forced to descend on the ocean their plan is to cut away the cloth of the lower plane so that the ship may ride steadily, and cast out a canvas anchor to aid this. Thus they can float for several hours; but, if help does not come they can pump out the fuel from the three big reservoirs and, if necessary, cast off the motor, when the airplane should float like a life-preserver.

The aviators will carry 12 rockets and a complete medical kit, and can find subsistence on dried food and distilled sea water for two full weeks. Both are veterans of the French Air Force and saw considerable service during the war. Coli lost his right leg in a crash at Verdun and Tarascon his left eye by a machine gun bullet while flying in 1917 in the Arras sector.

"So This is London"

The Harkins Players are still attracting good-houses at the Casino. "The Acquittal" is a splendid play and well put on by the Harkins Co. and lovers of good acting should see "The Acquittal." It will be the bill for the remainder of the week and at the Matinee Saturday. Next week a great surprise is in store for theatre patrons. The famous play "So This is London" will be presented. This is the prize play of the season, for it is a play everyone has heard about, due to its record-shattering run of over a year at the Hudson Theatre, New York. Its prosperous engagements in all the large cities of the United States, and the knockout hit it registered when produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre, London. "So This is London" is full of laughs and chuckles. The best comedy you ever saw in your life, and it is a delight for Americans, British—in fact for any nationality. Seats on Sale at F. V. Chesman's, Water Street.

Dunn's Favourable Trade Outlook

The favourable aspects of the business situation are becoming increasingly prominent and overshadowing the unsatisfactory phases. Even selling labor troubles and reduced cotton and corn crop estimates do not shake confidence, for there are various constructive forces that form a solid basis for continued commercial expansion along conservative and wholesome lines. Some additional stimulation of activity has come with the close approach of Autumn; the development of demands for a new season giving a fresh impetus to operations, and the immense distribution of general merchandise is shown by the largest railroad merchandise is shown by the largest railroad freight traffic ever recorded. The heaviest movement usually does not occur until a later date, and it is highly significant of the magnitude of current transactions that car loadings in the latest reported week were wholly without precedent. Further statistical evidence of progress appears in the rising output of steel and in the better report on unfilled orders by the principal producer, while the re-opening of some textile mills after a period of idleness reflects the improved conditions in that industry. Moreover, a special survey of the leather and footwear trades made by Dunn's Review discloses a continued recovery from previous depression, with many shoe factories now running more nearly to capacity. Supplementing these and other favorable indications, more statements have appeared showing increased earnings by corporate interests, favorable dividend action has been taken in numerous instances, and the virtual assurance of another reduction in Federal taxes is among the factors which tend to make the business-outlook distinctly promising.

Obituary

FRANCIS CONNOLLY.
(H. F. SHORTIS.)

The S.S. Silvia, which arrived from the United States on Monday morning, the 15th inst., brought to St. John's the body of the late Ernest Connolly, who was interred in the cemetery at Belvedere on Tuesday morning. The deceased young gentleman was born in New York 25 years ago, and was the son of the late Frank J. Connolly, Barrister and Attorney at Law in New York City, and Mrs. Connolly, now Mrs. Dyer. The deceased was in the best of health up to a day before his death. The utmost resources of medical skill could not avail to overcome the inevitable, and at least they were that his passing should be painless. He faded out of his illness on the 6th inst., fortified by the services of Holy Church. The deceased was pronounced the cause of death to be Spinal Meningitis. He was born in New York, the deceased returned to St. John's with his parents when four years of age, and a few years after entered the school of St. Patrick's Hall, presided over by the Christian Brothers. At the age of 16 years he went to the Continent, where he quickly became proficient as an expert telegraphist, and this is not to be wondered at, as for three generations the Connollys were reckoned as the most expert operators ever born in Newfoundland. His grandfather, the late Supt. T. D. Scanlan, was one of the first to join up in the fifties of the century, and his grand-uncles, John and James had no superiors as senders or receivers. His uncle, Patrick and the late Brendan Connolly, were also in the front rank. In fact, there was one or more telegraphers in the branches of the Scanlan family for the past 70 years, in the United States as well as in Newfoundland. After leaving Heart's Content, he went to North Sydney, where he resided until 1923, when he was transferred to New York, where he entered the Western Union Cable Office on Wall Street, under that brilliant son of Erin, Superintendent Foley, who was his mother and friends informed in condition up to his death, by a telegram to her cousin, Supt. H. A. Connolly of the Anglo of this city. Mr. Foley was unremitting in his care and attention to the deceased until the last. The body was accompanied from New York to St. John's by his cousin, James E. McGrath. He has been cut down in the very prime of life and in the midst of an exceptionally useful career, a young man of the promise and character of the family, which won the respect of all who knew him and had the privilege of an intimate acquaintance. He seemed to possess all those qualities of mind and heart in a man, so that memory will not soon be forgotten. He, like his ancestors, was one of the brightest luminaries of the brilliant circle in that constellation of graph stars, for which Newfoundland has been noted since 1858. He descended from some of the oldest and most respected families in Newfoundland, notably, the Davises of Harbour Grace, the most prominent of which was Capt. Nathaniel Davis, for many years one of the most successful, enterprising and independent sealing masters and Labrador planters, and brought in load after load of seals in the brigantines "The Miss" and "Robert Arthur," in the early part and middle of the century. The deceased was also descended from the highly respected Scanlan family of Brigus, amongst whom was Patrick Nowlan, merchant, who for several years member of the House of Assembly for Harbour-Main District. The deceased was a prominent member of the Lafayette Council of the Knights of Columbus in New York.

There are left to mourn his mother, his father, one brother, Frank, in the employ of the Newfoundland Paper and Paper Company, of Corner Brook, one step-brother, numerous relatives in Newfoundland and the United States and hosts of friends and acquaintances. The funeral will take place from the residence of M. J. O'Sullivan, Water Street, at 2.30 p.m. tomorrow, Friday, and after the religious ceremony in the Cathedral interment will be in Belvedere. Undertaker W. Myrick will have charge of the funeral arrangements. Respectful notice.

Hypnotized by Height

"Death-Leaps" Explained by a Doctor.

Every now and again we read of men and women who have fallen or leaped to death from heights—from piers, high bridges, the upper decks of liners, and so on. In many of these cases there is no reason for suspecting suicide, the victims having been perfectly happy, in comfortable circumstances, and without even the shadow of a motive for self-destruction.

Recent instances are those of Miss Cromwell, daughter of a wealthy New York financier, who, leaning over the deck rail of the S.S. Veendam, was seized with vertigo or dizziness and plunged to her death; and of Mrs. Charles Crouse, wife of a millionaire, who fell from the thirteenth floor of a hotel as the result of an attack of vertigo.

What is this dizziness—this vertigo? Most of us have it at some time or other; but do we really know what it is, or what its causes are? There are many persons who suffer from the greater part of their lives from chronic vertigo—Meniere's disease, as it is called after its discoverer. But what concerns us is the vertigo that attacks a person who is apparently in the best of health.

A momentary confusion of ideas, temporarily upsetting the mental balance, and often in consequence the bodily balance, seems to be at the root of the evil. Vertigo results from a disturbance of our consciousness which occurs when, for instance, one part of our body sends the message to our brain, "That thing is moving," and another part says at the same time, "It's not, and you know it."

This confusion and contradiction of our impressions of time and space may bring on a sudden attack of vertigo, which disappears the moment the individual realizes why that confusion exists.

Such an experience befell Dr. Fridenberg, who, glancing across the street along which he was passing, saw a man swaying as if he were drunk. He would have seen nothing remarkable in this had he not noticed that the man was carefully reading a newspaper, which a swaying man does not do. The doctor was seized with an attack of vertigo; then subconsciously grasped the solution of the perplexing problem, and the vertigo vanished. The doctor was, in fact, looking not at the man himself, but at his reflection in the glass of a door.

Wherever we may be, three "messengers" keep us informed of our position in space. These are the semi-circular canals of our inner ears, our eyes, and our general muscular sense, all of which help us to preserve our balance. They may be compared to the legs of a tripod on which we rest; the sudden loss of one brings us down.

Fatal Confusion.

Miss Cromwell's death seems to have been due to vertigo following eye-strain. If you look down at the water when a ship is moving, your eye instinctively tries to follow the movement of certain parts of the water, involving a terrific strain if the vessel is going fast. The eye cannot perform the task required of it; confusion follows, the balance of the "tripod" is upset, and vertigo results.

Mrs. Crouse's death arose from vertigo induced through looking down from a height. She forced her eyes to do what they were not accustomed to do—look straight down with a long-distance focus. Accustomed to see the ground or a floor about five and a half feet away, they are accustomed to focus at that point. Asked suddenly to focus a hundred times as far, something seems wrong, and there is momentary mental confusion and vertigo. A wrong message is flashed to the brain, or the brain flashes a message to the wrong set of muscles. Then, instead of a drawing back to safety, there is a forward leap—to death.

Insist on Clean Meat

HOW HOUSEWIVES CAN HELP.

Housewives can help to end the clean-meat farce if they will patronize only those butchers who are making some attempt to observe the clean-meat rules.

Women should make a point of purchasing from shops where the meat is protected from dust and mud by glass windows, and where flies are kept off by a fan or muslin cloths.

They should also complain if they see people handling the meat. Carcasses hung in shops should be covered with muslin cloths, especially if they are placed near the doorway.

Butchers will soon comply with the regulations if customers insist. A medical officer said yesterday that the doctors looked to the public to help them in their campaign for cleaner meat.

