DIED

WANT AD HOROSCOPE JULY 19.

A peculiar thing about the men and women born on this birthdate is that while they are happy and comfortable during the day, when night comes they become melancholy depressed and discouraged. These people should be much out of doors and special attention should be given to exercise and simple rules of health. They are inclined to attacks of indigestion. They should avoid taking medicines as much as possible and depend upon fresh air and exercise and simple diet for their cure.

Worry will bring on sickness with people of this birthdate, and they should rise above every accusation or worry, knowing that worry is the most weakening thing that they can do. They should not marry people who are born on this date and will be happiest with those born in November or the latter part of February.

Sales of automobiles may be advantageously brought about through a Want Ad. Homes in the suburbs advertised for rent, will find attention.

TO SHORTEN THE SITTINGS

It is intimated that Premier Borden has decided that the Parliamentary sessions at Ottawa are altogether too lengthy, and that in future they must be shortened. If so, his intention will receive the hearty support of the general public.

Owing to the long drawn-out navy debate, extended beyond all bounds by the Grit gabblers, closure cannot be applied with regard to debate on any measure, and in this respect at least, that silly performance brought about much good.

There have been each year at the Canadian capital, altogether too many months expended for the amount of business done. Any other body of sensibly deliberative men could accomplish twice as much in half the time.

The trouble is that too many M.P.'s are anxious to fill the pages of Hansard, often with no meat and little thought in their remarks, for really impressive and desirable speeches are not nearly as common as the other kind.

In the Old Land, there has of late years been a marked change in the length of parliamentary orations. Gladstone never seemed to think he had done himself justice on important occasions unless he had spouted for at least three or four hours or more. Bright was another sinner in this regard, and so were men on the Conservative side in those old days.

At the present time, Premier Asquith usually takes less than an hour, no matter what the issue, and the same is true of Balfour and other parliamentary leaders at Westminster.

In the Canadian House, in the matter of individual efforts, Premier Borden usually states a proposal in a terse way, so does Finance Minister White and Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals—well, he never wasted a word in his life. Hon. Edward Blake used to be the lengthiest orator in that chamber, and on one occasion, when he had spoken for four hours against the C. P. R., it is recorded that Hon. Mr. Pope, then Minister of Railways and Canals, who was not an orate speaker in any sense, arose and used some such words as, "Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, I have listened to the attack of the hon. member, and all I can say is there ain't nothing to it." That squelched Blake more than a four hour come back.

In the United States, the speeches of Abraham Lincoln used to be models of force and also of brevity. By all means, let us have shorter sittings and the unhesitating use of closure when any matter has been debated for a reasonable length of time. That plan works well in the British House, and why not here?

It is not a matter of suppressing free speech, but of squelching a lot of drivelling and irrelevant nonsense.

The above remarks also apply in a sense to newspaper editorial work. Time was when leaders used to run to two and even three columns with a few Latin quotations put in for seasoning, and they were of a ponderous rolling-in-rounded-period variety, punctuated here and there with "we affirm," or "we protest," and ending with an impassioned panegyric. That old-time style has passed away unwept, unhonored and unsung. The speaker—or the newspaper writer, who cannot, in the former case, make his points without using up hours of time, or in the latter case, by using up columns of space, had much better be at some other job.

It is the epigrammatic style in oratory, and the short paragraph style in journalism which tells more than anything else.

MILLIONS FOR CANADA
 Governor Foss, of Massachusetts, whose big firm, the B. F. Sturtevant Company, of Boston, have acquired property in Galt in order to manufacture extensively on this side of the border, says during the course of an interview:—

"I believe that this movement of American capital toward Canada is to continue. I believe that it will greatly increase from year to year under the present fiscal systems in both countries.

"Undoubtedly, the development of Canada in this next 25 years will be relatively greater than in the United States. This fact impels enterprising concerns to fortify themselves by locating within Canadian borders.

"In many instances the plants which our manufacturers are establishing in Canada will be directly owned and financed by the parent concerns in this country and in some instances, even the payroll is met by the weekly shipment of funds from the American parent concern to its branch in Canada.

"I believe it is a conservative statement to say that up to date, at least five hundred millions of American money has been imported into Canada in the building of American properties across the border."

Just compare this condition of affairs with what would have happened had Laurier succeeded in ramming Reciprocity down the throats of the Canadian people.

The electors made no mistake when, in 1911, they smote that proposal hip and thigh.

THE SAME OLD JOHN BULL.
 Canada, through the unpatriotic action of the Grit majority in the Senate, having thrown out the Borden navy bill, which proposed the price of three Dreadnoughts, Hon. Winston Churchill, speaking for the Asquith Government, has quietly announced that the Admiralty will hasten the construction of three such ships at the expense of the British taxpayers.

The self-reliant and dignified spirit involved in that declaration is eminently characteristic of John Bull. And at the same time the need for such a statement has pre-eminently not arisen as the outcome of the feelings of the Canadian people, for the vast majority deeply feel the humiliation placed upon this fair Dominion by the action of the Grit throttlers in the Upper Chamber. Their attitude of course, was the outcome of the party lead, given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

In his speech, Churchill clearly defined that the added ships are regarded as necessary for Empire defence as a whole, at which the Toronto Globe with characteristic senility on the subject, remarks:—

"It is 'general defence of the British Empire,' and not the defence of the United Kingdom, that is in Mr. Churchill's mind when he speaks of the emergencies of the future. There is not a single word in his very clear statement to indicate that Britain is either unable or unwilling to safeguard her position in European waters.

Well who on earth ever said that the need was anything else but one of Empire?

For countless generations, the people of the Old Land have put up all the cost of fleet construction and of fleet maintenance, not for their own interests alone, but also to safeguard the shores and the trade routes of the vast Dominions beyond the seas.

The great glory of the British Empire is not centered alone in the three tight little islands, but is shared by all the rest of us who enjoy the privilege of living under the grand old Union Jack and all that the emblem typifies.

To our great shame we have not hitherto given one cent towards the desirable maintenance of that condition of confidence and safety, and when Borden asked how best to help, and was told "the price of three Dreadnoughts," the Senate promptly and shamefacedly quillined the proposal.

The Globe also says:—

"If Mr. Borden is a patriot, a good Canadian, and a good Briton he will cut loose from his Nationalist allies during the next session of Parliament and vote the money required to build two fleet units to be owned, manned, and maintained by Canada for her own defence and the general defence of the Empire should need arise. Will Mr. Borden risk the loss of his Nationalist support or will he 'sit tight'?"

Arrant and unadulterated bosh. Mr. Borden's proposal was not framed at the suggestion of the Nationalists, but in accordance with the suggestion of a Grit government in the Old Land. As a matter of fact, more than one Nationalist bolted in connection with the issue and they no more control the Conservative Premier than the Globe is controlled by common sense in discussing this matter, Reciprocity and other public issues.

DOES YOUR SIDE ACHE
 When the first symptoms appear, rub with Nerviline—rub it in deeply. It penetrates to muscles and chords that are sore—takes away stiffness—removes all strain and inflammation. If the condition is chronic, put a Nerviline Porous Plaster on the affected spot. This draws out any virus or neuritic irritation, restores the tissues to their wonted healthiness, permanently cures any weakness or tendency to pain. Nerviline Plasters absorb all the deleterious secretions through the dilated pores and when used along with Nerviline itself, every muscular pain or ache must go.

NOTES AND COMMENTS
 Canada's Upper House instead of the Senatorial Chamber, should be called the Humiliatory ditto.

"I would have liked your help," says John Bull in effect, "but as it has been checked, I am going ahead to make things right for the Empire, off my own bat." Bully for John Bull!

On "the Island of Zante, Greece, there are some 'pitch springs.' The Toronto baseball team had better sign a few of 'em, and also some others.

Laurier and Rowell are a couple of bunglers when it comes to sizing up Canadian public feeling.

Mr. Rowell, Ontario Liberal leader, has left on a trip for Great Britain. It is not believed that he will be any sicker while crossing than when he heard the North Grey result.

Hal. Donly, editor of the Simcoe Reformer and one of the brainiest men in the Co'y of Norfolk, relates the truth when he tells his fellow Liberals that they could not carry one seat in a general election under the present Rowell banner.

So it appears that the Conservative majority in North Grey was 353 instead of the 278 first reported. And right now is where Rowell yells for more 'arnica.

"The rejection of the Canadiana naval aid bill has, for the time at least, deprived us of aid upon which we had been depending."—Winston Churchill, in the British House of Commons.

Now watch Laurier's sunny smile deepen and broaden.

What the Other Fellow Thinks.
 Her Lesson
 Toronto Star: Mrs. Cornwallis-West has obtained a divorce from her young husband. Her unfortunate experience ought to hold lady cradlerobbers in the smart set for a while.

Will Serve Them Right
 London Free Press:
 Toronto citizens lacking seats in their street cars are to be provided with celluloid straps. The Queen City people deserve to stand if that idea satisfies them.

A Fine Showing
 St. Thomas-Times: Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, announces that after reducing Canada's public debt by $20,000,000, there is a surplus for the last fiscal year of $36,500,000.

The Four Brants Also
 Guelph Herald: It is a long time since it could be said that the three Greys, were in line on the Conservative side for both the Federal House and the Provincial Legislature. We have, however, to admire their discernment of recent days.

Galt to Have a Masoleum
 Reporter: The construction of the masoleum to be erected in Mount View cemetery by the International Masoleum Company of Toronto is going on apace. The work is in the hands of the D. W. Mitchell Construction Company of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Toronto, and Mr. Mitchell makes periodical trips to Galt to supervise the job. He was in town yesterday and with Mr. Waugh, the local agent, escorted a representative of The Reporter over the ground.

"Absolute permanence is the keynote in the construction of masoleums," explained Mr. Mitchell. "No perishable substance is used and the building is put up in such a way that it will be just as good two hundred years hence as the day it is completed."

Mr. Crothers' Western Trip
 Victoria, B.C. Colonist: Mr. T. W. Crothers, the Minister of Labor, is a welcome visitor to Victoria, and what he has to tell us of industrial conditions throughout Canada is of a very encouraging character. He is in a position to know how the different industries and trades of the country are thriving, so that whatever he says may be taken as official. When he sees cause for optimism of a high character we need not hesitate to share in his feelings. He has just completed a trip during which he visited a number of centres, and the results of his observations are summarized in an interview with him we print today.

Of the minister it may be said that he has a very high conception of his duties. Although he has held his portfolio for less than two years, this is his second visit to the Pacific Coast. This gives some indication of his activities, but at the same time it should be further said that he is constantly travelling throughout the country, informing himself at first hand of laboring conditions, lending his counsel to adjust differences, and giving the wisdom of his experience to both employer and employee whenever it is sought. He has proved himself a strong member of the Cabinet, with a well-adjusted view of his task which is one that requires considerable tact, and the combines executive ability with a fine sense of proportion, qualities that have won him a deserved popularity.

At a meeting of the Brant County Bowling Association, held at the Heather Club last night, it was decided to hold the fourth annual tournament on Civic Holiday (Monday, Aug. 11).

The following officers were elected last night:
 Honorary President, Lloyd Harris. President, T. L. Wood.
 Vice-Presidents, Robert Inksater, W. H. Inglis.
 Secretary-Treas., R. C. Burns.
 Executive: D. G. Husband, A. Duncan, N. W. Creech, E. Corey, H. A. Crooks (Paris), W. H. Biggar (Mt Pleasant), W. H. McNeilly (St. George), Dr. Anderson, (Scotland).
 Umpires: J. Smiley, Dr. Logie, T. Woodratt, W. T. Henderson, Dr. Wiley, T. McPhail, E. E. Sheppard, E. C. Tench, W. Lahey.

In addition to the Lloyd Harris County Trophy and the Association Cup, the President, T. L. Wood is offering a consolation prize.

This is the great annual gathering of city and county bowlers, and there will be keen rivalry over the Harris Trophy, as the Heathers have already won it twice, and another win would give them permanent possession. It was won by the Pastimes last year, and they now hold it. Thirty-two rinks were entered in the tournament last year, and more are expected this year.

