CHAPTER II. THE COUNT DE MONTALT (Concluded.)

'I want no sympathy, Dora,' she said, quickly. 'It was a lucky escape. This mean hound threw in my face what I had told him, and declared that, as he was now a public man, it must seperate us. But he still loved me, he said, and declared that his fortune was at my disposal if-you can guess what he said. My blood is hot now as I think of it. You can guess, too, the answer I made. But that is not the worse, nor arything governess, and telling her what I had told him in all honourable confidence got me dismissed at a moment's nofor myself, in order as he thought, I in this than she anticipated. might be compelled throught want to submit to his vile proposals.'

Her companion drew in a quick breath of pain.

'That is man, dear!' said Dessie, you to trust no man till you have

Mrs. Markham got up from her stool, and put her arms round the girl. She was full of pity for her friend, but she saw no connection between that man's scoundrelism and her own lover. The thought was Poor Dessie! What an experience and what an escape,' she said. But my Godefroi would never act like that.

Dessie smil d in disappointment, and the smile had not died out of her face and eyes when her companion kissed her again, and they bade each other good night.

Dessie went to her room filled with fear lest her friend's infatuation and impulsiveness should end in trouble; test her steadiness she paused outside know why you have imposed on my and before she fell asleep she resolved on one step-to speak openly to the man who called himself the Count de Montalt, and let him see that she knew his true character.

The opportunity came a little sooner than she intended. Her plan, ps she thought it out during the night, was to tell Tom something of what she knew, and then with him to face the Count together. But events hurried her forward.

The next day Mrs. Markham was not very well, and did not get up to breakfast. The Count called early like the worse. The coward went to and Dessie went down to see him. As she left the room Mrs. Markham said with a smile that it 'would lead the two to a better understanding if they saw something of each other tice, thrown on to the streets to shift alone.' There was much more truth > a different thing when the two were on a course of complete frankness.

it was essential that the revelation of the scoundrel's true character should be complete, or the little widow's weakness and infatuation might allow of his continuing to excercise great influence upon her. Dessie's heart beat a little faster than usual, as she went down the broad staircase to the morning room, into which the visitor had been shown; but outwardly she was calm enough and apparently self-possessed. To the room, and held up her hand to see if it trembled at all. It did a little.

'I might be a child going to be slapped,' she thought.

The Count was standing in the deep bay window, looking out on the square garden, congratulating himself upon the size and magnificence of the house and the wealth of the owner which it evicenced; but he turned quickly when he heard the door open, and Dessie saw the look of pleasure, which he had put on to greet Dora, change to one of surprise and inquiry.

He came hurrying towards her with the same overacted politeness which had impressed her so unfavourable on the previous evening.

She had to deal the first blow. Now that they were alone, no consideration on earth could make her touch his

He came toward her with it extended, his face expressing a sort of smiling anxiety as to the cause of Mrs Markham's absence.

'I trust dear Mrs. Markham in well -as well as I hope you are. Miss Merrion. Pray tell me.' Then with quiet change of voice and manner, added, 'You did not see my hand, I hink, Miss Merrion, -excuse me, and he held it out in front of her, and ooked straight into her face.

She returned his look quite resolute y, and with a motion of the hand toward a chair, she replied -

' Mrs. Markham has nothing more serious the matter with her than a She rather wished me, indeed, to come and see you alone, thinking that perhaps we should get to understand one another better if we were alone. I think so too,' she added, after a pause for emphasis, eyeing him

'My dear Miss Merrion, 1 am more than charmed,' he answered, effusively. 'My dear Dora's friends must be my friends-or they could not be hers, of course.' He made his meaning clear with a glance.

'Naturally,' assented the girl. ' quite understand that.'

