The Sound of Wedding Bells

—OR—

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XX.

"Come at once," she says. "Stop! These people will want their commission," and she goes to the desk, and says, quietly:

"You needn't trouble any more. I'm suited. There's the fee," and she puts a coin on the table. "Good-morning! Now, my dear," and she puts her hand on Dulcie's arm, "come outside with me and tell me all about it. Stop! Let me tell you who I am. My name is Brookley—Lady Brookley. I daresay you have heard the name before?"

A vague kind of recollection comes to Dulcie of having heard the name somewhere, but she cannot fix it definitely.

"Well, it doesn't matter," goes on her ladyship in the quick, sharp tone natural to her. "Goodness knows the society loafers have made me pretty notorious. I am the china maniac my dear."

"The what?—I beg your pardon!" says Dulcie, puzzled for a moment.

"Oh, stay! you collect old china?"

"That is it; it is very foolish, ain't it? Don't ask me why I do it, because I don't know; I am not particularly fond of china—I don't think I care a pin about it; for instance, I don't go into fits like Lady Sundryley when anything is broken. One must do something, you know, my dear, and one may well collect china as—indulge in gossip and scandal."

"Far better, I should think," says Dulcie.

"That's right," says her ladyship, cheerfully, as if it settled the question. "But we'd better not stand here. Will you come home with me? It's Lord Edward's lunch time, and he likes me to give him his lunch—though why, I don't know, and I don't suppose he does. Will you come?"

Dulcie hesitates a moment, then she inclines her head and follows her ladyship into the carriage.

"Take care!" exclaims her ladyship; "there are three Chinese vases and a Japanese candlestick on the seat. Push them off, my dear; they won't break!" And as Dulcie hesitates to follow this advice, her lady-ship herself sweeps the costly bric-a-brac on to the floor with her own hand, and Dulcie takes her seat, feeling half dazed by the sudden turn of the wheel of fortune, feeling, indeed, very much as Cinderella felt when she stepped into the coach of her fairy godmother.

CHAPTER XXI.

The carriage stops at a large mansion in Grosvenor Square, and Lady Brookley leads Dulcie through the vast hall—in which are huge, handsome vases, china plaques, and gigantic Hindoo gods, all mixed together in the most grotesque confusion—into a drawing-room, which again is crowded with china objects, to such an extent that Dulcie is in mortal terror lest her skirts should work destruction.

Beyond this room is a smaller one, into which Lady Brookley literally winds her way, through an avenue of cabinets and curiosity receptacles and points to a chair.

"Now, my dear," she says, "sit down and tell me all about it. I've been asking you questions all the way home, but you don't appear to have heard them."

"I'm very sorry," says Dulcie, in her frank, candid way; "but I felt rather confused. It is rather sudden."

"That's my fault," says her ladyship, taking off her bonnet and lace shawl, and ringing the bell for her maid to take them away.

"I'm so sudden and sharp; suppose you have a glass of wine and a biscuit?"

"But Dulcie declines the wine, and "pulls herself together," as Sir Archie would have expressed it, as well as she can.

"It's a very short story, Lady Brookley," she says. "I am very poor and I wish to earn my living. I—her voice falters—"I have lately lost the only friend I had in the world."

"Stop a moment," says her ladyship, quickly, holding up her hand as if in alarm.

"Don't cry; don't say anything to make you cry; such a face as yours should never have a tear on it, my dear. It is like the faces they used to paint on the Sevres vases—all life, and health, and sunshine. You'll spoil it—I warn you, my dear!—you'll spoil it if you cry."

All this is said in the same sharp, little way, like a bird twittering in its cage; but notwithstanding the sharpness, there is a touch of something in the voice—a look of moisture in the eyes—that reveals the tender heart of the sharp speaker.

"I'm afraid I've spoken it already!" says Dulcie, with a smile.

Lady Brookley gave a little contradictory shake of the head.

"Don't believe it for a moment, my dear. Well, you have lost your only friend, and you haven't enough to live on, and you don't know anything, and—my dear," solemnly, "it's the luckiest thing in the world that I met you. If I hadn't, you might have danced attendance in that wretched office until you became forsaken like the poor souls perched on those horse-hair chairs! It is just luck; don't believe people when they say there is no such a thing as chance. If I had gone down to the dress-makers' instead of the Registry office we should not have met—now should we?"

Dulcie shakes her head.

"Very well," goes on her ladyship, triumphantly. "And now go on."

"I'm afraid that's all," she says.

"It sounds very little, but it is a great deal!"—with a sad little smile—"to me."

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2. and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (20 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and beats the sore, irritated membrane that lines the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really recommended for use by adults to overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and chronic asthma. It is splendid.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine-extract and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex, with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"Yes, yes, and now let's get to business. You want a situation—I want a companion. Will you come to me, my dear?"

Dulcie's eyes fill, and she is silent for a moment. She has read of such characters as the one before her in novels, and never failed to "jeer" at them.

"If you will have me," she says, "but—shall I not give you some references? Don't you want to know something more about me, Lady Brookley?" and she flushes.

The old lady's eyes gleam sharply behind the gold-rimmed glasses.

"References—perhaps," she says. "Not, mind, that I think they're worth a snap. I had a young lady whose references would have been lofty enough for a bishop; but she knocked down my china and ran off with the man who comes to tune the piano."

Dulcie laughs; not a whit offended.

"I shall probably knock down the china," she says, looking round at the motley collection of breakables.

"but I think I will promise not to run away with the music-tuner, Lady Brookley."

Her ladyship laughs—a little sharp, appreciative laugh.

"I don't think you will, my dear," she says. "Ladies usually do not commit themselves in that way. I think I know a lady when I see her."

Dulcie smiles. And yet Lady Fallowell had considered her anything but a lady.

"And I think I know when I can trust anyone. My dear, your face is your fortune, like the dairy-maid's who went a-milking. As to hearing all about you, I shall leave that to you, you needn't start. Why, child, you are all nerves! Do you think I want to pry into your poor little troubles? I know your great one, you know."

Dulcie cannot speak, but she nods.

"Where are you living?" says her ladyship.

Dulcie gives her the address, then, as she does so, she thinks of Sarah, faithful Sarah, who has no suspicion of the parting which is so near.

"What's the matter now?" says her ladyship, who seems able to read the frank face as if it were a book.

"There's someone that you care for, and you don't want to leave. Who is it?"

Dulcie colors.

"I was thinking of a good, faithful soul, who calls herself my servant, but who has proved herself a true friend."

Her ladyship thinks a moment, then she says, suddenly:

"Bring her with you. Goodness knows there will be room for her. You say she is a faithful servant, my dear. We can put her amongst the curiosities," and she laughs.

But Dulcie does not laugh, she stares bewildered, and once more the keen, little old woman seems to read her.

"You are surprised at my liberality, my dear," she says, nodding. "Wait a moment, you don't know what I shall exact in return; you have only heard one part of the bargain yet."

"I wish you'd tell me the other—my part," says Dulcie.

"Prepare yourself! You will have to be the constant companion of a restless old woman with a mania for auction-rooms and old china: you will have to go about with the old woman in her walks and drives, to eat your meals with her, to read to her, and keep her in a good temper—"

Dulcie smiles.

"And, in short, to be her slave. That's what 'being a companion' means, my dear," and the keen eyes twinkle. "Aren't you frightened?"

"Not very," says Dulcie. "Is there nothing else?"

"Bless the girl!" exclaims her ladyship, "Isn't that enough? I had to startle you as much as I could."

"You have described the part of a friend, not that of a slave," says Dulcie.

"And that's what I want," declares Lady Brookley, leaning forward and patting her arm. "That is what I have been looking for ever since—over since—" she pauses suddenly, and Dulcie sees something shining behind the glasses. "My dear, I only had one child. I lost my daughter when she was just beginning to be a friend—that's my trouble, and we won't speak of it. And now what do you say?"

Dulcie hesitates.

