SUDDENLY, a low sob, coming from the midst of the beautiful bowler, started the dame into silence, and then into an exclamation of astonished alarm.

"Miss Ethel, my dear! What's the matter?"

"Turning slightly, she threw her long, white arms round the old her waist, and laid her face down sideways.

"Nothing—nothing! Don't mind me, nurse! I am foolish to-night, and—oh, very foolish! And see, my hair has come down. I—I don't know why, but I felt so lonely! Fancy! It is positively wicked, with you so near, isn't it? There, let me go and play it off."

And, with a tremulous, broken laugh, she sprang to the piano, and the next moment a wild burst of music filled the room and floated into the evening air.

Harold rode hard, and reached home just in time to dress.

"Where have you been now?" asked Sir Talbot, with a smile, and eyebrows raised with amused perplexity.

"Where have I been?" replied Harold, with a carelessness which was half forced. "Oh, I have been over to Hingham to see the dame."

"Ah, yes," said Sir Talbot; "and how is the poor, old creature?"

"Quite well," said Harold, as he sat down and took up the menu of the elaborate dinner. "Quite well; she sent her best respects," he added; "but he said nothing of the lodger, pretty Miss Ethel North."

And when, a moment afterward, the door opened and Lillian came floating in, with her lithe, noiseless step, dressed in one of Worth's masterpieces, a wonder of amber satin and antique lace, he raised his eyes and looked at her with an earnest scrutiny—so earnest that she paused, with her hand on his chair, and met his eyes with a questioning glance.

"Do you like my new dress?" she asked, with her calm smile.

"Your dress?" he said. "Yes, yes, it is very pretty—very. But to himself he added: "Yes! They are alike—strangely alike!" and throughout the meal he found himself looking at her and comparing the exquisite loveliness of her face with the soft, gentle one which we have left at Dame Hester's cottage.

After dinner Lillian sat in the drawing room, with a book on her lap—sat very quietly, her eyes fixed thoughtfully on the ground. The two men who watched her every move-talked together and apart, and in a hushed voice, so that they might not disturb her.

Presently she rose, and going up to Sir Talbot, laid her hand on his arm.

"What is it, my darling?" he murmured, knowing by her face that she wanted to speak to him.

"I have not thanked you yet for your liberality," she said.

"Tut, tut!" he said, drawing her to him and smoothing the hair from her forehead. "Liberality! Do you mean in the matter of pin money? My dear, I wish it was ten times as much. Why, my dear child, it's a poor, patty allowance, and you will find it go quickly enough; and if you want more—"

"But I shall not," she said. "I know I shall not."

"You have only to ask for it, dear. And are you going to the bank to-morrow?"

She hesitated a moment, with that contraction of the dark brows which was habitual with her when she was thoughtful.

"Yes," she said, with a little tightening of the lips; "yes, I will go to-morrow."

Then she moved away, and took her candle.

"Yes," she murmured, firmly, thinking of Dawson Siade's words, "he shall see that I am not afraid. To draw back now would be to tell him all. He only suspects now; I will set his suspicions at rest. I will go. I cannot draw back if I would. I have passed the Rubicon."

Next morning, arrayed in a faultless toilet, which bore Worth's genius even in its grand simplicity, she stood upon the terrace, waiting for her pony carriage.

At almost the last moment, Sir Talbot had found himself unequal to the drive; he was much weaker than of old, and began to show his years. "Harold will go with you, my dear," he said; "he can do everything that is necessary. I do not know why, but I feel quite overcome this morning. It is the heat, I suppose."

She turned and put her arm round him, although half a dozen servants stood looking on, and upheld her sweet lips.

"Go in and rest, dear," she said; "I shall not be long."

"No, not long," he said, touching her white brow with his loving lips; "not long. I don't know how it is, Lillian, but I can scarcely bear you out of my sight. I had a dream last night—but there are the ponies."

"Tell me your dream, dear," she said, in her low voice.

He laughed, but kept his eyes on her anxiously.

"An absurd dream, my dear. I dreamed that you had left me—that you had never come back, in fact, and that it was all a dream. There —there—why do you grow so pale? Tut, tut! Go, my darling; there is Harold waiting for you" and, with gentle force, he thrust her from him.

Harold, as was usual with him, stood by the pony carriage, examining the harness, and stepped forward to help her in. Servants clustered round, vainly endeavouring to make themselves useful and earn their wages. It was as if the Queen of Sheba were going to take a drive.

At last they started, the high-mettled ponies prancing under the light touch, and the sun glancing on their harness and the dainty costume of Worth.

"What a lovely morning!" she said. "It is very kind of you to come with me. Could I not have gone alone?"

"Yes," he said, "if you wished it. There is nothing very important in the matter. I hope Mr. Siade's highly coloured description did not frighten you?"

"No," she said, with a curious glance; "it did not frighten me."

The rest of the way passed almost in silence. They drove into the little market town of Ireton, the ponies frisking over the stones, and attracting the attention of the boys and girls, and the admiration of the townsfolk.

