CHAPTER OF CRIME.

A terrible case of destitution has been made public in New York. An English lady, the widow of Mr. Boone, an actor of considerable ability, being reduced to the lowest depths of poverty and misery, poisoned herself and three children last week. It appears that the unfortunate lady lived in some poorly furnished apartment at 29 Amity street, and here she and her three children were found, apparently in the agonies of death. They were conveyed to the hospital and though still alive, their recovery is doubtful. On being asked what had led her to commit such a dreadful crime, Mrs. Boone replied that she had been entirely deserted by her friends and was entirely destitute, and not being able to support herself and family, preferred that they should all terminate their existence by poisoning than starve, which seemed the only alternative.

BRUTAL HOMICIDE OF A WIFE.

We have to record this morning the murder, by means of a process rivaling the most diabolical contrivances of the inquisition, of a young woman and mother by the name of Johanna Moore, whom it was her misfortune to call husband. The brute literally kicked his wife to death, a torture which he inflicted by degrees, and, in the language of one of the witnesses before the jury inquest, "daced on her body 'till her breath went out." Cries of the dying woman brought several of the neighbors to the door of the domicile, but they were prevented from entering by the man-mons, or who stood in the doorway, with a dirk in his hand, and threatened to "rip open" the first who entered. This bloody affray took place at the residence of Moore, on Sugar Hill, that part of Newtown adjoining Gosport. Moore is known to have been habitually addicted to the drinking of wine, and this assault, maddened by an excess of drink, proved to be the "finishing stroke."

WHEN WE ENTERED THE BUILDING WHERE THE TRAGEDY OCCURRED, IT HAD THE APPEARANCE, WE MAY SAY, OF A SLAUGHTER PEN. BLOOD WAS HESPERATED IN EVERY CORNER, AND SIGNS OF A STRUGGLE, AS IF THE DECEASED HAD EMPLOYED TO DEFEND HERSELF, WERE VERY APPARENT.

THE EARTHQUAKE AT PORTO RICO.

A letter from Ponce, dated Dec. 2, says:—"The 18th of November will ever remain a memorable day for the inhabitants of these vales. The day was very rainy, and about one o'clock morning, sudden leaden clouds began settling down upon the mountains in the distance. The air became glass and stormy. Finally, at 2:42 o'clock, came the crisis: a terrific earthquake, which lasted for five seconds, and others say only forty. The oscillations were regular, excepting the few last, in which some little variations were observed; the direction was from southeast to northwest. Since the earthquake of Santa Rosa, in 1835, no such severe and prolonged shock has been felt. Many persons were in the streets, discussing the probabilities of an earthquake, and visiting the points that suffered most on previous occasions, when suddenly a cry was heard. One second after this cry was repeated by thousands of souls, and instantaneously, as if by magic, the town of Ponce was left deserted. 'The sea! the sea!' shouted the populace, beside themselves with terror. 'The sea is coming!' cried several men rushing past, carrying children in their arms. 'Run! run!' to the crier; 'the cerro!' shouted others. Such was the confusion and horrible confusion, noise seemed to give birth to shocks, that in the faces of all was pictured anguish and terror. Men, women and children rushed toward the cerro, or heights, with such rapidity that in a minute its broad fields had the appearance of an immense camp. The people—no doubt terrified by the submergence of the island of Tortola—did not stop to reflect, but rushed towards the nearest heights, self-preservation being their only thought. At the cries of 'The sea! the sea!' the mother called to her children, the wife to her husband; the air was filled with shouts that caused the stoutest heart to quail. Here a young girl fell to the ground fainting; there a young child was seeking its mother, lost in the crowd; a little further on, a poor, infirm old man vainly endeavored to reach the high ground; children were clustered around their parents; coaches, and men on horseback were going to and fro, bringing weeping women and children; and amid all this disorder and horrible confusion, noise seemed to give an instant for ascertaining what was really taking place. An hour afterward, when calmness and order were being restored, it became known that the sea, half an hour after the first shock, had receded to its natural level, but only to return again, submerging that portion of the town nearest the shore. Behold! the first advance of the sea, several persons had rushed into the town spreading the alarm; the subsequent panic accomplished the rest.—At 5:30 o'clock on the same afternoon a few oscillations were felt, as were also some more severe shocks at 6 o'clock on the morning of the 19th, since which time no record of the shocks experienced has been kept. In consequence of the earthquake, all buildings of masonry have been abandoned, many of them having sustained considerable damage, particularly the theatre, which has one of its lateral walls cracked from foundation to roof. The Government buildings and warehouses near the wharves have also been damaged, and almost all the chimneys of the boiling-houses on the estate have been leveled to the ground.—All business is paralyzed, the stores are opened and shut to no purpose. The number of masons and carpenters are inadequate to the amount of work to be done. The time for gathering the crop is upon us, and there is no material wherewith to replace the ruined buildings. Add to this the misery and suffering of those rendered destitute, the exorbitant prices asked for articles of food and raiment that cannot be dispensed with, and what will come next?"

CHARLES DICKENS AND THE STORM.

HOW HIS AUDIENCE CONDUCTED THEMSELVES.

