CHAPTER X.

"All Women Are False."

"I will wager fifty pounds to ten that the marquis proposes to her," said the count, in that quiet, boasting voice of his. And, if you will believe me, Percy, I couldn't keep my tongue still; I must stop, and I said: "Count Hudspiel, I can't take your bet, because I know for certain that you would lose, and it is no bet if that is certain; but I know that Miss Devigne will not marry the marquis, because she is engaged already."

"To whom?" asks the count—"not to your cousin, Mr. Merivale, although you may think so. Come, take my little wager."

"You know how he speaks, Percy, like a German, confound him!—and so I took it. It was wrong, I know, but I couldn't stand by and hear that bragging fool bounce like that, could I? So I took his bet, Percy."

Percy struck a light. "And you have lost it, Charlie!" he said, quietly, "for Miss Lillian Devigne will marry the Marquis of Orland."

Charlie opened his mouth, then closed it quickly, as he caught sight of his cousin's face by the light of the one wax candle which Percy had lighted.

"Oh, Percy, dear Percy! How white and ill you look! Oh, what is it? What has happened?" and his face grew anxious and concerned.

"Nothing much, Charlie," said Percy, smiling. "Never mind my white face. I'm tired, you know—no bed last night, a scramble of a dinner, and a long journey, to say nothing of bad news."

"But—but—something's the matter. Do tell me Percy. I will be careful and thoughtful. I can't bear to see you look like that!" and the boy's lips quivered.

"Hush, Charlie," murmured Percy. "It is nothing much—only a mistake. May you never meet with such an one. Only a slight mistake, old boy, which the lady you admire so much has made. She thought that she cared enough for me to be my wife, and found, after all, that it was the Marquis of Orland she was in love with."

"What that tottering old man!" gasped the boy, in horror.

"Hush; he is the Marquis of Orland, Charlie, and his kind are always young and handsome and worthy of being young girls' husbands until they die!"

"Ah, I see!" cried the boy. "She has left you, Percy, for him? Perce, I hate her! Yes, I hate her! You for him! Perce, dear, dear Perce, I scorn and hate her! She is lovely, but she is a fool! Oh, Perce, to leave you, so strong and handsome, so—so great—for that limping, painted old skeleton! No; I won't say any more, not a word. Dear, dear Perce!" and with a great gulp the tender-hearted boy hid his face upon his cousin's broad shoulder.

"Hush!" said Percy, "not a word more for either of us, Charlie, old boy. I'm hard hit, as you see. Yes, I must own that, you know; but I can get over it—very quickly—out of her sight. Charlie, listen to me. You go to Oxford next week. Well, we will both of us cut London at the same time. We will keep the chambers on, and Beamish shall look after them, that when vacation comes round you can run up here and enjoy yourself while I am away. You can look after things, Charlie, and I know I can trust you to keep a straight heel! You won't forget that any mishap to you would hurt me more than if it had occurred to myself. You will keep straight, Charlie, for my sake! and when I come back we will meet to part no more, as the hymn says, at least on this side of the river."

"Yes, that's all very well—that's all for me, as usual," groaned the boy; "you never think of yourself! But where are you going, Percy?"

"Anywhere—somewhere where there are no Lillian Devignes, Charlie, boy! I'll go and seek communion with the wolves and the bears, out among the big game; they're wild and rather rough, but they are better than the women of our modern high-pressure civilization. Never fear for me, Charlie. Do you go on right, look after Beamish, and keep a straight heel, and I shall be satisfied. And now go to bed, dear boy, and sleep on it! There, there, my dear old Charlie boy! if all the world were false there is one true heart beats for me while you are in it! Good night!"

Then, as the lad wrung his hand and reluctantly left him, Percy Chester drew his writing materials toward him, and by the light of the one wax candle, wrote:

"My Lord:—It is only due to your superior knowledge and foresight that I should admit the truth of your prophecy. The woman I loved has proven false. Notwithstanding her treachery, however, I still remain firm in my refusal of your kind plan on my behalf, and quite content to abide by the consequences of such rejection. I am now, my lord, about starting for the New World, and I hope on a new life. I may not return for some years, but in whatever land I may be, I shall always find nothing in my heart for your lordship but gratitude and respect.

"I am, my lord,
"Yours most truly,
"PERCY CHESTER."

A new world; a new life. Ah! Percy Chester, as you sit with your face hidden in your hands, all looks black and somber, hopeless to your mental gaze; but who knows! you may find in that same new world and new life, a new joy, in the light of which the somber clouds shall scud away as the mists of night flee before the morning sun. "All women are false!" you groan, thinking of the fair face and sweet wiles of her—she who has be-

Forced to Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance.

Astonishing Cure of This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 33 Waterloo Street, Fredericton, N.B., writes:—"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefitting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her tonsils and tongue became so swollen that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, stead-trayed you. Wait! Behind the veil of the future there lies fate.

CHAPTER XI.
The Indian Maid.

Twilight—darkness, indeed, but for the snow. Snow on the wide-stretching plain, snow on the hills rearing their great, threatening heads in the distance, snow on the leafless trees of the prairie wood—such an evening as renders the glowing fires enjoyable, and the light of a pair of wax candles through the steam of a teakettle appear the epitome of comfort—such a scene of wide-stretching, snow, dreary mountain peak and grim forest as the poet who wrote the ode to Nature's solitude might have conjured up for inspiration. And yet there is human life animating the ghostly landscape, and heightening its dreariness by contrast; for, slowly approaching the forest, across the open glade, rides a solitary horseman.

Though it is twilight, the air is so clear and keen that his figure and face can be seen at some distance, and once seen, they are not to be passed over by the most careless observer. A tall, strong-framed, though thin, and somewhat depressed by evident lassitude, broad shoulders, muscular arms, and a leg that, clad now in tight-fitting gaiters of buffalo-skin, might have made its mark in the days of satin breeches and silken hose; a face—so much of it as can be seen for the fur cap and upturned collar of the horseman's cloak—cleanly cut, heavily mustached, dark-eyed; the hand that holds the frozen bridle is long, thin, shapely; and the air with which the rider looks about him is some what different to the sharp, ferret expression which distinguishes the ordinary fur-trapper.

And yet what man, other than a fur-trapper or a lunatic, would be riding across the plains of the Snake River in a North American winter evening?