"That's Miss Woodleigh!" they whispered behind their hands; "Sir Talbot's daughter, up at the hall. Isn't she a beauty, eh?"

With her usual calm self-possession, Lillian steered the ponies through the High Street, past the market, and pulled them up at the bank.

As she did so, a wagonette and pair stopped at the same time, and Laura Warner, leaning over the door, called her by name.

Lillian who was just entering the bank on Harold's arm, turned and went back.

"How do you do?" cried Laura, in her clear, high falsetto. "Are you going to the bank? So is mamma; she is just gone in. How well you look!"

"And you, too," said Lillian, quietly. "Tit for tat," retorted Laura, eyeing her lovely face, marked, in its cool composure, with something like irritation. "Well, go and do your business, dear, and then we can have a little chat together. Mamma always spends half an hour at the bank—why, I can't conceive."

Lillian smiled, and passed beyond the glass doors.

As she did so, a man, who had been standing on the pavement watching the two girls as they stood talking, went up to the groom, who stood at the heads of Warner horses, and touched familiarly on the shoulder.

Tom, the Warner groom, was a very high and mighty gentleman, who did not approve of familiarity from a stranger in a tweed suit and with a big cigar, so he turned and eyed his accuser with a supercilious glance. Then his face softened slightly—the man might be a gentleman, though he didn't look it—and the well trained groom said:

"Well, sir, what is it?"

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS

Cannot be cured with ordinary soothing syrups. The disease must be attacked at the root to eradicate the irritation of the lungs, heal the wounds and strengthen the respiratory organs.

MATHIEU'S SYRUP of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other Medicinal Extracts marks it amongst all other remedies as the true specific for the diseases of the throat, the bronchial tubes and the lungs.

Municipal Council Another Stormy Session Last Night.

The full Board was present at last night's meeting. The News and Telegram were represented. Supt. Grimes wrote about the condition of Queen's Road, near the street rails, and asked that the Council attend to the matter.

“RUN DOWN”

A Combined Treatment That Really Cures Catarrh. Canadian weather, with its extreme cold and sudden changes, gives almost every one Catarrh, and makes it hard to cure.

were they sent to you already hired, or have you any idea what caused the estimate to be exceeded? Rd. Inspector—All the men I took on the work had notes from the late Councillors, except one, Councillor Cowan.

Councillor Mullally—Have you those notes now? Rd. Inspector—No.

Councillor Mullally—Well, how many did you have together? Rd. Inspector—Sometimes I had pocket full.

Councillor Mullally—Did I ever as you to employ men, or for any favors? Rd. Inspector—No, never.

Councillor Mullally—The Engineer made that statement last Friday night as “stuck” to it. I believe that the removal of the materials from the grounds was not considered.

Councillor Mullally—That's rough on the Engineer, Mr. Mayor.

WHITE HORSE WHISKY. Age, Quality, Bouquet. Every Bottling Analysed.

the work going on? Rd. Inspector—About six weeks. Councillor Ryan (to the Mayor)—Was it agreed that the Councillors should not send notes?

Councillor Mullally—Do you honestly think that the carting away of the materials put up the expenditure?

Councillor Mullally—It is strange, Mr. Mayor, that the Engineer only employed 6 out of more than 200.

Councillor Mullally—The Mayor don't believe what he says. The Engineer was the proper one to engage workmen; he knew most about the work, and has stated he figured the whole cost at $700.00.

Councillor Mullally—Only this, it was stated here that I asked to get men employed, which I repudiated. It was also stated that you were elected by acclamation, and some one else at the head of the poll, but it did not cost the public a cent to elect me.

Councillor Mullally—Whoever it elected, the work cost $440 more than was estimated.

Councillor Mullally—The worst feature, to my mind, is that there was an agreement for Councillors not to use notes, seeking employment, and I believe there was a resolution to that effect.

Councillor Mullally—The work did not start for some time after that, and it was then the resolution or agreement was made.

Councillor Mullally—The Mayor don't put up such a plea too often; the public won't believe that.

Councillor Mullally—The Rd. Inspector said they were; I did not. I did not say the work was started for election purposes; but I do say that advantage was taken of it; and I have proven that the charges against me are unproven, and let the public judge.

Hopeful Signs.

A pleasant feature of the report of Supt. Curtis on Methodist School is the increased interest of parents in the schooling of their children which he has observed during his tenure of the Superintendency. He remarks: "In my first report I felt obliged to express regret at the lack of interest on the part of parents in the education of their children. There is still room for improvement in this respect; but I am happy to report that a vast change for the better has taken place in the ten years. The old feelings of indifference respecting the presence of a school, or its effectiveness, or whether children were in attendance or not, has largely disappeared; and in its place has come a spirit of eagerness for educational facilities and determination to secure at any cost the best that can be had."
 There are many signs of this change for the better, and notably the response which Governments have been called upon to make to appeals for larger educational grants during the past ten years and more particularly during the past six years. Parents have interested themselves more than in the past. Newspapers have devoted more space to topics on education of children. More discussions have been held in Synods, Conferences, and the Legislature than in the past; Governments have become more sensitive to public demands for these purposes; and every one of these factors contributes a sensible quota towards forming a Public Opinion which is ever growing and which will soon become insistent on Newfoundland children having a stronger and better scholastic training for the fight of life.

