RUMFORD

THE WHOLESOME BAKING POWDER

"A GOLD LADEN DERELICT" OR The Impecunious Adventuress.

CHAPTER XXVII
AFTER THREE YEARS.

The worthy Mr. Crudge was so taken aback by this alluring prospect that he said nothing, for the moment. He merely stood still and grinned his appreciation of Markham's kindness.

Kenneth laughed. "Oh, I see," he commented. "You decline—"

"Oh, no, sir, I don't—if it's all the same to you!" Crudge hastily interposed.

"I was about to say," continued Kenneth, assuming the lofty air of a judge on the bench, "that you decline to answer, by advice of counsel. But since you have expressed yourself otherwise, Crudge, and have virtually assented to my suggestion, I hereby sentence you to two weeks' holiday, on full salary. Finish your brief first, to-day, if possible, and let me not see your face here to-morrow. Now, have that youngascal Tom telephone to the station right away."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Markham."

"Don't thank me, Crudge. I'm too busy to respond to a vote of thanks."

As if to countenance his words, Kenneth sat down again at his desk and made a pretense of examining the correspondence which still lay upon it in neatly arranged heaps. Mr. Crudge withdrew, with his face wreathed in smiles and with murmured expressions of gratitude upon his lips. After a few minutes he returned, bearing a card.

"Another client, eh?" asked Kenneth, looking up from a note he had begun writing to his sister.

"No, sir; merely a visitor," Crudge replied, handing him the card. "Mr. Jarvis Nevil."

"Oh! Well, show him in, Crudge." While Crudge was speaking to Jarvis Nevil in the outer office, Kenneth finished his note, and he rose politely as the door of the sanctum again swung open to admit his professional rival, who seldom thus honored him with a personal visit. The two men shook hands cordially; although they were often adversaries in the courtroom, they were now friends by virtue of mutual liking and respect.

"Awfully busy, I suppose, Markham?" began Jarvis.

"Not more so than usual. Glad to see you, anyway. Take that chair, if you don't mind waiting just a moment, while I address this envelope. The letter's got to go this morning. Have a cigar?"

"Thanks!" Jarvis accepted one, lighted it and waited contentedly. "I won't take your time, Markham," he announced, when Kenneth had sealed and stamped the note. "Fact is, I just dropped in to say good-by to you, for the present. I'm off to America next week."

"To the States?"

"Yes. I've taken on a big case for Mr. Vanderleer, concerning some shares in Mexican mines which bid fair to go to smash in the demoralized state of that country at present, and I think I can settle the difficulty for him."

"But that's rather out of your element, isn't it? Why doesn't he retain some big New York lawyer?"

"He has an odd preference for me," replied Jarvis, with a quizzical smile. Kenneth favored him with a searching glance.

"I suspect, Nevil," said he, "that Mr. Vanderleer's preference in this matter is largely dictated by his fair daughter. Come, be honest and admit that I've hit the nail on the head."

"Meaning me?"

"No discredit either to you or to Mr. Vanderleer," declared Kenneth, laughing. "But every one knows how greatly you've grown, during the last year, in the estimation of both Mr. Vanderleer and his daughter. Why, Lady Beauclerc was telling me yesterday that you are high in favor with Miss Vanderleer, and that there is a rumor—"

"Oh, come, you don't mean to tell me that Lady Beauclerc condescended to gossip about my affairs?"

"She actually did, 'pon my word. Why not? You are a celebrity, a legal lion, my dear fellow; and, besides, Lady Beauclerc seems to have taken a great fancy for Miss Vanderleer. You'd laugh if you could hear her speaking of the young lady."

"Why? What does she say? Tell me." Although a gentleman born, Jarvis Nevil was not above the British middle-class attitude toward the nobility; therefore, he was agog with curiosity to know how he and his friends were regarded by a representative so distinguished as Lady Beauclerc.

"Tell me what she said," he repeated naively, when Kenneth hesitated.

"She said to me, 'Really, you know, the girl is charming, very well-bred, and of an old New York family. I'm positively fond of her, and I'm so glad she has fully recovered from her girlish infatuation for that unspeakable little cad, Arthur Ashley.'"

Jarvis Nevil's face flushed scarlet at these words.

"Love in the Wilds"

—OR—

The Romance of a South African Trading Station.

CHAPTER I
AFTER FORTY YEARS.

Stooping to recover his hat, that had fallen from his head of short, auburn hair, that, try hard as he would to brush it straight, would form itself into little crisp curls upon his white forehead, he said, with a kind, cheery laugh:

"Well, John, knocked off, eh? Finished the three-acre, Will?"

The men touched their foreheads and, with respectful answers, passed on.

"Maester" Hugh, for it was he of whom the men had been speaking, whistled to his dogs and struck out in the direction of the huge house that now loomed black and grim against the sunset.

As old John had intimated, it would have been difficult to have found a nobler place than Dale House, or a more unhappy man than its owner, for Squire Darrell was blessed, or, rather, cursed with a passionately hot temper and a disposition that always and ever insisted upon seeing things in their worst light, if they had a bad one, and making a bad light for them if they hadn't one.

The stalwart youth striding up the lane this particular summer evening was his only son—as passionate and headstrong as his father, though with a more generous disposition and a kinder heart.

Scarcely a day passed without the two Darrells coming to words, or "tiffin," as the tenants called it, and the continual wordy war had heightened the elder man's moroseness and bestowed the shadow of a frown upon the face of the younger.

The clew to the continual ill temper of the squire could be traced to a very definite cause.

Down in the hollow, at the base of the hill upon which the Dale stood, was another stately mansion, owned by a Miss Rebecca Goodman.

Miss Rebecca Goodman, having no father or mother, was her own mistress and owner of an extremely rich estate, as well as a goodly sum in the three per cents.

Besides being wealthy, Miss Rebecca was—well, yes, rather old, though she might have looked upon "thirty verging upon forty" as a very juvenile age.

Hugh could remember her a fair-haired, insipid-looking girl when he was but a child, and, consequently, might be pardoned for refusing to fall in love with the rich mistress of Ashleigh House, although she used all her woman's arts to snare him; for Miss Rebecca had given her timid, faded heart to the stalwart Hugh, and spent the best part of her time in watching him, with the aid of an antiquated field-glass, from her bedroom window as he rode or walked over the Dale farm.

The squire, like most old men who have lived past the golden time of love and romance into the days of money-worship, thought it a particularly good match for his son, not so much on account of the money as of the estates, which bordered upon the Darrells.

The old man longed to see the barrier broken down and the rich fields rolled into one ownership. But, much to his astonishment, and, of course, anger, Maester Hugh, when the squire broached the topic, at first stared with surprise and then exclaimed:

"Marry Rebecca Goodman! She is old enough to be my mother! Not I, sir."

This was rather an exaggeration. Miss Rebecca was not quite so aged.

For a hundred times the squire had returned to the charge and Hugh, firm as a rock in his refusal to make love to the wealthy Rebecca, had at last begun to hate even her name most heartily, and to frown heavily when his father mentioned it.

Still, the old man did not despair, and scarcely a day passed without his returning to the charge, sometimes with anger, at other times with a weak and comical attempt at coaxing.

Hugh could always tell when the latter mode of attack might be expected by the sudden and unnatural good humor on the part of the squire for some little time previous.

Yet the father was proud of his son, and loved nothing better than to hear the neighboring squires, when deep in the second bottle, sing the praises of sturdy Hugh, and tell how he rode the fox across Dale Hollow and over the stream, or brought down the birds at a score a quarter with his unerring aim; for Hugh Darrell was known throughout the country as a monarch in the way of strength; and if a yokel wished to praise a sturdy cart horse or cry up his terrier, he knew no higher laudation than "As strong as Maester Hugh."

Nor did the son lack love for his father, who, setting aside the perpetual storm of invectives that he hurled at his son's head on every possible occasion, had not been an unkind parent.

Money there was for Hugh, plenty and to spare; and the old man poured it out for him with no illiberal hand; but Hugh was of an independent spirit, and was rather given to look upon gold as dross, and sometimes envied the poorest laborer on the estate, who, with the sweat of his brow, earned not only his weekly wage, but, more precious far, his liberty.

Often when the carved rafters of the dining-hall rang with his father's shrill voice, raised to a tempest of passion over some trifle, Hugh would stride off to the village, and, sitting beside one of the laborers or game-keepers, would smoke his cigar and wait until the clouds summoned by his father's words had cleared from his brow.

Only this morning there had been a storm, blown up by a discovery of the squire's that Hugh's dogs had run through his pet rosety, and Hugh had gone out with his favorite hounds and stayed out, disregarding luncheon and even dinner—the Englishman's favorite meal.

Just as he reached the terrace and ascended the stone steps his brow, which had been smooth and bright in the lane, darkened again, and, throwing his cap upon the hall table, he pushed open the dining-room door, prepared.

Fashion Plates.

A GOOD STYLE FOR A SLENDER FIGURE.

Pattern 3132 was selected for this design. It is cut in 3 Sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 will require 6 yards of 30 inch material. As here shown, crepe de chine was used in a new shade of blue. Embroidery in self color forms the decoration. Satin, serge, duvetyne, taffeta, velvet and poplin are attractive for this style. The skirt measures about 1 1/2 yard at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

A SMART DRESS FOR THE GROWING GIRL.

