Beans		to	1 00
Potatoes per bag	30	to	40
Green Apples	20	to	30
Hay per ton	9 00	to	10 50
Eggs			17
Butter			20
Shorts			70
Bran			75

NEW

BUTCHER SHOP.

THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.

Patronage Solicited.

M. McNULTY.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that I will not be responsible for two notes of hand—one for $15 and the other $35—given by me in favor of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, as I have not received value therefor ; moreover the latter note was made on the Sabbath.

JOHN DOYLE,
Nov. 17th, 1888. Dutton.

ST. THOMAS MARKETS.

Wheat	$1 00	to	$1 05
Barley	50	to	50
Peas	55	to	58
Oats	30	to	33
Potatoes (per bag)	40	to	50
Hay (per ton)	13 00	to	14 00
Butter	25	to	25
Eggs	23	to	25

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 7. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1888. NO. 50.

Professional Cards.

ALEX. BEATON,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
WEST LORNE, ONT.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,
SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.
Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

Alex McKillop, M.D.
M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.
☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,
Barrister-at-Law,
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.
ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,
Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.
MONEY TO LOAN.
OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.
Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN
At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.
June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE.
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.
June 7. 1-yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,
Surgeon - Dentist,
Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas admiuistered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23,

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,
SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,
Veterinary Surgeon,
DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 15x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS
For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.
F. A. Humpidge.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

The Star Loan Company
181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.
Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.
Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.
L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P., Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.
OFFICERS.
L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!
Pumps! Pumps!!
To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.
Repairing Promptly Done.
I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.
Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.
Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 28, 1888. tf

A NARROW ESCAPE.
People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe-guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

THIS SPACE
BELONGS TO
—: W. H. VOGT, :—
THE JEWELLER.

To Farmers and Builders.
Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. Cochrane.
January 27, 1887 6-m

BLACKSMITHING.
The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.
First-class Tailoring
IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.
30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED
This season to stock our new mills at Union.
L. J. Willson & Co.
Feb. 4, 1888. tf

-:- STOP! -:-
DON'T READ THIS
WE WILL SELL
COFFINS and CASKETS
CHEAPER THAN ANY HOUSE IN OR OUTSIDE THE COMBINE.
NO HUMBUG! TRY US!
WE HAVE ALSO A LARGE STOCK OF
FURNITURE!
which we will sell at
Prices which will Astonish you. Call and get Prices.
W. I. Schultz & Son

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
☞ T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

The Best
EDUCATION.
Prepares young men and women to support themselves and accumulate wealth. Send for facts to DETROIT BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Detroit, Mich. This is a College of Business, School of Shorthand, School of Penmanship, and English Training School. Elegant Catalogue free to applicants.

Dutton Iron Works.
MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.
The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-
Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

ONE GOOD POINT
Out of the many possessed by Burdock Blood Bitters is that it may be taken at all the seasons of the year, and by either young or old. In this way the three busy B's are always at work doing good.
It is wise to provide against emergencies which are liable to arise in every family. In sudden attacks of cold, croup, asthma, etc., a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will prove a never-failing remedy.

WE WANT AGENTS to canvass for subscribers to the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, the great Rural Magazine. In our annual premium list just issued we illustrate and offer 200 useful and valuable premiums which are given those sending subscribers, or we pay a cash commission, as may be preferred. In addition to the premiums or cash commission allowed canvassers for every club of subscribers procured we offer to be presented the 221 Agents sending the 221 largest clubs of subscribers to the American Agriculturist before March 1st, 1889.
$2250 IN SPECIAL PRIZES,

$2250 TO BE GIVEN AWAY.

$650 Fischer Boudoir Upright Piano	$650
$200 in cash for the second largest club	200
$150 in cash for the third largest club	150
$150 Keystone Organ for the fourth largest club	150
$125 Bradley two-wheeler for the fifth largest club	150
$100 in cash for the sixth largest club	100
$50 each for the next two largest clubs	100
$25 each for the next three largest clubs	75
$10 each for the next ten largest clubs	100
$5 each for the next fifty largest clubs	250
$3 each for the next fifty largest clubs	150
$2 each for the next hundred largest clubs	200
221 Special Prizes to the Amount of	$2250

Remember these special prizes will be presented in addition to the premiums or commission allowed for every club of subscribers procured.
It makes no difference how large or how small the club is, the persons sending the largest number of subscribers before March 1st will receive the first prize of a $650 piano; the person sending the second largest club will receive $200 in cash, and so on for the balance of the prizes. You cannot work for a better publication than the American Agriculturist. Its superior excellence, together with its great reputation gained by nearly fifty years of continuous publication, make it one of the easiest journals to canvass for. All our promises will be carried out in every respect, and you can rely on receiving good treatment. Send for premium list and specimen copy.
Address— AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,
(Mention this paper) 751 Broadway, New York City.

THRESHERS
WILL FIND IT PAYS TO USE THE FAMOUS
LARDINE
THE BEST MACHINE OIL IN CANADA.
McCOLL'S -:- CYLINDER -:- OIL
Should be used in every Engine Cylinder. 600 Fire Test. Not injured by extreme heat.
McCOLL, BROS. & CO., - TORONTO.

Administrator's Notice.
THE creditors of Angus McPherson, late of the Township of Dunwich, in the County of Elgin, yeoman, deceased, who died on or about the 9th day of October, 1886, and all others having claims against his estate are hereby notified to send by post, prepaid, or otherwise deliver to the undersigned administratrix of the estate of the said deceased at Dutton, Ont., on or before the 3rd day of January, 1889, their Christian names and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them; and in default thereof, and immediately after the said third day of January, 1889, the assets of the said deceased will be distributed amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to claims of which notice shall have been given as above required; and this notice being given under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of Ontario (1887), Cap. 110, the administratrix will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any person of whose claim notice shall not have been received by her at the time of such distribution. JANE McPHERSON,
Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888. Administratrix.

WE HAVE . . . .
HIT
. . . . UPON A PLAN
To Benefit our Subscribers.
THE ENTERPRISE is pleased to announce the completion of arrangements whereby it is enabled to offer its readers two of the best of family journals for but little more than the price of one.
FOR $1.75
We will send, for one year, to any address,
The Enterprise
and the Famous Family Weekly,
The Detroit Free Press.
The Free Press is without question the Greatest Literary and Humorous paper now before the American people. It is not a new aspirant for public favor; established over fifty years ago, it has stood the test of time, and is to-day stronger, better and more popular than ever—120,000 subscribers affirm its surpassing excellence. The funny sketches and sayings of The Free Press are everywhere quoted and laughed at, while in respect to literary excellence it will compare favorably with the expensive magazines. "M. Quad" "Luke Sharp," Eva Best, Rose Hartwick Thorpe, Chas. F. Adams, Hamilton Jay, Lizzie Yorke Case, Bronson Howard, H. C. Dodge, and a host of other favorite writers contribute regularly to its columns. Recognizing the growing demand for first-class fiction, The Free Press has offered
$3,000.00 in Cash Prizes
for the three best Serial Stories of 60,000 words each. A number of the best writers have announced their intention to compete.
In addition to the many other special features it is the intention to publish sections of three
SERIAL STORIES EACH WEEK
written expressly for The Free Press by the best American and English authors.
It will be seen, therefore, that by subscribing for THE ENTERPRISE and The Free Press, the entire family can be supplied with all the News and the best of current Literature for a year at a cost of
LESS THAN THREE CENTS A WEEK
The Free Press is a large eight-page, seven-column paper, and the regular price is $1 per year. Remember that for $1.50 you can have The Free Press and your favorite home paper also. Sample copies can be seen at this office.
We hope that our friends will show their appreciation of our efforts in their behalf, by making up their minds to take advantage of this splendid offer—SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.
Send all subscriptions to
THE ENTERPRISE,
DUTTON, ONT.

Victoria Carbolic Salve is a great aid to internal medicine in the treatment of scrofulous sores, ulcers and abscesses of all kinds.

Largest Circulation in Western Ontario.
—:THE:—
FREE PRESS
LONDON - CANADA.
The Free Press is the only newspaper in the West receiving the Associated Press despatches. It contains ALL THE NEWS by Cable, Telegraph, Telephone and Mail, up to the hour of going to press. It gives in each issue original and valuable illustrations of men and things, and is the only newspaper in Canada employing its own artists.
The Weekly Free Press
$1 PER YEAR. POSTAGE FREE.
Established Nearly Half a Century.
"THE THREE GRACES"
AND "BY THE LAKESIDE,"
TWO HANDSOME CHROMOS,
Also a beautiful Christmas Number, comprising 36 pages, given away free to every subscriber for 1889.
$8,000 in Premiums,
Comprising New and Useful Articles, given away free to agents. The most liberal inducements ever offered in Canada to agents. Send for agent's outfit and terms.
THE FREE PRESS
Is the only Morning and Evening Paper published in Western Ontario. It is forwarded on all early morning trains, reaching all places between Toronto and Windsor by eight a.m., and is the only daily paper received at points west of London before the afternoon. The live newspaper of the west, $3 per year, postage free. Sold by agents everywhere. Address—
FREE PRESS CO.,
LONDON, CANADA.

The Reason Why
Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.
In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C., writes:
"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."
Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.
Dyspepsia
and Constipation are almost universal. Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:
"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say, that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."
The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.
Ayer's Pills,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

SELLING OUT!
In order to clear out our Entire Stock we offer all goods at greatly reduced prices.
A Large Assortment of
DOLLS FROM 10C. UP
PICTURE BOOKS,
SCRAP BOOKS,
MAGIC LANTERNS,
TOY DISHES,
CUPS AND SAUCERS,
VASES, TOILET SETS.
A FINE LINE OF PLUSH GOODS.
BASKETS, WRITING DESKS,
WORK BOXES, PAPER RACKS.
A Large Stock of
XMAS. CARDS
TO BE SOLD CHEAP.
BOOKS OF ALL KINDS—Hymn Books, Prayer Books, Etc.
Picture Frames, Looking Glasses, Hand Glasses, Brushes, Combs, Pipes.
TOYS Too Numerous to Mention.
Sleighs, Rocking Horses, Violins, Accordeons, Concertinas, Flutes, Piccolos, and Harmonicas, all to be sold CHEAP FOR CASH at
PRICE'S Bookstore
P.S.—SANTA CLAUS will be at Price's until Jan. 1, 1889. Call and see him.

SALESMEN WANTED.
Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed. Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co.,
Empire Nurseries, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

John Bright, the great English statesman is dying.

It is estimated that the late Presidential election in the United States cost that country $500,000,000.

It is pretty well understood that the Dominion Parliament will be summoned for the despatch of business on January 31.

National Pills are a mild purgative, acting on the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, removing all obstructions.

It is alleged that the class of wood delivered to the deserving poor in London by the contractor is so rotten that those who get it do not need to use either saw or axe upon it.

PREVAILING SICKNESS.
The most prevailing complaints at this season are rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, inflammations and congestions. For all these and other painful troubles Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best internal and external remedy.

A certain reverend gentleman near Kingsville says that the new railway through Essex is the funniest one in existence. It starts at the distillery, runs through Paradise and will reach the pit in a few days.

RELIABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.
Procure a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil from your medicine dealer, and use according to directions. It cured Ida Johnston, of Cornell, Ont., of that complaint, and she recommends it as a sure cure. For 25 years it has never failed to give satisfaction.

Peter Dymond, a well-known citizen of St. Marys, attempted suicide by cutting his throat. It appears that Peter had been drinking to excess of late and had come to the conclusion that life was not worth living, and took this means of making his exit from this "nundane sphere." Medical aid was summoned and Peter will be around again in a few days.

There is no doubt about the honest worth of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Thousands, who have been benefited by its use, will attest its virtues. This remedy cures liver and kidney complaint, and eradicates every trace of disease from the system.

The hog cholera is committing sad havoc with the swine in the southern part of Essex county, and in spite of the efforts of veterinary surgeons the disease is spreading. Some farmers have lost their entire drove, and they have asked the Government to come to their aid. It is supposed the disease was caught from some passing stock train.

To invigorate both the body and the brain, use the reliable tonic, Milburn's Aromatic Quinine Wine.

One of the most extensive and destructive conflagrations that has ever occurred in London visited that city last Friday evening. The watchman employed by the McClary Manufacturing Co. discovered flames issuing from a rear window of the establishment. The alarm was immediately given and the entire fire brigade was on the spot in a few seconds. Owing to the ladders not being long enough the fire laddies were unable to approach the heat of the blaze. In a few minutes the mammoth building was a mass of flames, and the fire was not got under control until midnight and not extinguished till early in the morning, when all that remained of the once busy hive of industry was the four walls partially demolished, the machinery and melted tinware laying piled in an unrecognizable heap at the bottom. The warehouse with the exception of the roof and part of the upper story remained intact, although the stock was badly damaged by water. The loss is estimated to be in the neighborhood of $100,000, partially covered by an insurance of $50,000. Fully 100 employees will be thrown out of employment by the conflagration.

DUNWICH COUNCIL.
(Continued from last week.)

Thos. McLaughlin, for gravel, $6.30; John Hatton, for gravel, $10.60; Jas. May, ditching and grading on 1st con., $30; Jas. H. Lugsdin, statute labor performed, $9.50; John McPhedrain, drawing gravel, $21; Duncan McCallum, drawing brick bats, $3; H Hollingshead, drawing gravel on Shackleton street, $1; Arch. Campbell, building culvert, $7; Jas. Sullivan, ditching, $20; D. McLean, for gravel, $22 70, Percival Jones, statute labor performed $4; Donald Graham, drawing grave, on Currie road, $45; Neil Blue, same; $65; Thos. Westcott, digging township portion Paterson drain, $18; Neil Blue, statute labor performed, $2; Thos Luton, statute labor performed, $14; Donald Graham, statute labor performed, $2; John Jackson, ditching, $20; Edward Grigg, statute labor performed, $13; John Hodder, work done, $5.60; Wm. Eaton, work done on John street, $10; Robert Stephenson, statute labor performed, $2; Thos. Griffin, plank for bridge, $28.38; James Rihill, statute labor performed, $4.50; John Paton, gravel, $24 10; Neil Blue, gravel, $57.30; John Bennett, building culvert on Bennett drain, $18; Benj Schultz, statute labor performed, $8; Godfrey Mc ill, cleaning ditch, $4; John Bennett, statute labor performed, $5; John McCormick, cutting thistles, $1.50; Duncan Paterson, gravel from Jane Paterson's pit, $8.20.

DOG FUND.

Joseph Marr, sheep killed by dogs, $4.50; K Finlayson, dog tax refunded, $1; Edward Grigg, same, $1; Donald McRae, sheep killed by dogs, $4.50; George Gowan, dog wrongfully assessed, $1.

On motion council adjourned to meet on Dec. 15.

Canadian Live-Stock and Farm Journal.

There have been few more marked successes in journalism than have been achieved by the Canadian Live-Stock and Farm Journal, of Hamilton, Ont. Though devoted especially to stock raising, it includes The Farm, The Dairy, The Apiary, Poultry, Horticulture and The Home, so that for the general farmer, or such farmers as make live stock breeding in any of its departments a leading feature of their business, we do not know where to find its equal in Canada. We heartily recommend it to our patrons as the leading agricultural paper in the Dominion. Price $1.00 per annum. A beautiful lithograph of the Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm, Guelph, is given to every subscriber for 1889. We can furnish it and our own paper together from now to December, 1889, for $1.80. Call at our office and see sample copy, also lithograph.

Dec. 9 will be "Charles Wesley's Sunday" among Methodists throughout the world. Wesley died 100 years ago.

No Universal Remedy
has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.
Boils and Carbuncles,
which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.
Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.
That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.
All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS
SUGAR COATED
A SURE CURE
FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROMPT IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE AID TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

CAMPBELLTON.

The young people are taking a lively interest in their Literary and Debating Society, and from all appearances the society will prove a success and be beneficial to all those who take part in it. By this organization we can see that the people of this vicinity are possessed with quite an amount of literary taste. A good program may be expected next Friday evening, consisting of readings, recitations, debate and music (vocal and instrumental.) The Crinan and Dutton choirs are also expected.

Our public school closes two weeks from Friday. By the way; the evening school has been re-organized and the scholars are proceeding with their work more vigorously than ever. They are now conjugating the verb "to love" in all its moods and tenses.

Our weather wiseacres are studying up the signs—feeling the moss on the trees and paying particular attention to the internal properties of the hogs. By their announcement of the result one would think that the Icelanders had got hold of the isothermal line and had twisted it around, giving us their end of it.

MIDDLEMISS.

On Monday last a squirrel hunt for a supper took place here. Thos. Graham and Nathaniel Beach were chosen captains, the result being a bad defeat for Graham. Nearly all of Beach's men were out, while not more than one-half of Graham's men took to the woods. The supper was one of the best ever given in this place, reflecting much credit on Mrs. Lucas. After the inner man had been satisfied the party left for Graham's house, where "the light fantastic" was tripped until the wee sma' hours. William Willey furnished the music.

Miss McLachlin left on Saturday for Alvinston where she will continue the dressmaking business.

On Sunday morning about 4 o'clock a noise was heard on the verandah of R. B. Campbell's store, and on examination it was found that some persons had been trying to break into the store. They tried to gain entrance by using a blacksmith's rasp and wedge, which they left behind. George Simmons' grocery store was entered the same night and a watch, some pocket-knives and other small things carried off. A few coppers which had been left in the till were also taken. A dose of cold lead would prove very beneficial to such scoundrels.

Mr. Trusler, the tailor, has been kept very busy lately making suits and overcoats for the boys. It would be well for you to call and leave your order for a suit, as Mr. Campbell keeps fine tweeds and panting and will make them up on short notice.

M. C. Campbell paid us a flying visit last week, but could not stay as he had to keep on travelling.

NOT FAR FROM HOME.

J. M. Kennedy, late of the Essex Centre Liberal, has entered over 200 suits against delinquent subscribers.

Expel the worms by using the safe and reliable anthelmintic Freman's Worm Powders.

A few days ago a young fellow named James Wing, whose parents reside just outside of Chatham, was sent to Blenheim to draw $255 from the township treasurer. He did so, and on his return, it is alleged, he was inveigled into the haunts of a notorious gang on the market square, and next morning had not a cent left. The poor fellow dared not go home, and his parents were greatly alarmed over his absence, but strange to say the police were only notified last night. It is said the robbery left the family so hard up that they had to sell some cattle to pay their taxes.

A REASONABLE HOPE
Is one that is based on previous knowledge or experience, therefore those who use B.B.B. may reasonably hope for a cure because the previous experience of thousands who have used it, shows it to have succeeded in even the worst cases.

BORN ON THE TRAIN.—Amongst the passengers of No. 9 express last Wednesday evening was a young married woman, Mrs. Martinie Paulsen, who was taken very sick with symptoms of labor soon after leaving Buffalo. She became so bad that the conductor was obliged to call a physician at Hagersville, who accompanied her to St. Thomas. Dr. W. E. Smith, the company's surgeon, took charge of the case and accompanied her to Detroit. While passing Charing Cross she was safely delivered of a male child which was still-born.

REPEAL OF THE SCOTT ACT.—The hotel-keepers of the county met at the Hutchinson House Thursday to discuss ways and means of repealing the Scott Act at the end of the term of three years. It was reported that the necessary petition for repeal had been prepared, and will shortly be deposited in the sheriff's office. A committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The repeal may be voted on after April 15, and if carried the Crook's Act will go into force on May 1. The city petition, said to contain 1,100 names, has been in Ottawa for some time.

WILL BE FULLY MET.
Indications of Dyspepsia, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Rising and Souring of Food, Wind on the Stomach, or a Choking or Gnawing sensation at the pit of the stomach are fully met by Burdock Blood Bitters which has cured the worst cases on record.

Todd Quick and Janes Mulder, both residents of Colchester South, have been arrested as the murderers of Wm. Holton, of Tilbury East, which occurred on the 19th of July. Quick is a young man of 24 years, and is the son of one of the wealthiest farmers in South Essex. He denies his guilt, but declines to say where he was the night of the murder. Mulder is colored, and about 28 years of age. He is a nephew of Isaac Mulder, of South Colchester, who has terrorized that neighborhood for years, and of whom it is said no constable dare to arrest him. Detective Rogers says that the chain of evidence is very strong against Quick, and that Mulder has offered to turn Queen's evidence. Quick has many relatives at Windsor, and his arrest for such a crime has crazed them.

O'Connor, who beat Teemer in the scull race for the championship of America at Washington lately, was given a rousing reception on his return to Toronto Monday evening, and presented with an address and a marked cheque for $1,000. A box containing $300 in gold was also presented to the champion by those who accompanied him to Washington.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

Pressure is to be brought on the fire underwriters in Montreal to effect a reduction in rates.

Great anxiety is felt in Winnipeg over the result of the railway case before the Supreme Court.

Miss Macdonald, sister of the Premier, died in Kingston on Sunday morning. She was 70 years of age.

The Governor General is interesting himself in organizing a winter course of scientific lectures in Ottawa.

Ottawa clergymen are opposed to the movement in favor of the abolition of Church property from exemption.

At a meeting of the farmers of North Waterloo, held in Guelph on Saturday, a farmers' institute was organized.

Work on the western extension of the Ontario and Pacific railway is being vigorously pushed forward in and near London.

Dr. Coventry says that the mortuary returns for Windsor for the past six months show that it is the healthiest town in the province.

It is understood in Montreal political circles that there will be no settlement of the Jesuit estate question until August next.

A syndicate is being formed in Montreal to utilize the waters of the Lachine rapids for the purpose of furnishing electric light to the city.

The new canal at the Canadian Sault will cost from two and a half to three million dollars. The contract calls for its completion by May, 1892.

It is rumoured that Premier Mercier has notified the members of the Quebec Civil Service that they will be dismissed unless they pay their debts.

The Michigan lumbermen are very eager for Canadian pine, and a Saginaw firm has concluded the purchase of three timber berths in the Georgian Bay district.

The inspector for the Provincial Board of Health has visited Sarnia and found that smallpox is well under control and likely to be shortly stamped out there.

The Dominion Government intend inviting the Australian colonies and New Zealand to send delegates to Ottawa to discuss questions relating to an interchange of trade.

It is stated on good authority that Rev. Father Chiniquy has felt himself compelled on account of age give up his travels, and intends to settle down in Montreal.

As a counter move to the action of the Dominion Government in increasing the export duty on Canadian pine logs, the Michigan lumbermen are agitating for the passage of a bill doubling the import duty on Canadian lumber.

It was argued before the Court of Appeal, in Montreal, in the case of Jacobs, who is undergoing a life sentence for the murder of his wife, that the proceedings at the trial are void, as the murdered woman's name was not in the indictment.

Sir John Macdonald denies the statement telegraphed to the Winnipeg "Sun" to the effect that the promoters of the Hudson Bay railway had been promised an increased subsidy by the Dominion Goverment if they succeeded in over throwing the Greenway Ministry.

In his Thanksgiving sermon, Rev. Mr. Herridge, of St. Andrew's, Ottawa, referring to the agitation in favour of taxing church property, contended that the church was fully entitled to the exemption by reason of her work in ennobling and purifying the whole national life.

Rev. W. J. Sparling, of Kingston, speaking on the temperance question, said he was sick and tired of temperance speakers denouncing the Government when the people had the power in their own hands of having a Government in favour of temperance if they wished.

Mr. and Mrs. Gobe, who reside near Kingston, banked their savings, amounting to $900, in an old stocking, hiding it under a bed. Their children transferred the stocking to an empty stove, and the other day when the first fire of the season was lighted the accumulations of years were destroyed.

It is a singular fact that despite the abandonment of the policy of assisted passages by the Dominion Government, the volume of immigration to Canada has increased considerably. The arrivals for the ten months of the year were 146,607, an increase of 18,347 over those for the same period last year.

AMERICAN.

A powerful American syndicate is about to be formed for the purpose of building railways in Siberia.

A team of Philadelphia cricketers will play a series of matches in England and Ireland next season.

Large prairie fires have been raging throughout the State of Dakota, and great damage has been done.

In the Vermont House of Representatives yesterday the bill granting to women the right of suffrage was defeated by 192 to 31.

Thirty-three dead bodies have been taken from the debris of the Rochester lantern works, and it is believed that ten or twelve remain.

C. J. Jones, a wealthy Kansas rancher, has purchased the herd of tame buffaloes owned by Warden Bedson, at Stony Mountain, Man.

The bears made another raid on Chicago wheat, knocking it down 1c to 1½c, and Monday's quotations were the lowest for some weeks.

The residents of Milford, Mass., and vicinity felt a slight but continuous earthquake on Saturday morning, lasting from two to four minutes.

It is officially stated that the description of the Kansas mining accident were greatly overdrawn. The total loss of life was 30, and the wounded numbered 20.

Thirty-three bodies have been taken from the ruins left by the great fire on Friday night in Rochester, and ten or twelve more bodies are probably still buried.

Boston has a sensation in the alleged opium smoking and infidelity of the beautiful and accomplished wife of Fred. Hurst, the proprietor of "Pond's Extract."

Flora Schmidt, the young woman who was taken to Bellevue hospital, in New York, on Friday night with symptoms of yellow fever, died on Saturday morning.

The steamer Iberia, which suffered in the collision with the Umbria, sank on Sunday night, while the latter steamer, having undergone repairs, started from New York yesterday morning.

Herman J. Emerson, the convicted New York policy dealer in whose place forger Bedell lost $30,000 in one year, was yesterday sentenced to penitentiary for one year and fined $1,000.

The steamer Umbria, which arrived at Queenstown on Sunday night from New York, made the passage in six days, two hours, and twenty-two minutes, the fastest eastern voyage on record.

Dr. Gibier, the famous Paris scientist, has performed an autopsy on the body of the head nurse who died of yellow fever at Jacksonville, and secured some of the intestinal fluids, and will search them for fever germs.

Mr. Phelps, the American Minister, in a speech before the members of the Glasgow bar yesterday, said that nothing in the administration of justice in Great Britain was more excellent than the prompt and efficient manner in which the laws were executed.

Mr. Fitzgerald, President of the Irish National Association of America, has made a very frantic appeal to the Irish in the United States to subscribe money freely to enable Mr. Parnell to defeat the "slimy methods" of Lord Salisbury before the Times' Commission.

A number of Detroit lumber merchants, in interviews Monday, said the effect of the increase of the export duty by the Canadian Government would be to stop the importation of logs into Michigan and the encouragement of the manufacture of lumber in Canada.

Mrs. Judge Hirsch, of Navarro County, Tex., gave birth to six children on the afternoon of November 3. There are four boys and two girls. The father, George Hirsch, is 31 and his wife 27. They have been married five years, and have three children besides the recent accession. Hirsch has named the boys Frederick, Mills, Cleveland and Thurman. The girls are Victoria and Louise. The babies are tagged to preserve their identity.

It is told of a Fall River teacher that she recently gave an object lesson in physiology, and in the course of the instruction asked where the backbone was. Not receiving any answer, she indicated its position in her own body, and then asked what it was. Nobody could answer at first. Suddenly a bright thought occurred to an observing youngster. His eyes sparkled and he raised his hand to attract the teacher's attention. "Well, John," she said, "what do you call it?" "Yer bustle," answered the lad promptly. The information was too much for the school, and the laughter that followed indicated that the innocent mistake was perceived by the other pupils.

FOREIGN.

General Bingham, Earl of Lucan, who took part in the famous charge of the Light Brigade is dead.

An explosion of fire damp occurred in a Belgian coal mine recently, by which 32 men were killed.

The daughter of the Empress dowager's brother has been selected as the consort of the Emperor of China.

The Invincibles Mullet and McCaffrey have been taken to London to give evidence efore the Parnell Commission.

Prince Ferdinand has been warned that a plot is hatching against him among the Bulgarian refugees in Constantinople.

Portugal, on invitation of Great Britain and Germany, will send vessels to take part in the blockade of East African ports.

Emperor William has been far from well for the last three weeks, and his medical advisers order rest of both mind and body.

Lord Carnarvon has written to The Times deprecating the idea that Colonies should have a say in the selection of their Governors.

The German ironclad Kaiser, with Prince Henry of Prussia on board, went aground this week while entering Copenhagen harbour.

Portugal, on the invitation of Great Britain and Germany, will send vessels to take part in the blockade of East African ports.

The Paris Municipal Council has decided to take part in the demonstration at the tomb of the revolutionist Baudin, on December 2.

The Non-Conformist Unionist Association gave a banquet in London on Wednesday evening in honour of Lord Salisbury and Lord Hartington.

It is stated as a suspicious fact that a St. Pitersburg student committed suicide at Borki, immediately after the recent accident to the Czar's train.

The Chinese Government has learned that a secret treaty has been concluded between Russia and Corea, providing for a Russian protectorate of Corea.

It is stated the Imperial Government have approved of the scheme to build eight first-class men-of war, a score of swift cruisers, and as many torpedo boats.

The St. Petersburg Messenger accuses Prince Bismarck of planning in 1863, under cover of aiding the Czar, for the annexation of Russian Poland to Prussia.

The expense of the London Times in the Parnell Commission are simply enormous. It is calculated that for witnesses alone the paper pays nearly $4,000 a day.

The people of New South Wales and New Zealand are of the same mind with Queensland on the right of a colony to be consulted regarding the choice of a Governor.

A meeting of the representatitle of all the interests concerned in the East African movement will be held in Cologne to-morrow to discuss the question of recruiting a colonial force.

The Irish Bishops have received another Papal rescript ordering them to actively execute the former rescript, which instructed them to denounce the Plan of Campaign and boycotting.

The bill voting £5,000,000 to extend the operations of the Ashbourne Act was introduced in the House of Commons yesterday and Mr. Gladstone proposed its amendment, making a vigorous speech.

King Millan has offered to confirm the right of ex-Queen Natalie to the title of Majesty provided she foregoes her intended protest to the European Courts and admits the legality of her divorce.

Ex-Empress Victoria arrived Monday morning at Port Victoria, where she was met by the Queen, the Princess Louise and Beatrice, and Count von Haizfield, and accompanied by them to Windsor.

The English and German consular authorities in Zanzibar are about to issue a similar proclamation forbidding German and English subjects to contract with slave-owners for a supply of slave labour.

Lieut. Dhuleep Singh, son of the famous Maharajah, who was for years a pensioner of the British Government, will pay a visit to Ottawa shortly on the staff of Sir John Ross, who will be the guest of the Governor-General.

A decided sensation was created at the Parnell Commission, when Lady Mount, morres, referring to the murder of her husband in 1880, said that before the Land League was established his Lordship was on good terms with his tenants.

Major Sobiebert urges upon the German Government a partial abolition of the fortresses on the French frontier, which are merely obstructions, as in the event of war France would mass her troops, and the contest would be decided by pitched battles.

The indirect overture of King Milan of Servia for Russian support has been summarily rejected. The South Russian press freely describes him as a renegade Sclav and Austrian puppet. The press censor has not interfered with the newspapers for their attacks upon Milan.

The canal through the Isthmus of Corinth in Greece, is just approaching completion. It was first planned 2 500 years ago, and work was actually begun on it under the Emperor Nero over 1,700 years ago. When completed it will be four miles long, and deep enough to float the largest vessels that navigate the adjacent seas.

The Birmingham Unionists have decided to present an address to Mr. Chamberlain on his return home with his bride. They will also present an address to Mr. Bright on his 77th birthday. Mr. Bright continues to be confined to his bed with a slight renewal of bronchitis. His son writes that it will be impossible for his father to resume his place in Parliament for a long time.

The Viceroy of India informed a Durbar at Patiala that the British Government would not avail itself of the offers of money from the Indian princes for the defence of the country, but would ask them to form strong native forces fit for service with the Imperial troops. The government would provide English officers and furnish breech-loaders and a battery of four guns for each Punjaub chief.

Have You Thought About It?

Why suffer a single moment when you can get immediate relief from all internal or external pains by the use of Polson's Nerviline, the great pain cure. Nerviline has never been known to fail in a single case; it cannot fail, for it is a combination of the most powerful pain subduing remedies known. Try a 10 cent sample bottle of Nerviline. You will find Nerviline a sure cure for neuralgia, toothache, headache. Buy and try. Large bottles 25 cents, by all druggists.

Left on a Guano Island.

The Governor of the French colony of Senegal on the west coast of Africa, has been put on trial on a charge of homicide in having left to die, of hunger and thirst, on one of the Alcatraz guano Islands, four black men who had been left there to guard a French flag, put up to mark the discovery of some important guano deposits.

Alcatraz proper is an isolated rock south of the Bissagos Archipelago, off the coast of Senegambia. It is perpetually surrounded by clouds of aquatic birds. The loss of these poor negroes has called out from an officer of the French marine an account of an adventure which he had some years ago on this same Alcatraz island.

"I had shipped," writes this officer, "on board the coaster Etoile as supercargo, with a crew of six men, a pilot, and a little cabin boy named Yoro, all blacks. We were bound for the Bissagos Archipelago and the Rio Nunez.

"After having been almost lost in a storm off the shoals of Orango Island, we found ourselves one morning off a little island which seemed as it it must be covered with snow, so white was it. It was Alcatraz—the scene of the death of those poor negroes whom the Senegal Government has forgotten to re-victual.

"The weather was now calm, and I insisted upon putting off to the island in a small boat, in spite of the protests of the pilot, who, looking at the sky, said he feared a tornado was coming. I took with me Yoro, the little black cabin boy, and my rifle; and finding the island one mass of white guano, I sent the sailors who had rowed me over back to the vessel, with the small boat, to fetch some sacks for a little of the guano.

"The island was like a basin turned bottom up; not a blade of grass, not a drop of water; simply guano, with a rock here and there. And for inhabitants, millions of birds, making a fearful racket with their screeches, and careering above our heads.

"Yoro skipped about the rocks, chasing the birds, hunting for eggs, and having a good time generally; as we were landing, one of the sailors barely saved him from falling into the water by seizing him by the arm, greatly to the dissappointment of a gigantic shark which bobbed up, all ready for him.

"After we had sent the boat back to the vessel, Yoro lay down on a rock, and fell asleep; and as it was very warm, I followed his example. All at once we were wakened by a clap of thunder. Yoro sprang up in terror.

"'There's your tornado, white man!' he exclaimed.

"And so it was. Almost in an instant the tempest hid everything; I just saw the Etoile bearing off to sea before the wind, as the pouring rain shut her out from view. The storm ceased about five in the afternoon. Coming out of our niche in the rock, wet to the very bones, we scanned the horizon. Not a vestige of our ship to be seen!

"There was nothing to do but to settle down for the night on the rock, just as we were. I did not sleep, and I spare you an account of my sensations—without water, without food, hungry, thirsty and wet. At daybreak I climbed to the highest point on the island, and looked anxiously in every direction for the "Etoile." Nothing to be seen of her! The blue sea stretched away as far as the eye could reach—nothing but the sea.

"It was a dreadful day, with a broiling sun and a suffocating heat, made the more intolerable by the cracking of the mass of guano, and the odor that it exhaled, following the drenching of one day and the terrible heat of the next.

"Another night came, and with it little breeze, which made the air somowhat more breathable. We were almost dying with hunger and thirst, when, at about four o'clock the next morning, I heard the sound of a cannon.

"I jumped to my feet with a beating heart. The "Etoile" had a small cannon on board. I looked in every direction, and as the daylight came on, I espied the "Etoile making for us with all sail!

"In a short time she had cast anchor, and put off a boat for us. We threw ourselves, Yoro, and I, upon a jug of water that the men had brought, and made all possible haste from the scene of our frightful sojourn."

Venus, the Evening Star.

A very brilliant star may be seen in the south-west almost as soon as the sun has set. This star is the planet Venus, and she outshines every other one of the two thousand five hundred stars visible in the heavens on clear, moonless nights.

But why is she shining in that particular portion of the sky, and why does she change her place from time to time, while the stars that twinkle around her remain always the same? It is because the stars are so far away that they seem to retain the same relative position in regard to each other.

If we were near enough to them, we should find that they, too, are moving, some in one direction and some in another, some approaching, and some receding from the earth. The fixed stars, as they are called, are suns, and shine by their own inherent light. Venus, like the earth, borrows her light from the sun, and revolves around it.

If we were on the sun, and looking at Venus, she would move in a circle around the sun. As we see her from the earth, which is also moving, she appears to move or oscillate in straight lines east and west of the sun.

On July 11th, Venus became evening star, being then close to the sun and so hidden in his bright rays as to be invisible for several weeks. Moving eastward, she was far enough from the sun to be easily seen in September, shining with a soft, tremulous light in the glowing west for a little while after sunset. She has ever since been moving farther from the sun, growing brighter, and setting later, until she is now the star that all are praising as she shines in the western sky, for about two hours after sunset.

Venus will move eastward until February 19, 1889, when she reaches her greatest distance east of the sun, and begins to retrace her steps towards him, ending her course as evening star on April 30th.

The western sky, during the winter and the spring, will therefore be blessed with the presence of the Queen of the Stars, becoming all the time more radiantly beautiful and only reaching her period of greatest brilliancy on March 25th.

The Greenland Expedition.

The safe arrival of Dr. Nansen and his fellow explorers at Godthaap is a cause for rejoicing, but whether it is an event of much scientific importance is yet to be determined. When the little band of mountain-climbers set out on this expedition, the plan was to traverse the "Sahara of the North" at the widest part, or at least as far north as the seventieth parallel. That is the region on the East coast visited by Koldeway and Soresby. A march across country would have brought the explorors out on Baffin bay at Upernavik, or at least at Godhaven, and such a trip, seven or eight hundred miles, would have laid open to the eye of science the very heart of the mysterious Arctic continent. Instead, the party has appeared at Godthaap, on Davis strait, and near the southern point of Greenland. If they struck in at the same latitude on the other side, they have merely tramped for a couple of hundred miles across the snow far south of the Arctic circle, in a country already pretty well known—an achievement of no especial value or interest. On Dr. Nansen's return to Bergen we shall know whether his expedition has been merely a snow-scrambling frolic or a conquest of the last untravelled continent.—[New York Tribune.

The Mercantile Agency reported that S. M. Clapp & Co. are slaughtering Boots and Shoes at cost and under. They are selling Ladies' Fine Kid Button Boots, (worked holes), for $1, any size; Child's Solid Leather Lace Boots, 7 to 10, for 50 cents; Boys' all Leather School Boots, 75 cents; in fact everything in footwear at ridiculously low prices. Now is the time to get "Big" value at the West End Bargain Shoe Houses, 364 and 440 Queen west. S. M. Clapp & Co.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

PLEA FOR WOMEN'S POCKETS.

Something must be done for women in order to give them a dress with more pocket conveniences. Man can have pockets all over him. Woman has none or next to none. She has no vest for pockets. She has few pockets in whatever garment she may wear that represents an overcoat. Women as yet have not complained loudly of this lack of pockets, but they feel this lack just the same. They have as much to carry in pockets as men, or would have did they wear pockets. They are often obliged to carry their pocketbooks in their hands through lack of a pocket. Dresses might be made having permanent pocketbooks stitched on them. This would be a safeguard against pocketbook snatching. Both time and money are lost through the awkwardness and inconvenience of opening pocketbooks in public places.

Women have not now a style of dress which admits of pocket conveniences. Occasionally an ulster grants them the luxury of putting their hands in their pockets during cold weather. But by the time they have become accustomed to the privilege a change of fashion comes, and ulster pockets are swept out of existence. Then women are pocketless again. Women have a right to as many pockets as men. Now, they frequently make up for this deficiency in bags. They are nice bags, too, of silk or satin. But a bag is a bag, anyway. What if every man had to carry a bag to keep his money, his night key, his tobacco, his jack-knife and other things in?

CLOTHING A MERE MATTER OF FORM.

The London Times says:—At Yokohama Mr. Caine, M. P., had an embarassing little adventure. At the back of every Japanese house, he says, is a pretty little garden with a large bath-house containing tubs of hot and cold water. The Japanese are as scrupulously clean in their persons as in their houses, and often wash all over two or three times a day. The room in which we had our dinner looked out upon the large open window of the bath-house, in which three men and two women were tubbing with that absolute disregard of decency which characterized our common parents before the fall when they were naked and not ashamed.

Later on in the evening, as I was passing to my room, one of the waitresses, in the costume of Eve, made me a most profound and grave bow, wishing me good night. No Japanese has yet become civilized enough, with all their wonderful civilization, to believe it possible under any circumstances that he or she is naked. In summer time this condition of things is universal. It is a little embarrassing at first to the modest European, but one soon gets used to it, and accepts it as the primitive innocence of a simple and guileless people.

WHY SHE WAS A HEROINE.

We were running down from Charleston to Savannah, and the train was humming along as high speed when the danger signal blew and the air-brakes were put on hard. As the train stopped all the passengers piled out to see what was the trouble, and we soon discovered that a culvert around the short curve had been washed out. A negro woman had flagged the train with a white apron, and of course we looked upon her as a heroine.

"When did you discover that the culvert had gone?" I asked.

"Just about half an hour ago."

"And your first thought was to stop the train?"

"Yes, sah."

"Well, you are a brave woman. We owe our lives to you."

"Does ye? I nebber thought of that."

"But you stopped the train."

"Yes, sah; but I didn't want dat bullgine to git off de track and go ploughin' frew my cotton patch an' frowin' hot water all ober the place. Dat's why I stopped the train, sah."—[Detroit Free Press.

FASHION NOTES.

The Russian blouse is still a great favourite, and is worn with house dresses, dinner toilets, and even at the theatre. These are shirred at the neck into a band of velvet, overlaid with costly gold passementerie, giving a rich Oriental effect to the blouse. The cuffs match this collar, and sometimes there is a deep-pointed girdle similarly decorated. In this case there is a velvet yoke instead of a collar. Thus made they are appriately worn by young married women as well as girls. The blouse in any form was, however, never intended for women who are stout and short of stature.

Among the pretty house jackets are those of dark-green cricot cloth, to which are added very gay officers' collars and cuffs of Roman-red pliot cloth, embroidered with gold. These trimmings can easily be made at home, and then added to the plain French house-jackets or jerseys of flexible webbing. Those who adopt this military and masculine style of dress should exercise considerable care in the selection of these two conspicuous colours, the least vivid of the Roman-red shades and the dead-gold braiding being the correct colours. The braided sets also appear on jackets of terracotta, almond, and admiral-blue camel's hair.

Bonnets are imported for bridesmaids' wear, made of white velvet, with trimmings of white tulle, the airy loops held in place by very handsome pins and other devices in gold. The crowns of some of these bonnets are covered with tiny gold stars, and at the left side of the crown are downy white ostrich tips, powdered with gold. Other white velvet bonnets are trimmed with white silk astrakhan or pure white fox fur. Pearl and dove-grey velvet bonnets have silver and cut steel stars on the crown with a network of the same beads overlaying the crown. Dark-green velvet bonnets with copper gimps and ornaments are also very stylish, and those of dark blue, decorated with dull silver gimps and buckles of old silver set with fine French brilliants.

