A GRATEFUL MOTHER

Letter From Mrs. Ayars Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Two Other Letters Tell of Benefits Received

Spring Valley, Saskatchewan.—"I took the Vegetable Compound before my last confinement when I got to feeling so badly that I could not sleep nights, my back ached so across my hips, and I could hardly do my work during the day. I never had such an easy confinement as this is my sixth baby. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the 'Farmer's' telegram and wrote you for one of your books. We have no druggist in our town, but I saw your medicine in T. Eaton's catalogue. I am a farmer's wife, so have all kinds of work to do, inside and outside the house. My baby is a nice, healthy girl, who weighed nine pounds at birth. I am feeling fine after putting in a large garden since my baby came. (She is as good as she can be). Yours is the best medicine for women and I have told about it and even written to my friends about it."—Mrs. ANNE E. AYARS, Spring Valley, Saskatchewan.

Baby Healthy As A Trout
Mount Forest, Ontario.—"I am proud to think I have a fine big baby boy, as healthy as a trout, and I never felt better myself. Before I took your medicine I felt weak and miserable and had pains all through me. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to get stronger and those pains all left me. I am glad I found out about this medicine. I think there is none other equal to it for women who have troubles of this kind. I cannot praise the Vegetable Compound too highly for the good it has done me. Whenever I know of a woman suffering I am glad to tell her of it."—Mrs. W.M. RINDALE, R.R. No. 1, Mount Forest, Ontario.

Toronto Mother Writes:
Toronto, Ontario.—"I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a splendid medicine to take before and after confinement. A small book was put in my door one day, advertising Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines, and as I did not feel at all well at the time I went and bought a bottle of Vegetable Compound right away. I soon began to notice a difference in my general health. I was full of aches and pains at the time and thought I had every complaint going, but I can truthfully say your medicine certainly did me good. I can and will speak highly of your medicine, and I know it will do other women good who are sick and ailing, if they will only give it a fair trial. You are welcome to use this letter if you think it will help any one."—Mrs. HARRY WESTWOOD, 548 Quebec Street, Toronto, Ontario.

THE PANGS OF REMORSE

A COMPLICATED TANGLE.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Clarence looked hard at the tanned face and stared almost rudely at the clear gray eyes.

The truth and nobleness he read there forced him to a sudden resolution. "She knows him," he thought, "and trusted him, and so will I. I'll tell him all."

But how? That was the question. The waiters were bustling about the room; Melchior might enter every moment, then it would be too late.

Tearing off a corner of the newspaper, he wrote on it with his pencil:

"If Mr. Claude Ainsley would hear of his friends at Rivershall and serve them in an hour of need, let him follow the writer of this into the street."

This laconic note he held in his hand and when Claude Ainsley approached him stooped and picking up his own handkerchief, which he had previously dropped, from the floor, said:

"Allow me, I think you have dropped something," and extended it with the piece of paper peeping from it.

Claude Ainsley had not travelled among the nations of the East and witnessed their secret and mysterious manner for nothing. His eye caught the scrap of paper and his hand closed over it with an easy but quick movement.

"Thank you," he said, simply, casting a piercing glance at Clarence's handsome and ingenious face.

Then he strolled to the window and under cover of the curtains read the note.

Clarence saw him start and glance with an air of astonishment at his hat, round which was a small crape band; Clarence understood the glance, and with a smile that said: "Ahl not dead yet, but come and hear," took up his cap and sauntered from the room.

Claude Ainsley in like manner strolled out, saying that he should return immediately, and as soon as he had reached the street and caught sight of Clarence at the corner hurried after him.

"Don't speak to me," said Clarence, looking another way as he approached "until we get round the corner. The windows of the hotel command the spot, and we may be watched."

With a nod of acquiescence and mingled astonishment Claude walked round the corner out of sight of the hotel, and Clarence followed him.

"Now, sir," said Claude Ainsley, glancing at the note, and then fixing his eyes upon the middle-aged, grizzle-haired gentleman, which Clarence, with his wig, fictitious wrinkles, and loose, easy-going, half-safering coat, personated. "You seem to know my name, and write of some once dear friends of mine. What is your business?"

"I know your name and you have heard mine, Mr. Ainsley," said Clarence; "I am Clarence Clifford."

"Eh?" said Claude Ainsley, drawing back with a suspicious look. "Come, my friend, that name will not do. I am too old to be taken in with such an impudent, bare-faced imposture as that. You mention Mr. Clifford's name pretty libly, but if you say that you are he that proves to me that I know more of the man than you who presume to personate him."

Clarence smiled, but rather sadly.

"What do you know of him?" said Clarence.

"You rogue," said Claude Ainsley. "You have not learned your lesson properly. Mr. Clarence Clifford, tutor to Miss Melville, gained a fortune and lost his life months and months ago. And now who are you?"

"Clarence Clifford," said Clarence. "Resurrections are the fashion now, Mr. Ainsley, and you may hear of more wonderful ones than mine presently. Turn with me down this street."

"Now," he said, raising his hat and the wig at the same time. "There are wrinkles and false curves to the mouth beside the wig, Mr. Ainsley, and if they were removed Clarence Clifford, Miss Melville's tutor, would be found beneath."

"But," said Claude Ainsley, too good a man of the world to indulge in anything more marked than a slight start, "but what of the duel, if you are the man?"

"I am the man," said Clarence, impatiently, "and I can give you better proof of it by relating the long story of my adventures. Do you remember one bright morning giving some good and noble advice to Miss Melville in the Rivershall roastery? Well, I am Clarence Clifford, you see. And now I think I can change that sigh, Mr. Ainsley, to a shout of joy. You have heard of Sir Ralph and Miss Melville's death?"

"I have," said Claude Ainsley, sorrowfully, "and would that I had been in England, they should not have breathed their last in the midst of danger."

"Amen!" said Clarence, "but their last has not come yet, thank Heaven. They still live to thank you for that wish."

Claude Ainsley stared, and, as he reflected on the strange, mysterious manner, the disguise and the still stranger statement of his companion, it flashed upon him that he must be mad!

Clarence read this in his face and despaired of convincing him of the truth of his assertion.

"You won't believe me, I see," he said, with a smile, "and I am not surprised. You are just from Africa, Mr. Ainsley, or Asia possibly."

"Asia," said Claude Ainsley, pitying the fretting spirit which, impatient of his unbelief, yet restrained itself, "Asia."

"And you have no doubt seen wonderful things there that you fully believe yet could not explain to me. Well, this is an English marvel, and I cannot explain it because it would take too long and while I was spinning out the story I might lose that which I have been watching for the last seventy-two hours unremittingly."

In the midst of his sentence a thought struck him, and as Claude Ainsley was about to speak he said, eagerly:

"Did you ever see Miss Melville's hands?"

"Scores of times," replied Claude Ainsley—taking this new question as a fresh proof of the tutor's insanity. "Have you noted the ring—the ruby one?"

"Yes," said Claude. "It was a Hindoo one of peculiar settings."

"And there it is," said Clarence, producing it. "Now, I see you think I am sane enough to be believed. No excuses, Mr. Ainsley; there is no time; this is a matter of life or death."

