THE GOOD TIMES COMING.

Grandma Goff said a curious thing—

"Boys may whistle, but girls must sing."

That's the very thing I heard her say

To Kate, no longer than yesterday.

"Boys may whistle," Of course they may,

If they pucker their lips the proper way.

But for the life of me I can't see

Why Kate can't whistle as well as me.

"Boys may whistle, but girls must sing,"

Now, I call that a curious thing.

If boys can whistle why can't girls, too?

It's the easiest thing in the world to do.

First you do that when you do this—

Just like you were fixing up for a kiss.

It's a very poor girl, that's all I say,

Who can't make out to do that way.

"Boys may whistle," but girls may not

A whistle a song with the noise knocked out.

Strayed off somewhere down the throat,

Everything lost but the cheerful note.

So if boys can whistle and do it well,

Why cannot girls, will somebody tell?

Why can't they do what a boy can do?

That is the thing I should like to know.

I went to father and asked him why

Girls couldn't whistle as well as I.

And he said, "The reason that girls must sing,

Is because a girl's a sing—lar thing."

And grandma laughed till I knew she'd ache.

When I said I thought it all a mistake,

"Never mind, little man," I heard him say,

"They will make you whistle enough

some day."

Interesting Story.

Boys who Became Famous.

Near the mouth of a pit in one of the great collieries of the north of England, a good many years ago, a young lad was sitting on the ground, seemingly engaged in modelling something out of the soft clay.

At first sight you would have thought him a perfect savage, and certainly he did not look very respectable. His bare feet were as hard and black as the lumps of coal that lay strewn around him, his face was grimed up to the very roots of his close-cropped hair, and his entire clothing consisted of a pair of tattered fustian pants thickly smeared with coal-dust, and a ragged shirt of coarse flannel stained with grease, soot and dirt.

But the large, deep, thoughtful eyes with which he looked so keenly at everything around him were not the eyes of one who would be content to do nothing more all his life than handling a pick-axe or wheeling a barrow of coal; but his thin lip and massive jaw told of an iron resolution which no peril could daunt, and no difficulty wear out. So completely taken up was our hero with what he was about that he seemed quite unaware of the presence of two of his comrades who were watching him from a little distance. He is a soft chap, you said, said the bigger of the two contemptuously. "Instead of takin' his fun like the rest of us, drinkin' beer an' actin' the dogs of fightin' he's always messin' in the clay like a baby."

"He be a clever lad, though, for a dog," answered the other. "See what he's making there? It's a model for our engine as like as can be."

"So 'tis forartin'," said the other, looking wonderingly at the model; "it's as like as if 'twas it."

"Ay, and he be 'arnin' to read too; he walks three miles to school thrice a week, after work's done."

"But what good'll that do him?" cried the taller man; he'll just be a poor collier like the rest of us."

"You're wrong there, Jack," said the young modeller, overhearing the last words; "it's just because I don't mean to be always a poor collier that I'm 'arnin' to read, for a man can do naught if he's without that."

"Thy schooling won't help thee much, though, Geordie, when thee joins Tom Nelson's gang to-morrow," answered Jack with a hoarse laugh. Tom's nose for fighting than reading, and he'll do thy jacket."

The next morning there was a great stir at the mouth of the Callerton Pit. Black Tom Nelson, the bully of the works, was pouring a volley of coarse abuse upon "Quiet Geordie," as the young modeller was called by his comrades, for some alleged dumsiness in doing his work, and everyone was anxious to see how he would take it.

"Well, I appeal to these men here who stood by and saw what I did," said Geordie, with perfect composure, although most lads of his age would have been grievously scared by the bulky frame and thundering voice of the bully, and by the threatening whirl of his sledge-hammer fists. "If they say I did wrong I'll give 'em."

"None of your appeals for me," roared Black Tom, stamping his huge foot fiercely. "I say thee did bungle the job, and if thee won't give in I'll thrash thee."

The young brakeman's eyes flashed fire, but his tone was still as quiet as ever.

"I don't want to quarrel with you," said he firmly; but if you won't let me do my work in peace without a fight, meet me this evening in the Dolly Pit field at seven o'clock, and you shall see whether I'm a coward or not."

At this bold challenge Tom Nelson was as much astonished as Goliath when confronted by David. But he was always ready for a battle, and this time he accepted all the more willingly because he felt certain of winning.

The other men were of much the same opinion, and when the time came and the slim, half-grown youth stood face to face with the brawny champion who had beaten so many strong men already, the utmost that one could hope was that poor "Geordie" might not be killed outright. But that slender frame held a spirit which in after years was to face the opposition of all England without giving way, and the lookers-on soon perceived to their amazement that Black Tom, big and powerful though he was, was likely to have no easy work of it.