How is one to believe that this man slowly picking his way over this seemingly endless plain, miles away from civilization, food, fire, comfort—this man with the patrician face and bearing, clad in beaver skin and moccasins, and bestriding a horse as weary as himself? How is one to believe that he was, and might be again, if he chose, the pink and form of fashion, the beau of a London season, the well-beloved of aspiring daughters; the hope and aim of conspiring mammas, the pride of an ancient house, the friend of the noblest in the land, and—the enemy of himself? All this, and more, is Percy Chester, heir to an earldom and "lord of himself, that heritage of woe." Three years ago if any one had said, "Percy, my boy, you'll winter in North America, and spend the cheerful days among red skins, beavers and grizzly bears, often hungry, nearly always cold, generally dissatisfied," he would have laughed about the prophet to scorn, and talked about what he meant to do with the Pythchley and the Quorne.

Yet, here he was, alone in a solitary waste, very tired, very hungry, and tolerantly cold, while far away his old companions and friends were careering through a short London season, and wondering "what on earth had become of Chester, you know!" Perhaps a similar kind of question he was putting to himself as he settled down into his saddle and pulled his cloak more closely round him; certainly with an impatient kind of shrug, that generally comes as a finale to self-communing, he checked the slow progress of the horse, with a word, and looked round him.

Apparently the landward or object for which he looked did not greet his aching eyes, for with a cursing of the lip and an emphatic shake of the head, he said to his sole companion—the horse:—"Something wrong here, old lady; we've missed the way, or Spotted Wolf has played us false. The tribe should be whereabouts or we made a mistake in the tracks."

The horse—who, of course, understood every word of the foregoing, raised his head, looked round with uplifted ears, then neighed. "Exactly my opinion," said its master. "If I understood you rightly, old lady, Spotted Wolf is not—not to put too fine a point on it—to be relied on, or the tribe has gone; which is it, I wonder? Not that it matters, for whichever way it goes, we must camp out in the snow to-night. Let us get under the trees."

With a shake of the head, the tired horse put its best foot foremost, and again the silence, so weird and awful, fell upon the scene. With that silence unbroken, man and beast entered the skirt of the wood, and there as if by mutual consent, made a halt.

Dismounting, Percy Chester flung the bridle over his arm, and with eyes, ears and nose—for the hunter and fur-trapper must follow that feature in more ways than one when he is roughing it in North America—on the alert, proceeded to a cautious reconnoiter.

After a few minutes of intense listening our hero pitched upon a little hollow made by the meeting of the limbs of these trees, and which was comparatively free from snow; drew the saddle from his mare, rubbed her nose with a handful of snow-water, abstracted a like quantity of corn from his saddle-bag, directed her attention to some green leaves that sprouted from the winter shrubs near at hand, and while she was nibbling them with the keen enjoyment of a hungry horse, rubbed her down as carefully as if he himself had dined, rested, and was at ease.

All this done very quickly, and with every now and then a word or two of encouragement and good-fellowship, the traveler proceeded to clear a space in the snow, to pile upon it the dried boughs and twigs he could find, and to turn them into a good, roaring fire.

Evening Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Fashion Plates. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

1713—These attractive styles may be used for any material. Lace, embroidery, embroidered crepe or voile, taffeta, faille, net, tulle, chiffon or crepe de chine, all are suitable and appropriate. Style No. 1 is made with platts over the front, is cut with deep points at the sides, and gathered to a band or belt. Style No. 3 shows a deep plait over the centre front and at the sides; it has gathered fulness; which falls in graceful folds over the hips. Style No. 3 is equally attractive, showing a long point in front and in the back, where the fulness forms a wide plait over the centre.

The Pattern which includes all styles illustrated, is cut in 3 sizes: Small, Medium and Large. No. 1 will require 1 1/2 yard of 44-inch material. No. 2 will require 3 yards and No. 3 will require 2 1/2 yards, for a Medium size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

1711—Ladies' and Misses Bathing Suit (With Bloomers). Mohair, brilliantine, serge, flannel and silk are nice for this model. The waist fronts are crossed over a vest that is cut in with round low neck edge. Bell shaped short sleeve, and a four gore flare skirt complete the design.

The Pattern is cut in 3 sizes for Misses: 16, 18 and 20 years, and in 5 sizes for Ladies, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for an 18-year size; size 38 would require 3 1/2 yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

BRITISH ARMY GOES INTO MOURNING.
LONDON, June 7.
The British Army went into mourning to-day for the late Chief. Every officer wore crepe on his left arm. Throughout the country flags were at half mast. There was no suspension of activities having to do with the prosecution of the war, and at the War Office and other Government departments officials continued to work out the details of the scheme which Earl Kitchener formulated. From the Allies and neutral countries, Dominions, Colonies and Dependencies, came a flood of cablegrams expressing sympathy. The news was received in the South African assembly during the discussion of the estimates. Premier Botha, who was deeply affected, made an immediate announcement and moved adjournment, while members, Dutch and British, remained standing as a tribute to the man who had won the Dominion for Great Britain against forces in which many of the legislators had fought. Newspapers and many commercial organizations have taken up the demand for the immediate internment of all aliens from enemy nations, on the ground that the Germans may have been advised from England of Earl Kitchener's departure and that such have been responsible for the destruction of the Han-patrol.

BRITISH ARMY GOES INTO MOURNING.

LONDON, June 7. The British Army went into mourning today for the late Chief. Every officer wore crepe on his left arm. Throughout the country flags were at half mast. There was no suspension of activities having to do with the prosecution of the war, and at the War Office and other Government departments officials continued to work out the details of the scheme which Earl Kitchener formulated. From the Allies and neutral countries, Dominions, Colonies and Dependencies, came a flood of cablegrams expressing sympathy. The news was received in the South African assembly during the discussion of the estimates. Premier Botha, who was deeply affected, made an immediate announcement and moved adjournment, while members, Dutch and British, remained standing as a tribute to the man who had won the Dominion for Great Britain against forces in which many of the legislators had fought. Newspapers and many commercial organizations have taken up the demand for the immediate interment of all aliens from enemy nations, on the ground that the Germans may have been advised from England of Earl Kitchener's departure and that such have been responsible for the destruction of the Hampshire.

