The long looked for day arrived and en Saturday, from many parts of the Chatham district, the Saints and friends flocked in to take part in the dedicatory service. The following is a brief account of the day's proceedings.

At 11 o'clock Westland Gragg, of this city, took charge of the service, assisted by Elder B. St. John, of Ridgetown. The speaker was Elder Samuel Erown, of Stevenson, who spoke from the text found in the 14th verse of the 12th chapter of Hebrews, "Follow peace with all men and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." The afternoon service was presided over by Richard Colbourne, of Blenheim, and David Snoblin, of Cedar Springs. The speaker of the hour was Elder Arthur Leverton, president of Chatham district, from John 17th chapter, 17th verse, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth." The speaker showed that to sanctify grace that developed the Christian character was found only through obedience to the Gospel as was taught by the Christ.

Some Startling Disclosures at County Court Criminal Case

Emphatic Evidence by the Prisoner Somewhat Staggers the Court

In his cross-examination Brown ad-In his cross-examination Brown admitted that he kept liquor in the house but denied that he ever sold any to the young prisoner, although he may have given him some. Moreover, as Mr. Lewis pressed his questions, he further stated that dicethrowing was not infrequent, but they shook dice for the drinks and not for money. Unfortunately the character of the case did not allow the further following up of this examination, but the Crown Attorney said at the conclusion he was prepared to receive an information against Brown and follow it up.

Judge Houston also got somewhat of a start at the emphatic manner in which the prisoner gave evidence. It was alleged that the complainant had been quite eloquent in his pro-

DEDICATED

From Debt

Over one quarter of a century the Latter Day Saints' elders have been preaching in our public parks and city halls as circumstances would permit. Each year as a proof of their labors, winning souls for the cause of Christ as a result of these years of hard toil, two years ago they purchased a lot on the corner of Head and James streets and built a neat little unpretentious, white church. Last month the last dollar was paid and it was decided by the Chatham Saints to have a grand

The church was full to the doors and many were unable to obtain seats. Elder Stewart Lamont, president of the Chatham church, was in charge of this service, assisted by Elder A. Leverton. The speaker took for his text Psalm 127, 1, "Except the Lord built the house they labor in vain that build it." From this he made a strong sermon on the church of Christ, figurative and litteral, making clearly the oneness of the Christian church, built on the rock of Revelation. The foundation, doctrine of Christ, and made a strong plea, that as the windows received the light of the sun in day time, and reflects to those outside at night, the electric lights being within, so the Saints of God received the Holy Spirit in its gifts and graces from The church was full to the doors

The preacher was somewhat confused for a moment but finally said, "Yes, run away home," and the little fellow walked back smiling over the fact that he had gained his request. In speaking to the minister afterwards he said, "No doubt the boy thought the sermon was pretty dry and a little water would not hurt it."

Mr. Whitney, we understand, proposes to banish everyything in the way fads and frills from the public schools, to make the teaching of standard subjects more thorough, and to generally carry out the reform he advocated on the stump when in opposition. It is a big undertaking; but Mr. Whitney and his colleagues will make faithful endevor to better the schools and to give the children the benefit of a thorough course in the three Rs. THE READING HABIT.

Only an occasional advertiser in this day considers it necessary to trick the public into reading his announcements. Most business men have learned that it is the habit of nearly all potential buyers to read old man leads us to his room for earnest converse on "what must I do to be saved?" and his heart is so stirred he is found at the soldier's Sunday sunrise service this delightful morning, which means about a mile walk there and back before breakfast. A blessed half hour is spent at St. Joseph's Hospital, where a real restful spirit prevails this lovely Sunday morning; the tidy or derly but busy nurses are at work, the calm collected movements of the sisters need no notice of "silene" on their walls, but it is needed for us unruly outsiders. No more beautiful advertisements in the newspapers. "The people read advertisements," says a prominent agent, "because they read other things and have an interest in what is offered for sale," In this day of first class newspapers at low prices comparatively few persons fail to read a newspaper. The people are intelligent enough to be influenced by plain and sincere arguments.

HENRY IRVING, THE ACTOR AND THE MAN.

In the death of Sir Henry Irving the world loses not a great genius, but a nobly poetic mind; not a great actor in the sense that posterity must judge greatness, but an imposing of green yet unbouched by the cold fingers of winter, the charming homes of our citizens all bathed in glorious sunshine, make pictures that are healing balms and medicines without money and without price. Providence little church on the River Road, Raleigh, built over 30 years ago and lately much improved, have their harvest home to-day. We reach it at eleven; the service of praise is just on their young choir It was character more than art that won for Sir Henry Irving a high place won for Sir Henry Irving a high place in the drama of the English-speaking world. He stood quite alone and his eminence was a lofty one. It has with a good voice himself, will soon eminence was a lofty one. It has been a turbulent career since that dreadful night in 1856 when Irving, then a lanky boy, attempted madly to recall the lines of the Duke of Orleans in "Richelieu" and was hissed from the Sunderland stage. Upward he has gone by slow and laborious steps. There have been few flights. Sir Henry's was not inspirational art. It was work, study, discipline-more work. In the drudgery days of the stock company Sir Henry played no less than 428 distinct characters. That was the foundation of his success, Boundless ambition and a methodical perseverence did the rest. "Hamlet," "Richelieu," "Charles the First,"

"Macbeth," "Richard" and 'Louis the Eleventh"-all these have lifted service at the Home of the Friend-less. Mr. Putnam conducts it ad-mirably, expounds the 103 Psalm, two nice little lassies give us a sweet duet and three older ones a trio; afterward many inmates, the lady visitors, Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Mar-tin and the manager and matron all testify. The matron tells us how these services are enjoyed by the old England's foremost actor to the pinnacle from which the light is now turned in the ripe fullness of his fame. The world knows Sir Henry Irving best for two historic roles, his proach to greatness, his strongest claim to the recognition that art bestows upon the genius of portrayal. They are his "Shklock" and his "Mathias" in "The Bells." No one who has seen that wonderful pisture of a conscience-stricken man ean forget Sir Henry Irving.