CITY NEWS ITEMS

THE PROBS

TORONTO, Ont., July 19.—The barometer is now lowest over Quebec and the New England states and highest over the Western provinces, and northwestern states. Showers occurred yesterday in eastern Ontario and the Maritime provinces, but the weather has been fine and warm in nearly all parts of the Dominion. In the western provinces for the past week it has been all that could be desired for crop growth.

FORECASTS.

Moderate to fresh west and north-west winds, fine and moderately warm to-day and on Sunday.

Going to Hamilton

The Dufferin Rifles will go to Hamilton on August 14, to take part in the Hamilton Centennial. Two thousand troops are expected to be in the Ambitious City.

Recent Marriages.

Rev. G. C. McKenzie on the 16th inst. united in marriage Andrew A. McPhee, and Lillian Dudley, and on the 17th, George Allan Johnson and Annie Pauline Dukes.

Still Growing

Brantford bank clearings during the week ending July 17th showed an advance of 13.5 per cent. In many other centres there was a decrease, Ottawa by 31 per cent, Toronto 23 per cent, and so on.

Attractive Form

A pamphlet in attractive form has just been issued by the Greater Brantford Association concerning Brantford. It contains much useful information about the city, and will prove very handy for reference.

A New Depot

The Grand Trunk Railway is about to construct a handsome new depot at Simcoo, with big yard room. The building of the Lake Erie & Northern Railway is thought to have accelerated the step.

Mr. Bunnell Retiring

Mr. A. K. Bunnell, President of the Chartered Accountants' Association, is retiring from office this year. Great progress by the association have marked his term of office. The annual meeting of the association is being held at the Clifton House, Niagara Falls to-day.

Was a Success

At the regular monthly meeting of the Grocers' and Butchers' Association in the K. of P. Hall, over the Bank of Hamilton, Tuesday evening, the business in connection with the excursion, Wednesday, will be taken up. The grocers and butchers report they came out alright financially.

Sergeants Campfire

Last evening the sergeants of the Dufferin Rifles held a campfire on Slater's Island. The party numbered fifty, and a jolly evening was spent in songs and music. Caterer Crunback served a dainty lunch. The evening was voted one of the best yet spent by the sergeants. The party left on the 10.40 car for the city.

Motorists Beware

Chief Slemm stated this morning that he intended to strictly enforce the law in connection with the running of automobiles and motor cycles. In reference to the former, all those who are caught exceeding the speed limit, will be brought before the magistrate. The law distinctly states that no person under the age of 18 years is allowed to run an auto. The chief said that he will put his foot down on youngsters running machines, and all who break the law will be prosecuted. Motor cyclists who are using the city streets for speeding, will also find themselves in trouble if they fall under the eyes of the police.

Colborne St. Picnic

The annual picnic of the Colborne street Methodist church Sunday school was held yesterday at Grimsby Beach, about three hundred going. The picnicers left the city at 10.45 by special radial cars and arrived at their destination about one o'clock. Lunch was served by an efficient corps of ladies, which was greatly enjoyed, after the ride through the country. During the afternoon games were played and races were run off and many went in bathing. There were several swimming races. Suitable prizes were given to the winners of the events. At 6 o'clock lunch was served, and at 8.45 the pleasure seekers left for home, arriving in the city about 11.45, after spending a pleasant day in the open.

Two large picnics are being held at Mohawk Park this afternoon. The annual outing of the employees of the Verity Flow Company and the first picnic under the auspices of the Echo Place Improvement Association.

Wants Extension.

If A. Cunningham the baker, who carries on his business at the corner of Erie Avenue and Port Streets, can secure an extension and be supplied with city water, just 85 feet outside the city limits he will erect a new bakery costing between $10,000 and $12,000 and would, when the same is completed, employ about 14 or 15 hands. Just whether those in charge in front of the knives would consent to extending the sewer main 85 feet farther down Erie Avenue remains to be seen.

Board of Works

The members of the Board of Works committee met at the city hall yesterday afternoon and made a short tour of inspection around the city. They visited West Brantford and looked over the condition of the road on Richardson street. They decided not to move the corporation yard in West Brantford to the talked-of Greenwich street site. The old poultry building at the Agricultural Park will be moved to the corporation yard and used to store implements in.

Young Man Cut by Mower

A young man named Joseph Harp met with a painful accident about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a field opposite Mohawk Park. He was driving a team of horses attached to a mower, and was cutting the hay in the field. He got off the machine to fix it, and was in a crouched position in front of the knives, which without warning the horses started. The knives came in contact with his legs, which were badly lacerated. He yelled at the horses and they stopped before receiving further injuries. He called for help, and his appeal was answered by a man who was also working in the field. The ambulance was summoned and he was conveyed to the hospital, where Dr. Phillips dressed his wounds.

Laid at Rest

The Late Charles Chambers. All that was mortal of the late Chas. Chambers was laid peacefully to rest yesterday afternoon in Greenwood cemetery. Impressive services were conducted at the deceased's late residence, 61 William St., and at the grave by Archdeacon Mackenzie.

The Late William Ott

The funeral of the late William Ott took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 29 Walnut St. to Greenwood cemetery and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Saunders conducted the services at the house and grave.

The pallbearers were five sons, Fred, Edward, William, Arthur, Albert and Mr. Summerhays, son-in-law.

The following beautiful floral pieces testified to the sympathy extended and to the esteem in which the deceased was held:

TEMPLE BUILDING

You Ought to Save One-Sixth of Your Income!

One-sixth of one's income should be saved and profitably invested as a provision against life's "rainy days." Experts say that a man should save each year of least as much as he pays out for rent. To put the whole sixth into life assurance would be sensible. Certainly one-half of the sixth should go into life insurance.

Suppose then we save a twelfth and that your income is $100 per month; that will mean $100 a year to devote to life insurance.

ABOUT $100 A YEAR WILL PROVIDE FOR A MAN OF 30.

$4,000.00	$2,500.00	$3,000.00

PARLIAMENT SITS TILL BREAKFAST TIME

Anger and Laughter Over the Plural Voting Bill.

One of the longest and one of the stormiest sittings of the House of Commons began on Wednesday and continued till 8 o'clock on Thursday morning, when weary members streamed out of the house just as the rush of daily workers into town was at its height.

Early in the sitting there was an angry passage in which Viscount Wolmer and Sir Maurice Levy were chiefly concerned. Viscount Wolmer asked leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1855, making it a corrupt practice for anybody to make a mis-statement of fact with the intention of affecting the result of an election. In doing so the viscount referred to the recent Leicester by-election. On that occasion, he said, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald stated that there was not a word of truth in a certain manifesto issued during that election, and he therefore thought that thousands of the electors went to the poll under a misapprehension. Democratic government would be impossible if the eleventh hour lie was to become habitual.

Sir Maurice Levy opposed the Bill and went on to say he did not think any member of the House really believed there was any sincerity in the noble lord in—

Here he was interrupted by loud Opposition cries of "Order" and "Withdraw," and the uproar continued until the Speaker intervened.

Order being restored, Sir Maurice Levy said that in order to justify his statement he need only refer to the action of the noble lord when he (Sir Maurice) was assisting in presenting the hon. member for Leicester. Then the noble lord threw across the House a most vulgar and insulting taunt.

Lord Wolmer: On a point of order, sir. Is the hon. member entitled to make an accusation of that sort.

The Speaker: Is it not a fact that the noble lord said to the hon. member as he came to the House, "A forged telegram?"

Lord Wolmer, who was very pale, then said, "Wasn't it a forged telegram?"

The Speaker: If the noble lord made use of such an expression, I don't think it is for him to object to what the hon. member said. (Loud Ministerial cheers and uproar.)

Sir Maurice Levy: There was no forged telegram at all. The noble lord should be the last man to accuse me of a forged telegram—he, a man who is so closely associated with and related to one who—

Again the hon. member was interrupted by loud Opposition cries of "Order" and the Speaker once more intervened. "The hon. member is hardly speaking to the motion," he said. "He is bringing some charges, and I don't know to what they refer, but evidently they cannot relate to this motion."

Lord Wolmer's Bill

Lord Wolmer's Bill, which was given permission to introduce his Bill, which was read a second time.

For some hours following this the House was discussing the Plural Voting Bill in Committee, and not until after eight, when everybody was tired out, was the sitting broken to a close. Many were the amusing incidents which arose chiefly out of the efforts of various members to bring the sitting to an end as the clock struck onward.

Mr. Bonar Law moved to stop in good time and wished to report progress, and Mr. Pease, who had the measure in hand, was willing if they promise to finish the work on Friday. But this did not please the Opposition. So the Government supporters shouted "Go on."

Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen, at a later stage, wanted to raise a point of order, but having no hat at hand could not, according to the rules, un-

ROMANCE OF MARQUIS AND VERY RICH WIDOW

Lord Hertford's Engagement to Mrs. Mosscockle Ended.

It is by no means an uninteresting coincidence that the announcement of the breaking off of Lord Hertford's engagement is made when the great Scott will case is in progress. The wealth which is there at stake was, at least in a large part, originally the property of a former Lord Hertford, Lord Hertford, who was formerly well known as the Earl of Parnmouth had been engaged to Mrs. Mosscockle, the widow of Mr. Charles Mosscockle, a solicitor, who left about £285,000 when he died in 1904.

The engagement was announced only last May, and it was stated shortly afterwards that the marriage would take place in June. Then there came an announcement that the marriage would not take place so soon; and, lastly, on Thursday, the following appeared:

"The marriage arranged between the Marquis of Hertford and Mrs. Mosscockle, who was formerly the Countess of Hertford, was dissolved on the 15th inst. by mutual consent. The marriage was annulled five years later on his wife's petition. He has been soldier, actor, journalist, sheep farmer, dog breeder, wine agent, and poultry fancier. His first appearance in public was made at Perth in 1892, when he organized a charity performance, and took the place of a young lady who failed to appear. He then gave a skit dance with great success.

Later he went on the stage professionally first of all in the United States, and then at Hobart, Tasmania. He made a great impression with his singing, acting, and skit dancing. He wrote, and composed a play, "The Pigeon House," produced it himself, and as "Eric Hope" played the leading part.

The money involved in the Scott will case now being fought was once the property of the fourth Marquis of Hertford, who died a bachelor, and left everything in his power to the late Sir Edward Wallace.

It was thought not improbable that the late Sir Richard, when he died, might leave some of his wealth to the Hertford family; but he did not do so, and the marvellous Wallace collection at Hasted House, is now the property of the nation.

Mrs. Mosscockle is a lady well known in society. Before her marriage in 1883 she was Miss Harriet Sparrow. She has a town house in Hertford-street, another coincidence—and a fine country place at Clewer Park, Berkshire. She takes a deep interest in music, and is frequently present at the Opera.

Her picture, painted with a Japanese enamel on her lap, was seen at the Royal Academy a few years ago.

MAGISTRATE SAYS SHE IS NOT RESPECTABLE

Magistrate's View of Chorus Girls, Artists, Models and Cinema Actress.

An attractive, smartly dressed girl of nineteen, Renee Smith, again appeared at West London, on Saturday charged with stealing two gold watches belonging to Lorenzo de Sarache, and Enrique Marte, young Spanish students, living at Stanwick Mansions, Hammersmith.

The girl was taken to the flat by one of the young men and lived there for a fortnight. After she left the watches were missed, and when she was arrested she admitted she had sold them. She also told the detective that she was alone in the world, that she came up to London two years ago from Nottingham, where she had been in a boarding school, and that she had since been employed as a chorus girl occasionally. The magistrate had remanded her in order that she might give information respecting her friends, etc.

Detective Southland now informed his worship that she had given no further information, except that she had been an artist's model for a certain gentleman, who was present in court, and that she had stayed with a lady at Kew.

Smith handed a letter to the magistrate who, after perusing it, observed that she did not seem to be the sort of girl she was, and he accepted what she stated in the letter.

"I am not a girl of that sort at all," asserted Smith. "I am very sorry for what I have done and I will prove myself a good girl if you give me a chance."

It's a difficult case to deal with," observed Mr. Fordham. "You have been a chorus girl, an artist's model, and something at a picture theatre. None of that sounds very respectable. Of course, one can have sympathy with any man who picked up a girl in the street and then lost his watch, but you don't seem a likely girl for a home, and I shall sentence you to one month's imprisonment in the second division."

