Holds up Clark and Ryan's Grocery Store With an Empty Gun

AND TAKES AWAY THE WEALTH

While Mr. Prentice Stood Behind the Door Waiting

TO AVOID BEING MUTILATED

The Robber Had a Disagreeable Way of Talking About Brains Which he Was Prepared to Scatter.

"Seventy, seventy, seventy; I wonder what that fellow wants."

Mr. Clark of the grocery firm of Clark & Ryan, at the corner of Sixth street and Second avenue, was footing up the day's receipts of his business about 10:30 o'clock last evening when a tall man, with his face muffled to the eyes, entered the store. Mr. Clark merely glanced at him and went on with his work. He was alone at the time and while his attention was divided between the footing of his first column of figures and the supposed wishes of the customer, something wearing a cold, hard glitter was pushed under his nose and a low stern voice said:

"If you say a word you're a dead man."

Mr. Clark was leaning over the counter at the time, and when he straightened up he was careful to avoid doing anything which the bold, bad man facing him could construe as "saying a word." He just looked at him feeling hot and cold by turns, and keeping the tail of one eye on the gun.

"I want $100," said the robber, "and don't make any fuss about it or I'll blow your brains out."

Hundred dollar bills are not found wrapped about sardine boxes or pickle bottles, and the grocer was loath to part with his wealth, but then, on the other hand he reflected that brains are one of the necessities in carrying on a grocery business, and if his were to be spilled over the staples they would be of little value to him afterwards, so he began temporizing.

"I haven't got $100 here," he said, "you'll have to go up stairs with me to get it."

"Don't speak so loud, or I'll blow your brains out," said the robber who seemed to take an unholy joy in thus referring to the gray matter of the man behind the counter as if it were so much merchandise. Mr. Clark also recalls the fact this morning that the man who held him up had a most unpleasant way of trifling with the gun trigger, while speaking about his brains.

The till was opened when the gentleman with the muffled face obligingly signified his intention to take what happened to be on hand and call it good without taking the trouble to go upstairs to make up the deficiency. The bills in the various compartments were passed out to him when he said: "Now pass over that silver."

The silver tray was lifted out and politely layed before him, the grocer from force of habit, being just about to smile pleasantly and ask if there was "anything else today?" when the door opened and Teamster Prentice entered, but did not notice anything wrong or unusual in the attitude or actions of the man whose back was towards him, and did not see the gun till the man holding it, turned and pointed it towards him, telling him to get behind the door and stay there during the next two and a half minutes. He also imparted the information that if he was so indiscreet as to stick his head out during the time mentioned, his brains would also be found somewhat scattered over the codfish and soap.

Mr. Prentice, being an obliging man, and of good sense, withal, immediately hid him behind the door, to the frosty surface of which he so closely held his head during the next ten minutes (being careful to give good measure), that his hair froze fast. The man with the gun then took his departure and the money.

Mr. Ryan the other partner, heard from the room above the fall of a pile of boxes, and thinking a scrap was in

Looks Like Hockey Mad Dogs

All advocacies to the contrary, it looks very much as though the disease known as rabies is prevalent in this vicinity.

On Wednesday as one of the Lew Craden's teams was coming down the Klondike river and within an hour's drive of the city a white bulldog was met which made a dash at one of the horses, leaped up and fastened his fangs in its nose. The horse shook the dog loose when it made another spring, this time fastening on the horse's neck. Having an ax on the sled the driver took a hand in the trouble, killing the dog before its hold on the horse's neck could be broken.

An hour later and just on reaching the woodyard on First avenue the horse was taken with something like spasms. The suffering animal was taken out of the harness and stabled as soon as possible, but its condition has grown steadily worse and today the animal is kicking, biting and striking at everything within reach, and will probably have to be killed to end its suffering.

There is a gentleman in Dawson who is very anxious to secure alive any dog that manifests rabies as he is desirous of diagnosing the case. He promises to take good care of the animal while in his charge and cure it if possible. So far as known, no one has yet volunteered to lasso the dog.

No Council Meeting.

There was no meeting of the Yukon council last evening, although it was the regular meeting night. The reason for the failure to meet according to schedule is that Mr. Wilson did not put in an appearance, and with Major Wood sick and two members absent from the country, no quorum could be had.