"Too many people," he said, "are ready to accept conditions as they are. That is why we have not got things changed before. It is important that boys who deliver meat on bicycles should have it well covered with muslin. In any case, housewives should soak their meat for several hours in water before it is cooked."

MINARD'S LIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

Look Out for Cramp

Cramp, the bugbear of swimmers, comes suddenly, and any one of a score of causes may be responsible for it, although in itself it is only an involuntary and spasmodic contraction of a muscle or group of muscles.

Swimmers' cramp may come through the use of muscle that have not been in action for some time. Their "play" is not on the proper lines—they run off the rails, as it were—and contraction and agonizing twisting result.

To avoid this, holiday-makers should exercise ten minutes or so daily for a week before going away, those muscles which are used in swimming. That is easily accomplished by lying on a bed and going through the usual swimming motions.

A cold sea may bring on cramp; and so may water with a warm surface and a cold under-current. But the swimmer who keeps well within his depth has nothing to fear. Oil massage of the thigh and calf muscles is excellent.

Finally, never enter the sea when you are nervous, irritated, or fatigued. Cramp may come in these circumstances.

Circles Britain in Five Hours

Flying at an average speed of 151 miles an hour, Captain F. L. Barnard recently won the "around Britain" race for the King's Cup in England. It took him five hours, 17 minutes flying time to make the circuit of 304 miles up the east coast of Britain, across Scotland, down the west coast, and across the island to the starting point. He used a 350-horsepower plane. This was Captain Barnard's second victory.

Rats Uncanny Cuteness

From the human standpoint, the most dangerous of all wild creatures is the brown rat. Since the rat has been discovered that the rat has intelligence and organizing ability transcending even the mouse. Lubbock discovered in the island of Feroe in the sea.

The war made it necessary for the city of New York to investigate rats and to discover how complex and important is the whole system of rat government. During the war vast stores of food accumulated, awaiting transport to Europe. Rats multiplied until it was estimated that there were now 100,000 rats in the city built upon the island.

As that ordinary steps to destroy rats were away the rat army proved effective. The rats, instead of finishing living elsewhere, discovered themselves hemmed in by water on all sides. They organized, grew more numerous, and put up such a skillful resistance that new methods of combatment had to be devised.

It has now been discovered that rats are not as single units, couples or families, but in vast organized colonies. Every member of a rat colony is subject to discipline. Here is a typical instance of the way their organization works.

In one area under observation there were seventy-five store-houses, mostly used for holding food supplies. Of these, all but one building was infested by rats. The solitary exception was used for storing grain and flour. A rat never entered it, but it was swarmed with mice. That was puzzling.

The mouse-infested building was closely observed. Watchers found that the rats, so far from interfering with the mouse colony, brought extra food to keep the mice fat and healthy. They brought green vegetables, meat, and the cores and peel of fruit. They were correcting the grain diet of the mice with valuable vitamins. No wonder the mice in that store were plump and healthy.

Then, at one period of observation, the watchers saw a number of rats advance upon the mouse town. They bill upon the holes used by the mice as exits and entrances, and enlarged them to rat size. That done, the biggest and fiercest of the rats entered. Presently the invaders came out again, each with a dead mouse. These were held in a little heap, and the rats were busy for many. So they worked until fifty or sixty dead mice lay in the heap.

New representatives from the whole rat colony appeared. Each took his share of the game, carrying the dead mice to the family holes as delicacies for the young. In short, the mouse caste was no more than the game preserve of the rats.

A Living Egg Chute.

Another puzzle was supplied by an egg store. Here, to save the egg crates from rats, a platform was built on legs of thin metal eight feet high. No rat could climb to the platform, and for a time the eggs were undisturbed. But one day it was discovered that a crate on the platform had been emptied. Here was a job for the expert observer.

Watching the platform, on which was an open crate containing 300 eggs, the observer saw about forty rats come out of their holes. By one of their regular run-ways they climbed to a big gas-meter. This was five feet higher than the platform and more than 9ft. distant. Each rat in turn jumped for the platform from the meter.

Two in every three landed safely at the first attempt; the others fell short and hit the floor with a thud. But, shaking themselves, they ran limply up to the meter and tried again. Eventually there were forty rats on the platform.

Gripping hind legs with forepaws, the rat army began to form a chain, reaching from the platform to the floor. It was evidently a well-rehearsed acrobatic feat, for in the twinkling of an eye there was a chain of rats reaching from the crate of eggs to the floor.

Soon eggs began to roll down that rat chute. At the bottom was a rat who received each egg carefully. In half an hour the crate was empty. Then the chain unlinked and the eggs were equally divided. There was not a sign of disagreement. Human thieves quarrel when the plunder is to be divided; the rat army is not subject even to that weakness.

A Surprise for the Watcher.

A similar instance occurred in a restaurant famous for serving shell-fish. One day a kitchen worker filled a bucket with opened clams, set it on a shelf knee high on the wall, and went on with other work. When he next looked at the bucket it was empty.

It was decided to call in a rat observer. The same conditions were repeated. The man worked away, with a full bucket of clams behind him, while the watcher waited for results.

Presently appeared a rat scout, who climbed the bucket and looked in. On returning to the rat hole, out swarmed the rat army. It was 30ft. from the hole to the bucket, but they stationed

By Airship to the North Pole

COMMANDER OF FAMOUS "LOS ANGELES" CRAFT EXPRESS-ES VIEW.

BERLIN, August (U.P.)—The exploration of the north pole will be made with an airship or it will not be made at all.

This is the considered opinion of Dr. Hugo Eckener, the famous commander of the "Los Angeles," then the "ZR 3," on her Transatlantic flight.

If the Council of Ambassadors grants Germany the permission to build another airship for scientific research, then by the spring of 1927, the world will know what is to be known about the north pole. The geographic problems regarding the distribution of land and water in the arctic regions, problems of magnetism, of the atmosphere, of high sea currents and of electricity, all will be solved by the expedition to be launched with the new airship under Dr. Eckener's command and with Fritof Nansen leading the staff of scientists on board.

In an interview with the United Press Dr. Eckener explained the preparations he has already made for the aeronautic part of the expedition. The Zeppelin company contemplated such an expedition before the war, and Count Zeppelin went to Spitzbergen to study the possibilities of anchoring and the air currents.

The plans for the new airship are ready, and foresee a ship of 110,000 cubic metres, that is about one-and-a-half times the capacity of the Los Angeles. Otherwise the ship will be of the same type as the Los Angeles, like her carry five motors of 2,000 h.p. Owing to its larger dimensions, it is reckoned that the new ship will make between 75 and 85 miles an hour.

A certain difficulty confronts us in securing the necessary outfit to navigate the ship near the pole. The cold is not, as the layman might think, the chief obstacle. In spring and summer the temperature in the polar region is not as cold as the public think, and especially above the freezing point. Besides, as Dr. Eckener pointed out, during the war the Zeppelins, flying very high, sometimes encountered a temperature of 9 degrees below zero, and nevertheless the motors work very well. The cold merely necessitates adding alcohol to the water for the motors.

The Magnetic Pole.

The difficulty in navigating the ship arises from the special conditions of the polar region, that is from the magnetic pole. The compass is of no use, and it needs a complicated system of gauging to determine the position of the ship. Even the wireless set is influenced by these conditions. Dr. Eckener nevertheless is confident that he will be able to guide the ship wherever he wishes.

Another point to be considered is the possibility of landing. Measures will be taken to enable the ship to descend on the surface of the water and to anchor there. Should no open water of sufficient dimensions be found, the touring of the pole will be made without landing. A landing other than on water, would be very difficult, because no crew is available to tow the ship down and fasten it to an anchor mast.

The ship must be larger than the Los Angeles to carry the large scientific staff. It will be remembered that on the trans-Atlantic flight the ZR 3 could not take another passenger because she needed all her carrying power for the 30 tons of fuel. A similar airship would be able to carry another 4 tons, if it started its flight from a place of sea-level and not, as did the ZR 3, from a place 400 metres above the sea. If the Los Angeles would attempt a north pole expedition, she would have to use hydrogen because, filled with helium, she carries 3 tons less. But for safety a bigger airship would always be required.

Dr. Eckener has sufficient trained men in Friedrichshafen to make up his crew, which will amount to some thirty men. The scientific members will be limited to twenty and include several German and some international experts. Dr. Eckener has already written to Amundsen reminding him of previous discussions about reaching the pole in an airship, and he hopes that Amundsen and Ellsworth will join Nansen for the two trips which are now considered.

Contrary to Amundsen's last expedition, this new one will not mean the physical strain he just underwent. The scientists will have to work assiduously, but to use Dr. Eckener's words, they will live near the pole, as if they stayed in a dining-car or a sleeping-compartment.

"You tell me," said the Judge, "that this is the person who knocked you down with his motor car. Could you swear to the man?"

"I did," returned the complainant, eagerly, "but he only swore back at me and drove on."

BOWRING BROTHERS, LTD.

The Delegates at the Board of Trade (I.C.M.)

To Mr. Lunn was entrusted the important task of dealing with trade and commerce, and of that portion of it which pertains to Great Britain. Mr. Lunn being a Labour member, it was a truly distinct mark of confidence in the party; and it was a greater mark of distinction to the gentleman himself that he dealt with such vital matters.

His address at the Board of Trade has been published, so that nothing further remains to add to it; and his address at the dinner being along the same lines, his position is well defined—in all, he showed himself well versed in facts, figures, statistics, and quotations, and gave a good account of himself. If all the Labour members of the House of Commons are as diligent, and as competent as Mr. Lunn and his colleagues who visited Newfoundland, then their opponents will have "to look to their laurels." They mean business and they appear to be willing to "put their shoulder to the wheel."

