The late Stabbing Case. To the Editor of the Mercury. SIR, - As your report of the unfortunate stabbing case on Saturday night last may have led some to suppose that my boy bears a bad character, and that the facts were all against him, and as the prosecution has been dropped, I would be obliged if you would publish the following statement as the true facts of the case.

been received of the engagement of Monte Rotondo. They represent that the fighting was obstinate on both sides. At one time during the day, when reinforcements for the Papal troops arrived upon the field, the issue appeared doubtful, but at the end of the conflict, Garibaldi, who led his brave volunteers in person, was completely successful. ### Guelph Evening Mercury

WEDNESDAY EVE'G, OCTOBER 30.

THE CONDITION OF EUROPE.

At the present moment, the continent of Europe might aptly be compared to an immense volcano, giving indications of an immediate and terrible eruption. The smoke of battle has already dimmed the sun that shines with genial rays on the vine-clad hills of Italy, and the earth has trembled beneath the tread of hostile armies, and the thunder of their artillery. War has already begun, and war on a more extensive and devastating scale is imminent. France has launched the fleet that will convey her armies to the support of the tottering power of the Pope, and the question that has for a long time been matter of speculation is likely ere long to find its final solution. There is a mystery hangs over the Roman Question which almost every person imagined was no mystery at all when Italy declared her willingness to abide by the terms of the September convention, when Ratazzi resigned his seat in the Italian Cabinet, and when an attempt was made to form a new ministry with Cialdini at the head, whose policy was supposed to be more Napoleonic than was that of his predecessor. But that attempt has failed, and every day gives fresh evidence that the spirit and feelings of the Garibaldians are similar to those of the great mass of the subjects of the King of Italy. Victor Emmanuel may be irresolute in enterprise, but surely, with all his slothfulness, he would be prompt in those measures which are essential to his own safety and the integrity of his kingdom as it stands at present. He cannot well satisfy the Emperor of France for the infringement of the treaty by saying that he could not prevent it, when it is well known that he did not make the attempt; at least that he did not since Garibaldi escaped from Caprera, and at the head of his devoted legions made rapid strides towards Rome.

Bismarck in the pride of his success, and in conscious possession of brilliant talent and a powerful army, keeps a steady watch on the movements of that great political opponent with whom he has been for years contending the palm of European diplomacy. He waits with impatience a favorable opportunity to let slip his hounds of war, and essay to acquire increased power for his country, and fresh renown for her arms. One object of his ambition he has already gained. Prussia by virtue of superior military force has taken the place of Austria; she has become the chief power of the German Confederation, and as smaller bodies have always a tendency to approach the larger, so we find that some of the States of South Germany evince an inclination to join the Confederation of the North under the protectorate of Prussia.—Baron Von Beust has been outdone; he was unable to direct the tide of events, and he was obliged to go whithersoever it would carry him.—He is Prime Minister of an empire that has been humbled, but not annihilated. The history of Austria has been a singular one. Twice did Napoleon the First humble her in the very dust, and he even dictated the terms of a peace by no means so severe as might have been expected from the position of the conqueror and the conquered, within the very walls of her capital. It is well known that he revered her spirit and her power, and her repeated rises to magnificence and strength justified the high opinion the renowned maker of kings and kingdoms entertained of her energy and resources. Should France and Prussia be embroiled it is hard to say what advantage Austria might take of the circumstance, and it would be difficult to predict how far she might retrieve her faded honour, or recover her exalted position. But Russia does not see matters thus.—She looks upon it as inevitable, that Prussia must one day perhaps not far distant mean Germany, and that in consequence she will be exercising a right which belongs to the Muscovite. A large proportion of the population of Austria and Hungary are of the Slavonic race, and Russia with instinctive love for territorial conquest can see in this fact her clear claim to be their protector, and her right to be the champion of the nation that would show signs of willingness or ability to taining such a feeling, it is not to be wondered at if she should wish to see a war inaugurated between France and Prussia, since she would probably be by some means the gainer. Thus while each nation is watching its opportunity, all are arming, and the sound of preparations for a conflict, or for conflicts that are deemed unavoidable resounds from the Ural Mountains to the Atlantic.

Riots in Quebec.