Mr. Wilson's failure to materialize at the meeting was due to the illness of his mining partner, which was severe enough to prevent the absence of the councilman from his claim.

progress acted upon his old reportorial instincts and rushed down stairs and in at the back door, where Mr. Prentice assured him from behind the door that he had not moved.

Mr. Clark, from the front of the store, whether he had followed the robber to discover if possible which way he had gone, made known to him the facts of the case, and the police station was visited, with the result that a man was arrested who gave the name of Stanley.

Harry Spencer, who was arrested as the suspect in the case, gave a very good account of his movements during the evening and was discharged from custody this morning.

The robber, who ever he may have been, left the way of his going pretty clearly marked, as the gun with which the holdup was most probably effected, was found this morning on Sixth street, near the store, and is at present in the Nugget office.

Mr. Clarke, on being shown the revolver said he believed it to be the same, but owing to the similarity of pocket pistols he could not say positively that it was the one pointed at him last night across his counter.

Mr. Clarke would like to believe that it was not the same gun because if it is, he was held up by a very harmless engine, as it was not loaded when found. The revolver is a 32-calibre imitation Smith & Wesson nickel plated and of cheap make. Beyond this no clue to the present whereabouts or identity of the robber exists.

So far as Clarke & Ryan are concerned, they have entered in their books, in order to make them balance, this entry:

"Paid under threats of death, $108.50," and this they consider closes the matter.

Hockey Last Night

The hockey game last night between the Civil Service and A. E. Co. teams was the hottest, swiftest game of the series thus far and the weather being all that could be desired, was witnessed by the largest crowd that has ever assembled at the rink side. The fact that the score was altogether one-sided, being 9 to 0 in favor of the Civil Service team, did not in any way detract from the interest of the game, and while both teams did great combination work, the fact remains that the A. E. team was outplayed on every point and that, but for the fine goal work of Marsden, the score would have been even larger than it was. The game was refereed by P. C. Stromson, who gave eminent satisfaction to both teams. The umpires were H. G. Wilson and O. W. H. Smith.

The relative standing of the various teams is as follows:

Canadian Bank of Commerce, won 2, lost 0.
Civil Service, won 2, lost 0.
N. W. M. P., won 0, lost 2.
A. E. Co., won 1, draw 1.
A. C. Co., won 0, lost 1.
McL. & McF., won 0, draw 1.

The Contest Tonight.

Tonight the contest between the Colorado Kid and Frank Rafael takes place at the Standard theater. Al Smith is training the Kid, who says that he has the best of the go and will win easily in eight rounds. In view of the fact that Rafael agrees to stop the Kid in the same number of rounds it is anticipated by local sports that the contest will be a lively one.

LOOKS GOOD FOR THE CANAL.

The Nicaragua canal is given an important position in President McKinley's message to congress. The construction of this canal is not only a vast undertaking but its completion will be attended with results of vast importance. The day when ships are able to pass across the isthmus will certainly mark the beginning of a period of wonderful activity and progress for the cities of the Pacific coast.

The products of the coast will then have access to the eastern markets on terms which will admit of competition with any of the great central and western states. High railway tariffs which in by-gone years have always discriminated against California wheat and Washington lumber must be lowered in a very marked degree, or empty freight cars will be pulled across the continent or left idle on the tracks.

An influx of immigration to the coast on a larger scale than ever has been witnessed must of necessity ensue.

Great stretches of agricultural country now lying idle will be brought under cultivation and every line of industry will be stimulated in an effective manner. The result of this increased productive energy will be conveyed to the shipping centers of the coast which will be quick to realize and take advantage of every opportunity presented to add to their commercial supremacy.

Certainly the future holds out alluring prospects for the Pacific slope. The northern and eastern trade has already worked a marvelous effect on the growing giants of the coast and their growth is now like that of a snowball which gathers new volume as it moves along.

The Nicaragua canal, which is certain to be completed within the next few years, will form but another element among the various influences which are now contributing toward the remarkable growth and prosperity so noticeable in all the coast cities.

A second New York somewhere on the coast will be the final outcome.

Lord Roberts is to have a dukedom conferred upon him, to which his remarkable services in South Africa fully entitle him. It is one of the glories of Great Britain that she rewards her men who faithfully serve her in a manner commensurate with the nature of the work they perform. Lord Roberts agreed to assume command in Africa upon one condition only, viz.: absolute authority with no interference from the war office in London. The results have amply demonstrated the wisdom of the government in acceding to his demands. He went and saw and conquered and as befits the conquering hero he is to be rewarded with the best his country has to offer.