It is not so much the address of Mr. Lunn that we now write about, as it is the questions which he put to the Board, and which that body failed to answer. Mr. Lunn wondered why the volume of trade between England and Newfoundland is not greater than it is, and why we should purchase so much from the U.S.A. and Canada.

His position in this respect was strong, and it was substantiated by copious figures and statistics. He thought we ought to buy from the British market first, and he felt convinced that such should be to the benefit and mutual advantage of both parties. This claim is quite fair, and is only what should be expected; for after all, why should not the colonial child patronize the Imperial mother? Let us see.

The Board of Trade was not ready for the moment with a reply, but no doubt by this time some solution has been given—though the public are not aware of it. At the same time the reply is not far to seek nor difficult to make, for it is a matter of competition with proximity in favour of the American and Canadian side. The average buyer must of necessity purchase in the cheapest market, and every avenue of quick returns must be availed of; hence the advantage of proximity. In this feature alone the British manufacturer is at a disadvantage, and because of this the bulk of trade which once he monopolized is now going to his competitors on this side of the water. The buyer here at home may wish to patronize the British manufactured article, and he may be aware that it is a superior article, and he may prefer to trade with the mother country; but he is handicapped, and because of so much keen competition he is forced to buy in the nearest as well as the cheapest market. He may be British to the core, but he must bury his patriotism; for business is business, nor is there much room for sentiment.

those of the other side. We have heard this disputed, but whatever may be said on either side, it must be admitted that the Canadian and the American manufacturers are mighty proficient in their work—and why not? Why should all the skill and all the brains be confined to one side of the world?

Formerly it was expected that clothing ought to last a long time, but not so to-day. It is now a matter of following the fashions. Our grandmothers wore for years the cloaks which they brought with them from the home land. The goods were genuine and they were expected to last for almost a life time. We have come into a new age, and the rapidly with which the styles change has tended to the American and Canadian side, which, fifty years ago, was so much in vogue. All this has a tendency to weaken the tie between the colonies and the mother country. We formerly looked to old England for our supplies; but not so now. The old business firms which bore the names which represented the British Isles, here in St. John's, and in other parts of the country, have mostly disappeared, and an entirely opposite class of names have taken their places; and Water Street to-day is as much American as it is British. Such is the order of the day; and such is it going to be. Proud as we are of our ancestral traditions, and boast as we may of our British prestige, and dear as they are to us, we must recognize the fact, that when it comes to dollars and cents, and to competition in trade, all these must "go by the board," and the word "cheap" wins the day. The world is after the cheap thing, and it is very evident she is getting it, and getting it in more ways than one.

Thus it is easy to see why the volume of trade between Newfoundland and Britain is comparatively so small, and why it has dwindled to its present figures. It is the order of the times, and the conditions of life intensify the custom. More than one hundred thousand of our people have emigrated to the U.S.A. and Canada since the sixties, and because of this our interests are being weaned from the home land, and a vast volume of trade and correspondence has developed. Our money is Canadian; hence we have adopted the denominations of dollars and cents instead of £ s. d. All this may be considered as a weak point in our commerce; but whatever way we may consider it, the story which it tells is the same—the story of dwindling trade with Britain.

This is what arrested the attention of Mr. Lunn, and what gave rise to his question. There are other answers to his question, and no doubt the Board of Trade has some vital ones. The question involves a greater principle than appears on the surface; and it has a wider significance than some may attach to it. Perhaps when the deputations have finished their Empire tour, and submitted their reports to the Home Government, they will have learned the cause, and may therefore recommend a remedy. The question involves the consolidation of the Empire, hence its importance; and hence the ability of Mr. Lunn in having been entrusted with it.

Think Profitably

FINE CHANCES FOR INVENTORS.

Although there is another side to the picture, the surest way to wealth is to think out and patent some simple invention, such as the "screw" bottle stopper. If it is novel, and will save time, money, labour, or worry, the inventor will usually get his reward. The adequacy of the latter depends on whether he can exploit his own invention or has to sell it to others.

Excluding those who re-invent the already invented, many misapply their faculties by treading a path, if it can be put away, that is already well worn. The patent pipe is an example. Yet all the while certain inventions are being demanded.

Where Fountain Pens Fall.
A fortune awaits the man or woman—women are far more prolific in inventions than men—who can invent something that will prevent fountain pens from flooding, and thus writing too thickly; just before their ink supply is exhausted. The trouble is caused by the increased air pressure in the barrel.

Great improvements have been made, but there remains to be invented a device that will throw all its heat into the room, and lose none up the chimney.

Yet another invention that would bring a fortune to the man who could think it out is a method which, without adding to the cost of production, would so bind and stitch the ordinary magazine that it could be opened only like a book. A device, however excellent, would be without commercial value if it were too expensive to apply.

Door Handle Dangers.
As you know, the lengths of railway metals do not meet. Space has to be allowed for expansion of the steel. The "clank-clank" of trains is due to the wheels bumping over these openings. The railway companies would scramble for an invention that would abolish the clanking or do away with the necessity of leaving the openings. Hundreds of patents have been taken out for new types of railway carriage door handles. A perfectly safe and foolproof handle has yet to be invented. The idea of locking all doors by a contraction operated from the guard's van is useless. The result is the event of an accident, might be imprisonment, and possible burning to death of passengers.

A clever device was the sliding "wiper" that motorists fit to their wind screens to wipe away rain spots. But what is wanted is a method of treating glass in such a way that neither smoke, fog, nor rain will obscure it.

A Teapot Trouble.
A teapot whose spout will not drip is still needed; so also is a bootlace of which the tag will never come off, while a device that would make watches and clocks show, in some way, whether they were fast or slow would find an instant purchaser. To-day our only test of a timepiece being wrong is to compare it with another—which may also be wrong!

In clothing the scope for useful inventions is enormous. Invent a device—thin whalebones have been tried without success—to make men's trousers refrain from bagging, and a fortune will be yours. Invent a stiff collar with soft buttonholes, impervious to starch, and manufacturers would rush to buy the patent.

It is obviously better to supply what is being asked for than to invent something for which a demand may have to be created.

The New Law About Wills (By a King's Counsel).

Experienced lawyers have made mistakes in drawing wills. The layman, therefore, should be especially careful to know to whom his estate will pass should intestacy occur.

The alterations made by the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, are very considerable, and are, in the main, improvements. The simplest trust for sale, and the blending of the proceeds of the real and personal estate, the equalization of the wife's rights with those of the husband, and of the mother's rights with those of the father, are all to the good. But some of the other alterations made are fairly open to criticism.

Two of these may here be mentioned. First, under the new Act, the husband (or wife) of an intestate is entitled to the deceased's furniture and other "personal chattels"—an expression which a very wide definition is given—absolutely, and to a first charge on the rest of the estate for the sum of £1,000 free of death duty, as well as to a life interest in the residue of the estate, if any.

This may work fairly in the case of substantial estates, but where an estate is small, injustice may be caused. Take the case of a man who dies intestate, leaving a second wife and children by a first wife, and leaving an estate £2,500 in value, of which sum £500 is the value of the personal chattels. The widow would take absolutely the "personal chattels," plus £1,000 free of death duty. The funeral and testamentary expenses and costs and all death duties would be thrown upon residue. The result in such a case would be that the estate would be exhausted and the deceased's children would take nothing.

Secondly, under the law hitherto prevailing, where a man dies intestate without leaving father or issue, but leaving mother and brothers and sisters, the personal estate (subject to the interest therein of the deceased's widow, if any) has passed to the mother, brothers, and sisters in equal shares.

Under the new Act, however, the brothers and sisters in such a case are ignored, the mother taking the whole, and this right of the parent to the exclusion of the brothers and sisters, is extended also to the real estate or its proceeds.—Daily Mail.

Bigger Than a Liner

ALL METAL AIRSHIP TO LIFT 300 TONS.

All airships yet devised will be dwarfed by a new type now under the consideration of experts in the United States. Our two new giant British airships are to weigh 150 tons, and to contain 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas. These American super-airships, however, will be larger than ocean liners, and will be borne aloft by 15,000,000 and even 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas. A rigid ship of the air is projected, with any so far built, and dispensing with a fabric-covered outer sheathing, and also with internal gas bags. The steel girders of this monster's hull are to be covered, externally, with millions of feather-weight metal plates, made from an aluminum alloy. This plating is to be riveted in such a way that the metal hull is not only weather-proof, but gas-proof, enabling hydrogen or helium to be pumped directly into it. Calculations show that a gigantic all-metal airship of this type, driven by a battery of big motors at a speed of 100 miles an hour, would be able to rise into the air, in addition to its own weight, a load of 300 tons. With its crew, fuel, passengers and mails, such a colossal airship would be able to remain aloft for 30 days or more, without needing to seek an anchorage.

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory

Now let me think. Seems to me we coded yesterday's story just when the Yellow Dog Tramp paid a Lettuce Leaf Dollar Bill for the Ginger Pop at the Three-in-One Cent Store. You remember the little rabbit had only three Pumpkin Pennies in his pocket. Not enough to pay for an ice cream cone!

Tucking the package under his arm, the Yellow Dog Tramp trotted out of the shop, followed by the bunny boy. "Now that we have everything," sighed the little rabbit, "angel cake, lolly-pops, peanuts, and ginger pop, let's set off for the Circus Elephant's log cabin."