'But I do not think ! quite understand the position,' he answered. ' Parden me it I ask you to explain it to me a little more clearly. I have praise. I came to London expecting and hoping to find you, if on y half

I came here last night; I had friend's sake, to play a part the night the infinite honour of an introduction before and meet the Count on terms to you. We had a pleasant dinner, of apparent friendship; but it was I quiet evening, an hour of friendly companionship. We parted in the bitterly. 'And that is why I urge alone, and after she had determined best vein of friendship, apparently. I arranged to call early this morning. She had thought out carefully the call. I do not see my Dora, my future line that should be taken. She wish- wife; but instead, you receive me ed to spare her friend in every pos- and when I offer you my hand, hop sible way. The blow to her heart ing the relations of last evening are would not be less than that to her to continue, you will not take it; and self-respect in the knowledge that she instead, you say you have come down had been duped by such a man. But to have an understanding. Is it a surprise that I ask myself what does this mean? What is it? Who is this charming young lady that meets me? What is it she wishes?'

He paused, threw his hands and shoulders up, and asumed a look of greatly injured innocence. Dessie had been thinking quickly while he spoke, and now paused a moment before replying. When she answered it was with a clear, crisp emphasis that made every word tell: "The meaning is this. I want to friend as the Count de Montalt, when in fact you are Rolande Lespard, the murderer of your uncle, old Paul

The man sprang to his feet in asonishment and obvious terror. His face went white, and for a full minute he was speechless, staring at the girl like a man out of his senses Then he sat down again, and strove to regain his self-possession. It was a long fight, and when at length he who trusted him so absolutely she did not think it worth while to make the slightest inquiry about him, the girl had stepped in to break down

His rage and chagrin added to his confusion, and it was a long time before he could recover himself sufficiently to think connectedly over the

He had often had this friend of Dora's in his thoughts, and gauging her by his own standards, he had calculated that she would probably turn out to be no more than a harpy, who might resent the rich woman passing out of her hands into his own. He had guessed that he would in all pro bability be able to buy over this op position at a price; and had always ooked forward to having to do something of the kind.

But this belief was only a faint on now, as he looked into the resolute little face of his accuser, whose eyes were fixed on him with an expression of such sturdy resolution that he felhe could have strangled her.

How could she have got her know edge of him?

There was not of detective in London who would have recognized him n that character; scarcely one in al England; and yet this weak chit of ; girl had known him at a glance More than that she had been shrewd enough to use her knowledge dexterously enough to outwit him and cause him to behave like a nervous fool He had thus made contradiction more than difficult; yet it was his only

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds him self regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shav ings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

SOLIGNUM

A Remarkable Test! Locally made by Messrs. W. & G. RENDELL.

To test Solignum as a preservative for Wood against the attacks of Worms, we tried a piece of 2 x 4 Spruce, about two feet in length, by painting one-third with Solignum, leaving the balance clear wood, this we suspended by a wire through the centre, in the water about one foot from the bottom, immediately over a pile of stones the remains of a sunken wharf (which is the place where our Wharf Shores are eaten off first) for Three Months. On taking it up at the end of that time we found some half-dozen small holes only a very short distance in the clear part of the wood, which shows the liquid had penetrated through the whole piece and the worms had hardly begun boring before coming in contact with it.

Last year as a test of some brands of Copper Paint we handle, we had a similar piece of wood treated at both ends, leaving the centre third clean; this was in exactly the same place as the piece for the Solignum test for Three Months and Three Days, when taken up the painted ends were perfect but the centre was riddled with worm holes.

Both there pieces of wood are to be seen at our Office by those interested in the preservation of Wharf Piles or any other

Our New Industries.

The Newfoundland Pine and Pulp Company, of which the genial Mr. H. J. Crowe is President, has had the best season for logging during the past winter for nine years. Teams are still hauling to the Exploits. Some 4,000,000 feet of lumber, pine mostly have been logged, and in addition 25, 000 cords of plowood, equal to 14. 000,000 feet, have been delivered to the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company at Grand Falls. Altogether the output of the firm for the season is about 18,000,000 feet.