STRONG MAN WINS SUIT AGAINST MAIL

London Publication Makes Apology and Agrees to Pay a Substantial Sum.

Known as "Apollo," the strong man, Mr. William Banker brought a libel action against Mr. A. Morton "The Daily Mail," the London Mail, the London Mail Syndicate, Ltd., owners of the paper, and the printers, the Walbrook Company, Ltd. The action was settled before Mr. Justice Darling in the High Court on Thursday, the defendant agreeing to pay Mr. Banker a substantial sum, including costs, and apologising.

Counsel stated that Mr. Banker had earned as much as £50 a week on the music hall stage. In 1900 he formed a school of physical culture, and in Jan. 1912 the "London Mail" published under the heading, "Private Views of Apollo," an advertisement which was stated to have appeared in an eminently respectable London "daily."

Gentleman exponent of physical culture receives ladies at private house for lessons. Very quiet and select. Highest references.—Apply Apollo.

"This is a most outrageous advertisement, and never ought to have been allowed to appear (commented the "London Mail").

The advertiser is a man who was kicked out of Berlin a few years ago, and who systematically preys upon women. I understand that the police have their eye upon this neighborhood, whose residence is in the neighborhood of Bayswater."

Mr. Gregory said there was no such advertisement as suggested in any paper, and this paragraph was based on invention.

Mr. Sanders, for the defence, said he wished in the most qualified manner, on behalf of the defendants, to say that there was no imputation against the character of Mr. Banker in any shape or form. He was not the person intended to be referred to.

In giving judgment for Mr. Banker, Mr. Justice Darling said: "I have no knowledge what the sum of money is that the plaintiff has accepted, but I feel perfectly certain that if this case had been left to the jury they would

INTERRUPTED WEDDING

Unprecedented scenes were witnessed in St. James's Church, Brighton on Wednesday, when a wedding was to take place. The contracting parties, with bridesmaids and others, assembled for the solemnization of the marriage, the bride's mother being present.

The bride's father entered the church and objected to his daughter being married, as she was not twenty one and he had not consented.

The clergyman, the Rev. C. A. Dicker, interposed, but all attempts at a settlement failed.

Eventually the father said he would give his consent if his daughter would go home with them. This she declined to do, but, after further discussion, she left the church with her mother, and accompanied by the bridesmaids, they entered a cab and drove away.

PEERS DISCUSS MONEYLENDERS

One of Their Number Said to be in the Business - Lord Newton's Bill.

Money, or rather moneylenders, was the ever entertaining subject to which Monday was devoted in the House of Lords. The second reading of the Moneylenders Bill was moved by Lord Newton, who made many interesting points in seeking the success of the measure. Not the least surprising statement was one to the effect that he had always understood that one of the most persistent of circulating moneylenders was the representative of a noble lord, who was a member of that House. "If this Bill, passes," Lord Newton reflected, "it is possible that some interesting disclosures may be made."

The Bill contained three novel points, the first being that by its provisions a money-lending company should be forced to describe itself as such. The second was that moneylenders should give their own names as well as the name or names they assumed for business purposes. The third was that circulars from moneylenders should only be sent when they are asked for in advance.

In elaborating these points, Lord Newton made some amusing statements. With regard to names, he said, he had been told by one who was better acquainted than he was with the tribe of usurer, that the reason moneylenders took fictitious names was that if their real names were disclosed in the neighborhoods where they lived, their landlords would consider that the reputation of the district would suffer, and the moneylender's social status (under an assumed name) would suffer.

His own daughter, Lord Newton said, in reference to a recent case, was offered £50,000 in banknotes, unknown to him, by a firm having the imposing title of Harmsworth Limited. The firm, his lordship added, turned out to be a creature named Levene, who, with his brother, represented the company in question.

As to the possibility of interesting disclosures as to a noble lord being the principal of a moneylending firm, Lord Newton said that it might then be a consolation to some unfortunate young man to find that he was really paying 150 per cent. to some patrician of distinguished and ancient lineage.

From generalities Lord Newton went on to particular instances, and spoke of a relative who fell into the hands of the late Samuel Lewis, who, he said, amassed an enormous fortune at the expense of gilded youth. Samuel Lewis insisted on the speaker's relative paying three times as much as he had borrowed. Lewis, he said, was looked on as a favourable specimen of his class, and if so, the remainder must be worse than had been imagined.

The Earl of Meath, Viscount Haldane, Lord Joicey, and Lord Lansdowne were among those who supported the Bill. The Earl of Meath remarked that he had never borrowed, but he was pestered with circulars every day.

"Renewal attention" on behalf of the Government was promised by Lord Haldane, and the Bill was then read a second time.

AUSTRALIA'S ADMIRAL KNIGHTED

The King Visits the Colony's New Cruiser at Portsmouth.

The King travelled to Portsmouth by special train on Monday morning to inspect the new battle cruiser Australia, built at the expense of the Commonwealth Government. The vessel is the flagship of the Australian Navy, and flies the flag of Rear Admiral George E. Patey, M.V.O., the first Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Australian ships.

The great vessel, built at Clydebank, had been lying at Portsmouth for some days preparing for her voyage to Australia, and she was brought from the new lock to the south railway jetty, so as to be close to the arrival platform of the Royal train.

When the latter steamed in punctually at noon the sun was shining brightly, and the gaily-decked warships in harbor, all flying masted ensigns, and dressed from stem to stern overall with rainbow bunting, presented a very picturesque appearance. This and the firing of the Royal salute when the Royal Standard was hoisted aboard the Australian, and again when the King left, constituted the only outward evidence of the presence of the Sovereign.

His Majesty and the Prince of Wales, wearing the uniforms of admiral of the fleet and lieutenant respectively, were attended by the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth and by a small suite. They were met on arrival by Admiral Sir Hedworth Meux, Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, and Rear Admiral Herbert L. Heath, M.V.O., superintendent of the dockyard, with their personal staffs, together with Rear Admiral Patey and Captain Ratcliffe, the naval officer commanding the Australia.

Proceeding on board, His Majesty passed in review the naval and marine guard of the ship's crew drawn up on the quarter deck, and made a close inspection of the vessel, visiting the barbettes in which the 13.5 inch guns are mounted, and displaying keen seamanship interest in all the details that were pointed out to him in the offensive and defensive armament of the vessel.

His Majesty also went down to the mess deck, where he talked pleasantly to the petty officers. He also looked into the ship's sick quarters, where several men lay ill. The Australia is a huge ship of the all-big-gun type, and as the King's eye ranged approvingly over her armament and general equipment he was heard to say, "What a fine ship she is!"

Stopping here and there to discuss a feature or to speak with a man, the King made his way all over the cruiser, and finally emerged upon the wide sweep of the quarter-deck.

Here, between the enormous battle guns, the officers of the ship were grouped. The King, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Sir George Acid, seated himself in front of the group, and a photograph was taken when the King was photographed with the Admiral and senior officer only. It was just after this ceremony that his Majesty smilingly asked Rear Admiral Patey to step forward and the King, borrowing a sword from one of his suite, gave him the accolade of knighthood.

The guards then fell in again, as the King prepared to leave the ship. Before doing so, he turned to the crew and said:

"I wish you a pleasant voyage and a happy commission: good-by. A burst of cheering followed this brief speech.

LONGER POLLING HOURS

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Our of Germany That Will Last Into the Autumn.

The Prince of Wales left London for Germany on Tuesday night. He is going to Munich, afterwards to Dresden and other places and will then go to Neu Strelitz on a visit of some weeks' duration to the Grand Ducal Court there. The length of his stay is not fixed, but it is probable that the Prince will not be back in England until he goes with his parents to Scotland in the autumn.

The Prince was accompanied by Major the Hon. William Cadogan, Professor Fiedler, of Oxford University, M. Tahir, a detective officer from Scotland Yard, specially selected for his knowledge of German. He left by the nine o'clock boat train from Victoria for Dover, a special compartment being reserved.

Learning at Southampton that a number of French officers who had been competing at Olympia were travelling back home by the same train, he asked his equester to send for the principal of them, and with the three chief officers he conversed for some time in their own language expressing the hope that they had had a pleasant time in London, and congratulated them on the fine performance of themselves and the other representatives of France at the Horse Show.

The third was that circulars from moneylenders should only be sent when they are asked for in advance.

In elaborating these points, Lord Newton made some amusing statements. With regard to names, he said he had been told by one who was better acquainted than he was with the tribe of usurer, that the moneylenders took fictitious names was that if their real names were disclosed in the neighborhood where they lived, their lands would consider that the reputation of the district would suffer, and the moneylender's social status (under an assumed name) would be lowered.

Lord Newton's own daughter, Lord Newton in reference to a recent case, offered £50,000 in banknotes, known to him, by a firm having an imposing title of Harmsworth, limited. The firm, his lordship pointed out, turned out to be a creature of Lord Levene, who, with his brother, represented the company in question.

As to the possibility of interesting disclosures as to a noble lord being principal of a moneylending company, Lord Newton said that it was then he had a consultation to some fortunate young man to find that he was really paying 150 per cent. to the proprietor of distinguished and neat lineage.

From generalities Lord Newton went on to particular instances, and he said of a relative who fell into the hands of the late Samuel Lewis, he said, amassed an enormous fortune at the expense of gilded youth. Samuel Lewis insisted on the speaker's relative paying three times as much as he had borrowed, and he still was looked on as a desirable specimen of his class, and if so, the remainder must be more than had been imagined.

The Earl of Meath, Viscount Halifax, Lord Foley and Lord Lansdowne were among those who supported the Bill. The Earl of Meath pointed out that he had never borrowed, but he was pestered with circulars every day.

Benevolent attention on behalf of the Government was promised by Mr. Haldane, and the Bill was then read a second time.

FROM the photographs taken at the Assise and Longchamps races, it is evident that draped gowns are still established fashion. The new sashes, which are not supplied with these gowns, have revolutionized the features to any great extent as yet, they nevertheless make the afternoon frock and the elaborate tulle suit distinctly different from those of last year. Then drapery was in its best stage, now it is accepted, and in the various pretty models such as are to be seen on this page, a number of lovely gowns photographed at the latest Paris race meet.

The least interesting thing about these pictures from the races are the fashionable accessories worn, which are well dressed women as important gowns themselves. The new sashes wound about the figure in manifold ways, brightening by their colorings or softening some of the seams that shape the variously draped skirts, or again combining the figure into graceful proportions. Arm bags and purses, which are as much in style as frocks, follow the trend of the skirts, and

In the photographs here accessories play an important part, and a description will include many of the most interesting, small round buttons. The corsage is cut with over bretelles of the same material, and the front edges, widely separated, reveal a lace which is fastened jauntily with a small cluster of satin flowers. Wide short chiffon sash ends fall from the back of the skirt and in front a semi-circular ornament, beautifully embroidered, breaks the monotony of the straight belt.

The small straw hat with slightly dipped and rolled brim has a broad velvet ribbon end that, falling in a loose end, is effectively thrown over the opposite shoulder. No. 2 is much more elaborate in detail and is a striking combination of black and imperial yellow. The black is the draped skirt, which is of satin. In front it drapes originally up over the black, chiffon tunic to the belt. The yellow is used as the fine braiding that covers in intricate design, both the

about the figure is the odd short coat like No. 5, on decided hollow lines, though longer and unfringed. It is cut with the new doublet rever that flashes between the shoulder and the neck, and is of bright coral red oponge embroidered with black. The space between the lapels is filled in with softly foiled white tulle and a standing lace frill that follows the inside lapel edges, the outside edge being decorated

In pretty color harmony with it is No. 7, a porcelaine taffeta dress striped with white with a white girdle belt and having lingerie frills at the throat.

No. 8, a Bechoff-David model, is of the new ivory white crepon and is very interesting in the way the skirt pieces are caught up into drapery with a hanging ornament of mask and shield.

The satin skirt has the drapery edge partly concealed by narrow sash ends, knotted and fringed, and the rounded lower edge reveals the latest novelty sandal slippers, differing from those of olden times in that they are modernized by heels. The flat cravat bow with which they are adorned and the satin ribbon lacings are specially lovely with the draped skirt with rounded corners, which recall pretty shoes and silk clad ankles.