"Oh, the references are still troubling you, are they? Well, give me one."

Dulcie gives the name of the old solicitor.

"Very well," says her ladyship, "I will go down and see him. And now about the salary. What do you say to sixty pounds a year?"

Dulcie stares.

"Not enough! You are quite right, my dear, it isn't; it wouldn't keep you in dresses—"

"Oh, but," interrupts Dulcie hastily. "I thought it was a little good to me. I—have a great deal of my own."

"Very well," says her ladyship, with a smile, "say—sixty pounds a year. And when will you come? Of course, with an affection of external prudence, "after I have seen your reference."

"When you wish," says Dulcie.

"Well, you know," says her ladyship, "you have to get 'rid' of your rooms, and—and things— By the way, if you like to bring anything you fancy you can do so, there is plenty of room."

"There is some old china," says Dulcie, hesitatingly. Her ladyship's eyes brighten.

"Bring it, my dear," she says. "You shall have a cabinet all to yourself. You don't happen to have a six mark tea-pot?"

Nerves of the Stomach

Were Weak and Inactive as Result of Nervous Prostration—Lost Twenty Pounds—Had to Take Sleeping Powders to Get Any Rest.

St. Catherine's, Ont., October 30th.—Many people never realize that the movement and action of every organ of the human body is dependent on the energy supplied by the nervous system.

When the nervous system gets run down there is weakness throughout the entire body. You feel tired and languid and your stomach and other digestive organs are similarly affected. Appetite falls, digestion is poor, you do not get the good of what you eat and gradually grow weaker and weaker.

This process can only be stopped by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which goes directly to create new nerve force and thereby to invigorate the whole human body.

Mrs. Geo. S. Elise, 46 Davidson street, St. Catherine's, Ont., writes: "My husband had an attack of nervous prostration, and, although he doctored for some time and tried different other medicines, he could not get relief. He had to resort to sleeping powders given him by the doctor to make him sleep. The greater part of the trouble seemed to be with the nerves of his stomach. He began to lose weight, and kept on going down until he had lost twenty pounds. We had read advertisements in the newspapers for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and noticed that it seemed to be doing a lot of good for people troubled with nervousness, so my husband decided to try it. He found benefit almost from the start, and continued this treatment until he had taken about twelve or thirteen boxes. The results were most satisfactory. He is now enjoying good health, sleeps well, and has gained back nearly all the weight he had lost. He also uses Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally, and thinks them an excellent remedy. I have also used this latter medicine for dizzy spells and liver trouble, and was completely cured of these complaints. We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's medicines, and cannot speak too highly of them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

in going straight to the weak spot in treating disease? If so, you will never use anything but Peps for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and throat and lung troubles. Listen why!

Peps are tiny tablets, which contain rich medicinal ingredients, so prepared that they turn into vapour in the mouth, and are breathed down to the throat, the breathing tubes and lungs direct.

Cough mixtures go—net to the lungs and chest at all, but to the stomach. There is absolutely no direct connection between stomach and lungs.

When you have a bad cold, your digestion is weakened. You lose appetite, and if a man, your usual smoke does not "taste good." In other words, your digestive system is lacking tone. All cough mixtures make this condition worse.

Don't ruin your stomach to heal your lungs. Take a remedy that goes right to the spot—Peps.

Surprising how they end coughs, catarrh, bronchitis, sore-throat, "deery," man's throat, asthma, and all lung troubles. Contain no poison, and are best for children.

Dr. Gordon Stables says:—"If you wish to ease and end a cough, if you desire to loosen tickling phlegm, and clear the throat and the breathing tubes, use Peps. The pine fumes and balsamic fluid, and germs of disease in the mouth, on the palate, in the throat, and in the breathing tubes, are at once destroyed by their action."

Have you tried this famous remedy? If not, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

Outpoisoning the Poisoners.

(By E. T. Hronsdon.)

During the German assault upon Arrmentieres recently, a strange and ghastly phenomenon was witnessed. Many of the shells which fell in the town were seemingly of very fragile construction. They scarcely dented the ground where they burst. They injured very few people with flying particles. They did not contain either cyanogen gas or chlorine. There was a slight incense-like odor, but this was attributed to a peculiar and impotent powder. The Germans were supposed to have been forced into using. There seemed to be no reason for the shells.

Six hours later the ghastly truth began to make itself known. Soldiers, male citizens, women and children began to collapse by the score. Many fell in convulsions. Some went stark, raving mad. The whole community was poisoned—poisoned by some new and terrible agent that even the German archchemists had not dreamed of using before.

For nearly a week the terrible gas did its work, although the shells at tacks ceased abruptly on the first day. Four thousand individuals died in agony greater than anything the feared chlorine ever had caused.

The agent employed was arsine, known in the laboratory as arseniured hydrogen, one of the deadliest of all fumes known to the chemist—beside which hydrogen cyanide and carbon monoxide may be trifled with in comparative safety.

This fume fury can be made quickly, easily, and in immense quantities, merely by treating any arsenical ore with hydrochloric acid. Made for demonstration purposes, where the pure gas is desired, the method is to mix arsenic with zinc shavings, and to pour over the receptacle hydrochloric acid.

Juice of Lemons!

How to Make Skin White and Beautiful

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful "beautifier," by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in; then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as sallowness, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful to smoothen rough, red hands.

Nursing Sisters on Hospital Ships

There are a round dozen of hospital ships which are always in close attendance upon the Fleet, whether in port or at their base in action. All these carry two sisters of the Regular Service and two of the Reserve, who have in several cases been under heavy fire, as at Suvia Bay and the Mediterranean. Added to this, they have constantly been in danger of torpedo attack, or mine explosion; and when the time comes to make them known, there will be stories of calm courage in the presence of great danger, and devotion to duty under circumstances of difficulty calling for promptitude and resourcefulness, of which every woman will feel proud.

The regulations as to the uniforms of the Naval Service are exceedingly explicit. Dark blue is the color; and on State or ceremonial occasions, when officers are in full dress, the dress must be of blue silk with four and three-quarter inch scarlet silk cuffs, and the cap must be of Indian muslin embroidered with the Naval Crown. White kid gloves must be worn, but no jewellery is permitted. General regulations prescribe plain black stockings and plain black shoes without buckles. An exception in blue silk may be carried. The bonnet is navy blue straw, with folds of velvet and blue ribbon strings. On foreign service in hot climates white check skirts, white cambric shirt-blouses and white shoes are provided. Rank is indicated by the badges. Thus, behind the fighting lines on land or sea the Empire's womanhood is rendering its supreme service. In all seclusion, even to aloofness, it is carried on by a great and noble company, strong, gentle, fearless and self-sacrificing.

Curing Shark Meat.

Although the meat of some sharks, prepared in various ways, has been eaten; a particular prejudice has been held against certain kinds of sharks, especially the sand shark, which has been claimed to be absolutely unfit to eat. During the past summer the director of the Woods Hole (Mass.) laboratory of the Bureau of Fisheries tested six species of sharks, including the sand shark, by having some fifty people eat them. The shark meats, served in different ways, were pronounced not only good, but especially pleasing in flavor and texture; several persons pronounced them equal to swordfish.

While it seems probable that shark meat, when once thoroughly introduced to the market, will, like swordfish, be so quickly sold that there may be little or no necessity for the application of curing or other preserving methods, nevertheless attention has been given to the proper means of smoking and salting. It is found that shark meat is best salted dry, by the lanch method, since in any wet process it has a tendency to develop a disagreeable ammonia smell. The fish is split and the backbone removed in such a way as to leave no parts over two inches in thickness, in order that the salt may strike through quickly.

Shark meat, not having a great amount of oil, is not ideal for smoking, yet a light smoke, applied gradually for about three days, makes an agreeable product which, so far, has kept well. If it is no longer of smoke, it should be kept in a dry condition. The texture of shark muscle, either salted or smoked, lends itself particularly well to the preparation of shredded meat.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Oct. 20.