"And they are alive!" exclaimed Claude Ainsley, with a gesture of mingled astonishment and delight.

"Yes, and here in London, hidden away," said Clarence, and in a few words as possible he placed Claude Ainsley in possession of the facts—narrating with some surprise the emotion which showed itself in the sudden pallor of his cheek when Clarence mentioned Lady Melville.

"And now you want me to help you, Mr. Clifford," said Claude Ainsley. "Tell me what I am to do, and trust me to do it."

"Thank you, said Clarence, simply, shaking the hand that was held out to him. "Miss Melville looks upon you as her truest friend, and will trust you to any length. Will you undertake the charge of her and Sir Ralph while I hunt this roguery to its climax?"

"I will," said Claude Ainsley; "give me their address."

Clarence wrote it down rapidly.

"And now for you; what is your next move?" he asked.

"To track my game while in London, and follow him to Rivershall. When he starts, which he will do, no doubt to-day, I will send word by special messenger—give me the ring back, please," he put in, parenthetically, "I will send this ring as a proof of the genuineness of the message."

"Is that necessary?" said Claude. (To be continued.)

Scott for An Asylum
SEVEN BALLOTS TAKEN BEFORE THE JURY AGREED.
The Relatives Hear Verdict with Expressions of Emotion.
CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—In an insane asylum instead of on the gallows, Russell Scott will expire the murder of a drug clerk in a holdup. "Cell shock"—insanity resulting from fifteen months in jail and the ordeals of two narrow escapes from the noose, was the verdict of a jury last night in a sanity test which saved him.

The jury's finding and Scott's removal to the Chester Inmate Asylum ended a fight for life that probably was the most desperate in Cook County criminal annals. Seven ballots and three hours and forty minutes deliberations were necessary before the jury agreed.

Five times since Joseph Maurer was killed in a drug store opposite the City Hall in April, 1924, Scott has faced death. Even in the asylum, Scott faces death on the gallows should he ever be found to have regained his sanity.

Warned against a demonstration, spectators and principals greeted the verdict with a dramatic silence. Scott's eyes never left the slip of papers the jury foreman passed to a bailiff, who gave it to the clerk. His mouth twitched nervously and fidgeted. Judgment entered he was hurried away by guards.

His relatives heard the verdict with expressions of emotion. His wife, whose untiring efforts brought funds after the defense fight left the family penniless, leaned forward in an attitude of prayer. His mother wept and his aged and crippled father, on whose 63rd birthday Scott was sentenced, stayed close to his son.

"Thank God for the verdict," the father said later. "That's what the poor boy needs is to be sent down there."

"I knew it would happen," the wife exclaimed. "I have worked and prayed for this and have not had a night's sleep in weeks."

Jacob Maurer, father of the slain youth, who attended each day of the sanity hearing, was disappointed. "It's the law. But I didn't expect justice. My boy is sane. I find no consolation in the verdict."

"It's a shameful and disgraceful verdict," said Assistant State's Attorney Harry F. Pritaker. "Scott is no more insane than any man in the room. The verdict is a victory for the criminal element. They can take life and get away with it. The jurors in this case did not know the first principle of the law involved. They are too ignorant."

A majority of the jurors favored insanity from the start—the first ballot being 7 to 5.

Attorney Stewart in obtaining the insanity verdict for his client, won the distinction of having won both sides of an insanity proceedings to halt execution. While an assistant prosecutor several years ago, Stewart successfully opposed an effort of a man sentenced to die to escape the gallows on an insanity plea.

Scott was well known in Halifax, having done business here about three years ago, selling stocks and bonds.

Household Notes.
Sliced bananas are good in cherry punch and look very attractive. Serve shredded cabbage, raisins and onions with French dressing. A little grated nutmeg and a pinch of cinnamon improve fruit punch. A very easy way to broil wetters out-of-doors is in a wire concopner. Many delicious cold drinks can be made with a tea infusion as a base. If your fruit punch lacks the required "zip," add a little chilled ginger ale.

Right But Wrong
IT'S NOT ENOUGH TO DO THE CORRECT THINGS; WE MUST DO THEM THE RIGHT WAY.

I suppose that most people are now eating more fruit at their meals, that many of us have resumed the cold-bath-in-the-morning habit, and that, when it is hot, practically everybody flings windows open to cool "stifling" rooms. These cases of excellent intentions—and bad results. For our methods are wrong!

Take, first, the "open-window" question. During the night hours the temperature always falls, and there is coolness out of doors and within. Then the sun rises, the outside air is rapidly heated, and "to keep the house cool," we fling our windows open and admit the heated air.

Windows should be wide open during the night, so that the cold air may enter and take possession, and closed during the day. The heated outside air should be refused admission. The cool, night-gathered air will then hold its own, especially if all inside doors are left wide open, so that it can circulate.

Start Off With Fruit.
Blinds, too, should be drawn in all rooms not in use. Try this method once, and you'll adopt it permanently.

Fruit cools the blood. Its juices and acids hold other virtues. But practically all its merits are cancelled if, as is usual, it is eaten at the end of a meal. Eat more fruit, but always at the beginning of a meal.

That cold morning "tub" is quite excellent for the winter, if you can stand it, but quite wrong for the summer. It should be obvious that the braced up, stimulated, all-aglow feeling that follows a cold bath in winter is not what you want in summer.

Try a tepid bath. That reduces the blood pressure (of great importance to many), and is far more effective as a body-cleanser. Perspiration, a summer product, is a poison, and cold water, of the "hard" sort especially, does not remove it from the skin.

Gift From Shah

AMBASSADOR WHO RETURNED A PRESENT.
In Persia it is the custom of the Shah to send a gift of a horse to a foreign Minister or Ambassador after the presentation of his credentials.

Mr. Arthur Sherburne Hardy, who was once American Ambassador in Persia, tells in his book of memoirs, "Things Remembered," of how he received such a present and how this gift horse was looked in the mouth.

He went to the stable to inspect the horse, and with him went Mr. Tyler, the American Vice-Consul-General, who had been resident in Persia for more than twenty years, and knew the country and its ways inside out.

Mr. Tyler was a man of few words, and after looking the horse over, said: "Send him back!"

The author himself was not particularly impressed by the animal, although it was a present from the "King of Kings, whose armies are as the stars." But, on being assured by Mr. Tyler that the Shah knew nothing of the transaction and was being heavily charged by the Master of the Stables for an animal not worth a quarter of the money, sent the horse back—a splendid Arab steed taking his place the next day!

In addition, a bride with a silver bit and gold chain, and a saddle-cloth embroidered in blue and gold, accompanied the replacement!

Persian mosques are places forbidden to the female, and can only be entered by them in disguise, and then at real peril.

The author tells a tale of how a Mrs. Bishop, who in her Persian travel frequently assumed a native dress, on asking if she might not look into the sacred mosque of Fatima in Kum from the threshold of the court, received the disconcerting reply:

"Are you, then, weary of life?"

Good Persian carpets are, as all the world knows, things of wonder, but there are many inferior articles passed off on the unsuspecting purchaser.