There is certainly a change for the better in the shape and size of winter bonnets. Women who this time last year sought a head-covering for the genuine protection it would afford them were in despair. The old favourite shapes disappeared like magic, and they were simply informed in the shops that they "were not worn," and a bonnet any wider of crown than two hands put together in the shape of a shed roof is was impossible to procure at any price. The folly of fashion was carried to a still more ludicrous an inartistic extreme by the brims, which were out of all proportion to their absurdly high crowns and face trimmings. This season all the exaggerations are modified; the bonnets are larger, and shield the back of the head almost entirely, which the horse-shoe style of last winter did not. The bonnet is now really a bonnet, and not the diminutive toy head gear that it was.

More War Scares.

It is probable that Europe will now again become the prey of occasional war scares, as it was a year ago, the cause being in part the same as then, the movement of Russian troops on the Austrian and German frontiers. The accumulation of force already effected there is clear enough in comparing the present time with twelve months ago. Yet it does not follow that this redistribution of troops is hostile; it is rather precautionary. Russia has awakened to the enormous advantages that Germany and Austria combined would have over her in their railway lines, enabling them to mobilize their forces and to transfer them with great rapidity to the frontier. The same transportation facilities would bring forward Italy's troops should the three great powers of Central Europe remain in their present close union of interests and action. It would be a long and costly task to undertake to match these with equal facilities on her own side, and even then they would be useless without the nearer presence of sufficient troops to move if required. It seems to be a fair judgment that the strengthening of Russia's garrisons on the Galician frontier is thus far a move of prudence rather than of belligerency.

When Niagara Wears Away.

According to statistics the mean depth of Lake Superior is 475 feet, Lake Huron averages 250 feet, Lake Michigan rises 581 feet above and falls 168 feet below the sea level. The surface of Lake Ontario is 246 feet above the ocean. Its deepest part is 491 feet below sea level and its mean depth is 300 feet. But Lake Erie has an average depth of less than 70 feet and is only 200 feet in its deepest part.

When Niagara Falls has worn down to a series of cascades or has broken away a little more, Lake Erie will be drained to the depth of a fish pond, and eventually will shrink to the dimensions of a river.

This will leave Buffalo and the towns on its banks far inland, but it may also submerge Toronto.

In mirthful measures, warm and free,
I sing, dear maid, and sing for thee:
But I think I would be performing greater service to you and your sex by singing, not in measured rythm but by setting out some strong truths in simple prose. If you or any of your female friends are suffering from ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, or unnatural discharges, use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is sure to eradicate these complaints in a short time. It is the only medicine for woman's peculiar ailments, sold by druggists, UNDER A POSITIVE GUARANTEE, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Gold rings patterned after the antique with plain gold shield settings are again being sported.

Vital Wicks.

"There are three wicks to the lamp of a man's life; brain, blood and breath." Thus writes an eminent American author. The most frequent derangements occur in the blood and in the liver, by which, when in healthy condition, the blood is purified. Look out for the terrible chain of diseases that owe their inception to torpid liver and consequent impure blood. When the symptoms of liver and kidney troubles, consumption (Lung scrofula), bronchitis, and dropsy, make their appearance, the system is in immediate need of a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Its marvellous effects have been tested and proven in the cure of tens of thousands of cases. It purifies and enriches the blood, restores lost vitality, and effectually eradicates the seeds of the worst maladies that afflict mankind.

Silver rings set with diamonds and other precious stones are all the rage out West.

Ills, Wills, and Pills.

An odd mixture of words, but the sufferer from constipation, indigestion, impure blood, biliousness, and other such ILLS, can be cured if he WILLS without taking the horrid, old fashioned PILLS. These are superseded in our day by those wonder-working, yet tiny, little globules, known as Dr. Pierce' Pleasant Pellets. No griping, no drastic purging; do not cause costiveness afterwards, as the old style pills do. One little Granule a dose.

Diamonds of rich yellow, cinnamon and pink tints are very much sought after just now.

ITCHING PILES.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture: intense itching and stinging; most at night: worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 cents.

Two interlocked hearts mounted with pearls on a knife-edge setting is a late acquisition to lace pin novelties.

Grouse claws mounted in silver are being worn as brooches.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

A delicate spray of purple lilacs, with diamond centres, forms a very pretty breast-pin.

FEARFUL EXPLOSIONS are sometimes caused by the use of poor coal oil. For absolute safety and brilliant light use Carbon Safety Oil. Sold by dealers everywhere in the Dominion.

Hairpins with amber shell heads set in with knots of small diamonds are now worn.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, depsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Luben's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V LUBON 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont. A. P. 426

PATENTS procured. Patent Attorneys, and experts Est'd 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

KNITTING Creelman Bros., Georgetown, Ont. MACHINES

CANOES. Send for Ill. Catalogue WM. ENGLISH. Peterboro, Ont.

FARMS FOR SALE or RENT. ALL SIZES, KINDS and PRICES. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, DRAYTON, ONT.

AGENTS! UNEMPLOYED! We handle only standard specialties, of which no other firm has a right to sell in Canada. Write us. Tarbox Bros., Toronto, Ont

THE CELEBRATED AMERICAN CORN POPPER, just the thing for long winter evenings, candy pulls, pop corn balls. By mail, post paid, on receipt of 25 cents. Address, C. W. DENNIS, 337 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

THE DANDY" PATENT BAGHOLDER, which every farmer wants now, costs only 75 cts., and if there is no local agent, may be obtained (free by express or mail), on sending price to C. W. ALLEN & CO., World Building, Toronto.

ONTARIO VETERINARY COLLEGE—OVER five hundred students in successful practice; fees fifty dollars per session; session 1888 9 begins October 20th. Principal, Prof. SMITH, V. S., Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 122 Yonge st., Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. Established 1860. E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt., 73 King st. E., Toronto

WHY YOU SHOULD USE
SCOTT'S
EMULSION
OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES.
It is Palatable as Milk.
It is three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil.
It is far superior to all other so-called Emulsions.
It is a perfect Emulsion, does not separate or change.
It is wonderful as a flesh producer.
It is the best remedy for Consumption, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Cough and Colds.
Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

Diamond Dyes

Brilliant!
Durable!
Economical!

Diamond Dyes excel all others in Strength, Purity and Fastness. None other are just as good. Beware of imitations, because they are made of cheap and inferior materials, and give poor, weak, crocky colors. To be sure of success, use only the DIAMOND DYES for coloring Dresses, Stockings, Yarns, Carpets, Feathers, Ribbons, &c., &c. We warrant them to color more goods, package for package, than any other dyes ever made, and to give more brilliant and durable colors. Ask for the Diamond and take no other.

A Dress Dyed
A Coat Colored
Garments Renewed
} FOR 10 CENTS.

A Child can use them!
At Druggists and Merchants. Dye Book free.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Montreal, P. Q.

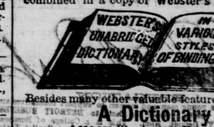
BEAUTIFUL STORY" AND GOLDEN GEMS of Religious Thought, by J. W. Buel and T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; beautiful illustrations, colored and plain; handsomely bound; large quarto book; plain type and just such a book that takes the eye at a glance; terms to agents extra liberal. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

CANADA SHIPPING CO.—Beaver Line of Steamships, sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. Saloon tickets, Montreal to Liverpool $40, $50, and $60. Return tickets, $80, $90, and $110 according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate, $30; Round trip tickets, $60, Steerage, $20, Round trip tickets, $40. For further particulars and to secure births, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888—New importations of English Sheeps, Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

CANCER, TUMORS, ULCERS, SCROFULA, etc., cured permanently without the knife. Apply to DR. W. L. SMITH, 124 Queen St. E., Toronto.

Leather Belting
BEST VALUE IN THE DOMINION.
F. E. DIXON & CO., MAKERS, 70 KING ST. E, TORONTO
Send for Price Lists and Discounts.



Niagara Falls.
A beautiful photo-lithograph, 18x24, absolutely free to each subscriber to WESTERN ADVERTISER whose subscription is paid by the 20th of December. Twelve large pages every week. New type, heavy paper, illustrated departments. Only $1 per year, or $c for four subscriptions. Balance 1888 free.
Address, ADVERTISER PRINTING CO., London, Ont., Canada.

Stained Glass
FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

PURITY AND STRENGTH COMBINED IN THE EMPIRE BAKING POWDER
Manufactured by
Ellis & Keighley, - Toronto.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!! Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILK HANDKERCHEIF, and The Magic Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Whiton Novelty Co., Toronto, Ont.

IN THE SELECTION OF A CHOICE GIFT
For Pastor, Parent, Teacher, Child, or Friend, both elegance and usefulness will be found combined in a copy of Webster's Unabridged.

Besides many other valuable features, it contains A Dictionary
of 118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings,
A Gazetteer of the World
locating and describing 25,000 Places,
A Biographical Dictionary of nearly 10,000 Noted Persons,
A Dictionary of Fiction found only in Webster,
All in One Book.
3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Illustrations than any other American Dictionary.
Sold by all Booksellers. Pamphlet free.
G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER
A PERFECT FOOD FOR THE SICK
A WARMING & NUTRITIOUS BEVERAGE
A POWERFUL INVIGORATOR

Delicious Beef Tea
IS MADE FROM
Johnston's Fluid Beef
WHICH IS
PALATABLE AND HIGHLY NUTRITIOUS.

Use Hop Bitters.
Cure All Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Liver, Kidney, Urinary Organs, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, DRUNKENESS. $1,000 Reward paid for a case they will not cure.

PURE GOLD FLAVORING EXTRACTS
BAKING POWDER
BAKING POWDER IS MADE FROM ABSOLUTELY PURE CREAM TARTAR AND SODA. FLAVORING EXTRACTS ARE THE STRONGEST, PUREST AND BEST.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.
Subscribed Capital, ... $ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital, ... 2,500,000
Total Assets, ... 10,000,000
The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to
J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

Are you Bald. Is your Hair Gray or Falling Out, Try Dr. Dorenwend's
GREAT HAIR MAGIC. GERMAN
DORENWEND PARIS HAIR WORKS
It is the finest in the Hair Tonic world.
Price $1 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $5. Try it. It will make your hair grow thick and strong. For sale by all druggists everywhere, or send direct to the manufacturer enclosing the amount.
A. DORENWEND, Paris Hair Works,
103 and 105 Yonge Street, Toronto, Can.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Port ann every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other Information apply A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec: Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

Young Men
SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address
M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto.

WANTED.
EVERY MUSIC TEACHER
in Canada to send for our SPECIAL CATALOGUES of Sheet Music and Music Books.
WE SELL CHEAPER than any other house in the trade. Manufacturers of Band Instruments and Dealers in all kinds of Musical Merchandise.
WHALEY, ROYCE & CO., 283 Yonge St., TORONTO.

We are children who cheerfully join in the chorus
When Breadmaker's Yeast is the subject before us—
Mamma tried all the rest, Highest,
So she knows it's the best,
*'Cause her bread is the wh

MISCELLANEOUS

The Hudson Bay Company expect a comparatively small supply of furs as the result of the season's trading. The land sales have been larger than last year's.

The Italians were not pleased with the manners of Emperor William of Germany. They complain that he has a brusque way of cutting his sentences short and that he mounts his horse clumsily. Then again, he is not fond of macaroni. Altogether he is far from the Italian's ideal of a hero.

The amount of skilled labour which is absorbed in a country where it is thought necessary in times of peace to be prepared for war may be partially estimated by a reference to the statistics of Woolwich arsenal in England. The number of workmen on the pay sheets at the arsenal when there is no great pressure of work is in round numbers eleven thousand. About two thousand of these are employed in the gun factory alone. At the small arms factory at Enfield another two thousand workmen are employed. If to these figures are added the number of men engaged in building war vessels and torpedo boats, it is probable a grand total of 25,000 artisans would be reached. In times of war there would be a large increase on all these figures. The waste of labour in all Europe rendered necessary by the possibility of war must be enormous

The pianoforte has always been considered by musicians an unsatisfactory instrument, owing to its inability to sustain the sound. If report speaks truly this defect has been remedied, and the whole art of pianoforte playing will be revolutionized. It is said that Dr. Eisenmann, of Berlin, has invented a piano which, by an ingenious appliance of electro-magnetism, is capable of sustaining and diminishing or increasing the sound at the will of the performer. The most extraordinary claim made for the system is that by moving the bar with the electro-magnets from one part of the instrument to another the timbre of the tone changes, so as to resemble that of other instruments—the violin, oboe, and clarionet, for instance. The musical world will await impatiently further details of an invention which will do much to mitigate the tediousness of public piano recitals.

A real estate and land boom is in full blast at Melbourne. A correspondent of the London "Times" (Oct. 31) says an attempt has actually been made to buy the Anglican cathedral there, the price offered being £300,000 stg. The bills and cheques passing through the Melbourne clearing-house during the first half of the current year amounted to no less than £160,000,000 stg., as compared with a total of only £88,000,000 during the first half of 1887. General business has much improved of late, but this enormous increase in banking operations was due in the main to the boom. In the twelvemonth ending May 31 last 270 companies, with an aggregate capital of £52,000,000 stg., were floated in Melbourne, of which sum no less than £27,000,000 represented the capital of new land companies. The boom, however, is near its end. The banks have set their faces against land paper.

It is considered probable that the United States Government will order an enquiry into the administration of affairs in Alaska. Statements have been made and published that the natives are subjected to the most terrible oppression, and that the most revolting abuses, particularly in regard to the native women, are permitted. A Chicago journal says:—"We need not believe all that is said of cruelties and outrages practised there upon defenceless natives to feel a thrill of horror. There is enough in the accounts of occasional travellers, there is enough in the discreetly worded reports of Government officials, to show that in Alaska exists a little hell for which we are responsible." This is a very serious admission, and the acknowledged existence of the abuses mentioned, with the dissatisfaction felt at the high-handed proceedings of the commercial company which has the monopoly of the seal fisheries, may lead to Congress turning its attention to the general position of affairs in Alaska.

Canon Isaac Taylor in his article in the "Fortnightly Review," has shown that millions of dollars are spent by the evangelizing societies of Great Britain in the work of converting the heathen in far off lands of Asia and Africa. He has also pointed out that at the present rate of conversion, and if the relapses are taken into account, it will take one million years to convert the world, supposing its population remains stationary. The passing thought may be suggested to many benevolent and patriotic Englishmen that a large portion of the foreign mission contributions could be more profitably employed in relieving the distress and elevating the moral condition of the thousands of poor outcasts of both sexes who drag on a miserable existence in White chapel and other slums of London and the large cities of Great Britain. When the injunction to preach the Gospel to all the world was issued, it was surely never intended to completely withdraw the reminder, "The poor ye have always with you."

Expanding Its Borders.

Application has been made under the "Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letter Patent Act" for incorporation of the business at present owned by Mr. Charles Stark, of 48, 50, and 52 Church street, capital stock to be $200 000 shares $100 each. Mr. Stark's business is well known throughout Canada. It was established some 12 years ago in two rooms in the present building, with one assistant. The principal lines of merchandise were watches, jewellery and fire arms, the outlet for the goods being largely through the medium of illustrated catalogues sent direct to the consumer. This enterprise was new to Canada, and Mr. Stark as its pioneer has developed and expanded it rapidly, its growth being upon such a well-laid foundation that to-day it holds the first place in the market, and in special lines enjoys a monopoly. The advisability of converting it into a Joint Stock Company is readily seen by its rapid expansion, having outgrown the limits of a private concern. Mr. Stark has five distinct departments, all connected and linked together, and employs over 60 clerks and mechanics. In addition to the original business of wholesale and retail dealers in guns, ammunition, sporting equipments athletic goods, watches, jewellery, etc. two years Mr. Stark started in connection with his business a live weekly newspaper, called "Forest and Farm," which has developed into an independent and profitable department. He also manufactures 250 silver watch cases per week, also makes fine gold, silver, and diamond jewellery of every description. And to meet the constant demands has annexed to his establishment a dry goods mailing and express department. The converting of this concern into a Joint Stock Company will allow of unlimited expansion, and with the continuance of Mr. Stark's personal supervision assures all associating themselves with the new company large and positive dividends. The name of the company is to be "The Chas. Stark Co., Limited," of Toronto. The provisional directors are Chas. Stark, C. T. Stark, Frank S. Taggart.—The Mail, Nov. 14th. 1888.

Is the Fiend A Russian?

The Temps recalls, in connection with the Whitechapel murders, a series of similar horrors which occurred in Paris six years ago. A Russian subject named Wassily murdered eight women of loose character and was tried for the crimes. The jury declared him to be insane, and he was handed over to the Russian authorities and sent back to his own country, where he was confined in an asylum until January 1st, 1888, when he was set at liberty. The supposition naturally arises that he may have found his way to England and there renewed his crusade against fallen women.

Extravagant young wife—(pocketing a $20 bill)—"George, dear, I often wonder why the money you give me to spend is called pin money." Young husband—(with a slight sigh)—"Because, like pins, no one knows where it all goes to."

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR,

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XXXV.—RETRIBUTION.

Oh, the horror and drudgery of those next few weeks, while Hugh, in a fever of shame and disgust, was anxiously and wearily making difficult arrangements, financial or otherwise, for that hopeless flitting to the sunny South, that loomed ahead so full of gloom and wretchedness for himself and Winifred! There was nothing for it left now but to face the unspeakable, to endure the unendurable. He must go through with it all, let it cost what it might. For at least in the end he had one comfort. At San Remo, Winifred would find out she was mistaken; there was no Elsie at all, there or elsewhere.

Meanwhile, Winifred grew rapidly worse, so ill, that even Hugh began to perceive it, and despaired of being able to carry her in safety to San Remo. The shock at the Relfs' had told seriously upon her weak and shattered constitution; the constant friction of her relations with Hugh continued to tell upon it every day that passed over her. The motherless girl and childless mother brooded in secret over her great grief; she had no one, absolutely no one on earth who could sympathise with her in her terrible trouble. She longed to fling herself upon Elsie's bosom—the dear old Elsie that had once been, the Elsie that perhaps could still understand her—and to cry aloud to her for pity, for sympathy. When she got to San Remo, she sometimes thought, she would tell all—every word—to Elsie; and Elsie at least must be very much changed if in spite of all she could not feel for her.

Proud as she was, she would throw herself on Elsie's mercy. Elsie had wronged her, and she would tell all to Elsie. But not to Hugh. Hugh was hard and cold and unyielding as steel. It would not be for long. She would soon be released. And then Hugh—— She shrank from thinking it.

At last the day came for their journey South. They were going alone, without even a maid; glad to have paid the servants their arrears and escape alive from the clutches of the butchers and bakers. November fogs shrouded the world. Hugh had completed those vile transactions of his with the attorneys and the money-lenders, and felt faintly cheered by the actual metallic chink of gold for the journey rattling and jingling in his trousers' pocket. But Winifred sat very weak and ill in the far corner of the first-class carriage that bore them away from Charing Cross Station. They had come up the day before from Almundham to town, and spent the night luxuriously in the rooms of the Metropole. You must make a dying woman comfortable. And Hugh had dropped round with defiant pride into the Cheyne Row Club, assuming in vain the old jaunty languid poetical air—"of the days before he had degenerated into land-owning," Hatherly said afterwards—just to let recalcitrant Bohemia see for itself it hadn't entirely crushed him by its jingling jibes and its scathing critiques of A Life's Philosophy. But the protest fell flat; it was indeed a feeble one: heedless Bohemia, engrossed after its wont with its last new favorite, the rising author of Lays of the African Lakeland, held out to Hugh Massinger of Whitestrand Hall its flabbiest right hand of lukewarm welcome. And this was the Bohemia that once had grasped his landless fingers with fraternal fervour of sympathetic devotion! The chilliness of his reception in the scene of his ancient popularity stung the Bard to the quick. No more for him the tabour, the cymbals, and the oaten pipe; no more the blushful Cheyne Row Hippocrene. He left himself demode. The rapid stream of London society and London thought had swept eddying past and left him stranded. Oh for some enchanted carpet of the Arabian Nights, to transport him back with a bound from his present self to those good old days of Thirds and Elsie!

But enchanted carpets are now unhappily out of date, and Channel steamers have quite superseded the magical shallops of good Harun-al-Raschid. In plain prose, the Straits were rough, and Winifred suffered severely from the tossing. At Calais, they took the through train for Marseilles, having secured a coupe lit at Charing Cross beforehand.

That was a terrible night, that night spent in the coupe-cit with Winifred; the most terrible Hugh had ever endured since the memorable evening when Elsie drowned herself.

They had passed round Paris at gray dusk, in their comfortable through carriage, by the Chemin de Fer de Ceinture to the Gare de Lyon, and were whirling along on their way to Fontainebleu through the shades of evening, when Winifred first broke the ominous silence she had preserved ever since they stopped at St. Denis. "It won't be for long now," she said dryly, "and it will be so convenient for you to be at San Remo."

Hugh's heart sank once more within him. It was quite clear that Winifred thought Elsie was there. He wished to heaven she was, and that he was no murderer. Oh, the weight that would have been lifted off his weary soul if only he could think it so! The three years' misery that would rise like a mist from his uncertain path, if only he did not know to a certainty that Elsie lay buried at Orfordness in the shipwrecked sailors' graveyard by the Low Lighthouse. He looked across at Winifred as she sat in her place. She was pale and frail; her wasted cheeks showed white and hollow. As she leaned back there, with a cold light gleaming hard and chilly from her sunken blue eyes—those light blue eyes that he had never loved—those cruel blue eyes that he had learned at last to avoid with an instinctive shrinking, as they gazed through and through him with their flabby persistence—he said to himself with a sigh of relief: "She can't last long. Better tell her all, and let her know the truth. It could do no harm. She might die the happier. Dare I risk it, I wonder? Or is it too dangerous?"

"Well?" Winifred asked in an icy tone, interpreting aright the little click in his throat and the doubtful gleam in his shifty eyes as implying some hesitating desire to speak to her. "What lie are you going to tell me next? Speak it out boldly; don't be afraid. It's no novelty. You know I'm not easily disconcerted."

He looked back at her nervously with bent brows. That fragile creature! He positively feared her. Dare he tell her the truth? And would she believe it? Those blue eyes were so coldly glassy. Yet, with a sudden impulse, he resolved to unburden his guilty soul of all its weight of care to Winifred.

"No, Winifred, but the solemn truth," he blurted out slowly, in a voice that of itself might have well produced complete conviction—on any one less incredulous than the wife he had cajoled and deceived so often. "You think Elsie's at San Remo, I know.—You're wrong there; you're quite mistaken.—She's not in San Remo, nor in Australia either. That was a lie.—Elsie's dead—dead three years ago—before we were married.—Dead and buried at Orfordness. And I've seen her grave, and cried over it like a child, too."

He spoke with solemn intensity of earnestness; but he spoke in vain. Winifred thought, herself, till that very moment, she had long since reached the lowest possible depth of contempt and scorn for the husband on whom she had thrown herself away; but as he met her then with that incredible falsehood—as she must needs think it—on his lying lips, with so grave a face and so profound an air of frank confession, her lofty disdain rose at once to a yet sublimer height of disgust and loathing of which until that night she could never even have conceived herself capable.

"You hateful thing!" she cried, rising from her seat to the centre of the carriage, and looking down upon him physically from her point of vantage as he cowered and slank like a cur in his corner. "Don't dare to address me again, I say, with lies like that. If you can't find one word of truth to tell me, have the goodness at least, since I don't desire your further conversation, to leave me the repose of your polite silence."

"But, Winifred," Hugh cried, clasping his hands together in impotent despair, "this is the truth, the very, very truth, the whole truth, that I'm now telling you. I've hidden it from you so long by deceit and treachery. I acknowledge all that: I admit I deceived you. But I want to tell you the whole truth now; and you won't listen to me! O heaven, Winifred, you won't listen to me!"

On any one else, his agonised voice and pleading face would have produced their just and due effect; but on Winifred—impossible.

"Go on," she murmured, relapsing into her corner. "Continue your monologue. It's supreme in its way—no actor could beat it. But be so good as to consider my part in the piece left out altogether. I shall answer you no more. I should be sorry to interrupt so finished an artist!"

Her scathing contempt wrought up in Hugh a perfect fury of helpless indignation. That he should wish to confess, to humble himself before her, to make reparation! and that Winifred should spurn his best attempt, should refuse so much as to listen to his avowal! It was too ignominious. "For heaven's sake," he cried, with his hands clasped hard, "at least let me speak. Let me have my say out. You're all wrong. You're wronging me utterly. I've behaved most wickedly, most cruelly, I know: I confess it all. I abase myself at your feet. If you want me to be abject, I'll grovel before you, I admit my crime, my sin, my transgression.—I won't pretend to justify myself at all.—I've lied to you, forged to you, deceived you, misled you!" (At each clause and phrase of passionate self-condemnation, Winifred nodded a separate sardonic acquiescence.) "But you're wrong about this. You mistake me wholly.—I swear to you, my child, Elsie's not alive. You're jealous of a woman who's been dead for years. For my sin and shame I say it, she's dead long ago!"

He might as well have tried to convince the door-handle. Winifred's loathing found no overt vent in angry words; she repressed her speech, her very breath almost, with a spasmodic effort. But she stretched out both her hands, the palms turned outward, with a gesture of horror, contempt, and repulsion; and she averted her face with a little cry of supreme disgust, checked deep down in her rising throat, as one averts one's face instinctively from a loathsome sore or a venomous reptile. Such hideous duplicity to a dying woman was more than she could brook without some outer expression of her outraged sense of social decency.

But Hugh could no longer restrain himself now; he had begun his tale, and he must run right through with it. The fever of the confessional had seized upon his soul; remorse and despair were goading him on. He must have relief for his pent-up feelings. Three years of silence were more than enough. Winifred's very incredulity compelled him to continue. He must tell her all—all, all, utterly. He must make her understand to the uttermost jot, willy, nilly, that he was not deceiving her!

With eager lips, he began his story from the beginning, recapitulating point by point his interview with Elsie in the Hall grounds, her rushing away from him to the roots of the poplar, her mad leap into the swirling black water, his attempt to rescue her, his unconsciousness, and his failure. He told it all with dramatic completeness. Winifred saw and heard every scene and tone and emotion as he reproduced it. Then he went on to tell her how he came to himself again on the bank of the dike, and how in cold and darkness he formed his Plan, that fatal, horrible, successful Plan, which he had ever since been engaged in carrying out and in detesting. He described how he returned to the inn, unobserved and untracked; how he forged the first compromising letter from Elsie; and how, once embarked upon that career of deceit, there was no drawing back for him in crime after crime till the present moment. He despised himself for it; but still he told it. Next came the episode of Elsie's bedroom: the theft of the ring and the other belongings; the hasty flight, the fall from the creeper; and his subsequent horror of the physical surroundings connected with that hateful night adventure. In his agony of self-accusation he spared her no circumstance, no petty detail: bit by bit he retold the whole story in all its hideous inhuman ghastliness—the walk to Orfordness, the finding of the watch, the furtive visit to Elsie's grave, his horror of Winifred's proposed picnic to that very spot a year later. He ran, unabashed, in an ecstasy of humiliation, through the entire tale of his forgeries and his deceptions: the sending of the ring; the audacious fiction of Elsie's departure to a new home in Australia; the long sequence of occasional letters, the living lie he had daily and hourly acted before her. And all the while as he truly said, with slow tears rolling one by one down his dark cheeks, he knew himself a murderer: he felt himself a murderer; and all the while, poor Elsie was lying, dishonoured and unknown, a nameless corpse, in her pauper grave upon that stormy sand-spit.

Oh the joy and relief of that tardy confession! the gush and flow of those pent up feelings! For three long years and more, he had locked it all up in his inmost soul, chafing and seething with the awful secret; and now at last he had let it all out, in one burst of confidence, to the uttermost item.

As for Winifred, she heard him out in solemn silence to the bitter end, with ever-growing contempt and shame and hatred. She could not lift her eyes to his face, so much his very earnestness horrified and appalled her. The man's aptitude for lying struck her positively dumb. The hideous ingenuity with which he accounted for everything—the diabolically clever way in which he had woven in, one after the other, the ring, the watch, the letters, the picnic, the lonely tramp to Orfordness—smote her to the heart with a horrible loathing for the vile wretch she had consented to marry. That she had endured so long such a miserable creature's bought caresses filled her inmost soul with a sickening sense of disgust and horror. She cowered and crouched closer and closer in her remote corner; she felt that his presence there actually polluted the carriage she occupied; she longed for Marailles, for San Remo, for release, that she might get at least farther and farther away from him. She could almost have opened the door in her excess of horror and jumped from the train while still in motion, so intense was her burning and goading desire to escape for ever from his poisonous neighbourhood.

At last, as Hugh with flushed face and eager eyes calmed down a little from his paroxysm of self-abasement and self-revelation, Winifred raised her eyes once more from the ground and met her husband's—ah, heaven!—that she should have to call that thing her husband! His acting chilled her; his pretended tears turned her cold with scorn. "Is that all?" she asked in an icy voice. "Is your romance finished?"

"That's all!" Hugh cried, burying his face in his hands and bending down his body to the level of his knees in utter and abject self-humiliation. "Winifred! Winifred! it is no romance. Won't you even now believe me?"

"It's clever—clever—extremely clever!" Winifred answered in a tone of unnatural calmness. "I don't deny it shows great talent. If you'd turn your attention seriously to novel-writing, which is your proper metier, instead of to the law, for which you've too exuberant an imagination, you'd have succeeded ten thousand times better than you could ever do at what you're pleased to consider your divine poetry. Your story, I allow, hangs together in every part with remarkable skill. It's a pity I should happen to know it all from beginning to end for a tissue of falsehoods.—For all your acting, you know you're lying to me even now, this minute. You know that Elsie Challoner, whom you pretend to be dead, is awaiting your own arrival to-night by arrangement at San Remo.

Hugh flung himself back in the final extremity of utter despair on the padded cushions. He had played his last card with Winifred, and lost. His very remorse availed him nothing. His very confession was held to increase his sin. What could he do? Whither turn? He knew no answer. He rocked himself up and down on his seat in hopeless misery. The worst had come. He had blurted out all. And Winifred, Winifred would not believe him.

"I wish it was true!" he cried; "I wish it was true, Winnie! I wish she was there. But it isn't; it isn't! She's dead! I killed her! and her blood has weighed upon my head ever since; I pay for it now! I killed her! I killed her!"

"Listen!"

Winifred had risen to her full height in the coupe once more, and was standing, gaunt and haggard and deadly wan like a shrunken little tragedy queen above him. Her pale white face showed paler and whiter and more death like still by the feeble light of the struggling oil-lamp; and her bloodless lips trembled and quivered visibly with inner passion as she tried to repress her overpowering indignation with one masterful effort. "Listen!" she said, with fierce intensity. "What you say is false. I know you're lying to me. Warren Relf told me himself the other day in London that Elsie Challoner was still alive, and living, where you know she lives, over there at San Remo."

Warren Relf! That serpent! That reptile! That eavesdropper! Then this was the creature's mean revenge! He had lied that despicable lie to Winifred! Hugh hated him in his soul more fiercely than ever. He was baffled once more; and always by that same malignant intriguer!

"Where did you see Relf?" he burst out angrily. His indignation, flaring up to white heat afresh at this latest machination of his ancient enemy, gave new strength to his words and new point to his hatred. "I thought I told you long since at Whitestrand to hold no further communication with that wretched being!

But Winifred by this time, worn out with excitement, had fallen back speechless and helpless on the cushions. Her feeble strength was fairly exhausted. The fatigue of the preparations, the stormy passage, the long spell of travelling, the night journey, and added to it all, this terrible interview with the man she had once loved, but now despised and hated, had proved too much in the end for her weakened constitution. A fit of wild incoherence had overtaken her; she babbled idly on her seat in broken sentences. Her muttered words were full of "mother" and "home" and "Elsie." Hugh felt her pulse. He knew it was delirium. His one thought now was to reach San Remo as quickly as possible. If only she could live to know Warren Relf had told her a lie, and that Elsie was dead—dead—dead and buried!

Perhaps even this story about Warren Relf and what he had told her was itself but a product of the fever and delirium! But more probably not. The man who could open other people's letters, the man who could plot and plan and intrigue in secret to set another man's wife against her own husband, was capable of telling any lie that came uppermost to hurt his enemy and to serve his purpose. He knew that lie would distress and torture Winifred, and he had struck at Hugh, like a coward that he was, through a weak, hysterical, dying woman! He had played on the mean chord of feminine jealousy. Hugh hated him as he had never hated him before. He should pay for this soundly—the cur, the scoundrel!

CHAPTER XXXVI.—THE OTHER SIDE OF THE SHIELD.

The self-same night, another English passenger of our acquaintance was speeding in hot haste due south ward to San Remo, notindeed by the Calais and Marseilles express, but by the rival route via Boulogne, the Mont Cenis, Turin, and Savona. Warren Relf had chosen the alternative road by deliberate design, lest Hugh Massinger and he should happen to clash by the way, and a needless and unseemly scene should perhaps take place before Winifred's very eyes at some intermediate station.

It was by the merest accident in the world, indeed, that Warren had heard, in the nick of opportunity, of the Massingers' projected visit to San Remo.

In the cosy smoking-room at the Cheyne Row Club, he had found Hatherley already installed in a big armchair, discussing coffee and the last new number of the "Nineteenth Century."

"Hullo, Relf! The remains of the Bard were in here just now," Hatherley exclaimed as he entered. "You've barely missed him. If you'd dropped in only ten minutes earlier, you might have inspected the interesting relics. But he's gone back to his hotel by this time, I fancy. The atmosphere of Cheyne Row seems somewhat too redolent of vulgar Cavendish for his refined taste. He smokes nothing nowadays himself but the best regalias!"

"What, Massinger?" Relf cried in some slight surprise. "How was he, Hatherley, and what was he doing in town at this time of year? All good Squires ought surely to be down in the country now at their hereditary work of supplying the market with a due proportion of hares and partridges."

"Oh, he's a poor wreck," Hatherley answered lightly. "You've hit it off exactly—sunk to the level of the landed aristocracy. He exhales an aroma of vested interests. Real estate's his Moloch at present, and he bows the knee to solidified seamud in the temple of Rimmon. He has no view on anything in particular, I believe, but riparian proprietorship: complains still of the German Ocean for disregarding the sacred rights of property; and holds that the sole business of an enlightened British legislature is to keep the sand from blowing in at his own inviolable dining room windows. Poor company, in fact, since he descended to the Squirearchy."

"How long's he going to stop in town—do you know?" Relf asked curiously.

"Thank goodness, he's not going to stop at all, my dear fellow. If he were, I'd run down to Brighton for the interval. A month of Massinger at the Cleyne Row would be a harvest for the seaside lodgings. But I'm happy to tell you he's going to remove his mortal remains—for the soul of him's dead—dead and buried, long ago, in the Whitestrand sandhills—to San Remo to-morrow. Poor little Mrs. Massinger's seriously ill, I'm sorry to say. Too much Bard has told at last upon her. Bard for breakfast, Bard for lunch, and Bard for dinner would undermine in time the soundest constitution. Sir Anthony finds it's produced in her case Suppressed Gout, or Tubercular Diathesis, or Softening of the Brain, or something lingering and humorous of that sort; and he's ordered her off post haste, by the first express, to the Mediterranean. Massinger objected at first to San Remo, he tells me, probably because, with his usual bad taste, he didn't desire to enjoy your agreeable society; but that skimpy little woman, gout or no gout, has a will of her own, I can tell you; San Remo she insists upon, and to San Remo the Bard must go accordingly. You should address have seen him chafing with an internal fire as he let it all out to us, hint by hint, in the billiard-room this evening. Poor skimpy little woman, though, I'm awfully sorry for her. It's hard lines on her. She had the makings of a nice small hostess in her once; but the Bard's ruined her—sucked her dry and chucked her away—and she's dying of him now, from what he tells me."

Warren Relf looked back with a start of astonishment. "To San Remo?" he cried. "You're sure, Hatherley, he said San Remo?'

"Perfectly certain. San Remo it is. Observe, il pesco, there's no deception. He gave me this card in case of error: "Hugh Massinger, for the present, Poste Restante, San Remo." No other address forthcoming as yet. He expects to settle down at a villa when he gets there."

Relf made up his mind with a single plunge as he knocked his ash off. "I shall go by to-morrow's express to the Riviera," he said shortly.

"To pursue the Bard? I wouldn't, if I were you. To tell you the truth, I know he doesn't love you."

"He has reason, I believe. The feeling is perhaps to some extent mutual. No, not to pursue him—to prevent mischief.—Hand me over the Continental Bradshaw, will you? Thanks. That'll do. Do you know which line? Marseilles, I suppose? Did he happen to mention it?"

"He told me he was going by Dijon and Lyons."

"All right. That's it. The Marseilles route. Arrive at San Remo at 4.30. I'll go round the other way by Turin and intercept him. Trains arrive within five minutes of one another, I see. That'll be just in time to prevent any contretemps."

"Your people are at San Remo already, I believe?"

"My people—yes. But how did you know? They were at Mentone for a while, and they only went on home to the Villa Rossa the day before yesterday."

"So I heard from Miss Relf," Hatherley answered with a slight cough. "She happened to be writing to me—about a literary matter—a mere question of current art-criticism—on Wednesday morning.

Warren hardly noticed the slight hesitation: and there was nothing odd in Elie's writing to Hatherley: that best of sisters was always jogging the memory of inattentive critics. While Edie lived, indeed, her brother's name was never likely to be forgotten in the weekly organs of artistic opinion. She insured it, if anything, an undue prominence. For her much importunity, the sternest, of them all, like the unjust judge, was compelled to notice every one of her brother's performances.

So Warren hurried off by himself at all speed to San Remo, and reached it at almost the same moment as Massinger. If Hugh and Elsie were to meet unexpectedly, Warren felt the shock might be positively dangerous.

An he emerged from the station, he hired a close carriage, and ordered the vetturino to draw up on the far side of the road and wait a few minutes till he was prepared for starting. Then he leaned back in his seat in the shade of the hood, and held himself in readiness for the arrival of the Paris train from Ventimiglia.

He had waited only a quarter of an hour when Hugh Massinger came out hastily and called a cab. Two porters helped him to carry out Winifred, now seriously ill, and muttering inarticulately as they placed her in the carriage. Hugh gave an inaudible order to the driver, who drove off at once with a nod and a smile and a cheery "Si, signor."

"Follow that carriage!" Warren said in Italian to his own cabman. The driver nodded and followed closely. They drove up through the narrow crowded little streets of the old quarter, and stopped at last opposite a large and dingy yellow-washed mansion, in the modern part of he town, about the middle of the Avenue Vittorio-Emmanuele. The house was new, but congenitally shabby. Hugh's carriage blocked the way already. Warren waited outside for some ten minutes without showing his face till he thought the Massingers would have engaged rooms: then he entered the hall boldly and enquired if he could have lodgings.

"On what floor has the gentleman who just arrived placed himself?" he asked of the landlord, a portly Piedmontese, of august dimensions.

"On the second story, signor."

"Then I will go on the third," Warren Relf answered with short decision. And they found him a room forthwith without further parley.

The pension was one of those large and massive solid buildings, so common on the Riviera, let out in flats or in single apartments, and with a deep well of a square staircase occupying the entire centre of the block like a covered courtyard. As Warren Relf mounted to his room on the third floor, with the chatty Swiss waiter from the canton Ticino, who carried his bag, he asked quietly if the lady on the segondo who seemed so ill was in any immediate or pressing danger.

"Danger, signor? She is ill, certainly; they carried her up stairs: she couldn't have walked it. Ill—but ill." He expanded his hands and pursed his lips up.—"But what of that? The house expects it. They come here to die, many of these English. The signora no doubt will die soon. She's a very bad case. She has hardly any life in her."

Little reassured by this cold comfort, Warren sat down at the table at once, as soon as he had washed away the dust of travel, and scribbled off a hasty note to Edie:

DEAREST E.—Just arrived. Hope you received my telegram from Paris. For heaven's sake, don't let Elsie stir out of the house till I have seen you. This is most imperative. Massinger and Mrs. Massinger are here at this pension. He has brought her South for her health's sake. She's dying rapidly. I wouldn't for worlds let Elsie see either of them in their present condition: above all, she mustn't run against them unexpectedly. I may not be able to sneak round to night, but at all hazards keep Elsie in till I can get to the Villa Rossa to consult with you. Elsie must of course return to England at once, now Massinger's come here. We have to face a very serious crisis. I won't write further, preferring to come and arrange in person. Meanwhile, say nothing to Elsie just yet; I'll break it to her myself. —In breathless haste, Yours ever, very affectionately, WARREN.

He sent the note round with many warnings by the Swiss waiter to his mother's house. When Edie got it, she could have cried with chagrin. Could anything on earth have been more unfortunate? To think that Elsie should just have gone out shopping before the note arrived—and should be going to call at the Grand Hotel Royal in that very Avenue Vittorio-Emmanuele.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Positive Bankrupt.

Parson—I am astonished to hear a man with three married daughters say "marriage is a failure."

Citizen—Well, sir, when you have three families beside your own to support, you will learn that marriage is positive bankruptcy.

The much dreaded hog-cholera has again made his appearance in South Essex.

Rev. Wm. T. Hill, rector of the Church of the Messiah, Kincardine, on the occasion of his resignation to accept the rectorship of the Church of St. John the Evangelist in London, was presented with an address, a handsome silver service and a marble clock.

"Mandy!" almost shrieked the elderly aunt, as she entered the parlour unexpectedly and found the young lady clasped in the arms of a young man who was kissing her with every indication that he had had considerable practice, "what on earth does this mean?" "Nothing but an election bet, auntie," replied Amanda, with a look of heroic, martyr-like resignation on her lovely face, "I lost. Go on, Mr. McPelican. How many was that?"

Mr. J. Parker—There are Trimble-Hawkins and his wife. They are a handsome couple, are'nt they? Miss Charity Ball—Oh, yes, they are quite distinguished looking: but do you know they say that at home they quarrel scandalously; and beside a that, Mrs. Trimble-Hawkins absolutely neglect every household duty, and her children are a perfect disgrace. Mr. J. Parker—Oh, you know her, then? Miss Charity Ball—Yes, indeed; I am her best friend!

The Turf Congress.

The sporting writer of the New York Tribune says:—"Racing in America is on too expensive a scale to be governed by any such organization as this so-called Turf Congress, which convenes here next Thursday. With race tracks situated thousands of miles apart the idea of a national circuit, controlled by one general direction in the form of a National Jockey Club, is absurd. What Minneapolis and St. Paul expect to gain by sending delegates to the meeting it is impossible to conceive. They support what is called the Twin City Jockey Club, but how is New York to be of service to the racing interests of Minnesota? The two big cities of that distant State might have racing every day in the year without interfering in the remotest degree with the sport east of the Alleghanies. It is plain truth to say that the Eastern clubs care nothing whatever for an alliance with those of the West. The promoters of this so-called congress—all Western men—have been unable to secure the slightest notice from the American and Coney Island clubs, and it is extremely doubtful if the Monmouth park and Brooklyn people can be persuaded to send delegates to their meeting. The failure to gain the co-operation of these rich and prosperous associations of New York and New Jersey signifies that the coming congress will accomplish nothing of importance to the racing interests of the East. An amicable alliance of Eastern clubs is urgently demanded in order that the troublesome question of dates may be settled to the satisfaction of each. Yet there is no prospect of such an arrangement. The East for the East and the West for the West is one of the unwritten rules of racing. The country is broad enough for half a dozen big circuits."