Suspect Arrested Not Quincy Murderer.

Last night the police arrested what is believed to be the much-wanted Quincy, Mass., murderer. For the past few days the Provincial police were stirred up by a telegram sent to the chief of police in Boston asserting that Louis Restell, who, two weeks ago in a drunken frenzy, mixed with hate and revenge shot and killed his mother, a granite quarry owner and seriously wounded his brothers and several others in Quincy, was making his way to North Sydney intending to embark on the steamer Bruce for St. George's Bay, Nfld. As a result the past three days were busy ones for the minions of the law in the three Sydneys. In fact he was alleged to have made the old barn on the fox farm at Upper North Sydney his headquarters. Every policeman and county and provincial constable in the four above named places were conspicuous figures, and all tried hard to win their spurs a la Inspector Dew of Crippen fame.
 The climax was reached yesterday morning when a swarthy looking fellow was caught by the Sydney squad. In fact the supposed Restell approached Chief McEachern, said he was a tinsmith out of a job. He was told to go to a certain tin shop in the new city, and a constable was ordered to follow him. The suspect did not go to the tin shop but found his way here, and later took an electric car for Sydney Mines. The evening previous two Italians working at the open hearths, were granted permission to absent themselves from work at five o'clock, saying they wished to meet a fellow-countryman who was due to arrive on the train Monday evening. This created a little suspicion, but it was afterwards learned that he had nothing to do with the central figure in the Quincy tragedy, and the police confined themselves to watching the steamer Bruce.
 About 8.30 last night the officers made a detour of the terminus, forming what they termed the granges, and after boarding the steamer, they pounced on the suspect, who was lying in a bunk. He was immediately arrested and from his pocket a loaded revolver was removed and forty-nine cartridges. In cash he had $8. The suspect exhibited much fear and contradicted himself when questioned by the Herald reporter. He first stated he belonged to Londonderry, N.S., freight train. Then he would deny this, all the while trembling like an aspen leaf.
 However, the resemblance he bears to Louis Restell does not tally with photos reproduced in the American papers, and there is a firm belief the prisoner now lying in the dingy old jail here is not Louis Restell.
 The prisoner will come up for a hearing this morning, but will be held over awaiting the arrival of an officer from Quincy, when identification will be made perfect.—N. S. Herald, Aug. 10.

Where Babies Run Risks.

While there has been a steady improvement in the figures of infantile mortality, a special report issued by Mr. John Burns's Department shows that much has yet to be done in preparing girls for home life, in advising and helping mothers, and, it is suggested, in restricting the non-domestic work of mothers.
 On the whole, a high rate of child mortality is due to bad feeding, bad housing, "feckless" mothers, dirt, and lack of sanitation. The report says that the counties of Glamorgan, Durham, Northumberland and Monmouth, and to a somewhat smaller extent of Carmarthen, Stafford, Lancashire and the West Riding, are—happily to a decreasing extent—centres of national weakness.

The Most Dangerous Animal in the World.

The Common House-Fly.

Mr. Daniel D. Jackson, the New York Municipal bacteriologist, contributes a very interesting article to the American Review of Reviews upon the disease-carrying house-fly, which, he declares, is one of the most dangerous pests in the world. After reading his article and a companion paper that appears in the American Magazine, by Mr. Samuel Hopkins Adams, on Injurious Insects, we must almost come to believe that Nero, instead of being gibbeted for killing flies when he was a boy, ought to have been canonized.

Mr. Adams declares that while the mosquito kills more than one thousand people annually in the United States, and seriously impairs the health of three million more, this lethal reed is far eclipsed by the slaughter done by the common house-fly in propagating typhoid and tuberculosis. Mr. Jackson says the chief specialties of the house-fly are now known to be the transmission of intestinal diseases, typhoid fever, cholera, and diarrhoea. But it also may very possibly carry tuberculosis, anthrax, diphtheria, ophthalmia, smallpox, and swine fever.

The Carriers of Disease.

The amount of bacteria that one fly can carry varies from 250 to 6,000,000, and the rapidity with which they accumulate bacteria is phenomenal. Flies have been captured and cleaned, and then allowed to walk over infected material, and one fly captured in New York last summer was found to be carrying in his mouth and on his legs over 100,000 fecal bacteria.

Regarded, in the light of recent knowledge, says Mr. Jackson, the fly is more dangerous than the tiger or the cobra, and may easily be classed the world over as the most dangerous animal on earth. It is one of the chief agents in the spread of Asiatic cholera, and is largely responsible for the infection of milk with typhoid fever germs. Mr. Jackson calculates that diseases transmitted through the agency of the housefly cut short the average span of life in the United States by at least two years. During a generation this means a loss of 4,000,000 lives of the present average length, and a money loss of four thousand millions sterling. In the Spanish War, 1,900 out of 2,100 deaths resulted from typhoid fever communicated by flies.