No. 6, another one of those fascinating mantle and skirt combinations, is of a delightful yellow-green tulle shade of

No. 9, also a Bechoff-David model, is of white crepon, part of which, tucked in a new way, makes the little coat top and back panel. This dress also has a matching parasol of the plain and the tulle net. A vivid belt of red fastens in front under a silken flower. Another large flower catches a couple of drapery folds and limits the slash in the side of the skirt. Another lace overdress is combined with a black satin skirt in No. 10. A round feather hat is an accessory that has not been worn for a number of seasons.

No. 11, the such is introduced on an emerald green madras suit, replacing the belt that has usually straggled the face of the season's tailored coats.

The use of having a tailored sportswear or rich, as outfit in wool, the coat and cap and the skirt of the same color has been made across and worked in two shades of soft pink. The flowers are accompanied by green leaves, also in beads, and are arranged in borders, the whole of the net being filled in with jet. The borders form the fronts of the skirt. The friends of Mr. Eva Tillson Baird of Tealandia, Sask., a former Tillsonburg girl and once on the teaching staff of Haverall College, Toronto, and where she first was a pupil, will be pleased to hear that her musical talents are becoming recognized in the west where she now resides. At the recent musical festival held at Regina, Mrs. Baird won the gold medal in the solo professional mezzo-soprano class. As Eva Tillson she was well known in Brantford and many friends rejoice with her in her well-earned success.

The special number of "Echoes," the official paper of the I. O. D. E. for June, 1913 has been received by the members who are subscribers and should prove of interest as it embraces the work of all the Chapters now organized both in Canada and the United States. Splendid work has been taken up and accomplished by the order wherever a branch has started. New York, Brooklyn, New Jersey and California send reports from thirty-five and in Canada the reports are most gratifying.

Mr. Logan Sutherland is in camp at Toronto this week as one of the members of the Headquarters Patrol, of which Mr. Macfarlane is in charge—the other Brantford boys, all of whom are instructors, are the Messrs. Tipper, Beckett, (2) Colquhoun, (2)

WHOSE WORK BROUGHT RAILROAD STRIKE CONFERENCE

MRS. J. BORDEN HARRIMAN

That the honor of averting the railroad strike, which threatened to tie up the commerce of the entire Eastern part of the United States, belongs to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, niece of E. H. Harriman, late railroad king, was admitted at the White House.

Mrs. Harriman, the only woman ever appointed a member of the Industrial Commission, heard rumors of a strike before the trouble found its way into print. She went at once to the President and placed the matter before him, laying particular emphasis on the fact that the strike would tie up completely Eastern commerce and might seriously damage the record of the democratic administration.

Miss Carson is spending July and a part of August at the College of Art, Toronto.

Mrs. W. L. Hughes returned home to-day after spending a week at Bay-side on Lake Huron.

Miss Nana Magner, of New York City, is the guest of Miss Maud Carroll, 47 Chatham Street.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Simpson, Park Ave. have returned from an extended trip through the Canadian West.

Mrs. Frank Carson has returned after a two weeks' visit in Toronto, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kerwin.

Mr. R. M. Roddick, the former popular Brantford druggist, was a visitor in the city for a few days this week.

The usual fortnightly dance will be held at the Brantford Golf and Country Club this evening, music being supplied.

Mr. William Russell, Peterboro, and Miss Russell, Berlin, are the guests for the week-end at David Eames 25 Duke Street.

Mr. W. H. Carroll, of New York, is spending his holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Carroll, 47 Chatham Street.

Mrs. Thomas Stuart of 258 Murray St. has returned after a three weeks' visit with her brother, Mr. Joe Johnson of the New Harvey House, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Mr. W. Hastings Webbing is reported to have had a fairly good night and his condition at time of going to press is practically about the same as yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Carson, the superintendent, Miss Foster, secretary and four or five of the nurses from the Brantford General Hospital enjoyed an outing at ohawk Park.

Miss Criggle and Miss Botting, nurse in charge and assistant nurse are now installed at the Brant Sanitarium, and matters are quickly being gotten in shape for occupancy although not yet ready for inspection. Probably by the end of next week visitors and those interested will be made welcome, but of that, formal notice will be made later.

A dance is being held at the Burlington Country Club this evening for the members, when all attending must appear in the dress of a child from ten to fifteen years of age, only those attired in this way to be admitted, not very original, perhaps, but no doubt it will prove more or less of a novelty and it certainly will create no end of amusement to those participating.

The friends of Mr. Eva Tillson Baird of Tealandia, Sask., a former Tillsonburg girl and once on the teaching staff of Haverall College, Toronto, and where she first was a pupil, will be pleased to hear that her musical talents are becoming recognized in the west where she now resides. Matthews, Dingle and Waddington. The stationing point is St. Andrews. Many Brantford friends of Miss Hope Thompson, sister of Mr. Chas. Thompson, of this city, and whose father was a nephew of the late S. M. Thompson, were delighted to hear of her recent success in Washington, D. C., where she headed the lists in honor—arrived off scholarships, etc., etc., in the finals at law securing innumerable "letters"—to add to her name as well. Miss Thompson has been occupying the post of private secretary to the Secretary of State at Washington for several years, where her services have been simply invaluable. The law course having been taken up by her simply as an aid to her along that line of work, an absurd tangle now arise she is in a position to untangle them. Her mother was Miss Mary Keachie of this city—now a widow, who with her daughters, makes her home at the United States Capital.

Double Header To-morrow

Boosters' day will be observed at Berlin next Wednesday when London, the leaders of the Canadian League, and the Dutchmen will play a double-header. The directors of the club will endeavor to have the biggest crowd that has ever attended a Canadian game in this city present to boost the team out of the cellar position.

Manager Chaney's new catcher, taken on when both Sweeney and Gossett were hurt after Sterrett had been sold, is an Italian and his name is Perico and not Smith, which is the name tacked on to him by the scorer for some unexplained reason. He has been playing with Kingston in the New York-New Jersey Class D. League.

the Dutchmen in the seventh frame, gave a victory to the tail-enders yesterday.

The fireworks started when Harris muddled on a cooler from Sweeney's clout strike. A single by White, another by Belz and still another by Getzie tallied for two scores. Dorbeck was then replaced by Kirkley off whose flinging the Dutchmen men snatched two more runs. A single by Bradshaw, and a bad error by Schaefer, let in Berlin's sixth tally. OTTAWA TROUNCED HAMILTON

The Senators Fielded Poorly but Swatted the Ball Hard

OTTAWA, July 19.—With the score tied three times during the game, Ottawa finally defeated Hamilton in the second game of the series by the score of 8 to 7, after a thrilling ten-inning struggle. The score was tied in the ninth inning; and it appeared as though the visitors had the game won when they scored another in the tenth inning. Ottawa, however, started a batting bee in their part of the last inning which resulted in Lage and Powers crossing the plate for the two winning runs. The visitors used three pitchers, while Kiblat went the whole game for Ottawa. Score:—
 Ottawa 000200012—8

Strengthening the Saints

ST. THOMAS, July 19.—In an effort to prevent further sliding on the part of the St. Thomas team, Manager Ort has signed Johnny Coeash of Detroit to play right field in place of "Midge" Craven and has wired Pitcher Hughley of Kalamazoo to report. He has also asked Manager Donovan of Providence to send him one of his spare twirlers.

Liners.

Boosters' day will be observed at Berlin next Wednesday when London, the leaders of the Canadian League, and the Dutchmen will play a double-header. The directors of the club will endeavor to have the biggest crowd that has ever attended a Canadian game in this city present to boost the team out of the cellar position.

Manager Chaney's new catcher, taken on when both Sweeney and Gossett were hurt after Sterrett had been sold, is an Italian and his name is Perico and not Smith, which is the name tacked on to him by the scorer for some unexplained reason. He has been playing with Kingston in the New York-New Jersey Class D. League.

LITTLE TOO MUCH "CHUBBY" COOSE

Pitched Championship Ball and Beat Peterboro 8-0.

By a great reversal in form the Red Sox turned around and defeated Peterboro, and shut them out 8 to 0 yesterday afternoon. The Sox looked like a brand new team and real ball players. They played Peterboro completely off their feet. The hero of the day was "Chubby" Coose, who shut the Petes out, allowing them no hits. He got three hits in four times at bat. The game was played in one hour and 13 minutes, it being the record for this season on the Brantford grounds. Kane shifted the batting order and it seemed to have the desired effect. Slemm played centre field and Burrell tight. Wagner and Ivers pulled off a nice double steal. Wagner came home from second on the deal, giving him an extra stolen base.

The Brants scored one in the fourth, followed by two in the fifth. In the seventh the Sox got after Belding and five men crossed the plate. Tesch singled; Lamond sacrificed. Coose singled. Nelson and Coose doubled. Ivers drew four balls. Wagner and Ivers pulled off a double steal. Wagner scoring from second. Semin fanned. Kane beat out a slow one. Burrell singled, but Kane was out going to third. This batting rally took the heart out of Peterboro and Coose had no trouble disposing of them in the remaining two innings.

Ahead of Last Year.

TORONTO, July 18.—Summer tourists business in Ontario, taking into consideration the Grand Trunk Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern lines, is about seventeen per cent ahead of last year, according to reports for May and June. July is keeping up well, but no receipts are available yet.

Barbers Endorse It.

TORONTO, July 18.—The master barbers have endorsed the sanitary regulations governing barber shops, put forth by the medical health officer, and will call a mass meeting of all the barbers in the city to decree a uniform price of fifteen cents for a shave.

Hard to Choose.

London springs a report that Matteson, the Tecumseh catcher, is wanted here as manager. It is not improbable that Amby Kane next year will be found in new pastures, and it is the writers opinion that he will have more success elsewhere than he ever had in Brantford. Certainly President Nelson will have to go out of town to secure a man to succeed Kane. That fellow, Rogers, in Ottawa looks not only like a great ball player, but a brainy one as well. Matteson is a good catcher, but that is the only position where he can fit in. It would require some money to secure Rogers, but it might be worth while.

Hamilton Jockey Club Summer Meet Opens Next Week.

The Hamilton Jockey Club promises an excellent bill of fare to their patrons next Saturday, July 20th, when the Summer Meeting will be inaugurated. There has been a big demand for stabling, many horses coming on from Kentucky which will add considerably to the interest in the sport as some of the best thoroughbreds from the blue grass region will sport skill at Hamilton. The meeting continues until Saturday, August 2nd, when the Hamilton Cup will be the feature of the closing day. Among the nominations for this race are many of the best horses in training. Ten Point and Rudolph, two of the best horses in America are now at the Hamilton course being pointed for this race. Among others likely to face the starter are: Lochiel, Flabbercast, Plate Glass, Milton B. Great Britain, Buckhorn, John Furlong, Malamont, Hamilton, Kleburne, Buskin and High Private. Unusual interest is centred in the Meeting and from all accounts it will be a banner gathering on the Canadian circuit this season.

No Shortage of Labor.

Nelson, the Red Sox third baseman, is the bright spot on the infield, and it is not on account of the color of his hair either. He shows real ability.

It might seem presumptuous to make a prediction that Brantford will beat Hamilton out in the league race this year, but that is what is going to happen.

It would be a wonderful thing if the Toronto club managed to get up around the top before the season closed. In the National League, Pittsburgh has started to climb in a remarkable way.

Burrell was shifted to right field and Slemm to centre yesterday in the hope of improving the latter's ability as a fielder. Duff will be coached by Kane, as he has all the earmarks of a ball player in the making.

That London has gathered together a great combination, is evidenced by the result of what they have done to St. Thomas. There ought to be some consolation to local fans when they read the scores of the past couple of days.

Yesterday was a good day for the baseball jokers. Some declared that a half holiday should be proclaimed, others that a cash consideration was involved in yesterday's victory over the Petes. Loud cheers were heard in the offing when Tesch came out of the fray with only one error. On top and above all everyone pulled for Chubby Coose to win his game, and Coose made sure of it. It was said at the first of the season that Chubby wasn't a pitcher! He had more of the real stuff on the ball yesterday than any Red Sox pitcher has shown this year. Coose and the gold watch are getting closer friends every day.