California Justice.

California in the days of "forty-niners" saw the strangest changes! Storekeepers dispensed liquor and dry-goods, and performed the duties of justice of the peace. Rough, ignorant miners practised law and physic, and even administered justice of the most rough and ready sort.

One of the alcaldes, or magistrates, of Yreka, George C. Vail, had a method of trying prisoners which was quaint, even among the off hand magistrates of California. A lad once complained that his employer was leaving the place without paying him his wages.

Vail started two constables after the man, who was arrested and brought into court. He did not deny the boy's claim, but insisted that he had no money to pay it.

"Constables," said Vail, "stand that man on his head, shake him well, and listen, if anything drops!"

The man was inverted, and from his pocket dropped a bag containing two thousand dollars in gold dust. Out of it the boy's claim for two hundred dollars was paid, and three ounces of gold for the fees of judge and constables. Then the bag of dust was returned, and he departed, with less money, but with more respect for the law than he had before.

Queer Scenes in Church.

In Mrs Gilbert's autobiography there is an entertaining sketch of meeting-house customs in England in the olden times. Among the rest she describes an old man, John Day, so hard of hearing that he always sat at the top of the pulpit stairs.

Leaning against the pulpit door, he looked like the minister's henchman. His venerable and rheumy countenance, his drab knee-breeches gaping above his corded gray stockings, are deeply graven on my memory, and not less so, a certain occasion when his huge tin snuff box slipped from his pottering fingers, and rolled bump, bump, down the unarpeted stairs with portentous noise.

John Day, no whit disconcerted, watched its course, and then with his heavy high-lows descended after it, one stair at a time, returning in like manner. The whole operation took a long time; yet the sermon halted not, nor did devout attention fail.

In those days, if any one suffered from drowsiness under the subdivided discourse, he would rise and stand in his place. Several grave elders, in an afternoon, might be seen hug upon their legs, and it is recorded that my mother's great-grandfather, leaning unluckily upon his pew door, it opened suddenly, compelling him to follow its semi-circular movement at a sharp trot, till brought up sharp against the side of the pew.

Then the grave figure in snuff-colored suit and protuberant wig took the door in hand and walked back into his place, with no visible disturbance in the congregation.

The Chinaman's Love of Home

The ties of locality are very strong among the Chinese, and hence new families, as they are formed, settle down in life in the immediate vicinity of that from which they sprung. Thus one commonly sees groups, or nests, of families gathered about the parent stock. Whole villages may be found composed almost exclusively of persons of the same name, and containing four and even five generations of one family.

"Smithville," "Jonesvill," or, to translate more exactly, "The village of the Chang family," "The town of the Wang family," "The Li Family Crossroads"—these and similar names of hamlets, villages and cities are so frequent throughout China that they give a large fraction of all the names to places in the empire.

The class of "globe trotters," as they are called—persons of wealth who travel around the globe sight-seeing—form a never solved puzzle to the mind of the Chinese. A Chinaman never leaves his home except from necessity. While absent, whether in foreign lands or in some other part of his own country, he always looks upon himself as an exile, is always more or less homesick, and, no matter how dirty and squalid his native village may be, he looks forward to his return to the wretched place as the chief joy of his life.

The Chinaman is not, and, without an entire change of his nature, cannot, become a colonist. He is an acute and careful merchant, a patient, faithful and dilligent laborer, but, above everything else, his home ties are strong. While he wanders all over the earth and submits to all sorts of privations, abuses and hardships, he is only a wanderer whose deepest desire is for home, a quiet old age with his family, and, above everything else, burial in the tombs of his fathers.—Chester W. Holcombe in Youth's Companion.

A HAWK ATTACKS A MAN.

It Ruins His Clothes and Makes Him a Subject for a Doctor.

James P. Schaeffer of Rockland, Pa., had a remarkable experience with a chicken hawk a few days ago. He was driving along the road, and had seen the hawk sailing about high in the air for some time. Finally he noticed that the bird was rapidly descending, and, supposing that it was dropping down on prey of some kind, stopped his team to watch the result of the attack.

Whether the hawk concluded that Schaeffer was there to antagonize it in its effort to get a dinner, and determined to resent interference, Schaeffer is not able to explain, but he was not long in discovering that he himself was the object of the big bird's attack. It swooped down upon him with terrible fierceness, struck at him savagely with both beak and talons, and then alighted on the ground at the roadside, where it put itself in unmistakable fighting position.

Schaeffer was greatly surprised at this attack, but, supposing that it wouldn't be much of a trick to whip a chicken hawk, he got out of his wagon. He had scarcely placed his feet on the ground when the hawk rushed at him, half flying and half running. Schaeffer met the bird with a vigorous kick in the breast, but that only had the effect of adding to its rage. The man quickly made up his mind that he had met an antagonist a little tougher than he had counted on, and, grabbing a stick from the roadside, went into the fight in earnest.

Before Schaeffer could effectively use his club on the fierce and active hawk it had ripped his clothes with its talons as if the rents had been made with a sharp knife, and laid the flesh open in great gashes on his face, legs and shoulders. At last a lucky blow with the club stunned the bird, and before it could recover Schaeffer despatched it.

He was so badly hurt that he had to return home and get medical attendance. He is still housed up. The hawk measured nearly six feet from tip to tip of its wings, and Schaeffer says that he believes it would have got the best of him if he had not been lucky enough to find the club within his reach. Such a wild attack on a man by a hawk, a bird naturally shy of the human presence, is undoubtedly without a precedent.

A Bold Wildcat.

A gentleman from Upson county, says the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, relates a thrilling experience between Mr. Matthews, who lives near Pine mountain, and a large wildcat. Mr. Matthews, after enjoying a social chat with one of his neighbors, saddled his horse and started home. His road led him over the mountain. He was riding along at a slow pace, absorbed in thought, when he passed a thick clump of trees and bushes that stood near the roadside. Suddenly he heard a loud crashing and a large animal of the cat species bounded upon the haunches of his horse, with

OUR CLUBBING LIST.

We will club the ENTERPRISE with the following papers till the end of 1889 for the amount specified at each :—

The Mail and Farm and Fireside	$2.00
The American Farmer	1.80
The Weekly Globe	1.80
Saturday's Globe	1.80
Daily Globe (Morning Edition)	5.00
" (12 or 3 o'clock edition)	3.50
St. Thomas Journal, weekly	2.25
" " daily	4.25
Western Advertiser	1.80
London Free Press	1.80
Farmers' Advocate	1.80
Truth	2.50
(The price of Truth alone is $3.00)
Globe and Rural Canadian	2.25
Rural Canadian	1.80
Weekly News	1.80
American Agriculturist	2.00
Detroit Free Press	1.75

DUTTON, DECEMBER 6, 1888.

WEEKLY WEAVINGS.

FLOUR is down 25 cents per cwt.

COUNCIL meets on Saturday of next week.

MERCHANTS should be advertising their Christmas goods now.

WM. GOW will have a shooting match for turkeys on Saturdry of this week, Dec. 8th.

EVERY lover of oysters should be at the Elgin House, West Lorne, on Dec. 14th.

A NEW or second-hand New Home sewing machine, for sale cheap. Apply at this office.

THE Baptist Sabbath school purposes giving a grand entertainment in Leitch's hall on Friday evening, Dec. 28th.

W. FLETCHER has bought the lot adjoining the one his house is on and is erecting a barn thereon.

THE brick-work of A. J. Leitch's new building between the butcher and harness shops was completed last Tuesday.

F. J. LINDENMAN, of the Elgin House, West Lorne, will give an oyster supper on Friday evening Dec. 14th.

A GENTLEMAN who recently moved from one house to another in the village, while on Main street the other night started for his former place of abode.

THE case of J. Griffin vs. J. Bake, a difficulty regarding property on Main street, which was to have come up for trial in St. Thomas this week, has been postponed till next spring.

REV. J. CHANCE and B. Sifton are attending a meeting of the Synod which is being held in London this week. The meeting should have been held in June, but the Bishop has been in other parts of the world.

CAMPBELL, STEVENS & CO., of St. Thomas, are building a large grain warehouse at Iona Station. Messrs. James and Henry Brown have the contract and intend having the building ready for grain in three weeks.

MISS FITZGERALD has been engaged as first assistant in the Dutton public school at a salary of $275, and Miss Katie McCallum has been engaged for the junior department at or near a salary of $250 for 1889.

JAS. JAMIESON, Rodney, was united in marriage to Miss Martha Patterson, of Dunwich, yesterday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Currie, of Kintyre. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents.

THERE were two items in the council proceedings which appeared in last week's issue which were wrongfully inserted. McKillop & Sons' cheque for plank in Ward No. 1 should have been placed in Ward No. 2; J. H. McIntyre, work done, $20, should also be in Ward No. 2.

MR. H. HOLLINGSHEAD has purchased a large burglar proof safe from Messrs Goldie & McCullough, Galt. He has built a brick foundation up to the level of his office floor on which the safe has been placed. The old fireproof safe will be sent to Galt. A desk and counter have also been placed across the office.

JOHN R. PATTON has been appointed teacher of the Wallacetown public school, in the place of Mr. D. P. McColl, who intends studying medicine at Trinity University, Toronto. The trustees and the school are to be congratulated on securing the services of such an efficient teacher. Mr. Patton is at present teaching in the High School, in the absence of Mr. Tremeer.

THIEVING has again been going on in Dutton Last Friday night some thief entered J. C. Hertel's tailor shop by way of a back window and carried off an overcoat and a suit of clothes, valued at about $32. D. McMillan's harness shop was also entered in the same way. Nothing was missed, still it is supposed that a valise was carried off. Tools were taken from T. E. Lily's blacksmith shop to raise the windows, which were left open by the thief.

EVERY one interested in growing fruits, flowers or in forestry would find it to their advantage to take the Canadian Horticulturist, a beautiful monthly journal of high standing, devoted entirely to these subjects, and containing articles written by the leading fruit growers, florists, and foresters in Ontario. The journal is to be enlarged in the month of January; the paintings and engravings of fruit and flowers continued and used even more liberally. Altogether it is to be made as interesting and attractive as possible. It is published by the Fruit Growers' Association of Ontario, at $1 per annum, which also entitles the subscriber to the privileges of membership of the Association including a copy of the Annual Report of the meetings and discussions, given verbatim, and a share in the distribution of trees and plants for testing in various parts of Ontario. Subscriptions should be sent in to L. Woolverton, M. A., Grimsby, Ont., Secretary of the F. G. A. of Ontario.

THE M. C. R. pay-car arrives to-day.

THE Dutton roller mill is not being run nights now.

GEO. GUSTERSON is thinking of buying a fire-proof safe.

W. FLETCHER has moved into his new house near the station.

H. G. GUSTERSON has built a new drive barn and stable on his lot.

D. MCARTHUR has moved into the house he recently purchased on Nancy street.

ELM logs and basswood bolts wanted. Inquire at Humpidge & Graham's Stave Factory.

THE sidewalk south of the railway has been extended to the hill opposite J. Wilkie's house.

IT is rumored that J. H. Coyne, of St. Thomas, has been appointed to the registrarship of Elgin.

F. CHARLESWORTH, miller in the roller mills, has moved into Mr. McPhedrain's new house on Nancy Street.

MR. EVANS has taken a contract of drawing 100 cords of wood from the north part of the township to the station.

DON'T forget that you can buy a quarter of beef cheaper than you can a pound at the Dutton Meat Emporium. --JAS. BAKE.

D. MCKEE is talking of getting a portable sawmill from C. W. Allen, of the Dutton Iron Works, which he purposes setting in Dutton.

A CHANGE has again been made in the M. C. R. time-table. The express which formerly arrived at 1.45 now reaches here at 12.58 p.m. (slow time.)

J. POOL and D. McMillan attended the Scotch concert at Glencoe on Tuesday evening. We tender our thanks to the committee for a complimentry to the same.

"AN Old Bachelor and His Monument" is the topic of a lecture by Rev. E. Middleton in the Methodist church on Wednesday evening of next week, December 12. Silver collection. See dodgers.

G. J. WEIR, baker, of Orillia, has bought the new Dutton bakery business from Wm. Evans. He has taken possession and is conducting the business now. He purposes moving his mother and sister to this place.

THE county judge held a court of revision in Dutton on Thursday on appeals against the voters' list of the municipality of the Township of Dunwich. One name was added in polling sub-division No. 2; three in No. 3; seven in No. 7; three in No. 8; making in all 14.

HE WASN'T INVITED.—"Why don't you trade with me?" said a closefisted tradesman to a publisher in a neighboring town the other day. "Because," was the characteristic answer, "you have never asked me, sir. I have looked all through the papers for an invitation in the shape of an advertisement, but in vain. I never go where I am not invited."

SOME of the Dutton girls adopt the plan of writing letters in order to work up a case. We will not give any of the letters in detail, but, for instance, one would write: "Dear Old——" "How gets you along?" "Pretty cold weather." "Meet me between M—— and R. B. C. at ——." The first not being answered, another would arrive stating that if the former place did not suit to name some place that would suit, and giving the address as "R. C. Cook." A reply being sent and a watch kept for the caller for that party's mail one appeared in apparent disguise. The party is known and her movements for the past two years have been commented on.

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS REWARD. —A reward of one thousand dollars is offered for a Christmas souvenir that will equal the Christmas Number of the Montreal Star at the published price. Competitors to give their full name and address. This year's Christmas Star has twenty-eight pages of beautiful illustrations, articles by eminent writers, four superb supplements and other attractions of a surpassing character. It is far and away ahead of anything yet published. Orders for copies to send to England are the largest on record. Those who cannot procure it from a newsdealer will receive it by sending the small amount of 40 cents to the publishers, Montreal. Postage stamps of one and three-cent denomination will be accepted.

LEFT US FOR GOOD.—Last spring W. Bristow, one of our prominent buisness men, took the California fever, sold out a large and profitable business, and started to prospect. He went to Seattle, Washington Territory, and while there explored the whole country. From there he went to California, and thence to British Columbia without finding the great haven of rest. About a month ago he returned here to his family, and said Ontario was good enough for him. Lately he bought out a hardware and tin business in Rodney, Ont., and he and his family left on Tuesday for their new home. We regret to lose such good business men from our midst, but more so when they leave our Province for foreign lands. The citizens of Rodney will find Mr. Bristow a live buisness man.—Harriston Tribune. Mr. Bristow is a practical tinsmith and we bespeak for him a good buisness in Rodney. Although Mr. Porter was much liked, we are pleased that he has secured so fine a man to take his place.

The law passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, and which came into force on the 1st of November, will practically shut out the granting of bouusus by municipal corporations. Muncipalities are prohibited from giving a bonus to a manufacturer in any town to move to another town. And a bonus by-law will, in all cases for the future, have to be carried by a two-thirds vote of all the rate-payers on the roll who are entitled to vote on such by-law, and no aid in the form of a bonus can be granted to a firm if works of a similar nature are already doing buisness in the place.

ST. ANDREW'S SUPPER.

"On Scotia's shield the lion king,
Romps boldly in his pride;
Be every Scot a king o' men
For home and truth and right."

The sons of Auld Scotia residing in and near Dutton celebrated St. Andrew's day by a supper at the Commercial Hotel. About sixty sat down to supper prepared by the host and hostess. Dr. Ruthven, President of the society, occupied the chair, while Dr. Leitch admirably filled the duties of vice-chairman.

After the usual toasts were given, "The day and all who honor it," brought forth a happy little response from Mr. A. J. Leitch. Mr. Dagan sang, "The dear little shamrock," and then Mr. J. T. Kirkland made an eloquent response to the toast, "The land we live in." "The Press" was responded to, and Mr. Dagan favored the company with another song. The vice-chairman then took charge of the toast list and called on Mr. D. McMillan for a selection on the bagpipes, which was well rendered. "The land of Burns" elicited a good speech from Mr. Duncan McLean, as did "The farming interests" from Mr. Dan Black. Mr. McGibbon sang "Daniel O'Neil." Muncipal institutions found able advocates in Messrs. Leitch and Hine, and "The ladies in Mr. McKay.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A meeting of this Institute was held in Leitch's hall yesterday and was largely attended, quite a number caming from St. Thomas. Early in the afternoon a telegram was received from Hon. Mr. Drury, stating that it was impossible for him to be present.

The President, John R. Gow, took the chair, after which the Secretary, D. Black, read the minutes of the three previous meetings, which were held at Dutton, West Lorne and Shedden. There were no objections to the minutes, and by resolution they were approved. Auditors were appointed to audit the treasurer's books.

T. E. Montague was then called on to read a paper. He stated that he was very sorry that Mr. Drury was not present, as that was the reason he was there. The subject of his paper was "Tree Planting," which was interesting and instructive, and would be well to be acted upon by all landholders.

Other interesting papers were read by the farmers, followed by profitable discussions thereon. Owing to the ENTERPRISE being printed on Wednesday evenings it is impossible to give anything like a detailed report of the proceedings, but we will endeavor to do so next week.

The High school was dismissed and the principal and boys attended the meeting.

"WELL-WISHER" ON INCORPORATION.

You ask, Mr. Editor, in a recent issue of the paper, "If we are likely to have an incorporated village in West Elgin," and if Dutton may not be the first to assume this position.

What are the advantages we should gain?

We suggest just a few that present themselves to us:

1st. Local self-government. The population of the village is growing very satisfactorily, and its needs will be better understood by the residents than those who are outside altogether.

2nd. If incorporated we think there would soon follow better streets, better sidewalks, and possibly in the near future some street lamps, especially on Main street.

3rd. It would give the village a prestige it does not yet possess, and its own council could well present its reasonable claims and secure for it a greater prosperity.

4th. Possibly, if incorporated, and the council strongly and persistently urged its claims on the railway authorities, we might soon be able to obtain what I am sure is desirable, viz., A railway station that would be in keeping with the village, the amount of business transacted here and better accomodation for both passengers and freight.

Lastly. We could possibly secure a little more quiet and decent behavoir on our streets than we had last Sunday night. Certainly the conduct of the crowd opposite the Salvation Army hall was simply disgraceful, and incorporated or not, we trust some authority will prevent anything like that again.

Butsome of your readers will say, "Incorporation will mean more taxes." It may; of that I am not able to speak. If so the more important question is, "Will it pay?" and "Will it be for the best?"

Yours,
WELL-WISHER.

A COUNTY Temperance Convention will be held in the Methodist church, Dutton, on Friday, December 14, at 2 p.m., for organization on the Scott Act repeal; also a mass meeting in the evening.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Mrs. Judge Hirsch, of Navarro Co., Tex., gave birth to six children lately. There are four boys and two girls. The father, George Hirsch, is 31 and his wife 27. They have been married five years and have three children besides the recent accession. Hirsch has named the boys Frederick, Mills, Cleveland, and Thurman, and the girls are Victoria and Louisa. The babies are tagged to preserve their identity.

GET your Christmas printing done at the ENTERPRISE office.

GENTLEMEN.

When you want to buy a

SUIT OF CLOTHES -:-

-:- OR AN OVERCOAT

GIVE

OUR CUTTER, MR. DAGAN

A TRIAL.

All Work Warranted.

HOCKIN & POOL.

HERTEL,

Merchant - Tailor

EAST SIDE MAIN ST., DUTTON.

NEW IMPORTED

FALL -:- GOODS.

My stock is very extensive with Elegant Fall Goods. Special attention has been directed towards securing the most complete and varied assortments of

New Suitings!
New Trouserings!
New Overcoatings!

Ever Displayed in this Village.

A visit is solicited from those who wish a

NEAT AND ELEGANT SUIT

—OR A—

STYLISH AND PERFECT-FITTING

FALL OVERCOAT.

Money can be saved by leaving your order with me. None but first-class work turned out. Best of Trimmings only are used.

J. C. HERTEL,
Merchant Tailor,
Next door to Nelson's Hotel.

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles south-west of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style.

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown....a.m.	8 03		9 47p.m	11 02
Rodney	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton a.m	9 09		10 29	1 00
Iona	9 25		....	1 36
Shedden	9 36		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't)p.m	3 00	p.m	1 10	5 25
Shedden	3 24		....	6 01
Iona	3 32		....	6 14
Dutton	3 45		12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00		....	7 10
Rodney	4 11		1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44		1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25		3 45	4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 6.15 p.m 4.55 p.m. and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ...a.m.	9 55	p.m. 5 40
" Mixed ....p.m.	3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2.50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

PETER DUNCANSON,
AUCTIONEER.

Charges Moderate. Sale Bills Furnished.

☞ Arrangements as to dates can be made at the ENTERPRISE Office.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

Dutton Meat Market.

THE ORIGINAL.

Stands second to none in the County.

You can get what you want and when you want it. I buy and sell according to to quality FOR CASH.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR

HOGS, DEAD OR ALIVE,
HIDES, SKINS AND TALLOW.

☞ Parties indebted by favor are requested to settle account at once, to enable me to continue business and be your humble servant,

JAMES BAKE.

Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888.

Order your papers at this office. See clubbing rates.

OUTSIDE OF THE COMBINE.

25 to 50 Per Cent. Under Combine Prices.

A. C. GRAHAM, - Undertaker, Dutton.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

DUTTON MARKETS.

Flour per cwt	$2 50	to	2 75
Red Wheat per bush.	90	to	95
Barley		to	50
Peas	50	to	55
Oats		to	30
Beans		to	1 00
Potatoes per bag	30	to	40
Green Apples	20	to	30
Hay per ton	9 00	to 10	50
Eggs			17
Butter			20
Sherts			75
Bran			65

ST. THOMAS MARKETS.

Wheat	$	95 to	$1 00
Barley		50 to	56
Peas		55 to	58
Oats		30 to	33
Potatoes (per bag)		40 to	50
Hay (per ton)	10 00 to		13 00
Butter		22 to	25
Eggs		23 to	25
Pork	6 50 to		6 75

NEW BUTCHER SHOP.

THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.

Patronage Solicited.

M. McNULTY.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that I will not be responsible for two notes of hand —one for $15 and the other $35—given by me in favor of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, as I have not received value therefor; moreover the latter note was made on the Sabbath.

JOHN DOYLE,
Nov. 17th, 1888. Dutton.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 7. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1888. NO. 51.

Professional Cards

ALEX. BEATON,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
WEST LORNE, ONT.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,
SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.
Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

Alex McKillop, M.D.
M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.
☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,
Barrister-at-Law,
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.
ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,
Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.
MONEY TO LOAN.
OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.
Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN
At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.
June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE.
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.
June 7. 1-yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon - Dentist,
Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,
SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,
Veterinary Surgeon,
DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS
For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.
F. A. Humpidge.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

The Star Loan Company
181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.
Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in
SAVINGS BANK!
from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. C. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.
Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.
L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.
OFFICERS.
L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!
Pumps! Pumps!!
To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.
Repairing Promptly Done.
I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.
Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.
Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888.

A NARROW ESCAPE.
People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

THIS -:- SPACE
BELONGS TO
—: W. H. VOGT, :—
THE JEWELLER.

To Farmers and Builders.
Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. Cochrane.
January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.
The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.
First-class Tailoring
IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.
30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED
This season to stock our new mills at Union.
L. J. Willson & Co.
Feb. 4, 1888. tf

-:- STOP! -:-
DON'T READ THIS
WE WILL SELL
COFFINS and CASKETS
CHEAPER THAN ANY HOUSE IN OR OUTSIDE THE COMBINE.
NO HUMBUG! TRY US!
WE HAVE ALSO A LARGE STOCK OF
FURNITURE!
which we will sell at
Prices which will Astonish you. Call and get Prices.
W. I. Schultz & Son

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from a disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

The Best
EDUCATION.
Prepares young men and women to support themselves and accumulate wealth. Send for Book to DETROIT BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Detroit, Mich. This is a College of Business, School of Shorthand, School of Penmanship, and English Training School. Elegant Catalogue free to applicants.

Dutton Iron Works.
MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.
The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-
Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

ONE GOOD POINT
Out of the many possessed by Burdock Blood Bters is that it may be taken at all the seasons of the year, and by either young or old. In this way the three busy B's are always at work doing good.

Glencoe has great prospects of having a building boom next season. A large number of contracts have been let with prospects of more to follow.

HITCH UP!
But before you do that come 'round to
M'MILLAN'S - HARNESS - SHOP
BLANKETS, RUBBER RUGS, GOAT ROBES, TRUNKS, VALISES, HALTERS, ETC. ETC.

WHIPS, BRUSHES, BRIDLES, COMBS, HARNESS OIL, ETC., ETC.
and buy a set of
HAND-MADE -:- HARNESS
Manufactured out of the Choicest Stock available in the country, at Moderate Prices. Those of my customers who want a SUPERIOR ARTICLE can, at a little additional, be furnished with Traces of Genuine American Oak Tanned Leather.
—:o:—
A LARGE NUMBER OF
CURLED HAIR FACED COLLARS
Warranted to work with safety.
☞ The highest price will be paid for Cordwood, Beech and Maple, in exchange for Harness.
All who want an honest and serviceable article are cordially invited to call.

Administrator's Notice.
THE creditors of Angus McPherson, late of the Township of Dunwich, in the County of Elgin, yeoman, deceased, who died on or about the 9th day of October, 1886, and all others having claims against his estate are hereby notified to send by post, prepaid, or otherwise deliver to the undersigned administratrix of the estate of the said deceased at Dutton, Ont., on or before the 3rd day of January, 1889, their Christian names and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them; and in default thereof, and immediately after the said third day of January, 1889, the assets of the said deceased will be distributed amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to claims of which notice shall have been given as above required; and this notice being given under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of Ontario (1887), Cap. 110, the administratrix will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any person of whose claim notice shall not have been received by her at the time of such distribution.
JANE McPHERSON,
Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888. Administratrix.

Largest Circulation in Western Ontario.
—:THE:—
FREE PRESS
LONDON - CANADA.
The Free Press is the only newspaper in the West receiving the Associated Press despatches. It contains ALL THE NEWS by Cable, Telegraph, Telephone and Mail, up to the hour of going to press. It gives in each issue original and valuable Illustrations of men and things, and is the only newspaper in Canada employing its own artists.

The Weekly Free Press
$1 PER YEAR. POSTAGE FREE.
Established Nearly Half a Century.
"THE THREE GRACES"
AND "BY THE LAKESIDE,"
TWO HANDSOME CHROMOS,
Also a beautiful Christmas Number, comprising 36 pages, given away free to every subscriber for 1889.
$8,000 in Premiums,
Comprising New and Useful Articles, given away free to agents. The most liberal inducements ever offered in Canada to agents. Send for agent's outfit and terms.
THE FREE PRESS
Is the only Morning and Evening Paper published in Western Ontario. It is forwarded on all early morning trains, reaching all places between Toronto and Windsor by eight a.m., and is the only daily paper received at points west of London before the afternoon. The live newspaper of the west, $5 per year, postage free. Sold by agents everywhere. Address—
FREE PRESS CO.,
LONDON, CANADA.

SALESMEN WANTED.
Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed. Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co,
Empire Nurseries, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM
FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. It a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

PREVAILING SICKNESS.
The most prevailing complaints at this season are rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, inflammations and congestions. For all these and other painful troubles Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best internal and external remedy.

SELLING OUT!
In order to clear out our Entire Stock we offer all goods at greatly reduced prices.
A Large Assortment of
DOLLS FROM 10. UP
PICTURE BOOKS,
SCRAP BOOKS,
MAGIC LANTERNS,
TOY DISHES,
CUPS AND SAUCERS,
VASES, TOILET SETS.
A FINE LINE OF PLUSH GOODS.
BASKETS, WRITING DESKS,
WORK BOXES, PAPER RACKS.
A Large Stock of
XMAS. CARDS
TO BE SOLD CHEAP.
BOOKS OF ALL KINDS—Hymn Books, Prayer Books, Etc.
Picture Frames, Looking Glasses, Hand Glasses, Brushes, Combs, Pipes.
TOYS Too Numerous to Mention.
Sleighs, Rocking Horses, Violins, Accordeons, Concertinas, Flutes, Piccolos, and Harmonicas, all to be sold CHEAP FOR CASH at
PRICE'S Bookstore
P.S.—SANTA CLAUS will be at Price's until Jan. 1, 1889. Call and see him.

Why You Feel
So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,
"The Life of the Body."
Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?
Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:
G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."
Eugene I. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."
Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best
Spring and Family Medicine
in use. "It beats all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "how Ayer's Sarsaparilla
does sell." Prepared by
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

RELIABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.
Procure a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil from your medicine dealer, and use according to directions. It cured Ida Johnston, of Cornell, Ont., of that complaint, and she recommends it as a sure cure. For 25 years it has never failed to give satisfaction.

A Very Funny Man.

As our readers would doubtless like to know something of the most famous humorist of the day, we present the above excellent likeness and the following admirable sketch by Edmund Kirke, lately published in Harper's Monthly Magazine:

"Mr. Charles B. Lewis (better known as 'M. Quad') is perhaps the most unique and genuine humorist this country has produced.

"'M. Quad' is not a humorous 'artist'—a boss mechanic who manufactures jokes as a carpenter does packing boxes, with saw and jack-plane and much exudation of perspiration. He is naturally and spontaneously funny. Humor gushes from him like champagne from an uncorked bottle, bubbling and effusive, and drenching us, whether we will or not, with laughter. And there is wisdom with his wit—strong, homely common-sense mixed with a racy, unctuous humor which makes his humor as grateful to our taste as whale oil is to the palate of an Esquimau. He is of universal relish, as is witnessed by the wide popularity that The Detroit Free Press largely owes to his contributions.

"It is not generally known where he was born, nor is it of much consequence, since his career did not begin till he was blown up, some seventeen years ago, on an Ohio River steamboat. He is perhaps the only example of a man who has been lifted into fame by being tossed a hundred feet into the air, and coming down, more dead than alive, to tell the story. He did this. Standing at his printer's case, when he was so far recovered as to limp about, he put into type "How it feels to be blown up," and the whole West burst into laughter. That laugh made 'M. Quad' famous. He was then transferred from the composing room to the editorial department, and ever since short extracts from the Free Press have been copied into every journal throughout the country.

"About ten years ago he invented—or rather created—'His Honor' and 'Bijah' and 'Brother Gardner' of the 'Lime-kiln Club'—characters totally dissimilar, but each as natural, original, individual and ludicrous as any in American literature.

"'Artemus Ward' created one character; 'M. Quad' has given birth to three, and each one has, during a period of ten years, given delight to millions.

"The man is precisely what we are led to expect from his writings. He is by turns 'His Honor,' 'Bijah,' and 'Brother Gardner,' with the dry humor and quaint wisdom that is peculiar to each character.

"His 'den,' as he calls his 'sanctum,' in an upper story of the Free Press building, is a curiosity shop filled with odd mementos and knick knacks. Here is a bit of rope that helped to hang a murderer, and a pair of shackles of the old slave time; there are bullets from Gettysburg, powder-flasks from the Merrimac, and swords, sabres, muskets and shot and shell from scores of battlefields; while around the walls, side by side with portraits of Sheridan and Custer and busts of Grant and Lee, are pictures of the most noted criminals. But the oddest thing in the room is a slender man of about forty, with close-cropped gray hair, heavy mustache, keen, intent eyes, and an earnest, somewhat eager expression, who sits at an old-fashioned table, and looks up with a smile of welcome as a stranger enters his apartment. This is 'M. Quad,' known among his personal acquaintances as C. B. Lewis. He is modest and not at all puffed up by the fact that he has a weekly audience of a million, nearly one half of whom are matter-of-fact Englishmen, who take him with their beefsteak and ale, as a sure help to a healthy digestion. He is spoken of as odd and eccentric, and that he may be, but I incline to the opinion that this peculiarity is due to the fact that Nature produced him in one of her genial moods, when she would do the world a kindly turn by bestowing upon it a gentle soul, who should do us good by spreading for us a wholesome feast of mingled wit and wisdom."

M. Quad writes exclusively for the Free Press and is just as funny as ever. We advise every family to try the Free Press for a year.

THE OLD STORY.

Mabel French, or as she was frequently called by her friends, "Lizzie" or "Lou," came to Watford about eight weeks ago in company with her sister Maud. She is a daughter of Mrs. English, a widow woman at present living in St. Thomas. Her home was in Freelton, Wentworth county, where she was employed as a dressmaker, and previous to coming to Watford she worked in Guelph. In that city she made the acquaintance of a man named Samuel Brown, an employe in the Burr furniture factory. He, it is alleged, accomplished her ruin, and in order to escape the observations of relatives and friends, she, in company with her sister, came west, remaining in London for a week and then coming on to Watford. Their object in coming here was to visit a friend named Wells, who had purchased a farm in Brooke and intended moving from the east to his property. The illness of his sister interfered with this arrangement, and the girls were left to their own resources. They secured a boarding-house and made an unsuccessful effort to obtain employment. The girl Maud left for St. Thomas about two weeks ago where she had a situation. On Wednesday morning Mabel called at the house of Mrs. Kerr. Shortly after her arrival there she was seized with convulsive fits, and on Friday night gave birth to a male child. She remained in a semi-unconscious state until death put an end to her sufferings at the early age of 22 years.

The Guelph authorities have been communicated with and an effort will be made to bring Brown to justice. Mrs. English is lying dangerously ill at the Dake House, and has not yet been informed of her daughter's sad fate.

National Pills are a mild purgative, acting on the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, removing all obstructions.

Hon. Edward Blake has signified his intention of taking his seat at the opening of the next session of Parliament.

Expel the worms by using the safe and reliable anthelmintic Freman's Worm Powders.

A conductor on the C. P. R. named Jas. Van Alstme has fallen heir to an estate in Scotland valued at over a million dollars.

"GRIP."

With the new year Grip enters upon its thirty-second half-yearly volume, a fact which speaks eloquently for the merits of this unique and favorite Canadian journal. No former attempt in humorous journalism in Canada was ever successful, because in no former case was there the happy combination of elements essential to the success of such a venture. In the first place, an uncommon fertility of invention is required to keep a comic paper abreast of the times, and this must be backed by an artistic ability equal to the task of interpreting the happy thoughts envolved in a popular manner. Secondly, there must be the solid basis of right principle upon which to build. Truth, honor, fairness and good taste are all as essential to a comic journal as to a magazine of the first class All these features have, from the first number, distinguished Grip in a high degree. It stands to-day alongside of the very best productions of its class in the world, and enjoys a fame far beyond the bounds of Canada. To Canadians it ought to be more and more an object of patriotic pride, and certainly but little can be said for the patriotism of any Canadian who pretends to culture, and can afford the price, whose name is not found on Grip's subscription list. The subscription price is almost ridiculously low, when the rates of similar (and not equally able) journals are considered. It is only two dollars a year, although the paper contains sixteen pages filled with bright, original humor of pen and pencil, and always gives without stint, political cartoons on passing events, which for point, power and humor, are certainly unsurpassed in any humorous papers of the day For ourselves we can say that Grip is the very first journal we open and enjoy on the arrival of our weekly exchanges, and we believe the same is true of nearly every editor in the country. Get it for 1889 without fail.

FATTENING POULTRY.

A visit to the markets will show that the greater part of the poultry marketed by farmers, not professional poultry-raisers, is not fully fattened. This is as unwise as it is to market hogs, or cattle, or sheep, without tattening them While the fowls were gathering their own food on the farm they could not be in more than first-class growing condition. Before they are marketed they should be confined where they can take only moderate exercise, and liberally fed, for about ten days' on fattening food. For the first two days do not feed all the fowls will eat, but gradually increase the amount given them until they have each meal all they will eat up clean. Feed three times a day. For the morning and noon feed, give boiled potatoes beets, or carrots mixed into a stiff mass with corn and barley meal; at night give whole corn. Give what skim milk you can; if you have enough, mix their food with it. Of course keep before the fowls an abundance of gravel, charcoal and pure water. During the last three or four days mix a handful of pulverized charcoal with each pail of soft feed. For twelve hours at least (better twenty four) before the fowls are killed, give them no feed. They should not be marketed with full crops; in fact, this is prohibited by law in many of the principal markets.—American Agriculturist for December.

Tone up the system and improve the appetite by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It will make you feel like a new person. Thousands have found health and relief from suffering by the use of this great blood purifier when all other means failed.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,
Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—
New York, August 1, 1886. 122 E. 27th st.
DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.,
Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:
My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold nor any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in acute cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, life has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,
A Priceless Blessing
C. EDWARDS LESTER.
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

IONA.

S. Lumley has been granted permission to learn telegraphy on the M. C. R.

Mr. Duncan McLean, of Iona Station, and Miss Sarah Kerr, of Iona, were united in marriage last Thursday by the Rev. Mr. Sutherland, of Fingal. They took the evening train for the West amid a shower of old shoes and rice.

Who said the days of chivalry are past? The boldest deeds of ancient knights were thrown in the shade by a bloody duel fought within the walls of Fort Iona, under the Marquis of Queensbury rules, between two pugilistic lightweights, for the hand and heart of one of of our fair maids. When the dust and smoke of the combat cleared away an armistice was agreed to, both parties shook hands and interchanged courtesies by testing each other's chewing tobacco. They then agreed to fight to a finish sometime in the near future. The weapons to be used will be either axes or crosscut saws.

MIDDLEMISS.

On Tuesday evening the many friends of Jno. McVicar met at Noah Annot's to show their esteem towards him as a teacher, previous to his departure. Too much can not be said of Mr. McVicar as a teacher, and the esteem in which he is held by the section shows him to be a general favorite. Mr. Annot showed his goodwill to the party by asking them to come again and spend an evening. After all the guests had arrived, the evening was spent in plays, recitations, charades, songs and such like. About thirty couple sat down to a supper prepared by the ladies, which was got up in fine style. About 1 o'clock the party left for their homes feeling well satisfied and thinking it was one of the most pleasant evenings pent in their lives.

Mrs. Wells, of Dakota, is visiting her father and mother and reports that country as being far ahead of this, and that she swould not care to live here again.

NOT FAR FROM HOME.

A horned owl was shot near Aylmer the other day.

Port Stanley Methodists will build a $3,000 church.

The St. Thomas Council wants the Ontario Government to do away with all exemptions.

Victoria Carbolic Salve is a great aid to internal medicine in the treatment of scrofulous sores, ulcers and abscesses of all kinds.

Stratford has contracted for 60 electric street lamps at 22 cents each per night up till 12 o'clock.

Providing Mr. and Mrs. P. Falle, of Tilsonburg, live to see the 10th of January, 1889, they will be able to celebrate their golden wedding.

An ear of corn raised by Malcom Munroe, lot 10, con. 2, Aldborough, has 30 rows, averaging 45 grains to the row, making 1,350 on the ear, and weighing 1¾ pounds.

The Plaindealer man has received a ticket for a banquet to be given Hon. E. Gladstone at Birmingham. Press of business this side the herring pond will prevent him from attending.

The police authorities of St Thomas have discovered that two clever cracksmen contemplated robbing the Traders Bank, through an American whom the burglars invited to be an accomplice.

Richard Thompson, probably the oldest Mason in Canada, is lying ill at the Convalescent Home in London suffering from bronchitis. He is 99 years of age, was born in Belfast, Ireland, and joined the Masonic Order in that city seventy-eight years ago.

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

When Mr. James A. Ross, proprietor of the Dominion Hotel, London, visited his father's room Sunday morning he found him dead in bed. He had died of apoplexy in the night without any one knowing of his illness. He retired in his usual health the night before.

Some vulgar men last week at Perth held a wake over the dead body of "Yankee" Brown. The dead man was dragged from his coffin and placed on a table, a pipe was put between his teeth and other devices of "sport" carride out. The affair created scandal.

Dr. Wilkinson, of Mooretown, Ont., tells this story:—The other day a couple of little girls came to his office to be vaccinated. One of them undertook to speak for the other, and explained—"Doctor, this is my sister. She is too young to know her left arm from her right, so mamma washed both of them."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

For No. 1 hard wheat $1.07 is being paid at Winnipeg.

To invigorate both the body and the brain, use the reliable tonic, Milburn's Aromatic Quinine Wine.

By a vote of 14 to 7 the Northwest Assembly on Saturday decided not to submit the liquor question to a popular vote.

It has been decided by the temperance people of East Middlesex to vigorously oppose the repeal of the Scott Act.

The repeal of the Scott Act was voted on in Richmond, Quebec, on Thursday, and the act was sustained by an overwhelming majority.

For forty years Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been demonstrated to be the most reliable remedy in use for colds, coughs and lung diseases. Slight colds should not be neglected. The Pectoral will prevent their becoming chronic.

A touching sight was presented in a San Francisco court-room. It was that of a married couple—the wife eighty-five, and the husband two years younger—who had been arrested on the charge of drunkenness. They were sent to the almshouse.

WILL BE FULLY MET.
Indications of Dyspepsia, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Rising and Souring of Food, Wind on the Stomach, or a Choking or Gnawing sensation at the pit of the stomach are fully met by Burdock Blood Bitters which has cured the worst cases on record.

For several days some disreputable scoundrel of Brampton has been masquerading as a local Jack the Ripper, grabbing ladies who happen to be out late and making indecent proposals to them. He appears nightly dressed in various disguises. The young men of the town have formed themselves into a vigilance committee and promise the rascal a dress of tar and feathers, if they catch him.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

The Dominion Parliament is expected to meet on the 17th or 24th of January.

It is intended to bore for gas at Ruthven, Essex county, going down 2,800 feet for it if necessary.

The decision of the Supreme Court in the railway crossing case will not likely be given for three weeks.

The Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Montreal want to hold a world's fair in that city in 1892.

The average expense per week for each Inmate of the Elgin House of Industry last year amounted to $1.07.

The Labour Reformer says that nineteen Toronto Aldermen have declared in favor of the $600 exemption on houses.

The meeting to settle the question of the northern boundary of Ontario and Quebec will shortly be held in Ottawa.

The Dominion Government have finally awarded the Sault Ste. Marie canal contracts to the Messrs. Ryan & Haney.

There is great rejoicing in Windsor at the decision of the Canadian Pacific railway to build a road to that place from London.

The announcement is made of the intended assimilation of the matriculation examination of McGill and Toronto Universities.

Mr. Louis Wertheim, of Frankfort, Germany, has purchased the phosphate property of Mr. James Reid, in Ottawa county, for $40,000.

A large petition has been filed with the Secretary of State in Ottawa, asking for the repeal of the Scott Act in Victoria county, Ontario.

In Ottawa on Sunday Father McGovern denounced in very vigorous language the proposal to do away with tax exemptions for churches.

Mr. Phippen, owner of the Ox Point quarries, near Belleville, has contracted to deliver 2,000,000 cubic yards of stone for the St. Lawrence canal.

On the recommendation of the Minister of the Interior, the fees payable under the Torrens Land Act in the North-West are to be considerably reduced.

Kingstonians have struck on the idea of building a railway from their city to the Georgian Bay, connecting with the Pacific Junction line at Gravenhurst.

The hearing of the case of the Canadian Pacific railway v. the Western Union Telegraph Co., before the Supreme Court, has been postponed to the February term.

An influential deputation waited upon Mr. J. H. Pope yesterday to request Government aid for the construction of a railway under the Lachine canal, near Montreal.

It is stated that the Dominion authorities promptly refused the request of the Mormon elders that old Mormons coming into this country might be allowed to continue their polygamous habits.

