The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol  $\rightarrow$  (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol  $\nabla$  (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Harold Campbell Vaughan Memorial Library

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole  $\rightarrow$  signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole  $\nabla$  signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

PREFACE.

BOOK-KEEPING does not receive that attention in our schools which its importance demands. Every one, no matter what may be his occupation, should keep an accurate record of his dealings with others, so that at any time, by reference to his books, he can see how much he owes and how much is owing to him. He should also keep an account of his cash transactions, that he may know at the end of each month or year the amount of money he has received from every source, and in what ways he has expended that money. The want of system and accuracy in these matters often leads to reckless expenditure and financial ruin. A farmer who keeps no record of his dealings with the merchant and the blacksmith is surprised, at the end of the year, at the hugeness of his account. He is sure that he owes no such sum, although he is not prepared to dispute the correctness of any one item. A correct and systematic record of debt and credit, of cash receipts and expenditures, will lead to a more careful estimate of one's financial condition, of what can be afforded and what cannot; and it will lead one to look back over his list of purchases and consider whether his money could not have been expended to better purpose.

It is not supposed or designed that this little work shall supersede the larger and more complete text-books on Book-keeping which are now in use, and which are needed to give that knowledge required in more extended mercantile business. The object is rather to promote the study of this important branch of practical education, by presenting, in cheap form, such a simple and concise system of keeping accounts, as will adequately meet the wants of the large majority of boys and girls in our public schools.

In the following pages, that the learner may acquire as thorough and practicable a knowledge of Book-keeping as possible, examples are first presented for his inspection, showing him how to record different kinds of transactions in the various books employed; he is then required to take similar transactions and write up the books according to the examples furnished. He will not, therefore, have the opportunity of copying the work from the text-book, but will be compelled to exercise his judgment as to the book in which the account should be entered, and the form in which it should be written.

EXPLANATIONS.

1. It frequently happens that payment is not made for articles bought or sold at the time of the transaction. The purchaser is then in debt; he is said to be a debtor, and the seller is creditor. It is not safe to trust such business transactions to memory. The art of recording them in systematic form is called BOOK-KEEPING.

The following illustration shows how records are made: —

Thomas White, on the 15th January, sells to John Poor 3 cwts. of hay at 65 cents per cwt., and 5 bushels of potatoes at 45 cents per bushel. Poor has sawed wood for him two days at $1.25 per day.

White writes in his book, —

2. The number of books employed in Book-keeping depends on the nature and extent of the business; those in general use are the Day Book, the Cash Book, the Bill Book, and the Ledger. The records made should show correctly, clearly, and concisely the state of one's business, or the property of different kinds which he owns; whom he owes, with the amounts due each; and who owes him, with the amounts due from each.

3. The DAY BOOK contains all the debit and credit transactions in the order in which they occur, and with the proper date. Unless a Memorandum Book is kept for the purpose, it is well at the commencement of the Day Book to make a statement of property owned and of debts at that date. Articles bought and paid for in full at the time of purchase are not entered in the Day Book. Transactions in which debt and credit are not equal must be stated in full, and not simply the balance or excess of the greater. In the Day Book, the date should be placed at the top of the page, and need not be repeated on the same page with each account; but when a new date occurs on the page, it should be placed above the account, and not in the margin.

The following are two pages from Thomas White's Day Book :

4. The CASH BOOK contains, on the left-hand pages, a record of cash held on commencing business, and of all cash receipts; on the right-hand pages, a record of all cash payments. The dates are placed in the margin.

5. The left-hand page is called the debit side, and the right-hand the credit side. The propriety of this will be evident, if we think of the cash box or safe as a person with whom an account is opened for debt and credit.

6. The first entry in the Cash Book must always be on the debit side, as cash must be received before it can be disbursed; for a similar reason, the amount on the credit side can never exceed that on the debit side. If the two sides are equal, there is no cash on hand; the excess of the debit side shows the amount held.

7. The Cash Book should be carried along simultaneously with the Day Book. Cash received on cash sales, or paid on cash purchases, — that is, when full payment is made at the time of the transaction, — is entered in the Cash Book only. When the cash does not correspond with the amount of the purchase or sale, and when cash is paid on account, the entry must be made in the Day Book, as well as in the Cash Book.