Skagway's city council has assessed the White Pass & Yukon railway's property in that town at a valuation in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. It ought not to make much difference whether anyone else pays or not, if they succeed in getting the railway company to pay its assessment.

An error in transcribing a telegram which was published in the Nugget yesterday made it appear that President

McKinley in his message to congress speaks of friendly relations still being maintained with the Boers. An inspection of the telegram reveals the fact that the reference which occurs in the president's comments on the Boer war is to Great Britain and not to the Boers.

Postmaster Hartman's splendid new building and the excellent facilities which he has at hand for the distribution of mail and for other accommodations to the public, will not avail very much if the mail contractors do not perform their part with a little more expedition. Thus far the winter delivery of mail in Dawson from the outside has been anything but satisfactory.

Next summer Dawson is to have a street railway system. At the present rate we are traveling we shall see roof gardens in our midst before long.

Speaking about games, we would suggest to the News to try marbles.

Told by the Cloth.

If Mr. Cyrus T. Brady has an enemy which heaven forefend!—that enemy must have multitudinous! rejoiced recently, for already Mr. Brady has issued three books this fall. Two I have already mentioned; a third is "Recollections of a Missionary in the Great West," published by Scribner's Sons.

An old colored woman of my acquaintance belonged to the Methodist church, though she was the sexton of our church. The Methodists were having a revival, during which this old woman felt called upon to make a prayer. She commenced with the stern spirit of an ancient Puritan, and closed with the tenderness of an old Southern mammy: "O, Lawd, tek de sinnahs ob C—an' sbak 'em obah de fiabs ob hell—but please, Lawd, doan drap 'em."

I was once preaching about missions, urging the congregation to make some sacrifice for the missionary cause, and indicating to them several methods by which they could follow my advice. Among other things I suggested that they refrain from purchasing any book which they very much desired, and donate the money to me instead for my missionary work. I happened to have perpetrated a book myself. You will, therefore, understand my feelings when a very bright woman in the congregation came up to me and handed me a dollar, with the remark:

"I had intended to buy your book and read it, Mr. Brady, but I have concluded to follow your advice and give you the money for missions instead."

I accepted the situation gracefully and the money gratefully, and told her I would lend her my own copy of the book to read. She smiled and thanked me, and as she did so I voiced my thought in this way:

"But, after all, Mrs. R—, there does not seem to be any sacrifice on your part in this transaction, for you have the happy consciousness of having given the money for missions, and yet have the book as well."

"No sacrifice?" she replied. "Why, I have to read the book!"

On one occasion I had two weddings in the same town on the same day, one in the morning, one in the afternoon. The first wedding fee I received was $50, a very large remuneration for the place and people. After the second wedding, the best man called me into a private room and thus addressed me:

"What's the tax, parson?"

"Anything you like, or nothing at all," I answered. (I have frequently received nothing.)

"Now," said he, "we want to do this thing up in style, but I have had no experience in this business and do not know what is proper. You name your figure."

I suggested that the legal charge was two dollars.

"Pshaw," he said. "This ain't legal. We want to do something handsome."

"Go ahead and do it," I said, whereupon he reflected a moment, and then asked me how much I had received for the wedding of the morning.

"Ten dollars," I replied.

His face brightened at once. Here was a solution to the difficulty.

"I'll see his ante," he remarked; "raise him five dollars and call." Whereupon he handed me fifteen dollars.—N. Y. Herald.

Should Space Allow

We could furnish you with some interesting reading relative to the store which this illustration portrays. For instance, we might tell you how many thousands of dollars worth of high class clothing has gone through those doors in the possession of satisfied purchasers. Or we might tell you that back of those plate glass windows can be found the only tailor cut clothing in the territory, giving you a description of the goods and the immense wholesale tailoring house that makes them for us. But space not permitting we can at least wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

MATTER OF SLORAH APPEAL

Of Which Notice of Argument Was Given Some Time Since

As to Hanging Fire on Account of Funds, Which Is Said Will be Forth Coming.

The friends of James Slorah, recently sentenced to be hanged on the second day of March next for the murder of Pearl Mitchell, are busy raising funds looking to the reopening of the case in a new trial or an appeal.