George, far lighter and more active than his bulky adversary, kept moving nimbly around him, avoiding his hammer-like blows with a dexterity which made the baffled bully doubly ferocious. Seeming to grow cooler as his enemy grew hotter, and receiving without flinching several hard knocks which he could not avoid, he drew Nelson hither and thither all around the battle-field, till the hulking pitman was quite out of breath. Then George darted in like lightning, and made his blows tell in earnest. Thrice the enraged bully rushed on like a mad bull, and thrice he was sent reeling back, bruised and battered, amid the uproarious cheers of the astonished and delighted spectators. At length a well-planted blow sent him sprawling on his back. Up he jumped, more furious than ever, but only to go down again, a few minutes later, before a still heavier blow.

"Well done, Geordie!" shouted half a dozen hoarse voices at once. "You chap, wunnot ca' thee a coward again."

"I hope he is not badly hurt, though," said the conqueror, anxiously; "I didna mean to hit him too hard."

"Oh, he be a' right," said a rough Tyne man, raising the fallen bully and propping him against a fallen log. "He's met his match, Geordie, and there's won thy hardest fight."

"Not my hardest, mate," answered Geordie, smiling. "A' the trouble I had to thrash you chap was naught to what I had wi' 'arnin' to write my own name."

"Can thee write thy name, then?" cried three or four of the pitmen, to whom such an accomplishment seemed little short of miraculous.

"Ay, that I can," replied the boy, with a beaming face. "Look ye here!" And taking an iron-pointed stick from one of his comrades, he traced in the dust, slowly but correctly, a row of large letters, at sight of which the crowd broke into cries of wonder and admiration.

In truth, their admiration had better grounds than they themselves imagined; for not a few of them lived to see their young "Geordie" famous from Red Sea to the Atlantic, and to behold the name which he had written in the dust engraved forever in history as that of the greatest English engineer of his time—George Stephenson.

Waiting Orders.

He looked something like an old child, his face was so rosy and the sparse locks shading it so white. He had, too, the good humor, the trusting smile, the care-free look of one who has naught to do in the world, who is only amusing himself with life.

But there were those living in the block who said the old Captain had an errible temper, and that his eye could flash with fury, and his hand clutch with anger, if there was a cause. When a poor besotted wanderer crawled into the doorway to sleep, and a man's brutal hand was raised to strike her, he had stepped between and bade the woman go in peace, giving her the means to pay for a lodging. He was often imposed upon. The professional beggar told a whining story and went away with a fee. "His blessing was worth that trifle," the Captain said when remonstrated with for wasting his charity.

The dilapidated old brick building in which he lived had a most pretentious name. It had been a scheme of some sort of co-operative living, and like all such, a failure. Yet over the door in large raised letters appeared that word synonymous with unrealized hope: "Utopia."

That the old Captain was one of different mold from the down-at-heel population about him was evident from a glance. But that did not deter him from forming friendships with the comers and goers—and the bestowal of a moral almsgiving—that made them conscious of their own defects and sent them to character-building.

"You are not going after milk in that state, Polly?" he said to the ten-year-old daughter of the seamstress, who shuffled out in ragged slippers and torn shawl in the early sunlight. "I'll get the milk while you run and make yourself tidy, my dear."

He built a ship for the lame boy whose pale mother worked for the shops, and he explained to him every rope and spar, and taught him the nautical phrases of the craft. On the bow of the boat picked out in golden letters, was the name "Alice."

"Was it named for anyone?" asked the child, thoughtlessly.

"It was named after my—mate," the Captain said gently, as he looked out through the high window on the heaven beyond.

"Where is your—mate?" asked the boy with a vague curiosity.

"She is sailing on the unknown seas," said the old Captain in the clear tones he had been wont to use in command, "she is cruising among the Blessed Isles, watching for a passenger who is always ready. Then she will send out a skiff manned by a boatman pale—hark, boy! I thought I heard the dip of the silver oars—it is my mate coming for me. I am only waiting orders now."

That was what they always heard him say of himself, that he was waiting orders. It was a pretty fiction of the government for its retired officers—they were under waiting orders.

But the ignorant people among whom the old Captain lived expected the arrival of state documents and dreaded them, for then they knew their good old friend would be gone. Into active service, they believed.

But the old man with the child's face and heart went in and out among them, and seemed to grow no older. And he helped lame Johnny with his lessons, and encouraged him to be honest and sincere. And he taught little Polly that order was Heaven's first law, and told her of the discipline of the boat on which he had served so many years. And he played melancholy airs on a wheezy old flute and charmed the babies into the land of sleep and silence, like a second piped Piper of Hamelin. And when some of his old friends in their fine uniforms called to see him, he took the little troubling children by the hand and spoke no word of reproach. And so they dearly loved the old Captain who was waiting orders.

And one day the orderly of Death was sent with the sealed despatch. No one saw him enter, but when the children, weary of waiting for their friend, invaded his room, he was gone. At first they thought he was asleep, and when he neither smiled nor spoke, and when he neither heard his name nor their mother's came and wept over him, they knew he had heard the plash of the silver oar, and gone away with his mate. In another way from that they expected he had received his waiting orders.