On last Monday morning the police proceeded to St. Rochs and arrested nineteen of the ringleaders concerned in the late demonstration of the ship carpenters' strike. Warrants were issued for the arrest of twenty of the leaders, but one of them is still at large. Those arrested were brought up to the police court at 10 o'clock that morning before the Judge of Session, Mr. Irvine, Solicitor-General, prosecuting. The prisoners were followed through the streets to the court house by a mob composed of the roughest of the rough to the number of several hundred. Curses and imprecations against the police and the authorities were freely indulged in, and several of them swore vengeance against those opposed to their unjust demand. Bail to any amount was offered for the release of the prisoners, but was refused by the court. The prisoners were remanded until Tuesday. When it became known amongst the crowd outside that bail had been offered and refused, the mob became still more noisy and boisterous, and swore they would rescue the prisoners if they were not admitted to bail. The authorities being made aware of the attitude of the mob, deemed it advisable to send for a detachment of regular troops, and accordingly, in a short time, a strong body of the 60th Rifles arrived in front of the court-house. The prisoners were immediately marched out and placed in vans, and amid the shouts and yells of the boisterous crowd were driven off to jail, the vans being guarded in front and rear, and on both sides, by the soldiers, with drawn bayonets.

The latest news from Quebec is that the shipyards still remain closed—the union men threatening with their vengeance all who will work at lower wages than the rates they had established. The examination of those concerned in the late ship-yard disturbances, who were arrested, took place yesterday. Bail has been accepted for the appearance of the ringleaders for future trial, and they have been released. To prevent a disturbance a detachment of the 60th Rifles were stationed in front of the court-house. The volunteer cavalry formed an escort for the prisoners from the gaol to the court house.

Roman Catholic Church in Ireland. It is reported in the Cork Examiner that Lord Stanley applied some time since to the Pope, to ascertain if the endowment of the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland out of the funds now belonging to the Church of England, would be accepted as a settlement of the vexed church question, and that His Holiness declined to have anything to do with it. Application was made then to Cardinal Cullen, the representative of the Roman Catholic Church in Ireland, who called a meeting of the Irish Bishops. The matter was discussed from three points of view, as to how the State might come to the assistance of the Roman Church; 1st, by grants to the priests personally; 2nd, to the church as a corporation for distribution among the clergy; 3rd by the creation of parsonages and glebes. The result, however, was a resolution adopted unanimously against accepting aid in any form from the State. But one other mode remains, it seems to us, of settling the question, and that is, to leave churches of all kinds in Ireland to be supported by voluntarism alone.

Newman Hall has been spending some time at Boston, and is now in New York, preaching and speaking to vast audiences. He will remain on this continent several weeks yet.

An association called "White Boys in Blue" has been formed by the soldiers in New York. They announce themselves opposed to negro suffrage, etc.

COMMERCIAL BILLS AT INGERSOLL.—The Journal of Commerce says:—Our travelling agent writes us from Ingersoll, It is a fact that within the last week from $50,000 to $60,000 have been paid to farmers in this district for their cheese entirely in Commercial bank bills. It will affect the trade of this town very much. The bank's bill are being bought for 60c along the line, and people owing money to the bank purchase them and make a large profit by the transaction.

The N. Y. Times says:—The Washington correspondents are to be "dined" by the proprietors of Willard's. We hope they will have a good time of it. Meantime couldn't they occupy a portion of their time usefully in devising some means for getting a little truth into their despatches now and then—or rather for avoiding such a steady, unintermitted stream of inventions and contradictions day after day? They may not be aware of it, but it is true that the public at large is losing all faith in the despatches from Washington.

A lady in Maine lost five one hundred dollar United States bonds. They were picked up by an ignorant man, who did not know what they were, and he carried them home and gave them to his children for pretty pictures. They cut the bonds and carefully trimmed the coupons, which they kept to play with.

BEING "FIRST."—I assert, Sir, as a fact, said Archbishop Whately to a dull Trinity don, "that you are one of the first men of the age." But while the elated don was bowing his thanks, the wit added, "I understand you were born January, 1801!"

A SMILE ILLUSTRATED.—When Milton was blind he married a shrew. The Duke of Buckingham called her a rose. "I am no judge of flowers" replied Milton; "but it may be so, for I feel the thorns daily."

HEAVY TAXES.—The Buffalo Courier states that the annual taxation for all purposes in the State of New York is more than eleven per cent upon the assessed valuation of all the real and personal property within its limits; that it amounts to forty-five dollars for each individual man, woman and child, white and black, of the entire population; and that the aggregate annual tax is one hundred and eighty million of dollars. That is more than double the entire debt of the Dominion of Canada!