MATTERSON MAY MANAGE SOX

Story in London to That Effect—A Well Liked Player.

(London Free Press)
 President Nelson, of the Brantford Red Sox, made an effort to secure Matty Matteson from Manager Deaneu during the series the fore part of the week. The London player is wanted by the Brantford owner to manage the Red Sox the remainder of the season and to give him full sway for next season. However, the deal was not put through, since London's leader would not part with Matteson at this stage of the season, although there is a possibility that Matteson might be purchased from the London club for next season's manager of the Red Sox.

Matteson's thorough knowledge of the game is in a great measure responsible for the manner in which the hurling staff is going at the present time. Behind the bat there is a pleasant sensation of relief at once. Soreness, congestion and irritation leave the nose and throat, the head is cleared and every trace of cold or Catarrh is cured. American League

The veteran Charley Hickman is off on a scouting trip to the Pacific Coast and intermediate points for the Cleveland Naps. Elder, the left-hander from the University of Minnesota has taken Claus's place as the only southpaw on the Detroit team. Connie Mack announces that when Jack Coombs returns to the game in September he will be better than ever. It looks like another world's pennant for Connie.

The Naps have but one more game to play in Chicago this year, that being a single stand on September 24. Of the ten games played in the Windy City the Naps have won six. It is said that Joe Boehling's success is largely due to Nick Altrock's teaching. Nick has been showing the youngster everything in the art of twirling, and he has now rounded into a star.

Umpire Jack Sheridan returned to active duty so quietly that no one seemed to notice him until he bobbed up in Chicago, where he was given quite a reception. Incidentally Ferguson is missing.

A New York writer, in commenting on Baker Porton's refusal to report to Jersey City, says that he may have figured that base ball is no business for a man who could not make good with the Yankees.

Ty Cobb attempted to play second base for the Tigers against the Athletics Saturday. His bum knee must have bothered him. He had four chances and hoisted three of them and the errors helped lose the game.

With Neal Ball gone in Baltimore, Harold Janvin is the only utility man carried by the Boston Red Sox on the Western trip, counting of course that Engel is the regular first baseman and Jake Stahl merely a bench manager.

Announcement comes from Boston that President McAleer of the Red Sox has ordered St. Paul to return Shortstop Everett Scott at once. Scott was secured by the Saints last spring and has been playing good ball for the American Association team.

Walter Snell of Brooklyn, who during the past season captained the Brown University base ball team has signed with the Boston American League Club and will report about July 20. He is a first baseman and catcher. It was announced some time ago that Snell had signed with the Athletics, but Connie Mack passed him after he was hurt in a college game.

The Yanks won their first game at home on June 7. They won their first game in Chicago on July 10. These are two days that Frank Chance will mark down in his diary with red ink. It so happened, too, that Zeider, the former White Sox, was the deciding factor in the victory, though Jack Knight, who had come to the Yanks in exchange for Borton, that other White Sox, is a big part of it.

It was some blow to the opinions of certain wiseacres in St. Louis when George Foster of the Red Sox held the Browns hitless for eight innings in a recent game. Foster was bought on an option by Colonel Hedger for the Browns and sent back by Bobby Wallace, then manager, with

Lacrosse

There was an excellent turnout of lacrosse players last evening getting in readiness for their contest with St. Marys, which is scheduled to be played here behind the dyke on Wednesday next, the 23rd. It will be welcome but unexpected news to learn that Jack and Tom Kelly, who figured so prominently with the Reds and Blacks during their palmy days, are again enthusiastic as ever and have been practicing with the boys and will don a uniform against the Stone Town boys. This is certainly a great addition to the line-up.

National League

If Frank Schulte keeps on improving in his hitting he may soon be classed among the National League's 50 best batsmen.

Umpire Hank O'Day is reported as really seriously ill with stomach trouble and possibly may not return to the game this season.

Freddie Toney seems to go better when wearing Kentucky colors. He has pitched good ball for Louisville since his transfer from the Chicago Cubs.

It's great to be a comeback, but there are always unpleasant incidents. For instance a certain major league writer refers to "Pittsburgh's new recruit Bob McQuillan."

Perhaps it was because of injuries to Archer Bridwell and Zimmerman that President Lynch let John Evers stay in the game in spite of the fact that he struck Umpire Eason. With Evers also out, there would not have been enough of the Cub team left to make a game interesting and New York fans might have refused to pay to see it play.

Cincinnati announces the purchase of two new pitchers during the week. One is Bob Ingersoll from the Vancouver Club of the Northwestern League and the other Frank Harrington of the Lynn Club of the New England League. Fancy prices are said to have been paid for both. Harrington is a brother to Bill Harrington, now with Louisville and briefly with the Chicago Cubs.

Heine Zimmerman has nothing up on John Titus. Zimmerman picked up a $100 on the side, to be sure, by being good for two whole weeks and not being ejected from the field during that time. Titus, on the other hand, has raked in an extra hundred simoleons during the past week upon presumably less effort—by twice hitting the ball once in Brooklyn and the other time in Philadelphia.

Manager Clarke of the Pirates has filed charges with President Lynch against Umpire Brennan on the ground that the umpire ordered Pitcher Cooper to fight him. Cooper is said to have accepted, but Brennan canceled the engagement by refusing to appear.

Report has it that Manager Clarke of the Pirates has made Manager Dooin of the Phillies an offer for Cozy Dolan, payment to be in players.

Despite the fact that the St. Louis National League Club has had a very poor season financially, President Britton announces that the plans for building new stands next fall will be carried out. This might indicate, too, that Roger Bresnahan's boast that he would soon be owner of the Cardinal Club, because it was so embarrassed it must sell, was just hot air vibrating off the cheeks of the former "duke."

It took an old timer and second-string pitcher like Charlie Smith to put the crimp in the Giants' winning streak. The McGraw band had won 14 straight and was after a record when Smith, pitching for the Cubs on July 16, beat Matty 3 to 2. It was also. And it was not only a second-string pitcher but a substitute fielder that did the business. Miller's three-base hit deciding the issue in the sixth inning.

Among the minor leaguers upon whom Manager Stallings of the Braves has first call is Pitcher Mains of the Buffalo Club, who is regarded as one of the best twirlers in the International League. Mains was hit in the head by a batted ball some time ago, necessitating his temporary retirement from the game, although he is now back again. He has been doing grand work in the box all year and is expected to join the Braves in a thorough tryout at the close of the International season.

Remarkable Collection on View in Agnew and Are Dis MR. AUGUSTUS W

(Special Dispatch) LONDON ALL society is flocking to the gallery of Messrs. Agnew & Sons, Bond street, where there is a very remarkable collection of portraits by the Hungarian painter Philip A. de Laszio, who exhibited on behalf of the General Benevolent Institution a certain forceful original works which can be attributed to that rare and elusive genius. Traces of the Lawrence and Raeburn have been observed, but they are a convincing individual charm of interpretation and personality which are painter's own. Mr. de Laszio excels in his power of contrast. The subject is never posed or nervously strained, effective attitude. The figure to the spectator as perfect. The faces are full of temper character.

Lord Curzon is painted in his robes as Chancellor of Exchequer, but it is not the face of the man, the statesman, that chiefly looks on. Another extreme portrait is that of the Duke of Devonshire, a splendid example of masculinity in middle life. The female portraits are distinguished by a refined taste and a delicate touch. The life-size portrait of Marchioness of Stafford is a thrill of beauty by its exqu岸ling in the features and the harmony of color in the delicate scarf being painted with dexterity.

It is a remarkably good and active collection of pictures and Mr. Albert Besant that has been together at the Grosvenor Gallery, New Bond street, and the

OLD ENGLISH INN TO GO VENERABLE GRAND DUCHESS HAPPY

Hungarian Painter's Work Attracts London Society

Remarkable Collection of Portraits by Mr. Philip A. de Laszlo, on View in Agnew Galleries, Show Forceful Originality and Are Distinguished by Refined Treatment.

MR. AUGUSTUS WALKER'S NINTH EXHIBITION OPEN

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. All society is flocking to the galleries of Messrs. Agnew, in Old Bond street, where the attraction is a very remarkable collection of portraits by the Hungarian painter Mr. Philip A. de Laszlo, which are being exhibited on behalf of the Artists' Social Benevolent Institution. There is certain forceful originality in these works which can be attributed only to rare and elusive quality called genius. Traces of the influence of Lawrence and Raeburn have been noted by some observers, but behind it there are a convincing individuality and a certain interpretation of character and personality which are wholly the painter's own. Mr. de Laszlo, indeed, exerts in his power of concealing his art. The subject is never left to be posed or nervously straining after the effective stroke. The figures appeal to the spectator as perfectly natural. The faces are full of temperament and character. Lord Curzon is painted powerfully in his robes as Chancellor of Oxford University, but it is not the clothes, it is the face of the man, scholar, orator, statesman, that chiefly detains the onlooker. Another extremely clever portrait is that of the Duke of Portland, a splendid example of mature masculinity in middle life. The female portraits are distinguished by a refined treatment of the drapery. The life size portrait of the Marchioness of Stafford conveys a thrill of beauty by its exquisite modeling in the features and the delicate harmony of color in the drapery, the blue scarf being painted with wonderful dexterity.

It is a remarkably good and representative collection of pictures and studies by Mr. Albert Besant that has been brought together at the Grosvenor Galleries, in New Bond street, and the directors are being congratulated on the success of their efforts. It is, however, only possible to give a faint indication of the examples of the masterful French painter which an opportunity is given of seeing here. His force and grasp impress one throughout the four rooms which they fill. In the large gallery there is the portrait of Mme. Henri Lorette and daughter, painted in 1870, about the time of his residence near London, when, during two years, the biographical sketch in the catalogue states, he came under the influence of the old English masters and of the Raphaelites as well. Here, however, in this canvas, beautiful in character and color, the influence of Manet is quite evident. Near it hangs quite as striking a work, "The Man with the Yellow Mask," unsurpassed in richness of color, one of the many reminiscences of the artist's visit to India. The long gallery's chief contents are studies and cartoons for the various decorations carried out in Paris: "The Fourteenth of July," for example, lent by the City of Paris; the "Fain of Sin," by the Musée du Luxembourg; "The Sickness and "The Conventualist."

Hindoos, Acquitted by Judge, Convicted and Hanged on Appeal

Appeal Taken to Higher Court, Where They Were Sentenced in Spite of Friends' Efforts.

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. A TRAGIC story relating to the administration of British justice in India, which is likely to be raised in Parliament, has been made public in India, a London journal devoted to Indian affairs. The facts are set out in correspondence between Sir Henry Cotton and Lord Curzon. In connection with an agrarian dispute three land owners of Oudh—Chutkan Singh, Sikhdar Singh and Gunga Singh—were tried for murder before Mr. H. J. Bell, the Sessions Judge of Sitapur, a division of twenty-one years' standing. In Bell's judgment said: "I find it impossible to convict on the evidence offered, for I do not believe it." The accused were accordingly acquitted and set at liberty. This was on February 22, 1912. A curious feature of criminal procedure in India is that power is vested in a local government to appeal within six months to the High Court against such an acquittal. That was done. The new witnesses were examined, no oral evidence at all was before the court, and the decision of the judicial commission was set aside at a personal appeal of the Sessions Judge. The decision was to reverse the acquittal, to convict the accused and to direct that Chutkan Singh and Sikhdar Singh be hanged, and that Gunga Singh, the son of Sikhdar Singh, be sentenced to transportation for life. Thus two persons acquitted by one competent court were, on the same record without further evidence, sentenced to be hanged by another. Still more amazing, according to India, is the graver scandal which follows. The convicted persons appealed on August 27 to the Lieutenant Governor for a revision or commutation of the sentence. The Lieutenant Governor, who had appealed against their acquittal and who had prosecuted them, declined to interfere. In the meantime the date of the execution had been fixed for September 8. Counsel for the prisoners, and the father of one of the condemned men, overwhelmed the Lieutenant Governor and the government of India at Sitapur with telegrams praying that the date of the execution might be postponed to allow time for a further appeal for mercy to be submitted to the government of India, but the telegrams to the government of India were transmitted to the Lieutenant Governor, who remained obdurate, and Chutkan Singh and Sikhdar Singh were hanged.