Genius and Long Life.

There is a proverb which says, "Those whom the gods love, die young." It is sometimes inferred that this means that men and women who are in any way unusually endowed, are usually short-lived. It is by no means proved, however, that persons of genius are any more apt to die young than more prosaic people. There are, of course, many instances of talented men and women who have gone early to their graves; and it is a somewhat striking fact that thirty seven has been a fatal age to quite a number of brilliant geniuses whose fame is still great in the world. Byron, Shelley, Burns and Raphael all died about their thirty-seventh year. On the other hand, multitudes of instances might be cited of men who, had they died before their thirty-seventh year, would never have been heard of by the world; and multitudes of others who, while winning some degree of fame before that age, greatly increased it in later years.

Goethe was a surprising example of this. Had he died at thirty-seven, his fame would not have equalled that of Schiller; the work he did in middle life carried it far beyond that of his German rival who died so much earlier. If Milton had died at thirty-seven, we should not have had "Paradise Lost." At that age George Eliot had not written anything that contributed to the great reputation she won at last.

We cannot doubt that the genius of Byron and Shelley, of Keats, Chatterton, and Henry Kirk White, was very far from being exhausted at their early deaths. Death, indeed, found these young geniuses all afire with inspiration, and ardently longing to give expression to greater thoughts than they had ever yet uttered.

If we turn from literature to political life, it is really surprising to see how great ability, far from exhausting physical powers, and wearing out its possessor before his time, seems actually to sustain his vigor and lengthen out his days.

It is true that Pitt died at fifty and Gambetta at forty-four. But where we can point to an isolated instance, here and there, of a man of political genius dying before or in middle life, we find a long list of those who have grown gray and bent in the heat of political conflict. In our own time, we have seen Gortschakoff, a man over eighty, controlling the destinies of the vast Russian Empire; Thiers, a man of seventy-seven, presiding over the French Republic; the Emperor William, a man of eighty-five, ruling the newly-united Germany; Gladstone, a man of seventy-four, proving himself the most vigorous Prime Minister in this century; and Von Moltke, a man of eighty, commanding the German armies.

The vitality of genius, indeed, is far more evident in the biography of the world than its destroying power. It is so rarely that a poet or an author exhausts himself in a single work, or an orator or a statesman in a single great speech or great legislative measure, that such instances are quoted as curiosities.

On the contrary, the rule seems to be that a man of genius is not only likely to live long, but to go on producing, and maintaining his mental vigor, until he is overtaken by the shadows of old age. Michael Angelo was still a great sculptor and architect at eighty; Titian painted finely in his eightieth year. Victor Hugo at ninety-two was still writing eloquent and fiery stanzas. And in our own country the examples of Longfellow, Holmes, Bryant, Whittier, Emerson, and Irving are enough to remind us how our literature has been enriched by men who have passed the psalmist's limit of threescore and ten.—Youth's Companion.

Served Him Right.

There is material for half a dozen sermons in the following anecdote. No one will question who was the true gentleman:

On a Fort Wayne train approaching Chicago there was a short-statured, straight-haired, copper-colored Indian, trip to the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa. He wore a nice suit of clothes, which fitted him badly, and a paper collar without a neck-tie.

He attended strictly to his own business, and was unmolested until a young fellow came into the smoking-car from the sleeper.

"An Indian, I guess," said the young

Don't Drink.

The Spartans who lived in ancient Greece used to make their slaves drunk once a year, to show their children how foolish and despicable men looked when they were intoxicated.

Lycurgus of Thraee ordered all the vines to be cut down. Mahomet commanded drunkards to be bastinadoed with eighty blows. Everybody in these days feels ashamed of inebriates, even while they may be very sorry for them. Every boy who takes a glass of beer is certain he shall never be a drunkard, but too often the appetite grows, and at twenty he is what at fourteen he would have loathed himself to think he could be. The only surety against the body, and so affects the brain that one does not know what he is doing.

Sore Eyes.

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely cured.

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gege, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and other remedies, to no purpose. I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and three bottles of this medicine, have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendall T. Haven, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now look steadily at a brilliant light without pain. Her cure is complete.—W. C. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., AUG. 3, 1888.

The Morning Chronicle of the 28th ult., contains a long article on "Acadia Iron Mines," in which the writer makes a strong plea for unrestricted reciprocity and thus indirectly a bid for votes for the Liberal candidate at the coming contest in Colechester. Comparisons are made between Pennsylvania, Alabama and Nova Scotia with reference to their iron industries, which are most unfair and unjust. The two former places have enjoyed, for a period of years, a very high production, and under it have grown and developed until they have become great iron centres, while Nova Scotia may be said to have had but very little protection till 1887, and the present Canadian duties on iron are very much lower than the corresponding ones in the United States. It could hardly be expected that the same result could be produced in Nova Scotia in one year, that it took many years to produce in Pennsylvania, were the circumstances equally favorable. But when we consider that the Canadian tariff is only about two-thirds of the American, the comparison becomes still more unfair. To make a fair comparison both places should have the same protection, the same length of time. Another element also enters into our consideration which is quite an important one. In Pennsylvania a ton of coke will produce a ton of pig-iron, while in Nova Scotia it takes very nearly a ton and a half, the latter containing much more ash than the former. So granting that a ton of coke can be produced in Nova Scotia as cheaply as in Pennsylvania (which we doubt), the latter has still an advantage of nearly 50 per cent in its favor.