Who Will Kill The Fly?

A vigorous campaign is being opened against the house-fly in New York, and a demand is made for the thorough screening of all public kitchens, restaurants and dining rooms. As for killing out flies, that is rather a difficult proposition, seeing that one fly lays a hundred and twenty eggs, and at the end of the year the family produced from that single hatching mounts up to sextillions.

In Mr. Adams's paper describing the war upon injurious insects, he points out that the problem for suppressing the noxious ones and fostering the useful ones by the expert culture of insect parasites has become quite a science. Every insect has its own specific enemy or enemies. Ladybirds are invaluable as policemen for extruding noxious insects. Insect emigration has been the curse of American agriculture. Of the seventy-two destructive insects which destroy millions of dollars annually thirty-five have been imported from abroad. Setting an insect to catch an insect is the science of parasitology.

Seeking Its Fatal Parasite.

The moment an imported insect shows signs of becoming formidable, experts trace it from country to country until they find a region where it has never been known for a long time, but has never reached the proportions of a pest. In such a place they are pretty sure to find a parasite which is keeping the depredator down. They then import that parasite, and the problem is solved.

The orange orchards of California were simply being wiped out by the Australian scale, but by importing a hundred small red-and-black ladybirds the scale was exterminated in two years. Six ladybirds imported into Egypt have checked the Egyptian scale. The cotton boll-weevil, which arrived in Texas from Mexico, has cost that State over two and a half millions a year for the last fifteen years. They are fighting them at present by the introduction of the ichneumon fly, which has killed off from fifty to sixty per cent. of the destructive weevil.

To Save $60,000,000.

In an ordinary year the Hessian fly causes a loss to the wheat crop of the United States estimated at four millions sterling per annum. They have discovered, however, a winged midge, which being imported and colonized, succeeded in destroying the larvae of the Hessian fly. Mr. Adams suggests that wherever a parasite is discovered which is no use in the locality to which it belongs, an inquiry should be made as to where it is needed elsewhere.

The parasite for the house-fly has not yet been discovered. If a parasite could be found that could kill out the house-fly and the mosquito, Mr. Adams estimates that sixty millions sterling would not be an over-estimate of the consequent saving in human life and earning power, plus the increased value of real estate.

Talking Lighthouses.

Wonderful possibilities are claimed for a Swedish invention called the photophone, by means of which it is said that sound waves can be registered on a sensitized plate. The negative is developed in the ordinary way and the sound curves transferred to ebonite plates, from which the sound is reproduced as by the gramophone. The photophone records can be reproduced ad infinitum, and if the original music or song should not be strong enough to fill a large concert hall, the sound can be increased as desired. On account of the immense volume of its sound the inventor proposes that the photophone will replace fog sirens in lighthouses. Instead of the marducate howl which the sirens send out in the night the photographic foghorn will call out the name of the lighthouse for miles over the ocean—London Daily Graphic.

Nerves at High Tension

Slight extra strain means collapse—Restoration obtained by using DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

The successful men and women are often of the high-strung nervous type—keen and active—but with too little reserve force.

A little extra worry and anxiety and snap goes the nervous system. Weeks and months are often required before energy and vigor are regained. Rest, help, so does fresh air and exercise, but the blood must also be made rich and red by use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. Wm. Branton, Victoria St., Strathroy, Ont., writes:—My nervous system seemed all unstrung. I could not sleep had no appetite, my digestion was poor and I had jerking of the limbs. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food helped me and I continued until I had taken twenty-four boxes. This treatment has made a radical change in my condition, building up the system and strengthening the nerves. German Jingoism Come Out on Top

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—An official communication issued to-day states that Admiral Von Tirpitz, Imperial Secretary of State for the Navy, will not resign, but will continue to hold office for a further indefinite period. This statement was reference to reports which were current in Berlin yesterday as to this Minister's imminent retirement. The announcement, which is couched in unusually emphatic terms, means not only what it says, but also that the policy of efficiency favored by Admiral Von Tirpitz will triumph over the policy of economy demanded by Herr Werthmuth, Imperial Secretary of State for the Treasury; in other words, that the influence of the "big navy" party outweighs that of the "little navy" group in high quarters. Moreover, it almost certainly means that a new Navy Bill providing for a further expansion of Germany's fleet will be laid before the Reichstag within a year or two.

"Vossische Zeitung," in an officialy-inspired article, defines candidly the line beyond which Germany will refuse to go in regard to an understanding with Great Britain concerning the limitation of naval armaments, declaring:

(1) That the present German shipbuilding programme being fixed by law for a period of years is unalterable except by new legislative Act, rescinding that of 1900, with its supplementary Acts of 1906 and 1908; (2) that this abandonment of Germany's definite naval policy is absolutely out of the question; and (3) that the German Government have already intimated to the British Government that some agreement might become possible after all the provisions of the present German Navy Acts have been fulfilled.