Your Boys and Girls.

A little attention on the part of mothers to what we commonly call the manners of children, will save her much unnecessary time and annoyance and the children a great deal of criticism. These rules of right behavior need not be emphasized to the extent, however, that the children will act unnaturally or stiff.

Girls, when greeting their elders, should make a slight, graceful bow. The little boy should be taught to offer his assistance in carrying books and to take packages for his mother or any woman. A boy is almost never too young to be taught the first principles of gallantry and politeness.

Children are very apt to reply sharply to one another in play and in discussions. Similarly they are apt to interrupt the conversation of their elders, which is of course, one of the least pardonable varieties of childish rudeness and one to be especially guarded against by parents.

Use of Whale Meat as Food.

The Bureau of Fisheries, Department of Commerce, has for some time, in correspondence and in personal interviews, been advocating the use of the meat of whales, porpoises, dolphins and other cetaceans for human food.

Whales and porpoises are mammals, like cattle and sheep, and their flesh is "meat," not "fish." In texture and appearance it resembles beef, though the color is darker red and the flavor is closer to that meat than to any other. It is devoid of all fishy taste. It is likely that it will soon be obtainable fresh, corned and canned, and it is recommended to those who have the opportunity to purchase it.

Whales are taken at several shore stations on the Pacific Coast, where their blubber is rendered for oil and their bones and flesh used to some extent for fertilizer, while their skins appear to be adapted to tanning into leather. These stations take a considerable number of these animals each furnishing about five tons of excellent meat.

Porpoises are abundant on all of our coasts and there is a regular fishery for them at Cape Hatteras, where they are valued principally for their oil.

During May an enterprising whaling company placed fresh whale meat on the market in Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Ore. The product met with a ready sale at 10c. per pound and was immediately placed on the menus of the hotels and restaurants under its proper name.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Oct. 20.

You Can't Find Any Dandruff, and Hair Stops Coming Out.

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy, glossy and beautiful at once.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and ragged, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A small trial bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

A Good Word for the Squid.

Dr. G. G. Scott conducted during the summer at the Woods Hole (Mass.) laboratory experiments in drying fish. Domestic fruit-drying apparatus, steam-heated fish dryers, dryers with air heated by means other than steam, dryers which force dried air over the fish at varying temperatures, and the methods and limitations of sun drying were tried. The methods were applied to a variety of food fish not commonly used, including shark, goosefish and whiting, and also squid.

The results in the case of the squid are especially noteworthy. Squid, in the drying process, is reduced to broad, thin sheets of inviting appearance, which may be chopped to form chowder or soup stock. There is an agreeable and characteristic flavor which, together with the very high protein content, promises much for the eventual addition of the squid to the American dietary.—N. Y. TUESDAY, Oct. 30th, 1917.

To the Fishermen of Newfoundland.

Fishermen of Newfoundland, just a word or two about this war that is going on and its relation to you. We say them to you particularly for a simple reason. Those in Newfoundland who are not fishermen are very few, a small minority. And that minority has, whatever the reason, played its part well in the war, played it so well that there is no need to talk to it, to address any exhortation to it. So we speak to you.

We are not going to talk to you about your duty. That is no concern of ours and is none of our business. But we are going to tell you a few plain facts and leave you to do the thinking yourselves about your duty. Perhaps you have heard them before, perhaps not. Perhaps some of them are self-evident; perhaps others have not appeared to you in exactly the same light before.

You have just finished the 1917 voyage. Have you ever caught so much fish before? Have the returns ever been so large? We think not. There is only one thing to be said about that—We hope that full thanks have been given for it, in your hearts if not with your lips, where they are due. You have been surrounded with plenty at a time when millions have been without a sufficiency. Have you ever gone hungry for a day? For two days? Three days? Perhaps you have, some of you. Then perhaps you will understand something of what it means when we tell you that thousands to-day are dying of slow starvation. That hundreds of thousands are next door to it, dragging out an existence which barely holds body and soul together. Think of that occasionally when you sit down to a meal that satisfies.

But you have not only caught the fish, you have sold it. Have you ever got such a price for it before? Have you ever made so much actual, cold, hard cash before? You know you have not. Has it occurred to you to ask why this has been? Perhaps it has; perhaps you know in a vague sort of way. We will try to tell you a little more exactly. Fish has cost more to those who buy it because there has been a great scarcity of it. That is the main reason, almost the whole reason. There has also been a great scarcity of ships to carry the fish, though that does not affect you so much and in any case amounts to much the same thing. Now those who buy this fish would not do so, would not pay such a price for it, if they could get other food more cheaply. But they cannot. They have not got it themselves. Other countries have not got it to give them. They have not got enough for their own needs. In a word, there is a great scarcity of food in general throughout the world over. What is the meaning of that? It is what we have stated above, that thousands of human beings are dying for the want of it, many of them helpless women and children, emaciated mothers and pitiful, shrunken babes. Do you see the connection? Is it this misery that has helped to make your calling so profitable, directly in some cases, indirectly in all the rest. Think of it when you count over your money or reckon up your bank account. If you have more to count, a larger figure to reckon than in years past, ponder a little the reason why.

There is a great, undeniable fact in this world to-day, which is not often mentioned, possibly because it is not pleasant. Certain countries (including Newfoundland) and certain individuals (including yourselves) have profited by the war. Of that profit, far the greater part has been due directly to the war. Of that part every single cent can be traced directly to the misery of which we speak; it is the price of somebody's want, somebody's suffering, somebody's affliction. Doubtless many of you wish that the present prosperity you see around you will continue. A natural wish and on the surface harmless enough, but ask yourselves what it means. When you wish that, when you wish that these abnormal prices should continue, you simply wish for more suffering and more tragedy, that where thousands have died already thousands more shall die. Who that has a human heart, knowing this, could confess such a wish? Who would not rather strain every nerve, offer every service, to remove the horrible cause of it all?

There is only one way to remove it. This war is the enemy of mankind and mankind must fight it to a finish. There is only one way to fight it to a finish and that is to fight to a finish those who made it for their own damnable ends. It is not Germany and Austria that the Allies—not the Allies either, but the rest of the world—are fighting, it is the works of darkness. If every man had realized this at the first who realized it now, there would now be no war. Europe would be a clean and wholesome place, not the living hell it is. But it is being purged, more quickly than most think. Will YOU help to purge it or stand aloof? Will you help the cause of freedom or its enemies? For you do one or the other—there is no middle course. You either fight for the Allies, for your own country, or against them. Every man, being able to go, who does not go, is an enemy of his country. "He that is not with me is against me." Satan also could have used these words. Germany, his instrument, uses them to-day. Are you a German or a Briton? It is not what you say but what you do, that answers that question.

One word more. There is a gallant little band of men in Flanders to-day called the Newfoundland Regiment. It has a name as high as any. It has done things which have shed lustre upon it and reflected it upon you, its brothers. It sprang into life at the beginning of the war; will it be in at the finish? There is a danger that it will not. If things go on as they are going at present, two alternatives face it. The first is this. The world in after days will say, "Newfoundland sent a regiment of men which did great deeds. But it could not be kept up to strength. More men were wounded and put out of action than came forward." The best men went, the slackers stayed at home. So the regiment was disbanded and drafted into other units." Those words will NEVER be said. There are those in the country who will see to it that they are not. But will those be said instead? "The best men went, the slackers stayed at home. They would not listen to appeals, so compulsion was applied. They would not go of their own accord, so they were made to go. Newfoundland adopted selective conscription." The first alternative will be prevented by the authorities. Whether or not the second must be true rests entirely with you. It will be true if things go on as they are going. It is for you to make it false. It is for you, it can be your imperishable honor, to have this the verdict of the world instead of either:

"The Newfoundland Regiment was a volunteer regiment from first to last. It covered itself with glory and it stuck it out to the end. On the day that peace was declared it was in its place, and that place was in the forefront of the great British Army." FISHMEN OF NEWFOUNDLAND, WHICH IS IT TO BE?