Pattern 3155 was selected for this dress. It is cut in 4 Sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. For a 14 year size 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material will be required. In taffeta, serge, linen or shantung, this model will be pleasing. It may also be effectively developed in plaid suiting and serge of one color; likewise in voile, challie, toulard or batiste. The tulle may be omitted. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

Turkish Treaty Must Be Carried Out.

Allies Will Use Force if Necessary --Supreme Council Discuss German Affairs -- British Navy had U Boats Muzzled in 1917 -- Chicago Strike Negotiations Failed-- King and Queen Attend Society Wedding.

WILL ENFORCE THREAT AT POINT OF BAYONET.

SAN REMO, April 21. The Supreme Council of the Allies is fully prepared to execute the Turkish Treaty by military force, if necessary. The Council accepted today a plan drawn for employment of Allies armies by Marshal Foch, Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, British Chief of Staff and General Badoglio, Italian Chief of Staff, who were present at the morning session.

GERMANY TO-DAY.

SAN REMO, April 21. Discussion of what shall be asked of Germany and how, what is asked shall be executed, will be discussed by the Supreme Council to-morrow. Tension between the British and French delegations on this subject has been considerable. The French are declared to feel deeply that they have been the greatest sufferers from Germany's omission in fulfilling her Treaty obligations, that Germany's retention of war material obliges France to remain armed, and that the reduction of coal deliveries keeps an important fraction of French industries idle. They say that Germany during the last nine months has indicated clearly to the French mind that she intends to do nothing she cannot be compelled to do, and that unless the Allies sharply warn her, Germany will default on the essential clauses of the Treaty counting upon escaping from further penalties or upon a revision of the Treaty greatly disadvantageous to the French. The British position is that although Germany has defaulted in several extremely important respects and that she must be required to fulfill her obligations she can be made to do so without further occupation of her territories and by severe economic restriction. British statements are understood to look askance on French aims and feel that leadership among the Allies is being disputed.

BRITISH GET THE CREDIT, ANYWAY.

WASHINGTON, April 21. Rear Admiral Sims' criticisms of the United States Navy's conduct of the war were based on the false assumption that the combatting of the German submarine campaign was the main object of the United States, Captain Pratt, former Assistant Chief of Operators, testified to-day before the Senate Investigating Commission. The British got the submarine situation under control in 1917, before the United States could have assisted, the witness declared, and held it to the end.

FOLLOWING HIS MASTER'S EXAMPLE.

STOCKHOLM, April 21. (Associated Press)—Wolfgang Kapp, leader of the recent uprising in Germany, has written to the Swedish Government asking permission to remain in Sweden as a political fugitive. The letter says he desires sending for his wife and daughter and to reside in some small country place and engage in scientific research. Kapp promises to obtain from political activity.

ROYALTY AT WEDDING.

LONDON, April 21. (Canadian Associated Press)—Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria, Prince Albert and the Duke of Connaught, who had just arrived in London after spending the winter on the Continent, attended the wedding of Capt. Harold MacMillan and Lady Dorothy Cavendish to-day at St. Margaret's Westminster. A reception was afterwards held at Lansdowne House.

STRIKERS ARE STUBBORN.

CHICAGO, April 21. Striking railroad men in Chicago district refused to-day to vote on the question of returning to work. All efforts of a committee of strike leaders to obtain action failed.

HER ONLY HOPE.

BERLIN, April 21. Adolf Koessler, the new minister of Foreign Affairs, in an interview with Vorwaerts to-day declared that Germany must strictly fulfill the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles, for in that way only could she obtain revision of the Treaty.

WILL STAND BY POLICY.

LONDON, April 21. Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-day that he intended to stand or fall by his original proposal to increase the Eves Tax to sixty per cent. from the present forty per cent. rate. The Chancellor said, however, that if proposals subsequently were introduced for the taxation of war acquired wealth, the extra twenty per cent. would be re-mitted.

Telegraphists' Tales.

A single telegraphist was working a lonely station in the Sudan. Finding the solitude getting on his nerves, he tried to think of some scheme for getting a shift. At last, in desperation, he wired to headquarters, "Please send relief at once, AAA Station surrounded by lions, wolves, and tigers." Back came the unfeeling reply, "Reference your report AAA. No wolves in the Sudan." Nothing daunted, the telegraphist answered, "Reference my previous report AAA. Please cancel wolves."

Some telegraphists attain a much greater speed in operating than others, and sometimes fail to allow for the slower working of their weaker brethren. One such man, at a station in the wild and woody West of U.S.A., had a reputation for being a "flyer." He had an exceptionally long message of three thousand words to transmit to a small station situated about thirty miles away. The operator at the other station was a novice, and a bad "reader" into the bargain. The "flyer" just shoved his switch across, and began to send at a terrific speed, without giving any pauses to see how the receiving operator was progressing. Just as he reached the two thousand and nine hundred and ninety-ninth word, a dishevelled figure drew up outside the station, flung himself on his sweating horse, dashed into the instrument-room, and presented his revolver at the telegraphist's head, shouting: "If you don't go back to the beginning, you blighter, I'll blow your brains out!" It was the telegraphist from the other station!

Edward Morrison Gained 25 Pounds by Taking Tanlac

For Three Years He Suffered After Every Meal And Got Too Weak to Work—Is Back On Job.

"I had actually lost twenty-five pounds in weight and was too weak to hit a lick of work at the time I got hold of Tanlac, six months ago, but in a few weeks' time I had gained every ounce of my lost weight back and I have not missed a day from work since."

The above remarkable statement was made a few days ago by Edward Morrison, of 888 Barrington Street, Halifax, a well-known shipwright employed at the Halifax Dock Yards.

"For three years before I commenced taking Tanlac my stomach bothered me so I didn't know what it was to sit down and eat a single meal without suffering afterwards. My appetite was so extremely poor that I went for days at a time without wanting to even look at anything to eat, and when I did force down a little something, no matter how light, it always disagreed with me. My stomach burned like fire and I bloated up with gas until it nearly choked me. My stomach was sour all the time and often I became so nauseated I couldn't even keep down a glass of milk. I was badly constipated and had a mean taste in my mouth most of the time. I fell off twenty-five pounds in weight and got so weak I had to give up my job and quit work altogether. I went to a hospital and stayed there four weeks but when I came out I was as bad off as ever, in fact, my stomach was at its worst and I was in intense suffering day and night."

"Last September I made up my mind to give Tanlac a trial as I kept hearing so much about it. Well, I thought it might give me a little temporary relief, but it never once entered my mind that it would make a clean sweep of all my troubles and put me back on my feet feeling like a man made all over again. Why, in no time I had a fine appetite and was eating things I had not been able to touch for years. The indigestion and constipation left me completely and I haven't been bothered in any way whatever since. I now weigh as much as I did before my troubles started and I am feeling as fine as I ever did and I am working hard every day. I am in absolutely perfect health and when I say Tanlac will do the work I know what I'm talking about."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv.

House of Assembly.

Immediately following the return of the members from the Council Chamber (yesterday afternoon) and directly the Speaker had taken the chair, Sir Michael Cashin, leader of the Opposition, rose in his place for the purpose of moving a resolution. The Minister of Justice, at once claimed a point of order and an interesting discussion took place between learned legal members on both sides of the House as to whether the Speaker should report to the House the previous proceedings in the Upper Chamber before any business could be transacted. The ruling of His Honor was that as the House had not been notified of his acceptance by His Excellency, and therefore was not properly constituted until such announcement had been made, nothing could be transacted in the way of parliamentary business. He, however, at once intimated that the Governor had confirmed his selection and granted all the ancient privileges belonging to the Commons. The House being now constitutionally formed, Sir Michael Cashin moved the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, the Prime Minister, the leader of this House, has been accused upon the oath of a former Member of this House, of criminal misconduct in relation to the election of a Member hereof;

AND WHEREAS the Governor in Council has announced an intention to appoint a Commission under the Public Enquiry Act, to take evidence upon oath, and to report its findings thereon in relation to the truth or otherwise of the said charge;

RESOLVED, that in the opinion of this House it should not proceed with the transaction of public business under the leadership of an accused person awaiting trial;

AND THEREFORE that this House should now adjourn for one week to give opportunity for the said inquiry and report.

Profusing his remarks to the resolutions with a congratulatory reference to the newly elected Speaker, the leader of the Opposition pointed out that this was a remarkable session, inasmuch as the Prime Minister was resting under a serious charge, and his presence in the House was inconsistent with the traditions of the House and a violation of both moral and political decency. The accusation against Mr. Squires was of weeks standing and no measures had been taken by the leader of the Government to deny the allegations, but within the past few days that announcement was made that a Royal Commission to investigate the charges had been appointed. That being so, the speaker did not consider it proper for the Prime Minister, while under a cloud, to attend the sessions until such time as the Commission had finished its work and reported, and should the House negative the resolution, or should the Prime Minister persist in holding his seat, the Opposition members would see that no business be done, until the report and findings of the Commission had been made public.