8. The following is a specimen of the debit and credit sides of Thomas White's Cash Book. By adding the two sides, and taking the difference, we shall find that the debit side exceeds the other by $26.17, which is the amount of cash on hand January 18.

9. The BILL BOOK contains a record of various particulars respecting written obligations for the payment of money, such as Notes of Hand, Due Bills, Orders, and Drafts. It consists of two parts, — Bills Receivable and Bills Payable. In Bills Receivable we enter all obligations of this kind which we hold against others, recording the maker's name, the indorser's name, the amount, date, time, when due, where payable; in Bills Payable we enter our written obligations to pay money, to whom payable, the amount, date, etc.

11. A Bill is not legally due until three days after it is nominally due. These three days are called days of grace.

12. When a Note of Hand or other written obligation is given or taken in payment of a Day Book account, a record must be made also in the Day Book; when it is given or taken for cash, the proper entry must be made in the Cash Book.

13. When a Bill is paid or otherwise disposed of, the fact should be stated under the heading remarks.

14. Below is a specimen of Thomas White's Bill Book, with such entries as are required by transactions referred to in the Day Book and Cash Book.

15. The LEDGER brings together, under each man's name, all his accounts as found in the Day Book, placing debits on the left hand and credits on the right. The process of transferring accounts from the Day Book to the Ledger is called Posting. The accounts are posted in the order in which they occur in the Day Book. For convenience in turning up accounts in the Ledger, an alphabetical Index is formed, each man's name and page in the Ledger being entered in the Index the first time the name occurs in posting.

16. It is not necessary to enter in the Ledger the various particulars recorded in the Day Book, but simply the total amount of the transaction.

17. When an account is transferred from the Day Book to the Ledger, the number of the Ledger page is placed opposite the account in the margin of the Day Book. This shows that the account has been posted, and also indicates its place in the Ledger. A reference mark is also made in the Ledger in connection with each entry, showing where it is found in the Day Book. This mark may be either the date of the account or the page of the Day Book from which it is transferred, and it may be placed in a separate column for this purpose, or it may be placed above a horizontal line with the amount written beneath. The different modes of inserting reference marks in the Ledger are illustrated in the following examples of Frank Parker's account. In the first example both the page and date are given; in the second, the date only; and in the third, the page only.

18. At certain times, usually at the end of each year, after the Day Book is all posted, the debit and credit sides of each account in the Ledger are compared. If they are equal, the sum is placed on each side on the same line, and a double line is ruled beneath. This is called closing the account.

19. If the two sides are unequal, they are first balanced by entering a sufficient sum for the purpose on the side of the less, and writing the words To Balance or By Balance, according as the entry is on the debit or the credit side. The account is then closed as before, and the amount added in balancing is afterwards entered below the closing line on the opposite side. Thus, if the amount was added to the debit side with the words To Balance, it is brought down on the credit side after the words By Balance; if it was added to the credit side with the words By Balance, it is brought down on the debit side after the words To Balance. The amount of balance thus entered opens a new account. In balancing an account, the words To Balance and By Balance should be written in a different hand, or with ink of a different color from the rest.

20. Below are the Index and the Ledger corresponding to Thomas White's Day Book, given on the preceding pages. The accounts are balanced and closed. The Ledger is supposed to comprise three pages.

DAY BOOK AND LEDGER COMBINED.

21. If one has debit or credit transactions with but few persons, as is the case with many farmers, he may combine the Day Book and the Ledger. The book used must be ruled in the same manner as the Ledger, and a full page should be reserved for each person. The name is written at the top of the page, and the date in the margin. The transactions should be recorded in full, as in the Day Book. An Index can be made similar to that of the Ledger.

22. According to this method, Thomas White's book will appear in the following form: —

23. After all the accounts of the Day Book have been posted, — that is, entered in the Ledger, — it is desirable to test the accuracy of the posting. This may be done to a certain extent by a process called making a Trial Balance. In Single Entry this consists in comparing the sum of the debits of the Ledger with the sum of the debits of the Day Book, and the sum of the credits of the Ledger with the sum of the credits of the Day Book: If the posting is correct, they will correspond in each case.

For the method of making a Trial Balance in Double Entry, see page 27.