The Shipbuilding Bounty.

It may not be out of place to say a few words—we cannot dwell at length to-day—with respect to the enterprise in view of the recent publication by the Government of its intention to introduce an amendment at next session of the Legislature to do away with any bounty on ships over 120 tons, and such to apply to any craft whose keel has not yet been laid. The bounty is a very large one. In the case for instance of 10 ships of an average of 400 tons it would amount to $85,000 for the lower class of ship, and $80,000 for the higher class.

Items of Interest.

The programmes, newspapers, lunch wrappers, etc., picked up by the park employees after the first two games of the World's Series at Chicago weighed 7,600 pounds. They produced 71 bales and sold for $30.

The Brooklyn Eagle says: "For 7,000,000 pairs of shoes for soldiers, all leather and well made, the Government pays $4.65 a pair. The same shoes would cost the individual purchaser in New York city $9 a pair. Let us forbear comment. It is too often superfluous."

The peculiar appearance of the uniforms of some Germans recently captured led to an examination which also be to frighten outside capital from embarking on enterprises in the Colony. The result to the Colony would be both from a moral and pecuniary standpoint little short of disastrous. Whether an entire or partial taking away of the bounty on vessels over a certain tonnage is wise or not from the standpoint of the country's and the Empire's interests is a subject that should call for deep consideration. It has its pros and cons. We are not sure the years have it. But as regards treating the Company and any others fairly there is only one side whether we look at the Colony's or the Company's good; and we are pleased to find that the Government express the utmost readiness to do all in their power to come to an arrangement with the Company that will put the enterprise on a footing that will be fair to those that have invested their money and are prepared to invest more in developing the resources of the Colony, and that will tend to the extension instead of curtailment of the enterprise.

A full and fair formal statement by the Company to the Government of their intentions and requirements and a careful consideration of them by the Government, and the arriving at an arrangement that will be advantageous to both the country and the company, and stimulate the investment of capital, is what is wanted. We trust there is broadness of view enough and statesmanship enough in our rulers to accomplish this to the full extent.—Hr. Grace Standard.

KEEPING A CLOSE WATCH.—In order to prevent wholesale smuggling an extra number of tide-watches have been engaged to keep a close watch on all ships coming from points along the Southern Shore where wrecks have occurred.

BOYS AND CIGARETTES.—The police are now working overtime in an endeavour to catch persons buying for and selling cigars, cigarettes and tobacco to boys under 15 years of age. Judge Morris intends to carry out the law to the strictest letter.

FIRE TO-DAY.—An alarm from Box 228 brought the Central and Eastern companies to McDougall Street where the roof of a house, occupied by a family named Barrington, was ignited by sparks from the chimney. A stream from the chemical quenched the blaze. The damage done was insignificant.

ANOTHER DOPE VICTIM.—Half crazed from drinking Florida Water, a 20-year-old mechanic created a lively scene last night at the home of his mother, who had him arrested, as her domestic for a while was threatened with destruction. Constables O'Flaherty and Kelly had to handcuff the dope victim to get him to the lockup. This morning the condition of the young nebrlate was such as to elicit pity. However he had to deposit a dollar for his release.

To give back Alsace-Lorraine will be Prussia's defeat. It will be clear and unequivocal. Hence it is that America has a very real interest in the question. And this is quite apart from what we owe in support to the French and the British nations who have given their bodies as our first line of defence against the Prussian monster. It is quite apart from the unmistakable cry of justice that France be given back her own; that after forty-seven years the crepe band shall be removed from the eyes of that statue of the City of Starsbourg in the place de la Concorde in Paris. America is clearly interested in the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.

GERMANS WITHDRAWING IN NORTHERN RUSSIA.

ON THE WEST FRONT
IN FRANCE & BELGIUM.

Little fighting has taken place except in the nature of bombardments, although on the Verdun front the Germans in an attack near Chaume Wood captured some of the French trenches. However, later they were driven out of them. On that portion of the line held by the Americans the first German prisoner was taken and died of wounds sustained in No Man's Land when he failed to obey the command "Halt". The Americans daily are shelling the Germans with their guns, answering their fire. Snow has fallen in the region where the Americans are entrenched. On the Russian front: The Germans in their continued evacuation have withdrawn from the entire Werder Peninsula projecting into Moon Sound, in the Gulf of Riga. The possibility is that their withdrawal in landing further forces last week caused the decision to withdraw troops.

FRENCH REPORT.

PARIS, To-Day.

A communication on war operations issued to-night reads: During the course of the day artillery action was maintained with violence on the right bank of the Meuse, in the sector of Chaume Wood and Bezanvaux. There was intermittent cannonading on the rest of the front. German aviators bombed the neighborhood of Dunkirk on October 27th and 28th. There were no casualties.

WITH THE BELGIANS.

Belgian Statement: Our troops carried out last night several raids north and south of Dixmude. A detachment went beyond the line of support and brought back in all about fifty prisoners and several machine guns. Our troops blew up several enemy bomb throwers and shelters. During the day our batteries continued the destruction of numerous enemy works and the batteries of German artillery responded only feebly. Our aviators have carried out a number of flights.

IN MACEDONIA.

Eastern Theatre: The enemy's artillery was fairly active along the whole front. Action was more spirited, however, north of Monastir. On October 26th the artillery was quite serious in the region of Yvardar and Monastir, where we shelled enemy batteries. Patrol encounters occurred on the Lower Struma and at the Cerina bend.

BRITAIN'S THANKS.

LONDON, To-Day.

Parliament to-day adopted a resolution presenting, by the Prime Minister expressing the thanks of Parliament to the Navy and Army, including the overseas troops and mercantile mariners, for their services in the war and for their gallant and auxiliary services. The House expressed sympathy with the relatives and friends of those who have given their lives for their country. The Premier in moving the resolution said that even if he had the leisure in these terrible times, especially the last two days, he felt he couldn't do justice to this great theme. The deeds of the Army and Navy have won the admiration of all subjects of the King. The British Navy was like one of those internal organs essential to life of which we are unconscious until something went wrong. In this war, said the Premier, the Navy had been the anchor of the Allied cause. If it lost its hold the hopes of the alliance would be shattered. The Premier told how the Navy had guaranteed supplies to the Army abroad and materials which it had enabled the Allies to get from abroad. But for the Navy we would have fallen. Prussia would be the master of the hope of the world. Despite hidden foes, despite illegitimate naval warfare, despite black piracy, the Navy has preserved the highways of the seas for Britain and her Allies. It was too early to summarize the benefit of the blockade by the Navy, which would be complete if it had not left the gate to the Balkans unlocked. It was not the fault of the Grand Fleet if it had not many opportunities, that was due to the enemy's knowledge of its efficiency. Since the battle of Jutland the Germans had never seen fit to challenge it. The Premier then paid a tribute to the smaller craft, which were to be found in all seas numbered by the thousands. (The dangers were realized; yet the results of their action were enjoyed by the people of these islands. The British Expeditionary Force now numbered more than three million. It was a great triumph of organization. It was only rendered possible by the heroism of the old army, the finest fighting troops in the world. It saved France and Europe, but hardly a man of that army was left now. Seventy-five per cent. of the contribution in men, said the Premier, had come from England and seventy-five per cent. loss had fallen on England. Scotland had done its share. Ireland had made a distinguished contribution, and in voluntary re-enlistments had been a record. The Dominions had contributed between 700,000 and 800,000. He praised the work of the Canadians on the Western Front, and the Anzacs in Gallipoli and France, and the South Africans. The memory of the powerful aid given by India would never be forgotten. Never has the British Empire shown greater or more effective unity, he exclaimed. The Premier, it has been regarded as a dream; it is now a fact, a powerful fact in fashioning the history of the world.

FRUITLESS AIR RAID.

LONDON, To-Day.