NEWSPAPERS DEVOTE COLUMNS ON KITCHENER'S DEATH.

NEW YORK, June 7. Morning newspapers published columns on the death of Kitchener, including sketches of his career, catalogues of his achievements and expressions of sorrow at his death. All was unable to ascertain. Hundreds of bodies were floating around the wreck. For three hours the Vanda steamed among the dead sailors. Near the spot where the derelict was encountered, the wreck of a big sailing vessel, apparently an innocent victim of the Jutland battle, was sighted.

GERMAN ATTACK CHECKED.

PARIS, June 7. The German attack on Fort Vaux started at 8 o'clock last night, and was promptly checked by fire of French machine guns. It is announced that the Germans retreated in disorder, abandoning many dead. At Hill 304 an artillery duel is in progress, and also at Caurettes Wood. Two German patrols, which tried to cross the river Aisne, were dispersed.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, June 7. (Official.) West of Soissons two German scouting parties, which were trying to cross the Aisne, were dispersed. Near Pontenoy our artillery fire destroyed several observation posts at Nouvron. In Argonne at Fille Morte, we have exploded successfully three mines. On the right bank a very strong German attack was launched about 8 p.m. on Vaux fort. It was shattered by our curtains of fire. The enemy drew back disorderly, leaving numerous corpses on the ground. German artillery, though counter-fought by ours, continues without stopping its bombardment of the fort and region in vicinity. In the Vosges an intense bombardment of our first lines at Hartmannsvillerkopf.

SUNK IN COLLISION.

PARIS, June 7. The French destroyer Fantassin has been sunk in collision. The crew were rescued.

RUSSIAN MAKE BIG CAPTURE.

PETROGRAD, June 7. In their new offensive the Russians have captured more than forty thousand men, it was announced officially today. The statement says that on the line between Pripet and the Romanian frontier, over which the campaign is being fought, the Russians thus far have taken 900 officers, forty thousand men, 77 guns, 134 machine guns and forty-nine bomb throwers.

TRIBUTE TO KITCHENER.

NEW YORK, June 7. A silent but intensely impressive tribute to the memory of Lord Kitchener, was paid by a large and representative audience at a theatre in West Forty-fifth St. last night. The tribute was spontaneous, and was not anticipated by anyone in the audience. A film entitled "How Britain Prepared," was being exhibited as an object lesson for "Preparedness." The first part of the picture dealt with the process evolved by Kitchener for the transformation of five million recruits into an efficient and well-organized force of fighting men in the brief time of 18 months. Suddenly an excellent portrait of the dead Field Marshal was flashed on the screen. The orchestra leader tapped his baton as the opening bars of the hymn "Nearer my God to Thee," was heard. The entire audience rose and stood in silence until the strains died away, and not a sound of applause was heard, but a man who was in the audience said afterwards that the genuineness of the tribute was more marked by the very silence in which it was paid.

BALFOUR ON LORD KITCHENER.

LONDON, June 7. Speaking at a luncheon at the British Imperial Council of Commerce today, Balfour eulogized Lord Kitchener. Perhaps the greatest triumph of his life, Balfour said, was his successful effort to create the vast military machine which was now prepared to do its share in the military undertaking of the Allies. Referring to the North Sea battle, he said that for many months it will be impossible for the Germans to attempt any naval movements which they might have undertaken before the battle was fought. Balfour said it was impossible at present to go into details of the battle, as he had not a connected view of the whole action from any authentic source. Admiral Jellicoe's despatch giving his views had not been received, and while the British losses had been stated accurately, no value could be placed on German reports, which Balfour declared were tainted from the first. He said the battleship which the Germans still insist they sunk; refers to the Warspite, which had been safe in port since Thursday. Dealing with the broad issue of the result of the battle, Balfour declared the German losses were greater than the British. Asked why, if Germany had defeated the British, they had not pressed their advantages, Balfour said the German headquarters never was under the delusion that the German fleet was superior to the British. The Germans were not to blame if they ran away. It would be bad strategy for the German Commander to become involved in a decisive fight. Neither in the North Sea nor in the Baltic, he asserted, could the Germans attempt for many months

WHY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE SO POPULAR.

They Are Invaluable As a Tonic and Family Medicine As Well As a Preventive and Cure for the More Serious Kidney Diseases.

Chelmsford, Ont., June 7th. (Special.)—"We have found Dodd's Kidney Pills extremely good. We are in good health thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

These are the words of Miss Della Charron, a well known resident here. Others tell the same story. They have tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and found them good.

For Dodd's Kidney Pills as a tonic and family medicine are without an equal. When you feel worn, tired and run down the chances are ten to one that your kidneys are at fault.

When the kidneys become clogged or out of order, the circulation becomes sluggish, the impurities are not strained out of the blood and the result is weariness and lack of energy all over the body.

This condition is not only disagreeable but dangerous as well. The impurities in the blood are the seeds of disease. If they are not removed Rheumatism, Lumbago, Gravel, Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease may result.

Guard against these diseases and get back your accustomed energy by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

any kind of an organized fleet effort such as might have been within their power before the battle. As a result of the battle, Balfour declared, the German dream of invasion had been dissipated. With regard to blockade and control of the seas, the position of the Germans was worse.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."
"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Your Boys and Girls.

The greatest problem that confronts a mother in planning children's birthday party is not what form of entertainment, but in nine cases out of ten—what to do with the bigger boys.

In many gatherings of little boys and girls ranging up to 7 or 8 years there are always a few young lads overcharged with animal spirits who "cut up" to the boundless terror of the little girls in their dainty ruffles and ribbons. Even boys who are models of behavior on other occasions are apt to catch the contagion of this birthday party restlessness, and it sometimes takes almost all pleasure out of giving birthday parties.