CONFEDERATION IN NEWFOUNDLAND.—At a public meeting not long since held at St. John's, Newfoundland, for the purpose of considering the expediency of that colony joining the Confederation of Canada, the subject was fully discussed with great calmness and moderation. A number of the leading gentlemen in the island advocated the union of Newfoundland with the New Dominion. From the tone which seemed to preclude the meeting as reported in the Newfoundland Press, we are inclined to think it will not be long before Newfoundland makes a formal application to be admitted into

THE KINGSTON MURDER.—The Court of Assizes opened at Kingston on Tuesday. An application on behalf of the murderers Howard, Allan and Gemmill, was made to change the venue, but the judge refused it. The trial was to commence to-day (Wednesday). The prisoner Jones or Whalen has been admitted Queen's evidence.

HAUNTED CASTLE.

In a very few minutes a litter was constructed of the thick branches of the bushes, and the lady was requested to take her seat upon it, when four of the robbers lifted it to their shoulders, and moved away with their light burden.

Another of the fellows was set as guard over the old man, though that was a precaution hardly needed—it being scarcely within the bounds of possibility that he should make his escape.

Andrew and Terry had remained among the bushes, each in charge of a robber, during the time of the foregoing proceedings; but they were now ordered to join the party, and the cavalcade struck at once into a broken and irregular path which wound up the mountain slope.

It boots not that we describe the journey to the robbers' cave, but when it was near sunset they entered the ravine, where at the base of a high rock, was its entrance, half concealed by masses of thick shrubs.

The signal having been given and answered, the lady was lifted from the litter and conveyed through the narrow aperture—her husband manifesting little anxiety as to her fate, but nervously anxious as to his own.

Having been kept a few minutes waiting, the branches were passed aside, and the prisoners, each held firmly by the arm, were led into the dark passage—dark, however, only for a few yards, for presently a bright light streamed from the interior, and they were ushered into the great hall. At the upper end, under two great blazing lights, sat Captain Jack, upon a seat a little elevated above the floor of the cavern. He was richly dressed, and a smile of sneering scorn played round his hard, though handsome lips.

The old man was led forward, and placed in a seat immediately in front of him; while Terry and Andrew were left behind, still in charge of two of the band.

'You are Mr. Anthony Henderwick,' said the captain in very stern tones.

'Yes, yes, that is my name,' answered the traveller, nervously. 'May I ask why I have been brought here. I am an old, weak man, as you see, and a band of men who say they are your followers, and acting under your orders, took me out of a chaise, and made me walk up the mountain to this place, and I am almost dead with fatigue.'

'Never mind the fatigue,' said the captain. 'Let us stick to the facts which admit of proof. The men who seized you and brought you hither are my followers, and they did act by my orders. What then?'

'May I take the liberty to ask for what purpose your order was given?' inquired the old man, in mild and dubious accent, as if he were preferring the greatest favour.

'Yes,' responded the captain. 'You may take that liberty, if you are perfectly ignorant of the matter, and cannot give even the faintest guess at it. But is it so? Have you never heard of Captain Jack?'

'Yes, yes,' stammered Henderwick. 'I certainly have heard of—that gentleman.'

'And heard no good of him, I'll warrant,' returned the captain, with a contemptuous sneer. 'Say, is it not so?'

'Well, really I—I—must say—that he is not well spoken of—that is, not exactly.'

'He is, in fact, termed a cruel, blood-thirsty robber. Out with it, old man.—Don't mince the matter.'

'But he—he may be maligned,' said the old man hastily. 'You—you are trying to frighten me. You would not harm me. I never injured you. I—'

'You didn't,' thundered the captain, springing from his seat, his eyes flashing fire, and every feature quivering with intense passion. Then suddenly he pressed his lips together, clenching his hands at the same time to aid the effort necessary to restrain the rage that was nearly bursting forth, and his limbs relaxing from the rigidity of anger, he sat down again upon the seat. He had conquered himself, and, chafing at his own weakness, was resolved to be the cool and unimpassioned man he generally appeared among his followers.

'A truce to argument,' he said, 'and listen to my demands. We take prisoners where we can get them, and fix their ransom according to their means. You are our prisoner now, and your ransom I fix at one thousand pounds. The moment the sum is in my hands you are free.'

'One thousand pounds,' echoed the old man. 'Did you say one thousand pounds?'

The Captain nodded.

'Oh, but it is impossible,' said the traveller. 'I am poor, very poor. I have not as many pence. Search me and you will see.'