A good test of a carpet is to take a damp white rag and rub it on a small portion of the carpet. If there is the slightest trace of colour on the rag the carpet is an inferior one.

The famous carpet once in the mosque of Ardebil, and now in the South Kensington Museum, London, contains three hundred and eight hand-knotted knots to the square inch—which means over thirty-two million for the whole carpet!

A Milkman Who Takes Water Out!
One of the favorite themes of the jokesmith is the milkman who waters his milk. Though the joke has little basis in fact, yet you have heard it many times. But have you ever thought of the milkman who does exactly the opposite—the milkman who takes water out? That's what the Carnation milkman does—and here's why he does it:
Millions of people, all over the world, use Carnation Milk regularly; it comes to them from some of the finest dairying sections of Canada.
It seems foolish to pay transportation on all the natural water in this milk, so most of the water is removed. Such removal serves to concentrate and enhance the food values in the milk, making it richer and smoother.
It also explains the satisfaction with which so many people use Carnation Milk undiluted in place of costly cream, in coffee or on cereals and fruits.
Remember, Carnation is simply pure milk, evaporated, sterilized; nothing is added, no sugar or preservative of any kind.
You can restore it to its original strength and consistency merely by putting back the water that has been taken away.
Order with the groceries—several tall (16 oz.) cans or by the case of 48 cans.

FIELD MARSHAL'S "STRANGE WILL"

LONDON, Aug. 11. What newspapers term "the strange will" of Field Marshal, the Earl of Ypers, a document of eight lines, in which the entire estate of £25,161 is left to Edward Geoffrey Cox, the Field Marshal's solicitor, was inserted for probate to-day. The will does not mention the Earl's widow or the two sons and a daughter. It is recalled that in 1918 the House of Commons made the Earl a grant of £50,000 as a testimonial of services to the nation.

RETURNS TO PORT UNSUCCESSFUL.

VICTORIA, B.C., Aug. 11. Commander Eustace B. Maule, R.N., retired, 77 years old, who started from here on May 5 in a 25-foot sloop for England, returned to-day after travelling four thousand miles of the Pacific in a circular course and declared he would try again. Injury to his eyes from the sun's glare and fear that his water supply would run out urged him to return, he said.

Ste. Anne Feast is Celebrated

QUEBEC, July 27.—(C.F.)—Forty thousand people thronged their way through the little village of Ste. Anne de Beaupre yesterday to attend the anniversary of the feast of St. Anne. Of this number many were from the United States.

According to an unofficial report it is claimed that the two men, one from Holyoke, Mass., and another from Bristol, Conn., were cured of their infirmities, whilst making pilgrimages to the celebrated shrine.

His Grace Monseigneur Langlois, administrator of the diocese of Quebec, made his first public appearance since being named Administrator and officiated at the open-air mass, which was attended by a congregation that numbered 4,000.

His Excellency Monseigneur Maris di Patris, Apostolic Delegate to Canada, presided over the gigantic open-air mass, having remained over from the funeral of Cardinal Begin, while a number of archbishops and bishops also participated in the event.

The day's festivities were marred by the sudden death of an unidentified man, who expired after receiving the last rights of his church.

"Flirting With Love" at Star Movie To-Night

Superb entertainment is "Flirting with Love," the First National picture, co-starring Colleen Moore and Conway Tearle, which opens to-night at the Star Movie.

Based on Leroy Scott's story, "Counterfeit," this photoplay establishes tenderly the case of Gilda Lamont, played by Colleen Moore. There are perhaps hundreds of Gildas, who, like the Gilda of "Rigoletto," must suffer ignominy for sacrifice.

Gilda is an actress, and, like most actresses, she is confronted with the problem of holding her audience by giving up the drama she loves for risqué farces. She does it because she and her manager cannot eat on the profits of "artistic successes." Only those who see Gilda's struggle from the factory bench to divine dramatic gifts can appreciate the sympathy she really deserves.

To complete her come-down she has a press agent who surrounds her with shocking tales of his imagination. She immediately becomes notorious, and we see the sincere little creature suddenly transformed into a violently temperamental prima donna in order to live up to her reputation.

Consequently, when she is starred in "The Lost Kimono," a veritable Niagara of fame and fortune begins. But even this is wrested from her within twenty-four hours. Wade Cameron (enacted by Conway Tearle), a psychoanalyst who acts as chairman of the "Better Plays Committee," closes the show as immortal.

"Action" inadequately describes what follows fast and furiously. The camel's back has been broken, and its attempts to pass through the eye of a needle could not be more entertainingly full of humor and pathos than Gilda's revenge upon Cameron.

Will Steamships Disappear?

The Diesel engine, which promises to supersede steam machinery for the propulsion of ships, is not a recent invention. It was produced by Dr. Diesel, a German, in 1897, and since then it has undergone vast improvements.

The essential difference between a Diesel motor and the petrol engine of a motor car rests in the manner in which combustion is effected. In the latter, combined air and petrol vapor are compressed moderately and then ignited by an electric spark. With the Diesel motor, pure air undergoes a high pressure (about 500 lb. per square inch). This increases the temperature of the air to such an extent that when a fine oil spray is projected into it, combustion is instantaneous.

Though a Diesel installation costs more than steam-engines and boilers its fuel bills is less. This may account for the fact that, in the past year, motor shipbuilding has increased 47 per cent. while steam construction has declined by 24 1/2 per cent. The tonnage of Diesel-engined ships now in service is over two million gross, while that of motor vessels in course of construction is over a million tons.

This care—so simple—means lovely skin

THE irresistible charm of radiant complexion is not difficult to find—as millions of happy women know. In fact, the simplest of all methods for skin care is most effective! It is no secret. The few common-sense rules follow:

Thorough cleansing!

Each night see that your skin is cleansed of the day's accumulation of foreign substances: powder, rouge, dust. Harmful things that gather in the tiny pores. If they are allowed to remain, trouble follows. Your skin loses its youthful freshness, its loveliness. Often blackheads, eruptions result.

One caution!

Do not attempt this cleansing with harsh methods. They are just as dangerous as the gathered dirt.

Do as millions of women have learned. Use only the soothing, gentle cleansing of Palmolive—perfect blend of beneficial, natural oils. Each night lather well with it—massaging well into the pores. Then rinse. Now repeat both lathering and rinsing. Then, if skin is dry, apply a trifle of good cold cream. That is quite all you need do.

Only natural oils
From the palm, coconut palm and olive trees come the oils that make Palmolive. No others are used. These beneficial, natural cleansing oils—and nothing else—give Nature's green color to Palmolive Soap.

Do not risk unknown soaps. That would be unwise. Palmolive is so inexpensive that you can well let it do for your whole body, in the bath, what it does for the face.