We hear that the danger of rafting

ing me from wildest cranks. The world sent forth its host of bores, and mendicants in serried squad filled all the landscape out of doors, and tried to touch me for my wad. And all the jealous plutocrats were there to get my coin away; they poked me sorely in the slats, and kept me humping, night and day. In solemn state I seemed to sup, and sleepless tossed upon my bed; and interviewers called me up and twisted everything I said. I had no pleasant hours to while away at games I loved before; I mounted guard upon my pile, and counted sacks of gold and swore. I had no friends; I had men's hate, and I suspected other men of low down schemes to swipe a crate of my long green, and then again. I had no comrades; uncles, aunts, and all my kindred eyed my till, and changing to cringing sycophants that they might figure in my will. And O, the joy when from this dream to cheerful poverty I woke! I uttered one long gladsome scream, and cried: Copyright. 1911, by George Matthew Adams Walk Mason "Thank heaven, I am broke!"

A Clean Sweep.

People up from the eastern settlenents to-day say that the storm of the past two days was the worst experienced there for a long while past. At Torbay, from Tapper's Cove to the Beach, there has been a clean sweep and not a flake or stage is left standing. At Flatrock, five stages, three boats and the better part of the pub lic wharf have been carried away and the sea ran up higher on the beach than ever before witnessed, taking away the boats which were believed to be altogether out of danger. Near ly all the flakes and stages have also been swept out of Pouch Cove, and the damage done is almost irrepar-

Prince Arthur of Connaught is here as the representative of King George and the British people at the Italian Jubilee. He received an enthusiastic welcome. King Victor Emanuel and Queen Helena met their royal guest at the railway station, where a crowd had gathered. When the Prince appeared he was cheered heartily. Thousands followed the carriages in which he and the Italian Sovereigns had driven to the Quirinal. At the palace the popular demonstration was so persistent that Prince Arthur appeared on the balcony and acknowledged the greetings. Prince Arthur delivered to King Victor a letter from King George, in which the British Monarch congratulated His Italian Majesty unon the attainment of united Italy's iftieth anniversary, and expressed the friendship of the British nation for the Royal house and people of Sounds of Battle.

The report of a battle reaches the world over in these days of the reign of the newspaper, but without any such outside aid it can be heard far beyond the scene of actual strife. The reports of the guns themselves, the real sounds of battle, go far out into space, and can be distinguished a long way from the point of conflict.

Professor W. F. Sinclair says that there is nothing unusual in the hearing of artillery at a distance of sixty miles. The Bombay time guns and salutes are often heard at the northern Mahim, a distance of over fifty miles. The guns are-or were at the time when the observations were made-very modest affairs, old-fashoned twenty-four or thirty-two pounders loaded with four or five ounds of coarse black powder, not all of which was burnt.

The target practice of the forts and turret ships at Bombay was easily distinguishable from mere salutes and ime-guns, not merely as a louder sound, but by being felt in the chest when the others could only be heard. The sound produced by modern powder is probably very different from that of old black powder, so that an army in action at the present time may be relied upon to make its voice heard. The "din of battle" is not a Presentation to Mr. Hedley Tuff.

The members of George St. Methodst Church choir, in conjunction with several officials of the Church, spent few enjoyable hours in the young men's room, so kindly placed at their disposal for the purpose by the George St. Y. M. A. The assemblage had gathered to tender a farewell reception to Mr. and Mrs. Hedley V. Tuff, who very shortly leaves our shores to begin life anew in the growing Canadian North West. Mrs. Richard White, until recently the oldest active member, but now an ex-member of the hoir, and Miss Story received the guests of honour at 8.15. The meeting was immediately called to order by the Pastor, Rev. J. W. Bartlett, who explained the nature of the gathering, which up to that time was pretty much of a surprise party to many present, and particularly so to the couple most concerned. Mr. Tuff had been a very valuable member of the choir for several years, said they rev. gentleman, and had at all times freely and unstintingly given of his musical talent to the service of the hoir and of the Church. It seemed right, therefore, that we should give ome slight token of recognition, and memento to remember us by in future years, that may be his, in e far West. While regretting deepthe loss the choir and Church would sustain through Mr. Tuff's departure, he had very great pleasure in reading and presenting him with an address, beautifully worded and, artistically written, and accompanied by a gift that had been subscribed to by every member of the choir and several of the officials and members of the congregation. Mr. Tuff in a few brief, well chosen sentences, replied, thanking the many kind friends who had so generously thought of him, in this manner, and particularly thanking Rev. Mr. Bartlett, for himself and on behalf of Mrs. Tuff, for the many nice and kind things he had said about him, much of which, he felt, he was undeserving