That same strength of character, that same force of personality that won for Sir Henry Irving the English-speaking world's appreciation have contributed mightily to the aplifting of dramatic ideals. He set s lofty aim for art. His were high standards. And in his work, in his study, in his tenets, in his life, he lived up to them. It may be argued that so strong a personality inevitably brings mannerisms that mar sharacterization, destroy versatility and prevent the complete illusion which is the essence of art. That undoubtedly is so. Sir Henry Irving's methods, particularly in his latter days, were not elastic. But so profound was his feeling, so sure his touch, so sincere was his interpretation and so firm his grasp upon his role that one was lost in admiration of the man who was playing, rather than the character of the man who fwas being played. It is a potent influence for the highest ideals of art that has gone from us. Time is needed for readjustment. We are not of the class to see in this bereavement the breaking of the last tie between the stage of the hour and the stage of yesterday. The event is lamentable but not calamitous. It is merely grief for a gifted and venerated

JOSEPH MURPHY. Of whom it has been said "He is in Of whom it has been said "He is incarnate Irish humor, one leading peculiarity of which is that he feeds upon himself," will be seen here next Monday, supported by an excellent company. Mr. Murphy's portrayal of Dan O'Hara in his entertaining play, "Kerry Gow," is an artistic creation, and one that this accomplesed comedian has built up little by little to the point of perfect symetry. It has two radically contrasting aspects, one of them Dan, the other Kerry Gow, who is Larry in clever disguise. The transformation is complete and ading; his text is a good one for the occasion, "for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." His sermon was capital, full of bright illustration and warm revival thought throughout. The Sunday school was withdrawn for the day and Mr. Peters, the pastor, announced for special thanksgiving offerings instead of the old time tea meeting, but some way nothing can touch a country community in its every home like an old fashioned tea fight. If Mr. Huff's table is a sample of the way people dine round Providence they assuredly live well. Down comes the rain to spoil the wheeling, so a vasit to a Raleigh Sunday school is proposed, and we scurry home in time to join in the service at the Home of the Friendless, Mr. Putnam conducts it adthem Dan, the other kerry tow, who is Larry in clever disguise. The transformation is complete and admirable. Both characters (or rather both sides to one character, are highly diverting and Mr. Murphy takes advantage of every hint that is offered to illuminate the mirth that is interest in them.

Mr. Murphy is the central figure in "Kerry Gow." He has the sweet est smile-a smile like old Fritz Emest smile—a smile like old fritz Esm-met—and his voice is still possessed of its music. He impersonates the true Irishman, using the Celtic wit to win laughs, instead of low comedy. His pathos is rich and touching.

A unique and beautiful custom among the orthodox Jews is directly responsible for the angular slit in the lapel of the modern coat. The Jew when death visits his household takes a knife and, cutting the lapel, murmurs in Yiddish, "O God, I accept thy judg-ment." This custom has come down from antiquity and is known as "krea" (rending the garment). The cutting of "krea" is associated with such solemn and religious obligations that many a stern Hebrew father, as a punishment for a son or daughter who marries out of the faith, will rend his garment as The act is emblematic of the profoundest grief, but also has its comforting influence, for it accepts with the resignation of the typical religious Jew the will of the Almighty.

A Story With a Moral. A prominent New York banker was dilating on the dangers of deceit. By way of illustration, he told of a so-ciety woman who saw in a jeweler's window a collar of pearls that she She inquired the price and was told $6,000. She gave her check for $3,000, saying she would send her husband to see the pearls, but the jeweler was to tell him they cost only $3,000. The storekeeper was familiar with that sort of game and agreed. The husband came to see the pearls, and that evening told his wife he had asked if he had brought home the collar, whereupon he replied: "No, dear; I had it sent to my mother. You know,

Horrible Heroism One of the Resolution's gunners was standing by his gun as the ship sheered abreast of De Grasse's flag-The gunner was all ready, just going to fire, when a shot came in at knee. As quick as thought the man pulled off his neckcloth and tied his leg above the stump. The next instant he seized his shot off limb and thrust it into the muzzle of the gun, which went off two seconds later. "My foot" shouted the man exultantly, "is the 4rst to board the Ville de Paris."-

ROMANCE OF OUR WEST

THE CAREER OF "LORD GORDON GORDON" AND HIS DEATH.

Death of Chief Justice Bain Permits the Tolling of the Truth About a Great Adventurer of Many Years Ago-Made Jay Gould His Successful Mark, Despite His Youth - A Dramatio Denouement.

Chiéf Justice Bain's recent death in Manitoba recalls a story to one (a London, England, correspondent) who knew the facts of a remarkable romance at first hand, and is now at liberty to recount them for the first time. The late judge was merely a link in a chain of events that had its beginning in a Princess street tewellery shop.

a chain of events that had its beginning in a Princess street jewellery shop, Edinburgh, and ended at Winnipeg. In the early 70's a slight, aristocratic looking young man stepped from a carriage into the jewellery establishment of Mr. Marshall, the most fashionable of its day in Edinburgh. There was evident taste in his selection of various articles of jewellery, and particular interest was shown by him in a small sliver easket of Varetice work. har interest was shown by him in a small silver casket of Venetian workmanship. He instructed that his pur-chases be sent to a fashionable hotel with the bill. Whatever hesitation Mr. Marshall or his people might have had regarding the account was removed by the card handed by the distinguished looking purchaser, which read, "Lord Gordon Gordon," the family name of at least three of the noble families in Britain and a reference to one of the best known divines of the Scottish capital. His appearance in the same shop with this clergyman a few days afterwards completely allayed any doubts of Mr. Marshall regarding payment for the extensive purchase.

