"That is Roy," she whispered, "and I'll have the truth from him ere things go a bit farther." But she stepped out of the cottage and went down the little garden to the low stone wall which inclosed it. He waved his cap above his head and came rapidly forward, but yet timing his steps to the joyous melody—
"The wind's veering aft.
Then spread every sail;
She'll bear all her canvas a-trip!"
He was a dark, slim youth, much sunburned, with curling hair, splendid teeth and a voice that might wile a bird from a tree.

"Helen! Helen! My beauty!" He stopped in the middle of the song to say the words, and he said them on her lips, with his hands on her shoulders, as he stood face to face with her. Then he leaped the wall and asked if she would come down to the water and have a walk and a talk with him.

And Helen grew suddenly ten times lovelier. Her heart throbbed like a hive in June. Yes, she wanted to go down to the water, for love had still something of the sea, but she said. "Inust go first and tell father, for he was a far more popular man."

was not a good single of good sory, teller, who was shy of women and whose sole claim to favor was a man-ly heart, was a far more popular man. If it had been Will Anderson, the father told himself, he would not so

"nae a consideration for other folk," and as the nights grew cold and dark and as the nights grew cold and dark the offense was aggravated. Then he vowed "there was no pleasing the auld man"—that is, he could not make Brodick laugh at his funny stories and mimicries. In the first place laughter was not natural to Brodick; he took life too seriously to make sport out of it. In the second place he had that pontempt for mimicry and punning which all but the most elemental natures feel. There was not

Helen. She was nervous and fretful when her father and lover were together. She longed for her own home; but, though Roy talked continuously about the joy they were to have in it, he made no efforts towards its realization. He was waiting for Robert Brodick to do this, and Robert had a conviction that it would never he required. Sooner or later, he was sure, Helen's clear honest nature would di-vine the falseness of the man she had Helen's clear nonese vine the falseness of the man she had chosen, and then he knew it would be impossible for her to marry him.

But for three months Roy kept his position intact. Helen believed in and loved him

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1902.

-The following paragraph gleaned from a Boston paper contains an unusual bitterness for the people of Nova ces for soft coal. It would be more to the credit of the Dominion Coal Co. to make a low price contract thus sacrifice our national wealth to thus sacrifice our national wealth to foreigners. The paragraph is worth reading and considering:

water extension to Carleton's Corner has been given the Bridgetown Foundry Company.

"The New England Gas & Coke Co. now paying $1.90 per ton to the committee Coal Co. for its coal, under a contract entered into September 30, 1897 for 25 years. Under this contract the coal was to be delivered to the Coke Co. at a minimum price of $1.60 per ton for the first 18 months, and ten cents per ton extra every 12 mouths until the price reached $1.90 per ton, at which figure it would remain for the life of the contract. This price was for coal delivered at Everett, freight and duty paid. This contract was entered into on the hasis of a supply of coal for 350 ovens, but it provides for a supply at the same price for as high as 1000 ovens. About 600,000 tons of coal are now being shipped to Everett annually.

-It is perhaps not a matter of common belief, but it is at least of widespread belief, that the assemblage of colonial representatives in London at the coronation ceremonies will be the eccasion for a more serious discussion of inter-empire trade than has cussion of inter-empire trade than has breached the barrier behind which the uncompromising "free trade of Eng land' has been intrenched, and there is a manifest disposition to discrim inate in favor of the colonies in the further regulation of trade. The imof encouraging intercolonial trade to the exclusion of the foreign, in an endeavor to bind the empire into a more complete and practical unity, is force ing a consideration that cannot but eventually convince British as well as to accomplish a much desired end. The time may not be ripe for its immediate accomplishment, but we are convincod that the signs of the times poin to the establishment of a protection from without and a freedom with the empire in all matters of trade.

The following is an outline of the program which was prepared for tomorrow, and which will instead be given on Tuesday next. Dominion Day From 10 to 11 a. m. the calithumpians will parade, meeting at the street, down Queen to railway station, back to Water street, through Water street on to Court street, from Court street to Granville street, east along Granville street to Washington street down Washington to Revere street, through Revere to Queen street, up Queen to Granville street and on to the park. From eleven to twelve there will be sports at the park, including a 300 yd. race, 200 and 100 yd. dashes high jump and pole vault. At 12.45 the school children of this and sured officers from the 69th regiment, and the Bridgetown Band, will proceed down washington street, through Re-vere street and up Queen street, where they will halt in front of the Grand Cry Central and sing several patriotic songs; the procession will then move erwards be addressed by B. Havey Esq., and will then disband. From two to four, addresses will be delivered by F. B. Wade Esq., M. P., and B. W. Chipman Esq., secretary for agriculture, and others, under the auspices of the Farmers' Association and will be interspersed with tugs-of-war and other sports.

