Aged and Esteemed Maple City Couple Will Shortly Leave Upon a Long Journey.
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrew leave this week for Bedford, Man., where they will spend the winter with their son, George Andrew, an old Chatham boy, but now a leading Manitoba farmer and grain buyer. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew are old residents of this county. Mr. Andrew was born in Kent county, England, and came to Chatham many years ago. Mrs. Andrew was a Miss Dolson before marriage, and was born down the river in Raleigh. Both Mr. and Mrs. Andrew are well up in years, Mr. Andrew being in his 74th year, and Mrs. Andrew in her 71st year. The trip to Manitoba will be a long one for so old a couple. Mr. Andrew found it hardest to say good-bye to his faithful old horse, which has been in his service for nearly 27 years. He was careful to get a good comfortable home for old Tom with a Raleigh farmer. Mr. Andrew has rented his place on Queen street to J. M. Gardiner.

GEO. L. TAYLOR

A Former Resident of Bothwell Writes an Interesting Letter From the far Yukon.

George L. Taylor, formerly magistrate and lawyer, of Bothwell, but now commissioner to the Yukon, writes the following interesting letter to The Planet.

White Horse, Nov. 8, 1901. "Planet," Chatham, Ont. Dear Planet,—I arrived in White Horse on the 9th of September and on the 11th I went to Dawson to be sworn in and had a very pleasant trip down the river.

The distance by water is 455 miles. It takes the boats two days or a little over to make the run.

Coming up from Dawson to White Horse takes from three to five days. The river in this country is very crooked.

If the line were run straight from point to point the distance would not be much over 300 miles.

Dawson is quite a place. The Government are putting up fine public buildings and the place has a look of prosperity about it that gives one a favorable impression.

People have every confidence in it and it looks as if it would be a permanent camp. I saw some vegetables growing there which were as fine as can be raised in Ontario.

They have succeeded too, in raising oats. I was out at the mines while at Dawson. They are getting out lots of gold.

The figures for this year being close to 24 millions.

I like the place very much. It seems strange after being in a flat country like the Country of Kent to find one's self in a valley surrounded on all sides by high mountains.

That is what White Horse is. The mountains separate a little to the south of this place and come together again a little to the north of us, forming a valley with the river running through it.

It is a very pretty situation for a town and, if the copper mines near here are developed in the spring, we should have a good lively town.

Gold is being got at the Big Salmon not far from here. Silver is also being found and coal in abundance.

The Northwest Mounted Police preserve order in this country. They have at present about 50 men stationed there besides officers.

Major Snyder is in command. They are also very much in evidence between here and Dawson, having posts every 40 or 50 miles with three or four men at each post.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce have a branch here and another one at Dawson, doing a large business at both places.

One of the other chartered Banks intend opening up a branch here in the spring.

One advantage we have, we meet all the people going to or coming from Dawson.

The White Pass and Yukon Railway carry their passengers from White Horse to Skagway as they call it here to White Horse, arriving here at 4 p. m.

They have then to wait until a boat is ready to go down the river.

Everything has to be unloaded from the trains here and then be loaded on to the boats.

The railway does a tremendous business and have over a quarter of a mile of freight sheds at this place.

The fare from Skagway here, a distance of 111 miles, is $30 one way and freight rates are something great.

The scenery along the railway is grand, but one should go over it himself to appreciate it.

I have prepared with fur coat, fur cap, felt shoes and other warm clothes, expecting by all accounts I had read of this country to see everything frozen up in September or the beginning of October.

Now on the 8th of November I am wearing my light overcoat and felt hat. If you see any one who wants to go for a pleasure trip next summer advise them to take the C. P. R. to Vancouver, then one of the C. P. N. boats to Skagway just for the sail.

Of course if they have the time let them come on to White Horse or through Dawson, but for a pleasure trip by water nothing can beat the sail between Vancouver and Skagway, which takes three days.

The only place that a person can be sick is coming through Queen Charlotte Sound and that only takes four or five hours to get through. The rest of the way it is delightful.

The engineer in charge of Public Works here, Mr. C. Tache, and his staff left yesterday for Ottawa. Mr. Tache and his family will be greatly missed by the people here as he has done everything in his power to assist in building up this place.

IONE: A BROKEN LOVE DREAM

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY Author of "A Broken Betrothal," "Parted by Fate," "Parted at the Altar," "Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Miss Middleton's Lover," Etc., Etc.