Made Jay Gould His Mark. The next the world knew of Lord Gordon Gordon was his appearance in London as a guest of a well-known corporation solicitor. From this shrewd adviser of financial investments the records show that Lord Gordon Gordo borrowed over $10,000. Shortly after-wards he was heard of in New York as a guest at the Astor House. At this time the financial world was agitated by the colossal schemes of Jay Gould and Jim Fisk, among which the wrecking of the Eric Railway, then one of the chief railways of the continent, was a considerable factor.

ent, was a considerable factor.

There is a mystery surrounding the origin of a report which soon spread through Wall Street and into the counting houses of the wealthy and speculative that the good-looking young titled Britisher, registered as Lord Gordon Gordon at the Astor House, was the representative of the British bondholders of the Eric Railway. These interests were great and were presuminterests were great and were presum-holders of the Erie Railway. These interests were great and were presumably hostile to the Gould plans.

The story is told in the newspapers of the time that Lord Gordon Gordon was the only man of the day in the financial world of the United States who dared treat Jay Gould cavallerly. The American millionaire, so runs the account, was kept kicking his heels day after day in the anteroom of Lord Gordon's apartments while awaiting an opportunity to confer with the supposed representative of the British interests in the Erie Railway. The first interview resulted in the great American terriew resulted in the great American capitalist being abruptly shown the door by the apparently insulted young aristocrat. The last resulted in the deposit by Gould of negotiable securities amounting to several millions of dol-lars in the hands of Lord Gordon Gor-don as evidence of good faith on the part of Gould in a transaction where-by the British investors were to be outwitted through the breach of faith of their supposed agent. Then He Went West.

Then He Went West.

The game was a gigantic one, for a boy only out of his teens was seeking to outwit on their own ground the shrewdest financiers of the American continent. He succeeded after a certain amount of vexatious litigation in New York. He escaped successful criminal presentions the succession of the succe inal prosecution through the dublous character of the original transaction and the alleged complicity of Gould in his scheme against the British inves-

Lord Gordon Gordon was next heard of in S. Paul. It was the time of the construction of the great transcontin-ental railway, the Northern Pacific then being built under great financial difficulties. The arrival of a millionaire and a British brd in one and the same person could mean only one thing—investment in the wild prairie lands of the embarrassed resilvay. He was treated royally by the officials. Excursions were made to prospective town sites, a great buffalo hunt was arranged, and on many a site of a now prospective and Delete town peroun Minnesota and Dakota town the historic banner of the Gordons of Scotland and the stars and stripes fluttered before the marquee of a youth who was befooling a continent to the fullest,

But the implacable Jay Gould still had his emissaries on the trail of the young adventurer, and Gordon knew it. In consequence, one day the people of St. Paul learned their a Buffalo hunt had culminated in the arrival of Lord Gordon at Fort Garry, then forming the nucleus of the cits of Winnipeg.

Tre life of Lord Gordon Gordon is well known to the Winnipeggers of the early days. He occupied the home on the estate at Silver Heights owned by the Governor of the Hudson Bay Co., who is known as Lord Strathcons, Canadian commissioner in London. the Governor of the Hudson Bay Co, who is known as Lord Strathcons, Canadian commissioner in London. Lord Gordon Gordon's hospitality was a byword from Lake Superior to the Rocky Mountains. Silver Heights was the centre of the social life of the little settlement on the banks of the Rad river. What if there was a cloud over the past of a gentle-mannered host with fascinating gifts and of lavish gauerosity? The Northwest settlement, the newborn Province of Canada, task him, as was the way of the frontier, for what he appeared to be. The intimate friend of the Provincial Ministers of the Crown, of the judiciary, of the officers of the military, and of the better class of professional men, he also was the comrade of the half breeds and Indians on many a buffale hunt or cance trip into the untraveled north.

Gould Tried Kidnapping.

While Gordon was the guest of subarratherial dinners and the host of sreat hunting parties, Jay Gould had not been idle. Several attempts had been made on hunting trips to invelgle the youth across the border to a spot where he could be arrested on a criminal charge. The crime of obtaining money under false pretenses was not extraditable under the Ashburton treaty, and various were the schemes which Gould tirelessly set in motion to bring Gordon within the clutches of United States law. Kidnapping was attempted twice, and once was almost successful. In the dead of night the chief of police of St. Paul, with two United States constables handcuffed Gordon in his bed at Silver Heights and on wift horses border. The body servant of Gordon, his foster brother it was said, a young Highlander, who was believed to be the sole repository of the secret of his mysterious life, aroused the town of Winnipeg, a few miles away. An armed rescue party was at once dispatched in pursuit. The Attorney-General wired Pembina, the border town toward which the kidnappers had ridden, and great was the jubilation along the Redriver when the news came that the SECURITY

Re-presentations were submitted to the British Government and a long corre-

Toronto Courts Appealed To. Toronto Courts Appealed To.
Folled in this attempt, detectives were sent to Great Britain by Gould to fercet, out the career of Gordon in Scotland. That career, as far as they could learn, began in the Princess street jewellery shop of Mr. Marshall in Edinburgh. Beyond that nothing could be discovered. But pertinacity, time and money can do much, and the agents discovered. But pertinacity, time and money can do much, and the agents persuaded Mr. Marshall to take a trip to Toronto, and there on Canadian soil lay an information against one styling himself Lord Gordon Gordon, charging him with obtaining jewellery under false pretenses, specifically mentioning a Venetian casket of antique workmanship.