During the evening speeches were made by Mr. C. R. Steer on behalf of the Quarterly Official Board; Mr. R. F. Horwood on behalf of the Trustee Board; Mr. Gordon Christian, the talented organist, on behalf of the Choir, and for Hon. J. B. Ayre, organist, who is at present out of the country. The following gentlemen of the Choir also spoke: Messrs. John E. Steer, W. T. Courtenay, Richard White, H. Courtenay and S. J. Tucker. Mrs. Story, representing the ladies of the congregation, also made a few remarks appreciative of Mr. Tuff's very valued services. Musical numbers were given by Miss Story, Messrs. Tuff, Courtenay, Green, Tucker and White, and Mr. Butler edified the others by preaching a sermon from "Mother Hubbard." The young ladies of the choir then served refreshments which were duly taken care of and put out of harm's way, finally eliciting from Mr. Butler a motion that a vote of thanks be tendered dandy. No need for sickness the ladies for their thoughtfulness and kindness, which, being promptly seconded by Mr. Green, was carried by acclamation. Singing a farewell hymn, prayer and Benediction by the 394 Pastor now brought the affair to a CASCARETS 10c. a box for a successful close.—Com. week's treatment, all druggists.

Got Six Months.

Const. Fred. Churchill yesterday rought in an old woman, a resident of Botwood, to serve a term of six nonths imprisonment in the Penitentiary. She was convicted of receiving stolen property and prompting minors to steal. The woman's two grandsons nd another stole hens, etc., and told lagistrate Burt, before whom they vere brought, that the woman had encouraged them to the act. They stole 30 hens, butter, eggs and other things. The Magistrate dismissed the lads with a severe reprimand; the woman, however, was given six months.

St. Bon's Ladies Meet.

At the Quarterly Meeting of the Ladies Association of St. Bonaventure's College, held yesterday afternoon, resolutions of condolence were passed to Mrs. T. J. His descriptive discourse was requently applauded, and the picures of different scenes in the festival with the different church digniaries added greatly to the pleasure which the lecturer afforded all who were present. The picture slides were operated by Mr. Jas. Vev. At the close of the discourse Mr. Devine was tendered a hearty vote of thanks, which was proposed by President Jackman and seconded by Messrs. Graham and Kelly. A very intersting eature of the lecture was a picture which showed His Grace Archbishop Howley fully vested and proceeding to the altar at St. Patrick's Church, Montreal, to celebrate High Mass on Saturday, September 10th. The photographs used with the pictures were developed from book pictures by Mr. Vey, who also received a special vote of thanks.

BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA.

INCORPORATED, 1832.

Information for Depositors.

The following certificate is attached to the 70th Annual Statement, published January 16th, 1911:

We have examined the books and accounts of the Bank of Nova Scotia at its Head Office, Halifax, at the General Manager's Office, Toronto, and at seven of the principal branches, and we have been duly furnished with certified returns from the remaining branches and with all information and explanations required by us. The Bank's investments and the other securities and cash on hand at the branches visited have been verified by us and they are in accordance with the books; and we certify that we have examined the foregoing general statement and that in our opinion it is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the Bank's affairs as at