Mr. J. R. Bennett (St. John's West), seconded the resolutions, and in doing so felt that for the sake of the dignity of the House and the personal honor of the Prime Minister that the latter should absent himself from the sittings while the Commission were investigating the Woodford affidavit charges. More was involved in these charges than was perhaps apparent to the superficial observer. They touched not only the honor of the Dominion but that of the whole Empire, and there should be no undue or vexatious delay in clearing the matter up. Mr. Bennett took the opportunity of offering his felicitations to Mr. Speaker, who he was sure would right nobly maintain the traditions of his predecessors and add to the dignity of the chair.

It was noticeable that Mr. Bennett suffered many uncalled for interruptions during his speech, and the suggestion was made by people in the House that the party backs were present in force. The conduct of the gallery yesterday was a most glaring exhibition of partisanship.

Mr. Walsh (Placentia and St. Mary's), begged to offer his congratulations to Mr. Speaker. He supported the resolution before the House, and claiming that by the Woodford charges a serious blow had been dealt the very foundation of the Constitution. He believed that the leader of the Government would welcome the opportunity given him and withdraw from the sessions pending the findings of the Commission.

Mr. MacDonnell (St. George's), desired to add his congratulations to those already accorded Mr. Speaker on his election as the first commoner. He was in complete accord with the tenor of the resolutions moved by Sir Michael Cashin and thought that they should be taken at face value by the House. The resolutions were not directed at the Prime Minister personally but against the position itself. The House should be, and is, concerned with the dignity of the office and in a matter of this sort an attempt should be made to divorce all considerations of personality or party politics from the main facts. The leader of the Government is under a cloud and he should not make procedure more difficult by persisting in attending the sessions. His exalted office demanded that he absent himself from the House until the charges made against him had been investigated and reported upon, and he was further of opinion that no business should be proceeded with until the whole of the allegations had been cleared up. No respect could be guaranteed for the laws if the law makes themselves become law breakers, and laws enacted under present conditions in this House could not be expected to receive that confidence which the people have in Legislative Acts of Parliament. The Prime Minister should be free from every trace of suspicion in the premises. He should be above reproach and until this charge of misdemeanor was thoroughly investigated, he should follow the course suggested.

The Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Warren), did not enter the debate but to make a statement only. The charges were so well known that it was not necessary for him to deal with them, with the details he had nothing to do. He objected to the business of the House being suspended, and quoted the British axiom of legal jurisprudence that a man is innocent (of crimes) until he is proven guilty. He had been called upon to start the machinery of the law, but refrained from doing so because he had come to the conclusion that there was nothing criminal in it, even if the Prime Minister had been guilty. He also fortified himself with another opinion. He had cabled the facts to the Dominion's solicitors in London and asked them for an opinion and he had been advised that it was not a criminal offence "under the Newfoundland law." There was, therefore, no foundation for action so far as the Department of Justice was concerned.

The Prime Minister, (Hon. Mr. Squires) started his defence by playing to the gallery. He was glad to have been afforded this opportunity of dealing with the ST. PATRICK'S DAY allegations of Mr. William Woodford. He deprecated the attempts that had been made to keep him from entering the House as Prime Minister and charged that he had been unjustly and hostilely criticized by Opposition members and Opposition press. He had remained quiet (a hard job for Mr. Squires) for weeks, but now his chance had come. In a most theatrical manner he denounced past actions of other men and declared that the Commission to be appointed would go away back into political records and dig up all they could find against others who had done things. Loudly and harshly he declaimed against the leader of the Opposition for his alleged negligence in not demanding an enquiry into the Lornias and Tobacco charges. The Woodford charge was not true in fact, and he would no more deny them than he would get out of his car to bark at a dog that was in his way. And yet his next words gave direct contradiction to this statement in fact. He did not ask Mr. Woodford to resign, did not offer him a job or financial consideration of any kind "as an inducement to him to vacate his seat." It was quite true Woodford had resigned his seat, but only because of such pressure as his party may have been responsible for. As to the Commission, he said he was unable to say how soon it would be appointed, neither could he say how many members of the House would come within the scope of its enquiries. It was proposed to enquire not only into this matter, but into all deals of recent years, where members had changed sides, and the circumstances surrounding them. The Government did not pose as a bunch of purists, but it stood for purity in public life.

The Prime Minister followed other gentlemen of the House in referring in complimentary terms to His Honor the Speaker.

The people in the galleries and outside the bar became very demonstrative, so much so that the Speaker rose in his chair and administered a severe reprimand, warning the demonstrators that he would not tolerate such conduct, and if necessary, in the event of a repetition he would use the power placed in his hands by the rules of the House, and order the interrupters removed. This had a salutary effect and no further applause of a wild and unruly nature was heard. It speaks volumes for the courage of the Speaker that his remonstrance and warning came at a time when the applause was for the Prime Minister, who could not have foreseen that the planiffs of the crowd upon his eloquence if slightly hysterical exuberance, would be so thoroughly frowned upon and checked by His Honor.

Mr. Fox (St. John's East) added his congratulations to the Speaker and in supporting the resolutions before the House, said the matter was not one wherein personalities should enter, and the Prime Minister had shown poor taste in introducing them. The Minister of Justice had said the offence was not criminal. That may or may not be so, but it is not the important point. What is of importance is that it is a breach against the proprieties of this House, a political crime and an offence against public morals. The charge itself will be dealt with by the Tribunal, but he pointed for the purpose; but the best traditions of the House will not be conserved by having its business done under the leadership of a man under a cloud. If the Prime Minister considered his own interests, as well as the interests of the country, he would concur in the resolutions and have no business transacted until the investigation had been concluded and he was exonerated. Failing that the only honourable course for him to adopt was to vacate his seat until the Tribunal had handed in its report. In his address the Prime Minister had absolutely begged the question, while his personal references to Sir Michael Cashin came with very poor grace. Mr. Squires said that unlike himself he did not have a commission appointed to go into the Lornias and Tobacco cases; but if memory served, the hon. gentleman himself had been charged in this House by a present colleague and minister in his cabinet with receiving certain moneys, and he had taken no unlawful means to have an inquiry into the justice or injustice of the charges. The Prime Minister had referred to enquiries into charges against members of the Opposition. He had not particularised, but so far as he (Mr. Fox) was concerned there were no charges against him, and he could use the language so frequently on the lips of the hon. gentleman himself and "Thank God that he was not as other men." Evasions and personalities were not what the House wanted. The matter affected the good name of the House, and the members were in honor bound to protect it.

Mr. Sullivan (Placentia and St. Mary's) was thoroughly in accord with the sentiment and expressions of the last speaker. The occurrence with which the resolutions dealt, was a reflection on the morality of the House, and he trusted that the Prime Minister, against whom the accusations were directed, would co-operate in clearing up the matter. No other stand than the one taken could have been adopted by the Opposition. The country expected it of them and they would be false to their constituents had they acted otherwise. The Minister of Justice stated that he had asked for and received, by cable, legal advice on the matter at issue from an eminent legal authority in England, who gave it as his opinion that the offence was not a crime. He should have the correspondence so that the House could see what had been cabled. It was rather late for the Prime Minister to come in with a statement, and he doubted if he would have made it now only that he had been forced. Mr. Sullivan read the resolutions adopted at the citizens' meeting, and said they provided the reason for supporting that now before the chair.

Sir John Crosbie (Port de Grave), wished also to associate himself with his colleagues in support of the resolutions moved by Sir M. P. Cashin. He referred to the nasty insinuations thrown across the floor of the House by the Prime Minister who had said things this afternoon that were very much better left unsaid. Insinuations and innuendoes were no new thing to the Prime Minister, as he had been carrying on that game for six months past or longer. He thought he would be in jail long ago according to the remarks of the Premier in the general and bye-elections. Chartered accountants were brought down here to go into the public departments and find out the graft and still no sign of jail. He wanted to say that when he went to the Penitentiary he would have company in going, but all his company would not be composed of Opposition members. He had stayed home all the past winter and forfeited his annual trip to be ready for the trials which would land him in jail. He advised the Prime Minister to remember the Scripture which saith, "He that is without sin let him cast the first stone." If this were put into practice he would guarantee there would be no stones cast around this House. He had seen lots of stuff printed in the Daily Star that was not fit to read, and as Mr. Squires assumed the role of preacher and purist he must first sow the seed himself and begin by sowing it in the Daily Star whose columns contain his contributions. If the Government has any good legislation for the country he will support it; if it is not good he will oppose it. Reference was made in the Speech from the Throne to the Fishery Regulations. If regulations to be introduced are the right thing he will support them; if they are the same as what we now have, we will oppose them. The present Government party had gone to the country and beaten the party with which he was identified. There it should have ended, but the Government party couldn't take their victory, and in the first three weeks after the general election resorted to all kinds of filth and dirt to try and down defeated opponents. And he had no hesitation in saying that the man who is responsible for using the columns of a newspaper, hiding behind the editor, to print filth, dirty abuse, is the worst kind of a cur. The resolutions before the House simply asked for adjournment for a week in which to let the Royal Commission report its findings as to the innocence or guilt of the Prime Minister. He thought it indecent to do business with a man in charge who is under a very dark cloud. He therefore gave the resolution his hearty support.