In the depths of winter the journey in the depths of winter the journey of the Canadian police officers was made and the arrest consummated one night when a northern blizzard made the trail between Silver Heights and Winnipes aimost impassable. Gordon had taken his arrest with the cool insulance that was his distinguished had taken his arrest with the cool insouclance that was his distinguished characteristic. He sent for his solicitor, John F. Bain, the principal lawyer of the Province, who had been his personal friend and professional adviser hroughout the many complications of his short life in the Canadian West.

Gordon looked thoughtfully for a minute, and the silence in the little house grew oppressive.

"You can go thus far and retain your standard of professional honor, Bain," said Gordon quietly, "you can tell me if those legal papers carried by these men are any good, and if they are sufficient to compel me to appear in a Toronto court."

"They are," answered the lawyer. "Do you notice that they specifically describe that Venetian casket in which is the love letter of Mary, Queen of Scots, to Adam Gordon? You know several people have seen it. That will be sufficient to compel you to appear for trial".

There was some hesitation in the colice officer's face when Gordon put the question to him. "We shall try, and may get through that way. It has been a bad winter, it would be easier to go down through the States."

A Dramatic Denouement.

Gordon looked earnestly at the unsteady eyes of the police officer for a minute and said quietly: "I see it all, Jay Gould has won. Away from Winnipeg, we shall be in Saint Paul in a week and with his money and influence at work it means coviction. I see what it all means, but needs must when the devil drives," said he lightly. "A cold night, isn't it? I must wrap up."

He retired to the bedroom a few steps away, from which the police were aware that there was no other outlet than the door, and he and his servant busied themselves apparently with the questions.

"We shall have to make a searth of the premises, sir," said the policeman.

"In a minute, policeman," said the soft, indifferent voice from the inner room. "Grant, help me with these shoes. Thank you, and now good and faithful old friend and brother—good-bye." And it must have been then, in the clasp of hands, in the semi-darkness, that the fateful casket with its historic contents were passed, for the police officers never found it, and Grant disappeared from the Red river settlement that night.

"You had better hurry a little, sir," said the police officer. "You have many friends in these parts, and I want to get on the road before daylight."

"To Saint Paul," said Gordon appearing in the doorway. "I shall take a shorter road. Good-bye, Bain."

There was a curious smile on his boyish lips and a defiant upraising of this head that recalled the gallant bearing of the gay Gordons of old in senate or battlefield and then—the flash and crash of a revolver shot and Lord Gordon Gordon fell dead in the centre of the room, carrying the mystery of his life with him.

How Much Does Thought Weigh?

How Much Does Thought Weigh?

An interesting experiment was recently performed in one of our colleges. A student, who volunteered, laid himself down flat on his back on a long, narrow board, and was fastened to it by straps in such a way that he couldn't move a muscle. Then the board was laid on a suitable support and carefully balanced, as shown in the illustration. A difficult problem in mental calculation was proposed to the student, and as he endeavored to figure out the answer required, the end of the board on which his head lay began to decend. It was necessary to add several small weights to the ballance to restore the equilibrium.

This phenomenon is due to the fact that the brain requires much more blood when it is working hard. Sometimes the brain will get nourishment at the expense of the rest of the body, for we occasionally see a great mind in a puny, emaciated frame. This is not natural. Nature demands an equilibrium and sooner or later a break-down will occur unless this equilibrium is maintained. If we can supply pure blood rich in nourishment, no organ will fourish at the expense of another. A hearty, happy old age will be assured.

'Improper food is taken into the stomach, and the lack of vitality, lack of proper "blood-balance" does not permit of good digestion. Dr. Pierc's Golden Medical Discovery assists the digestive during and after the influences of grip the "Discovery" will prove of particular value. It has been extensively used as a re-builder after the severity of a rheumatic attack. It is especially adapted in all diseases attended with excessive tissue waste especially in convalescence from the various winter and spring fevers whether of a malarial or typhoid character.

WHY DID SHE DO IT?

She plodded along in the rain, Her progress was certainly slow; Her head wasn't held with disdain; In fact, it was bent rather fow; The desolate droop of her lip— Betokened it sadness or pain As she with umbrella a-drip Just plodded along in the rain.

I marveled what troubled the girl, Why walked she abroad in the storm Her front hair was all out of curl, Her hands were quite red and not warm;

The wind had played ball with her hat,
Her raincoat was splashed at the hem, Her back braids, a-rough, tousled mat Had rain drops a-clinging to them.

The eyes were not blue as the skies,
The tears didn's course down her cheeks;
It didn't give me a surprise—
The greatest I've had for some weeks—
To see that she looked quite alert.
Her case didn't give me a pain,
But still I am bound to assert '
She plodded along in the rain.

To solve me the problem, I pray, Come Sherlock of Infinite skill. The case to depict clear as day I have tried, and I'm certain

At once set the question at rest,
For this I must firmly maintain—
The girl wasn't looking her best,
And she plodded along in the rain.

The Capital.

It is not generally known, says the Philadelphia Record, but it is a fact of history nevertheless that Bristol township, lying on the east side of Germantown, had a very narrow escape from being selected as the site of the capital of the United States. It was a very small matter that turned the choice to ward Maryland and Virginia. So posi tive were some members of congress that the capital was going to be located near Germantown that they purchased real estate there, not, of course, as a matter of speculation, but simply to be near at hand when the removal from Philadelphia to Bristol took place. When the vote of the commis was taken there was a tie, four being for Bristol and four for the District of Columbia. Washington cast the deciding vote, and Bristol township was left out in the cold.