24. The BALANCE SHEET, ruled like the Ledger, gives a general statement of one's financial condition. It presents on the debit side all assets, including the estimated value of property held, the cash on hand as shown by the Cash Book, and the amounts due as shown by Bills Receivable and by the debit balances of the Ledger; and it presents on the credit side the amount of liabilities, as shown by bills payable and the credit balances of the Ledger. The difference between the two sides is the net capital. The difference in the net capital at two different dates shows the gain or loss.

25. If, on the 20th of January, Thomas White's property, not including Cash, Notes of Hand, and Ledger balances, is estimated at $4,000.00, his Balance Sheet will appear as below.

BILL OF EXCHANGE. — A written order addressed by one Bank, or Firm, to another, requesting the payment of money to a third person or his order. A Bill of Exchange is often called a Draft. The person who makes or signs a Bill of Exchange or a Draft is called the Maker; the one to whom it is addressed is the Drawee; who after he agrees to pay the amount is called the Acceptor; and the person to whom the money is ordered to be paid is the Payee.

A Draft or Bill of Exchange may be drawn payable at sight, that is, when presented, or at a certain time after sight, as sixty days. A Bill is not payable until three days, called days of grace, after it is nominally due. A Draft which is not payable on demand should be presented for acceptance as soon as it is received. The drawee assumes the obligations of the Draft by writing the word Accepted, his name, and the date of presentation across the face. The Draft is then called an Acceptance. A Bill of Exchange when drawn on a person in another country is called a Foreign Bill; when payable in the country in which it is drawn, it is called an Inland Bill.  the number it holds in the set.

They are thus drawn and are sent by different conveyances to guard against loss. The payment of one cancels the others.

BILL OF LADING. — A written account or receipt of goods shipped on board of a vessel, signed by the master of the vessel, who promises, on specified terms, to deliver the goods in proper

Bills Payable and Receivable are either negotiable or non-negoti- able. A non-negotiable bill is made payable to a certain specified individual or firm, and cannot be transferred to any third party;

a negotiable bill has the words or order written after the name of the payee, and becomes transferable by his indorsement. A per-

DISCOUNT. — An abatement on the regular price of goods; an amount deducted for payment of money before it is due.

In lending money, Banks obtain interest for a larger sum than that really lent, by deducting the interest from the amount specified in the note, and giving to the borrower the amount thus diminished. This is called discounting a note.

DUE BILL. — A written acknowledgment of indebtedness.

INDORSE. — To write one's name across the back of a draft or promissory note. The person who thus writes his name is called an indorser. By indorsing a bill a person becomes liable to meet its obligations. General indorsement consists simply in writing one's name across the back of a bill; special indorsement directs that payment be made to the order of some specified person.

INSOLVENT. — Bankrupt; a person is said to be insolvent when he is unable to pay his debts, or when his liabilities are greater than his assets.

GENTLEMEN, — Allow me to introduce to you my young friend, Mr. David Webster, who visits your city for the purpose of obtaining a situation as book-keeper. Mr. Webster is well acquainted with the general principles of book-keeping, but he has had very little experience in practical work. He is, however, intelligent, industrious, and thoroughly reliable. I have, therefore, much confidence in his ultimate success, and beg to commend him to your favorable notice.

EXAMPLES FOR PRACTICE IN SINGLE AND DOUBLE ENTRY.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

Blank Books both for Single and Double Entry, designed to accompany this work, are prepared in adaptation to the examples in Chapter III. In using these blanks observe the following:—

SINGLE ENTRY.

The first seventeen pages are for the Day Book; the next four for the Cash Book; the next two for the Bill Book; the next page for the Ledger Index; and the remaining pages for the Ledger.

Write the general statement of the business on the first page of the Day Book; enter the old accounts on the second page; and proceed with new accounts on the third page.

The number of lines required for the different letters in the Ledger Index are —

Three for B, one for C, one for D, one for E, one for F, one for G, one for H, one for M, four for P, three for W. Leave one or two lines more for each letter than the required number.

DOUBLE ENTRY.

The first eighteen pages are for the Day Book; the nineteenth page is a blank; the next four pages are for the Cash Book; the next two for the Bill Book; the next twenty for the Journal; the next page is for the Ledger Index; and the remaining pages are for the Ledger.