'I don't expect you to have it with you,' returned Captain Jack. 'But means will be given you to send for it. There are writing materials; write out a cheque for the sum and I will despatch a messenger to Ballybrogan to receive it. The instant he returns you will be liberated.'

'But good Captain,' whined the old man, 'it is no use for me to write the cheque, or for you to send a messenger, for I tell you I am poor, miserably poor—can hardly afford to live; I have not—'

'Stop,' interrupted the captain, with stern abruptness; 'lying will not avail you here; my knowledge is too accurate and minute for you to deceive me. Your wealth and miserly character I am perfectly aware of. You could find ten thousand as easily as one, but one is the figure I have named, and the figure I abide by; now write.'

A richly jewelled crosser has been represented to the Bishop of Cape Town, to be used by him as Metropolitan of South Africa, and as symbolizing his duty not only to oversee the flock, but to rule over and guide the other bishops of that continent.

An alarming disease is prevalent among the Shakers at West Pittsfield, Massachusetts, which partakes of the nature of fever and measles. A dozen members of one family have been prostrated at once.

A young man was arrested by the New Haven Police on Sunday for being intoxicated, but on producing a marriage certificate which he wished to make use of that evening, was released and directed to the house of his waiting bride.

The finest idea of a thunder storm extant was when Wiggins came home 't'night.' He came into the room among his wife and daughters, and just then he tumbled over the cradle and fell whop on the floor. After a while he rose and said—'Wife, are you hurt?' 'No.'—'Girls, are you hurt?' 'No.' 'Terrible clap, wasn't it?'

Lord Derby said lately to a deputation that waited on him in reference to popular education, that there was an utter impossibility in having education at once cheap and good. Mr. Duff, the talented member for the Elgin burghs, says, on the other hand, that it is just the very thing the country needs, and it can and will have education at once cheap and good.

The inquest on the body of Sergt. Brett, who was shot during the Fenian attack on the Manchester prison van, when Kelly and Deasy were rescued, was resumed on the 9th inst., when, after due deliberation, the coroner's jury returned a verdict of 'Willful murder against William O'Meara, Allen, and other persons unknown.'

A DIFFERENCE.—A member of the Legislative Assembly of Victoria, Australia, has been convicted of forgery and expelled from the House; and has been sentenced to pay the penalty of his crime. The Member of the Legislature of Canada for Two Mountains was also convicted of forgery, but he was rewarded with a judgeship! Such is the difference in the mode of treating criminals in the old penal colony of Australia and in Canada.

FROM MADOC.—The Madoc Mercury of the 26th inst., says:—'During the last week another rich discovery has been made near the surface, a short distance from the original Richardson mine, yielding, we are informed, as much as six ounces to the pan.' It also says that fine shows of gold have been taken from Lot No. 24, in the 6th concession of Madoc, where the 'gold was to be seen in the rock.'

Business Education!

THE importance of a thorough Business Education is pressing itself upon the attention of commercial circles more and more every day, and its advantages are perhaps more emphatically shown by nothing more than by the vantage ground on which it places the fully trained clerk above the imperfectly trained one, when looking for a situation.

THE BRITISH AMERICAN COMMERCIAL COLLEGE has in full operation such a course of instruction as to give it practical fitness to do the work required. An important characteristic of this Institution is its maturely organized actual business system, whereby the College is made a type or model not only of an extensive business house, but even of a large trading community. Another distinctive feature of this College is that it attempts no extraneous teaching. Its work is cast and to the accomplishment of that work every effort is directed. Just as the University and Grammar Schools must be separate institutions, so the Commercial College and the Elementary School must be distinct. Common sense and experience alike show that such a combination is not compatible with efficiency.

The time required to complete the full course varies considerably, according to the attendance, attention and ability of each student. Young men however are earnestly cautioned against the injurious practice of hurrying through the course from the mistaken idea that they will thus be gainers by the saving of money in the items of board. Indubitably more advantageous would it be to the student, since his full course of tuition is already paid for, to incur the comparatively small additional expense of a few weeks board in order to make himself completely master of the course; and thus, by a small present outlay, qualify himself for some lucrative situation. The crudeness that such haste entails is highly detrimental, not only to the student himself, but also to the College where he graduates; and, besides, it brings reproach upon Commercial Colleges generally. The common practice, therefore, of holding out this crowding system as an inducement to students is most deceptive and highly reprehensible.