A series of contests, including a fat man's race, sack race, and three leg-ged race will follow, after which will be two bicycle races of one half and one quarter mile, also a bicycle par-ade.

Prizes are offered in all those contests and they are open to the entire county. The calithumpians will appear in the evening, accompanied by a torch light procession and a procession of decorated bicycles, and the program closes with a huge bonfire and display of fire-works.

It is impossible to give more than an outline of the program which promises to afford a good day's entertainment, and no pains are being spared to make avery events are being spared.

PREFERENTIAL TRADE.

London, June 20—The Colonial Premiers are fighting shy of the question of giving a preference, such as Canada grants, to the Mother Country. They want something in return.

Mr. Seddon, premier of New Zealand, favors a scheme of imperial defence, but he sees great difficulties in the way of the accomplishment of these desires. Both propositions, Mr. Seddon declares, are worthy the clospst investigation and discussion.

SUPREME COURT, Supreme Court closed last Thursday evening, after a most interesting session, at which seventeen criminal charges were brought before the jury. The grand jury found true bills in three of the four charges against Daniel Messenger, all of which were for re-ceiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen. On the first charge of receiving a horse belonging to Smith, he pleaded not guilty. Prosecution was made by Roscoe, K. C., and Parker, and defence was made by Ritchie, K. C., and Miller. He was Ritchie, K. C., and Miller. He was found guilty and sentenced to three years in penitentiary. For the other two charges he received sentences of two days in penitentiary for each charge. The King against Carter, et al, was for stealing the goods which Messenger had received, and the three thieves pleaded guilty to three charges found against them. Enos Carter was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. His companions David and Am-diary. His companions David and Ambrose Sibbons, were released on their own recognizances for their good be haviour and Robert Sibbons, having given evidence for the crown, was le go. The King vs Riley was for wife beating and for assaulting Long, who interfered. He was indicted and pleaded guilty, but was cleared by the petit jury. Mr. Parker for the crown and Mr. H. D. Ruggles for the prisoner. A true bill was found against Bent for perjury, but he had been bailed by the committing magistrate and failed to appear at court.

The King vs. Lent was a charge of stealing money alleged to have been picked up in the street and not handed over to its owner, but the grand jury found no bill. The King vs. Riordan was a charge of counselling and pro-curing Arthur Miller to induce Wile to that he might be caught in the act and put in jail. The scheme worked all right, and Wile was caught and tried for his offence and sentenced to six months in jail. There were two charges against Riordan in connection with this matter, but the grand jury threw both out, as well as the charge brought against Miller for his com-plicity in the same matter. The King plicity in the same matter. The King vs. Lucaw was a charge of shooting but the grand jury threw this out also. A true bill was found in the case of the King vs. Burrill, but the indictment was afterwards quashed, there being no one authorized to prosecute the indictment and the magistrate below not having committed the prisoner for trial. I would like a little space in the first edition of your paper to present a few thoughts to my brother larmors. We are at the closs of a year's work, that is, as far as we are able to stimulate the products of our soils for this year. What we have done to promote maximum growth will have its eeward under ordinary conditions, according to the clort we have made. For myself, I must say I am well satisfied with barns full to their carrying capacity, and only a small part of my harvest garnered is a cause for meatisfaction.

We must now turn our thoughts to the preparatory work of next year. First, let us make a careful examination of our fields as they are. Here is a field that he he was relating a least of proper and the first of preparatory work of next year.

the preparatory work of next year. First, let us make a careful examination of our fields as they are. Here is a field that has been yielding a heavy crop of hay for two and perhaps for three years. Unless in exceptional cases, where such fields may be in danger of surface washing, they should be turned down as early as possible to allow the soot to rot. This land in producing these abundant crops has been heavily taxed, a heavy draft has been made on the plant food available, so was should not impose any further burden without contributing some form of plant food to remove exhausted vitality. Then sone system of resting land is to plough it, and by a rotation of crops and the application of manure, we keep it up to that high state of fertility.