The other fellow ought to do the things I leave undone; I like to hand him precepts, true, and counsel by the ton. The other fellow'd find it wise to lead the simple life, to rigidly economize, assisted by his wife. While I blow in the good long green for diamond-studded lures, for jugs of sparkling gasoline, and costly rubber tires. The other fellow ought to buy the cheaper cuts of meat, and feed his children prunes while I the jolly sirlion eat. The other fellow ought to keep within his modest means, and he can make his living cheap, by raising spuds and beans. The other fellow ought to sweat and struggle for each dime, while I go blithely into debt, and have a bully time. The other fellow ought to know that rainy days will come, and he, to sidestep grief and woe, should save an ample sum. Supremacy at Sea

The news gradually filtering in as to German losses in the sea fight off Jutland is making it more and more apparent that the losses were absolutely greater than the British losses. The absence of great rejoicings and triumphant shouting throughout Germany is confirmatory of the impression that the naval battle has left Germany in a much worse position on the sea than before the fight. The Daily Mail learns from Kiel Canal that the German official estimate of German losses at 7,600, made up as follows: killed, 800; wounded, 1,400; missing, 5,400. Generally speaking the 800 killed and 1,400 wounded, or 2,200 casualties may be taken as losses sustained on warships which have returned to their bases, and that the 5,400 represents the crews of other large warships and smaller units. This is corroborative of the story that Germany has lost two large line of battleships of the dreadnought class and two great battle cruisers. This loss absolutely is much greater than that sustained by the British, who lost no line of battleships and only one great battle cruiser, the Queen Mary. Relatively the German losses were much greater than this in dreadnoughts and battle cruisers, as Germany could spare capital ships of these classes much less than Britain, even with regard to the reserve of Britain's allies. As regards men a similar comparison holds. The German losses in men are absolutely greater than the British, but relatively much greater as the British have twice as many men in the fleet as Germany and have also the reserve of their allies. In summing up the position then, it would appear that Germany as a result of the Jutland battles is less able to dispute the British supremacy at sea than she was before the engagement. Admiral Beatty made a gallant effort to engage the German Grand Fleet with his cruiser squadron and to hold them until Admiral Jellicoe came up with the Grand Fleet. The Zeppelins, however, did good service to the Germans by advising them of Jellicoe's approach and they beat a retreat, but not before they had sustained very heavy losses, and by rushing to their bases, showing themselves unable and unwilling to dispute British supremacy at sea. Better luck next time to Jellicoe and Beatty, is the wish of Britain and her allies.

Newfoundland's Sorrow

Yesterday His Excellency the Governor sent the following cable to Rt. Hon. A. Bonar Law, Secretary of State for the Colonies, expressing in apt words sorrow for the loss of Kitchener and confidence in future victory:—

TELEGRAM.

Governor of Newfoundland to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

(Sent 7th June, 1916.)

Your telegram 6th June, My Ministers join me in the expression of our profound grief at the great loss which the Empire has sustained in the death of Lord Kitchener.
We desire also to express our confidence that now as heretofore in British History the Nation will find others ready and able to make good this and any other calamity which may check our advance to final victory.

Truckman Punished

FOR STITCHING HIS HORSE.
At the instance of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, an East End truckman was before Judge Hutchings in the Magistrate's Court this forenoon, charged with cruelly ill-treating his horse. The evidence adduced showed that "Jack" had been working his horse, which bore many cuts and sores. The accused inserted 27 stitches in different parts of the animal's flesh on Sunday last. Testimony was given by a veterinary surgeon that the condition of the horse was such that it was necessary for it to lay off under careful treatment and not to do any work for at least ten weeks. The defendant was fined $10 or 30 days, and the Judge ordered that the police and S.P.C.A. officer see that the horse be not worked within the time specified by the V.C., and if it was, that the defendant would be sentenced to an additional three months' imprisonment.

Dangerous Wharf.

Residents of Bell Island and St. John's who cross from Portugal Cove to the Island are indignant over the manner in which they are forced to board the mail steamer at the Cove. This we learn is no fault of the steamer owners as they contend that the water surrounding the wharf is inadequate for the ship to dock, and unless the Government accepts the responsibility of damage or loss of the steamer they will not pull into the wharf. The facts are, that a little over two years ago the wharf was carried away by a tremendous storm and has not fully been replaced. Yesterday week a woman patient from the General Hospital who had just recovered from a trying operation and was returning to her home at Bell Island had to be assisted over the side of the ship from a small boat. Waiting Port aux Basques and St. John's more passengers travel over this route than any other in the country. It is estimated that last year close on 15,000 people crossed the tuckle to and from the Cove and Bell Island. This is a matter that demands the immediate attention of the Government and should not be left over till the eve of the next general election. Lives are being endangered and it is up to the Government to act.

Damaged Steamer Will be Dry Docked.

The grain laden Norwegian steamer Lyngfjord, which went ashore at St. Vincent's, St. Mary's Bay and was refloated and towed here by the S. S. Portia, will be dry docked for repairs and will go on the stocks about Monday next. The ship is damaged and leaking in the bottom. She had four thousand tons of grain aboard and it was intended to discharge all this cargo. Between two and three hundred tons were unloaded when the laborers quit work, demanding higher rates of pay. They were being paid 25 cents an hour by day and 30 cents by night. We are also informed that they were offered 35 cents an hour by day and 40 cents by night and refused it.

And as a result of the sharp concessions from regular prices on our own distinctive stock, in addition to the unprecedented values in desirable lines purchased specially for this Sale, great selling activity is expected, exceeding that of any previous Sale.

Our June Sale of Ladies' Whitewear brings you the sort of garments you want, at less than you can buy them anywhere else. Not only lowest prices, but lower prices coupled with better qualities. This is the keynote of our June White Sale of Misses', Children's and Women's White Underwear. No cheaply made or inferior goods, nothing that won't give good service, but plenty of good-looking, well-made, perfect-fitting, long-wearing garments. That's what you'll obtain here at surprisingly little prices.

Pillow Cases, Shams and Sheetings.

The secret of the popularity of our staple department lies in this fact—that the values are unexcelled, and in most cases without equal in St. John's.

Was She Justified?

By RUTH CAMERON.

A woman who has had a misunderstanding with her neighbor has appealed to me. She wants to know if I think she was justified in what she did. This is what happened. Her neighbor is a woman who has only her husband and herself in the family, and a small apartment. My letter friend has a large family and larger house to look after.

The neighbor fell into the habit of dropping in in the morning to call when she had finished her own work. Now while my letter friend likes this neighbor very much, she really has not the time for morning callers. So she considered the matter and finally wrote the neighbor a little note, explaining how matters stood and telling her that she hoped she wouldn't let any misunderstanding come between them, because she valued her friendship.