Airplanes endeavored to carry out a raid to-night on the southeast counties of England, but none of them was able to pass the outer defences, according to an official statement issued late to-night by Field Marshal Viscount French, Commander-in-Chief of home forces. The statement of Viscount French follows: Airplanes attempted a raid on the southeast counties to-night. Our airplanes went up and guns and lights were in action. No hostile airplanes succeeded in passing through the outer defences.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, To-Day.

An official statement from British headquarters in France and Belgium issued last night reads: A detachment of Inniskilling Fusiliers entered enemy trenches this afternoon northeast of Croiselles, southeast of Arras, and captured a few prisoners. Successful raids, in which a number of prisoners were taken, were carried out early this morning by Belgian troops north and south of Dixmude. On the battle front hostile artillery has been active north of the Ypres-Poulers railway; our own artillery has shown great activity northeast of Ypres. Aviation: On Sunday the weather was fine but a thick haze overhung the lines, greatly hindering work in the air. Our low flying aeroplanes fired a great many rounds at enemy troops in their trenches and shell holes. During the day over one hundred bombs were dropped by us on hostile aerodromes and billets. At night the Gontrode aerodrome, the Courtrai station and the billets and railway station in the neighborhood of Roulers were bombed. There was not much fighting owing to the mist. One German machine was brought down and one was driven out of control. One of our machines is missing.

A SENSIBLE OBJECT.

LONDON, To-Day.

Andrew Bonar Law, in the Commons yesterday, informed questioners that the approaching inter-allied conference at Paris had been summoned not to consider war aims but the conduct of the war.

WARNING BUT NO ATTACK.

LONDON, To-Day.

Warning of an air raid was given to Londoners last night by the police and special officers, but in the absence of gun fire in the city area, there was no excitement. A number of persons entered underground railways or went

To Our CUSTOMERS!

We take pleasure in announcing that export licenses have been granted for the sugar purchased by us, and that we will shortly be able to fill all the orders which we have booked.

Further, we beg to announce that the shortage which now exists in the world's sugar supply is only temporary, and that in January, when the Cuban crop becomes available, there will be an ample supply, probably at a lower price than that now ruling.

COMMENT OF THE ITALIAN PRESS.

ROME, To-Day.

All Italy realizes that the Italian second army is standing a supreme test as a result of the combined German and Austro-Hungarian offensive on the eastern frontier. The tone of the press is courageous. The newspapers agree that the Germans are attacking the Austrians in the belief that Italy is starving and rent by internal disorders and ready to desert the Entente. Also they say that Italy offered the best grounds for a new success with the German armies which were found to be no longer needed on the Russian front. The reason for the attack through the Tolmino region is asserted to be partly due to the opportunity provided for threatening the outflanking of the entire Carso Plateau and the Lower Isonzo, where the Italians made gains during the summer, and because the Italians long have sought to penetrate the passes of Tolmino through which the railroads run into the heart of Austria. One incident of the retreat of the Italians has been the defence of Montenero, where the most fierce fighting took place for an entire week, with the Italians able to retreat but refusing to do so. This gallant defence was made before Montenero which literally has been consecrated with the blood of Italians since the commencement of the war.

ANOTHER ATTACK IN FLANDERS.

LONDON, To-Day.

Satisfaction with the decision of Great Britain and France to help the Italians is expressed by most of the morning newspapers, which again urge that whatever assistance is possible must be given without delay. There is of course no certain indication of the exact form this help will take, but the general assumption seems to be that reinforcements contributed by Great Britain and France will appear on the Italian front. While some commentators to-day take a somewhat gloomy view of the situation, others believe that the Italians will recover and that the Germans will not gain any permanent advantage. The British attacked on the Flanders front early this morning. Good progress is reported by the War Office.

SUPPOSE THEY TRY AN OFFENCE?

PETROGRAD, To-Day.

Foreign Minister Terestchenko, in addressing the preliminary parliament to-day, said a separate peace was impossible and that the defence of Russian territory was one of the fundamental needs.

DELIGHTFUL ARGUING.

AMSTERDAM, To-Day.

The Austro-German offensive against Italy, according to the Vorwarts of Berlin, was not undertaken in an aggressive spirit with the object of conquest but solely to bring peace nearer.

LONDON, To-Day.

Telegraphing from Petrograd, a correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph quotes General Verkhovskii, Minister of War as rebuking those who have talked of the disappearance of the Russian Army. He declared that these persons had forgotten that on their front were no less than one hundred and thirty German divisions.

tempted a raid on the southeast counties to-night. Our airplanes went up and guns and lights were in action. No hostile airplanes succeeded in passing through the outer defences.

AUSTRIAN BRAG.

AMSTERDAM, To-Day.

Dr. Von Seydler, the Austrian Premier, speaking in the upper chamber of Austrian diet at Vienna on Saturday said the war situation was the best conceivable, but our aims are the same for which we entered the war. He continued, we are still ready to sit at a conference table with the enemy if he has no intention of imposing peace and arbitrary peace aims. If such tendencies are continued we can only answer them with a more decided prosecution of the war until we convince the Entente that we are able to compel peace.

Alsace-Lorraine

phia Ledger: The restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France, wreck of the Berlin-Bagdad will be a lesson to the Teuton that no sophistry can exist. To give back Alsace-Lorraine to Prussia is a defeat. It is clear and unequivocal. Hence America has a very real interest in the question. And this is not from what we owe in the war to the French and the British who have given their bodies and blood in the defence against the Prussian monster. It is quite on the unmistakable cry of the people of France to give back her land after forty-seven years of the most shameful and degrading rule that statute of the City of Paris. America is clearly in the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.

The Woman Who Couldn't Sit Still.

By BUTH CAMERON.

BUTH CAMERON.

"If only we could persuade ourselves to remain in quiescent when we are happy! If only we would remain still in the arm chair as the last curl of vapour rises from a cigar that has been enjoyed! If only we would sit still in the shadow and not go indoors to write that letter! Let happiness alone. Sit not an inch, speak not a word, hold her hand—and be still."

Not long ago I went on a camping party. We were (for the most part) a congenial crowd and mealtime was a high festival of good talk (isn't it wonderful how much better and more easily one talks across the table than at any other time. The only other rival the dinner table has as a talk breeder is the open fireplace.)

The Dishes Made Our Stolen Moments Sweet.

To return. We all enjoyed each other (and ourselves) so much that we were inclined to finger-over the coffee cups. The very fact that dishes awaited us added savor to the moments we stole from that dread duty. They made a background against which our present content stood out in high light.

That is, for all but one of us. And thereby hangs my tale. She was one of those women who can't "let happiness alone," at least not while there is a dish unwashed in the house.

Her Eye Rove Around The Table.

Before we had sat three minutes her eye would begin to rove impatiently about the table. Then she would start to stack the dishes nearest her, and presently she would be bustling about clearing up, and of course the rest of us women couldn't sit still while that was going on.

In vain, her husband protested, in vain we all urged her to sit still a moment longer. "I want to get the dishes done," she would say, "then we can talk." But then of course we couldn't talk. The spell was broken, someone had gone out, someone else was writing a letter.

The Women Who Are Tied Down To Plans.

We all know women like that. One does not have to go on camping parties to meet them. They are the women who can never take advantage of a jewel day for a long walk or a spin into the country because they planned to do some household task. They are the women who have not time to be comrades for their husbands because they are so occupied with the supreme importance of being better housewives than their neighbors.

And then they break their hearts if their husbands make comrades of someone else.

The ability to let things go, sometimes is a fine art, and one well worth acquiring.

HUSBANDS.

The husband is a hopeful bridegroom who has been converted into a sneaky thief. Some husbands are harder to convert successfully than others and prefer to live with some relative by marriage, but when joined to a wife with two large, forbidding fists are eventually brought to it.