The friends of unrestricted reciprocity seem to think that it is a matter that is entirely at the disposal of Canadians and that the neighboring Republic has no say in the matter at all. We have no reason to believe that the United States will listen to the proposal at all. Past experience would teach that unless it is greatly to the advantage of the Americans they will have nothing to do with it. We think those who are in search of some political platform should adopt one, about the accomplishment of which there can be no doubt. Those who have caught on to this cry, have abandoned the cry of free trade altogether. If their argument means anything it is that Canada is insufficiently protected and in order to become more prosperous she must cast in her lot with a country that has a much larger protective tariff.

It will be time enough to talk about opening the markets of the world to our iron industry, when we produce more than enough to supply the home market. It will, however, be a good while before that can be done. It will be some time before we can produce even half the quantity required in Canada. Since Confederation Canada has imported, annually, iron, to the value of $20,000,000.

The St. John, N. B., Evening Gazette says: "Speaking of his recent visit to Wolfville, Edgar Wakeman, the poet tourist, has said: 'Along with the intense enjoyment experienced in visiting the village, there almost instantly came a sense of regret that the full measure of poetic historic interest attaching to it is lost in practical value to its inhabitants and delight to the visitor in the unfortunately inappropriate name of the place. It should be Acadia, Acadia, Acadia, or perhaps better than all, Acadia, &c.' We believe there is not a town or village in the Province of Nova Scotia bearing the name of Acadia and certainly there is none the name could be applied with so much accuracy and appropriateness as Wolfville, and Mr. Wakeman's suggestion is worthy of careful consideration. There is a value in names which cannot be ignored. No matter how commonplace a name may be, if it is published over the signature of one who has acquired fame, it is read. The veriest nonsense if found within the covers of the Nineteenth Century, is at once credited with profundity. But Wolfville is Acadia, the village and its surroundings are worthy of the name: here is the theatre of Longfellow's immortal idyl and why should its identity be longer concealed? Let Mr. Wakeman's suggestion have a careful consideration."

M. General in the American Geographical Society Bulletin shows that the world is not yet overworked. He finds, allowing five acres to each inhabitant, that Europe has yet room for an additional population of 115,000,000; Africa for 1,336,000,000; Asia for 1,402,000,000; Oceania for 515,000,000; and America for 2,000,000,000. This estimate does not include the frozen regions of Asia and Europe, but Arctic America is assumed to be fit for cultivation.

Continued.

Dr Allison introduced Dr J. G. Fitch, of London, who read a paper on Hand Work and Head Work in Schools. "There had of late been a strong wave in favor of technical or manual training. The demand is a popular one and it is well to examine its different meanings. The desire to obtain instruction in handicraft to prepare workmen for their calling. 2d, Seeking to prepare a scholar in any special line of manual work meant to make him generally useful. 3d, In fitting the child for life, that purely intellectual faculties should not be exclusively cultivated. These three ideas can be defended on general grounds." Dr Fitch sketched, at some length, the work done by the Belgium schools, which he visited last year,—in the line of technical education, showing that at these schools two or three hours a day were spent in cognate studies, to the development of the student's faculties. The object was technical instruction in its definite relation to the pursuits the students would follow in actual life, but from the very first technical culture was deemed indispensable to this training. Head and hand work are closely united.

"The supreme aim of education is the development of the whole human being. It is not merely by receiving ideas but by giving them expression that we advance. A thought may be expressed in words or by some product of the finer senses, or of the skilled hand. Every school has pupils who rebel against verbal exercises, but who delight in object lessons, in realities. We ought to accord individual preferences more scope than is now given in our school programmes. It would be a queer world if all boys and girls liked the same things. By technical education we give a better chance to all scholars. Two results had followed the introduction of the kindergarten system. First, the infant schools were made more attractive to children and their parents, and the schools were made more happy. Second, it was found that the children progressed more rapidly and more easily in the three R's than before, despite the withdrawal of some hours weekly for manual exercises. There was no antagonism between manual and physical training. It must be admitted at once that for all scholars some general training in hand work is useful, but intellectual culture is the first business of a school. There was room in our schools for increasing manual training, but the change should be made with caution. The world can never be set right by dethroning the schoolmaster to make room for the artisan." In this address Dr Fitch evinced a complete knowledge of the live-school questions of the day. To sit at the feet of a man of such varied experience and knowledge is a treat the common school-teacher seldom enjoys.