Mr. W. J. Higgins (St. John's East), had not intended speaking at first, but Mr. Squires, when referring to what he, the Premier, termed "The St. Patrick's Day Affidavit" of Mr. Woodford, had turned his fierce eyes on him. He could thank the Premier for giving him an opportunity of supporting the resolution. If Mr. Squires thought that by using theatrical language and "making eyes," he could frighten the Opposition, he had another thing coming to him. There should be no personal feelings exhibited in connection with this serious case, but from what the Leader of the Government had said, there was going to be nothing else. There was not an unkind word in the resolution which should be welcomed by anyone. The House wanted no more than to have its rights safeguarded. Why should business be done while the Leader of the House was resting under a cloud? The integrity of the House is at stake. He would vote for the resolution.

The latter was then read by the clerk (time 6:25 o'clock) and defeated on division by a strict party vote of 23 to 12. Immediately after the Speech from the Throne had been read by the Speaker, the Prime Minister moved the following resolution: "RESOLVED that this House desires to record the expression of its deep regret on the death since last session of the Legislature of the Honourable George Skelton, A. F. Goodridge and John Harvey, some time members of the Honourable Legislative Council.

"RESOLVED—that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the relatives of the deceased Honourable Gentlemen."

In moving the resolution the Prime Minister traced the careers of the three deceased gentlemen and outlined the splendid services they had rendered to the Legislature and the country.

The Leader of the Opposition, Sir Michael Cashin, in seconding the resolution, referred in eulogistic terms of the three late lamented legislators whose memory will be for long held in reverence. Dr. Skelton lived a long life of service and did much in the Council to help the country in general. Hon. A. F. Goodridge he knew intimately for many years, for he was for a long period a resident of Ferryland district. In Hon. John Harvey the country had lost one of the foremost of its legislators and business men. In concluding, Sir Michael asked the House to stand while he repeated aloud, in Latin, the De Profundis or 130th Psalm. The whole House and visitors stood reverently with bowed heads while this was repeated. The resolution was then carried by a unanimous standing vote.

To Lieut. H. Small (Burgoo and La Poile) and Sgt. P. F. LeGrow (Bay de Verde), fell the honor of moving and seconding the appointment of a Select Committee to draft a reply to the Speech from the Throne. The gallant members, who appeared in military uniform, were given a warm reception by members on both sides of the House, being frequently applauded. The young members succeeded in making their maiden speeches creditable ones and at the close of proceedings became the recipients of general congratulations.

Hon. R. A. Squires, Colonial Secretary, tabled a number of reports and gave notice of bills, the Minister of Justice also giving notice of bills. The Minister of Marine also gave notice of a bill.

Notices of question were tabled by Messrs. Cashin and Crosbie, after which adjournment was taken until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE TRUE PATRIOT.

To deny that there is any such thing as the high cost of living, to assert that the whole trouble comes from the cost of living—as every now and then some paradox-loving writer tries to do—seems absurd. Of course the cost of living has gone up, a great deal faster than the average man's salary (I am not thinking now of those classes of workers who by force and threats have pushed up their own wages at the expense of other men).

But, at the same time, there is a tendency to spend even more than one needs to spend to have what we need to have "befo de wah."

Here is an example of the sort of thing I mean.

Price Was Not to Be Mentioned.

A man told me that he and his wife went to a hotel in a certain city and asked for a room. The clerk handed him the pen to register and called the bell-boy to take the bags. Evidently the question of price was not to be mentioned. But the man was not of the sort who is ashamed to ask how much a thing is before he buys it, and he asked what the charge was.

"Ten dollars a day per person," said the clerk.

The man could perfectly well pay that, but he didn't think the accommodations which he had gotten at that hotel in times past were worth it.

"Too much," he said, and laid down his pen.

Is There Anyone More Haughty?

"Of course," said the clerk in the haughty manner of his kind. "We have cheaper rooms. There are some for $8 and $7."

They took the rooms and found them satisfactory.

Now a great many men would not have asked "How much," and would of course, have been given the $10 rooms. Then they would have gone away to talk, half indignantly, half proudly. (Can't you see that this sort of pride in the voices of those who complain about high prices they have paid, at the high cost of living?)

In fact, the way the above story happened to be told was that another man had spoken of that hotel and said that the rate was $10 a day.

Shoes that Used to Cost $5.

If you go into a shop and ask for shoes, the clerk will doubtless show some of the shoes which represent not only the greater cost of leather but the greater attention to style and finish which characterizes to-day's shoes. And the price is going to represent these two factors. But if you say "Will you show me the kind of shoes for which I used to pay $5, you have some chance of seeing a shoe at which the increased price represents only the increased cost of leather (which is plenty).

This is a time for thrift. It is a time for wise buying. It is a time not to be afraid to ask the price of a thing before you buy it. The man or woman who does these things is the true patriot.

Scotland's New Saint.

Lorna Pounds, the charming actress now appearing in Pretty Peggy, recently told me an amusing story about a couple of sailors on a certain tramp steamer who were sworn enemies.

One was an Irishman and the other a Scotman, and (said Lorna) the rest of the crew had become adepts in egging them on to chip one another on subjects affecting their respective nationalities.

One day "patron saints" was the subject, of which the Scotman knew nothing, and the Irishman just a little.

"Who was the patron saint of Ireland?" asked Jock.

"Do you mean to say you don't know?" said Pat. "Why, the holy St. Patrick!"

"Well," said Jock, in deliberate tones, "hang your St. Patrick!"

In a towering rage the Irishman hesitated a second while he thought of something equally effective, and then burst out with: "And hang your Harry Lauder!"

Flogging Burglars.

Ancient British law has been revived by London justices in dealing with burglars and petty criminals. Lashes on the bare back with the cat-o-nine-tails used to be a favorite sentence, but in modern times it has practically been abandoned. Alarmed at the rapid spread of crime, however, Justice Horridge revived the old-time law and has sentenced Walter Wetton and Walter Brown, convicted highwaymen, to the "cat."

"I want it to be understood that I shall not hesitate in proper cases to inflict the punishment I am going to do on you two men. You will receive twelve lashes from the 'cat.' This was the judge's dictum and other courts are following suit.

Burglary in England is a profession followed practically with impunity at the present time. Government post offices seem to be favorite places for the thieves to operate. Bond Street shops are raided nightly and frequently warehouses containing costly silks and furs have been cleaned out by burglars using automobile trucks to carry away the loot. But few of the offenders have been captured by the police.

The revival of the "cat" and other medieval forms of punishment should, it is thought by the authorities, have a salutary effect on criminals. Prison sentences seem to have no effect on the hardened offender, but physical pain will, it is thought, have the desired effect of preventing wholesale crime.

Just Folks

SPRING FEVER.

The simplest tasks seemed hard to do, I dragged my way about the place, I felt all right, and yet I knew, I feared the work I had to face; The children seemed to worry me, And that's a sign that something's wrong, I thought of dreadful things to be— And then I heard a robin's song.

I scolded over little things, And stopped the youngsters at their play, It seemed my nerves were jumping springs, For I was finding fault all day; My hands would not obey my will, I had no relish for my food, I'd lost my cunning and my skill, And I was in a bitter mood.

Then green appeared upon the trees, And robins broke the day with song, And from the south there came a breeze, Which brought the scent of flowers along; I turned my back upon it all, I dropped every task and stole away, And went where neither door nor wall Make prisoners of human clay.

I watched the white clouds drifting by, And heard the chirruping of birds, And heard no sound of selfish words; Found pictures to delight the eye, Far more than man has ever learned, And I could bear my bit of woe, And smile once more, when I returned.

Muslin Comes From Mosul.

More cases have been reported to the profiteering tribunals in connection with articles of clothing of various kinds than with anything else.

Few people realise that the names of the materials from which clothes are made come from nearly all parts of the world, showing how many different nations it required at one time to provide the clothes one now wears.

Cambric, for example, is named after the famous city of Cambrai, in France, made doubly famous since 1914. Muslin, on the other hand, is named from Mosul, right away on the banks of the Tigris in Asia, while calico comes from Calicut, a town in India which was once celebrated for its cotton cloth.

Damask, as most people know, takes its name from Damascus in Syria, while silk and serge are both derived from the same Latin word serer, meaning the Chinese. It was from northern China that these two fabrics first came to Europe. Velvet is also a Latin word meaning fleece, while alpaca comes from an animal of the same name which lives in Peru, in South America.

BORN THAT WAY.

Some folks are born with spirits sour, their nature is to whine; the planets, at their natal hour, were badly out of line. They came complaining to the earth, and squawk through all their days, and they can see no sense in mirth, they frown on joyous joys. They choose the grimmest sort of creed that's filled with threats of pain; for there is naught will fit their need, that's pleasant, kind or sane. They are the sad and gloomy freaks who groan with every breath, who see the bloom on maiden cheeks and talk of worms and death. In vain the optimist may try to cheer up gents like these; they'll answer with a dismal sigh his gladder, brightest wheeze. They'll say his logic, blithe and brave, is merely sounding brass; they'll drool a while about the grave, and claim all flesh is grass. They make me weary and distraught when I with them commune; by them December chill is brought into the midst of June. And oh, I pity such poor guys, who cannot gayly laugh, who wipe the briny from their eyes, and quote an epitaph.