One of the chief objects in ploughing is to supply manures and put the soil in such a condition, and gives opportunity for weather refinement, not only aiding in pulverizing, but unlocks the fertility of the soil, brought up by the plough as the roots and stuble of sod lands must enter a state of decomposition before they can supply loughing is to provide time for splicing the cut made in the soil, so the moisture of the sub-soil will steadily rise to the surface. In the spring land should be plowed shallow; mater is a should be plowed shallow; mater is a should be a rich cloration because of the stables. What crops should be grown on this improved soil? A large acreage of turnips, corn, carrots, mangels, in fact all crops except potatoes and wheat. Wheat should be grown on this mile root should be grown on this all crops except potatoes and wheat. Wheat should be grown on this all crops except potatoes and wheat the former stimulating the decay of the sills and floors of his stables. What crops should be grown on this all crops except potatoes and wheat. Wheat should be grown on this unlocks the fertility.

One of the chief objects in ploughing is to supply manures and put the soil in such a condition that it can be easily pulverised. It also improves the physical con moisture of the sub-soil will steadily rise to the surface. In the spring land should be plowed shallow; material subject to decay if left near the surface will decay quickly. The roots of the growing plants are thus able to feed upon them early in the season. Then with a shallow furrow the sub-soil moisture will rise to the roots of the growing plants. Lands that are best not ploughed, are those that have been well intertilled, i.e., tilled between the roots, such as turnings, corn and potatoes. By the thorough system of cultivation or interhave the surface soil in excellent condition, and it should not be turned down and a poorer one brought to the surface, but should be made ready for seeding by the spring-tooth harrow, making a complete seed bed.

FERTILIZING Manures made through the summe can be well applied in the fail to make room for the winter supply, and to advance the spring work. Of this material every farmer could and should have a supply to cart to the soil in the fail.

If we were to discriminate in the val-in the summer. The voidings and urine of horses will induce nitrification quicker than any other material. Then some farmers milk their cows in the stable. This practice augments the heap. Then I notice, travelling thro' the country bears of stravelling thro' stable. This practice augments the heap. Then I notice, travelling throthe country, heaps of straw in a semi-decomposed state. They should be placed in the bottom of the shed.

Sheep or hogs to sow a few acres of rape or pasture. There is no cross which can be more cheaply grown of that will produce more wholesome and fattening stock food. It requires Sheep pens, where the animals have been well bedded through the winter, contain a quantity of coarse manure that is unfit for spring application, surface, and there it must cease.

For winter operations there are several resources for a bottom for the manure shed. In threshing time there is straw that cannot be stored. I do not advise chaff, as it may contain weeds or foul seeds that will appear next year. Then chaff has valuable feeding, qualities, and ifp assed throthe stock the germs of plant life are largely destreyed. Leaves and muck that have been heaped in the summer and allowed to dry make good absorbents. Secure in time a few barrels of read dust and one barrel of land plaster to use in the horse stables to allowed.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SECURING GOOD CROPS outlay I have advised so far is one barrel of plaster and half a barrel of termers all over the province, makes me stronger than ever in my claims of its superiority.

In preparing seed bods, let us remem ber this important fact: Plants have no power of abstracting their food from lumps of sod or manure, so the finer we make the soil the more plant food we make available. As soon as the hoed crop makes its appearance the hood crop makes its appearance start the cultivator to encourage this important factor in producing maximum crops. Let me say every time the soil is stirred you are supplying the say that the soil is stirred you are supplying the say that the soil is stirred you are supplying the say that the soil is stirred you are supplying the say that the say the olying the requisites to plant growth stimulating heavier yields, and holding the moisture in a reservoir to be drawn later in the season in times of but little labor, and can be successfully raised by any farmer who will give it a fair trial. It does not require rich land, though, of course, the rich er the land the heavier the crop that but makes a splendid bottom for summer operations.

On nearly every farm there are some rich sods that are not yielding a farthing of profit. They may be in fence corners or by the roadside, or in spots in permanent pastures, and could be drawn to the manure shed. In these sods there are a lot of tiny rootlets that, when broken down, will supply a large amount of plant food and humus.

In this manure shed keep one or two hogs. They will be a good investment in treading and mixing the pile. This shed is an ideal place for the boar both summer and winter. He will have lots of exercise, and is a more gretive rooter than the sow. If many fough sods are added in green condition, a sprinkling of caustic lime should be made on every layer. This the compost heap is made outdoors, and care be taken to roll and harrow very little lime should be applied, as it unlocks plant food, and the nitro the land into a fine tilth. A fair crop

FALL FERTILIZING.