"Where is it?" asked the Yellow Dog Tramp. "In the Fairy Bunny Forest," answered the little rabbit. "Wait a minute," said the Yellow Dog Tramp, thoughtfully wrinkling his forehead. "That's a long journey. We'd better take the train." So down to the station they went. Luckily in a few minutes the Lettuce Express came in.

"All aboard! Carrot City, Bunny-bridge, Clover Dell, Strawberry Hill, Turnip Town and Lettuceville!" shouted the Black Poodle Dog Porter. Into Pullman Car "Sweet Potato" hopped the little rabbit with the Yellow Dog Tramp. "Choo, choo!" snorted the engine. "Ding, dong!" clanged the bell and away sped the train for Clover Dell. "Dear me," suddenly cried the bunny boy. "We forgot our tickets."

"Don't let that bother you," smiled the Yellow Dog Tramp. "I have a pass. Never have used it because I'd rather walk through the meadows and wood, but it will come in handy to-day."

So down they sat, the little bunny to look out of the window and the old dog to read a paper which some kind person had left on the seat. Pretty soon the Black Poodle Dog Porter shouted, "Carrot City!" Up jumped an old lady goose, with a big basket on her wing. Goodness me, it took her almost three minutes to waddle down the aisle and maybe four more to flop down the car steps to the platform!

Again the engine bell clanged "Ding, dong!" and the whistle snorted "Choo, choo!" and away sped the train on the iron rails, clinkery clink, clinkery clink, clinkery clink, clinkery clink.

By and by, not so very long, for the train was going 'umpty seven miles a minute, the Black Poodle Dog Porter shouted "Bunnybridge!" Up jumped a

Tabby Cat, with four little kittens, each hanging to her skirt. Down the aisle they hurried, the hair on their backs standing up straight and their tails as big as Lady Love's rolling pin at the sight of the black poodle dog in the doorway. "Hurry up," he shouted. "Step lively. Train won't wait for lazy folks."

Again the whistle blew, shrill and clear. "Ding, dong!" went the bell, and away sped the train, clinkery, clinkery, clinkery clack! over the bright, smooth iron track.

In a little while, not so very long, the Black Poodle Dog opened the door and shouted: "Clover Dell!" Up jumped a Ba Ba Black Sheep and walked down the aisle. "All aboard!" shouted the poodle dog. "Toot, toot, toot, toot, toot!" went the whistle. "Ding, dong!" clanged the bell, and away sped the train.

WORLD'S END. I dreamed my long prophetic robe, announcing, as a seer, "There'll be an end to this old globe on Groundhog Day, this year. I've read the works of Mother Goose, our doom is there proclaimed, and demolition will cut loose upon the date I've named. So sell your homes to siddy groves, so laugh the igh to scorn, and dress yourself in mow, shrouds and wait the fateful morn."

The day of doom went by unmarked by dire catastrophe, and this old planet still is parked just where it used to be. The man who sold his cozy home for a quarter what it cost, now hounoes brickbats on my dome and says I am a frost. One neighbor with a furrowed brow all day denounces me; he gave away his brindled cow, because of my decree. Another uses language sharp in taking me to task; he swapped his Lizzy for a harp, his wrath he does not mask. "It's a firm in my belief that things were due to end, that this old world of sin and grief would smash so none could mend. I have to stand the bitter gaff, and vainly I proclaim, 'I gave away my phonograph, my dog and quilting frame.'"

The people euse me when they pass, and even as I sing, a rock comes through a pane of glass and maims my harboard wing. So if again my spirit longs disaster to foretell, I'll not address the surging throngs, but say things down a well.

Democratic Manner of Prince of Wales

WINS URUGUAY SOCIALISTS.

Montevideo, Sept. 9.—The Prince of Wales has left a number of permanent impressions on Uruguay, smallest of South American Republics. He has won over the Socialists of the country by his democratic manner, he has introduced the simple life as applied to the daily rite of luncheon. He has mended up all trace of the old wound caused by the British occupation of Montevideo a hundred years ago.

Uruguay has long prided itself on possessing the most advanced Socialist institutions in the world, although the Uruguayan type of Socialism has no relation to Bolshevism. People's political opinions here incline them, in large majority to criticise all foreign royalties. But the Socialists of Montevideo took an immediate fancy to the Prince's democratic ways, and voted him one of the brethren.

At the opening reception, several Socialists were close to the Royal visitor when he showed that he expected no servility from anyone. He had left his big bear-skin hat, which belonged with the Welsh Guards uniform he was wearing, in an outer room. Proceeding inside with President Serrate, he found that the occasion was one which required a hat. So, instead of asking someone to wait on him, he called to the President, "One moment, while I fetch my hat," and he rushed back to where he had left it, waving aside the offers of several attendants to get it for him.

"Now, that may appear a small thing," said a Socialist editor next day, "but we regard it as significant."

One of the other Socialist newspapers, however, raised a warning note in an editorial deploring the "unprecedented and shocking" enthusiasm displayed toward the Prince. "Are we republicans or are we not?" said the editorial. "This Prince is not an Asiatic potentate, but a citizen of free and democratic England, whose history includes the execution of Charles by Cromwell, and the latter may well be termed the Lenin of his period."

Speaking the same evening at the state dinner, the Prince referred to the occupation of Montevideo by British troops a century ago as "a passing incident, obliterated by the subsequent sympathy between our two great nations."

The popularity which the Prince so easily won with the Socialists here, came to a head in an extraordinary display of enthusiasm at the docks, before his departure, where thousands of Socialists gathered, cheering wildly, and struggling with the police to reach the quayside near the Prince. He saw the struggle, and suggested that the crowd be admitted to a broad space, which had been reserved for government officials. This was done, and the Prince held an amusing ten-minute reception, with a long line of Socialist friends and well-wishers lining hurriedly by him.

"The Silent Accuser" Now Showing at Nickel

THE SEASON'S MOST ENTERTAINING PICTURE—GOOD CAST EXCELLENT STORY.

One of the most entertaining features of the present season will be seen at the Nickel Theatre to-night when the Metro-Goldwyn production, "The Silent Accuser," will be on view. It is the contention of the director, Chester M. Franklin, who has also directed such successes as "Where the North Begins" and Norma Talmadge in "The Song of Love," that the primary purpose of the screen is entertainment. With this aim in view, Franklin and Frank O'Connor, director and assistant director, respectively, have adapted Jack Boyle's story, written especially for the screen in a way which has richly enhanced its entertainment value.

One of the features of the production is the introduction to the screen of Peter the Great, a glass German police dog who, according to all reports, does many thrilling stunts never before accomplished by an animal. The dog, who plays the part of "the silent accuser," has the most important role in the story, and astounded even the director by his intelligence. The rest of the cast includes Eleanor Boardman, the girl who has risen from extra work to stardom in two years through her work in "Souls for Sale," "Three Wise Fools," "Wine of Youth," and "Sinners in Silk"; Raymond McKee, known for his triumphs in such pictures as "Down to the Sea in Ships," one of last year's sensations and Earl Metcalfe, one of the most famous villains on the screen. The picture has been produced on a lavish scale, and no expense has been spared to make it one of the most interesting of the season. It is said that the photography of Charles Dreyer is one of the most exquisite bits of camera work done in some time.

Col. Mitchell Raps U. S. Air Service

EXPECTS TO BE ARRESTED FOR HIS UTTERANCES. HE SAYS—CHARGES NEGLIGENCE—PLACES RESPONSIBILITY FOR AIR DISASTERS ON NAVY DEPARTMENTS.

San Antonio, Sept. 7. (A.P.)—Colonel William Mitchell, ace critic of the Air forces, has charged the War and Navy Department with "almost treasonable administration" and "criminal negligence" in a 6,000-word statement, which also included other charges involving the Air Forces of the United States. Colonel Mitchell said he "expected to be arrested by Monday morning" for what he had said.

Colonel Mitchell, whose arguments and views on air matters have gained Congressional and National attention, is air officer of the Eight Corps. His statement, a denunciation of the practices and systems obtaining in the administration of National defence, was forthcoming as a result of the fatal accident of the dirigible Shenandoah, and of the P.N.S. No. 1. "These accidents are the direct result of incompetency, criminal negligence and almost treasonable administrations by the War and Navy Departments," he asserted. "As far as aviation is concerned, the conduct by these departments has been so disgusting in the last few years as to make any self-respecting person ashamed of the clothes he wears," Col. Mitchell said. "Were it not for the great patriotism of our air officers, and their hope for a change in condition sooner or later, I doubt if a real man would remain with the colors under existing conditions."

Mitchell declared that the accident to the Shenandoah and the Hawaiian flight plane "is due to incompetence in the Navy Department, and the criminal negligence in ordering the trip."

He reviewed several accidents of the past, declaring that the loss of life in them were due largely to obsolete and improper ships and equipment.

The consensus of opinion among the few War Department officials available over the week-end was that the charges in the statement by Col. William Mitchell in San Antonio were of such a serious nature that disciplinary action against him no longer could be avoided, provided the statement was officially substantiated.

Three Big Love Scenes for Valentino

Rudolph Valentino has three big love scenes in the motion picture version of Booth Tarkington's story, "Monsieur Beaucaire," coming to the Star Theatre next Monday.

Valentino proves, in his three love scenes, that he has not lost any of the ability to make love, which has made him one of the most fascinating and compelling scene stars of to-day. His first scene with the Princess (Bebe Daniels) ends unsuccessfully and sends him off to Bath, England. There he meets the lovely Lady Mary (Doris Kenyon) and the heart of this young Frenchman flutters momentarily. But his flight of fancy for the English lady also ends disastrously and back to France he goes to find that the love which he once held for the Princess still burns in his breast. The final love scene between the Duke and the Princess is said to be one of the most tender and most picturesque ever photographed for a motion picture.