This frank statement by the "Vossische Zeitung" reveals the futility of the hopes entertained by peace enthusiasts on both sides of the North Sea regarding the possibility of a friendly arrangement for the limitation of the respective shipbuilding programmes. The existing German laws lay down Germany's shipbuilding programme until 1917, and it is definitely declared that no modification can be introduced until that date.

Agreement Impracticable.

The "Tagliche Rundschau" admits that there have been sharp conflicts between Admiral von Tirpitz and Herr Werthmuth regarding the scope of the naval estimates, but declares that the Imperial Chancellor has never contemplated the removal of Admiral von Tirpitz from office, because such a measure would be equivalent to a complete change in Germany's naval and foreign policy. Germany, declares this patriotic organ, can never accept an arrangement with England regarding a limitation of naval armaments, because any such agreement would be incompatible with her dignity and vital interests. The "Deutsche Tageszeitung" also denounces all attempts to bring about a naval agreement, and declares that Admiral von Tirpitz would be justified in resigning if anything of the kind were contemplated. Simultaneously with these announcements that Germany's policy of naval expansion is to be continued, the "Vorwärts" states that a new military Bill providing for a large increase in the standing army will be presented to the Reichstag during the session which begins in November. The present standing army numbers 520,000 and some military experts demand its immediate increase to 850,000, in order that Germany's standing army may reach the same proportion to the population of the country as the French standing army holds to the population of France.

House Built From 1 Fir

A fourteen room, two story and a half house, built entirely of the lumber from a single fir tree, was recently finished at Elma, this State.

The tree was a giant Douglas fir and was felled west of the town. It was marvellously straight and when scaled was found to contain 40,000 feet of serviceable lumber. The tree was cut into six logs, the first but being 28 feet in length. Inside the bark the stump measured 7 feet 9 inches in diameter. The distance to the first limb of this tree was 100 feet and the total height of the tree was over 300 feet.

At the standard price of $25 a thousand, the lumber in this tree was worth more than $1,000. Elma is in the midst of the great fir timber belt on the west slope of the Cascade Mountains.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"It's all very well," complained one of my letter acquaintances, "to tell people that they won't mind the heat if they get a good night's sleep, but why don't you go a step further and tell us how to get that sleep?"

Let me remind you, my friend, that I admitted that that was decidedly one of the cases where it were "easier to tell twenty what were good to be done, than to be one of the twenty to follow my own teachings."

But if you will promise not to get indignant with me, and not to say "that Ruth Cameron really isn't good," if they don't happen to help you, I will be very glad to give what I consider four very good methods of banishing that terrible spectre, insomnia.

They have most always helped me they may help you and they may not but they can't hurt you.

The first thing I do when I find myself getting into that "restless, fussy" state, is to get up and eat something, often times we are hungry even when we don't realize it.

An empty stomach is the worst foe to sleep that there is. The physiology of this is that if you eat something and your stomach gets to working, that draws the blood away from our head and your excitement subsides.

Eat something very digestible, of course. Don't try cheese and doughnuts or mince pie and then blame the results on me.

A glass of milk and a slice of bread is an excellent night lunch. Only don't gulp the milk down—sip it—and also try not to have it at ice chest temperature. Set the glass in some warm water, or if you can't do that, just let it stand for awhile before you drink it.

Then read a chapter or two in a book that is interesting, but neither too exciting or too abstruse. No matter what time of night I get into the insomnia mood, I always rise, light the light and do this.

If you try it, you will find that your mind, which has probably been leaping from thought to plan to worry, like a nimble chamois skipping over the crags, will be arrested in its unwelcome activity in this way better than any other.

Before you go back to bed, bathe your face in cool water, wring out a wash cloth in cold water and put it on your forehead, and if you want to do the thing up brown, put a hot cloth at the base of your neck. The physiology of this, of course, is the same as the eating—it draws the blood away from the head.

These four performances I have usually found quite sufficient for me and infinitely better than any sheep counting or poetry repeating performances.

Other insomnia killers that I have heard recommended, but have never personally tried, are:

Rub yourself, especially the face, neck and arms, in alcohol.
 Smell of alcohol.
 Smell of alcohol.
 Put your feet in a hot foot bath.
 Take your pick, or "take a lot—take two."

Ruth Cameron

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

Fads and Fashions.

Tailored waists continue to make use of linen, lawn and batiste materials. The models most in demand are the side-frilled blouses, with pleated, tucked or plain blouses.

Dressy waists for early fall are being shown made of var-colored chiffons, nets and silks, with which are often worn black chintilly lace or embroidered chiffon jumpers.

White hosiery is still in vogue, and gams, browns and colors to match costumes are still popular. Many beautiful designs appear in the openwork and embroidered styles.

Very effective are the white leather belts made up with a three-inch wide strip of Persian banding through the center. The leather-covered buckle is the favourite fastening.

An excellent suit for general wear is a coat and skirt of blue linen of the royal shade now in vogue. The collar and cuffs are of white linen, and buttons of white pearl.

A band of insertion or embroidery or a stitched band of the material of the dress is a neat finish to the square collarless neck of the wash dress, whether of gingham, chambray or linen.