Whereat the neighbor was huffed. "What do you think?"

"Now am I to blame?" asks my letter friend.

I think we all know the woman who has so much time to fritter that she can't realize that anyone else has to economize in order to live on twenty-four hours a day.

Sometimes she calls us up on the telephone and talks half an hour in the middle of a busy morning.

"She Really Must Stop, But—"

Again she drops in on us in the morning and spends an hour or two with us, protesting all the time that she really mustn't stop, she is going right along. Usually she urges us not to let her interrupt, and insists on coming right out into the kitchen but as every woman knows, it is impossible to accomplish half one's normal output of work when one is trying to keep up a conversation and think of what one is doing at the same time.

Sometimes she comes in the late afternoon and finds you hurrying about. "Going out?" she asks, and you explain that you have a dinner engagement.

She Spoils The Whole Evening For You.

"Well, I mustn't stop then," she says, and proceeds to stay a half hour. You dress in a hurry, get into a miserable state of fustiness and finally miss your car, are late for dinner and have a spoiled evening—all because of that stolen half hour.

There are times when one doesn't want to see even the best friend in the world come in the door, times when one has every minute planned for, and when even a slight interruption will upset the schedule.

People of tact sense such things and promptly and gracefully remove themselves. And if one did not have tact enough to sense it, surely a reasonable person would prefer being told frankly when his presence was inconvenient to having it resented and commented upon behind his back.

"Please tell me which name should be mentioned first when introducing a girl friend and a young man?" asked Mona.

"The lady's name is always mentioned first in an introduction," was her society brother's reply.

"Homestead"

is the perfect and unquestionably the finest product of Ceylon's tea gardens.

This perfection is attained by the application of the most approved modern methods of cure.

"There's a Smile in every cup of Homestead."

AT THE CRESCENT.

The great three reel Essanay feature "Caught" is being repeated at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn play their best roles in this big feature. The favorite G. M. Anderson appears in "Broncho Billy Begins Life Anew," a strong western feature. Sidney Drew is very funny in "Unlucky Louey." Professor McCarthy plays an appropriate and classy musical programme. This is a splendid show, and Crescent patrons who were out of town yesterday, should certainly attend to-day.

NICKEL CROWDED; FINE PICTURES.

The attendances at the Nickel Theatre yesterday were very large. This was not surprising as the pictures were particularly good. The general opinion was that the programme was one of the best for some weeks. The Romance of Elaine was continued and as in the past was sensational and attractive. Elaine performed some very thrilling feats. "Curly" was a beautiful and impressive story which was closely followed. The "Twin Brides," in which George Ovey was seen and the other comedy kept the audience in roars of laughter. All who could not attend yesterday should be sure and go to-day.

Lieut. Netten.

Mr. Philip E. Netten, of Montreal, has been made a Lieutenant of the Royal Naval Reserve, having successfully passed the necessary examination recently. He is the second son of the Rev. Canon Netten, of Topsail, and has a brother with the St. Francis Xavier Unit. He expects to be leaving shortly for England.

Cochrane St. Centennial Church.

On next Sunday week the formal opening or consecration of Cochrane Street Centennial Church takes place and preparatory to that ceremony the sale of pews for the new church took place last night. One third of the number were engaged, and the sum of $2,500 received. This evening, commencing at 7.30, the sale will be continued.

St. Lawrence Tragedy Recalled.

New Quebec Salvage Company May Undertake Work of Raising the Steamer Empress of Ireland.

The formation of a new Quebec salvage and wrecking company by the well-known Quebec diver, Edmond Tremblay, recalls one of the most appalling marine disasters in history; over a thousand souls going down after the great liner was rammed by the steamer Storstad on May 29th, 1914. Mr. Tremblay was one of the divers who examined the wreck of the once floating palace.

It is not certain whether or not Mr. Tremblay's wrecking company will carry on the salvage work this summer. The company is in communication with Lloyds and if operations are not resumed within a few weeks the work will be suspended for two years.

The new company which is known as the "Quebec and St. Laurent Salvage and Wrecking Company," has just purchased the schooner "Toussaint," which is in the Drolot dock where two gasoline engines are being put in. This schooner will leave next week for Pointe des Monts and will return a little later.

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "Measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.

A heavy "Cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phoratoxine Cough Cure" on hand.

Stafford's Drug Store (Theatre Hill) is open every night from 7.30 to 9.30.

The above preparation is manufactured only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld.

Gone to the Unified Kingdom.

The four-masted Halifax schooner Florence, previously reported to have been sold to parties in St. John's, has just left the Nova Scotian port for the United Kingdom with a cargo of deals. It is not yet definitely decided whether or not the supposed purchase of the vessel has been called off.

PERSONAL—Mrs. T. J. Nurse left by the s.s. Stephano on Tuesday night to join her husband at Montreal where they will reside in future.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DYPHTHERIA, TYPHOID,

Arizona.

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

Arizona was made by Nature in a frivolous and contradictory mood a few million years ago, just to show man when he arrived, what she could do when she left it. And of Arizona, she has done a plenty. She has made rivers which are dusty on top and has put most of the drinking water in the state a mile underground. She has made red, yellow and blue deserts, and mountains which rise 10,000 feet high without any foothills or preliminaries. She made beautiful valleys and forgot to sweep the 1,000 ton boulders out of them when she had finished. She made the mesas, which started out to become mountains, but became tired at the first story, and which have vast flat tops leveled off by a celestial jack-plane. She made the Gila monster, whose looks are almost fatal. She made the Grand Canyon, in which she opened the earth's side for two hundred and fifty miles and laid bare its granite ribs. And lastly she covered the whole exhibition with a climate in whose looks are almost fatal. She and in which a man has to have about ninety years' practice in order to die without assistance.

Arizona is the grandfather of the continent geologically and the baby of the states politically. It is only five years old as a state, and is still mad because ex-President Taft took away its recall rattle. It was first settled several thousand years before the Pilgrim fathers came over, and many of the houses built by the original inhabitants are in a better state of preservation than some of the railroad depots in the state to-day.