While the two lovers, in the Gardens of Versailles, are locked in each other's arms, King Louis XV and his court parade down the famous steps in the gardens, while sparkling water plunges down the cascades. It is a scene of great beauty.

The screen version of the popular story is said to be just as Tarkington wrote it originally. Bebe Daniels, Lois Kilson, Doris Kenyon and Lowell Sherman are featured in support of Valentino.

Shipton, near York. At the time of the accident he was motoring to York with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Caffyn, his son-in-law and daughter, and his grandson, Mr. Lawrence Albert Sherman, who was driving. A butcher's van crossed the main road, and Mr. Caffyn at once applied his brakes. The car was forced on to grass by the roadside and caught in a stone hole, with the result that it collided with a telegraph pole. The occupants were thrown out, and Mr. Duke was killed instantly. Deceased was 67, and evidence at the subsequent inquest showed that his head was badly crushed by being struck by the telegraph pole or one of the wind-screen supports.—The coroner expressed the opinion that there had been an error of judgment on Mr. Caffyn's part, but found that the occurrence was a pure accident.—A verdict of "Accidental death" was recorded.

Map Muddles

The statement in a Colonial Office report that "seemingly educated persons could not place Cyprus on the map within 1,000 miles" recalls some official errors of more consequence. An eighteenth-century Foreign Minister handed Chandernagore over to France in the belief that it was a West Indian island, as a result of which error the French Colony of Chandernagore still exists in India, only twenty miles from Calcutta.

A few years ago the President of the Royal Geographical Society prevented a territorial arrangement of Africa, under which France benefited at the expense of this country, by pointing out to the Foreign Office that it was based on measurements from the meridian of Paris, instead of the gales assumed.

Don't S

Tales of Convict

Jokesters

Stena walls do not a prison make but bars a case, so far as the jokester spirit is concerned. This was abundantly shown recently by the disclosure that inmates of the Missouri State Penitentiary had perpetrated many hoaxes upon the outside public through the medium of letter writing. With time hanging heavy on their hands, many of these convicts, and public letter writers, and they have proposed marriage to girls that they have never seen, have ordered goods beyond their ability to pay, and have entered into negotiations for the purchase of large tracts of land—all with an income of $1.50 a month, the state of Missouri pays them for their enforced toil.

There are 2,772 men in the state penitentiary at Jefferson City, and they are allowed to write two letters a week, says the Kansas City "Star." This makes a total of some fifty-five million letters that probably go out from the prison each week. Practically every letter bears this return address on the envelope: "Box 47, Jefferson City, Mo."

Persons in Jefferson City known as Box 47 means, and probably a lot many persons throughout the state, but just as probably, there are many more thousands and tens of thousands who have not the slightest idea that Box 47 is not the address of a large factory in Jefferson City or a mercantile house, or some kind of the sort.

There are factories inside the prison grounds, several of them, and that gives the men ideas they put into letters to impressionable girls whom they have never seen.

"I am so busy in my shoe factory that I cannot get away at present to come to see you," the convicts write, with their tongues in their cheeks, and the thrilled girls at the other end of the line tell their friends about the rich unknown friend they have made in Jefferson City.

Or, if the prisoner is a little more modest in his ideas of impersonation, he will say:

"I am working in the factory at one day a month, deafest, and saving my money."

Of course the girl thinks the "one day a month" means $150 and is elated she has won an honest, sensible, hard-working man, when the facts are that the "one fifty" means $1.50 and the prisoner is "working hard" and "saving his money" because the State of Missouri is compelling him to do so. Sometimes a postscript is put on the letters that says:

"Of course, I am getting all expenses, including an allowance for board and room."

Then, too, there often will be this promise:

"I certainly will come and see you as soon as I get away."

This, really, is not quite such a compliment as the recipient of the letter imagines it to be, but she does not know that.

Once, fairly recently, an incident occurred that received the careful attention of the prison mail clerk. A letter "litters" at the penitentiary were reading the Sunday papers and noticed in the society columns the announcement of an important social event in a large Missouri city. The letter to the society girl whose parents had given the party received a letter from "Box 47, Jefferson City, Mo."

"I know you will recall meeting me," the unknown writer said. "There was such a crowd at your recent reception that I did not have a chance to have the little talk with you I desired so much, therefore, I know you will not think it presumptuous of me to write."

The letter then gave elaborate details of the house, the arrangements of the dinner, the furniture of each, the decorative effects, etc., and it was patent that any one who had been in the house could have written the letter.

The young girl replied to "Box 47" weekly, and then a rapid correspondence sprang up. The mail was provided as "the heavy rush of business at the factory would permit," and the romance was going ahead swimmingly in every respect.

One day a cabinet-sized photograph with the imprint of a nationally known photographer arrived at Box 47 for the prisoner the mail clerk opened it, of course. He saw therein the face of a beautiful girl, young, innocent, with a look of trust and confidence in her eyes.

He looked up the number of the picture and found that the man was a stranger who had served three terms for an unappreciable offense and now was living on the same charge. He had met the negro before him.

"What did you start writing to this fellow for and it as familiarly as you talk to me?" he was asked.

"I wanted to be getting letters from you, and I knew if I just wrote to my Dear Unknown Friend, as some of the boys do, you probably would stop and, if you didn't, she probably would answer it," the man replied. "But how did you know the details of the house?" the mail clerk persisted.

"How could you fool her?" the man asked.

"Well, you see," the negro said, "I write weekly, 'I did a little business in that town once and her

The photograph was returned to the girl, with a brief note telling her the facts, as easily and as sympathetically as possible. It probably took her a long time to get over it, but it showed the folly of writing to someone whom one cannot place.

There was another case where a widow with four children appeared at the prison doors one morning and asked "to see the factory." She would not at first believe it when she was told it was the Missouri State Penitentiary.

Cleaner London

Marked Improvement in People's Health—The Crossing Steeper 19th appears.

Visitors to London whose previous experience of the capital was gained in pre-war days make no secret of their surprise at the marked change in the appearance of the people and the condition of the streets to-day. All the health reports issued by the various London municipal bodies record a steady improvement directly resulting from greater cleanliness in transport, industry, building construction, and the personal habits of the community generally. Tar spraying of macadam roads prevent the dust clouds that formerly caused residents to keep windows closed in summer, and the close attention to road surfaces in all parts of London renders it possible for pedestrians to get about in wet weather without tracking mud and filth wherever they go. Vacuum cleaning of interiors, and the exterior washing of buildings under high pressure steam are striking examples of the scientific methods that have replaced the mop and pail. Public conveyances to-day are in striking contrast to the old ramshackle "four-wheelers," the underground dirt-grimed "thirds," or the old horse-drawn omnibus and tram-cars. Food handling is far more cleanly now than market porters are compelled to wear washable clothing. Decaying refuse, which was once so noticeable in the streets around Smithfield, Billingsgate and Convent Garden, is a thing of the past, and even in the poorer street markets the stall owners are compelled by the local authorities to clear away any waste matter which may have fallen from their stalls. Dairy men have discarded the germ-carrying milk can in favour of the sealed glass vessel for the purpose of distribution; meat and fish are no longer wrapped in old newspapers, laundries are compelled to conform to strict sanitary regulations, and barbers are also obliged to observe greater cleanliness in regard to their utensils and premises. Municipal Baths have encouraged an ever-increasing number of young people to cultivate habits of cleanliness, as well as to acquire the art of swimming since this has become part of the curriculum in the schools. Health visitors attached to the borough councils constantly investigate the domestic conditions of the more congested districts. The clearance of slums in the central areas has caused scores of thousands to migrate to the model dwellings of the outer suburbs. Even the casual population of common lodging houses live in cleaner surroundings since the old type of "doss-house" disappeared. As the rebuilding of London progresses the authorities have become aware of the extent of the danger to public health resulting from neglect to destroy the vast colonies of rats and other vermin which infest old premises. "Rat Week" was a combined effort on the part of the municipal authorities, in co-operation with the people in Central London, to reduce the rat population. These exterminated largely in those areas where stables or food stores encouraged the vermin to colonise. The conversion of stables into garages has also helped to reduce the rat population, and the disappearance of the manure heaps tends to mitigate the plague of flies which was formerly so noticeable in every London house during summer months. The disappearance of the crossing-sweeper and the reduction in the number of shoe blacks and chimney sweeps can be easily understood when we compare London to-day with the conditions prevailing a generation ago.

man, wife of the First Lord of the Admiralty, and the Nelson left the stays without a hitch to the accompaniment of loud cheering and the blowing of sirens from the numerous craft on the river afterwards.

Mr. Bridgeman, in a speech at the subsequent reception, said that it should be thought that with the launching of the Nelson the country was starting a new competition in armaments, he could assure them that that ship and her sister ship the Rodney, now building at Birkenhead were provided for under the Washington Convention, and that when they were completed four other ships would go out of commission.

So long as there were armaments in the world, we first of all the nations, must never let our strength at sea go down. The Nelson must be looked upon as a guarantee of the peace of the world.

Sir Eustace D'Eyncourt said the vessel had been building for about two and a half years, and it was hoped to finish her in about twelve months. He urged that something should be done to meet foreign competition in shipbuilding if we were not to lose our supremacy in that direction.