Write the general statement of the business on the first page, and proceed with new business on the second page.

The number of lines required for the different letters in the Ledger Index are —

Five for B; two for C; two for D; two for E; one for F; one for G; one for H; one for I; two for M; four for P; one for R; two for S; one for T; three for W.

The accounts requiring a full page in the Ledger are, Merchandise, Cash, Trial Balance, and Balance Account.

Carry along the Day Book, Cash Book, and Bill Book together. Transfers from the Day Book to the Journal or Ledger can be made at the end of each day's business, or they can be left until the Day Book has been completed.

In actual business the Cash Book should be balanced at the end of each day; it will be sufficient here to balance at the end of each week, that is, January 8, 15, 22, and 29. Cash paid on account should not be considered as part of cash sales, but should be entered in the Cash Book separately.

Transfer the accounts from the Day Book to the Journal or to the Ledger in the order in which they occur, placing a mark in the margin of the Day Book, opposite each account, to indicate that the account has been posted.

In posting, first enter the name or Ledger title in the Index, and place after it the number of the page in the Ledger on which the account is to be entered.

I had Samuel Jenkins's note discounted at the Merchants' Bank, at 7 per cent. (Find the interest for the whole time for which the note was drawn — 3 months and 3 days — at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  per cent = \$1.90. Add this to the principal — \$113.40 + \$1.90 = \$115.30. Compute the discount on this for the time the note has to run — Jan. 26 to April 11 — at 7 per cent = \$1.65. This subtracted from \$115.30 leaves \$113.65, the amount received on the note.)

Find the value of £1 stg. in dollars and cents by adding  $9\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to \$4.44 $\frac{1}{2}$  or \$4.88; multiply the result by 81.6 to obtain the value of £81 12s., in dollars and cents. — Total entry in Cash Book, \$475.07.*)

DOUBLE ENTRY.

1. The method of Book-keeping shown on the preceding pages is styled Single Entry. By reference to the Day Book and the Ledger, it will be seen that accounts are there kept with persons only. This method is called Single Entry from the fact that each transaction recorded in the Day Book is entered but once in the Ledger, either on the debit or on the credit side of some person's account.

2. In DOUBLE ENTRY accounts are kept with both persons and things, and every transaction is regarded in such a way as to involve the double idea of debit and credit. By each transaction one person or kind of property becomes debtor, and another person or kind of property becomes creditor. Thus each transaction is entered twice in the Ledger, once on the debit side of some account, and once on the credit side of another account, making the total debit entries equal in amount to the total credit entries.

3. If Peter Kaufman begins business with $2000 worth of merchandise, he can consider himself as the creditor, and Merchandise the debtor, and he may make the following entries:—

	CR.
By merchandise invested in business.....		$2,000.00
MERCHANDISE.	DR.
To value of goods invested .....		$2,000.00

4. In recording the history of his business by the Double Entry method, he will debit Merchandise with every addition to his stock in trade, and he will credit Merchandise with everything he sells; if he pays cash for goods, he will make Cash creditor and Merchandise debtor; if he gives his note for goods he will make Bills Payable creditor, and Merchandise debtor; if he sells goods on credit, he will make the purchaser debtor, and Merchandise creditor; if he sells for cash, he will make Cash debtor, and Merchandise creditor; if he takes a note of hand for goods, he will make Bills Receivable debtor, and Merchandise creditor; if he pays money for expense in carrying on the business, he will debit Expense and credit Cash with the amount; and if he takes goods or cash out of the business for his own private use, he will debit himself and credit Merchandise or Cash.

5. Those accounts that are kept with the persons with whom we do business are called PERSONAL ACCOUNTS; as, Wm. Jones, Thomas Adams. Accounts kept with things may be called IMPERSONAL ACCOUNTS; as, Merchandise, Expense. Impersonal accounts are further classified into REAL ACCOUNTS, which represent some kind of property, — as, Cash, Flour, Merchandise, Real Estate, Bills Receivable, and Bills Payable, — and FICTITIOUS or NOMINAL ACCOUNTS, which represent various sources of gain or loss, as Interest, Expense, Profit and Loss.

6. Instead of crediting or debiting himself personally with the amount put into the business, or withdrawn from it, the proprietor usually makes such entries under the fictitious title of Stock or Capital Account.