Attorney Bleeker gave notice after the passing of the sentence, that he would argue a motion for an appeal, but no time was set for the hearing of argument, and nothing has ever been heard regarding it. Mr. Bleeker is very reticent in the matter, but for all that it appears that the stumbling block is a matter of money.

Those who have in charge the raising of the funds, when asked what is being done, merely say that they are busy with the matter and that a sufficient amount will probably be forthcoming for necessary purposes when the time comes.

The time, however, seems to rest largely with the attorney, whose only incentive to undertake cases, in view of the fact that that is the source of his livelihood, is one of monetary consideration. For this reason the "proper time" is when the friends of the condemned man came forward with the money, and although March seems some distance away yet, it must be remembered that a great deal is necessary to be done, and that soon, if an appeal is to be taken.

In the meantime James Slorah, naturally the party most concerned in the matter, is taking life with his customary coolness. His health was very bad for a time after his incarceration, and his appetite was so nearly gone as to give rise to the rumor that he had attempted suicide by means of abstaining from taking any nourishment whatever.

He has recovered his appetite, however, and is in as good spirits as possible for a man who stands with the black shadow of death squarely across his path.

Magellan's "Giants" Rediscovered.

Myth and superstition are long lived, but they are distinct foes to human progress. Therefore we may hope that the voyage of the Belgic, as chronicled by Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the only American aboard, may result in permanently exploding one especially vigorous myth. The Belgic did not succeed in discovering the South Pole, but it practically rediscovered the Straits of Magellan, which run between Patagonia and Terra del Fuego.

Dr. Cook has given us a fund of needed information about these territories that border the Straits. He has met the inhabitants face to face. He has told us positively that they are not giants, although they are, perhaps, the tallest race on earth. Their average height in places at six feet. A few fall below that. A few rise to six or even seven inches above. Now, the legend that the races were of an almost superhuman stature, though repeatedly denied by occasional travelers, has permanently survived in the minds of the vulgar ever since Magellan himself, the discoverer of the Straits, gave it birth.

Magellan, it will be remembered, describes the Patagonians as "so tall that the tallest of us came only to their waists." It is true that the Portuguese are not a tall race. Nevertheless, Magellan's words would indicate that the average height of the Patagonians must have been some nine feet. Later travelers of the middle ages improved upon Magellan. Sebald de Wolf, who visited Patagonia in 1598, describes the inhabitants as being ten or eleven feet high, and so strong that they could easily tear up by the roots trees of a span in diameter.

Then came more moderate statisticians. Byron, in 1764, says that he saw a chief not less than seven feet high, and others nearly as tall. Byron was merely guessing. It was Capt. Wallis, in 1766, who first put the Patagonians to the test of actual measurement. He found a few who were six feet seven inches in height, but the average stature was only from five feet ten inches to six feet. Capt. Wallis and Dr. Cook are in substantial agreement.

The belief that giants formerly inhabited this globe and that they still survive in remote and inaccessible regions has been fostered in Christendom by the statement in Genesis, "There were giants on the earth in those days." But many Biblical students are inclined to accept the interpretation of St. Chrysostom: "I think that those in Scripture called giants are not of any unusual kind of men for shape or feature, but such as were heroic, strong and warlike."

Deuteronomy describes the bedstead of Og, king of Bashan, as nine cubits in length and four in breadth. A cubit was about eighteen inches. Hence the bedstead was thirteen and a half feet long. But it is quite possible that Og used a bedstead not in proportion to his actual size, but in proportion to his fancied importance.

In which connection one may recall the story of Alexander the Great. In one of his Asian expeditions he caused to be made and left behind him a suit of armor of huge proportions, in order to induce a belief among the people he had conquered that he was of immense size.

An explanation of this sort would not, however, have suited the ancient rabbinical and Arabian writers. They tell delightful stories of how Og survived the Deluge by wading, the waters reaching no higher than his knees. The only inconvenience he experienced during the flood was that he was reduced to a fish diet, his staple food consisting of whales, which he roasted on the disc of the sun.

Legend aside, it is more than probable that the men of today are equal, and probably superior, in stature to the ancients.

The Greeks and Romans were undoubtedly of small size. The helmets and sword hilts that have come down to us from the heroic ages could not be used by the majority of soldiers of the present European nations. Ancient rings also are generally too small for modern fingers.