Colonel F. W. Parker of Cook County Normal School, Illinois, was the next speaker. He uttered many stirring truths in a humorous and forcible manner. His subject was, "The Artist or the Artisan, Which?"

THE EVENING SESSION. The subject for the evening was, "The Influence of the College on Industrial and Social Life." The speakers, except Prof. Roberts, were the Presidents of Acadia, Dalhousie, N. B. University, Mt Allison, and Prince of Wales Colleges. It is impossible to give anything like a correct idea of the excellent addresses made by these leading educators in the Maritime Provinces. It was admitted, that the bringing together of the college men at a Convention of this kind, will be productive of great good to schools of all grades. The meeting was large and the various points discussed will provide thought for reflection and topics for discussion for a long time to come.

THURSDAY MORNING. The Convention met in sections in different rooms, in the school buildings, throughout the city. The sections thus meeting were the Normal School, Inspectors, High School, Advanced Common School, and Primary School Sections. Each of these attended to special work in its own line, and by the reading of prepared papers and the discussion of such topics as these suggested, accomplished one of the grandest aims of a Teachers' Convention. All the meetings heard from proved successful in a high degree.

AFTERNOON SESSION. One of the most interesting features of the Convention was the address of Mrs F. W. Parker, the subject of which was, "The Delart system of Expression." The Delart system, she said, takes into consideration the idea of development. It recognizes that the voice and body must be trained. It also deals with the study of character through these expressions. It recognizes the language of expression. Mrs F. illustrated certain forms of expression—the pose of the head, the expression of the features, the manner of speaking, the carriage of the body and other outward forms of expression. The primary teacher should take care that children learn grace of motion, learn to avoid a needless waste of energy, and avoid reading in that awful way so common among us. They should insist in reading, that the child first master the thought. Form without the thought in the Delart system is not allowed. By special request she illustrated the system, by reciting a dialect piece, "Katie's Answer."

Miss Harriet C. Magee, of the Oakbrook, Wisconsin, State Normal School, read an interesting paper on "Art Education," which contained many useful and practical suggestions.

Dr Allison, the closing speaker, addressed words of encouragement and congratulation to the teachers composing the Convention. The speakers of the evening were, Dr Fitch, Sir W. Dawson, Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Hon. Mr Ferguson, Dr Allison, and Col. Parker. Dr Fitch spoke of the pleasure the Convention had afforded him, and of the kindly recollections he would carry across to England with him. He extolled the object of the Convention, eulogized the teaching profession, and dwelt briefly upon the art of teaching and the philosophy that underlies it. He emphasized the point that the science of teaching was a progressive art, and was yet in its infancy. Sir William Dawson discussed the College question raised by Dr Schurman, relative to substituting history and literature for Greek and Latin in the college curriculum, and concluded by urging the younger teachers to follow the injunction, to be gentle to all, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those who oppose themselves. Hon. G. E. Foster, Finance Minister of Canada, was next introduced. Without disparagement to any he thought the teaching profession was higher and better than any other. You may talk, he said, of ministers and their work, but it seems to me that take them high and low the schools are the greatest institutions in the world. The preachers get hold of the gnarled trunk; but the teacher gets hold of the child in its tender innocence. He has the fertile soil in which to sow the good seeds to produce good fruit in an ever-broadening development. He condemned the cast-in-system of college and university teaching which closes the life out of a man by compelling him to study mathematics, when he has no aptitude for it. He pleaded for more appreciation of the teachers and their work, more salary and more holidays.

Evening Session.

Sir Leonard Tilly, Lieutenant Governor of N. B., presided at the closing meeting of the Convention. He addressed words of encouragement and congratulation to the teachers composing the Convention. The speakers of the evening were, Dr Fitch, Sir W. Dawson, Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Hon. Mr Ferguson, Dr Allison, and Col. Parker. Dr Fitch spoke of the pleasure the Convention had afforded him, and of the kindly recollections he would carry across to England with him. He extolled the object of the Convention, eulogized the teaching profession, and dwelt briefly upon the art of teaching and the philosophy that underlies it. He emphasized the point that the science of teaching was a progressive art, and was yet in its infancy. Sir William Dawson discussed the College question raised by Dr Schurman, relative to substituting history and literature for Greek and Latin in the college curriculum, and concluded by urging the younger teachers to follow the injunction, to be gentle to all, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those who oppose themselves. Hon. G. E. Foster, Finance Minister of Canada, was next introduced. Without disparagement to any he thought the teaching profession was higher and better than any other. You may talk, he said, of ministers and their work, but it seems to me that take them high and low the schools are the greatest institutions in the world. The preachers get hold of the gnarled trunk; but the teacher gets hold of the child in its tender innocence. He has the fertile soil in which to sow the good seeds to produce good fruit in an ever-broadening development. He condemned the cast-in-system of college and university teaching which closes the life out of a man by compelling him to study mathematics, when he has no aptitude for it. He pleaded for more appreciation of the teachers and their work, more salary and more holidays.