Feeds Burglar and Sets Him Free

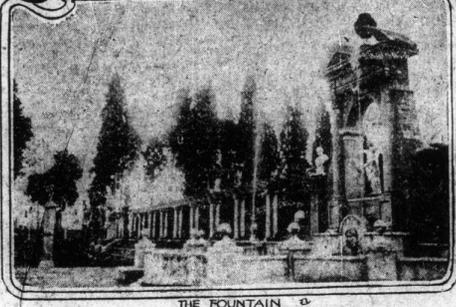

Captain Mary Booth Captures Infiltrator, Gives Him Meal and Sets Him to the Door.

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. A BURGLAR who broke into a house in High Road, Clapton, got a surprise he did not bargain for. He was captured and released, and the idea of having him over to the police was not even mentioned. He got in about two o'clock one morning and was walking around the building when the noise of his movements awoke a woman. She screamed, and her cries awoke Captain Mary Booth, a daughter of the late General. It was a Salvation Army Home that he had broken into. Captain Mary got up, and without showing the slightest sign of fear confronted the intruder. Her courage took him aback, and he did not offer any violence. She asked him what he was doing there, and he replied, "I must have some food; I am starving." Then he told her a story of hunger and starvation which sounded genuine. Touched by this, she took him to the kitchen and supplied him with a meal. When it was finished he asked her if she was not going to hand him over to the police, and as an answer she knelt down and prayed. In a few moments the man pined her in prayer. At the finish she showed her unexpected visitor to the door, "his intense surprise," she said, "is a most remarkable case."

ANCIENT CHURCHES ARE DESECRATED

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. SEVERAL medieval churches still standing in England in all their ancient glory have been desecrated to common use, according to a writer in the Windsor Magazine. There are of these St. Botolph's, Ruxley, St. Benedict's, Paddlesworth, each of which has been converted into a barn. The Chapel of Our Lady, built upon the bridge that spans the River Don at Rotherham, is now used as a tobacconist's shop. The tower of Greenlaw Church, Berwickshire, has been converted into a mill. The tower of the Windesore Magazine, which combines utility with sanctity, the lower portion being used as a house of worship, while the upper is, as the name denotes, a mill.

GERMAN ACADEMY IN ROME

THE FOUNTAIN

(Special Dispatch.) Rome, July 19. Mr. Charles Abenauer was invited to give information regarding the new German Academy in Rome. Beyond the Porta Pia, on the famous Via Nazionale, lined to-day by superb villas and handsome modern buildings, the old family of the Massimos owned a large property, with ancient trees and occupying a most commanding position, dominating the Roman Campagna to the hills of Albano. A wealthy German, Mr. Edouard Arnold, known in the art world for the noble uses to which he has put his fortune, conceived the idea of buying the villa Massimo and there installing an academy for young German artists, whom their government sends to Rome to be inspired by a prolonged sojourn among the marvels of art and nature offered by the Eternal City. His purchase accomplished, Mr. Arnold engaged Mr. Max Schifano Zucchi, a Florentine architect, who did not delay working a miracle of transformation in creating what exists there to-day. What was two years ago a vast plain, now shows a beautiful villa in the midst of a park, with shaded roads, vallonissements, terraces, statues, colonnades and fountains. A dozen ateliers for painters and sculptors are ready or nearly so. The place itself, of which only the foundations are now laid, but which is to be finished in 1914, will not doubt be a temple of the arts, most poetic and at the same time practical.

Bad Outlook for the Grouse Season

Not for Many Years Have so Many Moors Experienced so Poor a Breeding Time.

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. WHILE no trustworthy forecast of the state of the grouse in Scotland is usually possible till late this month, it is well enough known now that not for many years have so many moors experienced so poor a breeding time. It was poor on account of the prevailing weather, rain and snow and extreme cold being the general experience in both Highlands and Lowlands. Inquiries from responsible sources show that the birds left on the moors on December 10 last were in weathering greater difficulty than usual in weathering through the winter months. The birds were reduced in vitality, and before passing time arrived they succumbed to attacks of the atronyle worm, which, according to the late Dr. Whiston, of the Scott Antarctic Expedition, who was the scientific expert of the Royal Grouse Commission, accounts for the grouse disease properly so-called. The weather this year has never been in a more backward state, and with reduced vitality, scarcity of food and unfavorable weather, the birds were all the more liable to attack and less able to pull through. The losses from disease were heavier in the Lowlands than in the Highlands, and the covets at the present date appear to be not only small, but few and far between. In the Highlands the grouse have had a better wintering than those farther south, and they have not suffered so much from shortage of heather. The stocks laid over at the close of last season were about an average and the birds appear to enjoy average health. There have been outbreaks of disease, but inquiries do not elicit any indication that mortality has occurred to an extent calculated to cause alarm. The leading moors of Perthshire, Forfarshire and Aberdeenshire, so far as can be estimated now, give promise of average sport. Such extensive moors as Moy Nall, in Invernesshire, where the Mackintosh for many years has had an excellent record, and some good trophies are expected to fall this year as in previous seasons. From the Duke of Athol's forests in Perthshire the Marquis of Breadalbane's fine covies in the Blackmoor of Argyllshire, Lord Lovat's in Invernesshire, Lord Middleton's in the Marquis of Zetland's and Baron Shrewsbury's in Rossshire, the Duke of Sutherland's in Sutherlandshire—the largest, Ross Forest, by the way being leased for many years to the Dukes of Westminster—and the Duke of Portland's in Calthness, some reports of good progress made by the deer.

PRINCESS PATRICIA MAY BE BRIDE SOON

Announcement Expected of Her Betrothal to the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. THERE are good reasons for believing that the reports that have been current for some time past to the effect that Princess Patricia of Connaught is to be betrothed to the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz will soon be formally announced and that the wedding of this popular young princess will take place in Neu-Strelitz in the early part of next year. Should this prove to be correct, the venerable Grand Duchess Augusta of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, sister of the late Duchess of Teck, and consequently aunt of Queen Mary, will have been very largely responsible for bringing it about. At the present time the direct line of the grand ducal family is in some danger of dying out, and it is most important, for many reasons, that this should not be the case. The Hereditary Grand Duke has been in England for some time past, and was a member of the King and Queen's party at Windsor for the Ascot week, when he was constantly in the society of Princess "Pat."

SIX SETS OF TWINS IN YORKSHIRE SCHOOL

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. THE Woodland Infants' School at Shipley, in Yorkshire, can lay claim to an English record in having no fewer than six sets of tiny twins attending school at the same time. All the children are under eight years of age, and in only one instance are the twins boys, and the mothers of the remaining great majority in dressing their little ones so as to resemble each other, and as in three cases the girls are also very much alike in build, there is often much confusion. "It is often impossible to tell who is who," says the headmistress, "and the incidents which sometimes amuse, frequently while the little tragedies, one pair of twins, Elizabeth and Sarah Mounsey, were among the performers for a school concert held recently and each was to sing a little song. But somehow their work got mixed up, and when Elizabeth was asked to sing her sister got up and sang the part of Elizabeth, while the twin Elizabeth burst into tears because she could not sing Elizabeth's song."

FARMERS NEED CHEAP MONEY

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19.

WHAT the farmers of England need is cheap money. This, at any rate, is the opinion of a writer in one of the London dailies. A system of providing cheap money is common upon the Continent among both large and small cultivators of the soil, he writes, and he adds that if there is one thing more than another which would help to revivify the agricultural situation, encourage farmers to extend their cultivable areas, increase employment, and possibly increase wages at the same time, it is the provision of cheap money. He admits that all farmers do not desire it, but most farmers at some period or periods feel that if they had a little more money at command at advantageous rates as regards interest they would be able to take advantage of the situation, to the benefit not only of themselves and agriculture at large, but of the whole country. The advantages would be all the greater to the farmers if they could obtain the loans without the prospect of the same being called in with that rapidity which too frequently characterizes the action of the ordinary banking concern, and still more the "money lending" fraternity. There is already a bill before Parliament to assist small holders in a matter of this sort. Another bill will shortly be introduced by a unionist member to assist larger farmers to obtain cheap money, or, as it is usually termed, credit.

Big Price Paid for English Setter

CHAMPION MALLIARD EDWARD

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. THE English setter Champion Malliard Edward is owned by Messrs. West and William, Ashley, Es. He was purchased from Thomas Steadman, and though the price has not been made public, it is said to be four figures. This noted English setter is said by experts to be one of the finest specimens of his kind ever sent to America. He is a big, upstanding line belton, tight shouldered and the shortest backed big setter yet imported.

PICTURESQUE LONDON TAVERN IS DOOMED

Ye Dick Whittington, in Cloth Fair, Relic of Old City, to Lose Its License.

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. YE DICK WHITTINGTON, the picturesque old tavern in Cloth Fair, City, which has been threatened for many years past, seems to be doomed at last. Its license, which dates as far back as the fifteenth century, is to be abolished under the Licensing Act's compensation scheme. Standing at the northeast corner of Cloth Fair, the quaint old hostelry has long been a notable building in a district remarkable for its relics of old London. Its projecting upper story is particularly noteworthy feature, a curious bracket support projecting at the corner of the building. There have been modern changes in Cloth Fair, but the neighborhood retains much of the appearance it had when the ancient cloth fair was held there and its wealthy merchants came from Flanders and Italy to sell their costly fabrics. On the south side of the narrow street the houses were built so close to the eastern portion of Smithfield Church as almost to touch it. Only a narrow alley separates them, a picturesque backwater similar to many others to be found at every turning.

WORKING WOMEN HOLD FIRST BIG CONFERENCE

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. AT the first conference of working women ever called to discuss housing some useful and practical suggestions were put forward. "It is hopeless to expect a better standard of life before workers are able to secure a decent home life," said Mrs. Mylles of Brixton, when discussing the relative advantages of flats and cottages. For those living in or near London she advocated tenements or blocks of flats. London tenements were not of the best, they could quite easily be made more suitable for children's play than cottages. In addition the occupation of flats tended to more sociability and friendly feeling. Ventilation must be continually preached, said one speaker. It would be better to have windows that would not shut rather than those that frequently would which could not be opened. Every inch of a house should be utilized. Was it necessary, she asked, to have both a kitchen and a living room? She would like to see all kitchens abolished in working women's homes in cities. All dirt work should be done in properly appointed sculleries.

Cheaper Automobile Tires Not from Overproduction

London Dealers Say Lowering of Price Is Due Rather to More Settled Condition of the Rubber Market and Removal of the Speculative Element.

DANGER OF EXTREME FLUCTUATIONS IS AVOIDED

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. REPORTS that have appeared in some papers that the decrease in the price of rubber, which has resulted in the lowering of the cost of automobile tires, is due to overproduction of the raw material, are denied by tire manufacturers of whom inquiries were made by your correspondent. Prices, as a matter of course, rose during the rubber "boom" a few years ago, but as the production of rubber grew, so the prices fell, and with them, as a natural result, the cost of tires. At the same time it is not thought that prices will fall much lower than they are at present in the near future.

Mr. L. C. Van Raver, managing director for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company (Great Britain), which has the largest output of automobile tires in the world, running into an average of 8,000 a day, said: "The lowering of the price of automobile tires is not due to overproduction at all. There are various reasons. One is the lower and apparently more settled condition of the rubber market, which largely removes what in the past had been the speculative element in the manufacture of rubber goods. That danger of extreme fluctuations was especially important to the tire section of the rubber business because of the fact that tires consumed a very large quantity of the best grades of rubber. The removal of this speculative element to such large concerns as the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, who operate their business with a view to making a gross profit of about eight and a half per cent per annum, is extremely beneficial. Another important factor in the lowering of the price of tires has been the increased production of cultivated rubber, and as the leading tire companies have grown the London agent of the Russian Tire Company, which owns at Riga one of the largest rubber factories in the world, would not admit, either, that there had been any over-production of the raw material, and could not understand how the reduction in price of tires could be attributed to the situation in rubber America. "Some companies," he said, "have been cutting prices to try to capture the trade; but so far our company has not done so. We in London act under instructions from Riga, but I can see no indication of our prices being raised for them this year, and the present decrease in the price of the raw material. There is no telling when it may rise again; and it is not so easy to raise prices for the finished article after they have been an offset to the increased cost of his own reduced."