Arizona has the finest collection of prehistoric ruins in the country, not excepting the United States Senate, but it is only in the last few years that men have learned how to live in it successfully and to refrain from the six-shooter. Tombstone is one of the oldest towns in the state and its name explains the slow growth of Arizona as a territory. In Southern Arizona the thermometers are fitted with safety valves, and for many years the inhabitants ventilated each other with revolver bullets in an unsuccessful effort to keep comfortable.

Arizona is now growing rapidly, but the state is not yet congested with citizens, and in some of the northern precincts across from the Grand Canyon, election returns have to be sent in to the county seat by aeroplane.

Arizonians are of two classes—those who can't go away because they can't live anywhere else, and those who don't go away because they won't live anywhere else. The soil of the state is a pulverized sandstone and will grow canyons, mirages and sage-brush successfully. When irrigated, it produces enormous crops, however.

Arizona is afflicted with a five-cent-a-mile railroad fare, which interferes considerably with the cause of the poor young candidate, and makes automobiles an economy instead of luxury. It is weird to look at, but healthy to breathe, and is filled with people who are proud of it—now that the bad men and worse Indians have proven fatal to each other.

Mrs. Claude Grahame White, formerly Miss Dorothy Taylor of New York, to-day was granted a divorce from her husband the aviator. LONDON, To-day.
Fort Vaux lying some five miles N. E. of Verdun which for a week past the French had been stubbornly defending against terrific onslaughts by Germans, has at last fallen into the hands of the Teutons according to Berlin. The men who defended the fortress at last surrendered to the Germans who also captured a large number of guns, machine guns, mine throwers. Paris, however, says the Fort was still in French hands early on Wednesday morning, but that since then it had been impossible to communicate with the Fort owing to the violence of the bombardment. Gains of considerable proportions by the Russians over the Teutonic Allies, by Turks over Russians, and by Germans over British are recorded in latest official communications from Petrograd, Constantinople and London. In the region of Verdun violent combats are in progress, while on the Austro-Italian line the Italians continue to hold the Austrians from further advances. In the fighting that is going on from Pripet Marshes to the Roumanian frontier the Russians in their big offensive movement have dislodged the Teutonic Allies from fortified positions and brought their aggregate of men captured up to about 41,000. They have also taken 77 guns, 134 machine guns, 40 bomb throwers. Among the men made prisoners are 900 officers. As an offset of Russian gains over the Teutonic Allies, however, Constantinople asserts in Asia Minor in the Kope-

Mountain district Russians have been driven eight kilometres eastward from positions extending over fourteen kilometres, suffering losses more than a thousand men killed and wounded. Fighting in this immediate vicinity covers a front of over 31 miles with Turks the aggressors and with a situation favourable to them. According to Constantinople, in addition in Mesopotamia, the Turks claim to have defeated and dispersed the Russian wings which were endeavouring to carry out enveloping movement against them near Khani-ken, north east of Bagdad, but Petrograd asserts Russians here have captured additional Turkish positions, put sabre several battalions of Turks and Germans. The British are still fighting desperately in the vicinity of Ypres. Both sides are using their artillery in heavy bombardments and their infantry in occasional attacks against the ruined village of Hooge, east of Ypres. Germans succeeded and captured a British front line of trenches, running through the village, but all their attacks elsewhere failed. Around Verdun, in the region of Hill 304, on the right bank of the Meuse from Damblon to Donaumont, bombardments continue intense. The Austrians again essayed violent attacks against the Italians in Upper Arsa Valley northeast of Assago but everywhere were repulsed. In the latter sector the Italians drove back the Austrians in a hand to hand conflict between Compo Mole Valley.

JUDGE HUGHES FAVOURITE.

CHICAGO, To-day.
Political leaders are predicting the nomination of Justice Charles E. Hughes to-night more than any time since the Republican National Convention began to assemble. They declare unless the accumulation of overwhelming circumstantial evidence fails to reflect the situation in its true light, the nomination of the Justice will come even sooner than predicted.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
With the exception of a brief official communication regarding the new offensive movements which give the barest details, almost no report received in regard to campaign of Russians being conducted on front of more than 250 miles, although it has every indication of being a major, the operation being carefully prepared, so far the story of campaign thus far has been kept from the world. Petrograd correspondents have been permitted to cable only a few despatches regarding expected political effects and other subsidiary features. They have been allowed to estimate the Austrian forces engaged but not the Russian, placing the former at about six hundred thousand men. Lack of information concerning the campaign is probably due to policy of General Brusiloff, Russian Commander on this front, been reported that his first acts on assuming command was to send correspondents back to Petrograd. The official Russian report stated that about twenty-five thousand men had been taken and to-day's reports indicate the capture of 15,000 additional men in intervening 24 hours. There have been no indications in regard to sections on front which principal successes have been won.

There is a general demand for internment of all enemy aliens in Britain without regarding age or sex immediately results from the death of Kitchener. There is a possibility of a political struggle in the back ground concerning the appointment of his successor, this lies in the fact that some believe the post should be held by a civilian, while others are for appointment from military of Sir Wm. BERLIN, To-day.
The following official issued to-day concerning the rescue made by German warships after the recent battle. After the sea battle the German naval forces rescued from the battle cruiser Queen Mary, one ensign, one man from the Indefatigable, two men from the torpedo boat destroyer Tipperary, seven men, including two wounded, from the destroyer Nestor, two officers, two deck officers and 75 men, including six wounded from the destroyer Nomad, four officers and sixty-eight men, including ten men wounded, from the destroyer Turbulent, and fourteen men all of them wounded. These 176 men were saved by our small cruisers and torpedo boats."

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

LONDON, To-day.
A memorial service for Earl Kitchener will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, June 13th, King George and Queen Mary will attend the service.

BRITISH LOST TRENCHES.

LONDON, To-day.
British trenches running through Haego have been captured by Germans, according to a British official issued last midnight, which reads: "Last night there were a heavy artillery bombardment on both sides east of Ypres fighting yesterday, the enemy succeeded in capturing our front line trenches running through the ruins of the Village of Haego, attacks against other positions on our lines failed."

GERMANS COMMENT ON KITCHENER.

BERLIN, To-day.
Newspapers devote much space to Earl Kitchener when they generally acknowledge he has been an organizer of great ability, but there seems to be no disposition to exaggerate importance of his death, or base particular hopes thereon. Leka Anzeiger commenting rather bitterly declares Kitchener's wars were mainly won against spearmen half naked, wild peoples, and that the Poor War was really won by interned women and children, permitting thousands to die. Count Von Revenslow, Tages Zeitung also indulges in personalities. Other papers, however, for the most part refrain from attacking Germany's dead opponent.