7. The whole stock in trade may be entered under the general title Merchandise, or we may open special accounts with certain classes of goods, as Flour, Sugar, Broadcloth, etc. The latter method is adopted when it is desirable to ascertain the profit arising from any particular source.

8. The CASH BOOK and the BILL BOOK in Double Entry are precisely the same as in Single Entry; hence, these books are omitted on the succeeding pages.

9. The DAY BOOK should contain a complete history of the business, including not only a record of all debits and credits, but also of all transactions entered in the Cash Book or in the Bill Book.

10. The JOURNAL is a book used in Double Entry, intermediate between the Day Book and the Ledger, to facilitate the work of posting. It is not an essential book, as we could post directly from the Day Book to the Ledger. It states the Ledger accounts to which each Day Book entry belongs, the side of the Ledger account on which it should be placed, and the amount to be entered.

The Journal is ruled with double money columns, the inner columns for debit entries, and the outer columns for credit entries.

11. The use of the Journal will appear more clearly from the following illustrations: —

	WILLIAM SMITH,		Dr.
To 2 yds. broadcloth, @ $4.25.....	8	50
“ trimmings for coat.....	2	25
“ overcoat.....	16	50	27	25

Instead of entering this at once in the Ledger to the debit of William Smith and to credit of Merchandise, we first make the following Journal entry: —

WILLIAM SMITH,		Dr.	27	25
To merchandise.....			27	25

This means simply that William Smith's account in the Ledger is to be debited $27.25, and that Merchandise account is to be credited with the same amount.

12. RULES FOR JOURNALIZING.

- (1.) In the opening entries debit each asset with its amount, and credit Stock, that is, the proprietor of the business, with the total assets; debit Stock with the total liabilities, and credit each liability with its amount.
- (2.) A personal account is to be debited when a thing is given, and credited when a thing is received: the thing given is Cr., the thing received, Dr.
- (3.) In impersonal accounts the thing received is Dr. to the thing delivered.
- (4.) Any kind of property is Dr. for its cost or value, and for all expenses connected with it; it is Cr. for whatever it brings in, and for the proceeds arising from its sale.
- (5.) Always debit loss and credit gain.
- (6.) The debits and credits arising out of any transaction must be of equal amount; hence, as a check on the work, it is well to add the debit and credit columns of the Journal.

13. The LEDGER is a summary of the Day Book. It is the same in form as the Single Entry Ledger; but it contains a larger number of accounts, including Stock, Cash, Merchandise, Expense, and other impersonal accounts not found in Single Entry. It is really the only essential book, the other books being used for convenience, and for the purpose of making the Ledger concise, systematic, and intelligible.

TRIAL BALANCE.

14. When all the Journal entries have been transferred to the Ledger, the correctness of the posting is tested by the Trial Balance. As the debit and credit sides of the Journal are equal in amount, it is manifest that if the transfers have been correctly made, the total of the debit entries in the Ledger must be equal to the total of the credit entries. There are three ways of making a Trial Balance:—

(1.) Collect the debits of each account in the Ledger on the debit side of the Trial Balance, and the credits on the credit side.

(2.) Proceed as by the first method, but omit both sides of such accounts as exactly balance.

(3.) Omit those accounts which exactly balance, and take the difference between the two sides of each of those that do not balance, placing that difference on the debit or the credit side, according as it may be a debit or a credit excess.

The last named method is the one usually followed. By adopting the first method, however, we can not only compare the debits of the Ledger with its credits, but we can also compare the total amount carried into the Ledger with that of the Journal, and thus discover if any account has been omitted in posting.

15. The Trial Balance does not give an absolute guarantee of correct posting. An amount may be posted to a wrong account in the Ledger without affecting the results of the Trial Balance.

CLOSING THE LEDGER.

16. It is desirable, at certain times, to ascertain the results of one's business, and to compare the present financial condition with some former condition. This is done by closing all the accounts in the Ledger, and presenting a general summary of assets and liabilities in an account opened for this purpose, called the Balance Account.

17. All accounts which have the two sides equal, are closed by placing the amounts on the same level, and ruling off with double lines. Such accounts are said to close of themselves.