American Woman's Book Has Disgusted Berlin

Called "The Ambassadors," the Volume Deals with Rather Unpleasant Inside Gossip of Diplomatic Circles, and Has Caused a Stir That Is Being Taken Beyond Teacups.

BERLIN REMAINS THE GATEWAY TO CARLSBAD

(Special Dispatch.) Berlin, July 19. OVER the teacups in the Berlin drawing rooms much comment is being expended upon "The Ambassadors," or, rather, a pen picture drawn of her in a new book bearing this title. The identity of the author is concealed under the nom de plume "William Wrothley," but it is barely necessary to read through the first chapter to know that it is a clear case of "cherchez la femme." More-over—and it is this which has aroused the indignation of Berlin diplomatic circles—it has been written by a woman who has had extended to her the hospitality of the court and diplomatic society and who has abused this privilege by drawing thinly disguised portraits of her hosts and retelling highly spiced anecdotes at their expense.

STRIKES OF 1913 TO MAKE NEW RECORD

(Special Dispatch.) London, July 19. THERE are signs that 1913 will create a new strike record for England, but it will be slightly different in character from that of last year. In 1912 there were more days lost on account of strikes than had been the case in any previous year; the total approaching very nearly the forty million line. The record for 1913 is likely to be in the number of individual strikes. So far four hundred separate strikes and lockouts have been reported, or double the number of last year, which was in itself a record. It is a remarkable fact that the excess of time lost through trade disputes coincides more or less with years of booming trade.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

"Petticoat Camp"

An Outing Story for Girls

THE Graham girls, Dot and Agnes, aged respectively thirteen and fifteen, respectively, had been invited to a little outing party, as they called it—a party of young friends, properly chaperoned—so to speak—a week-end in the country camping. Their brother Frank had a tent and would lend it to them for their stay in the out-of-doors. Also, Frank had a little camping outfit which went with the tent. So the plan was not hard to carry to a conclusion.

The Taylor girls, Fanny and Nanny (twins of fourteen), gladly promised to be of the party, and Mabel Bryant, secretly known to be seventeen-year-old Frank's sweetheart) was also included, and 'phoned to say she would be glad to go along and to eat bacon and eggs cooked on a camp fire, and would do most of the cooking herself, if allowed the pleasure.

"Well, I guess it will turn out fine and dandy," said Dot on the morning of their start to the country. "We've got everything necessary for a two days' stay. And the weather bids fair to be great. That hard rain three days ago gives us promise of a morning for another three or four days, and also that the dust won't bother us any."

"Yes, I think we'll all be sorry when the time is up, and we have to come back to living inside a house and eating at a table again," laughed Agnes as she finished packing a big basket of provisions. "Did you roll the two hammocks, Sister?"

"Rolled and in the provision wagon," said Dot. "And Mamma is putting up a box of bread, cake and cookies. We'll be glad to have the provisions, say I. Ah, how lonely Papa and Frank will be with Mamma and Agnes! I dare say they'll wish they had no petticoats so they could go with us. But men and boys have such good times to themselves—camping, hunting and fishing—that it's only fair we should go without them. Are the Taylor girls to come here, or are we to call for them?"

"They're to join us at the corner. They have hired a one-horse conveyance—looks like the old style grocery-delivery wagon. They say the horse is so gentle that he doesn't want to stir out of a walk. They're to take one hammock and two pairs of blankets. Mabel Bryant is going in our passenger coach, and she has two hammocks and more blankets. We'll certainly have lots of places to stretch out and enough covering to keep us warm if the nights are cool."

Then Mrs. Graham came in to say everything was in readiness and that near-by farmers for fresh eggs, butter and cream, and perform any other odd jobs which might come up at the camp, which, by the way, the girls had already dubbed "Petticoat Camp."

This picnic ground to which they went was about ten miles from town and was a splendid grove on the banks of a fine river abounding in fish. A spring came from a ledge of rock, and furnished the campers with sweet, pure water for drinking and cooking.

After the campers were settled, the tent set up in place, under protecting trees and near to the spring, Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Bryant began unpacking the boxes and baskets. Dot and Mabel built the fire while Agnes and the Taylor twins spread a big white cloth on the short grass beneath the trees, in front of the tent, and laid it for their use.

For a glass of lemonade! sighed Agnes. "We'll miss some of the conveniences of a town and a kitchen, won't we?" But even as she spoke, Mrs. Bryant handed her a two-quart Mogen jar and said: "Use woods when suddenly Mrs. Graham saw two figures rise from behind a clump of bushes and run off down the bank towards the river. When a safe distance away, they paused and looked back at her. By the moonlight, which poured through the trees and open spaces, she could make out that they were women. She started towards them, calling out: "Please do not run away. We shall do you no harm. And I know you do not wish to harm us. So come up and join us in our picnic party. We are quite a party, and shall welcome any of our neighbors of the woods."

To her amazement the two forms whispered together a moment, then came swiftly towards her, and, with a sudden turn, they were off and running again.

After the first two or three weeks of much needed rest from school, they find the time begins to hang heavily on their hands. Then it is that longer rest becomes idleness, and can no longer be endured.

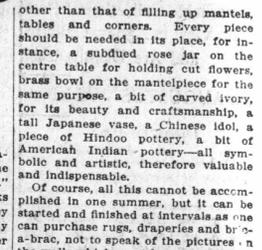

Most girls love an artistic, harmonious home. This is not always their position, so it often falls to them to do something to make their vacation school girl must do when making over her home is to see that the wall decorations are suitable to the room to which they are made. One with a sense of the beautiful could not endure to stand in a living room with a brown or green wall and look into an opening dining room with a red or blue wall, and into a connecting hall of some other discordant color. See that all rooms opening together are of pleasing blendings in their decorations. Then come the rugs which must likewise fit into the color scheme of the walls. Curtains and draperies the same.

With the right tints on walls, in rugs and curtains, one has not much left to do, of course, before the papering was done to harmonize with rugs and curtains, the wood-work of the rooms was considered, and, if not of the desired tone, done over. Perfectly white wood-work is very attractive and goes with all kinds of furniture and wall paper. But a great many consider it "staring" and difficult to keep clean, and prefer dark wood. If so, the tone of wood and floors should match in color or harmonize nicely.

There is not one room in a house that does not depend for grace and beauty on its neighboring rooms, for as a whole a home must be considered. Bedrooms are better done in very light shades, with their colors confined to the pretty chintz coverings and curtains. Daintiness in the bedrooms for your sleeping rooms; richness for your library, hall and dining room; and a quiet elegance for your parlor—if there be one—and your living room. If a brie-a-brac should have a purpose other than that of filling up mantels, tables and corners. Every piece should be needed in its place, for instance, a subdued rose jar on the centre table for holding cut flowers, brass bowl on the mantelpiece for the same purpose, a bit of carved ivory, for its beauty and craftsmanship, a tall Japanese vase, a Chinese jar of a piece of Hindoo pottery, a bit of American Indian pottery—all symbolic and artistic, therefore valuable and indispensable.

Pleasing Summer

Of course, all this cannot be accomplished in one summer, but it can be started and finished at intervals as one can purchase rugs, draperies and bric-a-brac not to speak of the pictures, the walls which must be very carefully selected and as carefully hung. Indeed, if the summer-vacation school sets their minds and hands to the work the autumn will see more really artistic and comfortable than the two go together—homes in a land and less demand for the cheap things which are now displayed so gaudily in the department stores and bought up so indiscriminately by many housewives who have had no time to study artistic home-decoration, and who clutter up their houses with a startling job-lot of multi-colored things which only have a jarring effect on the sensitive person.

"I do b'Veve I seen a Couple of Persons Out There in the Timber," Said Fatty.

of my lemon juice and sugar syrup sparingly, my dear, for the two quart must last us during our camping-out."

"Well, who would have thought of such a thing?" cried Agnes, taking the jar of syrup-sweetened lemon juice and pouring some into a bucket of spring-water. "After all girls, it was a wise thing to invite our—our elders along with us."

Then the merry laugh ran round the group and jets were tossed to and fro among them. The mothers enjoyed their outing party, but the girls, declaring it made them young again to be in the open with their children.

After a most appetizing supper, the campers made their numerous beds. Some slept inside the tent, others in hammocks just outside it, with Fatty and the horses within a safe distance to keep watch over the camp.

The night went by without excitement, all sleeping like babies in the fresh air. The next morning Fatty Graham had a fine string of fish for breakfast, having risen from his bed of blankets on the ground before the sun hinted at coming, and going to the river with hook and line.

The day was one of exploration and rest, some of the girls going into the woods after wild grapes and berries, and some reading in their hammocks. The chaperons found camp work to do, preparing the dinner and supper. The girls had the dishes washed, which they did very quickly, seeing that they were of tin or coarse yellow ware.

The second night—and the last of their stay in the camp—came down around them, and they sat about the fire telling stories, Fatty, the sentinel, being on the outskirts of the group.

He came on a fallen log, enjoying the stories and the laughter of his good

JOHNNY PETERS AND THE CIRCUS

DURING the early part of his summer vacation Johnny Peters, aged twelve, became very much preoccupied, so much so, indeed, that his mother and father began to wonder at his seeming abstraction. He no longer cared to go fishing with the boys, nor swimming, either if such a thing can be believed. He did not appear at the baseball games on Saturday afternoon, as had always been his wont. He preferred to remain penned up in his own room—at the top of the house—all day, only coming down to his meals and to run errands for his mother.

After this conduct on the part of Johnny had gone on for almost a week, his mother decided to ascertain what it was that kept her son so closely confined to his room. She questioned him on several occasions, but to receive an evasive reply. He would say: "Oh, I'm doing some mysterious work, mother—please wait! I get ready to tell you all about it." But the time for the confession not arriving, Mrs. Peters decided to find out for herself. So one morning while Johnny was down town on an errand she went to his room. On entering, nothing seemed unusual and Mrs. Peters began to search about. She always made up his bed and tidied his room during school days, but when his vacation began she let him care for his room—knowing that such work cultivated a neat and orderly mind.

"He's got his mysterious work hidden," said Mrs. Peters. "I'll have to unlock his closet." So saying, she found the closet key in one of the dresser drawers and soon had the closet door open. There Mrs. Peters beheld some sort of apparatus made

A STORY FOR BOYS

"Nobody cares about you in this business," he said. "If you can't look out for yourself you get only kicks from the whole bunch, and they kick each other the same way. Everybody hates everybody else. It's something awful. What was home."

Then the boy fell to thinking it all over. The result was that he said nothing more about the circus, and the women showed came hurrying into town at nine o'clock in the morning. Johnny's father arranged to stay away from his place of business that morning and took his son to the circus grounds. The show was busy, and paid no attention to the few stragglers who came about. Mr. Peters took Johnny to the men's tent to watch them preparing the morning meal, for it had been raised first. Johnny saw a dirty man frying meat. He dropped some of it on the ground and picked it up again and tossed it into a greasy pan which stood on top of a rusty stove. The stove was placed in the open rear to the tent's entrance. Two dirty-faced persons, were being seen by a dirty-faced and dirtier-handed boy about Johnny's own age. To him Mr. Peters went and began asking questions. No one seemed to object to this procedure, and those who worked about the tent seemed to enjoy the strangers' call.

It turned out that the boy, who was the cook's helper, had run away from home several months before and had joined the circus, expecting at the time to become an acrobat, being—as he put it—a top-notch at tumbling and summersaulting. But the management had not agreed with him, and had put him at hard work. He got money and very bad food and a worse place to sleep, his bed being in one of the wagons on some of the tenting. He was almost ill and had a cut over his wrist which gave him a great deal of pain.

homes to join this aggregation—the "wagon circus."