The chairman of the Parkdale Finance Committee says the financial statement recently submitted to the Toronto City Council puts the liabilities of the town $200,000 below the true figure.

In St. Paul's church, Kingston, the Bishop of Ontario stated on Sunday night that during his twenty-six years' connection with the Episcopacy he had confirmed 30,000 persons and opened 166 churches.

At the civic briber; investigation at Quebec Mr. W. J. Maguire, one of the witnesses, was committed to gaol for five days for contempt of court in refusing to state from whom he got certain information which he had published.

A number of politicians friendly to the Mercier Government are at present organizing in Montreal a joint stock company for the purpose of exploring the Beauce gold mining district and the natural gas wells of the province.

At the meeting of the Elgin County Council yesterday a special committee was appointed to formulate charges against the county judge for having insulted the council in his address to the grand jury, and for having occupied the Court-house when the council was in session.

AMERICAN.

Mr. Powderley has been re-elected General Master Workman of the knights of Labour.

Dakota millers have formed an association with the object of advancing the interests of their trade.

The Pope has instructed Cardinal Gibbons to congratulate Mr. Harrison on his election to the Presidency.

Five persons have died of diphtheria a Waterloo, Iowa, since Saturday, and all the schools have been closed.

It is stated that the officials of the United States House of Representatives now claim a Democratic majority of three.

A syndicate has offered $150,000 for the Philadelphia Baseball Club, which the present proprietors think is too small a price.

The wheat markets are lower, owing to stagnation in the export business. In Chicago the May option closed on Saturday at $1.13.

An American has submitted to the French Government a contrivance by which dynamite shells can be fired from ordinary guns, exploding at the target.

The Knights of Labour are favourable to the passage of a law to place a penalty of fine or imprisonment on gambling on wheat and other necessaries of life.

The Executive Committee of the newly-organized Chicago Anarchist Society are collecting money to found Anarchist Sunday schools for children throughout the city.

In the first Ward Public school, Long Island City, Thursday, a cry of fire created a panic among the 900 children, and many were severely, but not fatally, injured in their wild rush for the door.

The National Sabbath Union held a meeting in Chicago on Monday, and decided to hold a national convention in the interest of Sabbath observance in Washington from December 11 to December 13.

A sensational Detroit evening paper has a rumour to the effect that Gen. Harrison is determined to annex Canada, and if the assumption of her debt is not enough, he will recommend the employment of part of the United States surplus for the purchase of the Dominion.

FOREIGN.

The Parnell defence fund now amounts to £20,000.

A farmer named Daly has been murdered at Tralee, County Kerry.

The estimates of expenditure in the German Budget total 949,000,000 marks.

Two hundred Alsatian recruits mutinied on their way to join the German army.

An impression that the French Republic is in serious danger prevails in London.

Mr. Harrington says he will not pay the fine of £500 imposed on him by the Parnell Commission.

The Czar has placed the Chateau Yalta at the disposal of ex-Queen Natalie during her stay in the Crimea.

The German Colonial Company have decided to fit out an Emin Bey relief expedition as speedily as possible.

The first railway in China was officially opened on the 9th inst. when Viceroy Li travelled over it some distance.

Cardinal Lavigerie has submitted his anti-slavery scheme to the Pope. He relies especially upon England's support.

United Ireland has made a furious attack on the Parnell Commission on account of the fine imposed on Edward Harrington.

It is believed the Dominion Government will enact legislation at the coming session of Parliament restricting Chinese immigration.

Sir Charles Warren, who recently resigned as London Chief of Police, has been offered the command of the brigade at Aldershot.

The Hungarian Reformed Church Convention in Vienna, after a violent debate, voted in favour of the celibacy of clergymen.

The murder of Daly, the Irish farmer, at first laid to the credit of Moonlighters, is now said to have resulted from family feuds.

In the Sydney, N. S. W., Assembly an address to the Queen was adopted, requesting that Colonial Governments be informed of proposed nominations of governors.

It is stated that Gen. Boulanger's wife is taking steps to obtain a divorce, and that one of the richest widows in France is willing to marry the General as soon as he is free.

In the House of Commons on Monday Sir James Fergusson in reply to a question stated that the correspondence relating to the Fisheries Treaty would not be published.

FASHION NOTES.

Pale almond-coloured or apricot brocade laces, bonnets, stockings, dinner-gowns, and other entire costumes, made up in conjunction with golden brown or mahogany velvet, is a late French fancy in dress and garniture.

Pale-faced women should studiously avoid the contiguity of any of the beautiful pearl and grey shades, since they are very apt to give a ghastly tinge to a colourless complexion. By the same reason people who have an abundance of colour should adopt it as a toning tint.

Following the very popular method of applying black to colours, we see all sorts of black fur used on cloaks, jackets, redingotes, tea-gowns, and bonnets of Roman red, moss green, reseda, terra cotta, dark blue, and mahogany cloth, Astrachan, black fox, black bear, monkey, black martin, and the darkest wolverine furs are each and all used for this purpose.

White toilets are likely to be more than ever the rage in the fashionable world this winter. Of white dress fabrics there is an elegant and endless variety—brocade, velvet, both plain and striped, watered silk, bengaline, Ottoman silk, faille, Irish Poplin, velvet, embossed satin, India cashmere, Henrietta cloth, tailor cloths of various grades, French and English vellings, China crepe-lisse, tulle and gold-embroidered white India silk muslins being equally in vogue.

The new short-waisted dresses, which are worn by the few as yet, and not by the majority, are really long-waisted bodices given a short effect by means of the Empire sash, which is carried twice around the waist. It is the same with the tournure; there is an effect of its absence, but it still remains the fact that a small cushion bustle and two steels at the back of the skirt, very much reduced in size, are added to every dress now sent out by fashionable dressmakers.

In the era of independence and progress it is observed that the number of women who design, or at least super intend the making of their own gowns, bonnets, wraps, etc., according to their own particular style and taste, governed, of course, in a degree by prevailing modes, is no doubt to-day very much larger than it ever was since fashion ruled the people. This is certainly one of the cheering tokens of wider culture in a good sense of the term, and a finer appreciation of what is fit and becoming in individual cases, leaving current rules and set decrees of fashion to be utilized or not, to be adopted or discarded when and where it is deemed proper and best. The ridicule and opposition from those who unerringly follow wherever fashion leads seem rather to stimulate than dampen the courage and ardour of women, who in matters of dress dare to be independent and free, and are inflexibly bent on being so. With these, exceptin instances of the extreme gowning of women of erratic ideas, the natural lines of grace and beauty are preserved without doing any violence to really good taste, while at the same time their attire serves as a protest most decided against many of the prevalent ugly fashions of the period. For example, the ungainly extreme tournure that caricatured its thousands of wearers, with its immense, protruding, wobbling curves. It was the vogue, but there were scores and hundreds of wise women of cultured and refined tastes who would no more have walked abroad thus humped than they would appear in an oxyoke or horse-blinders.

Mrs. Anna Jennes Miller, who has been in attendance at the Woman's Congress in Detroit, has been giving a reporter of The Free Press a peep at the mysteries of a peculiar dress she wears. Said Mrs. M.:—"The dress I wear doesn't seem different from any other woman's, does it? But it is. It's all one piece. I wear no petticoats and all the undergarments are of one piece, suspended from the shoulders. The system precludes both corset and bustle. Petticoats are replaced by double skirts—the same plan as men's trousers. You see, I have just as much freedom as you, and yet the possibilities for rich dresses and draperies are preserved."

Cold Water Fishes.

It will be a surprising fact to many readers to learn that cold waters abound more in life than do warm waters. The schools of herrings about the coasts of Japan greatly exceed those of England, though the Japanese waters are the colder by at least twenty degrees. An idea of their numbers may be had from Capt. H. C. St. John's "Notes and Sketches."

In May and June this fish appears in incredible numbers. The straits, bays and creeks are alive with herrings. They are in such numbers that those nearest the beach are pushed out of the water, and the shore for miles is thus kept constantly replenished with fresh fish; countless numbers of sea-gulls, eagles, crows, besides foxes, wolves, and bears, find an ever ready meal, and the way the sea-gulls just picked the tidbit from the back of the neck, and left the remainder of the fish, showed how well they knew the supply was constant.

The Japanese simply run a net straight out from the shore, one hunderd and fifty or two hundred yards along a line of stakes. At the end of the net is a bag, into which the fish, on striking the net and working along it, soon find their way. When required, the fisherman only have to go off, haul the bag up, and opening the end let the fish fall into their boat.

This species of herring is both large and coarser than our own. The temperature of the water in which they appear to flurish to such an extraordinary extent averages thirty-six degrees, whereas that in which our own fishes is found averages fifty-four degrees to fifty-eight degrees.

Praise and Prayer.

The spirit of praise goes with and belongs with the spirit of prayer. It will often happen in the experience of a much tried and tempted disciple that, even in the depths of his distress, praise to his God will be the readiest and surest road out of those depths and up to the heights of spiritual joy and exaltation. If he dwells in prayer only on his needs and sins and sorrows, he will miss one of the supreme delights of communion with God. On the other hand, if he turns his thoughts to the unnumbered evidences of the Father's love and care for him, to the saving power of the outstretched arm, to the promises of succor and sustenance, and for all these pours out his heart in gratitude, he will suddenly find himself out of the depth into which he allowed himself to fall, and his only prayer need be for a continuance of the very blessings which have evoked his heartfelt praise. The God we praise is the God from whom all blessings flow, and we cannot praise him too often or too much for his wondrous love in making us partakers of the richness and fulness of his blessing.

Gen. Harrison, referring to certain rumours, says that he has made no pronouncement whatever on the question of the annexation of Canada.

Frogs Not Profitable.

In the Boston "Journal" some weeks ago appeared a quotation from another paper regarding a "frog farm" in which the extravagant statement was made that an income of $5,000 could be obtained from raising these inhabitants of the marsh for sale. Fred Mather, superintendent of the New York Fish Commission and fishery editor of "Forest and Stream," demolishes this assertion by an interesting article in the last issue of the "Forest and Stream". Therein he writes:

For the past four years this question of frog culture has given me some trouble in answering private letters from would-be frog farmers, and in a legacy left by the late Seth Green, who wrote an article on it in the report of the New York Fishery Commission for 1873. This was widely copied, and each year some imaginative reporter gives an account of a mythical frog farm which has never existed. In 1875 this farm was located near Smithtown, Long Island, and I went there and found that there was no frog farm in that vicinity, nor was there any man living near the same place bearing the name given. The next year the apocryphal farm was located near Philadelphia, and I had the same experience. Since that time I have only wasted postage in the pursuit of the fabled industry.

Mr. Green gave the results of two years' experience in which he gathered frog spawn and hatched it, but lost his polywogs and abandoned frog culture, but he encouraged others to try it by saying the "difficulties can be overcome by patience and perseverance." Yet he further said:

"When they become frogs they live on all kinds of insects, and the only thing I can see to make success sure is to procure insects in large quantities, enough to support a great number of frogs." And here is where the impracticability of raising frogs lies.

It is no trouble to gather large quantities of frog spawn and hatch millions of tadpoles, nor to feed the latter on meat and vegetation, for they eat both. The enemies of the tadpole, or polywog, are numerous, and large frogs will eat small ones. As an instance of the latter fact, I once took a dozen large American bullfrogs to Professor Moore, of the Derby Museum at Liverpool, and they quickly swallowed the small European frogs that were in the tank where he placed them. Even if it were impossible to feed the frogs on meat, which it is not, the batrachian is of slow growth, and the balance would be on the wrong side of the ledger when they were sent to market.

I will travel to see the frog farmer "living on an income of $5,000," all from his frogs. In my long experience as a pisciculturist the frog has been under constant notice, and I have tried to feed them on meat and mussels without success. My belief is that frog culture is a delusion, and that such a thing as a frog pond does not exist, and unless some genius arises who can find a way to feed his frogs on beetles, flies and other insects, which, with some snails, constitute their natural food, there will never be a frog farm. The supply of frogs to New York markets comes mainly from Canada and places of sparse population, where they are not extensively eaten. Forty years ago Americans did not eat frogs, and every marsh in the country contained large ones. Now they are almost extinct scarcities in the State of New York, and do not breed and grow rapidly enough to pay to catch them. I think it probable that the batrachians, like the reptiles, are of long life and slow growth, and that a man would get very tired waiting to see a crop mature. Perhaps he might wait ten years to get large ones, but never having raised a frog to maturity I can not say. The belief in their slow growth is based on the fact that many polywogs do not get their legs the season they are hatched, but pass the winter in the tadpole state; this points to slow maturity.

An Enemy of the Human Race.

The Persian public decided the other day that the railroad is an enemy of the human race, because a man who jumped off a train while in motion fell under the wheels and was killed. They accordingly tore the cars in pieces and would have wiped out the train employes if the latter had not taken to their heels. It is usual for people during their early acquaintance with the locomotive, to regard the snorting monster as a very suspicious character, and Congo natives have not yet got over the impression that it is a lusty devil hidden away in the steamboat boiler who makes the wheels go round. We cannot afford to laugh very much at these ignorant brethren, for our own great-grandfathers declared that it was utter nonsense to suppose that steam cars could carry passengers faster than ten miles an hour without smashing everybody up, and, besides, all the horses would be scared into fits and permanently ruined. The Persian public will doubtless grow to like the great Western idea in spite of its noise and dangers.

Money in Pills.

Dr. Henry Miller, who made $3,000,000 in the manufacture of pills, was buried at Wilmington, Mass., Sunday, in a casket which cost $9,000. Four coal-black horses carried him to a temporary brick tomb which cost $500, on a catafalque which cost $2,000, and at the tomb the casket was placed in a big red cedar box, which cost $250, held together by sixty big brass screws which cost $18. Owing to the fact that his life ended rather suddenly another coffin equally magnificent, and intended to hold the first, was not completed in time for service. When completed it will have cost as much as the other, and the two will be placed, one within the other, inside of an oblong glass case three inches thick, to be made at a cost of $300. The final resting place to be built at a cost of 10,000, will be a tomb in the village burying ground.

A Whole Temperance Sermon.

The following story is told of General Harrison in connection with a public dinner given him on one occasion: "At the close of the dinner one of the gentlemen drank his health. The General pledged his toast by drinking water. Another gentleman offered a toast and said: 'General, will you not favor me by taking a glass of wine?' The General, in a very gentlemanly way, begged to be excused. He was again urged to join in a glass of wine. This was too much. He rose from his seat and said, in the most dignified manner: 'Gentlemen, I have twice refused to partake of the wine cup; I hope that will be sufficient. Though you press the matter ever so much, not a drop shall pass my lips. I made a resolve when I started in life that I would avoid strong drink. That vow I have never broken. I am one of a class of young men who graduated together. Sixteen members of my class now fill drunkard's graves, and all from the pernicious habit of wine-drinking. I owe my health, happiness and prosperity to that resolution.'"

Mrs. Gladstone in Politics.

Mrs. Gladstone presided at a meeting this afternoon in support of Lord Compton's candidacy for the vacant Parliamentary seat for the Holborn district of Finsbury. In the course of a speech announcing that she was working to achieve Lord Compton's election Mrs. Gladstone said:—"In working for the election of Lord Compton you are furthering the cause of justice and right in Ireland, and also in the rest of the kingdom." Lady Compton followed Mrs. Gladstone, making her maiden speech. She was exceedingly nervous at the start, and remarked at the close:—'The next time I hope I shan't be so terrified."

A Fine Fellow

He may be, but if he tells you that any preparation in the world is as good as Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor distrust the advice. Imitations only prove the value of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. See Signature on each bottle of Polson & Co. Get "Putnam's."

LATEST BY CABLE.

Russia's Warlike Movements—The English Parliament Working Late—Some Personals.

The London "Times publishes alarmis dispatches from both Bucharest and Vienna reporting the Russians as constructing pontons for a bridge across the Danube at Reni. This river frontier town of Bessarabia was a decayed and useless village when Russia took it from the Roumanians in 1878, but it is now an important depot. For troops rolling stock was of material importance, and in case of an invasion Bulgaria would be the principal point of departure. Under these circumstances the building of pontons at the Reni Dockyard, which can only mean the throwing of a bridge across the Danube, will be regarded as significant.

The newest Alsacian episode is attracting a good deal of attention in Paris. Col. Stoffel was Napoleon III.'s military attache at Berlin before the late war, but of late he has been devoted to historical researches and work. He recently visited Colmar to get up facts for a study of Cæsar's campaigns in Germany, and did so by official permission of the Alsacian authorities, but on his return to Strasburg, where he desired to rest for a day or two before his journey to Paris, he was visited at the hotel by the police, who, in spite of his official permit, escorted him to the railway station, put him on board a train, and sent him packing out of Alsace. Unless there is a very explicit explanation and apology it is hard to see how the French will keep patient under such an affront.

Parliament is working over hours again, plodding through the estimates in order to get a chance to adjourn by the 22d for the Christmas holidays. The Chancellor of the Exchequer has had to abandon his wheel and van tax. The $500,000 expected from this source is otherwise to be raised. Some of the efforts at economy at first won praise for the Government, the Queen, for instance, having been induced to sanction the abolition of the royal kennel of stag-hounds and the whole establishment presided over by the master of buckhounds, and it is being understood that the beefeaters at the Tower are to go, but the reformers have not been so enthusiastic since they learned that these savings are to go to swell the Queen's privy purse instead of being turned into the Treasury.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone leave for Italy three weeks hence on their Winter journey which has now become a regular annual affair, and to the beneficent effect of which Gladstone himself ascribes his remarkable hold on health and mental vigor.

Sturdy old John Bright, who is two years younger and was always more robust so far as appearance went, lies slowly dying at his northern home. Numerous bulletins of his condition are in all the papers daily, and the fluctuations in his strength are watched with deep interest everywhere, even in Ireland, where his later-day hostility is now forgotten in the recollection of his strong earlier friendship. There is a pathetic story in the papers of a little Scotch terrier which has been a great pet of Bright's, and which lies now on his bed all day and all night. He will not consent to leave his post for a minute.

Satan and Young Men.

Another route Satan is apt to take in his active travels is through the mercantile establishments. "He steps in and says to the clerks: "How much salary do you get? Is that all? Why, you can't live on that! You have a right to enough for a livelihood. A few quarters out of the money drawer will never be missed; or here and there is a remnant of goods you could take home without being found out; or you could change those accounts books a little, and you could make that figure eight a nought and that figure five a three, and if you do not feel exactly right about doing that, you can some day pay it back, which you can do perfectly easy. Don't feel like running the risk? Well, then, you can't go to the theatre, and you can't go on that round with the boys, and you will have to wear that plain coat, whereas you could have your overcoat fur lined and take board at a tip-top place and walk amid plush and tapestries positively oriental. While you are making up your mind I will just go through the different parts of this great commercial establishment and try every one, from the wealthy firm down to the errand boys." The result of that Satanic visit is that one of the partners has drawn so much out of the concern that the whole business is crippled, and a bright and promising boy is sent home to his mother in disgrace, and a young man is in jail for embezzlement. Three lives ruined and three eternities. Whence comest thou, Satan? "From going to and fro among mercantile houses and from walking up and down among them. I like to ruin splendid fellows and blast parental hopes, and of all the liquors that I ever tasted fill my glass with a brewing of agonizing tears. Come! let us click together the rims of our glasses and drink to the overthrow of the fifty thousand young men I ruined last year! Huzza!" Satan would rather have one young man than twenty old ones. If he could win the septuagenarians and octogenarians he could do but little harm with them. But he says: "Give me a young man, especially if he be bright and generous and social." He sees that young men have for good or bad been the mightiest influence in this world. Hernando Cortes conquered Mexico at 32. Gustavus Adolphus became immortal in history so early that he died at 38. Raphael, the most famous of painters, died at 37. William Pitt was prime minister of England at 24. Jesus Christ completed his earthly life at 33. Five years in a young man's life are of more power for good or evil than the last fifteen of an old man's life. So Satan is especially greedy for young men, and in going to and fro in the earth he has especial temptation for them.—[Talmage.

A New Rescript.

The Irish bishops have received another papal rescript. It orders them to actively execute the former rescript, which instructs them to denounce the Plan of Campaign and boycotting. It also orders them to direct the priests to preach against agitation and to forbid them to take part in the boycotting and Plan of Campaign movements, which they must oppose with all the means in their power.

The Golden Gate Special.

The Union and Central Pacific Roads and Pullman Company put on Dec. 5, a weekly train of Pullman Vestibule Cars, to run between Council Bluffs and San Francisco. Steam heat, electric light, separate bath-rooms for ladies and gentlemen, barber shop, observation and smoking rooms, and a female attendant for ladies and children, make it "THE FINEST TRAIN IN THE WORLD." Fare between Council Bluffs and San Francisco, including everything—ticket, berth, and meals—will be $100.

A cigar dealer in Manheim, Pa., has a rooster which can untie shoestrings.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

Sam Dickey, an old-time circus clown, died in a Cincinnati hospital recently.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, dopsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V. LUBON 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont.

A. P. 427.

Beauty's Dower.

Where grace and beauty most abound,
True happiness will oft be found.
Where ruby lips and glowing cheek
The gift of rugged health bespeak,
The artist, Nature's nobleman,
Will risk the treasure of his art,
Depicting, deftly as he can,
The lines engraven on his heart.
Fair maiden, may life's richest joy
Spread her bright mantle over thee;
Many years but gently with you toy,
And pleasures sweet, without alloy,
With fairest blossoms cover the;
But should, perchance, thy beauty fade,
Thou can'st call quickly to thy aid
Our Goldon Medical Discovery.

Remember that Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a sure cure for all skin eruptions and diseases of the blood.

France has sent another war ship to the East African coast to co-operate in the surveillance of vessels engaged in the slave trade.

They "Swore like our Army in Flanders," may be said of many sufferers from biliousness, headache, constipation, indigestion, and their resultant irritability, intellectual sluggishness, ennui, etc. The temptation to thus violate a sacred commandment, however, is speedily and permanently removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—tiny, little sugar-coated anti-bilious Granules; nothing like them. One a dose. Druggists.

Young folks in Chester county., Pa., hunt foxes by moonlight.

"be fair, we must adore thee;
Smile, and a world is weak before thee"!

But how can a woman smile when she is suffering untold misery from complaints from which we men are exempt? The answer is easy. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an infallible remedy in all cases of "female weakness," morning sickness, disorders of the stomach, nervous prostration, and similar maladies. As a powerful invigorating tonic it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. As a soothing and strengthening nervine it subdues nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, to give satisfaction.

FARMS FOR SALE or RENT. All Sizes, Kinds and Prices. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, Drayton, Ont.

The Celebrated American Corn Popper, just the thing for long winter evenings, candy pulls, pop corn balls. By mail, post paid, on receipt of 25 cents. Address, C. W. DENNIS, 337 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

To Save Time—Send for illustrated catalogue of our Patent Pinless Clothes Line. It will be ready very soon. Tarbox Bros., Toronto, Ont.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt., Establish'd 1860. 72 King-st. E., Toronto

Canadian Business University, Public Library Building, Toronto. Students from British Columbia, California, Kansas, Illinois, and quite a number of other States and Provinces, now in attendance. Write for Descriptive Circulars. THOS. BENGOUGH, President. CHAS. H. BROOKS, Sec'y & Manager.

Guelph Business College, Guelph, Ont.—Fifth Scholastic Year—its graduates are now employed as Book-keepers, Business Managers, Stenographers, etc., by many of the largest business houses in Canada and the United States. Young men and women desiring a thorough business education will consult their own welfare be attending the Guelph Business College. For terms and particulars address M. McCORMICK, Principal.

Canada Shipping Co.—Beaver Line of Steamships, sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. Saloon tickets, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60. Return tickets, $80, $90, and $110, according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate, $30; Round trip tickets, $60. Steerage, $20. Round trip tickets, $40. For further particulars and to secure births, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888—New importations of English Sheep's. Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON, 41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

The Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company of Canada. Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. Ross, Chief Engineer. A. Fraser, Sec'y-Treas

Artificial LIMBS. For circulars address J. DOAN & SON, Toronto, Ont.

The Falls. A magnificent photo-lithograph, eighteen by twenty-four, a work of art, absolutely free to each subscriber to Western Advertiser whose subscription is paid by the 20th of December. Twelve large pages every week. New type, heavy paper, illustrated departments. Only $1 per year, or $3 for four subscriptions. Balance 1888 free. Address, Advertiser Printing Co., London, Ont., Canada.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships. Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow line sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

H. WILLIAMS & CO. Slaters and Felt ROOFERS, MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN Roofing Felt, Slaters' Felt, Deafening Felt, Carpet Paper, Building Paper, Roofing Pitch, Coal Tar, Lake Gravel. Office: 4 Adelaide St. East, Toronto.

Merchants, Butchers, and Traders Generally. We want a GOOD MAN in your locality to pick up CALF SKINS For us. Cash furnished on Satisfactory Guaranty. Address, C. S. PAGE, Hyde Park, Vermont, U.S.

ST. PAUL MINNEAPOLIS AND MANITOBA RAILWAY. Commencing on Saturday, Nov. 10th there will be a daily first-class through train service between St. Paul and Butte, Montana, comprised of Drawing-room, Sleeping Car, Day Coaches, Dining Car and Free Colonist Sleeper. Equipment new, modern and equal to the best. Leaving St. Paul every morning, and running directly through to Butte. The only line without change and the only line via Ft. Buford, Ft. Benton, Great Falls and Helena. For particulars, apply F. I. WHITNEY, Gen Pass & Tk't Ag't, St. Paul. J. M. HUCKINS, Travel'g Pass Ag't, 4 Palmer House Block, Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN. CAPITAL, $5,000,000. Head Office, Montreal. Office Ontario Division, Wellington St. Toronto. This Company is prepared to make advances on the security of Good Farm Property at lowest Current rate of interest, and on favorable terms. MORTGAGES PURCHASED. For information apply to the Local Agents of the Company, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto, Ont.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON THE NERVES, THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS. This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.

Why Are We Sick? Because we allow the nerves to remain weakened and irritated, and these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND WILL CURE BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESS, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, AND ALL NERVOUS DISORDERS.

By quieting and strengthening the nerves, and causing free action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys, and restoring their power to throw off disease.

Why suffer Bilious Pains and Aches? Why tormented with Piles, Constipation? Why frightened over Disordered Kidneys? Why endure nervous or sick headaches? Why have sleepless nights?

Use Paine's Celery Compound and rejoice in health. It is an entirely vegetable remedy, harmless in all cases.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1.00. Six for $5.00.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, MONTREAL, P. Q.

ALMA, ST. THOMAS, ONT. The Leading Canadian College for Young Women. Seventeen graduates and certificated teachers in the Faculty. Nearly 200 students last year. Graduating courses in Literature, Music, Fine Arts, Commercial Science and Elocution. Low rates good board, thorough work. M Laughlan Hall, costing $20,000, now open. Elegant Domitories for 60 more students. Address PRINCIPAL AUSTIN, B.D.

Stained Glass FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS. M'CAUSLAND & SON, 76 King St. W., Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO —Manufacturers of the highest grades of— SILVER-PLATED WARES TRADE TORONTO S.P. CO. MARK. —FACTORIES and SALESROOM:— 420 to 426 King St. West, TORONTO E. G. GOODERHAM, Manager J. C. COPP, Treas.

BRONCHITIS CURED. After spending Ten Winters South, was Cured by Scott's Emulsion. 146 Centre St., New York, June 25th, 1888. The Winter after the great fire in Chicago I contracted Bronchial affections, and since then have been obliged to spend nearly every Winter South. Last November was advised to try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and to my surprise was relieved at once, and by continuing its use three months was entirely cured, gained flesh and strength and was able to stand even the Blizzard and attend to business every day. C. T. CHURCHILL. Sold by all Druggists. 50c and $1.00.

Young Men SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also Middle-Aged and Old Men who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto.

To the Convalescent Patient and the Emaciated Invalid. It is of Vital Importance to know what ingredient in our daily food is needed to repair our nerve tissue, strengthen the blood and restore exhausted vitality. This important ingredient is Albumen and the food that contains it in largest proportion and which is at the same time most easily digested by the weak stomach is the food best adapted to strengthen and restore the physical powers.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF

possesses these qualities which has been positively demonstrated by the highes scientific authorities. It contains over 55 per cent. of flesh-forming material and the most strengthening and easily digested food that can be taken by the sick.

ILLUMINATING OIL. S. ROGERS & CO. CARBON SAFETY TORONTO ONT. CARBON SAFETY OIL HAS NO EQUAL

BEST FOR FAMILY USE, CARBON SAFETY OIL. ASK DEALERS FOR IT. Wholesale Depots: ONTARIO—Toronto, 30 Front street East. " Ottawa, 38 Spark street. " Bellbaille, L. W. Yeomans & Co. QUEBEC—Montreal, E. Cavanagh. MARITIME PROVINCES—St. John's, Jos. Bullock & Sons. MANITOBA and N.W.T.—Brandon, W. Johnston & Co. Sam'l Rogers & Co., Toronto, Canada

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N. CAPITAL AND FUNDS NOW OVER $3,000,000. HEAD OFFICE, 15 TORONTO STREET, TORONTO, ONT. A HOME COMPANY, ESTABLISHED OCTOBER, 1871.

To this date, October 31, 1887, there has been returned:
To the heirs of Policy-holders (death claims)	$649,249 00
To the holders of matured Endowment Policies	26,492 63
To Policy-holders on surrender of Policies	98,656 00
To Policy-holders for Cash Profits (including those allocated and being paid)	492,544 02
Loaned to Policy-holders on Security of their Policies	16,967 84
	82,204 98
	$1,306,174 47

Policies in Force over 10,000. Amount over $15,000,000

PRESIDENT—Hon. Sir W. P. Howland, C.B., K.C.M.G. VICE-PRESIDENTS.—William Elliott, Esq; Edward Hooper, Esq J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director

Policies Non-forfeitable after ... years and Indefeasible after 5 years.

RELY ON HOP BITTERS. A WONDERFUL NERVE TONIC. A Medicine, not a Drink. Cure All Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, DRUNKENESS. It may Save Your Life. $1,000 Reward paid for a case they will not cure.

CANADA PERMANENT Loan & Savings Company INCORPORATED 1855. Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.

Subscribed Capital	$ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital	2,500,000
Total Assets	10,000,000

The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

"The Racer" Thin Back, Lance-Tooth, Cross-Cut Saw

The Maple Leaf Racer and Lance Cross cut saws are now sold in all parts of the world. The quality of these saws is unequalled. Their excellence is wholly due to their superior temper, the process of which is kept a profound secret by Shurly & Dietrich, the manufacturers of these saws. One of the best evidences of their superior quality is that other saw manufacturers put on the market as close an imitation of these saws as they are able to produce, and represent it to be as good as the Maple Leaf saw. They run their saw upon the same until the public become familiar with its inferior quality, then they change the name, in order to humbug the public another season, all of which is the very best evidence of the superior quality of the Maple Leaf saw, as it is not the custom to counterfeit a poor article. These counterfeits are sold for a much lower price than the Maple Leaf saw can be bought for: the dealer, of course, endeavors to sell them at nearly the same price, thereby realizing a larger profit. And some of the more unprincipled dealers, in order to sell the counterfeit saw, will tell untruths of various kinds regarding the quality of both the genuine and the counterfeit. Good goods are always cheap, poor goods are dear at any price. A saw, like a knife, will not cut fast unless it will hold a keen c

Soul Chords.

God's Heart is the heart of all hearts that are tender
His Love is the love of all loves that are true,
His Smile is the light of all beauty and splendor,
His faithful compassions each morning are new.

Though Mother may love me Jehovah loves better
Though Father, yet his love may fail to endure;
Their love is the love of "The flesh" and the "Letter,"
While His love is infinite, perfect, and pure.

His Life is the life of all life that existeth,
Where footstep of Spirit or mortal hath trod;
All vital conceptions have come as he listeth;
Within—at the source of all being—is God

I live nay, not I, by the grace of his favor,
My life is the Spirit-life breathing within,
Yet, bound by the human, in fruitless endeavour
I waste it to compass the purpose of sin.

I love; but my love is the faintest returning.
Of all the sweet fullness He measures to me;
I give; but my gifts are so mean, I am learning
How sordid and selfish a vassal can be.

Of yore, he, who lay on a stone pillow, sleeping,
While night-watchers, waiting, revealed the Divine,
At morn pledged a tithe to the Lord, for His keeping.
Though meagre the gift, how much better than mine!

For life, in this era, with all its conditions,
For Love's sweet bestowments, that come at my call,
For labor, with boundless, eternal fruitions,
I bless the Beneficent Giver of all.

"The Elms," Toronto. L. A MORRISON.

A Street Minstrel.

One late November afternoon,
I sudden heard a gentle rune.
I could not see whence came the song,
But, tranced, stopped and listened long;
And that drear month gave place to May,
And all the city slipped away.
The coal-carts ceased their din,—instead,
I heard bluebird overhead;
The pavements, black with dismal rain,
Grew greenly to a country lane;
Plainly as I see you, my friend,
I saw the lilacs sway and bend,
A blossoming apple-orchard where
The chimneys fret the foggy air;
And wide mown fields of clover sweet
Sent up their fragrance at my feet;
And once again dear Phyllis sat
The thorn beneath, and trimmed her hat.
. . . . . .
Long looked I for my wizard-bard:
I found him on the boulevard;
And now my urban hearth he cheers,
Singing all day of sylvan years,
Right thankful for the warmer spot,—
A cricket by July forgot!

SARA J. DUNCAN.

Influence of the East Wind.

With few exceptions the east or north-east winds acts unfavorably upon human beings. Dr. Richardson says: "That all nervous conditions in which, for want of a more correct term, we say the nervous tone is lowered, are much intensified by the east wind, and, indeed, the special action of this particular wind is to produce want of tone or debility. Under its influence almost all sick persons say they are depressed; they do not complain of reduced appetite, nor of pain intensified, nor of derangement of the secretions, but they declare that they are rendered prostrate both mind and body. They are also more irritable in mind, which perhaps leads them to feel acutely the sense of prostration. In brief, if a single word were wanted to express the morbid effect of an east wind on the sick man, and on all the members of the sick community, that word would be prostration."

The same authority continues: "That the presence of the east wind increases the mortality of those who are suffering from diseases of debility of every kind is a fact that seems undoubted. The physician, through the whole of the spell of an east wind, will find his patients complaining of not making satisfactory progress, and will see extreme cases rendered more speedily hopeless—facts indicating the existence of a general and all pervading influence in the atmospheric sea itself as the cause of the whole of the evil. What that influence is, how the air is modified, whether it is modified by some change in the constitution of the oxygen, or whether, it carries with it some foreign deleterious product, it is impossible to say, for up to this time no special chemical examination of the east wind has been made with the object of determining its special physical properties. We know the effects of it and we know no more."

The Man Who Has Money.

The keeping of money is a harder job than the earning of it. The old adage may not always be true, that any fool can make money, but only a wise man can save it. Those who save money frequently cannot keep it, for their very thrift frequently becomes blind. There is perhaps no fact so quickly known as an individual's possession of more money than he requires for his living. Men who save are frequently vain of their success at thrift, and let out the fact that they are further ahead of the world than somebody else says or supposes. In a little while, especially in our metropolitan society, so called, the man who has this money is mysteriously waited upon. A bright minded man is pursued. He is entreated to come out a little more into the world and enjoy himself, and not let his exceptional wit and ability be hid under a bushel. Perhaps in the course of a few months his own wife will acquaint him with the fact that there is a great deal of money in some stock, mine, mortgage or scheme; the piper and steerer have got around on the blindest side of the man and made his wife believe that her husband can suddenly become three times as well off as he is if he would only take a sure chance, as if any chance can be sure. Individuals of his family will brighten up and say: "Well Jones, if I had your money I would not let it lay out at five per cent. I know a thing or two myself."

An Active Old Man.

M. de Blowitz tells that the other day he was talking with M. de Lesseps. "All at once he remarked: 'You make me think of something,' and he rang for a messenger. 'Go and ask my son if we start this evening, at what hour, and for what place.' The messenger returned in a few minutes, saying: 'You start this evening at 8 20, from Mont Parnasse station, for Le Mans.' 'Very well; go to my house and tell my son we shall dine at 7 punctually.' Finally turning to me he remarked: 'Pray excuse me, I am going to Academy of the Sciences, where I have promised to attend what will be a long sitting, and I shall be just in time for the paper that I am to hear.' He accordingly went with me as far as the door, and entered his carriage to go to the Institute. On returning he will have a railway journey lasting till two o'clock in the morning, this being followed by a meeting in the afternoon, and by another night in the train; and he will perhaps start next day in some other direction."—Ex.

Mansfield the actor who made so conspicuous a success with Stevenson's weird production, Jekyll and Hyde, is adding to his stock of laurels at the Globe theatre in London. He seems to be pretty generally recognized by the critics as one of the most undoubted geniuses among the younger generation of actors. The interest he excites among theatrical circles in England is said to be something quite unusual.

THE THREAD OF LIFE
OR
SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XXXVII.—PROVING HIS CASE.

At the pension Hugh had engaged in haste a dull private sitting-room on the second floor, with bedroom and dressing-room adjoining at the side; and here he laid Winifred down on the horsehair sofa, wearied out with her long journey and her fit of delirium. Then the waiter brought her up refreshments on a tray, soup and sweet-breads and country wine—the plain sound generous Ligurian claret—and she ate and drank with an apparent avidity which fairly took her husband's breath away. The food supplied her with a sudden access of hectic energy. "Wheel me over to the window," she cried in a stronger voice to Hugh. And Hugh wheeled the sofa over as he was bid to a point where she could see across the town and the hills and the villas and the lemon-gardens.

It was beautiful, beautiful, very beautiful. For the moment, the sight soothed Winifred. She was content now to die where she lay. Her wounded heart asked nothing further from unkind fortune. She looked up at her husband with a stony gaze. "Hugh," she said, in firm but grimly resolute tones, with no trace of tenderness or softening in her voice, "Bury me here. I like the place. Don't try to take me home in a box to Whitestrand."

Her very callousness, if callousness it were, cut him to the heart. That so young and frail and delicate a girl should talk of her own death with such insensibility was indeed terrible. The proud hard man was broken at last. Shame and remorse had touched his soul. He burst into tears, and kneeling by her side, tried to take her hand with some passing show of affection in his. Winifred withdrew it, coldly and silently, as his own approached it. "Winnie," he cried, bending over her face, "I don't ask you to forgive me. You can't forgive me. You can never forgive me for the wrong I've done you. But I do ask you, from my soul I do ask you, in this last extremity, to believe me and to listen to me. I did not lie to you last night. It was all true, what I told you in the coupe. I've never intrigued against you in the way you believe. I've never deceived you for the purpose you suppose. I've treated you cruelly, heartlessly, wickedly—I acknowledge that; but oh, Winnie, I can't bear you to die as you will, believing what you do believe about me.—This is the hardest part of all my punishment. Don't leave me so! My wife, my wife, don't kill me with this coldness!"

Winifred looked over at him more stonily than ever. "Hugh," she said with a very slow and distinct utterance, "every word you say to me in this hateful strain only increases and deepens my loathing and contempt for you.—You see I'm dying—you know I'm dying. You've tried to hound me and to drive me to my grave, that you might marry Elsie.—You've tried to murder me by slow degrees, that you might marry Elsie.—Well, you've carried your point: you've succeeded at last.—You've killed me now, or as good as killed me; and when I'm dead and gone, you can marry Elsie.—I don't mind that. Marry her and be done with it.—But if ever you dare to tell me again that lying story you concocted last night so glibly in the coupe—Hugh Massinger, I'll tell you in earnest what I'll do: I'll jump out of that window before your very face, and dash myself to pieces on the ground in front of you."

She spoke with feverish and lurid energy. Hugh Massinger bent his head to his knees in abject wretchedness.

"Winifred, Winifred, my poor wronged and injured Winifred," he cried at last, in another wild outburst, "I can do or say nothing, I know, to convince you. But one thing perhaps will make you hesitate to disbelieve me. Look here, Winifred: watch me closely!"

A happy inspiration had come to his aid. He brought over the little round table from the corner of the room and planted it full in front of the sofa where Winifred was lying. Then he set a chair close by the side, and selecting a pen from his writing case, began to produce on a sheet of note-paper, under Winifred's very eyes, some lines of manuscript—in Elsie's handwriting. Slowly and carefully he framed each letter in poor dead Elsie's bold and large-limbed angular characters. He didn't need now any copy to go by; long practice had taught him to absolute perfection each twist and curl and flourish of her pen—the very tails of her g's, the black downstroks of her f's, the peculiar unsteadiness of her s's and her w's. Winifred, sitting by in haughty disdain, pretended not even to notice his strange proceeding. But as the tell-tale letter grew on apace beneath his practised pen—Elsie all over, past human conceiving—she condescended at last, by an occasional hasty glimpse or side-glance, to manifest her interest in this singular pantomime. Hugh persevered to the end in solemn silence, and when he had finished the whole short letter, he handed it to her in a sort of subdued triumph. She took it with a gesture of supreme unconcern. "Did any man ever take such pains before," she cried ironically, as she glanced at it with an assumption of profound indifference, "to make himself out to his wife a liar, a forger, and perhaps a murderer!"

Hugh bit his lip with mortification, and watched her closely. The tables were turned. How strange that he should now be all eager anxiety for her to learn the truth he had tried so long and so successfully with all his might to conceal from her keenest and most prying scrutiny!

Winifred scanned the forged letter for a minute with apparent carelessness. He had written over again from memory the single note of Elsie's—or rather of his own in Elsie's hand—that Winifred had never happened at all to show him—the second note of the series, the one he despatched on the day of her father's death. It had reached her at Invertanar Castle, redirected from Whitestrand, two mornings later. Winifred had read the few lines as soon as they arrived, and then burnt the page in haste, in the heat and flurry of that fearful time. But now, as the letter lay before her in facsimile once more, the very words and phrases come back to her memory as they had came back to Hugh's, with all the abnormal vividness and distinctness of such morbid moments. Ill as she was—nay, rather dying—he had fairly aroused her feminine curiosity. "How did you ever come to know what Elsie wrote to me that day?" she asked coldly.

"Because I wrote it myself," Hugh answered with an eager forward movement.

Winifred looked hard at him, half doubtful still. Could any man be quite so false and heartless? Admirably as he acted, could he act like this? What tragedian had ever such command of his countenance Might not that strange story of his, so pat and straight, so consonant with the facts, so neatly adapted in every detail to the known circumstances, perhaps after all be actually true? Could Elsie be really and truly dead Could ring and letters and circumstantial evidence have fallen out, not as she conceived, but as Hugh pretended?

"I can't make my mind up," she muttered slowly. It's hard to believe that Elsie's dead. But for Elsie's sake, I hope so!—That you have deceived me, I know and am sure. That Elsie's deceived me, I should be sorry to think, though I've often thought it. Your story, incredible as it may be, brings home all the baseness and cruelty to yourself. It exculpates Elsie. And I wish I could believe that Elsie was innocent. I could endure your wickedness if only I knew Elsie didn't share it!"