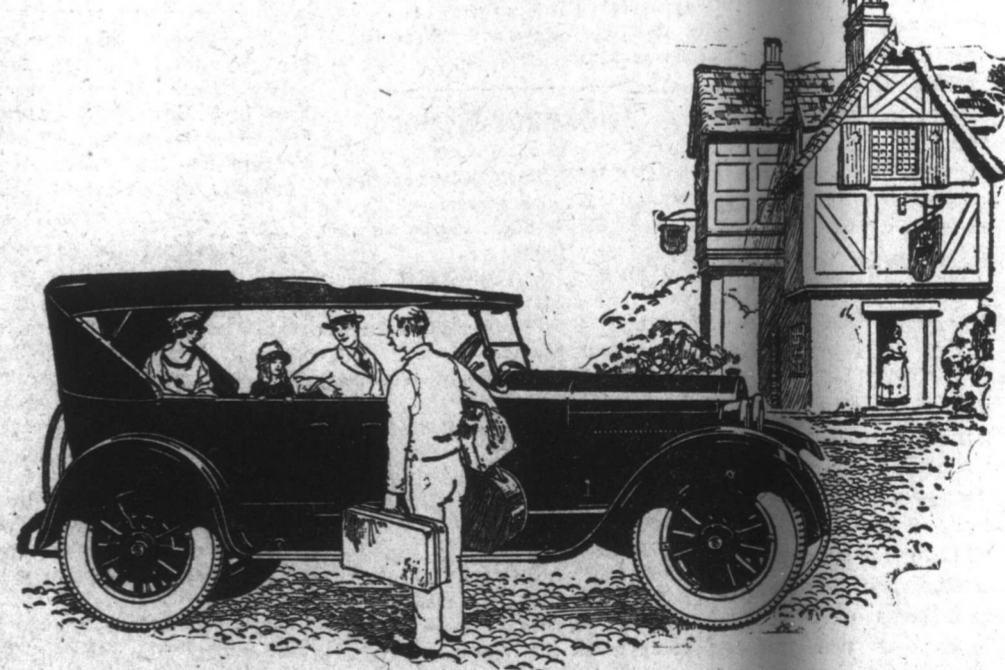

In one week this simple treatment will delight and surprise you—will results apparent to everyone. Obtain a cake today. Begin tonight.

Palmolive Soap is never sold unwrapped.

Many-Hued Lions

In heraldry the lion is always a symbol of sovereignty and power. The lions in the arms of England are three and each is two parts—a lion walking and showing the full face. The first lion was that of Rollo, Duke of Normandy; the second, that of Poitou. These were borne by William the Conqueror and his immediate descendants. It was Henry II. who added a third lion to represent the Duchy of Aquitaine, which came to him through his wife Eleanor. French heralds call the lion passant a leopard, and that is why Napoleon said to his soldiers, "Let us drive these leopards into the sea." The many-hued lions of Inn sign are of heraldic origin. The Red Lion is the lion of the arms of Scotland, and was also the badge of John of Gaunt, from which it probably had its chief origin as an Inn sign in England. The Blue Lion was the badge of the powerful earls of Mortimer; the Golden Lion the badge of Henry I., and also of Percy of Northumberland; and the White Lion the device of the Duke of Norfolk and the Earl of Surrey.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Aug. 11th—Mighty warm all this day and do decide to remain in the country.

But no sooner have I settled down for a good rest when there comes a message over the foun and demands my immediate return to the city which is to my great discontent, and seems how there is no peace anywhere in this world of ours.

Lunched this day with Blabb, the churgeon, where a pretty meal, and his wife a pretty, modest woman, which methinks, being married to Blabb, is all she can be since he is a great braggart, albeit I would not have him know I think so of him.

A strange thing in the news this day is my Lord Ypres, his will, being that he leaves all that he hath, being £25,000 to his attorney, and naught to his family.

Another strange thing is how he leaves but £25,000, yet the Commons did seven years ago grant him £50,000.

Talking this day with Mr. Ellis, he gives me a poem on J. Whitcomb Riley's, which do greatly appeal to him, as is indeed, it must do to anyone that knows the country in the summer time.

In particular did these few lines appeal to me: "All day fat spiders spun their webs to catch the buzzing flies.

That fitted to and from the house where ma was making pies."

Indeed, 'tis the one thing about the country that spoils my stay there, that 'tis impossible to enjoy a meal for the flies that flock about the food.

Father Maher's Jubilee

We understand that Very Rev. J. Maher, the esteemed Pastor of Ferryland, celebrates his Silver Jubilee on Sunday next.

For the past quarter of a century Fr. Maher has been a prominent figure in the archdiocese of St. John's.

He has left notable evidences of his zeal, enthusiasm and administrative capacity in the various parishes he has governed.

Appointed as Pastor of St. Lawrence in 1902, he was obliged to do pioneer work in that large and straggling district.

In St. Lawrence itself he built a magnificent Presbytery and Hall; in Lawn, a Church, School and Hall; in Lamaline, two Churches and two schools.

The remote village such as Point May and Lance au Barne, did not even possess roads until these were provided for them by Father Maher.

For 15 years he labored unflinchingly in the West, where he has left an Imperial souvenir.

Some six years ago he was transferred to Ferryland. There, too, he has done splendid service, erecting a beautiful Presbytery and a school that would do credit in any town.

His many friends will wish him long years to come in his Master's service with strength to labor in the evening of life as he has done in his prime.

The Circus, Bannerman Road, in aid of the Playground and Recreation Association, continues until Saturday, August 15th.

Open afternoon and evening. Merry-Go-Round 10c. to all for balance of week.—aug12.11

Great Impersonation Act at the Crescent

DE LA FERRE RECEIVES BIG OVATION FROM LARGE AUDIENCE.

Mr. De La Ferre not only is a very clever impersonator, but is an excellent character actor, and in his impersonations of Great Men at the Crescent last night received a most appreciative ovation.

These impersonations take you back to dates in History and personages well known therein. The most interesting study is that of King George V. in Naval Uniform. The make-up was certainly an excellent resemblance of our present sovereign.

Another interesting act was the making of pictures from cotton which when completed have an oil painting effect. This is very beautiful and was also well received by the audience.

Mr. De La Ferre is an entertainer of no mean ability as is clearly demonstrated by his versatile program. If you missed this program yesterday, you should not fail to see it this afternoon or night.

The film attraction "Hold Your Breath" is a picture you are sure to like. It is full of pep from beginning to end. The leading roles are in the hands of Walter Hiers and Dorothy Devere.

Aged Woman Injured by Frightened Horse

An elderly lady named Mrs. John Noseworthy was knocked down by a horse and cart driven by Mr. A. O. Neill on Cabot Street yesterday afternoon.

She sustained slight bodily injuries. It appears the team rolled was operating near Carter's Hill, from which the horse became frightened, and in its dash for freedom the woman was hit. Mrs. Noseworthy was assisted into a nearby house and Dr. McDonald upon being called in attendance found it necessary to insert three stitches to close a deep cut over her eye.

To Be Wedded at Hr. Grace

The marriage of Mr. John G. Higgins, the well-known Barrister, to Miss Alice Casey, daughter of Judge Casey, Mr. Grace, takes place at the R.C. Cathedral, Hr. Grace, to-morrow morning at 10.30 o'clock.

The ceremony will be conducted by His Lordship Bishop March. Felicitations.

"Death Stroke" May Change War Tactics

San Francisco, Aug. 10.—Assistance of the navy department will be asked by Dr. Edwin R. Scott in testing a "death stroke" in the form of "canned lightning" which he claims will revolutionize war tactics.