Of Dickens' third reading at New York, on Thursday night, the "Tribune" says:—
A silly, infatuated snow storm, as if it thought itself a match for Charles Dickens! How it howled as it saw the thickening carriages, and the merry, crushing crowd! How maliciously it lay in wait round the most advantageous corners, and hoped, by poisoning out with a screeching whistle and its hands full of snow-balls, to drive back the bright-eyed, rosy, laughing girls and sweet-faced women clinging in mock terror to their husbands' arms! As ignorant, poisonous, hard-headed storm, that had no notion what all these people were after, and was made angrier and angrier by seeing that the worst he could do only made the drivers whip up their horses, and the lovers and husbands cheer up their bright companions, and the pretty little feet trot along faster and faster, and his worst fury vain to keep the people away from Charles Dickens and Stony Wall! If, as we hear from several sources, Dickens is reading much better here than he did in Boston, it is also true that he read last night better than he has thus far read in New York. He seemed in unusual spirits, and threw himself with all his force into every part. The reading consisted of the chapters of Nicholas Nickleby relating to the hero's life at Detford's Hall, and that love-story of domestic fairy tale, "Boots at the Holly Tree Inn." It is plain that Mr. Dickens, like all great actors, is very much affected by his audience. Those who heard him in Boston say that after the first night the people acted on him more and more, like a wet blanket, and that, though he struggled manfully against the tide, nothing but a vigorous dash for New York at the end of the week saved him from being utterly drowned and lost to us forever.

HOMICIDE OF A POLICEMAN.

A few days since a man named Frank Carson, who supposed that officers were after him for some offence he had committed, met an ex-policeman, some Rodopouch, in Julesburg, Ill., and accused him—"I presume you are after me?" "Not that I know of," said Rodopouch, "but if it was, I would have you;" whereupon Carson drew two revolvers and emptied them both, wounding him five times. Rodopouch was able to draw a revolver at Carson, killing him almost instantly. Rodopouch is severely but not dangerously wounded.

DOUBLE HOMICIDE IN KENTUCKY.

A terrible affray occurred in the bar-room of Richardson's Jersey hotel in Irvine, Ky., a week between Rober Riddle and Pat Lyons. Riddle was instantly killed, having his brains blown out with a rifle, and Lyons is mortally wounded, being shot through the body and also in the abdomen. Jacob L. Troton was shot through the arm accidentally while trying to prevent the affray. It seems that Riddle and Lyons had quarrelled some days before, and at the first meeting afterwards they immediately commenced shooting.

PASSION OF PRISONERS FOR TOBACCO.

A deprivation of spirits and beer a prisoner may grow resigned to, and have no great yearning for when he obtains his liberty; but his passion for smoking is unconquerable, and towards gratifying it his ingenuity is boundless. The friends of prisoners who have visited them, although rigorously searched before they are permitted to approach the gate through which the conversation must be held, have been known to evade the prison rules by carrying in their mouth a waxy rolled "quid," and deftly shooting it through the bars, should the warden's attention be attracted, to withdraw. Tobacco so obtained a prisoner—having somehow become master of a lucifer match—has been discovered smoking a cigarette, a bit of paper or rag forming the cavity, having first of all made an infinite pan and small perfid, climbed up to the ventilator in his cell, so that the tell-tale smoke might not lead to detection. A more extraordinary instance than this of a prisoner's passion for tobacco was given me by an officer attached to Portland prison. Somehow a bit of tobacco and a pipe were smuggled in a manner that made it a joint-stock property of three of the convicts, and it was treasured until their respective opportunity for its enjoyment. At last the long-looked-for time for the theft arrived, and then came the question, how was the luxury to be fairly shared? One suggested six whiffs each till the pipe was exhausted, but he was a strong-lunged villain, and his device was at once seen through—it was clear that he could "pull" as much in his six whiffs as the others could in ten. It was a nice point to decide, but presently one of the party, whose ingenuity somewhat exceeded his delicacy, hit on the exact thing. Two straws were procured, and possession of the precious pipe was tested for. This preliminary settled, the trio sat down, and the pipe was lit, the holder of it taking in his lips one of the straws as well as the pipe stem. The other end of this straw the second man took in his mouth as well as the tip of the third straw, as the further extremity of which sat the third man. Then the "toad" began. The man with the pipe took a whiff, enjoyed the mouthful of smoke a while, and then carefully blew it through the straw to the second man, to be by him as carefully transmitted to the third man, who, in consideration of what virtue the tobacco might have lost coming to him, as it did, at third hand, was permitted to swallow it—a precaution rendered necessary lest the warden should get scent of the prohibited indulgence.

SARAH-NADING EXTRA.—Vake, lady, vake!

The moon is high, the twinkling stars are beaming, while now and then across the sky a meteor are streaming! Vake, Sally, vake! I look on me—vake, Squire Nibbick's daughter! I'll have you, and you'll have me.—(By gods, who threw that water?)

MISFORTUNES OF THE GREAT EASTERN.—It would almost appear from what is taking place day after day, that the troubles of the Great Eastern steamship are never to cease.

For months she has been anchored in the Sloyd, doing nothing except contributing to a daily accumulation of expenses, and to the further deterioration of the huge fabric.—Liverpool Mercury.