Dedication of Bells at St. Thomas's.

St. George for Merry England! On to-morrow, St. George's Day, April 23rd, the Chime of Bells, designed as part of the memorial to the boys of St. Thomas's Parish who made the Supreme Sacrifice in the Great War, will be blessed and dedicated by the Bishop of Newfoundland. The occasion will be a festive one and the services of the day will begin with the offering of the Holy Eucharist at 7.30, at which the special intentions (in addition to those for which every Eucharist is offered) will be:

- (1) In honor of St. George, Patron Saint of England.
- (2) Thanksgiving to God that by His Divine help England has always conquered her enemies.
- (3) Thanksgiving for the great and good men that England has given to the world in connection with this date: Shakespeare, Born St. George's Day, 1564; Died St. George's Day, 1616; Wordsworth, Died St. George's Day, 1850; the heroes of the Raid on Zeebrugge Harbor, St. George's Day, 1918.
- (4) Solemn remembrance before God of the boys of this Parish to whom this memorial is erected.
- (5) Prayers to God for putting in into our hearts to dedicate this memorial to His Glory and their memory.

During evensong 7.30 p.m. the actual service of Dedication will take place, the Bishop, of course, performing the ceremony, and preaching on that occasion. Special hymns will be sung by the choir, and a number of the city priests will attend. All parishioners and friends are invited to be present. The chimes consist of a set of eight tubular bells (made by a well known firm in England, and of a kind much in favor just now as a war memorial,) and after the bells have been dedicated they will chime and play a number of hymn tunes. We understand that five more bells are to be ordered forthwith; this will make it possible to play practically any tune upon them. Later a tablet will be set up in a conspicuous part of the church containing the names of those who have fought and died in the Great War. A.M.D.G.

NEWFOUNDLAND COAL

Let Newfoundland's Wealth be Enjoyed by Newfoundland's People.

In this Coal Question there is more promise of remunerative results than any other mining enterprise in the Island.

EMINENT GEOLOGISTS and COAL EXPERTS who have visited the property from time to time and made careful investigations and assays are convinced that the areas under consideration contain COAL of CONSIDERABLE COMMERCIAL VALUE.

That there is COAL in the areas referred to has been known for over seventy years, but only during the past year has the territory been receiving the attention that it deserves. An impending world shortage of COAL, serious fuel problems in Canada and the United States, should focus the attention of every NEWFOUNDLANDER on this GREAT POTENTIAL SOURCE OF WEALTH.

THE ST. GEORGE'S COAL FIELDS, LIMITED, a Newfoundland Company, managed by Newfoundlanders, controls the choicest lands in the District of St. George's. The Company's holdings have been selected by experts as the most promising coal areas in Newfoundland.

The Company intends to fully develop these lands which after a year's careful work have been found to warrant complete exploration.

The St. George's Coal Fields, Limited.

Big Sale Next Week.

Preparations are now under way for one of the largest Sales of Ready-to-Wear for Ladies, Gents and Boys that has ever been attempted in St. John's. We understand that $300,000.00 worth of Merchandise is to be offered at forced Sale Prices to the public of St. John's and other places. Sale to last for fourteen days, to begin Tuesday morning next. We understand that this Sale will be of the sort that the Americans take advantage of, to select their wearing apparel for their different seasons. A Sale where you get 200 per cent. for every dollar you spend. Why? Because it is a forced Sale. New merchandise and bankrupt stocks have been purchased for little or nothing, and their quantities being so large that it has overstocked us and in fact over-supplied our trade, that is at regular prices, therefore in order to bring our stock back to the normal standard we are forced to dispose of this gigantic over-supply by a two weeks' sale that will forever remain upon the minds of every purchaser at St. John's or elsewhere. Sale will begin Tuesday. Preparations are now going on in full force. A full page ad. will announce some prices that we will offer at this Sale Tuesday morning.

St. Mary's Sunday School

The annual distribution of prizes took place last night in the Parish Hall. There was a very large attendance of scholars, parents and friends—in fact the hall was overcrowded. First, an interesting programme was rendered by the scholars of the senior and junior departments, and each item elicited much applause from the audience. Then followed the distribution of prizes by Mrs. A. B. S. Stirling, assisted by Mr. G. Badcock, Supt. of Sunday School and the Rector. During the singing of "Abide With Me" a collection was taken up. The Rector made a few closing remarks in which he congratulated the juvenile performers and the teachers who had trained them. The absence of Mr. Chas. Ash, Supt. of the Junior Dept., through illness, was much regretted. The Doxology and Benediction brought a very successful affair to a close.

Beaumont-Hamel Collection.

Owing to last Wednesday being a half-holiday, the canvassing of certain parts of the town was only partially carried through. The collectors will again be out from to-day till all parts are canvassed. The ready response they have received shows that all are anxious that this sacred battlefield should be purchased by the people of Newfoundland.

Notice to Farmers.

It is possible that the Civil Re-establishment Committee may be looking for a number of farmers in the early part of May who may be willing to take on one or two farmer students for six months. Farmers who are willing to do this patriotic duty to returned men are invited to notify the undersigned at as early a date as possible of their willingness to help the Civil Re-establishment Committee by taking one or more students. They should state clearly what facilities they have for giving the students training, and should state minimum and maximum wages that they are willing to pay for beginners and for men who have had previous agricultural experience. They should also state if they are able to board the students. In each case they should state clearly the terms.

THURSDAY, April 22.
Menthol Shaving Lotion seems to have all the characteristics of a perfect after shave, and some of our customers have not failed to speak of it as such. It is delightfully cooling and soothing, with just enough sting in it to make it pleasantly refreshing; it dries rapidly into the face; it has a distinctive but not at all obtrusive odor; and it is sold at a moderate price. Good sized bottles, 40 cents.
Allen's Antiseptic Corn Plasters literally "touch the spot." The filling acts as a sort of "fender," the medicated center gets in its work on the corn itself, and usually dislodges it in quick time. Price 20c. a pkg.

Church Sociable.

The most successful concert and sociable for a long time was held in the Lecture Room of Cochrane St. Church last evening, when nearly 700 of the younger people attended. The Guards' Band supplied music, rendering many stirring airs. A well-arranged programme of songs, readings and recitations was gone through. This was: Comic Solo, A. Wilson; Reading, Dialect, F. Gushue; Club Singing, H. Wilson; Piano Solo, Miss May Grimes; Duet, Miss D. R. Vincent and Miss Winnie Dowden; and a reading by Miss Flora Curtis. An item which evoked much laughter and amusement was an exhibition of ventriloquism by Mr. J. Wheeler. The Duet by Misses Vincent (Soprano), and Bowden (alto), "Let the Rest of the World Go By," was very beautifully rendered and thoroughly appreciated.

Legislative Council.

(YESTERDAY.)

After the Governor and Assemblymen had retired the Council went into session. Congratulatory speeches were made by Hons. M. P. Gibbs and John Anderson in reference to the high honor that had been conferred upon Hon. J. D. Ryan in being elected President of the Upper House. The President replied briefly, asking the co-operation of all and assuring them of his intention to do his duty to the best of his ability. The President then, after informing the House that Commissions had been granted to Messrs. George Shea, (Dr. A. Campbell, John Browning and F. H. Steer, welcomed the new members, whose business experience and knowledge of public matters fitted them for their seats.

After His Excellency's speech had been read by the Clerk, Hon. R. K. Bishop, as senior member present, moved a resolution of sympathy to the families of the late Hons. Harvey, Skelton and Goodridge, three members who had passed away since last session. The motion was seconded by Hon. Mr. Gibbs and supported by Hon. Mr. Anderson.

Hon. Mr. Browning moved that a select committee be appointed to draft a reply to His Excellency's speech. In his opinion it contained an outline of a great deal of legislation which would tend to the general advancement of the country. As a result of the great world war our economic conditions had become disorganized as in every other part of the Empire, and in Europe, and it was necessary that we begin the work of reconstruction. Owing to our isolation we had been moving slowly, in fact we had been almost continuing in the old rut. The first act of the present Government was to put into force regulations for the conserving of our fish markets, which, in his opinion, brought about beneficial results. It was true that a difference of opinion existed in this matter, and in some quarters the regulations had not been taken to favorably. This was expected. He believed their promulgation was a wise course, and while there might be a difference of opinion as to their carrying out, there should be none as to the principle. Some people had said that the regulations prevented competition. The competitors we had were the other fish producing countries. There should be competition between the exporters—the competition should be to see what could be got over the minimum price for their fish. He also touched on the educational policy, and deplored present conditions. He condemned the C.H.E. policy and held that it should not be given State support. What was needed was primary schools for all and compulsory attendance. That our educational system was behind was evidenced in the fact that more than 50 per cent. of our soldiers and sailors were illiterate. He also favored the Government's policy of settling the Labrador boundary dispute, its marine policy, and the establishment of the Posts and Telegraphs departments. In concluding, Mr. Browning thanked the members for the kindly welcome they had given the new Councilors, and offered congratulations to the President.