Among other trifles of dress that have gained in importance since the opening of the season is the sash. Special ribbons in weaves as soft as chiffon have been wrought out for these sashes.

Vest of rich braided or embroidered satin, are being worn much under the satin coat so much in vogue to-day. For wear under the linen suits a vest of wide wale cotton Bedford cord or pique is in good form.

Many of the newest pongee, rajah and shantung costumes are linen with foulard silk, showing a ground of the same color as the pongee, and the separate waist to wear with this costume is of the same silk.

Persian colorings and designs are frequently repeated among the imported frocks. Whole frocks of foulard in such designs, veiled in chiffon or merely relieved by the plain color, are shown, and as trimmings the Persian foulards, satins, etc., are greatly in demand.

The newest models in very handsome lingerie blouses are composed of heavy, soft, handwoven linens, beautifully embroidered in openwork designs and combined with the sheerest of linen and finest of laces.

The Paris Japanese silks are used for the foundation of dresses of malines, nets, chiffons, etc. Pink, blue, lavender and pale green are especially popular for plain and bordered chiffons. Mouselines are used for slips.

A unique neck chain seen recently has for its basis a dozen of the small silver buttons that always fascinate visitors to Holland. These are joined with small pieces of silver chain, the effect of the whole being unusually pleasing.

McMurdo & Co.'s Drug Store.

The casual customer who visits McMurdo's Military Road Branch Store, on Rawlins Cross, since the new fittings have been installed, will certainly be impressed. The distinct individuality of the place, and its adaptation of all means to the common end of efficiency and convenience in the practice of the art of compounding and dispensing of medicines, will be at once apparent. In these fittings there is no attempt at undue ornament. The Corinthian capitals of the dispensing stand, and the bevelled mirrors fit so well into the whole design that they are scarcely remarked in themselves, but are felt at once as part of the general scheme. As the visitor enters the store, he finds on his right hand the dispensing case. This is in front about seven feet high, but on the inside is a platform, reached by two or three steps, upon which the dispenser stands, and where he has in front of him all appliances and materials for the compounding of medicines. Being thus elevated he can at the same time see what is going on in the store. Small shelves, let into the front of this screen, and fitted with glass doors, show toilet articles, etc. Behind the dispenser are drawers for drugs, and shop bottles arranged on shelves. The latter have easily-sliding glass doors, which can readily be taken out for cleaning, but keep dust away from the bottles and jars, and add to the smartness of the store's appearance. There are to the left, near the center of the shop, two substantial and commodious all-glass cases, or "silent salesmen," enabling a large variety of goods to be shown and attract the eye of possible purchasers. Behind the cases again are fixtures for patent and proprietary articles, all with the same sliding glass doors, a mirror occupying the center panel. The whole of the fittings are of quartered oak, rich and substantial in appearance, and planned with the purpose of utilizing the largest possible amount of space for the display of goods, and for convenience and speed in dispensing prescriptions. Messrs. Jones Brothers & Co., of Montreal, designed and worked out the scheme, based on plans drawn by Mr. Ernest Martin, of this city. The whole store is a proof how well modern furnishings can unite artistic taste with the satisfaction of the severest demands of utility. Certainly the interior of this store is a decided addition to the neighbourhood.

Suitable Houses For the Working Classes.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—In this age of advancement of high ideals and improvements it is strange that the question of better housing of the working class has not received the attention it merits. We in a small way are trying to keep pace with the great outside world. We have modern improvements and ideas modified. Big municipalities have arrived at a comparative state of perfection. We are content with a "Brummagen" imitation of their doings, and what is here accomplished amounts only to the gift on the sinner's bread. Why? Because public spirit is of too weak a quality to give us anything like the fitness which this, as a growing city, needs and merits and must have to be a comfort to the inhabitants. Our needs as a city are many. The resources of the Municipal treasury are not vast. We cling to old ideas too long and too fondly, and moreover lack the experience in the ways that bring other cities larger and smaller than ours to a nearer touch with perfection than we can hope to attain if we stand as we do to-day. Are those men in our midst who are able by their command of that great force in the world, viz., money, gold, riches, hanging back, content with the state of affairs here, or are they so blind that they can't see that their powerful financial co-operation can improve the condition of our city? Can they not notice that the foul blot on our reputation as a Christian and a civilized city is, that the accommodation of the working class from a sanitary standpoint is disgraceful and a menace to the health of rich and poor alike? We have trusted too much here to the efforts of the working man himself to build his own home, to stick it up as best he could after a day's work elsewhere, and as long as he complied with so-called Council regulations, the question of where his sloppy water went was a matter of consideration for himself, either to pitch it out the window or door onto the sidewalk as it suited. Councils, members of Parliament, men of wealth, even the health authorities, never have to inhale in their homes the foul odors that arise from a putrid waste bucket. But perhaps they may have some of their family or friends sick from some contagious disease got from the effluvia of a night tub or a stagnant drain, whose fumes would breed pestilence only for a merciful Providence. What remedy has the working class in this matter? Legislation, and lots of it, can't help 'em pay the plumber for the installation of water and sanitary services in their humble homes, even if they have the room for such. Why do not men of capital, citizens of St. John's, array themselves on the side of cleanliness? They can invest in every branch of trade, indulge in every luxury, but when it comes to trade and philanthropy combined they lay back. But it can form a happy and a beneficial combination notwithstanding. No one would expect these "peers" of the above, they are here to be had. I've merely written just to put a thought on the matter into the heads of our rich men. I appeal to them, to their citizenship, to their charity, and to their business instincts, to ask them: If they cannot do something to make the lot of our workmen in regard to habitation better. Gentlemen, some of your servants—male and female—employed in store, wharf, shop or office, may live in these germ impregnated localities, and they come into contact daily with you and your wares and customers, and you can't see that you can get the benefit of the microbe as if you lived in these places. How some manage to observe the cleanliness they do is wonderful in their surroundings, and 'tis a miracle they are alive at all. What a splendid gain to the present race and a bequest to the future would these houses be, brightening the gloomy portions of our city, uplifting the tone of clean living, both in mind and body. And the alien and stranger will then no longer point the finger of scorn at us in respect of this matter. I would like some person who is practical more so than I who would write his views on this matter and help to stir up interest therein. If my pen can do anything I shall be pleased to at any time do my best to write on this subject of such vital importance to this city. And should it become a fact that interest is awakened and something done in this and many other civic matters, believe that it is no ink on time wasted writing on these matters. Trusting that a little fruit for a start may result from this epistle, I close. Thanking you, Mr. Editor for space, I am, Yours truly,