There are three kinds of husbands—happy, resigned and hopeless. The happy husband is one who married an accomplished cook in the guise of a sweet-voiced seraph. A seraph in nineteen changes of tea gowns is a good thing to have about the house, but does not satisfy the yearnings of man's practical nature as well as a plain, unadorned helpmeet who knows how to subdue the stubborn spirit of the round steak. Thousands of solid American citizens with glistening appetites have married filmy seraphs who couldn't cook anything but a Welsh rarebit, and have later repented in ashes and restaurant soup.

Resigned husbands are those who did not expect much in the first place and scored 99 out of a possible hundred. There are very few of this class, as practically all of the resignation obtainable is monopolized by wives who are unable to detect a treasure when they see it. Husbands who are fully resigned always stay home at night and read something which will take their minds off a gloomy retrospect. A husband whose retrospect is in good working order is a melancholy figure in any home.

The hopeless husband is one who would be pleased to exchange what he got in the "draw for a town lot located near the high school. Some husbands become so hopeless that they back out from under the marriage yoke and contribute mellow layers of alimony with a contented look. It sometimes happens that the wife gets considerably hopeless herself, and after being released marries some old admirer who is long on love and short on hair. When both husband and wife become hopeless at the same time, there is a loud explosion in the district court and a mutual agreement to split the household effects fifty-fifty.

While husbands are not absolutely necessary, they are pleasant to have around when the furnace goes out and when well-treated are considered quite a boon. Husbands who are always met at the front door with a resonant kiss and a four-course dinner are preferable to any other variety.

CONSERVE THINGS.

WALT MASON.

I want to save the food supply, and so I follow every fadist, and this explains my heart-felt sigh and why I find each week I'm saddest. Persuaded by the fadist bunch, I started making Mondays a 'stick' day; on Tuesdays I've a 'sickly lunch' for Tuesdays are appointed wheatless. My heart that once was lilting soon is dismal now, and dumb and tuneless; I do not smile, the whole week long, for every other day is prunelless. I hope my self-denying stunt may help to squelch the beastly foeman; I hope to aid things at the front by disciplining my abdomen. The Prussian strength I hope to break, and so my diet's stale and wooden; on Saturday's I have no cake, on Sunday's I cut out the puddin'. I'd rob the baker of his throne, the kromping of his martial splendor, and so I gnaw an old shinsbone, where once I ate the sirlion tender. I am too thin to fill my duds, my cheek is hollow, wan and hueless; for Thursdays see me shun the spuds, and every Friday, now, is stewless. I hope the gripes are not in vain, which now disturb my midriff regions; I hope my colic and my pain may play the duce with Wilhelm's legions.

"The Britain of the South Seas."

The first European to discover New Zealand was Tasman, the celebrated Dutch navigator, in 1642, but, as he neither landed upon the islands nor sailed entirely round them, they remained unknown, and were supposed to be part of a southern continent, till 1769, when it was circumnavigated by Captain Cook, who, on December 13, took formal possession of them in the name of Great Britain. The captain paid three visits to New Zealand, and planted several spots of ground with European garden seeds, taking his final departure in 1777, after which, for some little time, the islands were left severely alone, sailors shunning their vicinity on account of the ferocity and cannibalism of its natives. At the peace in 1814, the right of Great Britain to New Zealand was recognized, and the Colonial Chaplain of New South Wales bestowed himself to convert these heathen, and established a Church Mission at the Bay of Islands, where several members of Captain Cook's expedition had been killed and eaten by the natives. No constitutional authority was placed over it until 1833, when a resident subordinate to New South Wales was appointed, and the accounts of the country were so promising that the New Zealand Company was formed to colonize the islands; in 1839 Wellington was founded. At first the scheme did not prosper, but just as the funds of the Company were at the lowest ebb, things began to improve, and towns sprang up with wonderful rapidity. In 1841 New Zealand was declared an independent colony and a bishop's see; while in 1846, direct trading between New Zealand and Liverpool commenced. Sir Robert Peel was wont to call the island the "Great Britain of the South Seas."

Naval Men Welcomed.

A number of Royal Naval Reservists, whose names appeared in yesterday's Telegram, reached the city last night's express. They were met at the station by the Ladies' Reception Committee and Hon. Dr. Lloyd, Acting Prime Minister, who on behalf of the Committee and the country at large extended a hearty welcome home to the men who had done their bit. At the conclusion of the address cheers were given for the returned heroes, the Acting Prime Minister and the Ladies' Reception Committee.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The three masted schr. Pussy Jones, No. 3, is discharging salt to the Nfld. Shipbuilding Co.

Mr. Neville Lockyer, of the Cable staff, Heart's Content, having spent a few days with his mother here, left for the scene of his work by this afternoon's train.

Nearly all our Labrador men have arrived and we extend a hearty welcome home to each and all.

A meeting of the Hr. Grace Branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held in Coughlan Hall last evening. Quite a large gathering was present and no doubt the house-to-house collection this year will exceed that of former years.

The schr. Dorothy, Ed. Taylor, master, went to St. John's to-day with a load of dry fish for her owner, Mr. E. Simmons.

Another schooner with a cargo of lumber arrived to the Shipbuilding Co. a couple of days ago.

The ladies of the W. P. A. are still rushing their work knitting socks, etc., for our boys at the battle front. No doubt every stitch means a prayer for the safety of those brave lads and for victory for our cause. The ladies deserve all the encouragement we can give them.

Rev. Thos. O'Neill, P.P. of Conception Harbor, was in town for a day or two last week. He returned home on Wednesday.

Rev. F. S. Coffin arrived from P. E. Island on Thursday night's train after a very pleasant visit home.

Mr. A. L. Collis returned home last week from an extended piano and organ tuning tour of the northern districts. Mr. Collis showed his patriotism by holding recitals at Exploits, Change Islands and Trinity for the benefit of the Red Cross Fund, and through his efforts the handsome sum of $97.00 has been added to that laudable organization.

Harbor Grace is thankful for the nice things said by your reporter on the occasion of his visit recently with the other gentlemen who were invited to inspect the plant and have the plans discussed. We are a very quiet people over here. But just watch Hr. Grace, you won't have long to wait for big things, thanks to the Nfld. Shipbuilding Co.

Great Britain's Great Bargain.

Frederick Greenwood, who died December 14, 1909, aged 79, will be remembered in journalistic history as the first Editor of the Fall-Mall Gazette and the St. James's Gazette, both of them organs of considerable influence towards the end of the last century. But he did more than chronicle news; he helped to make it. But for him, indeed, it is quite possible that we should not be the Protecting Power in Egypt to-day. For it was the fact that England was the largest shareholder in the Suez Canal that justified our active intervention when first the Khedive Ismail, and later the adventurer, Arabi Pasha, had brought affairs there into a state of anarchy. Now, we owe our financial interest in the Suez Canal, not to any assistance given by us to the undertaking, towards which official opinion was adverse, but to the acquiescence by our Government of Ismail's 177,000 founders' shares, one of the best investments ever made by England. The Khedive's difficulties were our opportunity. In 1875 that spendthrift ruler was desperately pressed for money, and was negotiating with a French syndicate for the sale of his Canal shares. The news came to Greenwood's ears, through some undivulged channel, and he at once recognized its importance. Without delay, he laid the matter before Lord Derby, then Foreign Secretary in Lord Beaconsfield's administration, and it was acted on with promptitude. On Christmas Day it was announced that the British Government had purchased the shares for four millions sterling, certainly the best legacy left to posterity by Beaconsfield. From the mere monetary point of view the shares have proved a great bargain, but they have meant to us much more than money. Yet Greenwood was allowed to die without having received any mark of recognition from an ungrateful country.

THE USE OF MOLES.

There are as many different brands of moles as there are of toilet soaps, but like soap they are not all good and beautifying. A mole that is round, dark like a coffee bean and perfectly smooth like the cheek it adorns, is a beauty, asset provided it is well placed.

If one is so fortunate as to possess a mole coquetishly placed near the eye, or daintily near the corner of the mouth, then one is indeed lucky but if it is simply a blotch on the chin, it would be well to have it removed by an expert with an electric needle.