But the classic writers give testimony enough on this point. Caesar, speaking of the Gauls, says: "Our shortness of stature, in comparison with the great size of their bodies, is generally a subject of much contempt to the men of Gaul." Tacitus also describes the Germans as of robust form and of great stature, and Strabo says that he had seen Britons at Rome who were half a foot taller than the tallest Italians. Yet there is no proof that the men of these nations were any larger in ancient times than they are now. On the contrary, the graves and barrows tell a different story. The remains are usually under the average height of men of the present day. It is the same with the Egyptian mummies. —N. Y. Herald.

The Formidable Lease.

"I'm afraid we can't take this flat at all," said Mr. Weems, regretfully. And, being questioned by the wife of his bosom, he explained: "This lease the agent has just sent up to me to sign has this clause—'This lease is granted upon the express condition, however, that in case said landlord, his agents or assigns deem objectionable or improper any conduct on the part of said tenant or occupants, said landlord shall have full license and authority to enter and have full possession of said premises, either with or without legal process, on giving five days' notice of intention so to do and tendering repayment of the rent paid on account of the unexpired term.'"

"Do you know what that means?" asked Mr. Weems, and answered for himself: "It means this landlord or his assigns have a right to come snooping around my flat and call us down every time we have a Welsh rabbit party or a lobster a-la Newburg session in the chafing dish. We can't put ourselves in the power of a puritanical person like this landlord."

"Let me see the lease," said Mrs. Weems. "Maybe there are mitigating clauses." She found one, reading aloud in horrified indignation: "That the tenant shall not drive picture or other nails into the walls or woodwork of said premises, nor allow the same to be done. Aren't they tricky?" commented Mrs. Weems. "They think we would try to get around that clause by having Lottie do the driving." Then she read on: "And shall, at his own cost and expense, make and do all repairs required to walls, ceilings, paper, glass and glass globes, plumbing work, ranges, pipes and fixtures belonging thereto, whenever damage or injury to the same shall have resulted from misuse or neglect, and shall repair and make good any damage occurring to the building or any tenant thereof by reason of any neglect, carelessness or injury to the dumbwaiters, gas or Croton water pipes, meters or faucets and connections by the tenant himself or any of his family or household, or upon the premises leased to said tenant." What do you think of that? "Why it expressly forbids me to hang pictures on the walls, and as for putting my two old china plates around the sides of the room, that is impossible. We can't take this apartment."

"Look here," said the prospective tenant, "what do you think of this for high handed dictation: 'And the said tenant shall use only such shades in the front windows of the said apartment as are put up or approved by owner.' 'Did you ever hear of such assurance?'"

"And here's something else," discovered Mrs. Weems. "It says: 'To be occupied as a strictly private dwelling apartment by himself and family, consisting of'—and here you write your name and my name. And what am I to do when it gets time for Cousin Madge to come and visit me? Why, the landlord or his assigns might say: 'No, Cousin Madge's name is not in the lease. She can't come in.' Oh, it's certainly impossible for us to take this place."

"But will you please look at this," said Mr. Weems: "That the tenant shall consult and conform to the regulations governing said house and to any reasonable alterations." Do you know what that means? It means that we are to hold ourselves to the order of the janitor, and that whenever that janitor feels like changing the regulations we have nothing to say. And here's yet another clause giving people from outside permission to tramp through our apartment at all hours of the day and night three months in advance of the expiration of our lease, under the pretext of looking at the flat with a view to settling. I shall go to that beastly agent and tell him what I think of him."

But when he went and told, the beastly agent smiled a large, plump, indulgent smile and said: "Go ahead, my boy. Go as far as you like. Nail up as many pictures as you feel like. Have all the company you want. Give as many Welsh rabbit parties as your salary will stand. Swear at the janitor when you feel like it. Call on me for repairs whenever you need them. That contract's just for prevention of the abuse of the premises. If we didn't draw up something like that we'd be imposed upon."

And Weems signed and hasn't heard anything from the landlord or his assigns. —N. Y. Herald.

Fortunes Made in a Day.

Three mining men who are well known in Seattle have just returned from Cape Nome and the Bluestone district with stories of the marvelous richness of the latter camp. F. W. and Stephen Wilmans, who were pioneers of the Monte Cristo district, and Richard P. Burkman, all well known in this city, are among those who have good prospects in the north. F. W. Wilmans is a director in a bank at Nome, in which a number of local capitalists are interested. The Wilmans brothers own a half interest in No. 8 on Gold Run creek, in the Bluestone district.