Hon. Mr. Steer seconded the motion, and took occasion to congratulate the Government on its programme. The surveying of ships, and the protection of the lives of those who man them, was very necessary legislation. The establishment of the Department of Posts and Telegraphs should have the support of the whole community. The creation of an education department was a step in the right direction. Our present facilities were inadequate, and even in St. John's there were 1,000 children who did not even have a chance of getting elementary training. The agricultural policy had his fullest endorsement, and he believed that a great deal could be done by this department. The promise that the estimates would be full and bonafide was a business way of doing things and should meet with general approval.

Mr. Steer also touched on the Labrador boundary dispute and the coastal service, and was glad the Government hoped for a settlement of the former and intended to reorganise the latter. Mr. Steer before taking his seat, also thanked the members for the courteous way in which they had welcomed him to the Council.

Hon. Mr. Grieve, though congratulating the last two speakers on their maiden speeches, could not at all agree with what Mr. Browning had said in connection with fish matters.

Hon. Mr. Coaker, said Mr. Grieve, had the record of improving the social and economic condition of the people of Newfoundland and no doubt had done a great deal, but the promulgation of the fishery regulations referred to by Mr. Browning had done the fisherman untold harm, and the fish buyers and exporters had lost about $3,000,000 through them. There had been a greater loss than the money loss, as would be seen by a message from Mr. Walter Monroe, who was one of Mr. Coaker's advisers in bringing about the regulations, which read as follows:—"My opinion is regulations now in force are detrimental to trade interests if continued; curtail supplies to minimum." This message Mr. Monroe had sent to his firm to protect himself, and no doubt it would be acted on by others. In Mr. Grieve's opinion, if the regulations were allowed to continue, we were moving on to disaster and more speedily than we thought. Since the regulations came in force the receivers began to standardize our fish, and a reduction from 10 to 50 shillings a qtl. had been made. What was necessary at the present time was to re-establish confidence in the fisherman and the supplier. The regulations only retarded legitimate trade, which was regulated by supply and demand, and prohibited a man using his own judgment or conducting his own business. What was wanted was free and open competition, which was killed by the regulations.

Hon. Mr. Gibbs disagreed entirely with the last speaker, who was one of the Manchester old school who believed in unrestricted competition. The Manchester manufacturers went into the market, forced down the price of their produce and made slaves of the producers at home. The policy of supply and demand had been exploded 20 years ago. It would be a poor Government that neglected to protect the country's toilers. The regulations were for such protection and he fully endorsed them.

Hon. Mr. Bishop endorsed what the different speakers had said of the new Councilors, and felt sure their presence in the Chamber would greatly strengthen the debating and deliberating powers of the Council.

The following members were appointed to draft the address in reply: Hons. Browning, Steer, Anderson, McNamara and Murphy.

After Hon. Mr. Shea had tabled some reports, the House adjourned until Monday next at 4 p.m.

Shannahan and Tucker Have a Chat.

Tucker sat by the fire in a contemplative mood when I entered his abode last night, and it took quite a lot of manoeuvring to get him into talking humor.

Some times Tim, says he, I get sick and tired of the whole business. It appears to me that 'tis just as well to be a crook as to try and go through life in an honest, upright way. There is just as much thought of you, and you have a far better time paddling along the voyage of life.

I'm sorry you take that view of life, Tucker, says I, there is nothing like doing the square thing even though you never own a six cylinder automobile. In olden times, says Tucker, that doctrine may have been upheld, but to-day a man's standing is measured by his money, no matter how he acquires it. You can be a black leg and possess wealth and your wealth will cover up your dishonesty.

On the other hand you can be honest enough to have hair grow on the palm of your hand, and if you are poor you are simply tolerated. More than that, says Tucker, things are coming to such a pass in this community that the fellow who passes off a tricky, dishonest deal and gets away with it is looked upon as being smart. "Do your man or he'll do you," seems to be considered the correct thing.

I'm of the opinion, Tucker, says I, that you view life a little too seriously.

That's what most people say nowadays, says Tucker, when a man talks about honesty. I'll tell you, Tim, says he, that most people will laugh at you if you talk of square dealing. They will call you a booby, and tell you that you should be careful that you don't walk over a wharf. That's just the point I want to bring out. It is coming to this in this country that if you talk honesty you will be considered a fit subject for medical treatment or a straight-jacket. Now let us ask ourselves who is to blame for this condition of affairs, and how are we going to remedy the evil? Those who are to blame are the people themselves. They are ready at all times to wink out of sight dishonesty in a man if that man can be of benefit to them in any way. You will hear them say, "Oh, he's not a had kind of a fellow and if he has usurped some of the public funds he is off-handed and a dollar isn't tied to him." Right here the public gives this crook a license to go ahead with his dishonesty, and right here the public are to blame. The public, says Tucker, want a shaking up and that shaking up must come from those in high places.

Who will you see occupying foremost places in any big gathering in Church or State. Won't you behold the very men whom the public know to be those of a very doubtful reputation. Now if those easy-money-getters were told to take a back seat the people would be immediately shook up, and they would say to one another, "a new era has dawned." But as long as "respectable" crooks are given the glad hand by those in high places, so long will the people say--'tis just as good to be dishonest as honest.

TIM SHANNAHAN.

Seen From the Lobby.

House of Assembly, Yesterday.

The usual big crowd attended the opening of the House yesterday, and, as per usual, two or three dozen people, besides the members, forced their way inside the Bar. Why should private citizens be allowed there? This kind of thing has developed into a social function, and it seems as if the House cannot open properly without a number of social leaders gracing the occasion with their presence.

The Government members looked a sorry bunch, and slumped in their seats, most of them, with an air that reminded me of a dog of mine which I never allow inside my residence. Sometimes, however, he manages to sneak in while nobody is looking, and crawls under a table. He then sleeps with one eye open and watches every move that anybody in the room makes. The Government members are not canines, needless to say, but they looked decidedly sheepish.

The contrast offered by the Opposition members was indeed striking. An easy, healthy, strong looking team, they impart confidence and the impression that they will not be silent orators was created.

I watched the faces of many of the minor members of the Government while Sir Michael Cashin, Leader of the Opposition, was moving the resolution that the House adjourn until the Woodford case be adjusted. They looked mystified, as if wondering what would be the outcome, and kept glancing in the direction of their leaders, at the back of the House.

Incidentally, I might remark on the easy way in which the Opposition took the reins and commanded the whole situation. A stranger might almost have thought that the Opposition was the Government, and vice versa.

Mr. James MacDonnell, Member for St. George's, received warm gallery applause on rising to speak. He was a little nervous at first, I think, but gradually worked into his well-known style. The ice is broken, now, and from him we may expect some of the speeches which characterized his campaign.

Mr. Cyril Fox's eloquence took the House by storm. You could hear a pin drop. Many admiring glances were exchanged among the auditors, as the junior member for St. John's East, warmed the Prime Minister.

Sir John Crosbie's wit and humor were refreshing. Sir John has an imitable, peculiarly his own, style, and that it is effective none will deny. He has a happy knack of expressing in plain words the very thoughts that have been in the minds of the others, they being afraid to word them. Sir John Crosbie is a team in himself. Sir Michael Cashin, in speaking,

Fishermen!

Here's the Boot for You!

Excel Boots

Have Pliable Uppers. Weather Proof and Weather Resisting. Tire-Tread Soles. Hard to Wear Out.

For Men and Boys.

Pliable Uppers, Weatherproof and Wear-Resisting, Tough Tire-Tread Soles. Hard to wear out.

You know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of the rubber and how the rubbers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life of resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and cold far longer than other boots, consequently they don't crack anywhere so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

These are exclusive features of "EXCEL" boots.

The picture at the left, of an "EXCEL" boot, with every detail of construction visible, shows how "EXCEL" boots are reinforced at every point of strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure which leaves the rubber pliable, weather-proof, and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Below are listed seven special features which make "EXCEL" boots superior. Read them carefully so that when you need boots you will know how to get the best value for your money.

Seven Special Features that make the "Excel" Best.

FEATURE No. 1—The entire boot is cured under heavy pressure, forcing all parts together in "one-piece", and retaining the full life and resiliency of the rubber.

FEATURE No. 2—An 8-ply double sole of tough, durable rubber, made like an Auto Tire, running all the way under the full moulded heel. This sole and heel are so wear-resisting that they are commonly called the "tough on rocks" sole and heel.

FEATURE No. 3—A heavily reinforced boot which will withstand the hardest kind of wear.

Most reliable dealers sell "EXCEL" boots. Be sure to look for the name "EXCEL". Substitutes and "just as good" boots will not give you "EXCEL" service. If your dealer does not have them in stock, write us for name of nearest dealer.

FEATURE No. 4—Six plies at the instep relieves strain and prevents wrinkling or cracking.

FEATURE No. 5—Reinforced five-ply leg for extra wear. Just the right amount of strength to stand up, yet not be uncomfortable.

FEATURE No. 6—Four-ply top, very pliable.