There have been many very attractive moles on the necks and arms of famous beauties, but they are rare. If one has no mole to pet and cherish, the very best thing to take its place would be a patch of black court plaster or a cleverly painted one, done with the fine point of an eyebrow pencil.

A mole is really necessary as the finishing touch to a well planned toilet. It adds distinction and subtle charm to the owner. Brunettes possess moles more frequently than do blondes and, for this reason, the girl with the golden hair must be careful how she applies the artificial touch.

Fads and Fashions.

The coat tunic is a novelty. Many wraps are in cape style. Tapestry shopping bags are new. Satin coats are heavily embroidered.

Fluted ribbons are used for trimming. Stock collars are made of white satin.

Crow blue satin makes a pretty dress. Gray moire trims a black satin frock.

Many of the winter suits are belted. Some waist lines have dropped to the hips.

Astrakhan crowns are seen on French hats. Hats may or may not match the suit, in color.

Full sleeves of velvet are used on cloth dresses. Seal-skin is a good trimming for brown velour.

Suit coats are apt to fall full about the hips. Evening gowns are straight and loosely girdled.

Everyday Etiquette.

"How long should one remain at an afternoon tea?" asked Mabel.
"The time depends upon circumstances. One should not linger too long or rush in and out with marked haste. About half or three quarters of an hour is a good medium," said her aunt.

Fads and Fashions.

The tunic is not rumor, but a fact of fashion. Tunic effects are noticed on almost every frock. Wool frocks are trimmed with fringe of monkey. Tailored suits have a touch of oriental embroidery.

Tissue evening frocks are expected to be popular.

Long white gloves are worn with three-quarter sleeves. Knitting bags are becoming smaller for a wonder. A great many sleeves are no more than elbow length. Chinchilla fur is beautifully used on seagull gry suiting.

WAR SUMMARY.

From the head of the Gulf of Trieste, north along the Isonzo front to beyond Tolmino and thence west through the Carnic Alps region to Ploechen Pass, forming the eastern and northeastern boundaries of the Austro-Italian war front, the Germans and Austro-Hungarian troops are operating fast and strongly against the Italians in an endeavor to crush the forces of Gen. Cadorna. Already the enemy, according to a German official report, is standing before the town of Udine, the former grand headquarters of the Italian army, having driven on past Cividale. In the press westward from Gorizia he has captured the town of Cormons, ten miles to the southeast of Udine; and the entire Italian line southward to the head of the Adriatic is reported to be in retreat. In addition to wedges driven into the Italian front on his east and on the northeast the Teutonic Allies have started a third wedge in the north through the Ploechen Pass, their hope evidently being to cut off the retreat of the greater portion of Gen. Cadorna's army moving west and southwest. The Italian command, in either case, reports that his men are checking the advance in this region. Evidently the weakness among the Italians has been entirely overcome as Cadorna says that all movements ordered by the General staff now are being carried out in regular order and that the Italians are fulfilling their duty by keeping in check the enemy advance in the plans. In the meantime, to aid the Italians in their hour of trouble, Britain and France are preparing to lend immediate aid, and the possibility is that already troops are being hastened across the Italian frontier, and by way of Turin and Milan to the battlefield in the east. As a result of the Teutonic Allied offensive, internal conditions in Italy are declared to have been unified, the preponderating idea of the whole population now being to abolish party lines in order to meet the situation in the best possible interests of the country. Even the Cabinet crisis is expected to be solved with comparatively few changes in portfolios.

SAY ADVANCE CHECKED.

ROME, Oct. 29. The Italians are checking the advance of the Austro-German troops into the plains of Northern Italy, the war office announces.

NEARING ITALIAN FRONTIER COAST.

BERLIN, Oct. 29. Austro-German troops are nearing the frontier of the Italian coast. The number of prisoners is increasing. The Italian front is yielding north of the broad sector which was pierced in the big Teuton attack, the weakening extending as far as Ploechen Pass, near the Italian Isonzo front which has collapsed. The statement says the Second Italian Army is retreating towards the Tagliamento. All roads are covered with columns in a disorderly retreat. The crowds comprising both soldiers and civilian population. The Austro-German forces near the Isonzo front are commanded by Gen. Otto Von Buelow, it is announced.

THE OLD STORY REPEATED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. Lack of material, munitions and guns, and unseasoned troops on the right wing in face of an overwhelming Austro-German force coming from the Russian borders are the causes assigned by technical experts of the Italian mission here for the Italian defeat in the Julian Alps. There must be a reformation of fighting lines, they say, and the resumption of an Italian offensive can't be expected before the spring, the campaign meanwhile being of necessity on defensive lines. The members of the mission are confident relief and assistance will be forthcoming very soon from Italy's Allies. Men are not wanted. Italy has an abundance of men. Munitions, steel, coal, cannon, and last but not least, food, are what must be had at once. The Italian army which first faltered under the enemy's great assault, it is said here, was composed of territorial troops not seasoned in war. The break made it necessary for the whole front to be withdrawn to avoid a flanking attack. The Italian general staff knew that no less than 700,000 German and Austrian troops were facing Cadorna's army. Nevertheless, the attack should have been resisted successfully, the Italians here say, had help been given by the Allies to Italy's call for munitions and supplies. Most of the 700,000 cannon were taken without having fired a shell for want of ammunition. That the Allies now will make every effort to supply the Italian army is not doubted. Last week the Italian Embassy here learned that the American Shipping Board had allotted twenty-five ships, or 100,000 tons, to Italy, and these ships should be able to carry not only ammunition but supplies of food to the Italian people and thereby relieve the internal political strain. In throwing her enormous force against the Italians, the mission here believes Germany has played her greatest card. The Italians when turned back were within 35 miles of Laibach which in the opinion of the Italian general staff, was the key to success, and the capture of that place by Italian forces would have meant the collapse of Austria, which in turn would cause defeat for Germany.

WILL NOW AID ITALY.

PARIS, Oct. 29. The Italian situation is summarized as follows: The Austro-German drive on the Italian front, developed with disquieting energy. The enemy right descending in valleys that converge on Avizida, have reached Cividale. All Italian forces on the plateau of Bainsizza and on the Carso as far as the sea, menaced with envelopment, have been obliged to evacuate regions that they were at so much pains to conquer. They are retreating towards the west, beyond the Isonzo. In the same way as the Germans went to the aid of the Austrian troops, the Allies are going to give their support to the Italian army, where they will end on the Tagliamento, a line of resistance where it is to be hoped the Italian position will be re-established as was ours on the Marene. There is no time to lose, Cividale is only 25 miles from the Tagliamento, and the enemy's columns march with prodigious speed.

WITH THE CANADIANS.

LONDON, Oct. 29. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Telegraphing from British headquarters in France, Reuter's correspondent says: The story of how the Canadians captured an important vantage point on Passchenraede ridge adds another epic to the Canadians' great records. Their objective was a little moss-covered spur curving around in U-shape from the main ridge. Its capture was the principal achievement in the day's struggling against overpowering elements. The Canadians attacked from two directions, their right pressing along the main ridge, and their left working round towards Bellevue spur. These positions lay in a broad gully which much heavy rains had made impassable, preventing an attack or from attacking frontally. Progress was slow as the whole face of the spur was thick with blockhouses spitting forth deadly fire. Prisoners taken are unanimous in the belief that the defences were regarded as the strongest organ of resistance on this front. It had been ordered that the place must be held until the entire garrison was killed, because the enemy regarded it as a vital link in the ridge system. The right struggled forward, gradually overcoming obstacles. The left was frequently checked by the fire from the blockhouses. While pressing up the slope the men were frequently hit deep in squelching mire, but with their rifles balanced on their shoulders they struggled onwards thus for six hours, until in view of the impossibility of the task they were ordered to withdraw and return to their original assembly line, where they were refreshed with hot stimulants. Reinforcements were brought up and the Canadians advanced again in face of driving rain. Yard by yard the semi-liquid slope was breasted and pill-box after pill-box was cleared until the crest of the spur was reached and passed. Illustrating the strength the opposition overcomes, the troops found banking the roadway along the crest whole line of blockhouses within 300 yards. Light machine guns were taken there. Later the Canadians repulsed violent counter attacks.