Dr. Scott in making his discovery known yesterday said he wished to convince government officials of the efficacy of his invention as a death dealing agency. He plans to make the test off the coast of California in September with an old battleship or pilotless airplane.

A few of the possibilities attributed to his invention by Dr. Scott are: Destruction of all life, on land, sea or in the air, within a radius of 20 miles; disabling of all radio apparatus within a similar radius; destruction of the super-structures of battleships at a distance of ten miles or more; the bringing down of airplanes from a height possible for a plane to achieve; destruction or disabling of land fortifications at long distance.

"In tests already conducted," said Dr. Scott, "holes were bored in two inch planks at a distance of one mile; dead trees have been fired at the same distance and animal life has been snuffed out at distances ranging from two to seven miles. Dummy planes also have been destroyed in air tests."

End Catarrh Germs in Three Minutes

Chronic catarrh, no matter how bad, and cases of bronchial asthma now yield instantly to the amazing discovery of a French scientist. This drugless method called Lavex eliminates the germs in three minutes, yet is positively harmless to the most delicate tissues. Your head and lungs are cleared like magic. Sufferers are relieved in a single night.

To prove it and to introduce Lavex to ten thousand sufferers in one month, I offer to send a treatment free of postpaid to any one who will write for it. No obligation. No cost. If it banishes your Catarrh you can repay the favor by telling your friends—if not, the loss is mine. No matter what you have tried, just send me your name and address for this generous free treatment and prove that you can be rid of catarrh.

Driver's Death at the Wheel

At an inquest at Oxford recently on Mrs. Helen Sneller, 54, who was knocked down by a motor car as she was walking by the roadside, it was stated that the car was being driven by Mr. Charles Humphrey, of Beau-lieu, Hampshire.

Mr. Humphrey suddenly collapsed across the steering wheel, and his chauffeur, who was sitting beside him, tried to stop the car as it made for the roadside, but Mrs. Sneller was knocked down before he could do so. Mr. Humphrey was found to be dead, and Mrs. Sneller died from her injuries.

Lady Grace Seeks $50,000 Balm for Time in Prison

TAMPA, Fla.—Lady Grace Mackenzie, who was held in jail here three days on charges preferred by G. E. Bray, local estate operator, filed suit for $50,000 damages against Bray claiming she was falsely imprisoned.

Lady Grace, widely known as a big game hunter, explorer, and writer was charged by Bray with having given him a bad cheque. She was arrested and held in jail until a heavily valued woman, whose name still is unknown, made good the cheque.

A Witty Reply

The Governor-General of the Irish Free State, Mr. Timothy Healy, K.C., whose witty speeches delighted our House of Commons in days gone by, has, I note, not lost his old-time gift of repartee.

Though much of his time is now taken up with his official duties, "Tim" still practices occasionally, and during the hearing of a case not long ago, in which he appeared, a rasping voice coming from an adjoining room disturbed the Court.

"Do you know what the noise is, Mr. Healy?" asked the judge.

"I think," was Healy's reply, "it must be one of my learned friends filing an affidavit."

ST. JOSEPH'S REGATTA.

Commences At 2.45 Sharp.
The attraction for this afternoon will be St. Joseph's Garden Party and Regatta at Quidi Vidi Lake. Should the day be fine, a large attendance is hoped for, and it would not be surprising that a scene similar to that of last week will again be presented. A splendid programme of races has been arranged, and, with the addition of several other crews who made last minute entries, every event now promises to be keenly contested, and an exciting afternoon's sport can be looked forward to. In addition to the three intermediate crews that entered on Monday, it is likely there will be another crew rowing to-day in the Nellie R. The Star of the Sea Amateur crew was finalized yesterday. They will have the same crew, with one exception, R. Harvey replacing R. C. team along with them, and three Knight. The Amateur race promises to be equally as thrilling as that of last week. In the Junior Football Race, it is quite possible that four crews will participate, T.A., Holy Cross, C.Y.M.C. and Mount Cashel. The first race will begin at 2.45, and after the fourth and special race there will be an interval for tea. During the afternoon musical selections will be rendered by the bands in attendance.

Following the custom of the past few years, a city football team will go to Grand Falls this year and will play a series of games with a picket team from the paper city. The players will likely leave here about the end of this month and will play three games at that place, after which they will return here, bringing the Grand Falls team along with them, and three games will be played here. An interesting series is anticipated.

BELL ISLAND'S FIRST CHAMPIONSHIP SPORTS.

Dominion Volunteer Fire Brigade Events Were Held Under Auspices N. A. A.

The Championship Sports of Bell Island were held at the Star Field on Wednesday afternoon, July 29th, 1925, under successful conditions. The events had been organized by the Dominion Volunteer Fire Brigade, an organization which has made an honest effort to encourage the community spirit to no small extent on the Iron Isle, and this year they were successful in having the field events run off under the auspices of the N.A.A.A., through the co-operation of Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., and Chas. J. Ellis, who came to Bell Island for the occasion to officially represent that body.

The programme commenced promptly at 4.30 p.m. and, with the exception of the final football sixes, all the events were over by 8 p.m. The sixes will be played at the Annual Parish Garden Party, which takes place on the 16th inst.

The events which created the most interest, perhaps, were the Tug-of-War; Fire Brigade vs. All Comers; the 100 yards, Senior; and the 1 mile race. These were keenly contested and evoked great enthusiasm.

During the afternoon, Supt. C. B. Archibald, Asst.-Manager McDonald, Revs. E. J. Rawlins and W. E. Cockram; Magistrate Power, Drs. Giovanni, Lynch and McLeod and prominent members of the Besco Hall and citizens, were present on the field, while in the evening, at a dance held in the Star Hall, the prizes were presented by Mr. Thos. A. Conway (President of the Fire Brigade) in a very graceful manner.

Chairman J. A. Hughes and E. C. Highmore were the Committee in charge of the Sports Day, with Jacob Noseworthy, as Chairman of the Prize Committee, while they were assisted on the field by the following local representatives:—

Starter—J. H. Morley.
Clerk of the Course—Capl. L. Murphy
Referee—R. R. Costigan.
Judges—Thos. Gray and N. Cohen.
Timekeepers—J. A. McLean and A. S. Murray.

Distances were recorded officially by J. C. Mow, D.C.L.S.

The following are the prize winners:

CLIPPINGS FROM "PUNCH"

Wembley is to have a live lion as its emblem. We understand that several coloured balloons are to be used to assist him in keeping his tail up. One objection to the short skirt is supposed to be that it makes women look shorter. But against that, of course, there is the consideration that it usually makes men look ever so much longer.

Mr. Lovat-Fraser has disclosed the fact that he finds harpooning octopuses with a boat hook great fun. We should have guessed this from his literary style.

A man has been fined at Brighton for throwing money to children from his motor car. When this sort of thing happens in Scotland they never prosecute. They just have the offender detained for a few days so that the state of his mind can be examined.

Bride and Groom Horseback

NOVEL WEDDING SCENE AT ST. ANNES.