An account which does not close of itself, is closed into some other account by entering on the side of the less, to the debit or credit side of this other account, an amount which will make it equal to the greater, bringing the total to the same level, and ruling off with double lines. The amount thus entered to the debit or credit of the account into which we close, is then transferred to the opposite side of this account, the account from which the transfer is made being debited or credited as the case may require.

18. The accounts cannot be closed in the exact order in which they occur in the Ledger, as certain accounts, usually near the beginning, cannot be closed until they receive transfers of closing entries from accounts further on.

In preparing to close the Ledger, open an account with Profit and Loss, if such an account has not already been opened; also open the Balance Account, to which all balances, showing assets and liabilities, are to be transferred.

19. The Cash Account, Bills Receivable, Bills Payable, Personal Accounts, Shop and all Real Estate Accounts, close directly into Balance Account. These accounts receive no closing entries from other accounts, and hence they can be closed at any time.

20. The Merchandise Account closes into Profit and Loss after the value of goods on hand has been entered on the credit side. In closing the Merchandise Account, and any other accounts of a speculative kind, enter first on the credit side the present value of what remains unsold, at the same time entering the amount on the debit side of the Balance Account. We shall now have on the debit side of the Merchandise Account what has been paid for goods, on the credit side the amount of sales and the value of goods on hand. The difference between the two sides is the amount of gain or loss, an excess on the credit side showing gain, on the debit side loss. Close the account by debiting gain, or crediting loss, and transfer the amount to the opposite side of the Profit and Loss account.

21. The Interest Account, Discount Account, and any others indicating gain or loss, close into the Profit and Loss Account. The Expense Account also closes into Profit and Loss.

22. It is manifest that all expense incurred in carrying on the business diminishes the gain or profit, and that in closing this account the entry must always be made on the credit side, and then the amount must be carried to the debit side of Profit and Loss.

23. The Profit and Loss Account closes into Stock.

The debit side of the Profit and Loss Account shows the losses from all sources; the credit side the profits. The difference is the net gain or the net loss.

24. The Private Account closes into Stock.

The debits in the Private Account show what has been taken out of the business by the proprietor.

25. The Stock Account, the last to be closed, closes into the Balance Account, making the two sides of that account equal. The Stock Account, at closing shows on the credit side the assets with which we began business and the gain, if any, arising out of the business, as transferred from the Profit and Loss Account; it shows on the debit side the liabilities with which we began business, the loss, if any, sustained in carrying on the business, and the amount withdrawn for personal use, as shown by the Private Account. The difference between the two sides of this account must, therefore, be the present net capital. But the difference between the two sides of the Balance Account must also show the present net capital; for the debit side shows all the assets, and the credit side all the liabilities. We are therefore able to get the present net capital from two nearly independent sources, and thus test the correctness of the work.

It will be seen that Double Entry, although involving more work than Single Entry, has decided advantages. It presents a more complete and systematic statement of one's business. By reference to two or three accounts, the business man can ascertain the general condition of his affairs.

By comparing the difference between the two sides of the Stock Account with that of the two sides of the Balance Account, we can verify the correctness of our work.

Double Entry enables one to open an account with any class of Merchandise, as Flour, Sugar, or Cotton, and ascertain the gain or loss from each particular source.

APPENDIX.

THE SIX-COLUMN METHOD.

A CONCISE system of book-keeping by double entry, known as the Six-Column Method, is used by many merchants. It combines in one book the Day Book, the Cash Book, and the Journal. This method is illustrated in the following pages. The transactions are those of the short course given on pages 16, 17, and 18. The three columns on the left are debit; those on the right are credit; the outside columns on the left and right are for cash,—debit and credit, respectively; the middle columns are for merchandise; and the inner columns are for sundries, including personal accounts, bills, and all others not cash or merchandise.

The various entries in the different columns are added, and the sums are carried forward from page to page through a certain period, as a week, or a month. At the end of this period the cash and merchandise accounts are posted, simply by entering the sum of the debit entries of each during the period on the debit side of the corresponding account in the ledger, and the sum of the credit entries of each on the credit side of that account. Every entry in the sundries column is posted separately under its proper title as given in the middle of the page.

The sum of the three debit columns is always equal to the sum of the three credit columns. The excess of the sum of the debit entries in the Cash column above the sum of the entries on the credit side, shows the amount of cash on hand.