Backache Suffering. A wonderful medicine in this man's description of DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS. Mr. Fred Gummer, Lillies, Ont., writes: "I can honestly say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a wonderful medicine. For six weeks last fall I could scarcely walk around for pain in the back and legs, and was almost completely unfit for work. Though I tried several medicines I got no better. I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and bought five boxes. After I had used three boxes, I was greatly improved and by the time I had them all taken felt as well as I ever did. I would advise anyone suffering from kidney disease to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They will not be without these medicines for anything."

Heaviest Cable. The copper wire of the new Western Union cable which is being laid between Bay Roberts and Cornwall is the heaviest in the Atlantic Ocean. It is said that experiments will be made when it is laid to telephone over it. If this proves feasible it will put a different aspect on communication by cable across the Atlantic. The people of Bay Roberts believe there is a possibility, if this cable proves a success, of large extension of the Western Union plant there, and that there may be 100 employees engaged at the Bay Roberts station eventually.

The Conquest of the Air

With a thunder-driven heart And the shimmer of new wings, I, a worm that was, upstart; King of kites! I have heard the singing stars, I have watched the sunset die, As I burst, the lucent bars Of the sky. 'Lo, the argosies of Spain, As they plowed the naked brine, Found no heaven-girded Main Like to mine. 'Sailing from the clinging sod, First and foremost of my race, I have met the hosts of God Face to face. 'Met the tempest and the gale Where the white moon-riven cloud Wrapt the splendour of my sail In a shroud. 'Other winged men may come, Pierce the heavens, chart the sky, Sound an echo to my drum Ere they die. 'I alone have seen the earth, Age-old fetters swept aside, In the glory of new birth—'Defeat!' —Harold Trowbridge Pulsifed.

C.E. Orphanage League

On St. Andrew's Day of last year the Sunday School Orphanage League was started. Since that time under the honorary secretaryship of the Rev. James Bell, its work has been very successful. The object of the Association is to interest the Sunday Schools of the Diocese in the work of the Orphanage. Nearly 100 schools are already enrolled and display a certificate of membership under the Seal of the Diocese in their school rooms. Already $300 have been received from this source in aid of the Orphanage and the prospects for the extension of the work of the league are bright. To the orphans aided the assistance is beneficial, the Sunday School scholars aiding the work is educational in bringing out the quality of benevolence and sympathy for others.

Liverpool Cathedral.

The Lady Chapel of the first completed instalment of the new Liverpool Cathedral was consecrated, recently. "Towards the £30,000 still required to finish those portions of the cathedral which are now being undertaken Mr. Arthur Earle has promised £10,000 if the balance is raised in the next five years," says the Times. "Mr. Earle belongs to two closely inter-related families which have already provided a large part—we believe, not less than £25,000—of the cost of the Lady Chapel. They represent, as few local families now do, the distant past of Liverpool. Their traditions stretch back to before the days of St. Peter's Church. But they understand the future importance of the cathedral as a centre of diocesan life and a model of diocesan worship."

Gaynor Improving.

Special to Evening Telegram. NEW YORK, Aug. 12. "I have the strongest hopes for the Mayor's complete and rapid recovery." Of course, he will be in the danger zone for a week, but he is doing beautifully, and if things continue to go well, he can be removed from his quarters here in a fortnight. The Mayor is a decidedly robust invalid, despite the half dozen medical experts and members of his family he is running his own convalescent campaign. He insists of knowing just what the doctors are about, and while never discourteous he decides all matters pertaining to his illness with the same finality that characterizes his action at the City Hall.