Stop Smoking to Enjoy It Better. An excellent plan for smokers is to abstain from time to time-that is, fast from all tobacco, say, for weeks or a month at a time. This method enables the smoker to enjoy his smoke more when he goes back to it and is less harmful to his health.

"It is a fine scheme," said one man. "When I stop for a month I am equipped with the keenest relish and ng for a good cigar at the end of that month. I am rested, refreshed, recuperated—in pocket too. Thus I show that I am master of my habit, and not mastered by it. I have been doing this way for a long time now and I heartily recommend my plan to all smokers. Austin's Great Anniversary Sale Commences Monday, Oct. 16 WE GELEBRATE TEN

The store will be closed until 9.30 o'clock Monday morning, when it will be opened up with the greatest and best array of bargains we have ever offered the public in Chatham.

We Celebrate Ten Years Continuous Progress.

On Oct. 24th, 1895, we first transacted business with the public in Chatham, and looking back we certainly have much to be thankful for. We have grown from the smallest to be the largest store in the city, from employing 7 assistants until now our staff numbers 65. Then one boy delivered all parcels, now four horses are required for the work; then we were complete strangers to everybody, now we are pleased to number our friends by the score and our customers by the thousand. We appreciate all these facts, and to show that we do, we are going to give our customers some extra special values to remember the occasion by and at the same time wind up the year's record with the largest amount of business we have ever transacted in two weeks of special selling. We intend you shall find bargains all over the store and can only enumerate a few of them here. Come early in order to take advantage of clearing lines.

A Dispersal of Tailored Suits

We've no room for them. Our immense jacket stock requires every available space, so the following thorough reduction embraces every tailored suit in the stock. These are the new prices:

A POOR SUPPER

The boldness of tramps was clearillustrated last Saturday evening, when one of this select society walked up to the rear entrance of Judge Houston's residence and demanded his supper in tones that were anything but courteous. The tramp found out first that no nen were around the house at the time. He asked where the boss was, and received the reply that he was at the Police Station. He was tall, rather good looking and passably well dressed.

After he had partaken of his supper, instead of expressing gratitude, he merely looked at the girl and then at the empty plates and remarked:

("Well, that's a mighty poor supper to hand out to a fellow!"

THE DAWN OF PEACE.

Put off, put off your mail, oh, kings, And beat your brands to dust! Your hands must learn a surer grasp, Your hearts a better trust.

Oh, bend aback the lance's point And break the helmet bar; A noise is in the morning wind, But not the note of war.

Upon the grassy mountain paths
The glittering hosts increase.
They come! They come! How fair their feet! They come to publish peace.

And every tender living thing
Shall feed by streams of rest;
Nor lamb shall from the flock be lost
Nor nursling from the nest.
—John Ruskin.

FINANCES OF GIBRALTAR.

Some Interesting Figures Contained In Recent British Blue Book.

Recent British Blue Book.

The official report on the annual Blue book for 1904 for Gibraltar, just issued, shows that the financial transactions for the year 1904 ended with a surplus of £22,621, the revenue having been £87,545, and the expeaditure £64,924. Exclusive of the receipts under land sales the revenue for the year (£86,737) was £9,722 in excess of that of 1903 (£77,065). The increased receipts from the duty on tobacco furnished £7,751 of this excess. The port dues returned £301 more than in 1903, a greater number of vessels having entered the port. The investment of surplus revenue produced an increase of £1,237.

The receipts from exempts.

The receipts from crown rents were less than in 1903, as arrears of revenue amounting to £1,100 were secured in that year. The expenditure of 1904 (£64,924) was less by £545 than that of the previous year (£65,469). The year ended with an asset balance of £97,357, the liabilities amounting to £4,011. The amount of the invested funds increased from £67,650 at the end of 1903 to £37,638 in December last. While the ordinary revenue had increased from £61,418 in 1990 to £36,737 in 1994, there had been but a small increase in the total annual expenditure, the ordinary current expenditure, in fact, having decreased. The extra duty imposed on tobacco in 1901 largely contributed. ture, in fact, having decreased. The extra duty imposed on tobacco in 1902 largely contributed to the assets, and in 1903 special receipts amounting to £15,275 were obtained from land sales.

How Sir Henry's Son Died.

How Sir Henry's Son Died.

It is difficult to conceive a more shocking suicide than that of the scapegrace eldest son of Sir Henry Blake, Governor of Ceylon, says the Marquise de Fontenoy. The unfortunate man, obviously crazed, filled his belt with dynamite or gun cotton or some other kind of explosive, and then went out riding on horseback along the favorite ride in the suburbs of Perth, western Australia, where he made his home. He seems to have attached a coll of fuse to the saddle, to have lighted that while riding, and then to have allowed himself to be literally blown to pleces from the hips upwards, the horse sustaining such injuries that it had to be shot.

Irwin Blake was a fire leaked.

talning such injuries that it had to be shot.

Irwin Blake was a fine-looking man, of commanding appearance, who had rulned his own career and seriously embarrassed his father by contracting an unfortunate marriage—a marriage, indeed, which led to his being shipped off to Australia, where his wife added to her notoriety in such a manner that when his father, Sir Henry Blake, was appointed about ten years ago to the lucrative governorship of Victoria, with its salary of $50,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciling with the salary of $60,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciling with the salary of $60,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciling with the salary of $60,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciling with the salary of $60,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciling with the salary of $60,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciling with the salary of $60,000 a year, besides its allowances. its salary of $50,000 a year, besides its allowances, he was compelled to deciline what was then the blue ribbon of colonial governorships on account of the presence of his son and the notoriety of his daughter-in-law in the dependency in question. Irwin Blake was the son of a marriage with a girl of humble parentage contracted with Sir Henry Blake in the earlier stages of his career.