FEATURE No. 7—Heavy duck lining, and a heavy insole prevent dampness and keep feet dry and comfortable.

mentioned the fact that he had been a member of the House for 28 years, during which time 78 members of the Legislature had died. Sir Michael is the oldest sitting member of the House.

The new Speaker of the House, Mr. Penney, seemed to carry his office with fair ease. He was from the first down on the gallery-auditors, several times rising in his chair and demanding that order be kept. His admonitions were disregarded, however, until he threatened to use the powers vested in him. This was effective. The moving and seconding of the motion that a Select Committee be appointed to draft an address in reply to the Speech from the Throne were made by Lieut. H. Small and Sgt. P. F. LeGrov. They were both in uniform and looked good. They received considerable applause.

An impressive scene was created when the Leader of the Opposition, in seconding a vote of regret at the death of Hon. Skelton, Goodridge and Harvey, Members of the Upper House, asked all to stand while he repeated in Latin the De Profundis, (130th Psalm.) Sir Michael must indeed have a good memory to retain this in his mind.

A visible sigh of relief swept the Government benches when the motion to adjourn was passed, and the honorable members thereof fell to talking and gesticulating among themselves. And thus ended the first day of this.

the most interesting session of local assemblies.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

A New Development in Light Sixes

Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.

We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.

The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.

And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.

The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?

The Case for the Moderates.

WOMEN CONTROLLERS.

(By WARWICK SMITH.)

ARTICLE IX.

The system we recommend will make the women the real controllers of drinking in this country. Officially they may have nothing to do with it. Actually they will really control it.

Under the License System a man could obtain liquor at a public house and drink it there. The custom of treating was one of the main causes of drunkenness and it went on without any check. Under the plan we propose, the flask or bottle will be nearly always brought home; for it cannot be consumed on the premises where it is sold. At home the women will be able to exercise their influence to prevent the quantity being drunk at once. The woman can say: "You have enough." She also can say: "Do not give so-and-so a drop. He cannot control himself."

Under Prohibition the man obtains liquor easily. It may be smuggled liquor, or it may be the product of the "moonshine" still. The woman cannot control the drinking now. With a sane, reasonable law on the Statute Book most men will be satisfied with their regular allowance. Smuggling cannot be supported by the few only who drink unwisely. The "best" people—and by that term I mean the thinking, intelligent, sober and industrious people of all classes—will frown down upon "moonshining" and smuggling. The result will be that these evils will disappear, because the police, backed by public sentiment, will be able to enforce the Law. Public sentiment will also demand that the loopholes in the Act be removed.

The women cannot control the drinking that goes on outside the home. If the bottle is kept in the house the women can use their influence to restrict drinking. They can also keep the young from obtaining access to it. At present boys may obtain "moonshine" at the houses of the neighbors.

The police dare not enforce the law against "moonshiners," especially in the outports. They know that illicit distilling is going on; but they take care not to go near certain houses on brewing days. Most Newfoundlanders desire sobriety. Give them their regular ration and treat all alike and they will give that support to the law which they now withhold. When "moonshining" and smuggling are put down, the women will be in control of most of the drinking.

Headaches Come From Nose.

That headaches are often due to troubles in the nose is well brought out by Dr. William Wilson in the London Practitioner. They are caused by the closure of the mouths of the ducts that drain the sinuses or cavities in the bones of the head. These sinuses are situated in the upper jaw bones directly under the eyes, in the frontal bones, over and between the eyes; in the thumb and sphenoid bones, back of the nose and almost in the centre of the head.

The sinuses are lined with mucous membrane and normally are full of air which is changed as we breathe. But a cold in the head causes swelling of the mucous membranes of the nose and pharynx, and the openings of the ducts are thereby closed. Then the air in the sinuses is absorbed and a vacuum is produced. Sometimes the inflammation spreads to the lining of the sinuses and they discharge semi-purulent mucus into the nose and throat. If they be blocked they cannot discharge freely.

The result of either of these conditions is headache. Such a headache is generally felt in the morning and passes away as the day wears on.

The cure for these conditions is the freeing of the entrance to the sinus, which is easily done through the nose by a specialist with a bougie inserted through a silver tube. The physician generally touches them with a weak solution of nitrate of silver. Occasionally a slight operation is necessary.

Not Morocco Bound.

Mr. Holman Clark, who is responsible for the "production" of three successes now running, has a fund of theatrical stories. One that he is fond of relating is about War-made millionaires.

It seems that the newly-enriched Mr. Parvenu-Smith was stocking his library, which occupation (says Mr. Clark) was causing him considerable anxiety.

At last in despair he called in an expert bookseller, and, after many suggestions and a final order for a complete library, he turned to his adviser and asked:

"And what is the name of that fellow who writes such a lot—Shakespeare, or something like that, isn't it?"

"Shakespeare, sir," answered the tradesman.

"Yes, that's it. Get me all he's written, and make a note to order anything new he may write."

Concealing a smile, the bookseller said: "And, for the sake of uniformity, may I suggest that you have your books bound in Morocco?"

"Bound in Morocco!" roared the newly-made Croesus. "No, certainly not. I want the confounded things at once."

Behind the Counter.

It often falls to the lot of the small shopkeeper to have some peculiar requests made to him during the course of his business, and as the writer is a draper in a poor neighborhood some of these requests may at least raise a smile.

A well-dressed lady one day desired to be shown some hats, and after inspecting a penny card holding four pins (pre-war price), unblushingly inquired if she could have one pin.

An unknown customer desiring to purchase some short curtain net, sent her little girl of about six years to know if she could take the rolls so that mother could see the pattern! A little girl came in one day inquiring the price of pale blue ribbon, and upon being informed that the width she wanted was a shilling and three farthings per yard, wanted to know if she could have a half-penny worth. But the limit was reached when a boy asked for "a penny reel of white cotton," and received the intimation that we did not keep "a penny" reels, only penny ones. The boy went away, and in a short time returned, this time for "a penny reel of black cotton, please."

Upon being again told that we only kept penny reels, he went away, to return once more with the query that

"Mother wants to know if you can wind some cotton off a reel for a 'penny."

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, March 13, 1920.

LONDON'S COMING TEN MILLION POPULATION.

"Possibly in three years, certainly in five, Greater London will have ten million inhabitants. I detest the prospect, for I had hoped for a decentralisation and a reduction of London's population, but I am afraid it is inevitable." That is the considered opinion which a famous town planner and expert on London development has given. He pointed to the enormous and apparently permanent developments in Government departments all concentrated in London, to the manner in which all great manufacturing and commercial firms and industrial associations remove their head quarters to London, and also to the continued developments of manufactures in the London area, and to the coming great development of the Port of London. He considers that the position this town already holds as one of the world's greatest pleasure resorts will be vastly strengthened when the Channel Tunnel is completed, and that the opening of the Tunnel will also draw through London both passenger and goods traffic from this country and from America which now reaches the Continent by other routes. The census will show that London has much increased its population above the normal increase expected in the decade now closing, and that the crowding in it continues daily.

ART MART OF THE WORLD.

A number of French and Dutch collectors are attending London art sales just now, and prices of furniture, china, glass, and pictures are higher than ever. One day this week $1,800 was paid for a single wingless of the Jacobean period. Neither in Paris nor Amsterdam have the art salerooms recovered from the war. London is more nearly than ever the art auction mart of the world.

THE TWOPENNY POST.

Far-away echoes of Dickens are recalled by the ruminating rather than illuminating announcement of the Postmaster-General that "the question of increasing postage rates is under consideration." If official indications mean anything, this threatens the abolition of the half-penny postage rate in every form—an idea first favored when Herbert Samuel was Postmaster-General under the Premiership of Asquith,—and the raising of the three-half-penny letter rate to twopenny. Though the long-departed Sir Rowland Hill may turn in his grave at this contemplated permanent departure from the penny stamp ideal, and the shades of Elihu Burritt and Sir John Henniker-Heaton may giber at the abandonment of international penny postage, Dickens, with his "twopenny post," will come out serene. The old-time institution, before Rowland Hill and his penny postage were dreamed of, of a twopenny delivery of letters "within the bills of mortality," as the London area then was named, was a concrete fact which much impressed the great Victorian novelist, who in his earlier stories again and again referred to the double-knocking exertions of the twopenny postman. One form in which it existed in penny post days was in the nature of a fraud. Letters were charged by distance, and paid for on delivery; and on the Border of England and Scotland, where the elevenpenny coat passed into thirteen pence, it was not uncommon for the innocent to find 11d. changed into 1s. 1d. by a simple insertion of an intermediate stroke, which meant twopenny for the postman and not for the Postmaster-General.

"THE NEW RUSSIA."

The Estonians were the first of the border States to make peace with Russia. The present diplomatic representative of Estonia in London, A. Phip, who was one of the Estonian delegates at the peace conference with Russia, made an interesting point in conversation a day or two ago. When asked how his country was getting on with the Bolsheviks he said: "You are out of date. There is no question of getting on with the Bolsheviks. It is the new Russia with whom we are dealing. There are no Bolsheviks in Russia in the sense that there were two years ago. The original Bolsheviks have become merged into the people. Make no mistake. This is the 'New Russia.'" His point was that the Bolsheviks are no longer a single class, as their ranks were now permeated with all classes and nearly all interests in Russia.