How he planned on that long journey, just to fill in the time pleasantly, what their future would be like, how he should take Ione abroad, and how happy they should be, for the best part of all was, they were wedded for love alone.

He scanned the windows eagerly, each one quickly in turn, but no lovely, girlish face greeted him with an inviting smile of welcome.

He touched the bell hurriedly. "Tell Miss Ione I am here," he said to the servant who answered the summons.

A half hour passed, yet Ione did not make her appearance. She was trying to write him a letter in her boudoir which was to part them, but her hand trembled so she could not hold the pen.

"He would demand to see her anyhow," she thought, "and see her he would, sooner or later. It might as well be then as at any other time."

With the desperation of utter despair, Ione brushed the tears from her eyes, and went slowly down to the morning-room, with a prayer on her lips to Heaven for bravery.

Arthur heard her footsteps, and he knew it was Ione, for her approach was always heralded by the faint odor of heliotrope.

He sprang from the sofa on which he had been seated, advancing to meet her with eager warmth and open arms, but she shrank from him with a pained, scared face.

"You must not touch me, Arthur," she whispered, standing before him as white as a marble statue.

His arms fell motionless by his side, and an exclamation of astonishment broke from his lips.

Was he mad, or dreaming? Had he heard aright? "Arthur," she murmured, piteously, raising those lovely, dark, velvety eyes to his face, "I have that to tell you which must be told quickly; and you must believe, too, that it is no jest; every word comes from the depths of my heart. It is this, Arthur—you and I must part! I give you back your betrothal ring—for your bride I can never be!"

CHAPTER XVIII. A thunderbolt from a clear sky could not have startled Arthur Rochester more than the words that fell from Ione's white lips.

She saw the look of bewilderment on his face, and crept nearer to him. "It is quite true, Arthur," she said, bravely, "we must part."

"Ione," cried Arthur Rochester, in the most intense astonishment, "what on earth do you mean? You are trying to get up a sensation to frighten me, dear, and to test my love for you," and a merry laugh broke from his lips at his own cleverness in seeing through her little ruse at once.

"Hush, Arthur!" she cried. "It is the truth, oh, believe me!" He looked at her curiously. It was no girlish jest, he was beginning to comprehend; the sad, dark eyes, which had great circles under them, were too serious for that.

Had she heard anything regarding him, or was he trying to release him from her? "No," he said, "it could not be that; his life was as clear and open as the page of a book."

"I think," said Arthur, "that I need ask Heaven for patience. You have promised me to be my wife, and now you tell me some barrier has arisen between us to part us. You are cruel to me, Ione. Fate parted us once before; you must not take it into your hands to try to make me miserable again."

"Hush, Arthur!" cried the girl again. "I cannot bear it."

"Ione," he asked, abruptly, "has the colonel repented giving you to me at the last moment?" "No," said Ione, faintly. "It is not that."

"Then I will listen to nothing else," he declared, impatiently. "I will not hear one word more. Nothing under Heaven shall take you from me. I promise you, for I love you too well for that. Why, my darling, I cannot endure the thought, even of life without you. You have agreed to be my wife, and not for anything will I consent to release you—do, pray, plead, say what you will."

She only looked at him sadly, tears falling like rain down her cheeks, answering that it could never be. His anger overpowered him.

was a foolishness. It is all a pretence or subterfuge. I am speaking harshly to you, Ione—I cannot help it. I love you too well to think of losing you with calmness."

A sudden idea came to him. He turned to her quickly. "Ione," he cried, hoarsely, "answer me this: Have you dismissed me to make way for another lover?"

She raised her beautiful face, white with the pallor of death upon it. It was best that he should part from her in anger.

"I am to marry another," she said, gaspingly—"one whom I—I loved long ago."

Those were the words that slew the noblest heart that ever beat in a man's breast.

Before he could reply a servant appeared at the door with a note for Mr. Rochester. He saw at a glance that it was in Colonel Whitney's well-known chirography.

There were but a few words; the note ran as follows: "Mr. Arthur Rochester—Sir: I have concluded to dispense with your services as superintendent of the mills at the close of the present week. Please consider this decision as final. Yours, etc., Colonel Whitney."