Rossini's Criticism.

Very cruel, says an author, was Rossini's silent criticism of a score sent to him by a young musician. Rossini was fond of macaroni. The musician, knowing this, sent him along with his score a packet of macaroni of unusual excellence. In a humble little note he asked the composer to point out the merits of his work if he found any there. Rossini's reply ran like this: "Thanks for your score and the macaroni. The latter was excellent."

CRISIS OF GIRLHOOD A TIME OF PAIN AND PERIL

Miss Emma Cole Says that Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has Saved Her Life and Made Her Well How many lives of beautiful young How many lives of beautiful young girls have been sacrificed just as they were lipening into womanhood! How many irregularities or displacements liave been developed at this important period, resulting in years of suffering!

Girls' modesty and oversensitiveness often puzzle their nothers and baffle physicians, because they withhold their confidence at this critical period.

A mother should come to her child's aid and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will at this time prepare the system for the coming change and start the menstrual period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities.

Miss Emma Coleof Tullahoma, Tenn., writes:

Oear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"I want to tell you that I am enjoying better health than I have for years, and I owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-that to Lydia & Philippin vegesors of the pound.

"When fourteen years of age I suffered almost constant pain, and for two or three years I had soreness and pain in my side, headaches and was dizzy and nervous, and doctors all failed to help me.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended, and after taking it my health began to improve rapidly, and I think it saved my life. I sincerely hope my experience will be a help to other girls who are passing from girlhood to womanhood, for I know your Compound will do as much for them."

If you know of any young girl who is sick and needs motherly advice ask her to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass, and she will receive free advice which will put her on the right road to astrong, healthy and happy womanhood.

The Raven, Many birds seek the protection which the presence of man affords against furred and feathered foes when the breeding season approaches. Not so the raven. Its distrust of us is profound, and its nest is placed in some wild spot far out of reach of our possible attack or succor. But there are other enemies. I know of a pair that built on one side of a projecting crag high up on the cliffs of Rathlin island, Some fierce peregrine falcons occupied the other side of the crag, and when one day their eggs were taken by an adventurous collector they, sharing the popular opinion of a raven's blackness icluded that their neighbors were the offenders and wreaked their grief and vengeance upon them. When, on their ceturn from a foraging expedition, the calcons found their nest despoiled they were seen to hold a consultation, and after much deliberation they suddenly arose and both with one accord flew at the rayens' nest and sacked it, tear ing it in their rage and indignation until not one stick was left upon anoth-

SAVING JIM PETERS

By Mary Donaldson Copyright, 1905, by R. B. McClur

In every village in the land there is a ne'er-do-well who is pitied and condemned in the same breath. In the village of Glenville Jim Peters was the man. He was constitutionally lazy, was a toper from head to heel, and his wife and two children often wanted for clothes and food. Mr. Peters had been struggled with on numerous occasions. Women had given him tongue lashings, and men had hinted at tar and feathers. He had been induced to sign the temperance pledge on twenty different occasions, only to break it each time anybody offered him a drink, and he had been provided with work many times over, only to show his general laziness. One day when the Woman's Mission society was holding its monthly meeting Aunt Hanna Davis brought up Jim Peters' case anew and declared that something should be done. She was given license to go ahead, and she proceeded to go over the old beaten track. Jim signed the pledge, agreed to stop chewing plug tobacco and go to work, and he even expressed an anxiety to "get religion" and become in time a deacon of the church. His good resolutions carried him along for two weeks, and then he fell down, and he fell hard; not only that, but he boasted around that Aunt Hanna was an easy person to deal with. The good woman lived about a mile out of the village, having a farm of her own and enjoying the life of a spinster, and one morning she got up. to be told by the hired man that somebody had robbed the smokehouse over night. Jim Peters was the only person for ten miles around who could be suspected, and when the hired man told his news he added that Jim ought to be arrested and his house searched for the plunder.

"We must not accuse any one without evidence," replied Aunt Hannah.
"It may have been Jim Peters or it may have been a dog. I'm rather of the opinion that it was a dog, and I would suggest that you get out the old bear trap and set it in front of the smokehouse tonight. If a dog steals meat once he will twice, won't he?" "That's what I have heard," observed the hired man as he started for the barn to bunt for the old trap.

Aunt Hannah had started in to reform Jim Peters in earnest mood, and she bragged that she would accom-plish what others had failed to do. When the man backslid she was rebuked and criticised on all sides, and, although she seemed to take it in good part, she felt something of a spirit of

The bear trap was oiled and set, but it was a week before any game appeared. It was the hired man again into the kitchen with the milk pails "Well, Mrs. Davis, we have earght the dog."

"I see," she replied after a look A am

"It's a dog that looks exactly like "Yes? I'll go out after breakfast and have a closer look. I wish you would cut me three or four switches from a peach tree before you go to work. If you hear the dog howling, you needn't stop hoeing corn on that account." The woman lingered over her breakfast as long as she could and when she finally donned her sunbonnet and wandered out to the smokehouse she had several switches, a pail of water and a dipper in her hands.

"Good morning, Mr. Peters," she sajuted when she had come to a halt." "I was looking for my jackknife here last night, and I walked into this old trap," he said by way of expla-

"Yes, I see. Is Mrs. Peters well?" "About the same as usual." "And the children?"