Hugh leaped from his chair with his hands clasped. "Believe what you will about me," he cried. "I deserve it all. I deserve everything. But not of her—not of her, I beg of you. Believe no ill of poor dear Elsie!"

Winifred smiled a coldly satirical smile. "So much devotion does you honor indeed," she said in a scathing voice. "Your consideration for dead Elsie's reputation is truly touching. I only see one flaw in the case. If Elsie's dead, how did Mr. Relf come to tell me, I should like to know, she was living at San Remo?"

"Relf!" Hugh cried, taken aback once more. "Relf! Always! That serpent! That wriggling, insinuating, back-stairs intriguer! I hate the wretch. If I had him here now, I'd wring his neck for him with the greatest pleasure. He's at the bottom of everything that turns up against me. He told you a lie, that's the plain explanation, and he told it to baffle me. He hates me, the cur, and he wanted to make my game harder. He knew it would sow distrust between you and me if he told you that lie; and he had no pity, like an unmanly sneak that he is, even on a poor weak helpless woman."

"I see." Winifred murmured with exasperating calmness. "He told me the truth. It's his habit to tell it. And the truth happens to be very disconcerting to you. by making what you're frank enough to describe as your game a little harder. The word's sufficient. You can never do anything but play a game. That's very clear, I understand now. I prefer Mr. Relf's assurance to yours, thank you!"

"Winifred," Hugh cried, in an agony of despair, "let me tell you the whole story again, bit by bit, act by act, scene by scene"—Winifred smiled derisively at the theatrical phrase—"and you may question me out on every part of it. Cross-examine me, please, like a hostile lawyer, to the minutest detail.—O, Winnie, I want you to know the truth now. I wish you'd believe me. I can't endure to think that you should die mistaking me."

His imploring look and his evident earnestness shook Winifred's wavering mind again. Even the worst of men has his truthful moments. Her resolution faltered. She began as he suggested, cross-questioning him at full. He gave his replies plainly and straightforwardly. The fever of confession had seized hold of him once more. The pent-up secret has burst its bounds. He revealed his inmost soul to Winifred—he even admitted, with shame and agony, his abiding love and remorse for Elsie.

Overcome by her feelings, Winifred leaned back on the sofa and cried. Thank heaven, thank heaven, she could cry now. He was glad of that. She could cry, after all. That poor little cramped and cabined nature, turned in upon itself so long for lack of an outlet, found vent at last. Hugh cried himself, and held her hand. In her momentary impulse of womanly softening, she allowed him to hold it. Her wan small face pleaded piteously with his heart. "Dare I, Winnie?" he asked with a faint tremor, and leaning forward, he kissed her forehead. She did not withdraw it. He thrilled at the concession. Then he thought with a pang how cruelly he had worn her young life out. She never reproached him; her feelings went far too deep for reproach. But she cried—silently.

At length she spoke. "When I'm gone," she said in a fainter voice now, "you must put up a stone by Elsie's grave. I'm glad Elsie at least was true to me!"

Hugh's heart gave a bound. Then she wavered at last! She accepted his account! She knew that Elsie was dead and buried! He had carried his point. She believed him!—she believed him!

Winifred rose and staggered feebly to her feet. "I shall go to bed now," she said in husky accents. "You may send for a doctor. I shan't last long. But on the whole, I feel better so. I wanted Elsie to be alive indeed, because I hunger and thirst for sympathy, and Elsie would give it me. But I'm glad at least Elsie didn't deceive me!" She paused for a moment and wiped her eyes; then she steadied herself by the bar of the window—the air blew in so warm and fresh. She looked out at the palms and the blue, blue sea. It seemed to calm her, the beautiful south. She gazed long and wearily at the glassy water. But her dream didn't last undisturbed for many minutes. Of a sudden, a shade came over her face. Something below seemed to sting and appal her. She started back, tottering, from the open window. "Hugh, Hugh!" she cried, ghastly pale and quivering, "you said she was dead!—you said she was dead! You lie to me still. O heaven, how terrible!"

"So she is," Hugh groaned out, half catching her in his arms for fear she should fall. "Dead and buried, on my honour, at Orfordness, Winifred!"

"Hugh, Hugh! can you never tell me the truth?" And she stretched out one thin white bony forefinger towards the street beyond. One second she gasped a terrible gasp then she flung out the words with a last wild effort: "That's she!—that's Elsie!"

CHAPTER XXXVIII.—GHOST OR WOMAN?

Winifred spoke with such concentrated force of inner conviction that, absurd and incredible as he knew it to be—for had he not seen Elsie's own grave that day at Orfordness?—Hugh rushed over to the window in a fever of sudden suspense and anxiety, and gazed across the street to the exact spot where Winifred's ghost-like finger pointed eagerly to some person or thing on the pavement opposite. He was almost too late, however, to prove her wrong. As he neared the window he caught but a glimpse of a graceful figure in light half-mourning—like Elsie's, to be sure, in general outline, though distinctly a trifle older and fuller—disappearing in haste round the corner by the pharmacy.

The figure gave him none the less a shock of surprise. It was certainly a very strange and awkard coincidence. He glanced at Winifred. She stood triumphant there—triumphant but heart-broken—exulting over his defeat with one dying "I told you so," and chuckling out inarticulately in her thin small voice, with womanish persistence; "That's she!—that's Elsie!"

"It's very like her!" he moaned in his agony.

"Very like her!" Winifred cried with a fresh burst of unnatural strength. "Very like her!—O Hugh, I despise you! I tell you I saw her face to face! It's Elsie—it's Elsie!"

His brain reeled and whirled with the unexpected shock; the universe turned round on him as on a pivot. "Winifred," he cried, "you're right! your right! There can't be anybody else on earth so like her! I don't know how she's come back to life! She's dead and buried at Orfordness! It's a miracle! a miracle! But that's she that we saw! I can't deny it. That's she!—that's Elsie!"

His hat lay thrown down on the table by his side. He snatched it up in his eager haste to follow and track down this mysterious resemblance. He couldn't let Elsie's double, her bodily simulacrum, walk down the street unnoticed and unquestioned. A profound horror possessed his soul. A doubter by nature, he seemed to feel the solid earth failing beneath his feet. He had never before in all his life drawn so perilously close to the very verge and margin of the unseen universe. It was Elsie herself, or else—the grave had yielded up its shadowy occupant.

He rushed to the door, on fire with his sense of mystery and astonishment. A loud laugh by his side held him back as he went. He turned round. It was Winifred, laughing, choking, exultant, hysterical. She had flung herself down on the sofa now, and was catching her breath in spasmodic bursts with unnatural merriment. That was the awful kind of laughter that bodes no good to those who laugh it—hollow, horrible, mocking, delusive. Hugh saw at a glance she was dangerously ill. Her mirth was the mirth of mania, and worse. With a burning soul and a chafing heart, he turned back, as in duty bound, to her side. He must leave Elsie's wraith to walk by itself, unexplained and uninvestigated, its ghostly way down the streets of San Remo.

He had more than enough to do at home. Winifred was dying;—dying of laughter.

And yet her laugh seemed almost hilarious. In spite of all, it had a ghastly ring of victory and boisterous joy in it. "O Hugh, she cried, with little choking chuckles, in the brief intervals of her spasmodic peals, "you're too absurd! You'll kill me—I can't help laughing; it's so ridiculous.—You tell me one minute, with solemn oaths and ingenious lies, you've seen her grave—you know she's dead and buried: you pull long faces till you almost force me to believe you—you positively cry and moan and groan over her—and then the next second, when she passes the window before my very eyes, alive and well, and in her right mind, you seize your hat, you want to rush out and find her and embrace her—here, this moment, right under my face—and leave me alone to die by myself, without one soul on earth to wait upon me or help me! Oh, you make me laugh! You have broken my heart; but you'll be the death of me.—Puck and Don Juan rolled into one!—"Elsie's dead!—Why, there's dear Elsie!"—It's too incongruous; it's too ridiculous." And she exploded once more in a hideous semblance of laughter.

Hugh gazed at her blankly, sobered with alarm. Was she going mad? or was he mad himself?—that he should see visions, and meet dead Elsie! Could it really be Elsie? He had heard strange stories of appearances and second-sight, such as mystics among us love to dwell upon; and in all of them the appearances were closely connected with death-bed scenes. Could any truth lurk, after all, in those discredited tales of wraiths and visions? Could Elsie's ghost have come from the grave to prepare him betimes for Winifred's funeral? Or did Winifred's dying mind, by some strange alchemy, project, as it were, an image of Elsie, who filled her soul, on to his own eye and brain, as he sat there beside her?

He brushed away these metaphysical cobwebs with a dash of his hand. Fool that he was to be led away thus by a mere accidental coincidence or resemblance! He was tired with sleeplessness; emotion had unmanned him.

Winifred's laugh dissolved itself into tears. She broke down, hysterically, utterly. She sobbed and moaned in agony on the sofa. Deep sighs and loud laughter alternated horribly in her storms of emotion, The worst had come. She was dangerously ill. Hugh feared in his heart she was on the point of dying.

"Go!" she burst out, in one spasmodic effort, thrusting him away from her side with the palm of her open hand. "I don't want you here. Go—go—to Elsie! I can die now. I've found you all out. You're both of you alike; you've both of you deceived me."

Hugh rang the bell wildly for the Swiss waiter. "Send the chambermaid! he cried in his broken Italian. "The patroness! A lady! The signora is ill. No time to be lost. I must run at once and find the English doctor."

When Winifred looked around her again, she found two or three strange faces crowded beside the bed on which they had laid her, and a fresh young Italian girl, the landlady's daughter, holding her head and bathing her brows with that universal specific, orange-flower water. The faint perfume revived her a little. The landlady's daughter was a comely girl, with sympathetic eyes, and she smiled the winsome Italian smile as the poor pale child opened her lids and looked vaguely up at her. "Don't cry, signorina," she said soothingly. Then her glance fell, womanlike, upon the plain gold ring on Winifred's thin and wasted fourth finger, and she corrected herself half unconsciously: "Don't cry, signora. Your husband will soon be by your side; he's gone to fetch the English doctor."

"I don't want him," Winifred cried, with intense yearning, in her boarding-school French, for she knew barely enough Italian to understand her new little friend. "I don't want my husband: I want Elsie. Keep him away from me—keep him away, I pray.—Hold my hand yourself, and send away my husband! Je ne l'aime pas, cet homme-là!" And she burst once more into a discordant peal of hysterical laughter.

"The poor signora!" the girl murmured, with wide open eyes, to the others around, "Her husband is cruel. Ah, wicked wretch! Hear what she says! She says she doesn't want any more to see him. She wants her sister!"

As she spoke, a white face appeared suddenly at the door—a bearded man's face, silent and sympathetic. Warren Relf had heard the commotion down-stairs, from his room above, and had seen Massinger rush in hot haste for the Doctor. He had come down now with eager inquiry for poor wasted Winifred, whose face and figure had impressed him much as he saw her borne out by the porters at the railway station.

"Is the signora very ill?" he asked in a low voice of the nearest woman. "She speaks no Italian, I fear. Can I be of any use to her?"

"Ecco! 'tis Signor Relf, the English artist!" the woman cried in surprise; for all San Remo knew Warren well as an old inhabitant.—"Come in, signor," she continued, with Italian frankness—for bedrooms in Italy are less sacred than in England. "You know the signora? She is ill—very ill: she is faint—she is dying."

At the name, Winifred turned her eyes languidly to the door, and raised herself, still dressed in her travelling dress, on her elbows on the bed. She yearned for sympathy. If only she could fling herself on Elsie's shoulder! Elsie, who had wronged her, would at least pity her. "Mr. Relf," she cried, too weak to be surprised, but glad to welcome a fellow-countryman and acquaintance among so many strangers—"I'm going to die. But I want to speak to you. You know the truth. Tell me about Elsie. Why did Elsie Challoner deceive me?"

"Deceive you!" Warren answered, drawing nearer in his horror. "She didn't deceive you. She couldn't deceive you. She only wished to spare your heart from suffering all her own heart had suffered. Elsie could never deceive any one!"

"But why did she write to say she was in Australia, when she was really living here in San Remo?" Winifred asked piteously. "And why did she keep up a correspondence with my husband?"

"Write she was in Australia! She never wrote," Warren cried in haste, seizing the poor dying girl's thin hand in his. "Mrs. Massinger, this is no time to conceal anything. I dare not speak to you against your husband, but still—"

"I hate him!" Winifred gasped out, with concentrated loathing. "He has done nothing since I knew him but lie to me and deceive me. Don't mind speaking ill of him; I don't object to that. What kills me is that Elsie has helped him! Elsie has helped him!"

"Elsie has not," Warren answered, lifting up her white little hand to his lips and kissing it respectfully. "Elsie and I are very close friends. Elsie has always loved you dearly. If she's hidden anything from you, she's hid it for your own sake alone.—It was Hugh Massinger who forged those letters.—I can't let you die thinking ill of Elsie. Elsie has never, never written to him.—I know it all.—I'll tell you the truth. Your husband thought she was drowned at Whitestrand!"

"Then Hugh doesn't know she's living here?" Winifred cried eagerly.

Warren Relf hardly knew how to answer her in this unexpected crisis. It was a terrible moment. He couldn't expose Elsie to the chance of meeting Hugh face to face. The shock and strain, he knew, would be hard for her to bear. But, on the other hand, he couldn't let that poor broken-hearted little woman die with this fearful load of misery unlightened on her bosom. The truth was best. The truth is always safest. "Hugh doesn't know she's living here," he answered slowly. "But if I could only be sure that Hugh and she would not meet, I'd bring her round, before she leaves San Remo, this very day, and let you hear from her own lips, beyond dispute, her true story."

Winifred clenched her thin hands hard and tight. "He shall never enter this room again," she whispered hoarsely, "till he enters it to see me laid out for burial."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Mormon Problem.

The Mormon problem gave a more than usually exciting turn to the recent election struggle in the Territory of Idaho. It would not be specially interesting to Canadians, however, but for the efforts the Mormon Church is making to obtain a foothold in our North-West. We therefore give a more extended reference to the case than would otherwise have been justifiable, so as to show both how Mormonism is regarded in Idaho and what steps Mormons are willing to take in order to combine the exercise of their peculiar religious liberties with that of political rights. Some three years ago the Idaho Legislature passed a Test-Oath Act which was avowedly intended to disfranchise every member of the Mormon Church living in the Territory. This Act requires every voter to make oath that he is "not a member of any order, organization, or association which teaches, advises, counsels, or encourages its members, devotees, or any other person to commit the crime of bigamy or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law, as a duty arising or resulting from membership in such order, organization, or association; or which practices bigamy or polygamy, or plural or celestial marriage as a doctrinal right of such organization."

Mormon attempts were made to break through this Act in the Territorial courts, but unsuccessfully, and a test case was laid before the United States Supreme court. There was no hope that a decision could be given before the election, so that the Mormons had to find other means by which they might vote, unless they meant to allow the matter to go by default until another election. So some of them determined to swallow the oath. Their oaths were allowed in some cases by the registrars, but rejected by others on the ground of their belief that the Mormons were taking it merely in order to vote, and with the express intention of violating it. A test case was tried, and the plaintiff adduced some interesting evidences to the general effect that "while the practice of polygamy had been a doctrine of the church and had been permitted by it under some circumstances, it had never been taught and enjoined as resulting or arising from membership alone, and that the teaching or practice of polygamy had been forbidden in all the states in Idaho ever since the decision of Judge Hayes declaring the test oath constitutional, which decision was rendered about two years ago; and that plural marriage had never at any time been celebrated in Idaho." The Judge decided against the plaintiff, nevertheless, on the ground that though for two years the Mormon Church in Idaho might not have taught, advised, counseled or encouraged the practice of polygamy in the territory, it had not formally repudiated it. Checkmated in this way a number of Mormons determined to evade this decision by temporarily separating from the church, and did so, in spite of the manly stand taken by the Salt Lake Herald, a Mormon newspaper, which among other sensible and honourable words used these:

"Politics justifies a good many things which would otherwise be condemned, but we cannot think that even the exigencies of the political situation in Idaho would approve the course that it is said will be taken. If membership in the Mormon or any other church is at all valuable to the individual, it is because it is sacred, and, being sacred, it occurs to us it ought not to be trifled with and played upon in this manner."

These seceding Mormons accordingly took the oath and voted wherever they were allowed to do so. At one place the deputy sheriffs who tried to prevent them from voting were arrested by order of the U. S. Marshal. In other places attempting voters were arrested and held for perjury. It is evident from all this, that the problem of dealing with Mormonism wherever it has got a foothold is a very difficult one, and the great lesson for us Canadians to learn is that, as prevention is preferable to any amount of cure, this system which is so abhorrent to the prevalent religious sense of the day, should not be allowed to obtain any foothold on our soil. It is in every way better, if you don't wish to be troubled with a poisonous snake, to kill him outright, and not content yourself with merely scotching him.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

Everywhere endeavor to be useful, and everywhere you will be at home.

The marksman who aims at the whole target will seldom hit the centre.

Absence lessens small passions, and increases great ones; as the wind extinguishes the taper, and kindles the burning dwelling.

An unjust acquisition is like a barbed arrow, which must be drawn backward with horrible anguish or else will be your destruction.

What is remote and difficult of success we are apt to overrate; what is really best for us lies always within our reach, though often overlooked.

The capacity for happiness, like every other, needs continual exercise for its growth and development. If it is continually checked and postponed, it will wither away.

It is better to have strength of principle than of mere muscle, but better still to have both. A man who is strong in intellect and in body is on the best terms with nature and the world.

Education is not first or chiefly the mere learning of certain facts or principles; it is such a development and training of faculty as makes a man master of himself and his conditions.

As they who, for every slight infirmity take physic to repair their health, do rather impair it, so they who, for every trifle, are eager to vindicate their character do rather weaken it.

Success rides on every hour; grapple it and you may win, but without a grapple it will never go with you. Work is the weapon of honor, and he who lacks the weapon will never triumph.

Manners form at least a rich varnish with which the routine of life is washed and its details adorned. If they are superficial, so are the dewdrops which give such a depth to the morning meadows.

Opinions Changed with Age.

On the notions and expectations of one stage of life I suppose all reflecting men look back with a kind of contempt, though it may be often with the mingling wish that some of its enthusiasms or feeling could be recovered—I mean the peri between proper childhood and maturity. They will allow that their reason was then feeble, and they are prompted to exclaim "What fools we have been!" while they recollected how sincerely they entertained and advanced the most ridiculous speculations on the interests of life, and the questions of truth; how regretfully astonished they were to find the mature sense of some of those around them so completely wrong, yet in other instances, what veneration they felt for authorities for which they have since lost all their respect; what a fantastic importance they attached to some most trivial things; what complaints against their fate were uttered on account of disappointments which they have since recollected with gaiety or self-congratulation; what happiness of Elysium they expected from sources which would soon have failed to impart even common satisfaction, and how certain they were that the feelings and opinions then predominant would continue through life.—[Rev. John Foster.

Dr. Talmage says the devil has many able lieutenants on earth.

A severe storm raged on Monday along the Eastern coast from New York to Boston. Much damage was done to shipping, and many lives were lost.

It is stated the Sultan has formally agreed to the joining of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumania provided Prince Ferdinand renounces all designs upon Macedonia.

AGRICULTURAL.

Evils of Close Planting.

One of the most common errors made when an orchard is planted is to place the trees too near to each other. They are small, and sixteen or twenty feet looks a long distance between them each way, so they are put in about a rod apart. If planted with the expectation that half of them are to be dead when they should be at a bearing age, all right; but if expected to live and do good service as bearers, they must have room in which to spread their limbs, and from which to get their sustenance. In the American Agriculturist, Samuel Hope says: A promising orchard of 300 trees, the property of a neighbor of mine, just beginning to bear and on which the owner realized $900 last season, was sacrificed to the close-planting policy. The trees, which one year ago showed evidence of health and vigor, have assumed a sickly appearance. Cutting out every alternate tree, with a liberal dressing of fertilizers, will save the orchard if the owner has the intelligence and nerve to do it at once. But what a loss to the soil, this production of 150 trees which can only be "cut down and cast into the fire." And "the survival of the fittest" will be set back two years at least by this plan of planting and then thinning an orchard. The apple tree demands a rich moist soil. If these conditions are furnished, it assumes large proportions and gives immense yields. Why, then, dwarf, starve and mutilate? Is it not better to have five thrifty trees producing fifty bushels of healthy fine fruit than fifty trees with fifty bushels of wormy, knotty, gnarly specimens fit only for pigs and thieving vagrants? In the latter instance the soil is taxed to produce the wood of fifty trees instead of five. The cost of purchasing, planting, etc., all contributes toward swelling the contrast in the amount paid out. In the first instance you will be rewarded with satisfactory results; in the latter there will be disappointment, loss of time and money and a failure to realize when your orchard comes in bearing. The same results comparatively, though not so rapidly, manifest themselves with regard to the vine. Too close planting will sooner or later result disastrously. The proper distance for setting apple trees is from thirty to forty feet; for the grape not less than fourteen to eighteen feet for vigorous growing vines. Of course varieties, methods of training, root-pruning, top-dressing, etc., will modify these figures with regard to grape vines, but better have them too far apart than too closely crowded.

Pure Bred Stock.

While the demand for pure bred stock in Canada has not been active of late years, there is not a sufficient lack of demand to justify the term depression. Few of our breeders have retired from business, and a sufficient number have engaged in it to prevent any loss of ground, so far as the number of stock cattle is concerned. The lack of demand is reasonably enough ascribed to the comparatively low price of wheat and beef which have ruled for several years. Still there are signs that here, as in the United States, the era of very high prices is over. Individual animals, and some families of animals, will sell at probably as high prices as ever, but they must be choice. The mere fact of pure blood will weigh less than in the past. The change may be unwelcome to some breeders, but nevertheless the wise will adapt themselves to it and aim at that individual excellence in breeding which, like analogous efforts in other departments of human labor, always leaves abundant room at the top. In the United States the change has come more rapidly than here, and it is now common for pure bred spring bulls to be converted into steers and pure bred cows to be spayed. The change will bring advantages to the farmer, and incidentally to the breeding interest. The time was, not long since, when animals of decided inferiority were purchased and locally "boomed" simply because they were imported or of pure blood. While reversion to the type of some remote ancestor of the days when the leading breeds had not become fixed in type is exceedingly uncommon, there is danger that the accidental defect of individual animals may be more or less transferred to their offspring.

Selling Cattle by Weight.

The buyers and sellers have, for the last two years, been exercised over the question of estimating weight versus the decison of the scales. American stock men, who were sellers, years ago decided that the scales would save money. They are now generally found on the better class of our grain and stock farms. We are glad to know that our English friends are coming to the same line of belief. The Agricultural Gazette, London, gives the following, which shows that there are stokmen on Great Britain who do not care to depend on guessing: A sale and purchase of lean stock of a somewhat unusual character was completed at Malton Fair, the seller being a well known Irish breeder, and the purchaser a more celebrated ramdealer from the Beverley side. The two had attempted to do business in the old way, namely, by a price per head, but having failed to strike a bargain it was suggested they should agree upon a price per stone—live weight. The result was, they fixed the price at 4s 3d per 14 lb. The fifteen beasts were driven to the weighing machine, and the cattle weighed in pairs and the odd one. The total live weight was exactly 800 stones, which, at the agreed price, made a total of £170, or just 10s 3d per head more than the beasts could have been bought at.

Feeding Apples.

The following testimony of a Berkshire County farmer on the value of apples as a milk food, does not agree with the theory of some, but it does corroborate our own experience: I shall feed from 1,000 to 2,000 bushels of apples to my milch cows this fall, and expect a good profit by so doing, as I have proved in years that apples rate next to meal for cream and butter. I pick my apples when fully ripe, mix the sweet and sour as evenly as possible, and put them in a large heap in my barn, letting them sweat and become fully mellow, but not rotten. Then I begin by feeding a peck to a cow once a day, and increase to half a bushel a day to a cow, and then to a bushel. I have fed as high as 500 bushels in a fall to my dairy of 13 cows, with the very best of success and profit. Try it, brother farmers, and you will find it pays far better than putting them in the cider barrel to be drank at the fireside or in the saloon.

Pear Trees.

Light is wanted on the length of time pear trees will flourish and bear fruit that have come into bearing in a few years after planting. Some kinds of pear trees are slow in bearing. Do they last longer than the early bearing varieties? As to longevity, even this continent knows of some remarkable instances. On the Canadian bank of the Detroit river, around Sandwich, are trees of the height of full-grown elms, which, though planted about or before the middle of last century, are still healthy and bearing large crops. Similar trees may be seen on the American side, near Wyandotte, Michigan. A tree still older than any of these is one planted by Governor Endicott, in Massachusetts 250 years ago, which ended its career only this year. Another planted on Cape Cod ten years later is still standing. Pear trees are permanent improvements to the farm, and will bring in their yield of luscious food for the table and profitable fruit for the market when the farmer's grandchildren are growing old.

Horse Chestnuts as Food.

According to the Paris "American Registers, the "German agriculturists have discovered a use for the much despised horse chestnut. They dry, or rather bake them, and when thoroughly free from moisture, feed them to their cattle, sheep and pigs, also to deer and boars. In the dried state these chestnuts crushed are considered both wholesome and nutritious, even more so than acorns. According to chemical analysis they contain as much as 6·4 per cent. of proteine and 4·4 per cent of fatty matter. Sheep are not given more than one kilogram per day; milch cattle up to five kilos, and animals for fattening as much as ten kilos a day.

Poultry Notes.

All fowls, old and young, want green food in winter. Giving them free access to cabbage is a good way of supplying it,

At night a good feed of corn thoroughly warmed in the oven, will be appreciated. Be sure it is not so hot as to burn the birds.

If you scatter some grain among straw or leaves and keep the hens at work scratching, they will lay better and keep in better health.

Dead leaves can be turned to good account in the poultry house this winter; so rake them up when they are dry, and store them away where they will keep dry.

Burnt corn is a most excellent thing to feed to poultry, and is far superior to wood charcoal, which however, has a wonderful effect in promoting the health of the fowls.

For winter layers save the pullets of the larger breeds hatched in January or not later than March, the pullets of the small breeds that hatched in April, and the hens that moult early.

To be certain of eggs in winter, hens must be ten months old, well fed and housed. Select the early hatched pullets and the early moulting hens. Old hens will not lay until well feathered.

Some of the most expert poultrymen occasionally feed their fowls turnips in winter. They are not peeled, but cut into quarters and thrown into the yard. The birds know what to do with them.

An exchange says a course of twenty four lessons in poultry keeping would be of more practical benefit to the majority of farmers' daughters than a course of twenty-four lessons on the organ or piano.

The duck should have a dry floor in winter. Some persons are under the supposition that water is just what the duck requires, and that dampness is no injury, but the fact is when it is compelled to remain during the night on damp ground, it becomes chilled and gets out of condition.

Agricultural Not

OUR CLUBBING LIST.

We will club the ENTERPRISE with the following papers till the end of 1889 for the amount specified at each:—

The Mail and Farm and Fireside	$2.00
The American Farmer	1.80
The Weekly Globe	1.80
Saturday's Globe	1.80
Daily Globe (Morning Edition)	5.00
" (12 or 3 o'clock edition)	3.50
St. Thomas Journal, weekly	2.25
" " daily	4.25
Western Advertiser	1.80
London Free Press	1.80
Farmers' Advocate	1.80
Truth	2.50
(The price of Truth alone is $3.00)
Globe and Rural Canadian	2.25
Rural Canadian	1.80
Weekly News	1.80
American Agriculturist	2.00
Detroit Free Press	1.75
Toronto Daily World	2.75
Free Press, London	1.80
Scientific American	3.60

All the editions of the Scientific American can be subscribed for at this office at reduced rates.

Grip	2 75

DUTTON, DECEMBER 13, 1888.

WEEKLY WEAVINGS.

DUTTON will have two polling places this election.

W. FLETCHER raised the frame of his new barn last Friday.

MR. AND MRS. CURTIS, of Leaming, ton, have been visiting in Dutton.

Mr. J. D. Blue has finished his duties at the Model School, St. Thomas.

A LARGE number of live turkeys were shipped from Dutton on Tuesday.

A number of the Salvation Army here visited the St. Thomas corps on Monday.

MR. A. W. BEARSS has completed the carpenter work of J. J. Campbell's store, Iona Station.

MR. HOLLINGSHEAD is at present filling an order for eight car-loads of flour for the Maritime Provinces.

REV. R. D. HAMILTON, of Fingal, will preach the missionary sermon in the Methodist church next Sunday evening.

THOSE intending to have the nuptial knot tied should call at the ENTERPRISE office and get their wedding invitations. New and handsome cards.

DENIAL.—Owing to certain reports being circulated to the effect that I am not the bonafide owner of the Dutton Bakery, I wish to state that the late proprietor has no connection with the business whatever, nor any one else excepting myself.—G. J. WEIR.

"KANSAS CHARLIE" with a large sombrero and his nostrum, "Rocky Mountain Oil," is holding forth to small audiences in Leitch's hall this week.

MRS. (DR.) LING and Miss McGill, of Wallacetown, have been visiting at Mr. J. P. McKellar's, Chatham, for the past few days. They returned on Monday.

J. P. MCKELLAR, of Chatham, formerly of Wallacetown, called on us on Monday. He is canvassing the country in the interest of the Chatham Buisness College.

THE September and October cheese of the Dutton Cheese Factory has been sold to Messrs. Walker & Marlatt, of Aylmer, for 11⅜ cents. It is to be shipped this week.

AN exchange says.—We are informed that there is a law which prohibits anyone from voting at municipal elections who has not paid his taxes for the current year before the date specified by law. Look after your franchise.

A GREAT OFFER.—By special arrangements made with the publishers, we are enabled to offer that great literary and humorous weekly, The Detroit Free Press, and the ENTERPRISE for one year for $1.75. Subscribe at once at this office.

SOLD.—We have sold the plant and business of the Dutton Enterprise to Mr. R. Sutherland, formerly of the Glencoe Transcript. We trust that all indebted to us in any way will settle immediately and not wait for any further notice or incur any expense to themselves.

J. C. HERTEL went to London on Monday and recovered the overcoat, undercoat and vest that were recently stolen from his shop by Goodwin, who is to receive his sentence to-day (13th.) The thief told Hertel that he had no use for the pants and left them on a pile of bricks at the back of the shop.

THE Ridgetown Standard has completed its eighth volume. If the Standard's popularity can be judged by the large advertising patronage it receives it certainly has "filled a long-felt-want." Bro. Bowyer is one of the best paragraphers on the local press, and we are glad to see that his efforts are being appreciated by the people of and in the neighborhood of Ridgetown.

THE COUNTY COURT.—The December sessions of the County Court opened at the court house, St. Thomas, on Tuesday. There were eight cases in the criminal docket, consisting of 2 of larceny, 2 of arson, 1 of indecent assault, one of common assault, 1 of obtaining goods by fraud and one of aggravated assault. The civil docket is not very large, consisting of 4 cases.

At the council meetings to be held Dec. 15, a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditure for the year ending on that day has to be prepared for publication and signed by the reeve and treasurer. This is the first year such a course has been necessary, and it is hoped it will have the effect of awakening the ratepayers to a greater interest in municipal matters. It is unfortunately too true that many of the men having the greatest interest at stake suffer municipal government to go by default rather than attend to it. The power to secure good municipal government is in the hands of the people; let the people see to it that their interests are carefully preserved.

NEW and fashionable wedding invitation cards at the ENTERPRISE office.

ALL papers furnished at the ENTERPRISE Office. If you desire one that is not in our list, call and ask for it.

ELM logs, 13 feet long, and basswood bolts, 38 inches long, wanted. Inquire at Humpidge & Graham's Stave Factory.

DON'T forget that you can buy a quarter of beef cheaper than you can a pound at the Dutton Meat Emporium. —JAS. BAKE.

THE Rural Canadian is a valuable agricultural journal and should be in every house. It is one dollar per year. See our clubbing rates.

SAME HERE.—There is considerable backwardness in coming to the front, in a manner of speaking, on the part of municipal aspirants. Why is this? It would add zest to the Christmas turkey if we were able to give an accurate forecast of our next year's Council Hurry up, gentlemen.—Tizer.

STILL ANOTHER.—Some sneak thief entered the house of A. W. Brown on Sunday evening while the family was attending church and stole something over $3 in cash, in change, from the cupboard, besides ramsacking the house. It is supposed the thief got on top of the woodhouse and effected an entrance through a back window.

WHEN WILL THEY CEASE?—While Mr. and Mrs. White were at church on Sunday evening last some thief gained entrance into the house, and, after a good deal of ramsacking, procured a small amount of money. These petty robberies are becoming almost too numerous in Dutton and a little stricter watch should be kept by our Chief of Police on suspicious characters entering town.

THE grand jury of the County Court is composed as follows:—Jocob Learn, Andrew Locker, W. H. Heard, Peter Richardson, E. Hutchinson, Malahide; Joshua Trotten, Angus Patterson, John Patton, John McIntyre, Dunwich; Geo. Potticary, Geo. Lindsay, Colin Kerr, Matthew Silcox, Southwold; W. H. Brown, South Dorchester; John Bromwell, John E. Smith, Leonard Ferguson, Geo. Rowley, Wm. E. Ross, St. Thomas; E. J. Schmidt, Rodney; Thos. Hepburn, Yarmouth; O. Sealey, Bayham, and Wm. M. Green, Aldborough.

INDIGNATION MEETING.—An indignation meeting was held in Leitch's hall on Tuesday evening concerning the action of the High School Board of Trustees in dismissing the present staff of teachers. Speeches were made by A. J. Leitch, Dr. Leitch, J. D. Blue and others, condemning the action of the Board. A resolution was unanimously pssaed asking the Board to reconsider their action. Judging from the tone of the speeches the dismissal was brought about by certain underhand proceedings.

GLOBE CHRISTMAS NUMBER.—The Christmas Number of the Globe has made its appearance and is what was expected—a beauty. The engravings and lithographs are of a high order and are a credit to Canadian workmanship, while the typographical appearance presents a model of neatness. The illustrations are nearly all of Canadian scenery, which, added to the interesting reading matter furnished, make the Christmas Number of the Globe a welcome addition to any library. Price 25cts. Leave orders at this office.

TEACHERS DISMISSED.—At a meeting of the High School Board on Monday it was decided to dismiss the present teachers, for what reason we know not. Providing the two assistants pass their recent examination, they will be allowed to apply for the positions now held by them. It appears to us that there is too much personal spite allowed to interfere with some of the members of the Board at their meetings, which is derogatory not only to themselves but to the school. Why the present teachers have been dismissed we fail to understand.

GRIP'S COMIC ALMANAC.—This well-known annual, for 1889, is now in the bookstores. For ten years Canada's "own and only" Comic Almanac has delighted her people, and the new number is decidedly the best of the lot. The calendar pages are unique and ingenious; the double-page cartoon, "Irrepressible Tug of War," is first-class, while there are several full-page cartoons of no less merit, and any number of side splitting illustrations. The letter-press is capital reading. Ten cents will secure the book at any newsdealer's—a modest tax for so enjoyable a "melange," surely.

A NEW MAP.—Mr. John Lovell, the veteran publisher of Montreal, has favored us with a new map of the Dominion. It is of handy size, and will be very useful for reference in private houses as well as in offices and places of business. It contains the latest additions and corrections by Mr Johnson, chief draughtsman of the Department of the Interior. The map of all the Provinces and the Northwest Territories, which will accompany Lovell's Gazetteer and History of the Dominion, will be identical with this one in engraving, printing, coloring and size, and will also contain the latest surveys and corrections.

THE CLOTHES THIEF CAPTURED.—P. C. Eggleton in London Wednesday morning found a stranger trying to sell a new overcoat at a second hand store at much less than its value, and arrested him. He gave his name as Harry Goodwin, and his residence as Detroit. When brought to the station he protested that he had come by the coat honestly. Upon him were found a self-cocking English bulldog revolver, a neckkerchief, a new pair of gloves and one or two other articles. On Thursday Goodwin confessed to committing the burglary at Hertel's and was remanded for a week for sentence. He got twenty days for being drunk and thirty for carrying a loaded pistol. Goodwin is also suspected of having committed the burglary at Middlemiss on Sunday night.

DAN MCKAY has taken a contract from James Graham, 2nd con., of drawing a hundred cords of wood to Dutton.

INTENDING purchasers of harness will do well to read D. McMillan's advt. in another column, Mr. McMillan's work speaks for itself.

GREAT reductions in prices in all lines at Hockin & Pool's for the Christmas trade. Save money by purchasing goods at the People's Popular Cash Store.

A COUNTY Temperance Convention will be held in the Methodist church, Dutton, on Friday, December 14, at 2 p.m., for organization on the Scott Act repeal; also a mass meeting in the evening.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.—At present there is little or no talk concerning election matters, and the probabilities are that the election will pass off very quietly. A. J. Leitch will be opposed by A. A. McKillop for the reeveship. In Ward No. 2 the fight appears to be the hottest. Mr. McDiarmid is opposed by Mr. R. Hine, and owing to the recent differences among the people of this Ward regarding school matters, the fight promises to be a bitter one. The friends of each are very sanguine of victory. In Ward No 1 Mr. Garbutt will probably have a walk-over, while in Ward No. 3 Judson Milligan will have his old opponent, Mr. McCallum, on the field again. D. McLean and Mr. McKellar will contest Ward No. 4. As usual, the High School will probably form the "bone of contention," but it is one for which the people of Dutton could easily find a remedy, were they so disposed. That this question could be definitely settled by the village becoming incorporated and purchasing the school is patent to all. Like every other place Dutton has its obstructionists.

RECEIVED HIS LAST MESSAGE.

After a long illness, Andrew Liddell, operator at Bismarck, passed peacefully away early Tuesday morning. Deceased had always been in poor health, but was able to attend to his duties with more or less regularity until a few months ago, when he was compelled to relinquish his work at the keyboard. Rallying a little at times his friends thought he would probably regain his strength, but lately it became apparent that he had passed beyond medical aid.

Mr. Liddell has been operator at a number of stations along the line and proved himself not only a competent and obliging employe but a genial and affable citizen, winning friends wherever he went. For the past few years he has been stationed at West Lorne, where his many friends speak as to his worth. Though always in poor health he was seldom heard to complain, and when that great despatcher, Death, came with his last message it found him ready.

MARRIED.

JAMIESON—PATERSON.—On the 5th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. J. Currie, Kintyre, Mr. Jas. Jamieson, of Aldboro, to Martha Jane, only daughter of Jas. Paterson, Esq., of Dunwich.

DIED.

LIDDELL.—At West Lorne, on the 11th inst., after a long illnes, Andrew, eldest son of John Liddell, formerly of Iona, aged 32 years.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething. Its value is incalcul able. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

According to the London Echo, the drink bill of this country is decreasing at the rate of eight per cent. per head every year since 1836. The result, it acknowledges, is due to the labors of temperance advocates and the legal restrictions upon drink.

GET your commercial printing done at the ENTERPRISE office, note-books, receipts and due bills kept on hand.

The Detroit Free Press.

The Free Press is without question the Greatest Literary and Humorous paper now before the American people. It is not a new aspirant for public favor; established over fifty years ago, it has stood the test of time, and is to-day stronger, better and more popular than ever—120,000 subscribers affirm its surpassing excellence. The funny sketches and sayings of The Free Press are everywhere quoted and laughed a., while in respect to literary excellence it will compare favorably with the expensive magazines. "M. Quad" "Luke Sharp," Eva Best, Rose Hartwick Thorpe, Chas. F. Adams, Hamilton Jay, Lizzie Yorke Case, Bronson Howard, H. C. Dodge, and a host of other favorite writers contribute regularly to its columns. Recognizing the growing demand for first-class fiction, The Free Press has offered for the three best Serial Stories of 60,000 words each. A number of the best writers have announced their intention to compete.

$3,000.00 in Cash Prizes

In addition to the many other special features it is the intention to publish sections of three written expressly for The Free Press by the best American and English authors.

SERIAL STORIES EACH WEEK

It will be seen, therefore, that by subscribing for THE ENTERPRISE and The Free Press, the entire family can be supplied with all the News and the best of current Literature for a year at a cost of

LESS THAN THREE CENTS A WEEK

Send all subscriptions to

THE ENTERPRISE,
DUTTON, ONT.

THE PEOPLE'S POPULAR CASH STORE.

HOCKIN & POOL.

Bill of Fare for Christmas Week.

In order to make things lively for Xmas we have marked All Lines of Goods Away Down. Note the following prices:--

Dress Goods worth	50cts.	for 25cts.
" " "	40cts.	" 20cts.
" " "	25cts.	" 12½c.
" " "	15cts.	" 8cts.
Factory Cotton (yd. wide)		" 4cts.
White " "		" 5cts.
Canton Flannels		" 6½cts.
Grey Flannels		" 12½cts.
Crash Towelings -		" 4cts.
Ladies' Mantles worth $3		" $1.00
Men's Heavy Shirts & Drawers		25c.
Ulster Cloth worth $2.50		for $1.00
Ladies' Astrachan Jackets		" $20.00
Mink Sets Cheap.
Persian Lamb Sets Cheap.
Men's Overcoats worth $7		for $3.50.
" " " $10		" 5.00.
Men's Pea Jackets 7		" 4.00.
Boys' Suits at All Prices.
Boys' Overcoats, All Sizes.
Men's Felt Hats worth $1.50		for 25c.
A Good Trimmed Hat for 50cts.
Ladies' Buttoned Shoes for $1.00.

OUR LARGE STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

REDUCED IN PRICE.

CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Glass Sets, 8 pieces, at 25cts.
Glass Cake Stands, 25cts.
Glass Fruit Dishes, Breakfast Sets, Dinner Sets, Tea Sets, Bedroom Sets---all at Close Prices.

We show the Largest and Cheapest Stock of these goods in the west.

We are the only house that you can buy those SATIN GLASS NOVELTIES from, direct from Europe.

GROCERIES.

NEW RAISINS.
NEW CURRANTS.
NEW PEELS.
NEW FIGS.
NEW TEAS.

Price our Groceries. Goods delivered promptly.

Call and examine our Goods before you buy. HOCKIN & POOL.

HERTEL,

Merchant - Tailor

EAST SIDE MAIN ST., DUTTON.

NEW IMPORTED

FALL -:- GOODS.

My stock is very extensive with Elegant Fall Goods. Special attention has been directed towards securing the most complete and varied assortments of

New Suitings!
New Trouserings!
New Overcoatings!

Ever Displayed in this Village.

A visit is solicited from those who wish a

NEAT AND ELEGANT SUIT

—OR A—

STYLISH AND PERFECT-FITTING

FALL OVERCOAT.

Money can be saved by leaving your order with me. None but first-class work turned out. Best of Trimmings only are used.

J. C. HERTEL,
Merchant Tailor,
Next door to Nelson's Hotel.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

A REASONABLE HOPE

Is one that is based on previous knowledge or experience, therefore those who use B.B.B. may reasonably hope for a cure because the previous experience of thousands who have used it, shows it to have succeeded in even the worst cases.