GERMAN DEFEAT IN EAST AFRICA.

LONDON, To-day.
Brigadier General Northey's column pursued the East African German New Uteung, capturing booty and prisoners. The invested Germans broke out at Nalema, suffering heavily. The German Commandant was made prisoner. Wounded and demoralized natives are welcoming the British whose losses were small.

AUSTRALIANS ENGAGED.

LONDON, To-day.
Attacks delivered early this morning against our trenches west of Hooge were repulsed. During the night our Australian troops entered German trenches east of Bois in inflicting loss and bringing back prisoners. Our troops also carried out a successful attack east of Clinchy. Hostile artillery and trench mortars were active again to-day against our trenches around Ovilieres, Hamel, Souches, Loos, and Neuve Chapelle.

GERMANS CAPTURE 700 MEN.

BERLIN, To-day.
Fort Vaux, one of the Verdun fortresses, has been captured by German troops, according to an official issued from headquarters to-day, which says the French garrison finally surrendered.

The Real Friend in a Large Bottle.

The greatest friend to sick people is the one that helps them toward health. But nearly every human friend had heretofore suggested a different means of regaining lost health due to nervousness, overwork, debility and worry. Now there are dozens of friends right here in your own town who will agree that the best friend to their health is Zotic—the health tonic. This already famous remedy for "nerves" and their consequent ailments is a combination of glycer phosphates—the actual elements of the human body—with Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine. A short two weeks of faithful trial will put you fair and square upon the path of bounding health. We know this so absolutely that if you cannot report real progress at the end of that time we will refund the purchase price. You who suffer and suffer and suffer should not delay beyond to-day. GERMAN CRUISERS SUNK.

LONDON, To-day.
A despatch from Amsterdam says a German official statement declares that the loss of the cruisers Lutzow and Rostock in the battle off Jutland was withheld for military reasons. Both ships are said to have sunk while on the way to harbor for repairs. This is the first mention of the loss of the cruiser Rostock.

SAW HAMPSHIRE DISASTER.

EDINBURGH, To-day.
The Scotsman prints the story of an eye witness of the disaster to the cruiser Hampshire. This man who saw the tragedy from the shore is quoted as saying the night was wet and stormy, but the light was good from the shore. A column of water was seen suddenly to rise from the Hampshire, followed by a great column of steam and smoke. In twenty minutes the ship had disappeared beneath the waves. A heavy sea was running at the time. Four boats were seen leaving the ship but were not again sighted.

PORT VAUX LOST.

PARIS, To-day.
Heavy fighting continues in the vicinity for Fort Vaux. The War Office report of to-day says the French troops still occupy the outskirts of the fort as well as trenches to the right and left of the works. The loss of the fort itself, of which an intimation was given in last night's report, is conceded. The announcement says the fort was abandoned by the garrison after it had been reduced to a heap of ruins by incessant bombardment of seven days. German attacks on the adjacent positions thus far have been unsuccessful.

GERMAN VERSION OF THE LOSSES.

BERLIN, To-day.
An official statement issued to-day gives the total loss of the German high sea forces during the battle of Jutland and up to the present time as one battle cruiser, one ship of the line of older construction, four small cruisers and five torpedo boats. The statement says of these losses: The battleship Pommern was launched in 1905; loss of cruiser Wisbaden, Elbing, Frankfurt and torpedo boats has already been reported in official statements, and for military reasons we refrained until now from making public the loss of the battle cruiser Lutzow and the cruiser Rostock.

PARIS, To-day.
Emile Faguet Academicien Meunier is dead, born 1847.

A Military Kitchen.

Installed in the kitchen to be used by the volunteers at the Cutting Rink, are two large military double furnaces cooking stoves, with raised ovens standing six feet from the floor. To these are proper attachments for regulating the desired quantity of heat. The stoves are so arranged that the heat coming from one combined with the heat from the other, makes cooking in the raised ovens a simple matter. There are also ten gas burners on which large boilers containing from ten to twenty gallons of water each can be heated at the same time. At the east end of the rooms is an enormous trough big enough for two men to bath with ease. Here the dishes are to be washed. A special place is provided for the respective cooking utensils and according to military kitchen rules every article pertaining thereto must be cleaned and dried immediately after use.

Speaking to the Sergeant in charge who by the way is a veteran of Gallipoli heights, having been put out of commission by a gun shot wound in the left knee, stated, when asked how the quarters compared with those in England, his reply was, "Why, this is a soldiers' palace."

Missing Trouters Reach the City.

Lived Five Days and Nights on Raw Trout—None the Worse for their Experience.

Private Kearney and Lancelot Ewing, the missing trouters, reached town on the special train for the volunteer search party, at 1.45 p.m. yesterday, after experiencing in no small measure, the life of Robinson Crusoe on the Island of Despair. For five days and four nights without a morsel of food, except raw trout that they caught when needed, the men were forced to live a primitive life. Throughout the days the men wandered they knew not where, and when night set in, it was then that Private Kearney's experiences gained on the battlefields of Gallipoli were of great value, so digging themselves in beneath the sheltering boughs of a large tree, and with the twinkling stars shining overhead, the men would sleep till early morning. They would then rise and seek their breakfast, and with their jack knives they would slice off the most delicate cuts from the speckled beauties which would be washed down by a cooling draught from the sparkling waters of a quiet brook. As each day approached the search for the track was sought with as much vigor as the first attempt, although the whistles of the passing trains could be heard, they were at a loss to know in what direction the sound came from. Not for one moment did either one of the missing men discourage the other by losing heart, but sang the old and new songs, told stories, and above all, joked over the bill of fare. Early yesterday morning when walking around the head of Angle Pond, a squad of volunteers with guide James Noseworthy, came across the missing trouters and gave them food and stimulants. A boat was taken up the pond, in which the men were placed, and rowed within a short distance of the train where they were taken on board. The families of Pte. Kearney and Lancelot Ewing, who spent many an anxious hour, are grateful to those who assisted in the search.

"MEASLES."—Keep a bottle of Stafford's Lotion on hand for bathing the eyes. Price 20c.