The note fairly struck him dumb with amazement and grief. The second time slowly aloud. "This cannot be true," he said, huskily. "I will go to the colonel at once and demand an explanation," he cried, hotly. "I have been too true and loyal to the colonel's interests to be dismissed without a word of warning in this way."

"Stop!" cried Ione. "You must not go to him. I—I—asked him to write that letter to you."

"You!" he cried, recoiling with horror. "Yes," she answered, desperately, choking down a sob.

He turned from her without another word and left her standing there, miserable enough to die.

In hot, bitter anger he strode away. The disappointment was too great—too severe to bear. He took the little golden circlet she had worn, and which he still had clenched in his hand, and threw it far from him with a bitter cry of "Love!"

"Thus do I fling away her love!" he cried. "I think I am brave of heart. It will blast my life, but it will not kill me. I am not the first man whose life has been wrecked by a false, fair woman!"

He would never know that in that self-same moment Ione lay in a deep swoon on the floor of the morning-room, and that the bitter cry on her lips as she fell downward was: "I have parted forever! Oh, would that I could die!"

CHAPTER XIX. Arthur Rochester had gone from Ione's presence mad with wounded pride and wounded love, and the cruel fire of jealousy burning in his veins, vowing that he would never look upon her fair, false face again.

"Good-bye, beautiful dream of my life!" he cried. "Farewell to all my hopes and wishes! I have loved one as false as she was fair; she has wounded me as false women do wound—to the very death!"

Can a man's heart break? The question has been discussed by philosophers, poets and doctors, and no decided result has ever yet been obtained. Can a man's heart break? Had Napoleon's heart broken when he lay down to die at St. Helena?

Did the heart of Charles the First break when he saw the scaffold? Did the heart of the third Napoleon break when he saw his army imprisoned, all his glories and triumphs ended?

If deep, passionate sorrow can break a man's heart, then undoubtedly they die by the hundreds in that fashion. In the face of a terrible sorrow—a man will often fall on his face dead. Does his heart break? Another who has the grief into his heart, and nourish it there, and die after lingering months.

No one can mistake a tree blasted by lightning. No other death leaves such traces. No one can mistake a flower struck by a terrible black blight. So no one can mistake the face of a man whose heart is breaking. It may be cold, cruel, proud, stern, unbending, but the blast and the blight are there.

Arthur Rochester had dismissed the couple, so he was obliged to return to his hotel on foot. He was, on the whole, rather glad of it, for it seemed to him he must seek constant motion or he would go mad.

People in the street who saw him moving quickly away from him, his white, set face and burning eyes started them.

It was the amazed looks of the passers-by that caused him to stop and ask himself where he was going, what he was doing.

At length a policeman stopped him, gently touching him on the arm, asking him if he were well.

"Well? Yes, I am well," he replied. "What do you mean?" "People are looking at you, sir. You are talking to yourself, and seem much excited."

"Excited!" cried Arthur, with a wild laugh. "That is a tame word. I am mad! A woman has driven me mad! They do not fault me, do not seek to detain me, or I shall kill you!"

He spoke so fiercely that the man started aside to let him pass. He looked after him, saying to himself: "He is quite right. If ever a man was mad, he is the man."

THE WORLD'S GREATEST FAMILY MEDICINE.

Triumphs Over Kidney and Liver Troubles and Constipation.

In the medical world of this twentieth century it would be difficult to find a single remedy which has cured so many cases of serious and chronic disease as has Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The phenomenal success of this, the favorite prescription of the famous receipt book author and physician may be attributed to the fact that it is the only preparation extant which has a direct and combined action on the kidneys and liver.

Mr. E. B. Dixon, McGillivray, E.C., writes:—"I have found Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be exactly what I needed. Since 1897 I have been on the construction of the Crow's Nest Pass branch of the C.P.R., employed in all capacities and exposed to all kinds of weather."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Because of their remarkable influence in regulating the kidneys, liver and bowels and thereby curing constipation, kidney disease and liver complaint, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have come to be considered unapproachable as a family medicine.

In late years men have made fortunes out of the tailings of gold mines. The mills in which the ore formerly was crushed and the crude processes then in use allowed a large percentage of the precious metal to escape, and that loss amounted in some cases to a fortune.

THE CREATION OF EVE.

Little Agnes' Idea as to the Bone Connected With That Event.

Little Agnes had been a regular attendant at the Sunday school last winter. The other day the school opened again after the vacation, and the teacher decided to have a general review of all the ground covered by the primary department.