"Hang it, why don't you call Joe up and tell him to get me out of this? This infernal trap has about cut my leg off. If 'twas anybody but you I'd have the law on 'em. Who knows how long I'll be laid up with this leg?"
"Mr. Peters," said Aunt Hannah in very sober tones, "do you remember your promises to me?" "How am I going to keep promis when all the town is agin' me? You are agin' me, too, or you wouldn't have set this trap for me."

"You have been coaxed, bribed, pleaded with and fairly bought, but you still loaf around and get drunk, It is time that some other plan was resorted to. Drink this."

She handed him a dipper of water, and he drank about half of it. He was about to pour the rest on the ground when she said: "I know it has a strange taste to you, but you'll have to get used to it. Don't waste a drop. Here—have some more. "I've had a-plenty." Aunt Hannah picked up one of the switches and proceeded to lay it over Jim's shoulders in a vigorous manner. As it was summer and he had only a ragged cotton shirt across his back he was speedily reminded of his boyhood days. He reached for the dipper and downed a quart of water, and then

Hannah Davis is pizen mean 'nuff to set bear traps for innocent persons you'll be hauled up in law."

"I've heard on good authority, Mr. Peters, that you lick your wife. "If I do she needs it."

"Well, we'll see how a licking goes in your case. We'll try one anyhow as an experiment."

"I'll holler and raise the hull coun-Then the whole county will be here

Aunt Hannah picked out the longest switch, dampened her hand to keep her hold good, and then began the "experiment." Only the third blow had fallen when Peters began to yell, but no pause was made until he had received the thrashing of his life. The woman had the will and the muscle and the sprout from the peach tree was supple and lasting. When about thirty blows had been administered Aunt Hannah paused.

"You see how it works," she said, "and you don't seem to like it. Will you ever whip your wife again?" "I won't promise till you let me out o' this trap.' "Oh, you won't! Then we'll have a little more of it."

Six or eight more stinging cuts were enough for Jim. He promised on his word of honor never to raise his hand against his wife again. He was then handed a third dipper of water, and when he refused it the switch came down over his back, and the woman said:

"You've got to learn to like the taste of water, and you've got to learn here and now. Your children had to go barefoot all last winter because you had to have your whisky. Drink it down or you'll get another dusting." Jim managed to drink the water, and was then asked for his promise not to touch intoxicating drinks for one year "But what am I goin' to do when a feller offers to treat?" he protested. "You are going to remember this," she replied as she gave him half ten cuts and brought a fresh chorus of howls.

He promised. Aunt Hannah went into the house and wrote out a pledge. It was a pledge embodying four or five omises, and after he had taken another drink from the dipper Jim put his name to it. The hired man was then called up to sign as a witness and to pry open the jaws of the trap, and Jim went limping away.

That day marked an epoch in Jim Peters' life. Within a week he had work. He turned to water like a duck, He administered no more thrashing to his wife. In fact, before a year was up he was spoken of as a sober, steady man, and had credit at the stores for the first time in his life. Plenty of people asked Aunt Hannah how she did it, and her answer was alike to

"Why, I first got my bear trap and

Tracing Back a Common Saying. It is a curious bit of literary exercise to take a common saying and trace it back to its origin. Take the common saying, for instance, "All that glitters is not gold." It is found in current literature everywhere and in a dozen different forms. Dryden renders it, "All, as they say, that glitters is not gold." Spenser says, "Gold all is not that doth golden seem." Lydgate has the same idea in the words, "All is not gold that outward sheweth bright." Chaucer expresses it in somewhat different phraseology. Middleton has it, "All is not gold that glisteneth," and Shakespeare says, "All that glistens is not gold." Go a little farther back, however, and the same expression is found is the monkish collection of proverbs, and there is no doubt if a classical scholar were to set to work with the determination to hunt the proverb down, no matter how long it took, he would find it in Latin, Greek and most other ancient and dead languages. It is a natural outgrowth of and is no doubt as old as the science of metal working.

Entrapping Marine Monsters.

On the northern coast of Norway the fishermen get a yearly harvest from the whales which stray into the harbors. At certain localities, where the bays are almost landlocked, lofty stands are erected, similar to the otter outlooks on the north Pacific, and when a school is sighted scores of boats put out and, by the simple process of driving, hundreds of the oil producing cetaceans are entrapped. The Faroe islands are famous for this method of whaling. One of the largest catches ever made was in Hvarfiord, Iceland, where eleven hundred were driven ashore. The blackfish, or whales, come down the Atlantic coasts from the north, encounter shallow water, then follow it along and are naturally led into the cul-de-sac awaiting them. Here the boats easily surround and drive the whales in.

Didn't Catch Then The 7 illowing story of Oliver Wendell Hoimes was told some years ago by a physician who was a student in the Harvard Medical school when Dr. Holmes was an instructor in anatomy One day the subject before the class was the cranium, and a human skull was passed from hand to hand, the instructor asking the members of the class to describe the prominences, cavities and apertures. Student after student gave the names and locations of the orifices, until finally the inquiry narrowed down to one opening which baffled every one.

Dr. Holmes waited patiently for some one to distinguish himself, but said:
"I say, I want this trap taken off.
Do you think I'm a man of wood or iron? When I tell folks that Aunt some to distinguish nimser, but no explanation was advanced. When all had given it up, the doctor rather dryly remarked: "That is Holmes' hole.

I made it myself."

Oxford Chancellor Range

One of the troubles ing ranges is the lack of hot water. The usual reservoir is of small capacity and not placed near enough the fire to raise the water to a sufficiently high temperature, and it takes considerable time and fuel to heat the water at all.