Corpse Sent Home.

By the cross-country express due here this evening, the body of William Dyer, late of Logy Bay, who was drowned recently in Boston Harbor, as already referred to in the Telegram, will arrive. It will be taken immediately to Logy Bay where the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon. The circumstances surrounding the death of the deceased young man who was 26 years of age, are mysterious. He had been engaged at poole fishing and it is surmised that he met his sad fate while at this venturesome avocation, his body being later found floating in Boston Harbor.

Annual Collection

For Belvidere and Mount Carmel Cemeteries.

Each evening during the week numbers of our Roman Catholic friends may be seen visiting the cemeteries, improving and beautifying the family plots in which rest the mortal remains of their dear departed, preparatory to the annual Mortuary Mass which will be held for the repose of their souls, and which will be announced in due course from the Altars in the various churches. On Sunday last, it was announced that the annual collection would be taken up in all the churches on next Sunday, the 11th inst., and we have no hesitation in saying that the collection will prove to be a record one. For such a laudable object, the generosity of the Catholic people is proverbial, as few amongst them but have some near and dear relative or friend laid to rest in the sacred ground of Belvidere or Mount Carmel. It is evident that the owners of the family plots devote great care and attention in beautifying the ground, but this of itself is not sufficient to make the surroundings harmonize with their laudable efforts. New walks have to be opened up, debris removed and many other improvements have to be made under the supervision of the energetic care-takers of the two cemeteries. The committees have given for many years and still continue to give their time and attention in looking after the requirements, and in making such improvements as will meet with the approval of the Catholic citizens of St. John's, as well as the numerous Newfoundlanders who visit the home of their birth during the summer months who cannot but be well pleased with the care and attention that have been displayed in looking after the resting places of their departed relatives, friends and acquaintances. But to accomplish all these matters successfully, requires money to strengthen the hands of the committees, and it is owing to the Roman Catholic people of St. John's being aware of these facts, that they have always in the past, and will again on Sunday, generously respond to the call and make the collection of 1916, the record one, far in excess of all previous collections.

Many Deaths From Measles.

The outbreak of measles in the city is reaching an alarming stage and within the past week not less than twenty deaths have occurred from the disease, the victims in each case being children of tender years. In one family on the Southside two children died at the one time. City physicians assert that the present spread of measles is of a light type, but that when patients contract it they have to remain in doors.

Earl Kitchener of Khartoum.

By OBSERVER.

If we had been in danger of taking the war too much for granted and a matter of course, the events of the past week ought to have awakened us rudely from any feeling of indifference. Hardly had the depression caused by the first news of the North Sea battle been succeeded by reassurance and even satisfaction at its result, when the whole Empire was profoundly shocked to learn of the loss of the very first of its military men. Unhappily, on this point there can be no reassurance: Kitchener is gone, and we have lost a great man and a greater leader.

That his tragic death and the loss of all three ships were the work of torpedoes, there can be little doubt. His projected visit to Russia must have become known to Germany, and the whole attack manoeuvred much in the same way as the Lusitania crime. The enemy will enjoy a short-lived jubilation; their success will but stiffen our resolution. Fortunately, the disaster comes at a time when it might be said that the great man's work was done, or so far completed that his success would only have to follow in the path marked out by him. Whatever his faults, and with whatever bitterness his critics have assailed him, no one will seriously deny the magnitude of the services rendered by Earl Kitchener. Now, after the lapse of nearly two years, when every department of every branch of the service has shaken down into well-ordered method and regularity, we may be apt to forget the exact nature of those services. The position to which he was called almost immediately after the outbreak of the war, that of Secretary of State for War, was then filled by the Prime Minister himself, who in the midst of the political upheaval of the unhappy Irish troubles, preferred taking the responsibility upon himself to entrusting it to another. The declaration of war swept away as if by magic the danger of civil strife in Ireland, and the nation turned as one man to face the task before it.

It became apparent at once that we were leaderless. Under the English constitution, the only office which combined control of military affairs with direct responsibility to Parliament and the country was that of Secretary for War, and it was obvious that the man selected to fill this post would have far the largest share in the conduct of the war as far as Britain was concerned. At first Haldane was mentioned, and if we remember correctly, he was on the point of being appointed, when the press, led clamorously by the Northcliffe organs, demanded Kitchener. The demand became universal, and Kitchener was appointed. That the Northcliffe press only spoke for the whole country was decisively proved last year, when the same powers endeavoured to compass his recall with the same insistence with which they had brought about his appointment, and succeeded merely in covering themselves with ignominy.

It was in these first anxious weeks and months that Kitchener's great work was done. Apart altogether from his actual services, it was no small matter to have the man in whom everyone had confidence, who knew his mind and spoke it, and who was entirely unfettered by political associations. Knowing the importance of it, he demanded from the first, and was given, almost autocratic power. Without a moment's delay, he set himself to the task of creating, equipping, organising and training the mighty armies which to-day are Britain's glory and his. The man himself is gone, but the armies are there, a living monument to his genius. Would to heaven, the universal thought will be, that he lived to see his work crowned by the ultimate triumph of the forces he did so much to call into being, and whose part in the great drama he had planned with such patience and foresight! But it was not to be.

It is as the creator of this great army that Kitchener is at present best known and celebrated. But his duties embraced far more than this. While he was pre-eminently a soldier, he was no mean statesman. Witness his journey to the East and Greece and his famous interview with King Constantine. What a contrast was his direct and masterful dealing with the devious and dilatory methods of so many diplomats! We have not yet had the co-operation of Greece, but we may well owe it to Kitchener that she was not then ranged against us.

There is little misgiving that his place can be filled, but that is not to say that his loss is any the less. Britain has not been so abundantly blessed with capable directors at the head of affairs to dispense easily with the services of such a leader. Moreover, the world at large knows little or nothing of the real part played in the great war councils of the Allies by each representative, and we have no idea how far their whole policy has been influenced by Earl Kitchener's opinions. That the mystery of the tremendous reserve army in Britain, its idleness at present and its ultimate use, was in his keeping and due largely to his ideas and wishes, there cannot be the least doubt. The real worth of the man will, like so many other things, only be known when the war is over and its history written.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X-Lamp and GASTHEAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.