Order your papers at this office. See clubbing rates.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown	a.m. 8 03		9 47p.m	11 02
Rodney	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton	a.m 9 09		10 29	1 00
Iona	9 25		....	1 36
Shedden	9 36		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't)	p.m 3 00	p.m 1 10		5 25
Shedden	3 24	....		6 01
Iona	3 32	....		6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58		6 34
Bismarck	4 00	....		7 10
Rodney	4 11	15		7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35		9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45		4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 615 p.m 4.55 p.m. and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express	a. m. 9	55p.m. 5 40
" Mixed	p.m. 3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2 50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

Dutton Meat Market.

THE ORIGINAL.

Stands second to none in the County.

You can get what you want and when you want it. I buy and sell according to quality FOR CASH.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR

HOGS, DEAD OR ALIVE,
HIDES, SKINS AND TALLOW.

☞ Parties indebted by favor are requested to settle account at once, to enable me to continue business and be your humble servant,

JAMES BAKE.

Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888.

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles southwest of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

OUTSIDE OF THE COMBINE.

25 to 50 Per Cent. Under Combine Prices.

A. C. GRAHAM, - Undertaker, Dutton.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

DUTTON MARKETS.

Flour per cwt	$2 50	to	2 75
Red Wheat per bush.	90	to	95
Barley		to	50
Peas	50	to	55
Oats		to	30
Beans		to	1 00
Potatoes per bag	30	to	40
Green Apples	20	to	30
Hay per ton	9 00	to	10 50
Eggs			17
Butter			20
Shorts			75
Bran			65

NEW BUTCHER SHOP.

THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.

Patronage Solicited.

M. McNULTY.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that I will not be responsible for two notes of hand—one for $15 and the other $35—given by me in favor of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, as I have not received value therefor; moreover the latter note was made on the Sabbath.

JOHN DOYLE,
Nov. 17th, 1888. Dutton.

ST. THOMAS MARKETS.

Wheat	$	95 to	$1 00
Barley		50 to	56
Peas		55 to	58
Oats		30 to	32
Potatoes (per bag)		40 to	50
Hay (per ton)	10	00 to	13 00
Butter		22 to	25
Eggs		23 to	25
Pork	6	50 to	6 75

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 7. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1888. NO. 52.

Professional Cards

ALEX. BEATON,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
WEST LORNE, ONT.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,
SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.
Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

Alex McKillop, M.D.
M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, L. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.
☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,
Barrister-at-Law,
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.
ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,
Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.
MONEY TO LOAN.
OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.
Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN
At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.
June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE.
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.
June 7. 1 yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon - Dentist,
Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,
SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,
Veterinary Surgeon,
DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS
For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.
F. A. Humpidge.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

The Star Loan Company
181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.
Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in
SAVINGS BANK!
from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. C. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.
Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.
L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.
OFFICERS.
L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and P. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!
Pumps! Pumps!!
To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.
Repairing Promptly Done.
I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.
Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.
Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 28, 1888. tf

A NARROW ESCAPE.
People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe-guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

THIS -:- SPACE
BELONGS TO
—: W. H. VOGT, :—
THE JEWELLER.

To Farmers and Builders.
Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. Cochrane.
January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.
The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.
First-class Tailoring
IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.
30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED
This season to stock our new mills at Union.
L. J. Willson & Co.
Feb. 4, 1888. tf

-:- STOP! -:-
DON'T READ THIS
WE WILL SELL
COFFINS and CASKETS
CHEAPER THAN ANY HOUSE IN OR OUTSIDE THE COMBINE.
NO HUMBUG! TRY US!
WE HAVE ALSO A LARGE STOCK OF
FURNITURE!
which we will sell at
Prices which will Astonish you. Call and get Prices.
W. I. Schultz & Son

Burdock Blood Bitters.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors. TORONTO.

Dutton Iron Works.
MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.
The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-
Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN, Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

NEW
BUTCHER SHOP.
THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.
Patronage Solicited.
M. McNULTY.

Expel the worms by using the safe and reliable anthelmintic Freman's Worm Powders.

HITCH UP!
But before you do that come 'round to
M'MILLAN'S - HARNESS - SHOP

BLANKETS, RUBBER RUGS, GOAT ROBES, TRUNKS, VALISES, HALTERS, ETC. ETC.

WHIPS, BRUSHES, BRIDLES, COMBS, HARNESS OIL, ETC., ETC.

and buy a set of
HAND-MADE -:- HARNESS
Manufactured out of the Choicest Stock available in the country, at Moderate Prices. Those of my customers who want a SUPERIOR ARTICLE can, at a little additional, befurnished with Traces of Genuine American Oak Tanned Leather
—:o:—
A LARGE NUMBER OF
CURLED HAIR FACED COLLARS
Warranted to work with safe
☞ The highest price will be paid for Cordwood. Beech and Maple, in exchange for Harness.
All who want an honest and serviceable article are cordially invited to call.

Administrator's Notice.
THE creditors of Angus McPherson, late of the Township of Dunwich, in the County of Elgin, yeoman, deceased, who died on or about the 9th day of October, 1886, and all others having claims against his estate are hereby notified to send by post, prepaid, or otherwise deliver to the undersigned administratrix of the estate of the said deceased at Dutton, Ont., on or before the 3rd day of January, 1889, their Christian names and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them; and in default thereof, and immediately after the said third day of January, 1889, the assets of the said deceased will be distributed amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to claims of which notice shall have been given as above required; and this notice being given under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of Ontario (1887), Cap. 110, the administratrix will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any person of whose claim notice shall not have been received by her at the time of such distribution. JANE McPHERSON,
Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888. Administratrix.

Largest Circulation in Western Ontario.
—:THE:—
FREE PRESS
LONDON - CANADA.
The Free Press is the only newspaper in the West receiving the Associated Press despatches. It contains ALL THE NEWS by Cable, Telegraph, Telephone and Mail, up to the hour of going to press. It gives in each issue original and valuable Illustrations of men and things, and is the only newspaper in Canada employing its own artists.

The Weekly Free Press
$1 PER YEAR. POSTAGE FREE.
Established Nearly Half a Century.
"THE THREE GRACES"
AND "BY THE LAKESIDE,"
TWO HANDSOME CHROMOS,
Also a beautiful Christmas Number, comprising 36 pages, given away free to every subscriber for 1889.
$8,000 in Premiums,
Comprising New and Useful Articles, given away free to agents. The most liberal inducements ever offered in Canada to agents. Send for agent's outfit and terms.
THE FREE PRESS
Is the only Morning and Evening Paper published in Western Ontario. It is forwarded on all early morning trains, reaching all places between Toronto and Windsor by eight a.m., and is the only daily paper received at points west of London before the afternoon. The live newspaper of the west, $5 per year, postage free. Sold by agents everywhere. Address—
FREE PRESS CO.,
LONDON, CANADA.

SALESMEN WANTED.
Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co,
Empire Nurseries, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM
FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

PREVAILING SICKNESS.
The most prevailing complaints at this season are rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, inflammations and congestions. For all these and other painful troubles Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best internal and external remedy.

SELLING OUT!
Large Stock we reduced prices.
ment of
TOYS UP PICTURES
BOOKS, LANTERNS,
TOY DISHES
CUPS AND SAUCERS,
VASES, TOILET SETS.
A FINE LINE OF PLUSH GOODS.
BASKETS, WORK DESKS, WORK BOXES, PAPER RACKS.
A Large Stock of
XMAS CARDS
TO BE SOLD CHEAP.
BOOKS OF ALL KINDS—Hymn Books, Prayer Books, Etc.
Picture Frames, Looking Glasses, Hand Glasses, Brushes, Combs, Pipes.
TOYS Too Numerous to Mention.
Sleighs, Rocking Horses, Violins, Accordeons, Concertinas, Flutes, Piccolos, and Harmonicas all to be sold CHEAP FOR CASH at
PRICE'S Bookstore
P.S.—SANTA CLAUS will be at Price's until Jan. 1, 1889. Call and see him.

Luxuriant Hair
Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.
Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.
Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."
A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.
The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.
Ayer's Hair Vigor,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

RELIABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.
Procure a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil from your medicine dealer, and use according to directions. It cured Ida Johnston, of Cornell, Ont., of that complaint, and she recommends it as a sure cure. For 5 years it has never failed to give satisfaction.

LUKE SHARP.
Mr. Robert Barr, the "Luke Sharp" of The Detroit Free Press, is a humorous writer who has earned a reputation second only to that of M. Quad, a sketch of whom we published last week.
Like M. Quad, "Luke Sharp" was "discovered" by The Free Press. In 1875 he was teaching school in Canada. During vacation time, he, in company with a friend, made a voyage in a small skiff from Detroit to Buffalo, along the south shore of Lake Erie. The trip occupied a couple of weeks, and Mr Barr, under the "nom de plume" of "Luke Sharp," wrote several papers detailing the experiences of himself and friend, and sent them to The Free Press. The articles were published, running several weeks, and they immediately attracted wide attention, being re-printed entire in many other papers. Those who were so fortunate as to read them, will easily remember the exquisite, side splitting style in which the adventures and mishaps of "Luke" and his friend "Mac" were chronicled.
"Luke Sharp" was at once offered a position on The Free Press staff, and has since written exclusively for that paper, delighting thousands every week with his laugh-provoking sketches.
In 1881 Mr. Barr was sent to England to establish the European edition of The Free Press, and in July of that year the paper was issued at 325 Strand, London, where it is still published with ever-increasing success. Mr. Barr spent nearly three years in travelling over the greater part of Europe, writing accounts of his journeyings for The Free Press. It is his purpose to spend several months during the coming year in visiting other points of interest in the old world, and readers of The Free Press will doubtless be treated to a series of interesting and humorous letters in his own inimitable style. "Luke Sharp" is a genial Scotchman, a native of Glasgow, and still a young man on the sunny side of forty; in the opinion of his many friends his best work is yet to come.
We give the ENTERPRISE and the Free Press for $1.75.

WHERE ARE THE NINE?
An exchange says: "It is surprising how few members are active in maintaining the services of the ordinary church. In a church of one hundred members, seventy-five could be picked out whose death would not put a check to any one department of the work On the other hand the death of a selected ten would break up the prayer-meeting, the Sunday-school and the finances. How the idlers can be content with themselves we do not understand.
"Strange as this may seem," remarks the Sabbath Recorder, "it is nothing new. We remember that of the ten lepers whom Jesus cleansed only one turned back to thank him for it and he was a Samaritan; Jesus expressed his sorrow at their ingratitude in words which ought to pierce every indifferent soul: 'Were there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine? There are none found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.' Is this a true picture of the church? Let every one of us resolve that, if we have hitherto been one of the nine we will no longer train in that company, but we will be one of the ten who were not only cleansed but who returned to give God the glory. Any man bearing the name of a Christian ought to be cast down to the depths of humiliation in his own soul, if it can be truthfully said of him that the largest place he fills in the church is on its list of members. In public worship or God on the Sabbath, in the prayer-meeting, in the Bible school, in the general religious atmosphere of his own home and the community, in works of mercy and deeds of love, in the councils of those who plan and pray for the spread of the Gospel in all the world, in every movement in the social, moral and religious reforms, in the contribution box representing the backbone of all progressive work, in some or all of these places there is certainly room for every consecrated, earnest Christian worker to make himself felt; and every Christian should aim to be such a Christian."

To invigorate both the body and the brain, use the reliable tonic, Milburn's Aromatic Quinine Wine.

Erastus Wiman thinks a fatal mistake has been made by Butterworth in introducing his annexation resolutions in Congress.
A clear head is indicative of good health and regular habits. When the body is languid and the mind works sluggishly, Ayer's Cathartic Pills will assist in the recovery of physical buoyancy and mental vigor.
The Wrightsville and Tenille Railroad Company recently declared a dividend, but it cannot be paid as burglars have stolen the money.
DEAFNESS CURED. A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.
Ida Newman, a young lady well known in charitable circles at Providence, R. I., has been married to a Chinese laundryman, who was one of her Sunday school pupils.
An inquest was held on the body of Jas. Macpherson, of Puslinch township, who died in the jail at Guelph on Thursday. The jury returned a verdict that death was caused by general debility from want of nourishment, deceased having refused to take any food while laboring under insanity.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.
Dr. Montague has been unseated for Haldimand.
The Speaker, the new London paper, is in difficulties.
National Pills are a mild purgative, acting on the Stomach Liver and Bowels, removing all obstructions.
With one exception, the dry goods and grocery stores of Aylmer are giving up the electric light because it is too expensive.
Mary E. Macdonald, formerly of Kincardine, and now working as a servant at Listowel, has been left $17,000 by a relative.
Victoria Carbolic Salve is a great aid to internal medicine in the treatment of scrofulous sores, ulcers and abscesses of all kinds.
Mrs. George Hanse, of Comber, recently eloped and carried off $200 worth of her husband's effects. She has been arrested.
ONE GOOD POINT
Out of the many possessed by Burdock Blood Bitters is that it may be taken at all the seasons of the year, and by either young or old In this way the three busy B's are always at work doing good.
The personal expenses of Dr. Marlatt, the Liberal-Conservative candidate in the recent election in East Elgin, were $60 95.
David McArthur, of Highgate, met with what might have proved a serious accident. Last week he was on the skidway of the sawmill handling some lumber. He made a misstep, and fell a distance of ten feet, and sustained a severe injury to his neck and arm.

Scrofulous humors, erysipelas, canker, and catarrh, can be cured by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "I have used this medicine in my family for scrofula, and know, if it is taken persistently, it will eradicate this terrible disease.'—W. F Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

At the inquest on the body of Richard G. Brown, the Muskrat farmer, at Dunboyne, the jury returned a verdict to the effect that death was hastened by abuse at the hands of John Coutts and neglect on the part of Mrs. Brown. The two persons implicated are under arrest.
The heirs of the late John Brown, of Amherstburg, have been left a fortune of £65,000 by the death of a relative in Glasgow, Scotland Henry J. Brown, Isaac Brown and the heirs of the late Mrs. John G. Kolfage, of that town, are all heirs. John McIntyre, of Glasgow, is now in this country looking up heirs, and is expected here shortly.
On January 1st the new law relating to public execution is to come into force in the State of New York, when the electric spark will be employed to destroy life instead of the barbarous and uncertain rope Some curiosity is felt in respect to the first execution by that means Criminals speak of it with bated breath, as being something mysterious as well as terrible
A stranger arrived in London on the 5:30 train Wednesday morning and registered at the Grigg House as F. F. Wanamaker, the name of a Philadelphia millionaire. He represented himself as the owner of a large livery stable in New York, and that he had stopped in London to buy a few stylish teams. His money was in $1,000 bills, which no one could change, and so he found it necessary to borrow small amounts. He was soon spotted by a commercial traveler, who had previously been victimized by him in Chatham, where he passed as "Fred McGrath." Mr. Grigg notified the police, but "Wannamaker" managed to secure a horse and rig, drove to St. John's and thence to Lucan, and there took the train for Toronto.

Martyrs to Headache
Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.
The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.
"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVeau, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."
"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."
Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."
When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. Martyrs to headache should try
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

DUNWICH COUNCIL.
Minutes of a regular meeting of the municipal council of the township of Dunwich, held in Brown's hall, Dutton, on Saturday, Dec. 15.
All the members present. Minutes of last meeting were read, approved of and signed.
Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by A. A. McKillop That W. H. Backus be appointed to build a bridge on the 9th con., opposite lots 11, said bridge not to exceed $35 —Carried.
Moved by J. Milligan, seconded by H. Garbutt, That the resignation of D. McLean as assessor be accepted.—Carried.
By law No. 367, to appoint the place for holding nominations for reeve and councillors; the returning-officer who shall hold the nominations; the places at which polls will be opened and the deputy returning-officers who shall preside at the respective polling-places, was read a first, second and third time and passed.
Moved by J D McDiarmid, seconded by H. Garbutt, That the statement of assets and liabilities of this township, in accordance with Sec. 13 and sub-sections thereof of "The Municipal Amendment Act of 1888," be printed and posted up as required by law.—Carried.
On motion the council adjourned to meet on Jan. 14, 1889.
(A large number of cheques were granted, which, owing to the demand on our space by advertisers, have to be held over until next week.)

COWAL.
Mr. N. A. Compbell has been re engaged to teach in S. S. No. 8, at a salary of $360.
D Crossen is having 400 cords of wood cut in his bush west of the village.
A shooting match and raffle for turkeys and geese took place at Wm. Marshman's on Thursday. Chauncey Peckham intends holding forth with another on Tuesday.
Mr. John Thompson, merchant, has been duly appointed postmaster of this place, vice J. Patton resigning.
Jas. Bennett has the contract of hauling a quantity of cordwood to Lawrence Station for S. S. McColl, of Argyle street west.
Municipal matters are quiet; little or no interest is taken as yet. Judging from the agitation of some of the leaders in this section in years gone by Mr. McKillop should poll a large vote in this vicinity.
Mr. E. Anderson is preparing material for a large implement building which he intends erecting in the spring.

MIDDLEMISS.
A large number were present at Mrs. Webb's quilting bee on Wednesday.
J. C. Graham, who went to Michigan about a year ago, has returned and been appointed principal of the Rodney public school at a salary of $450 a year. The trustees have made a good choice in securing Mr. Graham and his friends are glad to see him in their midst again.
On Friday evening a large crowd gathered at the school-house as usual for the purpose of having singing school, but the teacher failing to put in an appearance, or not sending any word for the last two weeks, the scholars thought it wise to bring the school to a close at present, as they did not feel inclined to walk there and then have the teacher fool them. The evening was spent in songs by some of the ladies and gentlemen, after which they returned home feeling satisfied that the teacher had tried some of his old games again.
R. J. Campbell has been re-engaged to teach the village school at the same salary.
Dan Morrison spent Sunday at home.
Mr. and Mrs. Berdan, of Strathroy, returned home on Tuesday.
Duncan Morrison left for Toronto on Tuesday where he has been engaged in a wholesale dry goods house. We wish him success.
Jas. Batten returned on Saturday from Buffalo and reports as having done very well on the car-load of poultry he took over.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

In 1863, a carload of poor boys were brought to this country and bound out to farmers. Among them was George L. Allen, who claimed that he had been kidnapped. He ran away from the farmer to whom he was consigned, but was recaptured and so brutally treated by the farmer and his sons, that his torturers were arrested and sent to the penitentiary. Recently Allen discovered his parents in Brooklyn, New York. Their name is Lispenard and the young man is now visiting them. Allen, or Lispenard, was kidnapped when 6 years old.

WILL BE FULLY MET.
Indications of Dyspepsia, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Rising and Souring of Food, Wind on the Stomach, or a Choking or Gnawing sensation at the pit of the stomach are fully met by Burdock Blood Bitters which has cured the worst cases on record.
A CANADIAN CHILDREN'S PAPER.—Hitherto we have been accustomed to expect children's papers to come from the United States. We have now to welcome one, however, printed in our own country; and if it keeps up to the standard of the sample before us, the imported article will have to devise some measure of "retaliation," or get out. It is well printed on toned paper, has eight pages, containing twenty-four columns, is beautifully illustrated and carefully edited, and the stories and other reading matter, while of the highest order, are just the kind to attract and delight our boys and girls. All this provided for only fifty cents a year. The proposal is to distribute it in school clubs—it could not be supplied at the price under any other plan. The kind co-operation of teachers will thus be absolutely necessary to success. Samples are sent to all teachers; but if any have not received a copy to date, a card to the Publishers, Grip Publishing Co., Toronto, will secure it. Ask your children if they have seen it.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

An epizootic has broken out among the horses in Mersea township, Essex county.

It is rumoured in Montreal that Bishop Cleary, of Kingston, will be appointed Archbishop of Toronto.

The sons of Sir Richard Cartwright, who were detained on Wolfe Island, have returned safe and sound to Kingston.

The Leeds and Grenville Counties' Council, after a warm debate, decided on continuing the bounty on wolverines.

Montreal is at present infested with a gang of burglars and the detectives have to keep both eyes open to secure arrests.

Owing to a feeling of dissatisfaction with the action of the Montreal Carnival Committee, it is possible there may be two ice palaces.

The Dominion Government have agreed to assume the greater portion of the expenses of suppressing the Indian uprising on the Ikeena river.

The Dominion Government will not accede to the request of the Montana ranchmen for withdrawal or modification of the cattle quarantine regulations.

The village of Farmersville, between Brockville and Westport, with a population of 900, has become incorporated under the ambitious name of Athens.

Mr. Joseph S. Brennan, of Hamilton, has entered a suit for damages against Mr. John Earls, of Toronto, on the alleged ground that he has alienated his wife's affections.

Mr. Rufus Stevenson is urging the Minister of Finance to impose an export duty on hemlock logs, which are produced chiefly in Kent, Essex, and Lambton counties.

At a meeting of workingmen, held Friday night, it was decided to organize a Toronto Loan & Savings Association, to assist workingmen to build or purchase their own dwellings.

The question whether millet is a grain or a grass is again agitating the Customs Department in Ottawa. Mr. Bowell maintains that it is a grain, and must pay a duty of fifteen per cent.

It is reported that some four weeks ago a mail bag with its contents was stolen either in Ottawa or on its way there from the West, and no trace of the thief has been discovered.

The report of the St. Thomas Medical Health Officer shows that during the year ended November 1, out of the 103 cases of dangerous diseases in the city there were only four deaths.

The Ottawa City Council has addressed a circular to the municipalities throughout Ontario, asking them to co-operate in urging the Ontario Government to abolish exemptions from taxation.

The fisheries Department in Ottawa has been notified of the seizure at Chatham Junction, N. B., of 1,900 pounds of smelts caught during the close season and consigned to American dealers.

O'Connor will sail for Australia about the 1st of March to bring back to Toronto the championship of the world, and up to that time will row at San Francisco any oarsman who chooses to meet him.

Mrs. Flynn, of Montreal, has recovered $4,500 for herself and $2,000 for her child from the Canadian Pacific railway, in whose employ her husband was killed some time ago by the fall of an iron machine he was unloading.

It is said that the Dominion Government are negotiating with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company with the object of getting that corporation to undertake the construction of the Regina and Long Lake railway to Prince Albert next year.

William O'Connor, the young Torontonian who recently won the title of Champion Oarsman of America by defeating John Teemer, of McKeesport, Pa., arrived home Monday night, and was tendered a magnificent reception by his fellow-citizens. A torchlight procession over a mile long accompanied him to the Horticultural Gardens pavilion, where he was presented with purses aggregating $1,300.

FOREIGN.

The report that a second Papal rescript had been sent to the Irish bishops a fortnight ago is confirmed.

The London Lancet says that Sir Morell Mackenzie has resigned his membership in the College of Physicians.

Baron Hirsch, of Vienna has made a donation of $5,000,000 for schools for the Jews in Galacia and Bukovina.

The Russians are building pontoons at Rein, in readiness to bridge the Danube at a location threatening to Bulgaria.

Prince Ferdinand has given two million francs towards an official scheme for a National Bulgarian University in Sofia.

An Irridentist has been arrested in Vienna upon suspicion of having designs upon the life of Emperor Francis Joseph.

The Russian Government are about to create a railway department, which will be empowered to fix tariffs and classify freights.

France and Holland have agreed to submit to arbitration the question of the delimitation of their respective possessions in Guiana.

The "North German Gazette" believes that the affairs of France are drifting toward a crisis of which the sequences are incalculable.

The relations between Russia and Persia are strained owing to England's ascendancy in Persia from a military standpoint as well as commercially.

The Boulangist committees advise their adherents not to take part in the Baudin demonstrations, as it is a Government trap to provoke a bloody collision.

Much anxiety is felt in Russia about the health of the Czarina, who has not recovered from the shock to her nerves caused by the recent railway accident.

The duel between M. Paul de Roluede and M. Reinache, editor of the Republique Francaise, in Paris yesterday, resulted in the interchange of four shots. No harm done.

In political circles the failure of Lord Compton to defeat the Tory candidate in Holborn is regarded as evidence that London has not changed its mind on the Home Rule question.

From Zanzibar it is reported that the English and German admirals, in the Sultan's name, have published a proclamation to the effect that the blockade will commence immediately.

A rumour has reached Bonny from the Upper Niger that Henry M. Stanley is proceeding at the back of the great oil rivers under the British flag, and that the natives are friendly.

On Saturday Mr. Cunningham Graham, Liberal, was ordered out of the House of Commons by the Speaker for accusing Mr. Smith, the Government leader, of conniving at a dishonourable trick.

An Imperal Russian ukase has been issued providing for the issue of 4 per cent. bonds to the nominal value of 125,000,000 roubles for the repurchase of the bonds of 1877 and the temborary credit notes of 1877 and 1878.

The charitable donations and other bequests to commemorate the occasion of Emperor Francis Joseph's jubilee amounted to $15,000,000 which will be devoted to the erection of hospitals, schools, and churches.

Miss Valery Weldmann, who in her action for breach of promise against Captain Walpole was nonstited for refusing to reply to vital questions, now states that she was not aware of the consequence of her reticence and will apply for a new trial.

Though Basch, the Australian sculler, retired some months ago, leaving the world's championship to Kemp, he was challenged by Hanlan, and the two ex-champions of the world rowed again this week, Beach defeating Hanlan for the fourth time.

Mr. John Morley's motion opposing the sending of British troops to Suakim was defeated in the House of Commons on Saturday, upon the Government explaining that it was requisite to hold that town as a basis of operations against the slave trade.

The Diritto, of Rome, urges Italy not to accept England's invitation to help in the protection of Suakim, on the ground that it would provoke the hostility of the Soudanese, who ought rather to be conciliated with a view to securing their support against Abyssinia.

In the Australian Assembly, Sir Bryan O'Loughlin, the ex-Premier, moved that that body support the other Colonies in the question of the Imperial Government consulting the Colonial Ministers before appointing Governors. The motion was rejected. The result was received with cheers. The members arose in a body and sang the National Anthem, concluding with cheers for the Queen.

AMERICAN.

A large vein of coal, of good quality, has been struck near Chamberlain, Dak.

The Calumet, Mich., mine is still on fire and there is no hope of saving the eight imprisoned miners.

Monday afternoon the tone of the Chicago wheat market was much firmer than for several days past.

The Vatican denies that the Pope congratulated Gen. Harrison upon his election, as his Holiness never interferes in national politics.

There was liberal selling of oats in Chicago for May delivery Monday, the price breaking from 30½ to 29c. Stocks of this grain are large.

The New York Court of Appeals has decided against Cornell University in the matter of the $1,500,000 bequeathed by Jennie McGraw Fiske.

A well-dressed woman was shot dead in Chicago on Sunday night by a policeman who fired at a petty thief, missed his mark, and hit the woman in the head.

President Cleveland's message was delivered to Congress on Monday, and proved to be even more aggressive than its predecessor regarding the tariff reform question.

Mr. Herbert will remain in Washington as Charge d' Affaires until after Gen. Harrison's inauguration, when it is probable Sir Francis Clare Ford will be sent out as British Minister.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Association in Chicago yesterday, resolutions were passed condemning Sunday newspapers and practically asking the congregations to boycott them.

Capt. Bundy, of Buffalo, is endeavouring to raise $6,500 to enable him to purchase a steamer to take the place of the Gospel ship, to carry instruction to the different islands, fishing and lumber stations, and cedar camps in the lakes, where the men are isolated from churches.

Infectious Diseases.

The December issue of the Forum contains a very interesting article by Dr. Austin Flint, in which he boldly predicts that the time will come when the cause of every infectious disease will be known; when all such diseases will be preventable, or easily curable; when protection can be afforded against all diseases, such as scarlet fever, measles, yellow fever, whooping cough, etc., in which one attack secures immunity from subsequent contagion; when, in short, no constitutional disease will be incurable, and such scourges as epidemics will be unknown. These results, he thinks, may be but a small part of what will follow discoveries in bacteriology. He points out that the conditions necessary to the development of many diseases seem to be a susceptibility on the part of the individual, and the lodgment and multiplication of special bacteria in the system. His most important statement is that "it is probable that a person with an inherited tendency to consumption would never develop the disease if he could be absolutely protected against infection with the tubercle bacillus; but, once infectde, the bacteria multiply and produce the characteristic signs and symptoms. In other persons the bacillus tuberculosis with difficulty finds a lodgment, and multiplies imperfectly. In the light of modern discoveries consumption can no longer be regarded as an incurable disease." These speculations of Dr. Flint, who is a physician of eminence, almost dazzle one by the possiblities they hold out of banishing most of the ills to which flesh is heir. It will be, however, a subject of speculation as to what will become of the medical profession when the discovery is made how to prevent or cure all these diseases.

His Deceased Wife's Sister.

The London "Star" of recent date says:—In the Divorce Division to-day Justice Butt gave a reserved decision in the case of Ross (otherwise Andrews) v. Ross. The case raised the novel points whether the petitioner, Susannah Elizabeth Genze Andrews, who in 1876 married the husband of her deceased sister was entitled to have that marriage declared null and void. It was stated that the reason why the petition was presented was in the belief that an Act would shortly be passed legalizing marriage with a deceased wife's sister, and that the Act would be of a retrospective character. In the course of the argument the learned judge said he doubted whether he had the power to annul the marriage where two people had conspired together to commit an illegal act. His Lordship now said that of course the petitioner was well aware of the relations in which she and the respondent stood to each other at the time of her marriage with him. She chose to go through the ceremony with the knowledge of all the circumstances. Upon all principles of law, as administered in the other courts, she would not be allowed to get rid of any obligation she entered into with her eyes open. But the ecclesiastical courts has applied a different rule, and no doubt there were reasons for a different rule, prevailing in the case of a contract of marriage. He need not go into the reasons. Suffice it to say that the ecclesiastical court had pronounced this marriage null. By section 22 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, he was bound to declare the marriage null. He refused to grant the petitioner the costs.

England and Germany.

Quite a sensation has been caused in political circles, both in England and on the continent, and wide attention attracted generally, by a semi-official note published by the Berlin press. The note contains a protest against the opposition of England to the efforts of Germany in Zanzibar. It asserts that anti-German tendencies prevail in England, and the co-operation in African schemes that might be given to Germany is, through their influence, denied. "Germany is forced to conclude," says the note, "that England does not need Germany's friendship." Then follows what may be looked on as a warning to the insular power:—"It is true that it is improbable that situations may arise in the immediate future in which England may feel the want of friendship from a Continental power, but such a condition of affairs is not impossible." The note is but the legitimate outcome of a feeling that has long existed in Germany over the hesitation of English politicians to commit the British Government to the doubtful policy of assisting Germany to help herself to whatever benefits the east coast of Africa may present. The ostensible object of the desired co-partnership is to root out the slave trade and to make East Africa and Zanzibar safe for Europeans. As a colonizer and reclaimer of savage countries England has greater success than Germany, and the latter knows this, and for this reason longs for English assistance. But England does not propose to help Germany to colonize Africa, and this is why the co-operation is denied.

AGRICULTURAL.

Bee Catechism.

An exchange asks that the following bit of information be sent the rounds of the papers, giving it an equal "boom" with the bogus honey stories.

What is the chief end of bees?—To get out patent hives.

What is the best patent hive?—The best hive is not patented.

But don't some of these patent hives fool the moth?—No; they fool the men who buy them.

What patent hive is the most useful?—The new one in the barn, with a hen's nest in.

But is there not more money in patent hives than in bees?—Yes; but that time is almost over.

But how are we to know a poor hive?—It has a great many door drawers, hinges, cracks, crevices, nooks and corners which look like conveniences, but in which the bees stick fast.

Who are the great bee-savants of this country?—The men who don't use patent hives.

Are bees profitable?—Not to those who buy patent hives.

Ayshire Cattle

A well known breeder of Ayrshire cattle tells how he came to look upon that breed as the most valuable for his use. He sells milk and butter. He started with a herd composed of good grades. A few Ayrshire heifers were introduced and bred to an Ayrshire bull. The milk from every cow was carefully weighed and it was agreed that the cows giving the lightest yields of milk should go—let them be Ayrshire, grade or scrub. Many an Ayrshire failed to reach the mark set by the grades, but slowly the best of the Ayrshires triumphed until the stable contained nothing else. It was a fair and practical test of superiority. Would it pay to make such a test in the ordinary dairy? Weighing and recording the milk from 25 cows would require about half an hour per day. Would it pay? Well, you can't get to the bottom facts regarding the value of your cows until you do it, that's sure.

Why is the Farmer Easily Duped?

The answer is not far to seek. Other people continually deal with other men, and learn to be always on their guard against treachery. But the farmer deals on the one hand with Providence, and on the other, only occasionally with his fellows. Plain man as he is, he occupies the rare and high position of intermediary between the Creator and the Ruler of the earth, and all mankind who derive their food and clothing from its soil. He finds God's rain descending alike upon the just and the unjust, and God's promise of an annual yield as sure as the rainfall and the rainbow. There is no mistrust on that side, and he has difficulty in learning to mistrust man. It is a bitter experience when he finds his confidence made his bane, and that he must be wise as a serpent on one hand while harmless as a dove on the other.

WARPA.

Covering Vines.

Prof. Henry of the Wisconsin A. E. S. says that all the strings of the grape vines are out about the middle of October and the vines are bent over, after pruning, and held down by the foot until a couple of shovelfuls of earth are thrown on the top. The whole vine is covered up with earth just deep enough to be out of sight, even if rains should wash off a little earth. Two men perform the work very rapidly. The use of the earth is to keep the vine frozen all winter instead of freezing and thawing as it might if left uncovered. Don't listen, he says, to any one who says there is no need of covering. Covered vines start off vigorously in spring, while uncovered vines are more or less weakened, even if they are alive.

Wooden Comb.

Recently we had the pleasure of examining wooden honey-comb made by and in use in the hives of the inventor and patentee, Mr. Aspinwall. If the wintering of his bees in this comb is as successful as the summer experience, it will prove quite an innovation in bee-keeping. After making, these wooden combs are treated in hot wax, and are readily accepted by the bees, while the treatment prevents any effects of moisture on them.

The maker claims for them great strength, freedom from inroads of moths, cheapness and much greater control of the bees, both in regard to numbers and increase of size.

Agricultural Notes.

Complete cleanliness of poultry houses and yards is one of the essentials to success to poultry keeping.

"To deepen and enrich the soil is better than to enlarge the farm, for while the crop is increased, the cost of producing it is decreased."

Farm Journal: "It is poor policy to keep heavy, slow motioned fowls in the same flock with the light and nervous Spanish breeds. They each require different feeding and treatment."

When large quantities of roots are to be stored, and there is no root cellar, it is far better to construct pits than to fill the cellar of the dwelling house with them to vitiate the air of the entire house.

Sheep are now being successfully sheared by machinery in Australia. The wool-mower can be run by either steam or horse power. There is now very little poetry left in farm operations—if there ever was any poetry in the hard work that permaturely wore out the old-time husbandman.

Mr. Hoard knows of large dairymen who, instead of letting each milker, as some do, milk till he gets two pails full, and then carry them to the dairy house, partly chilled before setting, have a carrier who goes past each milker, with his carrying pails, and the milker empties his pail as fast as it is full, into the high and large carrying cans; and the milk then gets set in the quickest time, with all the natural heat as nearly retained as it is possible to do it.

"Many farmers lose because they do not feed enough. What would you think of a man who owned a saw-mill and kept just fire enough to make steam to run the machinery? He might tell you 'Bring your logs, you see the mill is running.' You would say: "Yes, but there is no force to do the work; the mill cannot cut lumber unless more steam is applied.' Well, that is the way many farmers feed their cattle—just enough to run the machinery, and the whole is wasted. By this method there can be but one return—loss. More steam—more food—is the only way to profit."

Small fruit-growing is becoming every year more popular among progressive, wide awake farmers. Every farmer should have plenty for home use, and all that is needed is that the determination to do so should be kept up for twelve months in the year. The time required is very little, but too many only get the small fruit fever in berry time, and have a chill in hoeing time. This intermittant kind of attention never made a success of any kind of business.

The farmer, because of the credit system, indulges in many luxuries that would be denied if they were to be paid for at the time. It is an easy matter to give an order with the suggestion "to charge this," and if paid at the time would be easy; but it is the accumulation of these little charges that soon confront the debtor in the shape of an enormous bill that causes the trouble and inconvenience. It would be far better for all farmers if the rule of paying as one goes could be adopted, or else not to go.

"I have never seen better pastures than I saw in England last summer, but the cows on those pastures had daily rations of grain, roots, cotton-seed meal, or something to supplement those fine pastures, always something more than was supplied by the grasses. That addition gave profit in the products; and another point of great importance is that liberal feeding makes the land rich. There is something to put back. I noticed, with a sense of shame, that those English farmers had great quantities of cotton-seed meal that we are so short-sighted as to send abroad when there is real need of every pound of it for home consumption."

A New England paper claims to have full returns of the potato crop of the world, and says the yield of New England is a fair average; in New York, below the average: in the West, not a full crop; in the provinces Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Islands, large, and in Europe, very short. This may be tolerably correct, but all the same we have an unusually large crop of potatoes in the West, and prices are firm. In Nebraska the crop is reported as being particularly fine, and a dispatch from O'Neil says that potatoes are being shipped from that place by the car load. The facetious reporter adds: "They are the finest in the land, raised on Holt county soil and weigh on an average about a pound apiece."

THE THEATRE A PEST HOUSE

DENOUNCED BY A JERSEY PREACHER WHO NEVER WAS IN ONE.

The Rev. G. W. Smith, who never goes to a theatre, in the evening delivered a sermon at the Centenary Methodist Episcopalian Church, Jersey City, on that subject, taking as his text the verse from Proverbs, "Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?"

Mr. Smith argued that the fact that he didn't attend a theatre was no reason why he shouldn't preach about theatres. If that were to debar him the same sort of logic would prevent him from preaching about temperance unless he had personally experienced what it was to get drunk. The vast majority of plays, he contended, were immoral, and in support of this view he quoted various opinions, most of them contributed by clergymen.

Then he spoke of the players. "I do not think," he said, "that every actor or actress is a morally bad person, but I do say this upon the best evidence that can be gotten, that as a class they are not and cannot be admitted to respectable society." He cited Rosseau, a somewhat ancient authority who had said, speaking of actors and actresses:—"The men are abandoned to disorder and the woman live scandalous lives."

THE TESTIMONY OF THE ACTORS.

His next quotation was from "a literary paper of a very high order" (name not mentioned) to this effect:—"Exceptions there may be and are, but as a class members of the dramatic profession are very properly debarred from respectable society."

"If their own testimony is to be accepted," said Mr. Smith, "are they the persons at whose feet our young people shall sit for amusement and entertainment? God have mercy upon us if Christians come to that."

Mr. Smith then applied the lash to theatre goers. "I do not claim," he said, "that everybody who goes to the theatre is necessarily a very bad person, but people who are noted for their devoutness and charity, and are eager in their efforts to bring souls to the Lord Jesus are not among the class that go to theatres. Mr. Moody knew who he was talking about when he said he would not give much for theatre going, card playing, dancing Christians.

WHAT THE THEATRE GOERS ARE.

"The mass of theatre goers are very worldly people. Among them are drunkards, profane people, sceptics, infidels and licentious people, and amid the round of applause in which the better class may join there will be heard the hollow laugh of the harlot. Good people ought not to be found in the company of such as make up a majority of the theatre goers.

has been said that the theatre is a school of morals; that it holds the mirror up to nature, exhibits the consequence of vice and the rewards of virtue. It has been my special business to try to save men and women, and I have yet to meet a single person who has abandoned lewdness and debauchery who attributes his reform to going to theatres."

Mr. Smith added that the theatre could not be reformed, and advised young people to avoid it as they would "the pest house."

Toronto the Good.

The Aberdeen Evening Express says; Toronto, in Canada, would appear to be the beau-ideal of an abode for the Sabbatarian. Amusement enters not on Sundays into that city, with its 140,000 inhabitants, with distances as great from centre to circumference as we find in much larger towns. Still the Toronto Sunday is the baker's Sunday, the butcher's Sunday, and the right to rest is taken not even from the conductors or drivers of street cars, post-office employes, or printers on the staff of the daily papers. Grocers, tobacconists, confectioners, telegraphic operators, druggists, and milksellers rest most of the day. Sunday papers, Sunday cars, Sunday trains, Sunday boats are as a discount in Toronto, as well as Socialism. It has been undoubtedly found, although we have no wish to encourage Puritanical dreariness, that Sunday observance is more attended to where religious grounds come in. A thoughtful American divine writes:—"The working men of the United States and of Europe are demanding a stricter Sabbath observance. Socialism is leading a renaissance of Puritanism. Christians tunnelling from one side of the mountain for the glory of god, and working men tunnelling from the other side for their own good, meet at the Fourth Commandment." It is satisfactory to note, however, that in Toronto the people are tolerant. Those who profess Hebrew, Mahometan, or other doctrines are not overlooked. Such private work is proposed to be allowed in their case as will neither interfere with the general rest nor with the public worship. And, generally speaking, we suppose the cause of the public will not suffer by the recent reduction of the Sunday train service in Connecticut, America, ten thousand railway men having thereby been set free from Sunday toil. The attitude of many of our clergy with regard to the newspaper press, Sunday labour, and Sunday observance is not very consistent, but the prohibition of all works on Sunday except those of religion and real necessity and mercy should receive some attention from the cloth. They must not be allowed to earn their bread for nothin .

Immoderate Dancing.

That old, old, question—is dancing morally right, wrong or indifferent? has again cropped up in New York, owing to the energy of a newspaper correspondent. He collected a great many opinions on the subject, but it is doubtful if a single person will alter his or her mode of looking at the subject by one iota for all the trouble that was taken. The opinion of one physician is worth quoting in part. He said:

More young women are made chronic invalids through immoderate dancing than through any other cause except roller skating, and almost every physician has cases due to the abuse of what under favourable circumstances is a pleasant exercise. A normally healthy woman can dance with impunity just as she can ride a horse or play tennis, but comparatively few American women are normally healthy. Moreover, a woman in a ball dress is almost invariably laced too tightly, and I never knew a woman who danced who did not dance too much. The overexertion, combined with the tight lacing, is apt to produce functional trouble of the heart, increasing, as it does, the action of the heart with diminished scope. Women who dance ought not to lace at all, and married women should dance seldom, if ever.

Why?

Why suffer a single moment, when you can get immediate relief from internal or external pain by the use of Polson's Nerviline the great pain cure? Nerviline has never been known to fail. Try a 10 cent sample bottle. You will find it just as recommended. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, head ache, and all similar complaints disappear as if by magic when Nerviline is used. Large bottles 25 cents. Test bottles 10 cents, at druggists and country dealers.

Money in Politics.

The Baltimore Sun says:—The public mind is settling down to the conviction that our Presidential contests are fast becoming mere bouts of money-spending. A victory thus obtained is, of course, without moral force, however profitable it may be for a while to its beneficiaries. The people cannot, in the long run, sanction proceedings which in effect pervert their will, and that, too, by corrupt methods which strike at the very foundations of free government. Venality must be followed by demoralization and distrust. Patriotism cannot long survive as a potent force in our politics if the longest purse is to determine the settlement of public questions. When it comes to be understood that our present economic system is so profitable to the rich, banded together in trusts and other forms of monopoly, that in order to preserve it they are able and willing to give millions to debauch the poor, to carry pivotal States, and thus obtain control of the Federal Government and its policy, its shrift, it is to be feared, will be short

Love in a Cottage.