The Oxford Chancellor wood-burning range is fitted with a large reservoir of planished copper, which is easily kept clean. This reservoir is placed next the fire-box, and therefore the water heats very quickly and to a high temperature. The reservoir may be detached or attached to the range in five minutes by anyone.

Senator Fulford May Die.

Newton, Mass., Oct. 14.—The condition of Senator George T. Fulford of Brockville, Ont., who was injured Sunday in an auto accident, in which his chauffeur received fatal injuries, was not encouraging last night. At the Newton Hospital, where the Senator Nes, it was stated he was steadily losing ground, and that his condition was critical. The extent of Senator Fulford's injuries had not been definitely determined by the attending physicians, but it is believed that he is hurt internally. The Senator's recovery is considered doubtful.

Missing Girl Located.

Chatham, Oct. 14—Mary Kate Milward, who has been missing for three days, was located yesterday at the retidence of Mrs. Clark, in Harwich Township. The girl begged for her father and the roller mat to take ship. The girl begged for her father and the police not to take her home, but to permit her to remain where she was. She said she was frightened of her stepmother. She said that just after her father's departure early Wednesday her stepmother had cruelly beater, her and refused to let her go to school. She left her and escaped by a downstairs window.

TO STOP A CRYING BABY.

Babies cry because they are siek. It may be a pain in the stomach, colic, or cramps,—but in any case a few drops of Nerviline soothes away the distress and allows the baby to sleep peacefully. Where there are young children there should also be Nerviline. It cures all the minor ailments just as promptly as the doctor and not so expensive. For nearly fifty years Polson's Nerviline has been the great household remedy of Canada. Sold everywhere in large 25 cent bottles.

Britain and France Against Germany in Morocco Crisis.

Paris Figaro Gives Circumstantial Story of Alleged Events-Says British Government Made Three Distinct Overtures - France Declined Them, But Afterwards Repented and Sought Help - Britain Assured Kaiser of Matin's Untruth.

Paris, Oct. 14. The French Govern ment continues silent concerning the alleged revelations of Great Britain's offer of naval and military aid to France if Germany assumed a belligerent attitude over Morocco. In the meantime the newspapers add new phases to the disclosures. The Figaro gives a detailed version even more sensational than the previous alleged the prev gives a detailed version even more sen-sational than the previous alleged dis-closures of The Matin. The Figaro's Stery.

Before the Moroccan crisis became acute the British Government made three distinct overtures to learn if France was disposed to conclude a treaty of defensive alliance. France declined to consider the question. Later when the Moroccan crisis became acute M. Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador to Great Britain, re-opened the question and obtained a verbal assurance from Foreign Secretary Lansdowne of Great Britain's effective concourse in the event of a confiagration. M Carbon was thereupon able to announce to M. Delcasse (who was then Foreign Minister), that if a casus feederis (case coming within a treaty) was desired Great Britain would reiterate her assurance in writing. The German Ambassador in London. Count Wolf. desired Great Britain would relief the her assurance in writing. The German Ambassador in London, Count Wolff-Ambassador in London, Count Wolff-Metternich, learned of these assurances and informed Berlin. Emperor William decided on a counter move and made Italy the medium of its execution. He informed Italy that any treaty whereby Great Britain gave France military support relative to Morocco would constitute a casus belli,

Not at His Factory.

Brockville, Oct. 14.—The people of Mountain Station and vicinity and particularly the patrons of Mountain No. 1 cheese factory are exercised over the disappearance of Joseph Wilson, proprietor of that factory. Wilson went to Kemptville en the neon train Monday and was expected home that night. He failed to return at the appointed time, and next morning there was nobody to receive milk at the factory when the patrons came around.

Subsequent investigations showed that Mr. Wilson had cashed two cheese cheques on Alex W. Grant & Co. of Montreal at a local bank amounting to $700, and gone on to Prescott that same afternoon. Previous to leaving he had collected money for the sale of cut cheese in the Village of Mountain.

The St. Bernard Pass. The examinations made at the Great St. Bernard show that the pass was not only used by foot passengers, but by horsemen in Roman times. It seems that it was a safer route in the time of Vitellius than until the last few years. Excavations demonstrate that there were two buildings, much farther apart than is the present road. There was a temple there, and some fifty votive tablets have been found. It must always have been a place of refuge, though often subjected to attack. SIR HENRY IRVING'S DEATH

Last Words of the Tragedian Those Spoken By Becket As He Dies, "Into Thy Hands, Oh Lord!"

London, Oct. 16.—Seldom has the death of a public man in England calldeath of a public line in large and ed out such a universal expression of sorrow as has followed the tragically sudden death of Sir Henry Irving at Bradford Friday night. Appreciations, histories of his career and stories of histories of his career and stories of his many-sided activities, fill the newspapers. His last words on the stage as the curtain was rung down on the death of Becket, "Into thy hands, oh Lord, into thy hands," were practically the last he uttered, as he never spoke after his collapse in the hall of the hotel, where he died.

His last expressed wish, the wish of his life, was for a municipal theatre, where everything would be of the lighest order, where the standard of true drama as distinguished from miscellaneous entertainment would be successfully upheld. A realization of this wish would be a fitting monument to him."

In Westminster Abbey.

It is likely that Sir Henry Irving will be buried in Westminster Abbey, in the poets' corner where lie the bodies of Garrick, Mrs. Siddons and other theatrical celebrities.

Flags were placed at half-mast on many of the theatres in London Saturday, and the afternoon and evening performances in the theatres throughout the country closed with the orchestras playing a dead march. At the Queen's Hall concert, Chopin's Funeral March was played, the vast audience standing.