Speaking of Cape Nome and the adjacent territory, F. W. Wilmans said yesterday:

"The miners who have prospected the country about Cape Nome have merely scratched the surface. Contrary to the men who have returned with hard luck stories from Cape Nome, I hold that there is no mining region in the United States more promising than Cape Nome and the country tributary. But before any real progress can be made we must get rid of the litigation that has hampered the camp, and take steps to forever prevent a recurrence of the troubles we have experienced during the last season."

From No. 8 Gold Run, over $37,000 was taken out in 17 hours, according to Mr. Burkman. The latter says he stood by while the treasure was washed out. Mr. Burkman says that the clean-up would have been doubled but for the breaking of a dam, which carried away part of the sluice boxes. —P. I., Nov. 19.

IT WAS ANOTHER BIG SCOOP

In Bowling, Like Other Things, News Occupies Rear Seat.

Nugget Lambasts Its Opponent in Great Shape—Won by Forty-Seven Points.

"We have met the enemy and they are ours."
If the Daily News never before got a thorough lambasting it got it last night when its team of alleged bowlers essayed to go up against the Nugget team.

The score was kept by an honest man and no "News tricks," such as playing four balls, marking in the wrong column, etc., etc., were permitted. It was a straight out open contest in which the News team had to come out and depend on its merits, hence the result: A victory for the Nugget by 47 points.

The personnel of the two teams was as follows:

Nugget—Allen, Fitzpatrick, Hemen, Filbin and W. Allen.

News—Caskey, Peterson, Devers, Nesbitt and Southwork.

Five games were played, beginning at 7:30 and lasting for two hours, without a moment's intermission. The score by games was:

First game—Nugget, 148; News, 135.

Second game—Nugget, 130; News, 114.

Third game—Nugget, 112; News, 119.

Fourth game—Nugget, 108; News, 109.

Fifth game—Nugget, 131; News, 105.

Total score—Nugget, 629; News, 582; Nugget's majority, 47.

The highest individual averages were scored by G. M. Allen, of the Nugget, and J. B. Nesbit, of the News, each averaging 27 3-5. The highest single game score was 39, made by Peterson, of the News, in the first game.

The game, which elicited great interest among outsiders and which was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators, was the outcome of a challenge issued from the News office, the terms of which were that the losing team pay all expenses of the match, also for a supper to be eaten at some later date by the teams.

After stipulating that the supper was not to be the regulation Daily News meal, coffee and sinkers, the Nugget accepted the challenge with the result that in keeping with the well-known reputation of both papers, the Nugget carried off the honors and added another to its long list of scoops, while the News, having to come out in the open where no covert measures could be employed, went down as usual.

The dinner which will consist of everything delicate the market affords, including many "bots," will probably cost not less than $30 per plate and will be given some time next week.

The A. C. Hose Co.

Not long since when a Second avenue millinery store was burned out, and one of its lady proprietors nearly roasted in her bed, the performance of the A. C. Co.'s hose company attracted considerable attention, and has since been the subject of more or less remark. The reason of this is, of course, due to the efficiency and alacrity which marks the manner of the company's drilling.

The chemical engine of the city department got to the scene of the conflagration quickly enough after the alarm sounded, but the steamer was late. This was because one of the horses which is supposed to pull it to fires was down at the other end of town and had to be sent for before the company could turn out. How it happened that the horse was not there when wanted is not known, and it is possible that the idea occupying the public mind to the effect that horses should be kept around near the house where the engine is, may be wrong, but it is such an old theory that it will take many examples like the last one to convince it to the contrary.

Unfortunate Herbert Moffat.