Dressed in a riding outfit, Mr. Thos. Randall Barrett, son of Mr. James R. Barrett, Orchard-bank, South Frolongade, St. Annes-on-Sea, grandson of the late Alderman John Barrett, ex-Mayor of Bolton, and Miss Nellie Bryers, daughter of Mr. George Bryers, Rio de Janeiro, rode up to St. Anne's Congregational Church, St. Annes, recently, and proceeded to the church, where they were married by Rev. F. W. Riddell.

Only four people were at the ceremony. The bride and bridegroom both carried gloves and riding crops, and the bride had a small white buttonhole in her fawn coat.

Both devotees of horse riding, after the ceremony they mounted their horses and rode quietly away, a small crowd looking on.

The bridegroom had to ride to the Registrar's Office at Kirkcubbin earlier in the day for the marriage license. On the way home the horse cast a shoe, and had to walk three miles to Lytham to get it nailed on.

Had Snowball Fight

IN INDIANAPOLIS, FOLLOWING TERRIFIC HEAT.

Indianapolis, Aug. 4.—Following on a tropical 100-in-the-shade temperature, Indianapolis late this afternoon suffered the most freakish storm there in history.

A rain cloud swept down with surprising suddenness, and the big drops changed almost immediately to ice. There have been bigger hail-storms in Indianapolis, but never more of them. The bombardment continued for 20 minutes. The sun then re-appeared, but the heavy rain continued. Sewers were overwhelmed in no time, and the mercury fell abnormally.

Hail piled up like driftwood in the streets, which in some places flooded above automobile hubs and over horses' knees. Traffic was demoralized. Nooks and niches of buildings were filled by hail like sand following a desert gale. Foliage was shredded, and streets and sidewalks were covered as by a winter blizzard.

After the hail had dwindled to a mere patter men and women in some places dashed out in overcoats and boots, and scooped the hail up in shovels or packed it in their hands and pelted one another with snowballs. The storm completely tied up surface transportation for more than an hour.

The Circus, Bannerman Road, in aid of the Playground and Recreation Association, continues until Saturday, August 15th. Open afternoon and evening. Merry-Go-Round 10c. to all for balance of week.—aug12.11

Moving Money

Elaborate Precautions Are Taken Whenever Gold Is Moved From One Place to Another; But a Fortune in Securities May Change Its Quarters With Very Little Fuss.

A New York bank recently moved to new premises. The gold was taken through the streets in armoured cars, escorted by a small army of armed police and detectives. The cars themselves were fitted with an arrangement for ejecting boiling steam in case of an attack.

Compare this with the fitting of a well-known bank in the Strand, when hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of securities were moved in an ordinary brougham, with a couple of clerks and a porter in charge.

Most of the gold, which before the war was our current coinage, came from South Africa. Gold still comes from South Africa and, although no longer minted into sovereigns and half-crowns, is held as reserve against paper money by the Bank of England and in other places. This African gold comes out of the mines of the Rand, and each mine casts its metal into rough bars. There is no standard size, for the different mines make bars of varying sizes, but few, if any, exceed a thousand ounces in weight.

No Hope for the Crackman. At Johannesburg the gold is loaded into a vehicle called the specie van, which is a long truck some thirty feet in length, with two heavily barred windows on each side. It is a quite ordinary-looking truck, being painted teal colour to correspond with the rest of the coaches of the train. But its walls are of steel—very good steel, too.

The most interesting part of this van is the safe which actually holds the gold. Even if a thief could get at the van and bore through its steel walls, he would still be unable to carry the safe away, for it is not merely fitted to the frame, but actually a part of it. The train may be in a collision and the van hurled down an embankment, yet the safe, with its precious contents, would remain intact.

This safe stands in the centre of the van, which is fitted up with berths, tables, seats, and a stove on which food can be cooked. These arrangements are for the convenience of the three guards, who are picked men from the Transvaal police. The specie van travels once a week, and the journey to Cape Town takes about thirty hours.

Uncle Sam's "Interest."

During the whole of this journey the specie van remains locked from outside, and the doors are not opened until the car is safe in the Cape Town docks, next to the steamer which is to take the gold to England. There is a key kept inside the van, but this is inside a glass case, which must be smashed like a fire signal before the key can be removed.

When loaded into the steamer, the gold is placed in a strong-room, which is next to the captain's cabin, and when the steamer arrives in Britain the bullion is transferred to a steel van attached to the mail train, and so travels to London. As a rule, it goes straight to the Bank of England.

When gold is sent abroad—for instance, to the United States in order to pay interest on the war debt—it is usually placed in wooden, iron-bound boxes each eighteen inches long, nine inches wide, and eight inches deep. One box holds $500,000 sovereigns. These boxes are each carefully sealed with four seals before starting their journey.

Put Silencer on Tramway Rails

An experiment is being tried by the Montreal Tramway Company for the first time in this city in the relaying of the tram line on Claremount avenue, Westmont, whereby it is expected to prolong the life of the rails by several years. The double track line is being relaid from Sherbrooke to the Boulevard, and 115 pound rails are being used. But contrary to ordinary practice the roadbed is an eight-inch slab of solid concrete, on which the ties are placed.

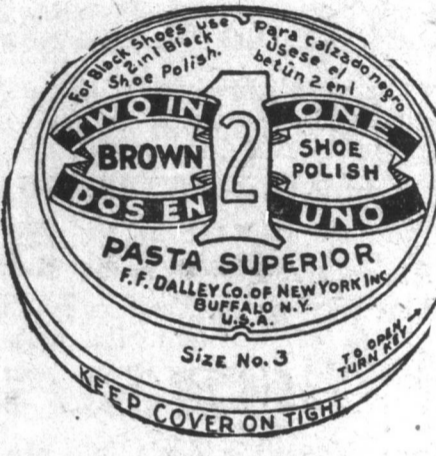

The space between the two tracks is being provided with a culvert made of farm-tile, draining into the sewers at the foot of the hill. But the newest departure is the use of "elastite rail filler," which is employed for the first time here. The filler is a composition of asphalt, rubber, asbestos and tar, which surrounds the rail on three surfaces, both sides and bottom. The filler is made in three different sections, an inch strip with flanges for the bottom of the rail, another inch strip for the outside edge, and a three-inch plate for both inside faces. The strips are put on with tar and hammered tight.

The filler is credited with being an absolutely waterproof covering preventing rust and deterioration, besides providing a "silencer" and "shock-absorber," which effectively deadens the noise.

"What shall I do? My wedding hat is held fast in the tree. How can I ever get it down. Oh, pity poor old me."

cried dear Uncle Lucky, the dear old gentleman rabbit, as he looked at his precious wedding stovepipe hat high up in the treetop. "What's the trouble?" all of a sudden enquired a voice and, turning around, astonished Uncle Lucky saw the Circus Elephant. Yes, there stood that great big animal, a little red cap on his head and two silver knobs on the ends of his tusks. "Just in the nick of time, old friend," laughed happy Uncle Lucky. "Look up in this tree and you will see what's troubling me."

"Ha, ha!" went the old circus animal, "too high a peg for you to reach, but watch me," and lifting high his long trunk, he picked off Uncle Lucky's precious wedding stovepipe hat as easily as if it were a ripe peach. "Thank you, thank you," exclaimed the delighted old gentleman rabbit. "I might have been, and probably would be, sunstruck without my head covering."