Devastation Appalling.

Special to Evening Telegram. TOKIO, Japan, Aug. 12. The devastation wrought throughout many districts by the recent floods is appalling. Whole villages and towns have been washed away, and many lives have been lost. In the lower sections of Tokio alone 30,000 houses are submerged and communication by railroad throughout the flooded area has been interrupted. There is much suffering, and in many places the inhabitants are destitute and threatened with starvation. The monetary loss amounts to millions of dollars.

The skill of the best engineers of to-day is little less than marvellous. As an example, after boring through solid rock for fourteen months, under the base of a mountain, the heads of two shafts of the new aqueduct to connect New York city with a reservoir in the Catskill mountains, met within a fraction of an inch. The distance was 3,200 feet.

"Samuel J. Tilden," 41 years of age, of Chestertown, Md., is claimed to be the oldest horse in the United States. He was foaled May 6, 1869, and was at first christened Stonewall, but upon the nomination of Tilden for the presidency, his title was changed.

Carelessness, both on the part of the driver and the pedestrian, seems to be world-wide."

Where the Ar-azons Strike.

Alarmists everywhere are prophesying a sex war. They picture men and women as eyeing one another like dogs keen for fight, prepared to snarl over the few bones provided by churchly fate. Presently we may experience a state of affairs such as existed in the time of the Amazons, which the Spectator two hundred years ago described for the delectation of its readers. The men and women of a country quarrelled about votes or something, and finally settled their difference by each party taking a separate portion of the land for its exclusive property, and never seeing the other except at an annual meeting in a prescribed spot on the boundaries of the two States. Both sexes were thus at liberty to organize their dominions as they pleased, and all careers, from a navy to a prime minister, from a cook to a queen, were open to everybody. Presently, however, so we are told, the women kept their prettiest frocks for the annual meeting, the men hoarded their gains to furnish entertainments for the fair strangers, and in the end both discovered the rest of the year so dull, in comparison with the period of union, that they decided to return to the old ways and live together. History does not record which sex capitulated first, though the suffragettes dare hardly hope the women held out longest, or they would surely have secured better terms for themselves, unless, indeed, "men were deceivers ever." EVENING TELEGRAM FASHION PLATES.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

Dainty One Piece Dressing Sack.

This exceedingly graceful little morning jacket was daintily developed in pale blue lawn, with blue and white dotted lawn for fancy collar, belt and sleeve bands. The making is a very simple matter, as the garment is cut in one piece, the only seam being a short one under the arms. The fullness is held in place at the waist by a belt of the material or ribbon, although if preferred the garment may be worn without a belt. Figured Japanese silk, challis, cotton crepe and dimity are all suitable for the making. Pattern cut in 3 sizes--Small, Medium and Large. Medium size requires 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in stamps or silver.

Little Girls One Piece Dress, With Gulmpe.

This attractive little one piece dress is laid in a broad box plait in front and back. The square cut neck allows the garment to slip on over the head, although if preferred an opening could be made at the back under the plait. The gulmpe of white lawn is finished at the waist by draw string inserted in a casing. The sleeves may be full length or terminate at the elbow. Linen, pique, madras and gingham are all suitable for the making. The pattern is cut in 5 sizes, 2 to 10 years. The six year size requires 2 yds. of material 36 inches wide for the dress and 1 3/8 yards for the gulmpe.

The Tug Daisy in Trouble.

About 8 o'clock this morning the tug Daisy broke down when towing out the schooner Nellie M. When opposite Mr. Guest's premises the accident occurred. Evidently some part of the tug's machinery gave out. At any rate she was in a helpless condition. The schooner no longer depended on the tug to take her out, but getting under way sailed safely out the Narrows on her voyage. The Daisy kept blowing her whistle for help till a launch from the warship Brilliant went to her rescue; the pilot boat and Bowring's launch also went out and the latter took her line and towed her safely up the harbour to the Steam Tug Company's wharf.

Sailing for London.

The s.s. Telconia, cable boat, is taking a supply of coal and will sail direct for London. The landing of the Direct Cable Co.'s line was successfully completed at Harbor Grace the past week and the Telconia returned here yesterday. The cable was picked up seven miles off Cape St. Francis, spliced there and taken up Conception Bay to Harbor Grace. The work was completed to the satisfaction of all interested.

WITH THE ADVENTISTS.--The subject for Sunday at 6.30 p.m. in the Adventist Church, Cookstown Road, will be: "A Glimpse of Heaven." Mr. F. W. Johnston will be the speaker. All are welcome.

Accident to Carman.

A carman who was hauling sugar to Horwood's grocery store last evening met with a serious accident. He was lifting a barrel of sugar off the front of the cart when he slipped and fell backwards. The barrel of sugar came on his shin and broke it short off. Dr. Taft came and sent him to the Hospital.

HEAVY DOWNPOUR.--Last night we had one of the heaviest rainstorms of the season. The drains and gullies were thoroughly washed. Deep ruts were cut in the streets in several places.