"You may answer, Agnes," said the teacher. "What was the first thing that God made?" "The children," said she, "after Adam was created, how was Eve brought into the world?"

"A half dozen hands went into the air," "Willie Smith may answer," said the teacher. "Made out of a bone from Adam."

"Now, children, that is correct. And from what bone was woman created?" "There was an awful silence in the classroom. Finally little Agnes' hand went up like a shot."

A Short Chat on the Leading Colors

The time has passed when one color was just as fashionable as another. This season it is not a weave in the different colors, but one color in the different weaves. Now-a-days one, two or three colors set the "pace," the other colors are either out of the "race for popularity" or following far behind.

Here's the order they take this season, and few of the weaves in each.

- Browns
In camel hair, sedan cloths, deer skins, broadcloths' panne cloth, venetians and costume cloths.
- Blues
In camel hair, pan cloth, broadcloths, venetians, satin cloths and costume cloths.

- Fawns

IMPRESSIVE LAST RITES

At the Funeral Service of the Late Ex-Ald Peter Rutherford.

Obsequies were Conducted in the Oddfellows, Auditorium in Charge of the Order.

The remains of the late Peter Rutherford, member of Chatham Encampment No. 10, I. O. O. F., and Western City Lodge, No. 93, were taken to Winchester, near Ottawa, yesterday, where interment will take place in the old family burying ground. His brother, James Rutherford, and son Glen, of Blenheim, accompanied the remains. The funeral arrangements were all in charge of the I. O. O. F., of which the deceased was a member.

Service was held in the I. O. O. F. Auditorium at two o'clock yesterday afternoon in the presence of the assembled lodges and of the friends. A choir, composed of members of the William street Baptist, First Presbyterian and St. Andrew's churches, rendered the music. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Speller, of Sarnia, who happened to have exchanged pulpits with the Rev. J. J. Ross. Mr. Speller was also a class mate at Woodstock of the late Mr. Rutherford. The Sarnia clergyman read the following passage from Corinthians:

"Now this I say that flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. Behold I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump. For the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised."

The assembly of those paying their last respects to a departed citizen, opened the service by singing "Nearer My God to Thee," and as a last tribute all sang "Rock of Ages" and fled solemnly from the hall. As they did so each one took a last look at the face of one who had been known so well but whose eyelids were now closed in death.

The casket, containing all that was mortal of the late Peter Rutherford, was then removed to the C. P. R. station and placed on the east bound express. The Lodge and the friends followed the remains to the station. The mourners were Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Rutherford, Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Stevens, Judge Houston, Ald. Scane and Ira Barke.

The pall-bearers were John M. Park, Sam. McCormick, Richard Towl, John Taylor, Wm. Potter and W. H. Moore.

The honorary pall-bearers were Isaac Smith, Hugh Garrett, W. Wing, Archie McCormick, James Holmes and John Turner.

The obsequies will be in charge of the I. O. O. F. Lodge at Winchester.

GOOD SUGGESTION. GOLD MINES OF COLORADO

Dr. Rollin Stevens Tells of his Trip Through This Country.

He Writes his Father a Letter Concerning the Removal of the Precious Metal From the Earth.

N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills, has received a most interesting letter from his son, Dr. R. Stevens, who has been travelling in Denver. Through his kindness The Planet is enabled to publish the following from its contents:—

I left here on the first for Denver, where I met Major Mathersill, a life-long friend of Gen. Alger in the stock business in New Mexico, where the Major resided for several years managing the immense stock farms. Later, for two years, he was Commissary General in Cuba for the U. S. He has been connected with the Big Five Mining, Tunnel and Ore Reduction Co. for five years, and for the last three years or so has given his entire time to it, being an active director and manager. I had correspondence with him with the intention of securing information relative to the mine I was interested in, and had finally wired him while he was on a return trip through Old Mexico, where he had been with an expert to buy some mines for the Big Five. He wired me to meet him in Denver on the 3rd, and I was on my way within two hours. I found my expert, whom he had recommended as being quite reliable, would be unable to go to New Mexico at once, so, as the Major was about to make a tour of the various mines of the Big Five, I asked the privilege of accompanying him and was cordially welcomed.