Hon. Mr Ferguson, Provincial Secretary of P. E. I., delivered a plain, common-sense address, which was notable for the stress he laid upon the importance of teaching subjects bearing upon agricultural pursuits. Referring to the statement sometimes heard that the diffusion of education among the people was one cause of the much-talked-of exodus, he denied its truth and remarked that so far as the exodus was concerned a movement of population was not a subject of regret. Let it be our proud boast that we fit our children, before they leave us, to fill positions of trust and responsibility wherever they go and not become heavers of wood and drawers of water.

Dr Allison was the next speaker. As President of the Convention he expressed his gratification at the presence of the distinguished educators of England and the United States. He also felt it a matter of congratulation to have present at the meeting two men, of one of whom New Brunswick, and of one of Nova Scotia, and of both the whole Dominion was proud—Sir Leonard Tilly and Sir William Dawson. Each in his own line had achieved success, and the lives of both had been marked by integrity, by temperance and righteousness. All would unite in wishing that the evening of their days might be unclouded and that others would follow them who would bless succeeding generations as they had blessed theirs. In discussing the question of Greek in colleges, Dr Allison waxed warm in its defence. He demanded that before something else was substituted for it, there be given unmistakable proof of its superior value. Then he said he would be glad to see it cast overboard, but not till then. He detailed at some length the benefit conferred upon the world by this language. As to the Convention, he felt that one of its most valuable results had been the bringing together the heads of the various colleges, which needed to be brought closer together and also articulated with the common school system to produce the best results.

The reception of the Natural History Society in honor of Sir William Dawson and one given by Mayor Thorne of St John, gave the teachers an opportunity to shake the hands of these noted men.

FRIDAY. At 7 a. m., about 100 teachers, principally from Nova Scotia and P. E. Island, embarked from Indiantown on board the steamer May Queen, for Fredericton. The day began with a rain but cleared away before noon and afforded the excursionists a grand opportunity to drink in the beauties of scenery on the magnificent St. John river. Upon arriving at Fredericton, Major Hazen, Drs Harrison and Bridges, of the University of New Brunswick, and several of the leading citizens met the teachers and placed carriages at their disposal to drive to the various points of interest. The University, Normal School Buildings, Parliament Building, the Governor's residence, churches, &c., were visited and inspected, and the principal streets driven through. The view from the top of the college was worth the trip to Fredericton. Adjectives are not at my command to portray its beauties. Beautiful, splendid, magnificent, superb, were tried and then the task given up. It was a sight not to be forgotten. On the home trip the sight-seeing was indulged till a thick fog prevented. Then the managers, who seemed determined that all should be done for the pleasure of the excursionists possible, provided a literary entertainment consisting of songs, recitations, and short speeches. This continued till we arrived in St John, 11 p. m. The Convention was well planned, well conducted and was in all respects a decided success.

THE ACADIAN. WOLFVILLE, N. S., AUG. 3, 1888

Local and Provincial.

STORM.—A heavy storm of thunder, lightning and rain occurred on Tuesday night.

METHODIST.—Mr. Jas. Elder occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church last Sunday evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. P. C. L. Harris.

WANTED.—1000 Doz. Eggs per week, highest prices paid cash or trade at E. C. BISHOP'S.

SHAD.—Shad have struck in quite plentifully during the past week or two and some quite large catches have been made. As many as 500 and 600 have been taken in some weirs at one tide. We hope they will continue to increase in numbers.

ST JOHN'S CHURCH.—Services for Sunday next, Aug 5th, at eleven a. m. Mattins, Litany, and sermon. Immediately after morning service, instruction to confirmation candidates, subject, "The Confirmation Service and God's part therein." At half past seven p. m. evensong and sermon. The seats in St. John's church are free.

LITERARY.—We have received from the publishers, Messrs Knowles & Reynolds, of St. John, N. B. a copy of The Gripack. It is a neatly gotten up pamphlet containing 64 pages of information for travellers and tourists. Its wise and witty sayings cannot fail to please all classes of readers. The price is only one cent per copy. Try one!

SUMMER TRAVEL.—The trains of the W. & A. R. are filled with passengers and extra cars have to be run on nearly every train. Manager Innes says that Longfellow's "Evangeline" has done more for the road than all the regular advertising. There is no doubt but that the number of visitors to our Province is yearly increasing and will continue to do so.

GYPSIES.—We noticed a few days since an encampment of gypsies at New Minas. They had a large number of horses and dogs and their tents looked new and nicely kept. Their encampment presented a very pretty and romantic appearance in the evening, the light of their huge campfire glistening on the white tents and the animals and wagons ground around.

5 cases Gem Jars just in, at B. G. Bishop's Very low.

THE JUBILEE.—The time of the Jubilee will soon be upon us and every effort should be made to make our town pretty and attractive. The grass should be trimmed out of the gutters and the streets made tidy. We would suggest that a society be organized to look after this work. There is no doubt but that it would receive the hearty support of our people generally.