THE CHEAPEST MONEY.

The cheapest money in the world appears to be the money issued by the famous Russian General Yudenitch. The Reval paper, "Teataja," that has just arrived here, reports that a Reval chocolate firm has asked permission to use Yudenitch money as chocolate wrappers, this money being cheaper than the ordinary wrapper employed. Thousands of Russian soldiers who served in the Yudenitch army have been paid with this money.

ITALIAN CIGARS.

It is announced that the Italian Government intends to open retail shops for their tobaccos in London. Tobacco is, of course, a Government monopoly in Italy, but "Macedonia" cigarettes and "Toscani"—the most powerful cigars in the world—can be obtained in Scho (London's Bohemian foreign quarter) any day. So far, however, the customers are all Italians. The Macedonia cigarette has its merits, but the chief claim of the cigar seems to be that it has no substitute once the smoker has grown used to it. These varieties are hardly likely to appeal to the British palate, which did not care particularly even for the special cigars and tobaccos the Austrians used to sell before the war, which certainly were of superior quality. But Austria has lost the provinces from which she obtained her best leaf, and will no longer be a competitor, while Greece, on the other hand, possesses provinces which have always been famous for the quality of their tobacco. In the past both Italians and Austrians produced the long, thin, peculiarly foreign-looking cigar known as the "Virginia." Now that Austria is out of the running the Italians may establish a monopoly of this speciality.

THE AUSTRIAN VELOUR.

The Austrian velour hat, popularised in this country by the late King Edward, is about to make its reappearance after an absence of five years from the shops. During the war, when imports were suspended, English manufacturers devoted great attention to this type of headgear, and have steadily improved their production until they are booked up with orders for a year ahead for goods equal in make and beauty to the Austrian hats. It is still possible, however, to tell the difference, for there is something in the Austrian hats which British manufacturers have not been able to copy. Several wholesale houses have already placed orders for supplies of these foreign hats, which will come over in the rough and be trimmed and finished on this side. The retail price should be about 45 shillings, say at $3.50 to the pound sterling, $7.50.

THE DAYLIGHT KINEMA.

The promoters of the new invention which enables kinema pictures to be shown effectively by daylight point out its value for use in open-air school classes and for country and seaside theatres. Curiously enough, they say nothing about what is perhaps its greatest advantage—the prevention of the undesirable things that now happen in the darkness of some picture palaces. Social reform agencies have had a great deal to say about this, and Mr. Harrington, in his recent review of immoral influences of the East End of London, spoke very strongly about the evil-doers who take advantage of the kinema. The special point about the new screen, which has been invented by a Manchester man, Mr. Marks, is that instead of allowing the daylight to pass through its translucency it reflects it back again, with the result that full effect is given to the lantern light. The pictures shown at a private view were of Australian scenes, and even an Australian would have said that justice was done to the brilliant light of that country. They were very successful, sharply defined in every detail, and the light which shone from an open window directly upon the screen in no way diminished the vividness of the picture. At the same time the dazzling effect so trying to the eyes was done away with.

PRESS THE BUTTON.

The people who control the London Underground Electric Tube railways are perhaps the keenest in the world on publicity and the utilisation of new devices to increase tube use. An ingenious new scheme is now in operation. Large transparent maps are being put up in connection with the Underground Railways. Around and below these maps are columns of names of theatres, assembly halls, hotels, restaurants, places of interest and business houses. Opposite each name of the place you want to go to, spots of light at once show up on the map. First a large red light shows where you are, then a green light to

Didn't Like Baby's Ignorance.

Yells from the nursery brought the mother, who found the baby gleefully pulling small Billy's curls.

"Never mind, darling," she comforted. "Baby doesn't know how it hurts."

Half an hour later wild shrieks from the baby made her run again to the nursery.

"Why, Billy," she cried, "what is the matter with baby?"

"Nothing, muzzer," said Billy calmly. "only now he knows."

Not Usually Done.

Soldier Deprecates Conferring of Decoration.

He had come back with the Croix de Guerre, but he would not talk about how he won it. Of course his family and friends knew the formal citation, but they wanted him to tell them the details, and he modestly and persistently evaded them.

"I think it simply silly," declared an irate cousin in her teens. "What's the use of ducking and dodging, and pretending you're not a hero, when you know perfectly well you are?"

The worm turned. "Yes, of course I know I am," he assented coolly. "The trouble is, they didn't give me my cross for the right thing. Do you expect a fellow to talk about his heroism when he gets a decoration for doing what lots of other fellows did who weren't lucky enough to be noticed, and then finds the bravest thing he ever did, or ever expects to do, treated lightly or ignored altogether? At least, I was a hero once. Before we were ordered abroad, I was invited to luncheon by my colonel's daughter. Now, you know I am a country boy from an inland state. It was the first luncheon I'd ever attended—and the first time I'd ever been served raw oysters. I hate shellfish, and when I saw those six, soft, slimy, silthery horrors set before me I nearly fainted. But I didn't know whether anything much was to follow or not; and I couldn't decline a main dish under the eye of my hostess. I shuddered with disgust. I wasn't sure they would go down; I feared they might come up. But—I ate those oysters, all six, and smiled as I ate them! She told me so two years afterward, when I confessed. Now, I call that true heroism. But it wasn't what I got the cross for."

"Maybe," said the saucy young thing in her teens, "it's that you're going to get the girl for."

"No," sighed the unappreciated hero. "she agrees with the rest of you and General Mangin. She only laughs at my real claim to glory!"—Youth's Companion.

As the North Sees It.

(Trillingate Sun, April 10.)
THE F. C. B.—Our honorable, contemporary the Advocate, seems rather annoyed at the Sun because we have questioned the efforts—lack of effort—of the Food Control Board, and says that if we will make a specific charge it will be investigated.

Well, since apparently brother Mows does not have to buy flour, we might inform him that on a certain date in the early part of this year, a date which he will easily find on his files, when announcement was made that the Canadian millers had increased the price of wheat by about $2.50 per barrel, all the flour held in this country (which up to that date had been selling for $15.00) suddenly became enhanced in value also by $2.50.

We thought that was a case for the F. C. B. to investigate, and we should rather like to know why it didn't investigate?

If brother Mows would get the F. C. B. going on this, we should then be glad to supply further information and voice the complaints of the great common people on such other points as the price of butter, biscuits, sugar, etc. But it is no use going into these things until we get the first one settled a bit.

Man thousand dollars profit—unfair profit we consider it—has been made out of that advance in flour, an unutilized for advance—also in our opinion.

It is late to return the extra couple of dollars or so over-paid by the consumer on flour to him, but it would at least show some reason d'être for the F. C. B.'s existence if it did institute some enquiries, even thus late in the day.

THE FISH QUESTION.—Mr. Coaker in his diary, which he is publishing in the Advocate (and most interesting very much of it, especially his visit to Beaumont Hamel of sacred memory) defends the Fishery Regulations and declares that he is more proud of them than of anything he has hitherto accomplished.

We have read much opinion from both sides on these Regulations. The opposition condemned them as an unwarranted restriction of trade, while government papers upheld them as the only salvation of the country's fish business, and it is rather remarkable that after the several days debate in the Board of Trade an unanimous resolution was passed declaring that "some form of regulations" was absolutely necessary. To the unbiased observer, then, it looked as though in the main the Fish Regulations did have some value.

Even the Minister of Marine & Fisheries shows, by his appeal for carefully made codfish this season, that he does not, however, expect the regulations in themselves to be sufficient, and we hope he will give an ear to our remarks of last week, which we believe the majority of the fishermen endorse, and endeavor to throw the onus of good fish on the buyers; for they hold the power to make or mar the output of this country's fishery.

POLITICS.—Up to this writing there is no announcement of the Legislature, and there are some who are looking for surprises. They may not be altogether disappointed.

The man who holds the situation in the palm of his hand at the present moment is none other than the Hon. W. F. Coaker. Mr. Coaker often spoke in the early days of his career of a "balance of power party," but it is questionable if he ever dreamt of being able to control the balance so effectually as he can to-day. Mr. Squires has twelve men. Mr. Cashin has twelve men (now that Mr. Woodford has resigned). Mr. Coaker has eleven men. Either side is helpless without his aid. He thus controls the situation as absolutely and effectively—perhaps even more effectively than if he were premier.

Furthermore, while there used to be a time when Mr. Coaker felt incapable of taking up the reins of government, it should be remembered that he has travelled rather extensively during the few years, and there is little doubt to our mind that he now feels perfectly capable of managing the country's affairs.

He may, however, decide that he could have a stronger position by attempting to maintain the balance power.

Governing the country during these difficult times will be a severe strain on the popularity of any Government, and the Honorable, the President of the F. P. U. is too clever a politician to venture on any risky undertaking.

Cash Register Riffled.

Sometime during Tuesday night, a West End store was broken into and the cash register riffled. It was fortunate for the owner that he had removed the days' sales before retiring, as otherwise he would have been out a good many dollars.