The Nelson, when completed, will be the world's most powerful warship, and will carry the heaviest artillery afloat. Her main armament will be nine 16 in. guns in triple turrets and 12 6 in. guns on the broadside.

H.M.S. Nelson Launched

BEST ARMED VESSEL IN THE WORLD—FIRST BRITISH NATI-TLESHP SINGE THE WAR.

London, Sept. 4.—Thousands of people on both banks of the River Tyne yesterday, watched the launching from the yard of Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth and Company at Newcastle of H.M.S. Nelson, the first battleship to be constructed for the Navy since the war and one of two permitted under the Washington Convention.

The vessel, which is estimated to cost between £7,000,000 and £8,000,000, was designed by Sir Eustace D'Eyncourt, Director of Naval Construction and chief technical adviser to the Admiralty, 1912-23. She is said to incorporate many unusual features "to render the vessel invulnerable to attack.

The launching ceremony was performed by Dame Caroline Bridge-

The Amazing Story

OF HOW FATE, THREE MEN, AND A HOBBY DISCOVERED THE CANCER GERM.

(By PETER VISCHER).

The old man was getting along in years. And he hadn't done anything yet. All his life long he had wanted to do something, something that would live through time, something great, monumental, something that would make the name of Gye send forth such a beacon of shining light that even the unthinking, careless, hurrying men would remember, halt, and pay homage. There weren't many years left—and he knew that, and it would begin to look as though his ambitions were doomed to the grave with him.

He had money, old man Gye had, but not much. He didn't have enough to found a school, or build a hospital, or leave some other legacy worthy to bear his name through the ages. No, he couldn't do that. And he had no children to turn to, none to carry on in his name.

Gye frequently bemoaned his fate, his thwarted ambition, as he hurried from the heart of London and through the railway station at Derbyshire, to his home. So it was on this day, when, as happened every morning and every night, he was accosted with a cheery good day.

"Ah, good day, Bullock," he replied, stopping to chat with the station-master, a young chap, earnest and serious, who also knew the pangs and pains of ambition. Bullock wanted to be a scientist, but he was poor, and he had to earn his living at railroad-ing, help support an invalid mother, and use only what he denied himself for the only treasure life seemed to hold for him—books. Between trains this youth studied.

They often talked of their ambitions. Gye and Bullock—the old man from whom life was ebbing fast, and the young man whose blood was only beginning to boil. And this they did again for some moments, until the older man, his face lighted with sudden inspiration, grasped the younger by the arm and gripped it tight with excitement.

"I am not famous, nor will I be," he said hoarsely. "I have no children, I believe in you. Some day you will be famous. I can see that. I will leave you the money I have so that you can pursue your life's ambition. If you will agree to take the name of Gye."

And so it happened. One day, not much later, while Bullock was still down at the station dividing his time between his duties and his books, the old man died. And the invalid mother resigned his job and, taking the name of his patron, as William Ewart Gye, set his face toward his future.

Before long, Gye (the erstwhile Bullock) found the path he was seeking, and, as a promising student of medicine, was enrolled at Edinburgh University. There he sat under the brilliant Bennett, an expert on cancer, the dread scourge of humanity, which for 6000 years had defied investigation. Gye began to study the unrelenting disease that had sent his mother to an agonizing death.

Gye worked hard and long. For a time his labors were interrupted, for war came and every Briton did his bit. He was attached to an ambulance train and made studies of gas gangrene that were of inestimable scientific value. But this was only an interlude. No sooner was the war over than Gye went back to his cancer studies.

Incidentally he worked. For two years he did not rest from his researches except to eat and sleep. Christmas Day saw him hard at work in his laboratory. He made thousands of experiments with one aim, the isolation of the cancer virus. Many times when success seemed only a step ahead, he was compelled to begin all over again.

Finally he came up against a stone wall. He was satisfied that cancer is caused by a germ that enters the body from without, but he was unable to isolate the germ.

He tried filtration, but the germs were so small they could not be taken out of a liquid by the finest filter. He tried catching them under a microscope but the finest microscope he had ever heard of—instruments that magnified 1500 times—would not reveal them.

Gye was stumped. Now, as often happens in life, chance enters. The long arm of coincidence, so much longer in real life than any fictionist would dare make it, begins to reach out. It happened that a hatter in Jermyn Street, one J. E. Barnard, head of the firm of William Barnard & Sons, Hatters, had a hobby. By all the rote of successful business life and the usual aspirations of a shopkeeper, he was as mad a hatter as the hatter Alice met in Wonderland. Instead of hurrying to a golf course when the day's work was done, or to a card club, or to the races—which anybody could have told him was the proper thing for a hatter with an income to do—he went home and amused himself with microscopes.

After a while Barnard, the hatter, became known among British scientists as a willing amateur who knew more than a little about lenses. Then Barnard, the hatter, came to be known among British scientists as the man who knew more about lenses than any one in the British Isles. The British Medical Research Council started its great cancer research at Hampstead and nearly every day Barnard, the hatter, after his new stock of bowlers had been arranged and the day's receipts had been counted up, tied himself to the Hampstead laboratories to experiment with new lights for microscopy that might impress on a photographic plate things invisible to the eye.

By ordinary light rays, about 550 millions of a millimeter in length, magnification 1500 times is possible. But Barnard knew that by shorter light rays, by ultra-violet rays only 275 millionths long, he would be able to magnify 2000 times, even though he would not be able to see the result. So he experimented with the invention of a group of German scientists at Jena, first announced in 1904, by which lenses of pure quartz were used instead of glass. The ultra-violet light was provided by an electric spark's jumping between two little points of calcium. And photographic plates were used to catch the invisible light coming up through the lenses with the picture.

It was inevitable that Gye, the one-time railroad porter with ambition, should some day meet Barnard, the hatter, with a hobby. When Gye confided to his friends that he could go no further with his researches unless he could find a more powerful microscope, it was only a matter of time until some one would say to him that he would have to meet Barnard.

The two met.

"I've got to catch these viruses under a microscope if my experiments are to succeed," said Gye to Barnard. "Can you do it for me?"

"I'll try," said Barnard.

The two worked together steadily and patiently. Gye was constantly at it. Barnard hurried over from Jermyn Street just as soon as his business could free him. Together they conducted countless experiments. They hoped in time to get a picture of 50,000 or perhaps even 100,000 of cancer germs in a group. That would have been an unprecedented achievement, for it would have made theory into fact and would have provided a foundation from which to fight and eventually defeat one of the three worst of the earth's scourges.

They worked quietly and unostentatiously. Time and again cures for cancer have been announced and time and again the hearts of men and women have been buoyed up with hope, then cruelly twisted, because the report of a cure was false. Gye and Barnard wanted to make no such mistake. Furthermore, they knew that with the isolation of the virus the battle would be only half won. A cure must be found later.

So they kept at it. And finally, one day, Barnard, with quivering hand, turned over to Gye a microphotograph. Gye took it and held it to the light. There was something never before seen by man, something that no eye could ever see, even with the most powerful microscopes—a photograph of a single round organism enticed into visibility by rays of light too thin for sight to catch. Not 50,000 in a conglomerate mass, mind you, but a single round cell—a cancer germ!

"I think we've got it this time," said Gye to Barnard.

And the two hurried on with their work.

Some weeks later a crowd gathered in a street outside the office of the Lancet, an English medical journal. At first it was just such an indescribable gathering as happens hundreds of times a day, for no particular reason, in New York, or Chicago, or San Francisco. But this crowd swelled minute by minute, until it bled through the Strand and disrupted the normal traffic of the street. It was not a joyous crowd, nor yet an angry one.

For yet one merely inquisitive. It was quiet and patient, throbbing with a deep excitement.

The event that drew the great crowd was an announcement by the Lancet that the germ of cancer had been isolated by Dr. W. E. Gye, once a railway porter, and J. E. Barnard, a prosperous hatter. While the announcement made it plain that the discovery was in no way a cure for cancer, yet it was hailed instantly by scientists throughout the world as one of the greatest medical achievements in history.

For in tracing the cause of cancer to a germ, the discoverers laid bare a mystery that has baffled physicians for generations. By providing definite knowledge, they paved the way for direct attack on this most dreaded scourge. And they gave science effective new weapons for striking at the root of other diseases.

Scientists point out that, as with other diseases, the discovery of the cause is just the beginning in the fight to wipe out cancer. How soon it can be conquered, no one can say. In the case of malaria, for example, the enemy went down easily, once it had been located.

Research workers gradually discovered that malaria was caused by a germ introduced into the blood by a certain type of mosquito. They knew, therefore, that if the mosquito could be prevented from biting men, malaria could be prevented. Other scientists took up the fight, attacking the mosquito in its breeding-grounds and making malarial districts healthy.

In the case of diabetes the fight was more stubborn, yet a cure was found at last in the discovery of insulin. But in the war against tuberculosis, although the position of the enemy long has been known, and although its death toll has been greatly lessened, to-day there is no known cure other than that of strengthening the body to resist the germ's attack.

In discovering the cancer germ Gye and Barnard reconciled two hitherto conflicting theories of cancer. One theory, commonly held by authorities, was that the disease was due to some change in the body by which unhealthy cells at a trusted point were converted into malignant cells. The other was that cancer was due to a germ entering the body from without.

In experiments with chickens, rats and mice, Doctor Gye found that both theories were right—that cancer is caused by a germ, but that the germ is able to grow only in unhealthy cells.

This fact Doctor Gye demonstrated by inoculation of mice. Introduced by itself, the cancer germ was powerless to do harm. Only by introducing both the germ and germ-free extracts of tumors was he able to grow cancers in mice.