In the fall, after the ground is frozen if you will, this pile of manure should be applied to the lands already ploughed. Manure should be kept as near the ground as possible. The general tendency is downward. As the rains and action of moisture dissolvit, the liquid will run through the soil. If applied and harrowed in the grating goes on, the liquid will be absorbed by the granules of soil near the surface in reach of the plant. Very few plants have the power of locomotion to obtain food. Clover is one of them, as I have seen instances where it ran one straight root ten inches in length before running out any feeders.

By this system of incorporating manure in the surface soil we prevent the loss of leaching down in the subsolls. Some advocate ploughing down and then turning back again. My objections to this system is the fresh soil turned up has not had the advantage of weather disintegration, and cannot be made as fine, and you have hoken the convention of the plant.

STRUGGLE IS THE LAW OF LIFE.

In this world wherever there is life there is struggle. We grow so used to it as a perpetual accompaniment of life that we do not always give it its true name only to some forms of wrest ling with difficulty, and think that other lives are easy and struggleless. But always when we come to know these other lives and to examine them with care, we find that they too are engaged in strife, that the difference is merely one of form.

Sometimes one strong man's struggle shakes the world and makes the nations look. Sometimes it wears the nations look. Sometimes it wears the varies of the Monitor:—

Sir,—I was troubled with rheumantiem for about eight years, and tried a great many different kinds of medicines without getting relied. Last could hardly walk. It was then that I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills, and two boxes cured me. I have had no rheumatism since taking them. I am eighty-two years of age, and can walk now quite smartly thanks to this remedy wonder.—(Mrs.) Paul McDonald, Eden Lake, Pictou Co., N. S.

gle shakes the world and makes the nations look. Sometimes it wears the man's soul out in silence, and cannot be told, however, the struggler longs and tries to tell it to his dearest friend. Sometimes it writes itself in haggard lines upon the forchead and the cheek. Sometimes the darker the strife that rages behind so much the brighter the smile upon the face.
Sometimes the struggle is the joy of the life, making it like a perpetual field of trumpets and banners and of field of trumpets and banners and of marching hosts. Sometimes it is all the blackness of darkness, as if a man wrestled day and night for years in a dark dungeon underground with an enemy whom he never saw and only came to know by the untiring persistency of his strength and cunning. Sometimes it is the saint struggling with the last temptation that seems to know him from perfect peacy: sometimes in the saint struggling with the last temptation that seems to keep him from perfect peace; sometimes it is the poor wretch struggling with what seems to be the last effort of the Spirit of Goodness to rescue him from perfect satisfaction and con-will have to touch.

It is one of those things which puthension that there is to be the fulness of life, without struggle, in unhindered of life, without struggle, in unhindered ease and peace. We cannot understand that now, for in this world wherever there is life there is struggle,
And then another thought which follows immediately upon this, and which is also abundantly confirmed by the experience of men, is that with every change in the character of life there will come also a change in the character of the struggle; that goes character of the struggle that goes with it,

As men come to a higher and new life, so they will find themselves in the midst of a new and higher struggle. It is as when a soldier storms a citidel; with each new chamber into which he presses as he comes nearer to the central room which is the key and core of all, where the choicest ways a more and more watchful and formidable enemy.

Only beside the very treasure, only when his hand is laid upon the prize which he has come through all the perils thus far to seek, does he meet the strongest enemy of all, the stout-est heart and the strongest arm that whole citidel can furnish. drances that beset that search—the fickleness of the market, the competitions to indolence, or to extravagance But by and by, perhaps, the man is rich, and then he presses forward in-to an inner chamber of ambition. He aspires to be wise.

He wants to learn. With that wish opens a new life, and with the new life opens a new struggle. In his new-ly built study he fights a fight which his store could, never give him—no longer now against the chances of the market and the opposition of the street, but against prejudice, against street, but against prejudice, against bigotry, against intellectual selfishness against pride, against all in himself and other men that dislikes and dreads the truth; against all this he fights the moment that he becomes a scholar.

A man who has been selfish learns to love. Instantly he is struggling not merely for his self-respect which it was so easy to conciliate but the confidence of his beloved, which can be won only by magnanimous devotion. A man mounts to the thought of charity, and he is wrestling with other men's woes and sorrows, no longer only with his own.—From "The Law of Growth" by Phillips Brooks.