Canadian Headquarters in France. Subject to intense artillery fire and fighting machine guns and gas, and waist-deep in mud, the Canadians are still strengthening their positions on Bellevue spur and Passchenraede ridge. On Saturday night the Germans gained a footing on our right flank only to be repulsed with heavy losses when our infantry met them with bayonet and bomb and drove them back. A further enemy attempt to weaken our hold on the right bank, though supported with successive and intense artillery bombardment, has proved unavailing. Our foremost positions were within 100 yards of Passchenraede itself, while the number of prisoners taken by us Sunday night amounted to 16 officers and almost 500 men. On the left, where the Bellevue spur runs off Passchenraede with the slimy stretch of Ravebock Valley between it and Passchenraede ridge itself, our men have made stubborn progress through an almost impassable country, as a result of the last three days' fighting the Canadians are now masters of the lower slopes to Passchenraede, and have before them strong enemy positions at the crest of the farm on the left front and McEchols on the right. In reply to the enemy's employment of gas in the attack on Saturday night, our artillery bombarded the opposing batteries with gas shells, while for at least 48 hours our guns had been maintaining persistent fire on Passchenraede crest farm, Hanton Copse and selected strong points. Early on Sunday morning German artillery shelled our right heavily, but brought down upon itself concentrated fire of our guns, to which there was retaliation with heavy shelling of our forward area. Again in the evening he shelled our right, while yesterday evening he opened a heavy fire on our left positions.

ITALY'S POLITICAL SITUATION.

TURIN, Italy, Oct. 29. The fall of the cabinet of Premier Bosselli is attributed to Giovanni Giolitti, former Premier, who thus reasserts his old power as Italy's political leader. Before the entrance of Italy into the war he was in favor of the country's neutrality, representing conservative opinion and business interests. The political situation now enters into a new and interesting phase which is being watched closely. It is assumed the new cabinet will be far stronger at home in view of the overwhelming majority favoring Signor Giolitti, which include the Socialists. On this account it is believed the new government will not be forced to compromise and make concessions to trouble-makers as did Premier Bosselli. It probably will be able to deal with problems of food and clothing speculation. If Baron Sonnino remains in the new Cabinet as Foreign Minister, there will be no decided change in foreign policy.

Since the foregoing despatch was sent, word had been received of the selection of Prof. Orlando to form a new ministry. Signor Giolitti aroused much opposition by his activities in behalf of neutrality, and in the summer of 1915 was reported to have fled from Italy in fear of his life. In May that year he was reported to have gone to Berlin for an audience with Emperor William. After Italy entered the war he announced his support of the Government and urged the Italians to rally to the King and Government during the war.

SNOW FALLING.

With the American Army in France. (By Associated Press.)—American batteries are continuing to shell German lines at regular intervals. The enemy is following similar tactics. No further official statement has been issued, but there has been no special infantry action. Snow fell last night and interfered with all operations.

COUNT VON LUCKNER CAPTURED.

PACIFIC PORT, Oct. 29. Count Von Luckner, Commander of the German raider Sea Adler, was captured on Sept. 21st off Fiji Islands by the Fijian Constabulary, according to word brought by a steamer arriving to-day from a trans-Pacific port.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 29. (Official.) On all fronts fighting activity is limited to fusillades. In Bytitsa region in Lamentou village sector, groups of Austrian soldiers accompanied by their officers, approached our trenches and tried to fraternize. They were dispersed by our artillery. On the Baltic Sea there was no fighting activity in the Gulf of Finland, but travelers have been busy. On the night of Saturday the Germans left the Werder Peninsula, after the Werder Major had been burned down and provisions stolen.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. An appeal to the country's farmers to breed hogs in large numbers so as to increase the meat supply for the Allied and American armies, and for home consumption, was issued to-day by the Department of Agriculture.

THE SAFETY OF TRIESTE.

ZURICH, Oct. 29. The safety of Trieste seems to be the chief cause of rejoicing in Austria. The Neue Freie Presse, of Vienna, says that ever since Italy declared war the monarchy has not ceased to be anxious for that city. It speculates as to whether British and French influence will prove strong enough to prevent the collapse of Italy's war policy, or whether the mass of the population, recognizing the seriousness of the situation, will become convinced peace is necessary.

LONDON, Oct. 29. La Metropole, a Belgian newspaper published here, says a German attempt to separate the Allies has been defeated by Baron Braqueville, Belgian Foreign Minister.

CONGRATULATES CANADIANS.

GOOD RECRUITING PROMISING.
It is estimated that on the three hundred craft now in the harbor from various outports there are a thousand men on board. Consequently it is to be naturally expected that within the next few weeks and by the time that these young men are squared up with for their fish cargoes additional help will have to be engaged at the different recruiting stations in the city.

Here and There.

COAL SHIPMENT.—A shipment of 5,000 tons of coal is now being discharged at Bell Island.

When you want Steaks, Chops, Culetts, try ELLIS'.

PERSONAL.—Sir W. D. Reid reached the city by private car attached to last night's express.

When you want Sausages, why—get ELLIS'; they're the best.

NAVAL MEN ENTERTAINED.—The Naval Reservists who returned on furlough last evening, drove to Government House this morning and were entertained by His Excellency the Administrator.

Recruiting Notes.

There was a slump in recruiting at the West End Station yesterday, only one recruit, a young man belonging to the city, put in his appearance. The number of recruits to come along for the past two weeks is very low, especially when over 90 per cent of the enlistments belong to St. John's.

It is estimated that on board the schooners now in port there are over five hundred young men, physically fit that should offer their services to the Regiment. One man from a northern outport has four sons in his regiment and another from a western port has sons, all of whom are apparently single and unmarried.

The recruiting party which left St. John's short while ago for the south coast has accounted for a few recruits at Burin and at other places. A married man who enlisted recently was heard to say that he got $1.10 a day and $20 a month separation allowance and with board and clothing, besides having an opportunity to get a smack at the Hun is a job that no fellow has a right to kick about.

Shipping Notes.

Halifax, Oct. 24.—The schr. Wood hauled down to Hendry's wharf yesterday from Bedford Basin, where she was loading part cargo of coal for St. John's Nfld.

In for a harbor, the schooner Ilete, Capt. Benham, from Gloucester, foundland, arrived yesterday. The captain reports extremely rough weather to the westward.

The schr. J. D. Hazen is expected here to-day from Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, general cargo for St. John's, where she is now owned by Mr. M. Barr. Capt. George Pennie leaves the vessel here to take command of another vessel which Mr. Barr has purchased. Capt. J. Forster, Carbonar, Nfld., will take command of the Hazen here.

There were but two schooners arriving yesterday from coastwise ports, the Atheling from Petit de Gas, with a cargo of dry fish for W. and C. Mitchell, and the Cruzier from Chezzetcook. The schr. J. J. Hazen, of Lunenburg, N.S., with a cargo of fish, arrived yesterday at the wharf of De Wolfe's wharf, where Mr. Smith is supplying the fish. The Flaherty will return to Gloucester from Newfoundland with a cargo of herring.

The new three-masted schooner Phileas, launched some time ago by Mayor Williams, of Dartmouth, is now owned by a Newfoundland firm. It will, it is expected, be ready to sail for the coast this week. The vessel has been in the past few weeks has been ready for sea, and the owners are now awaiting the registration papers which are coming from New Brunswick. Capt. John Kendrick and his wife, Sydney Kendrick have been in Halifax for several weeks waiting for the vessel over, and the crew is expected to arrive in Halifax. The Phileas is one of the number of vessels recently purchased by this Newfoundland concern, Nova Scotia.