"You might have had a freckle or two on your bald-spot," laughed the Circus Elephant. "But now you're all right. Tell me about Little Jack Rabbit. Haven't seen him for a month of Sundays."

"He's gone to visit Uncle John Hare," replied the old gentleman bunny, looking toward the dear Old Bramble Patch in which the little rabbit lived. "I feel mighty lonesome when he's away."

"Do you?" asked a voice, quick as a wink, and there stood Sammy Skunk. "What makes your whiskers so yellow?" asked Uncle Lucky suspiciously eyeing the new arrival.

four-footed robbers like eggs," and being in a hurry, for it was nearly sundown by this time, Uncle Lucky left Mrs. Grouse sitting beside her empty nest, with all the broken shells about her.

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

It's the cutest little assortment of dainty toilettes imaginable, and just about sufficient for a short vacation. It is called the THREE FLOWERS Travette and can be had at any drug or dept. store for fifty cents. July 4, w.s.t

A Red Hot Remedy

TREATING INJURIES IN A HURRY.

The first principle in first aid to the injured is to find a remedy quickly. A short time ago Sir James Cantile caused some astonishment by explaining that a dressing of burned paper for wounds was one of the cleanest and easiest to use.

This may seem an odd sort of remedy, yet, after all, nothing is more natural, for burned paper, although black, is clean, since it has been thoroughly purified by intense heat.

Many instructors advocate this in preference to a pocket-handkerchief, but providing the handkerchief is fresh from the laundry, the inside folds may be used with equal safety. In the matter of dressing for wounds, the golden rule is to provide something that has not come in contact with germs or dirt.

Danger in Dirt.

As a practical example, the inside of a scraped potato is one of the best emergency treatments for burns. Recent advances in medical science have taught us the danger that lies in dirt. The poison liable to be taken into the human system from a dog-bite or a scratch from a rusty nail can be prevented by applying a red-hot cinder—a painful step, but very effective. Even a little knowledge in an emergency may save a life. Few people have time to learn the lengthy list of emetics in case of poisoning, but two policemen, with a little understanding, saved the life of a would-be suicide. The man took spirits of salts, and, as no chemist's shop was handy, the constables administered whitening scraped from a ceiling.

Nose bleeding is a common complaint and often very troublesome. The general remedies are well known, but the simplest of all is to cut out a little round of paper about the size of a halfpenny and apply it to the sufferer's nose. This usually stops the bleeding within a minute.

Thuaud declares that with the new substance it no longer is necessary to find special points of contact for perfect and immediate detection.

Declares Microbes Are Non-Existent

ON PAPER MONEY.

PARIS—Henri Basset, a lawyer recently sent a letter to the French Academy of Medicine asking whether there was danger to health in handling paper money.

Basset received his reply. A commission appointed to study the question found microbes were non-existent on paper money, seemingly because they abhorred the agitation of constant transfer from one place to another.

PEARS' Used in the best circles.

New Substitute for Galena Crystal Discovered

A by-product of steel manufacture that, it is claimed, will replace the comparatively costly galena crystals now used as radio detectors, recently has been invented by Flex Thuaud, a French steel manufacturer.

The basis of the new material is a combination of silicon and iron, in proportions in which the silicon is dominant. It can be made in an electrical furnace or in an ordinary crucible.

The process starts with the production of ferro-silicon through the reduction of quartz in the presence of charcoal and limestone. After delicate refining processes, the material is poured in ingots and rapidly solidified.

Non-Stop Lives

MANY FOLK SET OUT TO WIN SUCCESS AND WALK SO FAST THAT THEY MISS THE SIGN-POST.

There are twenty-four hours in a day, and the ideal division recommended is—eight hours' work, eight hours' sleep, and eight hours' play. That sounds all right, but, even if it were the established rule, would it not hold the law of being a "non-stop" day? If we weren't sleeping we would be working or "playing," and the latter, while it covers and includes all forms of recreation from the very mild to the extremely strenuous, does not provide for a "stop."

It might be argued that lying in a hammock and reclining on a garden seat are "stops." In one sense yes, in another—the real sense—no. There is a great difference between "resting" and "stopping."

What you want to do occasionally is to stop and think of yourself. That's called introspection—looking into yourself to see how you are getting on mentally, morally, and spiritually.

That Daily "Stocktaking."

All of us can recall the names of financiers who have crashed and ultimately found themselves behind prison walls. Perhaps, if they had "stopped" and taken stock of their inner selves, they might have seen their own moral depreciation and saved themselves from the dock.

"To see ourself as others see us" is doubtless a great help, but to see ourselves as we really are, is of still greater importance.

That's why we ought to "stop." The "non-stop" life of work, sleep, pleasure, recreation—the filling of every hour with this, that, or the other interest, is the wrong sort of life.

In the biographies of many of our great men, it is extraordinary how often it is revealed that they "stopped." Lord Kitchener "stopped" daily to take stock of himself. So did Gladstone.

When the Milk Turns

There is generally trouble in warm weather in keeping milk fresh and good, and the only safe plan, if it cannot be used as soon as it arrives or be put at once on ice, is to boil it. Yet in spite of precautions small quantities sometimes go wrong, but they need not be wasted. Scum can be made, or, if you are your own breadmaker, give your household a change, and use soda, as Irish people so often do, instead of yeast, as a raising agent. Mix the bread with the sour milk and it will be much lighter than if fresh milk had been used; but here are full instructions:

Put two pounds of flour and two teaspoonsful of soda into a basin, rub in two ounces of margarine and mix to a rather soft dough, with about a pint of sour milk in which a good teaspoonful of tartaric acid and one teaspoonful of soda have been dissolved. Knead lightly, divide in two, and bake in greased and floured tins for about an hour. If liked, two-thirds of wholemeal flour and one-third of white may be used instead of all white, and the bread may be baked as flat cakes.

If the milk has turned sour quickly, but not unless, it can be served in French fashion, in junket or porridge plates, dusted with sugar and nutmeg, and eaten with stewed fruit. It is a most wholesome little dish in this way.

In the Highlands of Scotland they do this: The "turned" milk is heated slowly in a saucepan, but not allowed to boil at all, and then strained through a sieve. The curd is left to drain on the sieve a while, then salt is added, and the whole is pressed into a basin, turned out, and eaten with oatcakes.

When you boil your milk don't forget that the cream, etc., skimmed off the top is a good substitute for Devonshire cream.

You can cover the tip of a corn with a match-head. But this may pain-center makes one feel mean all over—and act that way. Doctors know that a corn may irritate the whole nervous system—so the patient with a corn is told to use Blue-jay. A Blue-jay plaster will end a corn pain in ten seconds, and the corn itself in 48 hours.