With the cancer germ isolated, Doctor Gye and his colleagues in the British Medical Research Council now are busy with experiments to develop a cancer vaccine that will make it impossible for the germ to secure a foothold in the body. In the Hampstead laboratories, definite success has been reported in making chickens, rats and mice immune to the disease by inoculating them with a serum made from the newly discovered virus.

The perfection of human inoculation against cancer, of course, will not be a cure for the disease already contracted, yet scientists hold out the hope that soon it may furnish the basis for a preventive campaign to eradicate this curse of man from the face of the earth.

Income Tax Case Against Sir R. A. Squires

The hearing of the charges of not making income tax returns preferred against Sir Richard Squires began before Judge Morris this morning. Mr. Squires appeared for the Minister of Finance, Mr. W. R. Howley for the defendant. There are seven prosecutions, three under the 1922 Act and four under the old Act. Claiming that returns were made prior to the issuance of the summonses, Mr. Howley entered a plea of not guilty.

Mr. J. O'Reilly, Assessor, was called and examined by Mr. Emerson. Form of return prescribed by the Minister under the Act of 1917 was submitted as evidence. A return sheet submitted by Sir Richard for the year 1921 was tendered as evidence.

Mr. Howley objected on the ground that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to enquire into the completeness of the return. The question for him to decide was had returns been made. Full powers as to the former were vested in the Minister of Finance and his officers.

Mr. Emerson in reply argued that the question to decide was whether the document was a proper return within the meaning of the Act and in order to decide this the Magistrate was entitled to scrutinize it.

In summing up, Mr. Howley claimed that the charges made in the summonses had failed because the documents showed that returns had been made. His Honor pointed out that the alleged returns for the year 1921 were made on a form sent out by the Department for use in 1924 and it was for the defence to prove that the form dated 1924 was the one provided for the year 1921.

Mr. Emerson replying said he did not base his case on the form date, but claimed that certain questions on the form had not been answered, the total income was stated to be "an estimated approximate," the prescribed oath had been altered to read approximate income. There was no statement in the form as to income from professional fees, and he argued that as the form was treated in a manner not intended by the Minister and therefore was not a return, hence the penalties prescribed by Section 9 of the Act should be imposed.

His Honor intimated that he would decide on the particular case before hearing the other cases.

The further hearing was adjourned until Sept. 30th, at 11 a.m.

The Late Dean Ryle

BURIED NEAR "UNKNOWN WARRIOR"

With great appropriateness the late Dean Ryle was buried in Westminster Abbey near the grave of the "Unknown Warrior." The Dean, it will be remembered, was largely responsible for the removal of the body of the "Unknown Warrior" to the Abbey, and took the leading part at the funeral ceremony. A very large congregation gathered in the Abbey for the Dean's funeral. Lord Colebrooke represented the King; General Trotter the Prince of Wales; Earl Howe, Queen Alexandra; Colonel Douglas Gordon, the Duke of Connaught; Colonel McMahon, Princess Louise; and Colonel F. Packe, Princess Beatrice. Bishop Bury and the Bishops of Norwich, Rochester, Guildford, Birmingham, Southampton, and Bedford were there, more as friends than as Bishops. Bishop Gore was too overcome to speak. As Canon Cernocky recited the committal prayer the urn containing the ashes of the late Dean was lowered into the grave three feet to the east of the "Unknown Warrior" resting place. It was from this spot that Dean Ryle saw the designs of the "Unknown Warrior," and it was here that he kept a vigil of many hours while two workmen filled in the grave with Flanders soil.

Dean Ryle, who was 63, played a commanding part in the Church life of his generation, and adorned many pulpits. He was first at Cambridge as an Old Testament critic, he was then Bishop successively of Exeter and Winchester, but he only showed the full measure of his capacities in his eventual later years as Dean of Westminster. His father was a leader of the Evangelical party, and became the first Bishop of Liverpool. The late Dean, after a brilliant career at Cambridge, was elected to the principalship of St. David's College, Lampeter, in 1888. The summons to the episcopate came in 1900, when Dr. Sickersteth resigned the See of Exeter. In 1903 the promotion of Dr. Davidson to the Primacy produced a vacancy in the See of Winchester, which was offered to, and accepted by, Dr. Ryle. He Greatly Overtaxed His Strength at Winchester, and fell a victim to angina pectoris and acute neuritis, from which a long and slow convalescence brought him back only to a portion of his wonted energy. It was then that a number of Hampshire laymen, headed by Lord Selborne, approached the Bishop with an offer of £500 a year for five years towards the stipend of a suffragan, stipulating only that it should be for an additional suffragan, who should be "a comparatively young man." Naturally, Dr. Ryle was full of gratitude for such help "at a juncture of his life," as he said, "when I most stood in need of it." Unhappily, the effects of this early strain on Dr. Ryle's powers continued to appear in serious ways, so that during a considerable portion of 1910 he was either laid aside or compelled to do his work in a stinging posture. In 1919 Dr. Ryle was appointed Dean of Westminster, and in this office he gradually recovered some of his strength. He did a great work at Westminster, and was instrumental in raising a sum of £150,000 towards the cost of repairing the historic abbey. He took up the idea of the burial of the Unknown Warrior with enthusiasm, and, in spite of opposition, carried the project through with such impressiveness that that nameless grave in the Abbey has been an example followed all the world over. But ill-health continually crippled his activities, and on June 21 last the grave nature of his illness was distinctly indicated in the News of the World. In his earlier days he was a cricketer of some renown, and walking and mountaineering claimed his attention at different times. The welfare of Westminster School, of which he was ex-officio governor, was always foremost in the Dean's mind, and hardly an important match, either cricket or football, was played unwatched by him. He used to applaud with quite as great gusto as the boys when a goal was scored or a wicket taken. Married to a daughter of Major-General G. Hewish Adams, in 1883, the Dean leaves one son. He had a hobby of collecting portraits of Brasennus—News of the World.

PAN AMERICAN SUES PIERCE. Plaintiff alleges trespass in Vera Cruz and claims $2,317 barrels of oil or $25,000 damages.

Richmond, Va.—Suit for $25,000 damages has been instituted in the United States District Court by the Huasteca Petroleum Co., a Maine corporation, (Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co.) against the Pierce Oil Corp., chartered and doing business under the laws of Virginia. The summonses are returnable to district court Sept. 7.

Plaintiff alleges that between July and December, 1922, the defendant corporation by its agent, Compania Mexicana de Combustible, S.A., trespassed upon the plaintiff's property in Tautima, Ozuama county, State of Vera Cruz, Mexico and drilled wells, taking from them 22,217 barrels of oil. Complaint alleges: "The oil so produced became the property of the plaintiff as soon as it was actually brought to the surface of the ground."

It is further alleged that the oil was appropriated and disposed of by the defendant's concern and that the plaintiff thereby suffered the loss of $25,000, the amount of damages asked.

MIDCONTINENT GASOLINE PRICES UNCHANGED.

Belief is bottom has been reached. Chicago—Reduction of one cent a gallon in Standard Oil of Indiana's gasoline tank-wagon price Tuesday was apparently discounted in the mid-continent refinery gasoline market where prices are unchanged. Belief is that bottom has been reached. Fuel oil and distillates are definitely strong. Lubricants are easy, some refiners cutting neutral and red oils one cent a gallon.

"The Man Who Came Back"

EXTRAORDINARY SUPER SPECTACULAR WINS PRAISE AT THE MAJESTIC.

One of the best photoplays shown for months, "The Man Who Came Back," which was exhibited at the Majestic Theatre last night and which pleased the many who had the good fortune to be present during the afternoon and night performances.

Produced as a stage play several years ago, this story scored a big success and in its screen form it should duplicate this record. Here is a big picture which does not depend on big, spectacular scenes or outstanding thrills or melodramatic stunts for its appeal; in fact, these things are absent. Instead, it gets right down to the fundamentals of effective drama and presents a vital, compelling, human story that holds the interest from the first flash to the final fade-out.

The story deals with a youth reared in luxury who turns out bad and sinks to the depths. A girl who loves him follows his example. They meet again in a Chinese dive. The effect is to awaken each other's self-respect, and together they fight their way against the curse of opium and alcohol back to the top.

It will be seen that the story is one of regeneration, a theme by no means new to the screen; but it is in the manner in which this is accomplished, the tremendously dramatic lighting of this play with their backs to the wall, based on every side and with only their faith in each other, that the production gets its appeal and grips the spectator.

"Night is the last chance the public will have to see this wonderful feature."

Stopping the Train

A short time ago the Flying Scotsman was stopped between London and Hitchin by somebody foolishly pulling the communication cord. As the coach in which the cord was pulled was a corridor, the offender was undetected. This foolish practice is regarded very seriously by railway officials, as there is always the danger of another train running into the one that has been unnecessarily stopped.

Household Notes

The chain runs from end to end of the coach. When it is pulled it opens a valve in the vacuum brake, and this action slows up the train.

Sometimes it has been pulled by accident; a man lifting his luggage from the rack has lost his balance and caught hold of the chain to restore it. Children have also climbed up on the seat and clutched hold of it.

By means of a disc at the end of each coach the guard is able, by walking along the train, to see at once where the chain has been pulled, and until the disc has been put back the chain remains down.

With hearts of lettuce serve French dressing crackers and Bouquetif cheese.

LAST NIGHT'S FOOTBALL.

Mount Cashel and Holy Cross teams played to a draw last night.

The game was a hard fought battle for the points. Play opened up fast with Holy Cross having the advantage.