"Chally," said Amarantha Jane, "I notice that your spirits recently seem to be bubbling over with happiness. I am glad to see it, but do tell me, dear, what has caused it?" "I will," said Charley, as he encircled her waist and imprinted a kiss on her inviting lips. "You know for a while I was melancholy, blue as indigo—had no appetite, was bilious and dyspeptic, but the use of two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has brought me out and I am 'bright as a button.' I feel like a new man now. Jane, name the day soon; there is more of this medicine at the drug store."

The gourmand's ailment is not unlikely to prove meat for repentance.

Wine, Women and Song," but the greatest of these is, "women." "Wine is a mocker," and song is good to "sooth the savage," but women respond to every active power and sentiment of the human mind when in good health. But when afflicted with disease you will find them tantalizing, coquettish, cross, and hard to please. For all "female complaints," sick headache, irregularities, nervousness, prolapsus and other displacements popularly known as "female weakness" and other diseases, peculiar to the sex, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the great world-famed remedy.

Town booms that were picked before they became ripe are rotting in various parts of the country.

Don't Read This for $500.

For many years, through nearly every newspaper in the land, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, who are thoroughly responsible, financially, as any one can easily ascertain by proper enquiry, have offered, in good faith, a standing reward of $500 for a case of nasal catarrh, no matter how bad, or of how long standing, which they cannot cure.

Separate skirts are oftenest worn with polonaise or with draperies arranged in polonaise effects.

A Cure for Drunkeness.

The optium habit, depeomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain, and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V Lubon 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont.

Judge Hilton, according to a statement made in court concerning the Stewart property, had in 1885 $14,347,526,06 to his credit, while Mrs. Stewart had to borrow money from him to pay her husband's funeral expenses, so absolute was the Judge's control over the Stewart millions.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

A stool pigeon is not the kind that makes good Christmas pot-pie.

SEVERAL HOURS' continuous burning these long nights tests the best coil oil, wicks gets charred, chimneys smoked and light grows dim. To avoid this ask dealers for, and be sure they give you the genuine CARBON SAFETY OIL.

In Wall street we wonder if they will hang up their stock kings.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respy. T. A. SLOCUM, 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

"My dear friend," said the minister to a dying man, "it must be a source of great consolation to you as your end approaches to feel that you have always led a correct Christian life."

"It is," was the weak reply.

"And now," went on the minister, gently; "is there anything more I can say to you, have you any last request to make?"

"Yes," responded the dying man, feebly; "will you please see tnat my diary is burned?"

Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 cents.

A. P. 428.

PATENTS procured, Patent Attorneys, and experts Est'd 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

KNITTING Creelman Bros., Georgetown, Ont. MACHINES

CANOES. Send for Ill. Catalogue WM. ENGLISH, Peterboro, Ont.

TO Save Time—Send for Illustrated catalogue of our PATENT PINLESS CLOTHES LINE. It will be ready very soon. TARBOX BROS., Toronto, Ont.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 63 Niagara St., Buffalo, N. Y.

FARMS FOR SALE OR RENT. ALL SIZES, KINDS and PRICES. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, DRAYTON, ONT.

BEAUTIFUL STORY AND GOLDEN GEMS of Religious Thought, by J. W. Buel and T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; beautiful illustrations, colored and plain; handsomely bound; large quarto book; plain type and just such a book that takes the eye at a glance; terms to agents extra liberal. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

"THE DANDY" PATENT SLEIGHOLDER, which every farmer wants now, costs only 75cts., and if there is no local agent, may be obtained (free by express or mail), on sending price to C. W. ALLEN & CO., World Building, Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 123 Yonge St., Toronto.

SAUSGAE CASINGS—Season 1888-89. Importations of English Sheeps, Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON, 41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

Diamond Dyes

Brilliant! Durable! Economical!

Diamond Dyes excel all others in Strength, Purity and Fastness. None other are just as good. Beware of imitations, because they are made of cheap and inferior materials, and give poor, weak, crocky colors. To be sure of success, use only the DIAMOND DYES for coloring Dresses, Stockings, Yarns, Carpets, Feathers, Ribbons, &c., &c. We warrant them to color more goods, package for package, than any other dyes ever made, and to give more brilliant and durable colors. Ask for the Diamond and take no other.

A Dress Dyed / A Coat Colored / Garments Renewed } FOR 10 CENTS.

A Child can use them!

At Druggists and Merchants. Dye Book free.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Montreal, P. Q.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt. Established 1864. 72 King-st. E., Toronto

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. ROSS, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas

Leather Belting

BEST VALUE IN THE DOMINION.

F. E. DIXON & CO., MAKERS, 70 KING ST. E, TORONTO

Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES.

Almost as Palatable as Milk.

So disguised that the most delicate stomach can take it. Remarkable as a FLESH PRODUCER. Persons GAIN rapidly while taking IT.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is acknowledged by Physicians to be the FINEST and BEST preparation of its class for the relief of

CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, GENERAL DEBILITY, Wasting Diseases of Children, and CHRONIC COUGHS.

Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

ALMA, THE LEADING CANADIAN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN, St. Thomas, - Ont.

Seventeen graduates and certificated teachers in the faculty. Nearly 200 students last year. Graduating courses in Literature, Music, Fine Arts, Commercial Science and Elocution. Low rates good board thorough work. McLauchlan Hall, costing $20,000, now open. Elegant Dormitories for 60 more students. Address PRINCIPAL AUSTIN, B.D.

LADIES' Dress and Mantle Cutting by this new and improved TAILORS' SQUARES. Satisfaction guaranteed to teach ladies the full art of cutting all garments worn by ladies and children. PROF. SMITH, 540½ Queen St. W., Toronto. Agents Wanted.

Are you Bald. Is your Hair Gray or Falling Out. Try Dr. Dorenwend's GREAT GERMAN HAIR MAGIC. It is the finest in the Hair Tonic world. Price $1 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $5. Try it. It will make your hair grow thick and strong. For sale by all druggists everywhere, or send direct to the manufacturer enclosing the amount. A. DORENWEND, Paris Hair Works, 103 and 105 Yonge Street, Toronto, Can.

CANADA SHIPPING CO.—Beaver Line of Steamships, sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. Saloon tickets, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60. Return tickets, $80, $90, and $110, according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate, $30; Round trip tickets, $60, Steerage, $20, Round trip tickets, $40. For further particulars and to secure births, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

Brown Engines

IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.

TORONTO ENGINE WORKS, PRINCESS AND FRONT STS

J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN. CAPITAL, $5,000,000. HEAD OFFICE, MONTREAL. OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION, Wellington St. Toronto. This Company is prepared to make advances on the security of GOOD FARM PROPERTY at lowest current rate of interest, and on favorable terms. MORTGAGES PURCHASED. For information apply to the Local Agents of the Company, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto, Ont.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS

Don't wait until you are burnt out or robbed Buy a Safe now and sleep easy, and be sure and get prices, etc., of the New Champion Safe S. S. KIMBALL, 577 Craig St., P.O. Box 945, Montreal, P.Q.

Young Men

SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto.

PURE GOLD FLAVORING EXTRACTS BAKING POWDER

BAKING POWDER IS MADE FROM ABSOLUTELY PURE CREAM TARTAR SODA AND FLAVORING EXTRACTS ARE THE STRONGEST PUREST AND BEST.

CANCER TUMORS, ULCERS, SCROFULA, etc, cured permanently without the knife. Apply to DR. W. H. SMITH, 124 Queen St E., Toronto.

Stained Glass

FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

M'CAUSLAND & SON, 76 King St. W., Toronto.

TRY THE CREEBRACED

EMPIRE BLEND COFFEE,

Guaranteed Pure.

Ellis & Keighley, - Toronto.

LADIES, LOOK: BERLIN WOOLS, all colors, 8c per oz.

SHETLAND AND ANDALUSIAN WOOLS, 8c per oz.: Saxony Wool, all colors, 10c per skein; Ice Wool, best quality, 10c per ball; Embroidery Silk, every shade, 10c doz. skeins; Arrasene, all colors, 30c dozen skeins; Filoselle, best quality, 48c and 85c dozen skeins; Macrame Cord, 15 colors, 10c ball; Felt, extra quality, 2 yards wide, $1.00 per yard; Woolen Java Canvas, all colors, 45c yard. Always on hand the newest materials for fancy work, at lowest prices. Letter orders have prompt and careful attention. Goods can be sent to any part of Canada by post. Write for price list. A trial solicited. HENRY DAVIS, Importer, 232 Yonge Street, Toronto. Please mention this paper.

CANADA PERMANENT Loan & Savings Company

INCORPORATED 1855.

Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.

Subscribed Capital.....$ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital.....2,500,000
Total Assets.....10,000,000

The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Port ann every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

WANTED. EVERY MUSIC TEACHER in Canada to send for our SPECIAL CATALOGUES of Sheet Music and Music Books. WE SELL CHEAPER than any other house in the trade. Manufacturers of Band Instruments and Dealers in all kinds of Musical Merchandise. WHALLY, ROYCE & CO., 283 Yonge St., TORONTO.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!! Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILK HANDKERCHEIF and The Magic Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Whiton Novelty

LATE CABLE NEWS

The Egyptian Situation—Uneasy France—Who will be Minister to Washington?—Mr. Bright's Condition.

France can probably boast a more completely mixed-up state of things politically than any nation that is or has been on this earth. For an outsider to attempt to form an opinion as to what will happen is nonsense. A careful study made in Paris during the early part of the week proved to me that the French themselves could [only guess vaguely, and that their guesses were generally wrong. A few months ago they guessed that Boulanger was dead and buried. To-day he is positively a greater man than ever. On last Sunday morning Frenchmen were positive that the Boudin demonstration would be accompanied by bloodshed, but it was about the mildest big political demonstration that I have ever seen in France. The only thing which is perfectly sure is that the present state of things cannot go on, but not one has a good theory as to what state of things will follow. Mr. Dreyfus, a clever writer and a leading member of the Chamber of Deputies, urges war upon Germany as a means of clearing up the troubled atmosphere of France. He says France has spent many millions of francs on her army. Her artillery is the best in Europe, her rifle is superior to every other, and if she is not ready to fight now when will she be, and if she is ready what is she waiting for? He demands that every German shall be turned out of France and the war begun.

As I cabled you two weeks ago, Mr. Bright's illness is incurable, and it is now rapidly reaching its final stages. The congestion has spread to the left lung, and the constitutional disease bearing his own name has become critical. It is pleasant to be able to say that Mr. Bright suffers very little pain, that he has had a touching personal reconciliation with Mr. Gladstone, and, what is more remarkable, is able to have read to him the twelve-column report of the Parnell Commission.

The probability as to who will be U. S. Minister to England when Phelps goes home is much discussed. Chauncey M. Depew is the man most frequently spoken of, but his experience here must have convinced him that the post of Minister is hardly good enough. Should he, however, come over here he will be well received, and have an excellent opportunity of making speeches without limit and entertaining all kinds of interesting people, including the Prince of Wales, who thinks so much of him. There is no doubt that Depew is one of the most popular Americans on this side of the big water.

The Insanity Plea.

Efforts, we see, are being made in Montreal to save Kehoe, the murderer from being hung, on the plea that he is insane. This was to have been expected. It is coming to be mere use and wont now to try and exculpate every ruffian whom liquor or his own unbridled passion, has led to destroy a fellow creature a life, on the ground that he is non compos mentis, and by implication therefore not responsible for his actions. The insanity plea is part of the regular stock in trade of every criminal court lawyer, and the very frequency of its employment discounts one's sense of its moral value, however efficacious it may prove as a technical quibble. Of course it is not desirable to hang a madman, at least it shocks our sensibilities to destroy the life of a human being, because of an act for which presumably he is wholly irresponsible. We would of course destroy a mad dog under such circumstances, but a mad man we think ought at the worst to be imprisoned for the rest of his earthly existence, or at anyrate until there are good grounds for believing him cured of his malady. Without going more deeply into the subject, it may be said in passing that, even on grounds of mercy to the unfortunate wretch himself, apart from the question of protecting the community, something might be urged in favour of putting even an undoubted madman out of existence as speedily as possible. And in cases where the insanity is only possible or probable, it is easy to push the theory of irresponsibility much too far. How would it work in the case of the Whitechapel "fiend" for example? Suppose that being arrested, tried for murder and sentenced to execution. In no case probably has the insanity plea ever been set up with greater plausibility than it could be set up in his case. The creature is undoubtedly mad with a madness born of hell. Would anyone say on that account that he is so irresponsible that his life should be spared, and refuge in an asylum granted him for the remainder of his days? Would there be many deprecating voices raised even were such a being executed within twenty-four hours of his condemnation? This is only an extreme hypothetical case of course of what this insanity plea may issue in. In Kehoe's case no doubt all reasonable enquiry should be made. It would seem hard indeed that he should hang while a brutal wretch like Buckley gets off with the penitentiary; but such are among the anomalies of justice that puzzle us all.

Rebellion in Fornossa.

To her floods and earthquakes, her emigration troubles with foreign nations, and her anxieties about Corea, China now finds a new source of worry added in the uprising in Formosa. It is a coincidence that exactly a century ago, in 1788, the great rebellion broke out in this island, which is said to have cost China 100,000 men and an enormous outlay of money to suppress. And that, though the greatest, was but one of many rebellions which have occurred in Formosa since it became tributary to the Middle Kingdom about two centuries ago. Indeed, the eastern part of the island still claims independence, and wars have often been waged between its savage mountaineers and the Chinese settlements on the western coast aided by the Imperial forces. The present outbreak is in the fertile portions of the west and south, where the Imperial Government has been arranging for heavier taxation, and has thus stirred up both the native population and Chinese settlers. Doubtless the naval and military force which China can bring to bear will eventually suppress the rebellion.

Whales of the Scottish Isles.

Few people would guess the etymology of "ca'ing" when applied to a whale, printed as it was exactly like this in the columns of a weekly contemporary. It is really "ca'ing," the Scotch for calling, that name being given to this species of whale from the curious bleating sound they make. A stranded calf whale has a very pitiful call for its dam, which the latter answers in a harsher tone. The name is really local to the Scottish islands, the proper name being the deductor, the whales being so called because they roam about the sea under the guidance of a leader in the shape of an old bull. In the early spring, just before the breeding season, there is a very keen competition for this office, and more than once the contending bulls have both been known to die from the effects of the encounter.

The whale is not a very large one, being only from sixteen to eighteen feet long; it has occasionally been taken in immense quantities among the shoals and channels of the Hebrides, Orkneys, Shetlands and Fair Isles. When a herd makes its appearance the natives lose no time in collecting all the boats, guns and harpoons which they can lay their hands on. They then try all they can to get seaward of the shoal, and if they succeed endeavor, by advancing with blowing horns, splashing oars, firing guns and shouting, to drive the terrified cetaceans on shore. Once they are stranded a terrific attack is made, and hundreds have been slain in a single battue. The scene is one of the most picturesque it is possible to witness in the north of Scotland. It is quite another affair from the occasional grounding of a Greenland whale, the ca'ing whale being of an entirely different and far more gregarious species.

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR,

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XXXIX.—AFTER LONG GRIEF AND PAIN.

The time to stand upon trifles was past. Let him run the risk of meeting Massinger by the way or not, Warren Relf must needs go round and fetch Elsie to comfort and console poor dying Winifred. He hastened away at the top of his speed to the Villa Rossa. At the door, both girls together met him. Elsie had just returned, basket in hand, from the Avenue Vittorio-Emmanuele, and had learnt from Edie so much of the contents of Warren's hasty letter as had been intended from the first for her edification.

Warren drew her aside gently into the tiny salon, and motioned to Edie not to follow them. Elsie's heart beat high with wonder. She was aware how much it made her pulse quicken to see Warren again—with something more than the mere fraternal greeting she pretended. Her little self-deception broke down at last: she knew she loved him—in an unpractical way; and she was almost sorry she could never, never make him happy.

But Warren's grave face bade her heart stand still for a beat or two next moment. He had clearly something most serious to communicate—something that he knew would profoundly distress her. A womanly alarm came over her with a vague surmise. Could Warren be going to tell her?——Oh no! Impossible. She knew dear Warren too well for that; he at least could never be cruel.

If Warren was going to tell her that, her faith in her kind would die out for ever.

"Well, Warren?" she asked with tremulous eagerness, drawing closer up to him in her sweet womanly confidence, and gazing into his eyes, half afraid, half affectionate. How could she ever have doubted him were it only for a second?

"Elsie," Warren cried, laying his hand with unspoken tenderness on her shapely shoulder, "I want you to come round at once to the pension on the piazza.—It's better to tell it all out at once. Winifred Massinger's come to San Remo, very ill—dying, I fear. She knows you're here, and she's asked to see you."

Elsie's face grew red and then white for a moment, and she trembled visibly. "Is he there?" she asked, after a short pause. Then, with a sudden burst of uncontrollable tears, she buried her face in her hands on the table.

Warren soothed her with his hand tenderly, and leaning over her, told, in haste and in a very low voice, the whole sad story. "I don't think he'll be there," he added at the end. "Mrs. Massinger said she wouldn't allow him to enter the room. But in any case—for that poor girl's sake—you won't refuse to go to her now, will you, Elsie?"

"No," Elsie answered, rising calmly with womanly dignity, to face it all out. "I must go. It would be cruel and wicked of course to shirk it. For Winifred's sake, I'll go in any case. But Warren, before I dare to go"—— She broke off suddenly, and with a woman's impulse held up her pale face to him in mute submission.

A thrill coursed through Warren Relf's nerves; he stooped down and pressed his lips fervently to hers. "Before you go, you are mine then, Elsie!" he cried eagerly.

Elsie pressed his hand faintly in reply. "I am yours, Warren," she answred at last very low, after a short pause. "But I can't be yours as you wish it for a long time yet. No matter why. I shall be yours in heart.—I couldn't have gone on any other terms. And with that, I think, I can go and face it."

At the pension, Hugh had already brought the English doctor, who went in alone to look after Winifred. Hugh had tried to accompany him into the bedroom; but Winifred, true to her terrible threat, lifted one stern forefinger before his swimming eyes and cried out "Never!" in a voice so doggedly determined that Hugh slank away abashed into the anteroom.

The English doctor stopped for several minutes in consultation, and Winifred spoke to him simply and unreservedly, about her husband.

"Send that man away!" she cried, pointing to Hugh, as he stood still peering across from the gloom of the doorway. "I won't have him in here to see me die! I won't have him in here! It makes me worse to see him about the place. I hate him!—I hate him!"

"You'd better go," the doctor whispered softly, looking him hard in the face with his inquiring eyes. "She's in a very excited, hysterical condition. She's best alone, with only the women. A husband's presence often does more harm than good in such nervous crises. Nobody should be near to increase her excitement.—Have the kindness to shut the door, if you please. You needn't come back for the present, thank you."

And then Winifred unburdened once more her poor laden soul in convulsive sobs. "I want to see Elsie! I want to see Elsie!"

"Miss Challoner!" the doctor asked suggestively. He knew her well as the tenderest and best of amateur nurses.

Winifred explained to him with broken little cries and eager words that she wished to see Elsie in Hugh's absence.

At the end of five minutes' soothing talk, the doctor read it all to the very bottom with professional acuteness. The poor girl was dying. Her husband and she had never got on. She hungered and thirsted for human sympathy. Why not gratify her yearning little soul? He stepped back into the bare and dingily lighted sitting-room. "I think," he said persuasively to Hugh, with authoritative suggestion, "your wife would be all the better in the end if she were left entirely alone with the womenkind for a little. Your presence here evidently disturbs and excites her. Her condition's critical, distinctly critical. I won't conceal it from you. She's over fatigued with the journey and with mental exhaustion. The slightest aggravation of the hysterical symptoms might carry her off at any moment. If I were you, I'd stroll out for an hour. Lounge along by the shore or up the hills a bit. I'll stop and look after her. She's quieter now. You needn't come back for at least an hour."

Hugh knew in his heart it was best so. Winifred hated him, not without cause. He took up his hat, crushed it fiercely on his head, and strolling down by himself to the water's edge, sat in the listless calm of utter despair on a bare bench in the cool fresh air of an Italian evening. He thought in a hopeless, helpless, irresponsible way about poor dead Elsie and poor dying Winifred.

Five minutes after Hugh had left the "pension," Warren Relf and Elsie mounted the big centre staircase and knocked at the door of Winifred's bare and dingy salon. The "patron" had already informed them that the signor was gone out, and that the signora was up in her room alone with the woman of the hotel and the English doctor.

Warren Relf remained by himself in the ante-room. Elsie went in unannounced to Winifred.

Oh the joy and relief of that final meeting! The poor dying girl rose up on the bed with a bound to greet her. A sudden flush crimsoned her sunken cheeks. As her eyes rested once more upon Elsie's face—that earnest, serious, beautiful face she had loved and trusted—every shadow of her fear and misery faded from her look, and she cried aloud in a fever of delight: "O Elsie, Elsie, I'm glad you've come. I'm glad to hold your hand in mine again; now I die happy!"

Elsie saw at a glance that she spoke the truth. That bright red spot in the centre of each wan and pallid cheek told its own sad tale with unmistakable eloquence. She flung her arms fervently round her feeble little friend. "Winnie, Winnie!" she love some one else now. I've given my heart away at last, and I've given it to a better man than Hugh Massinger."

"Then why won't you wait and help me to see him?" Winifred cried once more in her fiery energy.

"Because—I'm ashamed. I can't look him in the face; that's all, Winnie."

Winnifred clung to her like a frightened child to its mother's skirts. "Elsie," she burst out, with childish vehemence, "stop with me now to the end! Don't ever leave me!"

Elsie's heart sank deep into her bosom. A horrible dread possessed her soul. She saw one ghastly possibility looming before them that Winifred never seemed to recognise. Hugh kept her letters, her watch, her relics. Suppose he should come and—recognizing her at once—betray his surviving passion for herself before poor dying Winifred! She dared hardly face so hideous a chance. And yet, she couldn't bear to untwine herself from Winifred's arms, that clung so tight and so tenderly around her. There was no time to lose, however: she must make up her mind. "Winifred," she murmured, laying her head close down by the dying girl's, "I'll do as you say. I'll see Hugh. As long as you live, I'll never leave you!"

Winnifred loosed her arms one moment again, and then flung them in a fresh access of feverish fervour round her recovered friend—her dear beautiful Elsie. "You'll stay here," she cried through her sobs and tears; "you'll help me to tell Hugh I forgive him?"

"I'll stop here," Elsie answered low, "and I'll help you to forgive him."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Remedy for Drought.

Capain Pierce, in his address on Silos and Ensilage, before the Farmers' Congress, in Kansas city last week, said some things which, if there is half as much in them as he thinks there is, are well worth not only study, but general application. He referred to a field of his own corn that was being injured seriously by dry weather. He did not care to take any risks on the weather's account, so he set hands to work cutting up the corn and putting it in the silo. He is now feeding that corn to his cattle, and it is as good feed as any he has. He said that if he had left the corn standing in the field, it would have so dried out as to be comparatively worthless.

Judging from his own experience in this case, he believes that farmers in the western part of Kansas, if they would prepare silos, could save every bit of their corn in dry seasons by doing just as he did in this case. He is now getting the full value of a fair corn crop that would have been of but little worth had he not saved it as he did.

This matter is worth more than a passing notice. There is a great deal in it, or there is nothing, and the personal experience of a man like Captain Pierce, who is feeding cattle in large numbers, is entitled to great weight. He fed five head of cattle last winter on the corn which had grown on one acre of ground. The stocks were cut up when the corn was in dough, and put in silo. He used a little hay and straw with the ensilage. A silo is not hard to make, and it need not be expensive. The secret of success in preserving green food is in keeping air and water out of it. A silo may be made under ground or above ground; it must be strong, and the ground must be well drained. An excavation on a side hill is a good place, but it may be built wholly above the ground. A strong framework tightly lined with boards, tight enough to keep out the air, is all that is needed. The stalks of corn ought to be cut into short pieces by a cutting machine, but where that is not convenient, lay them down straight in the silo in such manner as to get the most in, and then tramp it solid as the filling is done. When the silo is full, cover the stalks over well with hay or straw, then lay boards on that the right length to reach fully across the silo and just short enough to slip down inside as the corn settles. Cover the whole this way, then throw a few pieces of scantling across the boards and put a heavy weight on. Rocks or earth may be used for weighing. Let it be heavy, say 300 pounds to the square yard. Some persons do not use weights, they simply cover well with grass or similar substance and let it got. But Captain Pierce began with weights and he advises their use.—[Kansas Farmer.

Coal Oil Johnny's Bootblack.

On the Oil Creek flats between Titusville and Oil City is situated the famous farm that proved to be such a mine of wealth to the late John Steele, or "Coal Oil Johnny," as he was better known. The wonderful wells that spouted their streams of wealth into the lap of the giddy youth ceased to flow many years ago, and the farm was long considered valueless for oil purposes. With the later improved methods of producing oil, however, the old place is being reclaimed and is once more figuring among the valuable oil farms of the region. It is now owned by J. W. Wait, who was a street urchin at Rouseville, a mile from the farm, when "Coal Oil Johnny" was in the zenith of his wild career. As a boy, young Wait frequently blacked Johnny Steele's boots, or held his team, and received for the service anywhere from $5 to $50, whatever happened to suit the whim of the spendthrift, who believed there was no end to his suddenly acquired riches. It was not many years til. "Coal Oil Johnny" was a labourer, working for a dollar a day. There are about a dozen new wells drilled on the place, and every one of them is profitable. The place will make young Wait a rich man. He has been operating the property about a year and values it at $60,000. He has a production of 1,600 barrels a month.

The Sacredness of Seven.

Undoubtedly seven is the sacred number. There are seven days of creation; after seven days' respite the flood came; the years of famine and plenty were in cycles of seven; every seventh day was a sabbath; every seventh year the sabbath of rest; after seven times seven years came the jubilee; the feasts of unleavened bread and of tabernacles were observed seven days; the golden candlestick had seven branches; seven priests with seven trumpets, surrounded Jericho seven times and seven times the seventh day; Jacob obtained his wives by servitudes of seven years; Samson kept his nuptials seven days, and on the seventh day he put a riddle to his wife, and he was bound with seven green withes, and seven locks of his hair were shaved off; Nebuchadnezzar was seven years a beast; Shadrach and his two companions in misfortune were cast into a furnace heated seven times hotter than it was wont. In the New Testament nearly everything occurs by sevens, and at the end of the sacred volume we read of seven churches, seven candlesticks, seven spirits, seven trumpets, seven seals, seven stars, seven thunders, seven vials, seven plagues, seven angels and a seven-headed monster Such are merely a few instances of the sacred use of the number, whose employment in this connection seems common to all nations and all religions.—[Christian Observer.

Gladstone and Divorce.

Mr. Gladstone does not agree with Mrs. Caird—who, by the way, has concluded in the "Westminster" her dissertions on the marriage question—that husbands and wives ought to be able to divorce themselves. He "holds by the law of the whole Western Church, which teaches marriage to be indissoluble." It is refreshing to find that on one question, at all events, Mr. Gladstone remains immovable as a rock. If any Radical member of Parliament, say Mr. Labouchere, attempts to pass a bill to make divorce more easy, he will therefore have to encounter the formidable hostility of the leader of the Opposition.

Gen. Louis E. F. Salomon, the fugitive President of Hayti, is six feet four inches tall, weighs 300 pounds, and is perfectly proportioned. He is of pure African blood and his skin is almost jet black, while his hair is white with age. He is finely educated, and is noted for his charm of manner and brilliancy of conversation.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

FASHION NOTES.

Milliners include among their many charming accessories fancy muffs that match the dress-bonnet designed for the opera, theatre, etc. These muffs are very elaborate and variously shaped. Birds, feathers, ribbons, buckles, metal galloons, and ornaments of cut steel, jet, gold, silver, and bronze, are used in the construction of what appear to be less articles intended to secure warmth than ornamental adjuncts to dressy toilettes. However, for special occasions, these trifles, even with the thermometer at zero, are not to be sneezed at. Imagination certainly keeps out a great deal of cold, and these little finger-cosies are at least a visible means of comfort, if they do but little real service. The larger fur muffs are certainly best for general and useful wear.

Pretty easy gowns for home wear show the back closely fitted with the waist cut off just an inch or so below the the belt. To this is shirred or pleated full breadths of the dress fabric. The fronts are like a long half-fitting Directoire redingote, and are very often of entirely different material and pattern from the back drapery or even the back of the bodice. These fronts open over a skirt that is shirred three or four inches from the belt down. A shirred waist or a shirred yoke, with a blouse effect below, shows on the front of the open redingote. The sleeves match the back drapery in kind, and the easy gown as a whole, though made up of two or three fabrics or dress remnants, is a pretty and very becoming success. We have in mind, as we affirm this, a picturesque "easy gown" made after this fashion by a wealthy young lady with a decided taste and genius for dressmaking, who, making use of the best portions of a wine satin gown and another of wine satin with a velvet stripe, constructed the above-mentioned frock with these materials and the aid of a perfect-fitting Directoire polonaise, which she changed and modified to suit her own particularly beautiful figure and charming fancy.

Not only are most of the low bodices of rich evening toilettes made differently on each side, but very many of them are made with each side of the front of a different color; for example, one London gown has a a shirred bodice piece of golden-green crepe de China starting low on the right shoulder. This is carried diagonally to the left side and shirred to the belt. There are no darts, but the bias goods is drawn over the fitted silk lining to fit like a glove. Draped from the left shoulder is a width of exquisitely beautiful old-rose lace, which is also arranged to define the figure perfectly. A green and gold shot satin gown brocaded with pink roses in raised velvet has one side of the the bodice draped with gold lace. The opposite side of the brocade, with a Mousquetaire revers of green velvet overlaid with embroidered pink roses, buds, and foliage. The V-shaped necks are so becoming that they will remain in favour, while many toilettes are square in front and pointed at the back. Many of the magnificent Pompadour dresses of stately satin brocade are cut square both front and back. Other brocaded gowns have low round necks that are cut with a modest depth, just showing the top of the shoulders.

ONE OF THE RICHEST SOVEREIGNS.

The little Princess of the Netherlands, when she becomes Queen of Holland, will be one of the richest sovereigns, if not the richest sovereign, in Europe. The civil list of Holland, which is secured on the revenues of Borneo, is very large—£3,000,000 per annum, it is said. The Duchy of Luxembourg passes to the Grand Duke of Nassau, and then becomes a portion of the German Empire, but the Kingdom of Holland, not coming under the operation of the Salic law, descends to the King's little daughter. She is a bright, intelligent, clever child, with a good deal of character and determination. The marriage of the King and Queen, despite the disparity of age, has been a very happy one.

WELL-PAID LITERARY LADIES.

The Pall Mall Gazette announces that "the largest sum ever given to a woman for any single story" has just been paid to Mrs. Hodgson Burnett in America, the amount being £3,750. It is a pity that such nonsense should be printed. George Eliot received £7,000 for "Romola," and her gains from "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," and "Middlemarch" were even more considerable. Many women have received larger sums than £3,750 for a story, and more than a hundred years ago Miss Burney was paid £2,000 for "Cecilia."

"MADAME" NATHALIE.

About two hundred packing cases and trunks, containing Queen Nathalie's personal effects, have been sent to Jersey, where her Majesty is going to stay. The King has kept nothing belonging to the Queen, and has even restored all the presents that were given to their majesties jointly. The letter in which the Servian Legation at Belgrade notified the divorce to the Queen was addressed "Madame Nathalie de Keschko, and orders have been given to the Legation to use no other style in official communications with the ex Queen.

GOSSIP.

The oldest female professional thief in the country is May Fitzgerald, now in the Tombs at New York and eighty years of age. She has spent the greater portion of the last sixty years in prison. She was arrested one day last week for picking pockets, and made a desperate fight for liberty. She began her wicked career at eleven years of age.

Leap year is nearly past, and with it the proverbial opportunity for the so-called "unappropriated." But every year seems to be a leap year across in Bulgaria. Mrs. Nathaniel Conklin in "From Flax to Linen" quotes a Bulgarian missionary as saying that in his country the girls ask the important question as frequently as the young men, and he also intimates, on further inquiry, that he has himself had the opportunity to decline two proposals. What a rare country Bulgaria must be!

An Indiana lady is the proud possessor of General Harrison's recipe for salad dressing, and here it is just as he wrote it out at her request:—"For each person four teaspoonfuls of oil, and a little more; one and one half of vinegar, a salt-spoonful of salt, one of black pepper, two of dry mustard and a pinch of red-pepper. The dry materials mix first, then put in the oil and last the vinegar; add a shred of garlic and a pinch of celery salt." The general is a lover of all kinds of salads, and if there is anything green on his table he proceeds to transform it into a salad, mixing the dressing himself according to the above preparations.

A golden crown, beautifully gemmed and which was worn by some of the most notable, titled women in France, is being exhibited in Philadelphia. It is massive, ablaze with diamonds and torquoises and was made in 1820 by the Crown jeweller of France for the Duchess de Berri. In the centre of the front is a torquoise about the size of a pigeon's egg, and the same kind of jewels are spread over the surface all round. About these are scrolls of gold, in which are set diamonds 200 in number. The diadem is valued at $75,000, and after the Duchess' death it passed to the head of the Duchess D'Angouleme, and was subsequently worn by the Empress Eugenie.

The City of Chicago employs 1,600 teachers, of whom only 70 are males. The women teachers generally begin as cadets or monitors and receive for assisting in the same room with a regular teacher 75 cents a day. After some experience of this kind they get appointments for absent or sick teachers at $1.50 per day. Those who display aptitude are appointed on the regular staff at $400 per annum. This salary is increased by efficiency and experience in six years to $750. A woman who becomes a principal of a grammar school will receive at least $1,100. The highest salary paid a lady principal is $2,175 per annum.

Hero of the Rail.

The locomotive engineer is the popular "hero of the rail," and the popular estimate in this respect is substantially just. Others have to brave dangers and perform duties under trying circumstances, but the engine runner has to ride in the most dangerous part of the train, take charge of a steam boiler that may explode and blow him to atoms, and of machinery that may break and kill him, and try to keep up a vigilance which only a being more than human could successfully maintain. He must be a tolerably skilful machinist—he cannot be too good—and have nerves that will remain steady under the most trying circumstances. If running a fast express through mid night darkness over a line where a similar train has been tipped off a precipice (and a brother runner killed) by train wreckers the night before, he must dash forward with the same confidence that he would feel in broad daylight on an open prairie. But he does not "heroically grasp the throttle" in the face of danger, when the throttle has been already shut, nor does he "whistle down brakes" in order to add a stirring element to the reporter's tale, when by the magic of the air brake he can, with a turn of his hand, apply every brake in the train with the grip of a vise in less time than it would take him to reach the whistle pull.

When there is danger ahead there is generally just one thing to do, and that is to stop as soon as possible. An instant suffices for shutting off the steam and applying the brake. With modern trains this is all that is necessary or can be done. Reversing the engine is necessary on many engines, and formerly was on all; this would, in fact, be done instinctively by old runners, in any case, but this also is done in a second. After taking these measures there is nothing for the engineman to do but look out for his own safety. In some circumstances, as in the case of a partially burned bridge which may possibly support the train even in a weakened condition, it may be best to put on all steam. The runner is then in a dilemma, and a right decision is a matter of momentary inspiration. Many lives have been saved by quick witted runners in such cases, but there is no ground for censure of the engineer, who in the excitement of the moment, decides to slacken instead of quicken his speed. The rare cases of this kind are what show the value of experience, and of men of the right temperament and degree of intelligence to acquire experience lessons readily.

PROBABILITIES OF ACCIDENT.

But the terrible cloud constantly hanging over the engineer and fireman of a fast train is the chance of encountering an obstacle which cannot possibly be avoided, and which leaves them no alternative but to jump for their lives, if indeed it does not take away even that. To the fact that this cloud is no larger than it is, and that these men have sturdy and courageous natures must be attributed the lightness with which it rests upon them. On one road or another, from a washout, or inefficient management, or a collision caused by an operator's forgetfulness, or some one of a score of other causes, there are constantly occurring cases of men heroically meeting death under the most heartrending circumstances. Every month records a number of such, though happily they are not frequent on any one road.

On the best of roads a freight train wrecked by a broken wheel under a borrowed car may be thrown in the path of a passenger train on another track just as the latter approaches. This has happened more than once lately. No amount of fidelity or forethought (except in the maker of wheels) can prevent this kind of disaster. There is constant danger on most roads of running off the track at misplaced switches, many switches being located at points where the runner can see them only a few seconds before he is upon them; but the chance is so small—perhaps one in ten or a hundred thousand—that the average runner forgets it, and it is only by severe self-discipline that he can hold himself up to compliance with the rule which requires him to be on the watch for every switch target as long before reaching it as he possibly can. He finds the switches all right and the road perfectly clear so regularly, day after day and month after month, that he may easily fall into the snare of thinking that they will always be so. But, like other tasimen, the engineman finds enough more agreeable thoughts to fill his mind, and reflects upon the hazards of his vocation perhaps too little.

Mr. Parnell's Leading Cousel.

Sir Charles Russell, ex-Attorney-General and leading counsel for Mr. Parnell, has a well-known trick of driving a point home to a jury which is inimitable by any other advocate. He begins to lead up to it with his right hand in his tail-pocket, under his gown. Thence he extracts a snuffbox, transfers it to his left hand, opens it, takes a pinch between the finger and thumb of his right, and with the box still in his left hand, and the pinch still in transitu, he makes his point unerringly, so that it reaches his hearers' minds at the precise moment at which the pinch reaches its destination. Then, with an inimitable flourish of a red and yellow bandanna, the oratorical effort is complete. But to be properly appreciated it must be seen.

The Diplomatic Incident.

Cablegram from Minister to Premier: Very awkward this ("strictly private") telegram of Minister. Well-intentioned, but ill-timed. Please do something. Cablegram of Minister to Premier (an hour later): Have sent Minister his passports. Cablegram from President to Premier (an hour later); Sending out declaration of war by next mail. Cablegram from President to Premier (an hour later): At Cabinet Council just held decreed the immediate annexation of Canada and Australia, and the speedy invasion of India. Cablegram from President to Premier (a week later): Election over. Rulled it through. Countermanded annexation and invasion. Sorry Minister has gone. Give him my kind regards. Calculate you may consider this incident at an end.—[Punch.

NEW YORK CITY.

The Rev. R. Heber Newton, at All Saints' Church, in West Forty-eighth street preached one of his strongest sermons Sunday morning, taking as his theme New York city.

"I remember," he said, speaking generally of cities, "standing in Paris after the Communal uprising, looking at the destruction that had been wrought and thinking of the scenes of anguish enacted there. But there is in this city to day a strife going on worse than any in the Commune of Paris. There is the strife of life with all its pathos, which we do not see or hear, and I ask you to contemplate it with me.

"There is enough to move us in this great city. Consider the vast concourse of human beings going to and fro, every individual with the pathos of life in him or her. I have stood many a time watching the throng go by. There is one going to her home with a saddened heart, another with love awaiting her there, still another to find the great shadow of death hovering over it—a little boy lying sick, with his pitiful cry of pain. And I have looked into another woman's face showing degradation and want. There is a young girl going her way exchanging glances with strangers. It is like a drama.

HUMAN STAR DUST.

"I always think of a great city like New York as of the great sun which is fed by the star dust of heaven. The sun lives by consuming that star dust. A city like our own exists on the human star dust and feeds upon it. From distant valleys and mountains and from the prairies of the great West men and women, not content with the dull routine of the country and fired with ambition, pour in a continuous stream of human star dust, feeding this immense metropolis. These human beings come with sunny hopes, but it is the old story—the weary waiting, the dying out of the hope and the final sinking to a standard of life pitiful to behold. Some return to the country homes to begin anew the old life, others remain here to begin a life of vice. And from the old countries, too, the streams of human life are pouring in from France and Italy and Germany and England. A large proportion stay here, their beautiful dreams dispelled, to die, or return with a broken heart.

"Consider the great social drama that is being played—tragedies going on that no Shakespeare could ever picture. All is light and beauty on the surface, but look below and what misery is there! I go down town and look at your vast exchanges of commerce. What a marvel of life they are! Railroads and steamers bringing in examples of the wealth, skill and power of other commercial centres to develop this great city! But within those great exchanges I see the trials and struggles which make life a burden, breaking down strong men, who fall before their time; taking away from them all opportunity for intellectual culture, and dulling the conscience and relegating them to a lower standard of life. There is a story going on in every one of those exchanges. What profit is it to a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?

INDOLENT WOMEN.

"Seeing the long lines of carriages in the evening, my imagination runs faster than the horses. I see women in the lap of indolence, breathing out a wasted life. I see a couple sitting down at the evening meal scarce exchanging a word. In another house I see the skeleton in the closet. Then think of the poverty of a great city like ours in descending grades. There is quiet and respectable poverty. Its nearest neighbour knows nothing of it. There is the poverty of the professional classes, and so on down until we reach the uttermost strata, where we meet want, hopeless and degraded poverty. Think of it till your sympathies are turned to practical account. Think of the sickness and suffering that grow out of this poverty. Think of the ten thousand saloons, centres of sin and misery. Many of them, I grant, are respectable, but yet they are the centres of untold suffering, misery and degradation. Think of these fallen women and remember that they were once pure. Their life means shame, remorse, sickness, suffering, in the end death. You tell me that pitiful is not the word for these poor things.

"Think of the children growing up under these abnormal conditions. Go into the outskirts of the city and see the boys and girls growing up with hard faces, the mark of the beast upon them even in childhood.

"Why do I speak of these things? To harrow up your souls? No. You weep over them. Well, you went to the play last night, wept over the drama you saw, but afterward went to a restaurant to supper and then to sleep, and when you arose you forgot it all. As a matter of stern, hard fact, what are you doing to mitigate the great evils of this city? What individual man or women are you helping?"

The Coming Eclipse.

The eclipse of the sun which will occur on January 1, 1889, is looked forward to with a great deal of interest, as it will present another opportunity for astronomers to establish by observational proof the probable existence of an inter-mercurial planet. The line of totality will pass through the northern portion of California, the point of greatest duration being a short distance to the north of San Francisco. Already active preparations are being made to view the phenomena. Prof. Pickering of Harvard College, will have charge of one party. The astronomers from the Lick Observatory will also be on hand, and it is understood that Dr. Lewis Swift, of Warner Observatory, will be located within the limits of the line of totality and be prepared to search for inter-mercurial planets.

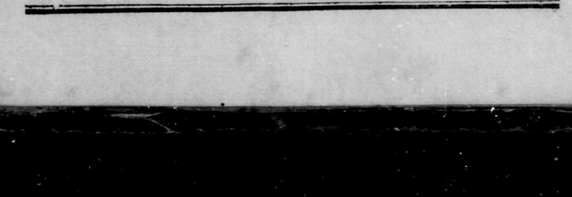
Carper: "Are you making notes of what you will touch upon to-night?' Wyley (a political speaker): "No; I am making notes of what I musn't touch upon. The successful orator is he who knows what not to say, and has brains enough not to say it."

FACTS FOR MEN OF ALL AGES!

DISEASES OF MEN.