We went first to the mines at Frances, north of Denver, about 55 miles up in the mountains and at an elevation of 9,500 feet over some of the finest scenery I have seen anywhere. At Frances and Ward the Big Five own six large mining properties, which are mostly old, well known, well developed, wealthy mines, and which have been developed to several hundred feet, the cost of operating in the old way by pumping out water and hoisting ore has become too expensive.

The Big Five have built a tunnel which, with its branches, is more than three miles long, at a depth of from about 1,000 to 1,500 feet. The water now runs out in a big stream through the bottom of this tunnel, while the ore and waste is thrown from chutes into ore cars in the tunnel and run out to the mill at the mouth of the tunnel, or to the cars at the same place, to be taken to the smelter at Denver. Thus a very large expense is saved.

The veins of ore they find get larger the deeper they go. They now work them from the tunnel up, and let gravity do what before required expensive hoisting and pumping apparatus. I went through all the tunnels and climbed into nearly every slope, where they follow the vein above the tunnel. I saw thousands of tons of rich gold ore running from $8 or $10 to $300 or more per ton. We spent two days at the mines and I had a splendid opportunity to learn something about mines and mining. For the Major was very kind to me, explaining everything carefully and taking me with him everywhere while making his trip to see the condition everything was in. I knocked out several samples of ore from the deepest workings and brought them with me.

Then we went to Idaho Springs, where the Big Five is engaged in much larger undertakings. In this region Clear Creek and Gilpin Counties are the richest mines in the country and there is more mineral than perhaps in any other region in the world. These properties are 37 miles west of Denver, in a region noted as one of the most scenic in America.

Idaho Springs is a town of 4,500, situated on Clear Creek at an elevation of about 9,000 feet. The mountains about are honeycombed with mines and prospects. Many of them have been wonderful producers, having yielded from $400,000 to three or four millions of dollars each. The mining region extends east and west about 25 miles and north and south 10 or 12 miles, and there seems to be no limit to the ore. In this region is the famous Gem Vein, on which are located several very wealthy mines. This vein is 30 or 40 feet wide in places, and where it was cut by the great Newhouse tunnel, at a depth of about 2,000 feet, 15 feet of solid, rich ore was found. The Newhouse tunnel goes through the eastern portion of the mining district. It is now in the mountains and it has taken six years to drive it this far. The Major and I enjoyed the rare opportunity of going to the breast of the tunnel to see the men working. The "breast" is the river end of the tunnel, so we were two and a half miles through the mountains and nearly half a mile below the surface. They use air-compressor drills for boring the holes in the hard granite in which they pack an explosive composed principally of such apparently harmless substances as gelatine and Fuller's earth. The drills are 12 feet long and about an inch in diameter. Three of these drills were at work in the breast when we arrived. The roar made by these drills made my ear-drums vibrate and

NEBVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

A CURE FOR IT.

Not a Patent Cure All, Nor a Modern Miracle But Simply a Rational Cure for Dyspepsia.

In these days of humbuggery and deception, the manufacturers of patent medicines, as a rule, seem to think their remedies will not sell unless they claim that it will cure every disease under the sun. And they never think of leaving out dyspepsia and stomach troubles. They are sure to claim that their nostrum is absolutely certain to cure every dyspeptic and he need look no further.

In the face of those absurd claims it is refreshing to note that the proprietors of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have carefully refrained from making undue claims or false representations regarding the merits of this most excellent remedy for dyspepsia and stomach troubles. They may make

THANKSGIVING.

For all the joys which we in common share, Thank outward favors, seen by every eye; For help divine, our human pains to bear, We raise our chorused praise to Thee, on high; But for the hidden secrets of Thy love, Thy whispered messages within the heart, The furing of us to Thy life above—For these, each soul must render thanks apart.

Men's Heavy Ulsters

An ulster is the most comprehensive kind of top coat. Its first business is to protect the wearer and his clothing from the weather, but it can also be made as becoming and effective as any garment in the wardrobe.

While any stout warm material is suitable for ulsters we give the preference to frieze. Its tough, compact texture is more nearly impervious to wind and rain than any other fabric of equal weight, and nothing will stand hard usage better.

You can choose here from a splendid collection of frieze ulsters—big, heavy husky garments that will keep a man snug through a twenty mile drive in zero weather. Woolen linings, high storm collar with tab fastening, correct boxy cut.

Choice of black, dark brown and oxford gray,—every thread wool, whatever the price.

Five to ten dollars.