SIDE TALKS. By Ruth Cameron.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE. Why on earth does nature, that a r c h planner, bother to put a talent in a woman's body? Doesn't she know what a war she is starting, what a conflict in which the talent is pretty sure to get the worst of it? A Big Chance Lost. I have just had a letter from a friend who has great ability as an artist. She developed this gift as a girl when she was five years old, and she has spent the years of childhood and child rearing. It is not often that one is allowed to go back and find the gift still there and so contented that it is useless to try to brush it up and bring it into use again. But her gift was of such value that even neglect could not entirely smother it. Last fall when the last of her children went away to school (she lives in a small country place) she went to look for her gift, found it and brought it into use again. All winter she painted. She had made a really good start. Her old teacher had great hopes for her. This summer the children were going to camp and she was going on with her work. She was looking forward to this as she had an opportunity to work with an older artist who could help her greatly. I was Just Folks. By EDGAR GUEST. MAN'S PURPOSE. When you've read the books and done your thinking. Sifted life out for its golden sand For the thing which is finer than eating and drinking. Pleasure or fame or the work of your hand This you shall come to as being above all things. Home, with its treasures of numberless things. Boring through life for the core at the center: Seeking your purpose and part in the plan. Your reason for every grim battle you enter. The source of your courage to fight as a man. The spirit that moves you and fashions what's your way: You'll find that it's all to be found at your doorway. Wealth—not for self, but the loved ones about you. Fame, not for self, but for those you would bless! Honor, what matter that others may doubt you? Still if the trust of your own you possess? Danger, despair and the struggle to master. All to make lovely those four walls of plaster. This is the ultimate end of your story: Did they rejoice in the work of your hand? Have you to show, as the sum of your glory. A home which the tempests of a life could withstand? Peace at the fireside and love at the hearth. These are man's purpose, and these are his splendor!

in-law, social engagements, help for her husband in his work—all these things are perfectly justified encroachments upon a woman's time and strength. Whereas the path is cleared by public opinion for a man's work. If a woman is going to accomplish anything, she has got to begin by being ruthless, and ruthlessness is not in the average woman's nature. Sometimes of course these claims are really more vital than the cultivation of her ability. None will question what a mother's first duty is. But then again they are not vital and she can, if she had enough strength of character, deny them and give her time to something that will bring her and those who are close to her more happiness in the end. But it does take a tremendous strength of mind and I think any woman who without denying the really vital claims, has cleared her way to accomplishment through the underbrush of minor calls deserves double honor for whatever success she achieves.

Teach Children To Use Cuticura Soothes and Heals Itches and Irritations Cuticura Soap Keeps the Skin Clear Last Look Saves Girl From Being Interred Alive COFFIN RE-OPENED ON MOTHER'S PLEA FOR ANOTHER LOOK AT DAUGHTER. New Laws Necessary To Prevent Living Burial. "People are still being confined alive and, in certain cases, buried alive," says H. Maxwell Johnson, Secretary of the Association for the Prevention of Premature Burial. "The most recent occurrence of the kind was at Welton, Oklahoma, a few weeks ago, in which a sixteen-year-old girl named West was rescued from her coffin by the merest fluke. The final stage of the interment had actually begun, when the bereaved mother passionately demanded to be allowed a last look at the face of her girl. "Her appeal was so pitiful that the coffin was re-opened. The mourners were amazed to find perspiration on the girl's face and examination showed that the heart was still in action. "Cases have occurred in this country. In 1896 a boy named Ernest Wicks was found in Regent's Park, London. The body was taken to the St. Marylebone Mortuary, where the keeper happened to look at it closely. He was led to attempt resuscitation, and, with the assistance of his wife, restored breathing. When the doctor arrived the boy was breathing freely, though still insensible, and the surgeon eventually pronounced him to be suffering from a fit. "One of the Lancashire county coroners, at an inquest in December, 1903, on the 'body' of a child, told the jury that the child had 'died' four times and that the mother had obtained three medical certificates of death on the strength of her own diagnoses! "Another case occurred at Hapton near Accrington, in 1906. A Mrs. Holden, aged twenty-eight, 'died,' and the doctor's certificate of death was given. The insurance company was informed and all the arrangements for the funeral made. While the undertaker was measuring the 'body' he noticed twitching of the eyelids. The woman soon 'came to life.' "There was also the sensational case of Mrs. Rose, of Nora Street, Cardiff, who, in September, 1908, while in a state of trance, had a narrow escape from premature burial. "The law regarding the issue of death certificates must be changed," declared Mr. Maxwell Johnson. "All that a busy or indifferent medical man has to do at present to 'cover' himself is to leave in the form the printed words, 'as I am informed.' A doctor must be made to declare that the subject of the certificate is dead of his knowledge, and that it what the Bill aims at which Lieut.-Col. Fremantle, M.P., has introduced in the House of Commons."

Giant Artist Hero MR. JEMMETT, WHO DIED AT BIARRITZ. PARIS.—The English artist, Mr. William Jemmett, who lost his life while trying to rescue Mrs. Albert Williams, who was drowned while bathing at Biarritz, was well known in Paris. He specialized in portraiture, and was to be seen often at Deauville, Biarritz, and at Cannes, where many women sat for the portraits which he painted in a graceful and delicate style. The artist was the son of Rev. F. J. Jemmett, of Guildford, Surrey. He measured 6ft. 9 1/2 in., and used to say that his height was the secret of his success. "Once seen, I cannot be forgotten," he remarked recently. BIARRITZ.—Miss Williams, whose mother lost her life in a bathing tragedy, is herself in a serious condition owing to injuries she received when she was dashed against the rocks by the sea. The Ghost and King Edward. Mr. William B. Jemmett, was an artist well known to Londoners. His height naturally attracted general attention—on one occasion from King Edward. The late king was about to enter his carriage after a visit to a Bond-street shop when he noticed Mr. Jemmett and spoke to him. "What height are you, my boy?" he asked. "Six feet nine, sir," was the reply. "And a very good height too," remarked King Edward, smiling. In 1921 Mr. Jemmett played the giant in the Kingsway Theatre revival of the Jacobean burlesque, "The Knight of the Burning Pestle." When the war broke out he was in the United States. Returning, he joined an Officers' Training Corps, and afterwards, passed into the Royal Artillery. He was at one time Assistant Provost-Marshal attached to the headquarters of the 6th Army. The artist referred to in the above was a well known figure in Montreal about ten years ago where he gained a great reputation as a painter of children's portraits. Ex-Chauffeur to Royalty ARRESTED ON FORGERY CHARGE William-George Stokes, who bears credentials which indicate that at one time he was chauffeur for members of the royal household in England, and also held a position of the same nature with the Governor-General of Canada, was taken into custody by detectives Melesse and Fox on the charge of having committed forgery. His arrest having been effected, another charge has been laid, in both cases the name forged being the same, that of E. M. Stewart, a boarding house keeper in the south end of the city, for sums of $100 and $25. Discovery that the cheques were forged was made by the Royal Bank of Canada, and the matter was immediately placed in the hands of the police with the result that Stokes was arrested aboard the steamer Papyrus, which had cleared and was about to leave port, where the accused held the berth of third engineer. According to the detectives, Stokes readily admitted that he forged the cheques. Papers in his possession show that he was one of the first to join the 25th Battalion for service overseas. He was arraigned in the police court and his case further continued, only one charge having been prepared at this time. 10 per cent. off English K. Boots, Shoes and Brogues.