Mont Cashel followed from in front of goal. Power Brison with a difficult shot. When ends being changed and the ball placed in motion, the Mt. Cashel boys made a furious attack on the opposing goal.

Should Mt. Cashel win in their next game with the B.I.S. they will win the silver medals.

SENIOR CHAMPIONS DEFEAT JUNIOR CHAMPIONS.

Only a small attendance of spectators turned up at St. George's Field yesterday afternoon to witness the football game between the Cadets, Champions of the Senior League, and T.A., Champions of the Junior League.

In the first half, with the Cadets playing from the western end, the ball was confined for the most part to T.A. territory, with the result that the Senators found the net twice.

The game from then on became fast and exciting, and the Senior backs were kept busy in staying off numerous attacks, in which they were successful in frustrating any further scoring.

TO-NIGHT'S FIVE-MILE RUN.

Thrilling Race Anticipated.

The 5-mile race, for a splendid cup, donated by J. Gratton Elsie, besides a gold medal of excellent design, offered by Hon. Dr. Mossell, will be contested for on St. Bon's Campus at 6.30 this evening.

CRICKET.

Yorkshire Again Champions For the Fourth Year in Succession.

For the fourth year in succession Yorkshire have won the county cricket championship, and a glance at the table will show how well deserved is their triumph.

They have played 31 games, of which 20 have been won outright; 3 have been won and 3 lost under the "first innings lead" rule, while in 5 games there has been no decision.

In only one match this season were Yorkshire in the slightest danger of defeat—against Sussex at Bradford—and then, when all seemed lost, superb bowling—one of the chief factors of their greatness—enabled them to snatch an altogether remarkable victory.

Yorkshire won the championship for the first time in 1893, and ever since they have been the dominant side in county cricket. This is their 14th success.

WITH THE BOXERS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Jack Kearns left yesterday for New York to take charge of Micker Walker's training camp for the welterweight champion's match with Dave Shade in New York, Sept. 21.

Kearns did not waste any time discussing his affairs with Jack Dempsey, declaring that the heavyweight champion faces lawsuits in the attempts to box before Sept. in 1926 for anybody other than the promoter Kearns picks out to stage the show.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—Jack Dempsey's two Labor Day boxing exhibition bouts failed to act as a barometer of the heavyweight champion's condition, sporting writers who saw the events agree.

Dempsey had palpably easy opponents in "Fat" Larue and "Cowboy" Warner, the writers said. The champion appeared in fine physical shape, but his ability was not tested in the least.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Louis Kid Kaplan, featherweight champion of malarial germs, and will not be able to fight again until the indoor season in the new Madison Square Garden is well started.

Although malaria is accompanied by cold feet, Scotty Montelith, manager of Kaplan, insists that this is an effect rather than the cause.

Kaplan recently took what is technically known as a pasting from Babe Herman, but got a draw decision in his home country.

If Kaplan wants to box again in New York he will probably find the Boxing Commission insisting that he give Herman a return match.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 10.

Gene Tunney, United States lightweight champion, has been signed to meet Bertie Madden, of New York, in a ten-round fight probably in Minneapolis, Sept. 25.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—King Solomon, Panama heavyweight, yesterday was ordered by the New York Boxing Commission to fight Jack Renault, of Canada, at the Queensboro Stadium before he engages in any other match in this State.

Action by the board resulted from a complaint by Queensboro promoters that Solomon had twice failed to fulfill engagements with Renault, pleading illness a month ago and later claiming an injured hand. A loss of $3,000 had been suffered by the two withdrawals.

Can Scott Overcome The Hefty Spaniard?

(By JIMMY WILDE, ex-Flyweight Champion of the World.)

It was hoped that Tommy Milligan's first contest of the coming season at the National Sporting Club would have been with Roland Todd for the Lonsdale middle-weight belt, but the Hamilton boxer has listened-in to the voice of "America calling," and he has left his native town en route for New York.

He has placed his affairs under the care of Billy Ames, but although a match was suggested between Milligan and Harry French for the world's title, this, I am afraid, will fall to materialise owing to the American having suffered severe injuries in a motor accident, which, I learn, will put him out of action for several months.

However, we shall await with intense interest Milligan's debut in American circles. Todd, I am told, has been training assiduously for a big winter campaign. The champion has an important return engagement with the coloured boxer, Len Johnson, at Manchester, on Sept. 25, but Todd has a pretty stiff hurdle to negotiate on Monday night at The Ring, where he encounters the wear and tear Australian, Charles Ring. The event will be the means of providing Todd with a good test match.

The Doncaster boxer has not been over successful since he beat Augie Ratner and Kid Lewis at Holland Park Hill. He did fairly well in America, but in his last bout in the States, suffered a knock-out reverse at the hands of Jock Malone. Still, I fancy that Todd must have allowed himself to get somewhat stale. Since he returned home he has been defeated by Bruno Fratini, for the European title, and Len Johnson, at Manchester. However, I must confess that Todd disputes both these decisions. He did not have the opportunity of a return with the Italian, but is anxious to prove that he can beat Johnson, who has agreed to a second battle. In Ring he will discover an aggressive two-handed fighter, who refuses to stand on ceremony. Todd is essentially a clever defensive boxer, but he will require all his skill in this department to keep out the young man from the Gemmotherwealth. I am

Wondering What Will Happen to Phil Scott when he opposes the heavily-built Spaniard, Paolino, at San Sebastian, on Sunday. Frankly, I think Master Phil will have to exhibit more enterprise than he did when he tackled Gladys Daniels. I appreciate the fact that Scott is very plucky and endowed by Nature with a splendid physique. I only wish that I had been born on similar lines. I know that Scott easily outpointed

George Cook, and that the Australian twice defeated Paolino in mastery fashion.

Still, I am informed on reliable authority that the big Basque has improved since he became associated with Francois Descamps. If this information is correct or not remains to be seen.

The Spaniard is a hefty fellow. He is one of those energetic men who Jack Imagination, and can absorb a lot of heavy punishment. Descamps, who is now managing Paolino, is the promoter of the match, and his pet protégé, Georges Carpentier, has been selected as referee. I have no doubt that the advent of Georges will prove an added attraction, but I do not believe he will be influenced one way or the other when called upon to render his decision. He has no doubt, an invaluable asset, but fighters from six-to-heavyweight must also have a certain amount of skill. It is announced that Harry Mason is entering the welterweight division, and, at 10st. 7lbs., will be meeting Johnny Brown, of Hamilton, at the Albert Hall on October 3. This means that Earnie Izard will not have his anticipated opportunity for meeting Mason in a return contest for the lightweight title.

However, there are others claiming recognition, so he will not have to remain idle. Alf Simmons is on the waiting list.

Cooking With Comfort

"One of the many fine features about Crisco" says Miss Olive Allen "is that it does not smoke in deep frying, nor does it smell like ordinary fats. When cooking with Crisco, the delectably digestible fat, the news of what's going on in the kitchen need not be known in any other part of the house. In several other respects, Crisco is superior. Your grocer will recommend Crisco—more than likely his wife uses it at home. At all Grocers, Sole Agent: Gerald S. Doyle. sept17,th.s.t.

CHAMPION TEN MILE ROAD RACE WILL BE HELD AT HALIFAX ON OCTOBER 17; 3 NEWFOUNDLANDERS TO START.

HALIFAX, N.S.—The Halifax Herald and The Evening Mail modified marathon of 10 miles, for the Maritime Province championship, will be held October 17 this year. President Miles of the M.P.R.A.A.C. has informed the management of the race that the event will, as usual, be sanctioned as the ten mile championship of the Maritimes. Word has been received from St. John's, Newfoundland, and that the old colony will be represented by three runners, including Jack Bell and Ronald O'Toole.

MacAulay Not Starting. Victor MacAulay, four times winner of the big race, will not likely be a starter. He is now located in the United States, and recently wrote friends in Windsor that he would not be here for the race. MacAulay's withdrawal will help the younger runners who were unable to cope with the speed of the Windsor man in previous Herald runs.

Newfoundlanders Popular. Newfoundland athletes are popular in Halifax, and their entrance in the 1925 championship race will add to the great interest in the annual event. Bell was second the last year he competed. While O'Toole finished third in the 1924 race, being a short distance behind Silas McLellan, Noel Marathoner, who was eleventh in the Boston Marathon. The name of the third runner from Newfoundland is as yet unknown, but he will probably be a young star.

Race in Afternoon. Altho the starting hour has not been definitely settled the runners will probably be sent off on their long trip at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Rules that governed the race last year will be in vogue again. John C. Miles, Cape Breton runner whose victories at Halifax and Amherst recently ranked him high in Maritime long distance running, will likely be a competitor. Entries will close October 12.

The Passing Hour

"Mummy," asked Elsie, "is it tea-time yet?" "No, dear, not for an hour yet."

"Oh! Then my tummy must be fast."

"Do you give that dog of yours any exercise, Mr. Jones?" "Oh, yes, he goes for a 'tramp' every morning."

Steward: "Can I do anything for you, sir?" Passenger (faintly): "You might present my compliments to the chief engineer and ask him if there is any hope of the boilers blowing up."

Phyllis: "Jack has placed his heart in my keeping." Doris: "Well, you had better be careful with it. He told me last week that I had broken it."

"Your wife looks stunning to-night. Her gown is a poem."

"What do you mean, poem?" replied the strutting author: "That gown is two poems and a short story."

On his tour of the district, a school inspector came before a class of girls. He wrote upon the blackboard, "LXXXX." Then, peering over the