16c. 16c. 16c. for Eggs at Prat's

THE ACADIAN.—The secret Acadia is making regular trips each week and is steadily working up a good business. There is no doubt but that her calling here is a benefit to our town and we would suggest that our people who are shipping to, or receiving goods from St. John and Basin ports patronize this boat. The rates of freight are low and the venture should be encouraged.

B. G. Bishop sells Greenhead lime at $1.50 per sack.

DROP CURTAIN.—Wolffville Division, S. of T., have just had put up in their hall a very pretty drop-curtain. This has been much needed in the past and will not only be a great convenience but will add much to the appearance of the room. The curtain was painted by Mr. W. P. Blankhorn, who is a member of the Division, and we are informed gave his service gratuitously. We congratulate the Division on the late addition to their hall and the interest manifested by the members.

A big stock of Stone Butter Crocks at B. G. Bishop's.

AS IT SHOULD BE.—Mr. Jehiel Duncan, of Gasperess, gave to his son Watson this spring ten acres from his farm, on which the latter has set out 1,000 apple trees which are now doing well. We understand he intends buying ten acres more which will also be set out with trees; and in a few years he will have a fine orchard. This is as it should be. The majority of our farmers have more land than they can profitably cultivate, and if they would encourage their sons in this way there would not be so many of them leaving our Province for homes in other lands, but would remain and build up this grand Canada of ours. We hope the example set will be imitated by others.

PEERLESS! Price, $1.75. Ladies' Kid Button Boot, Glove Kid Top, for $1.75. We think, in fact we have proved, that in placing the above Boot in stock we have made a "GREAT HIT." We don't have to talk ourselves to death to sell this Boot, it sells at sight. Ladies, buy the PEERLESS. It is as its name implies PEERLESS. C. H. BORDEN. Closed on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week at 7 p. m.

Local and Provincial.

TEMPERANCE DRINKS.—Bigelow's Ginger Pop, nice drink on a warm day, at SHAW'S.

NEW PAPER.—The new St. John daily paper is called the Evening Gazette. It is bright and newy and presents a good appearance. We wish it success.

NEW POTATOES.—Mr. Benj. Ward, of Long Island, has our thanks for a nice basket-full of new potatoes, handed us on Monday last. They were the first of the season for us and were splendid.

A YOUTHFUL OFFICIAL.—We believe Kentville can now boast of having the youngest Collector of Customs in the Dominion of Canada. Mr. Rand the new Collector not being yet 20 years of age we are informed, and he certainly has the appearance of being younger. Give us the name of the next youngest.—Western Chronicle.

LOOK OUT.—The safe crackers who made such havoc among the safes in this valley last summer appear to be popping the Province another visit. One night last week a safe was cracked in Digby and quite an amount stolen. On Tuesday night last the safe of T. R. Harris, at Aylesford, was blown open and about $100 taken. We hope every effort will be made to cage the thieves.

PRIZE LIST.—We are in receipt of the prize-list and rules and regulations of the provincial, agricultural and industrial exhibition to be held at Truro from Sept. 24th to 28th, next. It is a neatly gotten up pamphlet of fifty pages and reflects credit on the office of the Guardian, at which it was printed. The total amount of prizes offered is $7,078 25. Copies of this prize-list and entry papers can be obtained from the secretaries of all the agricultural societies in the Province, or from the secretary at Truro.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE.—Last Thursday afternoon (26th) about 2 o'clock, fire was discovered in a barn owned by Mr. James N. Borden, of Belcher Street. The origin of the fire is not known. No person of his knowledge was there that day. Mr. Borden and his men were at work within 30 rods of the barn. The first they saw was smoke issuing from the roof. By the time they got there, they could only save two buggies. In getting them out, Mr. T. J. Borden had a narrow escape. At one time, there was between him and the door a dense cloud of smoke and flames. Since he erected his new barn, the one burned was used for a sheep-house, and for storing tools. It contained 3 tons straw, 50 hay, 300 feet lumber, 20 thousand shingles, and all his farming utensils except those he was using in the hay field. The barn was not of very much value. Mr. Borden intending to take it down next spring. What it contained cannot be replaced for $500. There was no insurance. His other buildings, and their contents are insured in the Western Assurance Company.—COM.

BERWICK TIMES.

NEWS, NOTES, JOTTINGS, ETCETERA.

Rev. D. O. Parker is our representative in Berwick, and is prepared to take orders for job printing and advertising. We are constantly adding to our plant, and will give prompt attention to all work. Get our prices.

The new station house for Berwick is about completed. On Wednesday the 1st inst our obliging station agent, Mr. Lydiard took possession of it. The builders, T. A. Clark & Son, have done a very thorough and creditable job. The thanks of the whole community are due to the manager of the road, both for his compliance with the wishes of the people and for the neat and commodious building. Now that the large waiting room is new, neat and clean it is hoped by all well thinking people that it will from the first be closed against a gang of loafers and the fumes of tobacco. The waiting room is the best between Halifax and Yarmouth, and the whole building is 50 feet long.