The body of Herbert Moffat, the man of whom mention was made in the Nugget of two days ago as having been frozen while hunting on Eureka creek, and who later died while being brought to this city by his friends, arrived last night by horse team from Cook's roadhouse and is now at Green's undertaking parlors. Robert Beard and Wm. Babbitt, partners of the dead man, and who were bringing him to Dawson in a handsled when death intervened, also arrived last night and before

Magistrate McDonell made the following statement this morning:

"Herbert Moffat, Beard, Babbitt and a fourth man were working a lay on No. 8 Eureka. On the morning of Thursday, the 6th instant, Moffat started out on a hunt, telling his partners not to worry if he did not return that night as, if he struck a moose trail, he would follow it. He was absent two nights and when he returned to the cabin Saturday morning acted as though dazed. His partners quickly realized that he was frozen and set about to do what they could to help him when it was discovered that his nose and face were frozen; both feet were frozen to the ankles and both hands to the wrists. Not having any dogs of their own, the partner whose name was not learned, was dispatched to Gold Run for dogs and to inform the police of the man's condition. It is not a compliment to Gold Run dog owners that the man was unable to secure a team, but such was the case. Corporal Caudle, however, left with a dog team next day, but when he reached Eureka the men Beard and Babbitt, realizing that Moffat would die if not given medical attention very soon, had started to Dawson with him on a handsled. Notwithstanding the long journey covered by the police officer, he rested his dogs a short time and started out to overtake them which he did the next day but not until death had claimed the unfortunate man, who died in the sled near the mouth of Quartz creek. On overtaking the men Corporal Caudle took the body on his dog sled and brought it as far as Cook's roadhouse from which place it was brought to Dawson by horse team. Beard and Babbitt say Moffat was conscious to the last and died with but little suffering. The dead man was a native of Ontario, but came to the Yukon two or three years ago from Oregon City, Oregon, where his brother Jack Moffat resides. He owned an interest in a sidehill claim of No. 5 below on Bonanza, also an interest in a claim on Gold Run.

Moffat's story to his companions relative to his freezing was that he trailed a moose until very cold and numb and when he tried to make a fire he exhausted all his stock of matches without succeeding. He had not been wet, but was frozen by the dry cold. His personal property consisted of a silver watch and a roll of blankets.

COMING AND GOING.

Photographer Cantwell leaves tomorrow on a hunting trip to the Rockies. He takes with him his camera as he is after large game.

If the man who robbed Clarke & Ryan's grocery store last night will call at the Nugget office and identify his gun he can have the same by paying charges.

The incoming mail left Stewart river at 7 a. m. this morning. Two horse teams and two dog teams are bringing the consignments which will be the largest yet received.

The case of Mrs. McConnell against the Water Co. proceeds slowly. Yesterday one witness, Mrs. McConnell, was examined, and this forenoon was taken up by the testimony of her husband.

The funeral of the late Billy Cullen will take place Sunday at 1:30 p. m., at which time the remains will be taken from Green's undertaking parlors to the Catholic church where services will be held.

Next week will be heard the case of Wilson's vs. the C. D. Co. in the territorial court, and it is expected that it will take several days to try it, as considerable monetary importance attaches to the outcome, and a great array of legal light has been engaged by the opposing parties.

Diamond Robber Confesses.

Denver, Col., Nov. 18.—After nearly three months' confinement in jail here, Joseph Haennalt has just confessed that he was implicated in the robbery of Mrs. Flora Betts on the night of August 27, when diamonds valued at $800 were taken from her after she had been beaten almost into insensibility. At the time of the robbery Haennalt and Mrs. Betts were returning from a drive into the country. They were held up by two men, one of whom murderously assaulted Mrs. Betts. Haennalt was also robbed of $40.

He was arrested on the following day and has been held ever since. In his confession he charges John Barr, who operates a vinegar factory on the south side, with being the chief actor, although he acknowledged that he planned the robbery and induced Mrs. Betts to go with him for a drive, that his accomplices might secure the jewels which she was in the habit of wearing. Barr's refusal to visit Haennalt in jail or to return the $40, it is said, caused him to make the confession. Barr was arrested some time ago, but was released on bail. He has been rearrested. Dan Conway, a dairyman, has been arrested as an accomplice. The police believe that the diamonds were disposed of somewhere in the east.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

In Magistrate McDonell's court this morning only one case was up for hearing and it had about it the aroma of soap suds, being a case in which G. W. Willisroft, who owns a laundry, was sued by John Sulies for $12 due for labor performed. Willisroft had fired and refused to pay Sulies for the reason that the latter had boiled some white silk handkerchiefs with some red goods, with the result that the handkerchiefs came out with a color similar to that of a torchlight procession. Sulies said he was required to work in a cellar where the steam made it so dark he could not distinguish between red and white goods. The verdict was that Willisroft pay the amount involved.