Then Mr. Peters led Johnny to the dressing-room tent and asked the manager if he might speak with some of his prominent performers. As Mr. Peters had a way with him which won everybody's respect and confidence, he had no difficulty in getting permission to go inside the dressing-room tent, which was connected with the big tent. There the "performers" were beginning to "wash up." They used small tin cans and bar soap and soiled towels, and the pans were set on the ground in the trodden-down grass. They were quarrelling or joking, as the case might be. The manager of the circus had a separate dressing-room tent, and occasionally one would call out to one of the young men: "Son, fetch Mother your towel" or "your soap." Upon inquiry, Johnny learned that a mother and son were "acrobat" and "did a turn" together, but that both were heartily sick of the business. "We never get to go nowhere nor see nothin'," complained the young acrobat, replying to Mr. Peters' questions. "It's work all day and travel all night. Sundays it's wash and mend and practice. Gee! outsiders don't know nothin' 'bout the show people's lives. You see it's this way; we as are in the biz never had no say about it. We was just raised up in it. So there you are. Wish I'd had a chance to be something else—a respectable young duffer instead of an acrobat, tumbling and twisting myself to death for just enough to live on and a lot of kicks and complaints to boot. But say—I've got to hustle in getting my spangles. I'm on soon after the first of Grand March. See?" And he hurried to a trunk and began taking out some spangled clothes.

Mr. Peters and Johnny departed, neither speaking for some minutes. Then Mr. Peters asked: "Shall you make arrangements with the manager of the circus to take you with him this trip?"

Johnny's heart leaped to his throat and he felt himself turn pale. "No, Dad, I'll stay at home. I don't believe I could stand that kind of life—even if I had to. I don't want any circus in mine. I've been the very inside behind the scenes. It's a pretty true saying, I guess, Dad, that all is not gold which glitters. The circus from the front is one thing; the circus on the inside is another thing. I'll take that trapeze apparatus out and knock it to pieces, but I'll keep my spangled suit just as a reminder of the time when I almost got lost to the world and to—Daddy and Mother."

THE "VEGY MAN"

Crying in his sing-song way: And selling here and there, 'Till his melons all are gone—Save a big one to spare

To the boys who run behind In the dusty street: Boys of freckles and of tan, With their soiled bare feet.

And with the melon in their arms They hie them off to find A shady spot where they may eat The melon to the rind.

"Water-mil-lions, ripe an' red! Doan you want to buy?" So they hear the "vegy man" In his sing-song cry.

Down the street he slowly goes, Crying long and loud; "Water-mil-lions, ripe an' red!" 'Till he draws a crowd.

Barf-out urchins, small and young, Behind his cart do run; "Vegy man" just nods and grins, "Thinking I, great fun.

Now he sells a melon fine, Which he's pluggin' you know; And another 'cross the street; Then slowly on does go.

ENGLISH AGRICULTURE.
In answer to a Parliamentary question by Mr. Outthwaite, the President of the Board of Agriculture has given some interesting figures on the position of agriculture in Great Britain during the past forty years. They show the number of persons directly dependent on agriculture in each decade, and the acreage under plough, under wheat, and under permanent pasture.
For the thirty years of 1871 to 1901 forty years there is a total decline of 408,865 acres. It is due to the great increase in grass land, wheat acreage having fallen by 1,664,958 and arable land by 3,755,337.

Mr. W. THORNE WALKS OUT.
During the debate in the House of Commons, late on Tuesday night on the Plural Voting Bill, a short but sharp little scene occurred which led to Mr. Will Thorne getting up and leaving the House.
While Sir William Anson was speaking a member shouted out, "Divide, divide."
The Chairman (Mr. Whitley) said he had asked the member for West Ham (Mr. W. Thorne) not to interrupt on previous occasions.
Mr. Thorne: It is not true. (Cries of "Oh!" and "Withdraw.")
Mr. Thorne (shouting): Yes, I will withdraw—outside.
The hon. member left his seat on the front bench below the gangway, and walked towards the lobby, "Best place for you," cried a member. Mr. Thorne shouted back, "What about you?" and disappeared.
The debate on the Plural Voting Bill was adjourned.

Found Guilty
BERLIN, Ont. July 18.—Dennis White was found guilty of a charge of stealing jewelry from the residence of Postmaster Adam Kay, Stratford, June 14, by Magistrate Wier. This morning and sentenced to one year in Central prison. His "pal" George Darley was sentenced to two months in jail for trespassing on Grand Trunk property.

TWO YEARS OF NEEDLESS SUFFERING
Then Mrs. McRea Found a Cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills
Other Medicines May Help But Dodd's Kidney Pills Always Cure—That's Why They Are Woman's Friend.
Prevel Gaspé Co., Que., July 14.—(Special)—Mrs. John McRea, wife of a well known farmer, living near here, tells of her remarkable recovery from an illness of two years' standing.
"I was a sufferer from kidney disease, brought on by a cold and a strain," Mrs. McRea says. "My eyes were puffed and swollen, my muscles cramped, and I suffered from neuralgia and rheumatism. My back ached, and I had pains in my joints."
"For two years I was under the doctor's care, but he never seemed to do me any lasting good. Then, on the advice of friends, I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.
"The boxes made a new woman of me."
There's only one sure cure for kidney disease, and that is Dodd's Kidney Pills. Other medicines sometimes help, but Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure. If you are a suffering woman, it is almost a certainty you haven't tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, for ninety per cent. of the ills of women come from bad kidneys.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT

Who May Pray and Who May Not

Prayer Not a Duty; a Privilege, Says Pastor Charles T. Russell—Jehovah a Great King.

Springfield, Mass., July 18.—To-day opens an eight day Convention of the International Bible Students Association. The attendance is large. Many speakers of great ability are to give addresses. The Convention seems to be wholly for the purpose of discussing the teaching of the Bible, and for cultivating Christian fellowship. The program calls for four discourses per day, and so earnest are the delegates that apparently they will miss a service. Pastor Russell was one of the speakers of today. We report his discourse on Prayer, from the text, "Mine House shall be called an House of Prayer for all people—Isaiah 56:7."

The Great Teacher's words applied to the Jewish Temple, typical of the Spiritual Temple of the future. The typical Temple had its various courts and districts for different worshippers. Some might come near and some not so near to the Holy of Holies, in which the Shekinah glory represented Jehovah. Only the priests had access to the Most Holy; only the Levites were permitted in the inner court; then came outer court divisions, some of which were for Gentiles.

Thus did God represent in the type conditions not of the present, but of the future. The antitypical Temple has not yet been built. St. Peter describes it as the Church in glory. He tells that Christ is its chief Corner Stone, and that all the faithful saints of God are living stones, now being chiseled and polished for places in that glorious Temple of the future.

As the stones of Solomon's Temple were all shaped and completed before the construction was begun, so the Church of Christ will be constructed at the end of this Age, after the "living stones" shall have been hewn and fitted for glory. As the stones of Solomon's Temple were so perfectly fitted, so the Church in glory will be fitted together without the sound of hammer, so will it be with the construction of the Church, which will be accomplished by the powers of the First Resurrection.

"Changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 Corinthians 15:50-52.

As in the type, so in the antitype, the finished structure will be followed by a Divine recognition. The Temple will be filled with the glory of the Lord, and be thus marked as His dwelling place for all time. Thus will God's antitypical House of Prayer, wherein and whereby all nations, tongues, and peoples may come into fellowship with Him through His appointed agencies.

When I refer to consecrated priests, do not misunderstand me. I mean the clergy of any denomination not the clergy of any denomination. The Bible recognizes no clerical class, but declares, "All ye are brethren. One is your Master, Jesus Christ, (Matthew 23:8.) For more than eighteen centuries God has been calling out from amongst men the Royal Priesthood class. Jesus, their High Priest, was first called to suffering and to glory; and His footsteps followers have since been invited to suffer with Him, that they may also reign with Him.

None may pray, "Our Father, which art in Heaven," except those who have approached God in His appointed way—through Christ—and who since have been forgiven, and inducted into the Kingdom of God by a begetting of the Holy Spirit. The common concept of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man is wholly unscriptural, and sets aside entirely the heavenly and His important work as Advocate for the Church in the present, and as Mediator elect for the world in the future.

Nearly all Christian people in the past have discerned the subject of prayer very indistinctly. Sinners have been urged to pray; moralists, who have never accepted Christ as their Saviour, have been exhorted for not praying. In a general way the impression has been given to the world that God is very anxious to have some recognition on the part of humanity, and will be glad to be approached by anybody at any time. How strange a mistake!

Was it not God who denounced sin and paid the penalty, or curse, of death upon the sinner, and cut off the sinner from fellowship with Himself? Has He changed? Will He ever change? Was not the statement that "God beareth not sinners" a correct one—John 9:31.

God's arrangement whereby His consecrated people may approach Him acceptably is clearly stated. "We (the Royal Priesthood) have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (1 John 2:1.) But before the Redeemer of men will become the Advocate for any, certain terms and conditions are laid down. These are stated in a series of all reminded that "no man cometh unto the Father but by Me"—the Advocate. And upon inquiring respecting the terms upon which He would be their Advocate, we are advised that He serves only those who become His disciples. Inquiring the terms of discipleship, we receive the answer, "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me."—Matthew 16:24.

Under these conditions the poorest and the meanest of humanity have the privilege of approaching with courage the Throne of Heavenly Grace to obtain mercy, and to find grace to help in every time of need. (Hebrews 4:16.) But equally certain is it that none others have access to God. Never is there any other name given under Heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved from our fallen condition, than the name of Jesus.

Perhaps there is something revolutionary in this thought, that while all may worship in the sense of bowing down and showing reverence to the Almighty, none but the consecrated followers of Jesus have any assurance of the Father's blessing and supervision of their affairs. And none but these have any authority for coming to God in prayer.

One exception to this rule should be here stated, namely, that the children of consecrated believers, while they are still immature of judgment, have a standing with God through their relationship to their parents. St. Paul makes this very evident in his declaration: "The unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband, else were your children unclean, but now are they holy."—1 Cor. 7:14.

The translation of this text slightly beclouds the Apostle's thought. Some are inclined to say, "The parents have become a disciple of Jesus, the child stands related to God, regardless of the standing of the other parent. Such children may participate in His inheritance and in prayer." But this relationship manifestly terminates shortly after the child shall have come to a personal knowledge of its responsibilities. Thereafter it must make a personal covenant with the Heavenly Father, or have its standing with the rest of the world.

And that standing, be it remembered, does not mean liability to eternal torment. It merely means alienation, separation from the Father. His special care and providences in the present time; for the Divine arrangement is for the ultimate blessing of the child through the Messianic Kingdom—through the Temple of Glory and its Royal Priesthood glorified, in its Kingdom power for a thousand years.

Some are inclined to say, "There are millions of people who with more or less formality, approach God in prayer daily. Should we not fear that after a truthful presentation of the facts, they would be discouraged? Our reply is that the whole responsibility for the Divine Plan rests upon its Divine Author, who says, "He that hath My Word, and keepeth it, he shall not see death, but shall have eternal life, and shall not be judged."—John 1:27.

Indeed, the preaching of the Truth on this subject may bring many in different ones to the point of decision, and thus greatly benefit them. He who is calling the world in general that he will do His will, or not high time that they were told no difference between God's people under all circumstances and conditions looks to God—either for wisdom and guidance to do His will, or with thanksgiving and praise for blessings received and prayers answered.

Nothing in the Apostle's language indicates that the Lord's people should be always on their knees, or on the other hand that they should never go upon their knees, but merely that they should uplift their hearts to God at all times and in all of life's affairs. The priests in the type offered the morning and the evening sacrifices before the Lord, and so the Royal Priesthood surely desire that every morning and every evening Divine mercy and blessings should be acknowledged with thanksgiving and appreciation.

Not only so, but parental duty properly requires that the Christian parent, so far as possible, should worship with immature children for whom he stands as secondary priest, and that he should offer with these thanksgiving and praise, and petition for wisdom and guidance to the knowing and doing of the will of God.

The Church of Christ, the Royal Priesthood, is a special family of God. "All ye are brethren. One is your Master," and "One is your Father." Whenever these meet, worship and praise should constitute a part of their acknowledgment of the Heavenly Father. Hymns of praise should properly be considered prayer, a united worship, in which all may participate. But if any of the Lord's family, the Royal Priesthood, have gotten into sin, he should hesitate to take any public part in prayer or worship. He should consider himself, because of his enlightenment, to be one of the wicked, and hearken to the message, "Unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare My statutes, or that thou shouldst take My covenant in thy mouth; seeing thou hast hated instruction, and hast gotten into sin, he should hesitate to take any public part in prayer or worship.