The Berwick Camp-meeting opened auspiciously on Wednesday and the whole community is astir with business, and pleasure seekers. The Association anticipates a larger gathering and better meetings than ever before. Under their present orderly management we wish them much prosperity. We think, however, a police should be put on the street during the Sabbath. It is those outside the enclosed grounds who suffer.

In the night of the 31st inst the store of T. D. Harris, Aylesford was entered, the safe blown open and about one hundred and fifty-five dollars taken. We are told that while the severe thunder storm was passing over Mr. Harris heard the report, got up and hastened to his store but the burglars had departed.

Mr. Parker has a fine show of furniture in his new warerooms. He represents this paper in Berwick and takes subscriptions for it and orders for advertisements and job printing.

CHRIST CHURCH (Anglican).—Divine service next Sunday at 7 p. m. REV. M. C. WADE, Incumbent.

Personal Notes.

Prof. Ray Greene Huling, of New Bedford, Mass, was in Wolffville last week. In company with Prof. Tufts he visited the "Look off" and other places of note and expressed himself as greatly pleased with our valley.

Mr. F. Howard Schofield, is paying a visit to his father. Mr. Schofield is a graduate of Acadia with the class of '82 and is now master in mathematics at the Manitoba Collegiate School, at Winnipeg.

Mr. T. S. K. Freeman, a graduate of Acadia in '87, was in Wolffville this week. For the last year he has been attending a theological college in Virginia.

Mr. Geo. M. Stewart, representing Miller & Richard, type foundry, Toronto, made us a call on Monday last. Conductor Joe Edwards is rusticated and resting at Nantuxet, where his health is improving, and hopes soon to be able to resume his work on the W. & A. R.

COMING BACK.—Mr. J. K. Martin is about returning to Wolffville this week. Mr. Dodd has engaged him to take charge of this orchard. Mr. Martin is in Wolffville this week making arrangements to move next week. We are all glad to have him back.

JUST IN.—Roofing Paint, Carriage Paints, leads, glass, &c. &c., for sale low at B. G. Bishop's.

DOCK BLOOD PURIFIER. I have been sick with Liver and Kidney Complaints and night sweat, for over two years, most of the time confined to my bed. A doctor attended me who failed to cure me; and after trying many patent medicines that were recommended for the above complaints, which failed also, I was advised to try Doctor Norton's Dock Blood Purifier; three bottles has entirely cured me, and I now enjoy the best health I have for twenty years. Mrs. S. D. MACCUMBER, Avondale, Hants County May 2d, 1888

BORN. DENNISON.—At Horton Landing, July 21st, to Mr and Mrs Lewis V. Dennison, a daughter.

MARRIED. KELLEY—WELSH.—At Kentville, on the 28th ult., by Rev. S. McCl. Black, Mr. James Kelley, and Mrs. Annie Welsh, both of Cambridge.

DIED. PALMIST.—At Long Island on the 30th inst, Charles Palmist, age 1 5/4 years.

LOOK OUT!

It costs nothing to give a trial. A. E. CALKIN, - CLOTHIER. Kentville, N. S., July 5th, 1888

Dandruff, Baldness. Thin or Grey Hair.

Everyone knows how disagreeable it looks to see Dandruff falling from the head to the shoulders of either lady or gentleman. The head may be washed ever so often but it will not clean out this evil. The best way to get rid of the affliction is by the application of Simson's Lintment, say three times a week, just before retiring at night, first washing the head thoroughly with warm water and castile soap. It will cost you but 25 cents to give it a trial, and who but could take pride in a fine glossy head of hair without any appearance of Dandruff. Mr. E. Renault, agent of Crown Lands, St. Thomas, Quebec, writes:

"I have used Simson's Lintment as a hair invigorator and can certify to its wonderful effect for the growth of hair and cleansing of the scalp. I feel assured it will in nearly every case prevent the hair from coming out."

WEBSTER

In various styles of binding, with and without Patent Index.

The Latest Edition has 118,000 Words, and 3000 Engravings—3000 more Words and 2000 more Engravings than found in any other American Dictionary. It also contains a Historical Dictionary, giving brief facts concerning nearly 10,000 Noted Persons. To these features we have JUST ADDED, (1888) A NEW PRONOUNCING GAZETTEER OF THE WORLD, containing over 20,000 Titles, briefly describing the Countries, Cities, Towns, and Natural Features of every part of the Globe.

WEBSTER IS THE STANDARD Authority with the U. S. Supreme Court and in the best practical Dictionary extant. The Cambridge Englishman says: It is the most perfect work of the kind.

The Toronto Globe, Canada, says: Its place is in the very highest rank. The New York Tribune says: It is recognized as the most useful existing "work-book" of the English language all over the world. It is an invaluable companion in every school, and in every private library. 200,000 copies sent free to S. C. MERRILL & CO.