M. V. LUBON'S SPECIFIC No. 8

CURES The terrible consequences of Indiscretion, Exposure and Overwork.



YOUNG, MIDDLE-AGED, AND OLD MEN

Who are broken down from the effects of abuse will find in No. 8 a radical cure for nervous debility, organic weakness, involuntary vital losses, etc.

Symptoms for which No. 8 should be used:—Want of energy, vertigo, want of purpose, dimness of sight, aversion to society, want of confidence, avoidance of conversation, desire for solitude, listlessness and inability to fix the attention on a particular subject, cowardice, depression of spirits, giddiness, loss of memory, excitability of temper, spermatorrhœa, or loss of the seminal fluid—the result of self-abuse, or marital excess—impotency, immutrition, emaciation, barrenness, palpitation of heart, hysteric feelings in females, trembling, melancholy, disturbing dreams, etc., are all symptoms of this terrible habit, oftentimes innocently acquired. In short the spring or vital force having lost its tension, every function wanes in consequence. Scientific writers and the superintendents of insane asylums unite in ascribing to the effects of self-abuse the great majority of wasted lives which come under their notice. If you are incompetent for the arduous duties of business, incapacitated for the enjoyments of life, No. 8 offers an escape from the effects of early vice. If you are advanced in years, No. 8 will give you full vigor and strength. If you are broken down, physically and mentally, from early indiscretions, the result of ignorance and folly, send your address for Lubon's Treatise, entitled "CHRONIQUE SCANDALEUSE," an account of follies and vices. This book will be sent sealed and secure from observation upon receipt of two 3c stamps.

Address all communications to M. V. LUBON,

47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

-:- YOU WILL FIND -:-

Urlin Bros., Dutton,

AND

A. D. Urlin's, Wallacetown,

HEADQUARTERS FOR

Christmas & Wedding Presents.

:o:

NO LARGER, BETTER OR CHEAPER STOCK OF

GROCERIES

was ever shown in this section. Teas, Sugars, Syrups, Currants, Raisins, Dates and Figs, Candied Peels, Etc., Etc.

:o:

A CHOICE LOT OF CHINA AND GLASSWARE.

New Patterns in China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Vases, China Cups and Saucers, Mugs, and a Fine Lot of Fancy Goods that are Very Cheap.

Immense Stock of TOYS and Fancy Goods for the Children.

:o:

HARDWARE OF ALL KINDS.

Cow Ties, Crosscut Saws, Axes, Lanterns, and a Full Line of Carpenters' Tools. TINWARE of All Kinds.

☞ A Job Lot of Table Knives and Forks at Half Price.

A Large Assortment of SILVER AND PLATED WARE. Cake and Cruet Stands, Pickle Dishes, Butter Dishes, Sugar Bowls, Spoon Holders, Cream Pitchers, and a choice lot of Fancy Goods which are both useful and ornamental.

:o:

—A FULL STOCK OF—

BOOTS & SHOES, OVERSHOES & RUBBERS

AT ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.

:o:

A call will convince you that you can get good value in every line we handle.

No trouble to show goods. Highest price paid for produce.

URLIN BROS., Dutton.

A. D. URLIN, Wallacetown.

THE PEOPLE'S POPULAR CASH STORE.

HOCKIN & POOL.

Bill of Fare for Christmas Week.

In order to make things lively for Xmas we have marked All Lines of Goods Away Down. Note the following prices:--

Dress Goods worth 50cts.	for	25cts.
" " " 40cts.	"	20cts.
" " " 25cts.	"	12½c.
" " " 15cts.	"	8cts.
Factory Cotton (yd. wide)	"	4cts.
White " "	"	5cts.
Canton Flannels	"	6½cts.
Grey Flannels	"	12½cts.
Crash Towelings -	"	4cts.
Ladies' Mantles worth $3	"	$1.00
Men's Heavy Shirts & Drawer		25c.
Ulster Cloth worth $2.50	for	$1.00
Ladies' Astrachan Jackets	"	$20.00
Mink Sets Cheap.
Persian Lamb Sets Cheap.
Men's Overcoats worth $7	for	$3.50.
" " " $10	"	5.00.
Men's Pea Jackets 7	"	4.00.
Boys' Suits at All Prices.
Boys' Overcoats, All Sizes.
Men's Felt Hats worth $1.50	for	25c.
A Good Trimmed Hat for 50cts.
Ladies' Buttoned Shoes for $1.00.

CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Glass Sets, 8 pieces, at 25cts.
Glass Cake Stands, 25cts.
Glass Fruit Dishes, Breakfa s Se s, Dinner Sets, Tea Sets, Bedroom Sets---all at Close Prices.

We show the Largest and Cheapest Stock of these goods in the west.

We are the only house that you can buy those SATIN GLASS NOVELTIES from, direct from Europe.

OUR LARGE STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

REDUCED IN PRICE.

GROCERIES.

NEW RAISINS.
NEW CURRANTS.
NEW PEELS.
NEW FIGS.
NEW TEAS.

Price our Groceries. Goods delivere promptly.

Call xamine our Goods before you buy. HOCKIN & POOL.

DUTTON, DECEMBER 20, 1888.

WEEKLY WEAVINGS.

READ our new advts. this week.

SATURDAY, snow; Sunday, rain; Monday, mud.

C. W. ALLEN has repaired his house on Mary street.

THE ground was again covered with snow on Tuesday.

MRS. MCLACHLIN, nee Hollingshead, of Brantford, is paying her people a visit.

JOHN BLACK, judge, of Port Huron, is visiting his brother, A N. C. Black, of this place.

THE Sabbath schools are making great preparations for their annual entertainments.

MR. HOLLINGSHEAD has large orders for flour, and is paying $1 per bushel for wheat this week.

LET each aspirant to municipal office place an address to the electors in the next issue of the ENTERPRISE.

ED. KNIGHT, of the Dutton High School, is teaching the school at Iona Station the latter three days of this week.

ARTHUR LEITCH who had his leg broken while playing football, is able to get around a little with the aid of crutches.

MR. WHITE, tinsmith, is putting a tin roof on the new brick building which A. J. Leitch is building between the butcher and harness shops.

THE liabilities of the firm of H S. McCall & Co., of West Lorne, which lately assigned, are estimated at $5,000. The stock is said to be worth $5,000, and the book debts as much more.

THE London Police Magistrate sentenced Harry Goodwin to one year and four months in the Central Prison Thursday for breaking into Hertel's store in November last and stealing a number of articles of clothing.

PREACHING service in the Methodist Church morning and evening next Sabbath. Mr. W S. Jackson will preach in the morning and the Rev. Mr. Middleton will preach the school anniversary sermon in the evening. The usual entertainment will be held on Christmas night.

THIS issue is the the last number of Vol. VII of the ENTERPRISE. We publish only one more number before giving up possession to our successor. We trust our patrons will stick right to him and give him their work and influence, as he is a practical and agreeable young man.

FOR SALE.—Desirable village property. The lot and building which is now used as the ENTERPRISE office, with convenient dwelling in connection. The property corners Nancy and Shackleton streets, has plenty of hard and soft water and a quantity of small fruit tress, newly planted. Apply to N. PHELPS.

J. T. SIFTON has moved to Dutton from Wallacetown.

MR. J. CULLEN, furniture dealer, late of Rodney, has moved to Wallacetown and started in business.

LEAP year is fast drawing to a close, and the girls must speak within this month or hold their peace (unless asked) for four years more.

INSURE your buildings in the Waterloo Mutual. Risks taken on the cash or mutual systems. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. N. PHELPS, agent.

MR. HOLLINGSHEAD is attending a meeting of the Presbytery in Barrie this week in connection with the call to a minister given by the Dutton congregation.

DON'T forget that you can buy a quarter of beef cheaper than you can a pound at the Dutton Meat Emporium. --JAS. BAKE.

NOMINATION will be held in Brown's hall, Dutton, on Monday, 31st., and the election on the Monday following, Jan. 7. Two polling places will be held in Dutton for the benefit of the villagers.

F. A. HUMPIDGE, of the firm of Humpidge & Graham, stave manufacturers, has invented a barrel-hoop machine, with two knives, which will cut two hoops while other machines are cutting one. He has made application for a patent in Canada and the United States.

INFORMATIONS have been made by Police Magistrate Leonard, charging D. Paterson, of Rodney; I McIntyre, Dutton, and Augustus Decew, of Eagle, who were fined $50 and costs for a first offence, Oct. 21st, and James Bowlby of Talbotville, with second violation of the act.

HUGH FINLAYSON who worked in Dutton as a painter two years ago, was arrested in Blenheim last week charged with an unnatural crime on two little girls aged six and ten years. The prisoner cut through the six inch stone wall of the lock up during the night and escaped and has not yet been found. During his short stay in Dutton Finlayson succeeded in securing for himself an unenviable reputation through "wine and women."

AS we stated last week, we have sold the ENTERPRISE printing plant and will give up the publishing business at the end of the present year. We would ask our subscribers and patrons to cling to Mr. Sutherland, as he is a man of means and ability. We believe he purposs enlarging the ENTERPRISE, and will be fully able to meet their wants in job work of every description. To those who are in arrears on subscription and desire to bring wood or settle with the present proprietor in any way they will have to do so before the end of this year, as we will place the list in other hands on that date We desire all who owe accounts to this office in any way to settle before Friday, 28th inst.

THE ETRANCE EXAMINATION.—The examination of candidates for entrance to the High School will begin on Wednesday of this week, the 19th inst., and continue throughout Thursday and Friday. The subjects will be taken up in the following order:—First day, literature and writing; second day, arithmetic, drawing, composition, dictation; third day, grammar, geography, history Reading is to be taken up at such time as may suit the convenience of the examiners. Special attention is called to the fact that candidates will be required to exhibit drawing book No. 5 of the Public School course.

THE BEST.—The highest praise can be freely given to the Christmas edition of the Montreal Star, which eclipses all previous efforts in the same line attempted in Canada. The letter-press work is suchas maketh glad the heart of a printer, the paper used being of the very best quality, the presswork good and the type most artistically arranged. The engravings are also excellent, the whole number being highly creditable to the enterprise and taste of the publishers. It is just the publication for Canadians to send to friends at a distance, as it will convey a good idea of what can be done by Canadians.

FOLLOWING out their practice of giving an entertainment at the close of the school term, the High School scholars gave an entertainment in Leitch's hall on Tuesday evening. The hall was crowded, owing, no doubt, to no admisson being charged at the door. A number of the participants were conspicuous by their absence, but the entertainment was, nevertheless, very acceptable, the recitations by Miss McIntyre being especially well received A very interesting feature was the presentation to the teachers of handsome gifts, Mr. Rothwell receiving an easy chair, Mr. Tremeer a handsome volume of poems, and Mr. Dales a toilet set.

WE have received a copy of the beautiful premium, "Falls of Niagara," photo-lithographed and copyrighted by the publishers of the Western Advertiser, London, Ont. They give this picture absolutely free to every subscriber The premium is alone worth the amount of the subscription, but the Advertiser is bound to keep its position as being the most largely-circulated journal in Ontario Its circulation is now more than double that of any other Ontario journal outside of the Toronto press, while its numerous editions daily —Morning, Noon and Evening—are circulated far and wide. We are assured that the combined circulation of the Advertiser is larger at present than ever before. It has a prosperous look about it and deserves its increased success.

ST. THOMAS MARKETS.

Wheat	$ 95 to $1 00
Barley	50 to 50
Peas	55 to 58
Oats	30 to 32
Potatoes (per bag)	40 to 50
Hay (per ton)	10 00 to 13 00
Butter	22 to 25
Eggs	23 to 25
Pork	6 50 to 6 75

HERTEL,

Merchant - Tailor

EAST SIDE MAIN ST., DUTTON.

NEW IMPORTED

FALL -:- GOODS

My stock is very extensive with Elegant Fall Goods. Special attention has been directed towards securing the most complete and varied assortments of

New Suitings!
New Trouserings!
New Overcoatings!

Ever Displayed in this Village.

A visit is solicited from those who wish a

NEAT AND ELEGANT SUIT

—OR A

STYLISH AND PERFECT-FITTING

FALL OVERCOAT.

Money can be saved by leaving your order with me. None but first-class work turned out. Best of Trimmings only are used. J. C. HERTEL.
Merchant Tailor.
Next door to Nelson's Hotel.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned having purchased the Bakery Business from W Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style.

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

A REASONABLE HOPE

Is one that is based on previous knowledge or experience, therefore those who use B B. B. may reasonably hope for a cure because the previous experience of thousands who have used it, shows it to have succeeded in even the worst cases.

Order your papers at this office. See clubbing rates.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown....a.m.	8 03		9 47p.m	11 02
Rodney	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton a.m	9 09		10 29	1 00
Iona	9 2		....	1 36
Shedden	9 26		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St.Thomas (dep't)p.m	3 00 p.m	1 10	5 25
Shedden	3 24	....	6 01
Iona	3 32	....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 6.15 p.m 4.55 p.m and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ..a. m.	9 55p.m.	5 40
" Mixed ....p.m.	3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6 50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2 50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

Dutton Meat Market.

THE ORIGINAL.

Stands second to none in the County.

You can get what you want and when you want it. I buy and sell according to quality FOR CASH.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR

HOGS, DEAD OR ALIVE,
HIDES, SKINS AND TALLOW.

☞ Parties indebted by favor are requested to settle account at once, to enable me to continue business and be your humble servant,

JAMES BAKE.

Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888.

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles south-west of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

OUTSIDE OF THE COMBINE

25 to 50 Per Cent. Under Combine Prices.

A. C. GRAHAM, - Undertaker, Dutton.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MTCHING AND [illegible] DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call. TURNER & PECKHAM

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

DUTTON MARKETS.

Flour per cwt	$2 50	to	2 75
Red Wheat per bush.	95	to	1 00
Barley		to	50
Peas	50	to	55
Oats		to	30
Beans		to	1 00
Potatoes per bag	30	to	40
Green Apples	20	to	30
Hay per ton	9 00	to	10 50
Eggs			18
Butter			20
Shorts			75
Bran			65

NOMINATION.

The presence of the electors of the Corporation of the

TOWNSHIP OF DUNWICH

IS REQUIRED AT

BROWN'S HALL DUTTON,

—ON—

Monday, December 31, '88,

To nominate persons to represent them in the Council for the ensuing year as Reeve and Councillors. The nomination for Reeve will take place at 10 o'clock, A.M., and for Councillors at 12 o'clock, noon. Should more than the requisite number be nominated the proceedings will then be adjourned until

Monday, January 7th, 1889,

When polls will be opened in the following places:—Polling Sub-division No. 1, in the Town Hall, Wallacetown; Polling Sub-division No. 2, in the School-house on lot 6, in the 7th concession; Polling Sub-division No. 3, in the School-house at Campbellton; Polling Sub-division No. 4, in the School-house on lot 12, in the 2nd Concession; Polling Sub division No. 5, in J. H. Westcott's waggon shop at Montreal; Polling Sub-division No. 6, in William McLandress' waggon shop, Iona; Polling Sub-division No. 7, in Brown's Hall, Dutton; Polling Sub-divison No. 8, in Dr. Leitch's Office, in the village of Dutton. Polls to be opened at 9 o'clock, A.M., in each place and kept open until 5 o'clock P.M., and no longer, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

D. C. CLAY,
Municipal Clerk.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1888. NO. 1.

Professional Cards

ALEX. BEATON,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
WEST LORNE, ONT.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,
SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.
Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

Alex McKillop, M.D.
M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.
☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,
Barrister-at-Law,
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.
ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,
Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.
MONEY TO LOAN.
OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.
Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN
At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.
June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE.
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.
June 7. 1-yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,
Surgeon - Dentist,
Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,
SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,
Veterinary Surgeon,
DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS
For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.
F. A. Humpidge.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

The Star Loan Company
181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.
Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in
SAVINGS BANK!
from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. C asey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887	2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887,	$2,044,242
ASSETS,	72,269,24

DIRECTORS.
L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.
OFFICERS.
L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!
Pumps! Pumps!!
To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.
Repairing Promptly Done.
I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.
Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.
Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888. tf

A NARROW ESCAPE.
People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

THIS -:- SPACE
BELONGS TO
—: W. H. VOGT, :—
THE JEWELLER.

To Farmers and Builders.
Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds,
etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. Cochrane.
January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.
The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.
First-class Tailoring
IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.
30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED
This season to stock our new mills at Union.
L. J. Willson & Co.
Feb. 4, 1888. tf

-:- STOP! -:-
DON'T READ THIS
WE WILL SELL
COFFINS and CASKETS
CHEAPER THAN ANY HOUSE IN OR OUTSIDE THE COMBINE.
NO HUMBUG! TRY US!
WE HAVE ALSO A LARGE STOCK OF
FURNITURE!
which we will sell at
Prices which will Astonish you. Call and get Prices.
W. I. Schultz & Son

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Dutton Iron Works.
MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.
The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-
Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

NEW
BUTCHER SHOP.
THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.
Patronage Solicited.
M. McNULTY.

Expel the worms by using the safe and reliable anthelmintic Freman's Worm Powders.

HITCH UP!
But before you do that come 'round to
M'MILLAN'S - HARNESS - SHOP

BLANKETS, RUBBER RUGS, GOAT ROBES, TRUNKS, VALISES, HALTERS, ETC. ETC.

WHIPS, BRUSHES, BRIDLES, COMBS, HARNESS OIL, ETC., ETC.

and buy a set of
HAND-MADE -:- HARNESS
Manufactured out of the Choicest Stock available in the country, at Moderate Prices. Those of my customers who want a SUPERIOR ARTICLE can, at a little additional, befurnished with Traces of Genuine American Oak Tanned Leather.
—:o:—
A LARGE NUMBER OF
CURLED HAIR FACED COLLARS
Warranted to work with safety.
☞ The highest price will be paid for Cordwood, Beech and Maple, in exchange for Harness.
All who want an honest and serviceable article are cordially invited to call.

Largest Circulation in Western Ontario.
—:THE:—
FREE PRESS
LONDON - CANADA.
The Free Press is the only newspaper in the West receiving the Associated Press despatches. It contains ALL THE NEWS by Cable, Telegraph, Telephone and Mail, up to the hour of going to press. It gives in each issue original and valuable Illustrations of men and things, and is the only newspaper in Canada employing its own artists.
The Weekly Free Press
$1 PER YEAR. POSTAGE FREE.
Established Nearly Half a Century.
"THE THREE GRACES"
AND "BY THE LAKESIDE,"
TWO HANDSOME CHROMOS,
Also a beautiful Christmas Number, comprising 36 pages, given away free to every subscriber for 1889.
$8,000 in Premiums,
Comprising New and Useful Articles, given away free to agents. The most liberal inducements ever offered in Canada to agents. Send for agent's outfit and terms.
THE FREE PRESS
Is the only Morning and Evening Paper published in Western Ontario. It is forwarded on all early morning trains, reaching all places between Toronto and Windsor by eight a.m., and is the only daily paper received at points west of London before the afternoon. The live newspaper of the west, $5 per year, postage free. Sold by agents everywhere. Address—
FREE PRESS CO.,
LONDON, CANADA.

SALESMEN WANTED.
Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co,
Empire Nurseries, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

HAGYARDS YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM
FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. It a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

You Carry
A whole medicine chest in your pocket, with one box of Ayer's Pills. As they operate directly on the stomach and bowels, they indirectly affect every other organ of the body. When the stomach is out of order, the head is affected, digestion fails, the blood becomes impoverished, and you fall an easy victim to any prevalent disease. Miss M. E. Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., puts the whole truth in a nutshell, when she says: "I use no other medicine than Ayer's Pills. They are all that any one needs, and just splendid to save money in doctors' bills."
Here is an instance of
A Physician
who lost his medicine chest, but, having at hand a bottle of Ayer's Pills, found himself fully equipped.—J. Arrison, M. D., of San José, Cal., writes:
"Some three years ago, by the merest accident, I was forced, so to speak, to prescribe Ayer's Cathartic Pills for several sick men among a party of engineers in the Sierra Nevada mountains, my medicine chest having been lost in crossing a mountain torrent. I was surprised and delighted at the action of the Pills, so much so, indeed, that I was led to a further trial of them, as well as of your Cherry Pectoral and Sarsaparilla. I have nothing but praise to offer in their favor."
John W. Brown, M. D., of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I prescribe Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."
T. E. Hastings, M. D., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "That Ayer's Pills do control and cure the complaints for which they are designed, is as conclusively proven to me as anything possibly can be. They are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of the profession."
Ayer's Pills,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

$4 REWARD.
STRAYED from Lot 13, Con. 1, Dunwich, a steer of high grade Shorthorn breed; color, red and white; age, two years at Christmas; nose, dark color; it broke a horn off when a calf, showing the damage to horn yet. A reward of four dollars will be paid by the subscriber to any person giving such information as will lead to its recovery. R. COAD.
Ekfrid, Dec. 18, 1888.

Physicians prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla in cases of scrofula, and in every form of chronic disease, because this medicine is safer to take, and is more highly concentrated than any other preparation. It can always be depended upon as an effective blood purifier.

PREVAILING SICKNESS.
The most prevailing complaints at this season are rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, inflammations and congestions. For all these and other painful troubles Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best internal and external remedy.

Todd Quick, charged with murdering an old man named Holton near Tilbury Centre last summer, has been convicted at the Court of Quarter Sessions, Chatham, to stand his trial at the next Assize Court.

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

The recent census of Toronto gives that city a population of 165,000. With Parkdale annexed at the beginning of the year the population will reach 170,000.

RELIABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.
Procure a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil from your medicine dealer, and use according to directions. It cured Ida Johnston, of Cornell, Ont., of that complaint, and she recommends it as a sure cure. For 25 years it has never failed to give satisfaction.
To invigorate both the body and the brain, use the reliable tonic, Milburn's Aromatic Quinine Wine.

DUNWICH COUNCIL.

GENERAL FUNDS.

A. J. Leitch, services as Reeve, commissioner, etc., $49.40; Alex. McKillop, services as councillor, overseeing Ward, etc., $25.95; Judson Milligan, same, $39.40; H. Garbutt, same, $44.80; J. D. McDiarmid, same, $51 98; D. C. Clay, salary from Oct. 1 to Jan. 1, 1889, $50; John Kairns, drawing gravel, $10; Dugald Blue, repairing tile drain, $3.75; Wm. Church, statute labor performed, $4; Peter McCallum, drawing gravel on Currie road, $50; Dugald Gillies, statute labor performed, R. S. McMillan, statute labor performed, $21; James Welch, for gravel taken from his pit outside of the ground belonging to the township, $10; Donald McWilliam, for gravel, $4.90; Stephen A. Backus, statute labor performed, $2; John McWilliam, same, $6; John Kerr, gravel, $1; Donald McKenzie, repairing McKenzie bridge, $9.45; Arch. Campbell, statute labor performed, $6; A. Battin, gravel, $5; James Murrison, statute labor performed, $3; M. Conn, for road allowance through lot 1, in the 9th con., $138; Mrs. Walters, same, $32; John Wight, for gravel, $15; Thos. Wooldridge, repairing bridge on Mennie drain, $13.22; John F. Berry, statute labor performed, $4; John McLellan, for gravel, $6.10; John H. Dennis, township portion of Dennis drain, $15.20; D. J. McCallum, Jas. Leslie's portion Dennis drain, $15.20; D. C. Clay, to pay sundry persons for survey on Ecker drain, $5.25; John Campbell, gravel drawn from his pit, $10.10; John F. Taylor, statute labor performed, $11; Daniel Curtis, building township portion of fence on line between line and town hall, $4.06; R. S. McMillan, repairing bridge, $2.40; John Kairns, statute labor performed, $5; A. J. Leitch, for gravel, $74.40; D. C. Clay, postage, stationery and fees on drains, as per account, $14.11; J. W. Gilbert, taxes refunded for Mary Palmer, $2.40; Barnard McCaffrey, for gravel, 50cts.; Andrew Goldie, taxes refunded to sundry persons, $28.64; Bell & Campbell, account for 1888, $154.50; John McFarlane, services as sanitary inspector, $5.

WARD NO. 1.

Robert Shipman, work on line between 8th and 9th cons., $50; John Osborne, building two culverts, $8; John Garrett, work done, $6.50; John Telford, for tile, $1.70; John Jewell, drawing gravel $15; Thos. Gilbert, ditching, $2.62; Duncan McPhee, culvert, $10.25.

WARD NO. 2.

Peter Campbell, drawing gravel, $38.40; James McWilliam, repairing culverts, $5.25; Jas. May, culvert, culvert, $5; Jas. Smith, repairing bridge, $1; A. D. McIntyre, repairing culvert, $2.50; John Mattheson, work done, $3; John Dennis, building culvert, $4; William Leslie, work done, $3; Jas. Buchanan, work done, $1; M. Cochrane, plank, 51cts.; John Froggatt, work done, $8.

WARD NO. 3.

Wm, Carroll, work done, $17.55; Henry Humphries, putting tile across road, $2; Duncan McCallum, repairing culvert, $2; Duncan McArthur, work done, $4; Arch. Campbell, work done, $14; Wm. Kerr, work done, $7.50; James McWilliam, plank and work done, $5.60; A. Ross, work done, $10; D. G. Thompson, drawing gravel, $9 50; Alf. McCann, drawing gravel, $47.50; Angus McIntyre, work done, $14; Alex. Smith, tile, $5; Jas. Rihill, plank and work done, 25.41; Duncan McKay, plank, 1.85.

WARD NO. 4.

Herman Clark, work done, 6.50; A. W. Bowlby, for scraper, 5.50; John Braddon, work done, 20.00; Wm. Lunn, work done, 6.00; Duncan Graham, building culvert, 4.50; Thos. Pearce, work done, 5.30; James McCaffrey, ditching, 22.80; Wm. Church, drawing gravel, 9.00; John Pollard, repairing culvert, 1.50; J. B. Lowther, plank, 6.00; Henry Brown, work done, 1.50; Michael Hooley, ditching, 7.00; Neil McKellar, plank, 20.00.

SCHOOL FUNDS.

John Brown, S. S. No. 1, 291.08; Job Curtis, S. S. No. 2, 374.20; Alex. Clark, S. S. No. 3, 309.97; Alex. Black, S. S. No. 4, 260 19; Wm. McLandress, S. S. No. 5, Dunwich, and 5, Southwold, 427.05; Theodore Mills, S. S. No. 6. Dunwich, and 22, Southwold, 326.67; John McFarlane, S. S. No. 7, 278.97; Mungo McFarlane, S. S. No. 8, Dunwich and 20, Southwold, 320.70; Arch. Campbell, S. S. No. 9, 313.36; James Leitch, S. S. No. 10, 314.50; Neil McLean S. S. No. 11, 1012.61; John Wight, S. S. No. 12, 336.57; G. W. Ling, S. S. No. 13, 666.49; Thos. Pearce, S. S. No. 14, 289 90; John F. Taylor, S. S. No. 15, Dunwich, and 13, Aldboro, 355.00; A. N. C. Black, High School, 549.55.

DOG FUND.

Wm. Carroll, sheep killed by dogs, 5.50; Wm. McRae, sheep worried by dogs, 5.83; Wm. Brown, sheep killed by dogs, 2.83; Alex. McMillan, dog wrongfully assessed, 1.00; James Davis, dog tax refunded, 2.00.

Council adjourned to meet on January 14, 1889.

ONE GOOD POINT
Out of the many possessed by Burdock Blood Bitters is that it may be taken at all the seasons of the year, and by either young or old. In this way the three busy B's are always at work doing good.
Victoria Carbolic Salve is a great aid to internal medicine in the treatment of scrofulous sores, ulcers and abscesses of all kinds.

To Assist Nature
In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
Soothes and Heals
the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.
L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."
Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with Lung Trouble.
For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A brakeman on the local, Mr. J. F. Bailey, while endeavoring to jump from the train here, slipped and badly fractured his wrist. Drs. Brien and Dewar, who were fortunately near, promptly reduced the fracture Mr. Bailey says he is getting used to the business of arm-breaking, this being the sixth time.—Essex Centre Liberal.

National Pills are a mild purgative, acting on the Stomach Liver and Bowels, removing all obstructions.

The compositor must go. Science has so decreek. There are newspaper offices now where all the type is set by machinery, and it is only a question of time when it will be universal. Bad for the compositor? If he has brains, not a bit of it. It will change his form of labor somewhat, but this is all. And that will probably be a gain. For of all weary drudgery we know of nothing to equal "jerking stamps."

WILL BE FULLY MET.
Indications of Dyspepsia, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Rising and Souring of Food, Wind on the Stomach, or a Choking or Gnawing sensation at the pit of the stomach are fully met by Burdock Blood Bitters which has cured the worst cases on record

Vin. McQuade, of Amherstburg, who was found in his father's house the other day lying unconscious upon the floor, with the upper part of his head blown away by a load of shot from a double barreled gun lying near him, died early Tuesday. Before his death he recovered consciousness sufficiently to state that the shooting was an accident. He had loaded one barrel of the gun, and while loading the other the hammer caught in his pants and was discharged.

IONA.

George Foster and family moved into town last week.

The Methodist Sunday school in this place have decided to hold their annual entertainment on New Year's night. Big preparations are being made and it is expected it will eclipse all former ones.

Miss Maggie Liddell, of London, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. George, of Florence, are spending a few days with their son, Rev. T. T. George, of this place.

The Union Sunday school held their annual entertainment in the Baptist church on Christmas night. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the house was crowded. The managing committee is to be congratulated on the success of their efforts, all rendering their parts in a highly satisfactory manner. Proceeds, $34.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left on Monday to spend Christmas at Hensall, their former home.

John Piper and Miss C. Fillmore were united in marriage on Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's father, Henry Fillmore. Rev. T. T. George performed the ceremony. The wedding presents were both costly and numerous. Their many friends wish them a happy journey through life.

An "At Home" will be held in the Baptist church on Friday evening for the benefit of the resident ministers. A good programme has been prepared and an enjoyable time may be expected. A silver collection will be taken up at the close of the entertainment.

Still they go. Edward Fillmore and Miss Shering were united in the bonds of matrimony on Tuesday evening by the Rev. T. T. George. May success follow thom through life.

An assembly was held in Mill's Hotel at which all the young folk "tripped the light fantastic" far past the "wee sma' hours ayont the twal."

MARRIED.

BRACKEN—SPENCER.—On the 18th inst., by the Rev. C. T. Scott, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. George Bracken, to Miss Alice Spencer, third daughter of Mr. Jabez Spencer, of West Lorne.

HIGH SCHOOL CONCERT.

The concert given by the High School pupils on Tuesday evening, 18th inst., was a most enjoyable affair. The chair was occupied by Dr. D. G. Ruthven, of Wallacetown. The programme was varied and entertaining. Short speeches were made by Mr. Rothwell, Dr. Leitch, W. S. Jackson and Rev. Graham. At the close of the programme the principal, Mr. Rothwell, and assistants, Mr. Tremeer and Mr. J. N. Dales, were invited to the platform and an address read on behalf of the pupils by Mr. Ed. Knight, and Mr. Rothwell was presented with a costly upholstered chair; Mr. Tremeer with two valuable volumes—Milton's "Paradise Lost" and Dante's "Inferno"—both profusely illustrated, and Mr. Dales with a superb gentleman's companion or toilet set. The teachers each made suitable replies. The best of feeling appears to exist between teachers and scholars, and it is a pity so cordial a relationship should be broken up by a change of teachers, especially at this particular time of the year.

Following is the address:

DEAR TEACHERS,—Another cycle of time is approaching its close. We have arrived at the end of another term—at the end of another year. Hoary-headed '88 is near its end and to night we meet for mutual farewells. To night we the pupils of Dutton High School meet and part with feelings of more than usual intensity. Mingled feelings of fear, hope, regret and uncertainty, possess us. Fear, lest our beloved principal be removed from the school; hope, that he may be retained; regret, at the certain parting with Mr. Dales and uncertainty as to whether even Mr. Tremeer will be with us another year. But buoyant youth is not prone to look only on the gloomy side, and we feel an assurance with us that the Dutton High School cannot afford to lose so efficient and popular a master as Mr. Rothwell and an assistant as Mr. Tremeer. We therefore look forward with well-grounded hope that at the opening of school after the holidays we will return to greet Mr. Rothwell as head of the school and Mr. Tremeer as one of the assistants.

The past term has been one of great profit to us as pupils. All the teachers have been indefatigable in their endeavors to advance us in the acquirement of knowledge; all have been kind, attentive, painstaking and forbearing, and if in a thoughtless moment any of us have given unnecessary anxiety or offence we now ask forgiveness.

Mr. Rothwell, we cannot fully express our appreciation of your kind, considerate and honorable treatment of us as pupils and the interest you have always manifested in our welfare and progress. Words, indeed, fail us in expressing this. Nothing we can do can adequately convey it. But if you will be so good as to accept this chair it may in a slight degree convey to you our high esteem of yourself personally and of your services as teacher and in future years when, after a weary day's toil, you take well-earned rest in this chair you will remember the love its donors bore to you.

Mr. Treemer, we are truly grateful to you as teacher of your department. We have been much benefited by your instruction. To you also we cannot do sufficient to express our thankfulness, but we wish you to accept these volumes as a slight token of our esteem and trust you may be long spared to teach Dutton High School.

Mr. Dales, we are truly sorry to part with you. Although but a short time in charge of your department in the Dutton High School we have all learned to regard you with more than ordinary esteem. Your invaluable assistance has cheered and helped us, and we trust you may be long spared to work in your favorite profession. Please accept this toilet set as a slight mark of our regard.

Signed on behalf of the Dutton High School pupils. E. KNIGHT.

REMEMBERING THE AFFLICTED.

On Saturday evening a goodly number of friends and neighbors paid an unexpected visit to the residence of Mr. H. L. Sutton on Shackleton street for the purpose of expressing their sympathy and goodwill to David, Mr. Sutton's crippled son. As is well known, he has been sorely afflicted for quite a long time, yet his patience under it and his hopeful and kindly disposition has been manifested through it all, and it was felt that some token of remembrance would possibly brighten his Christmas time, so his friends presented him with an easy chair and a purse, Rev. E. Middleton reading the following address:

To David Sutton:—

DEAR FRIEND,—We have watched you somewhat attentively during the period of your affliction, and have observed the patience which you manifest under trouble and your desire to take as much brightness out of life as you can, and while we sympathise with you in your enforced seclusion at home we were anxious, if we could, to add to your comfort and to increase your joy at this Christmas time, so we have anticipated Santa Claus a little, thinking he may be loaded too heavily, and we wish you to accept this easy chair, assuring you that we do not forget you, and we pray that our Heavenly Father may give you all grace in your affliction and at last we may meet in the home he has gone to prepare.

On behalf of your friends.

A pleasant hour was spent together, Mr. Sutton expressing his thanks as also David for the kindly expressions of good will.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.
A toilet luxury in every respect, Ayer's Hair Vigor never fails to restore the youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It also eradicates dandruff and prevents the hair from falling.

The notice of the application to the Ontario Legislature for an act to incorporate a railroad compauy from Amherstburg to Blenheim appears in the Gazette The company is also asking for power to build from Amherstburg to Windsor, and there is little doubt that either they will begin to build this branch next season, or that the Windsor & Sandwich Passenger Railway Company will continue their line down the river to Amherstburg.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

The next session of the Ontario division of Sons of Temperance will be held at Kingston.

Diphtheria is so bad about Washburn, on the Rideau canal, that the Public school has been closed.

A freight train was derailed yesterday morning in the tube of the Victoria bridge, and traffic was delayed for four hours.

A bag of letters was stolen from the New York and Prescott mail at Prescott on the 1st inst. There is no clue to the thief.

An earthquake shock, lasting a few minutes, was experienced in the vicinity of the Lower St. Lawrence yesterday morning.

Mr. William Parker, superintendent of the Government fish hatchery at Sandwich, has at present over 50,000,000 white fish eggs.

Seventy graduates and ex-cadets of the Royal Military College in Kingston secured commissions in the Imperial army since 1880.

Toronto parties are colonizing Wilson, on the American shore of Lake Ontario, with a view of making a summer resort out of the place.

Yesterday the Ontario Government were asked by a deputation from the Anti-Poverty Society to favor a $600 exemption on dwelling-houses.

Rev. Care Rousselot, of St James' parish, Montreal, preached a sermon on Sunday, in which he warned his hearers against annexation schemes.

The Chatham by-laws granting a bonus of $40,000 to the Canadian Pacific railway to run their line through the town was carried by a large majority.

The conviction of Capt. Creighton of the Kingston Salvation Army, for not moving on with his band when ordered by a police sergeant has been quashed.

The Montreal Underwriters' Association have positively refused to reduce the fire rates until the entire system for the prevention of fires is improved.

The Ottawa Government has refused the general pardon asked for witnesses at the Quebec boodle investigation, which practically knocks the latter on the head.

It appears that notwithstanding the vigilance of the Montreal police force, there are still several bucket-shops in full operation in that city, doing a larger business than ever.

Anonymous letters threatening an incendiary fire in Laprairie, a village near Montreal, were made good on Friday night. A reward of $500 is offered for the apprehension of the fire bug.

Mr. R. R. Dobell, a leading Quebec lumber merchant, is engaged in organizing a company to lay a telegraph cable from Bland Sablon, at the Straits of Belle Isle, to a point on the coast of Ireland or Scotland.

Ten years ago a tree fell across a narrow portion of the Aux Sauble, which runs between Middlesex and Lambton. It was not removed and it formed a jam, to clear which it will now cost some thousand dollars.

Sir John Macdenald attended a lecture on Australia, on Monday night, in which the lecturer thought a profitable trade could be established with the Antipodean Colonies by swapping our lumber for their small fruit.

No clue having been found to the author of the mysterious Galt poisoning case of October 4, the inquest was closed Friday night, a verdict of guilty of murder being returned against some party or parties unknown.

Rev. Samuel Lyle, of the Hamilton Central Presbyterian church, created a great deal of excitement on Sunday by denouncing professional baseball from the pulpit. The directors of the Hamilton Association have made a very vigorous reply.

Rev. D. L. McRae, formerly of Cobourg, recently called to the First Presbyterian church at Jamestown, N.Y., will likely be prosecuted for violation of the Contract Labour Act, in having accepted the position while in a foreign country.

Chief of Police Hughes, of Montreal, says he offered to arrest Charles Morrison, the Megantic murderer, if he were allowed the necessary expenses for taking a number of resolute men with him, but that the Quebec Government were so wavering in the matter that he withdrew from the case.

AMERICAN.

It is estimated that at least 5,000 men in the Michigan pineries will be idle inside of ten days unless it snows.

Since the conviction of Hronck, the Chicago Anarchist, the Governor of Illinois is deluged with threatening letters.

The White Caps threaten to burn up the Village of Georgetown, O., if the proceedings against them are not dropped.

General Master Powderly says the Knights of Labour are busy at work weeding out the Anarchists who have crept into their ranks.

At the Sontsmen's banquet at San Francisco on St. Andrew's night the toast to "The Queen" preceded that to "The President."

Representative Chipman has introduced in Congress a bill providing for the construction of a high-level, truss bridge across the Detroit River.

There are still some cases of smallpox in Buffalo, but the Health office is much more alarmed about diphtheria, which is becoming very prevalent.

Twenty-one executions have been issued for the eviction of Polish squatters on the Upper Levee, near St. Paul, Minn. Armed resistance is feared.

Mayor Abbott, of Montreal, has been invited to a banquet by the Boston Merchants' Association, to represent Canada in the discusion of important questions.

The United States Government have seized a cargo of sugar, consigned to the America Sugar Refinery, of San Francisco, valued at $400,000, for undervaluation.

The United States sloop of war Galena has been ordered to be put in readiness for war service, presumably to go to Hayti, to demand the release of the Haytian Republic.

News has been received that Miss Sophie Preston, formerly of Waitsbury, Washington Territory, a missionary, and a number of Europeans have been killed by Chinese near Canton.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew says that should the new Administration ask him to go to England as United States Minister, he would be ready to sacrifice his personal interests to serve his country.

The New York papers, according to their kind, are abusing or praising President Cleveland, and seeing in his last message the "snarl of a beaten candidate," or a "dignified, compact, clear, and forcible State paper."

Four damage suits against the Allan steamship line were begun in Boston yesterday, charging that the food supplied on the steamer Prussian was bad, and that the sanitary arrangements were inadequate. The defence is a general denial.

In the Forestry Congress held at Atlanta yesterday Gen. Greely said the influence of forests on increasing rainfall has probably been over-estimated. Their great value is in conserving and slowly parting with their supply.

An attempt was made yesterday morning to blow up with dynamite Messrs. Shufeldt & Co.'s distillery in the northern portion of Chicago. The proprietors believe the attempt to have been the work of the whiskey trust, to which organization the distillery did not belong.

Owing to the advantage possessed by the Canadian lines for the carriage of through traffic, in not being hampered by the Inter-State law to which their American competitors are subjected, it is believed that the Republican Government will take steps to curtail the Canadian privileges.

FOREIGN.

Russia considers that Persia is granting England too many favors and is threatening trouble in consequence.

Mr. Gladstone says that only the best and kindest feeling has prevailed between Mr. John Bright and himself.

The spread of Socialism among veteran soldiers' associations is causing great alarm to the Emperor of Germany.

It is rumoured that the work of eviction will be begun again on a large scale on the Clarricarde estate in Ireland.

The health of Emperor William has so far improved that he is preparing to go on a hunting expedition in Hanover.

A Bombay despatch says Lord Lansdowne, Viceroy of India, was received with unusual enthusiasm on landing on Monday.

The German East African Company has lost $1,750,000 by the troubles in Zanzibar, and is for the time practically ruined.

All the presents given by ex-Queen Natalie to King Milan have been returned, and 1,000,000 f. have been placed to her credit.

A mob at Birmingham, Ala., attempted to lynch a murderer, but they were fired on and many of them killed by the sheriff's officers.

It is stated that the French Government have decided to introduce, if necessary, a bill to ensure the completion of the Panama canal.

It is said the French Government have secretly advised the Pope to quit Italy in the event of a rupture between France and Italy.

It is expected that the English Government at the next session of Parliament will ask for a loan of £10,000,000 to strengthen the navy.

Father Kennedy has been arrested at Kanturk, County Cork, for attending a meeting of suppressed branches of the National League.

The Russian railway officials have been ordered to observe the same ceremony toward ex-Queen Natalie of Servia as is shown to a Grand Duchess.

Gen. Boulanger says he believes the Revisionist party he represents will be returned to power by a large majority in the next general elections.

It is announced by the London professional agitators that 17,000 unemployed workmen are on the eve of renewing the Trafalgar square troubles.

The people on the German coast of Zanzibar refrain from sowing crops through fear of the insurgents, and the situation generally is very bad.

It is said that Mme. Boulanger has become reconciled to the General, and has consented to live with him; but their daughter insists upon becoming a nun.

The relations between Germany and Spain are becoming decidedly unpleasant, owing to the hostility of Senor Armijo, the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs, to the Triple Alliance.

Lord Salisbury has provoked the ire of the Anglo-Indian and the London Radical press by referring to Dadabhai Naoroji, the former Indian candidate for Holborn, as "a black man."

At the Parnell Commission yesterday a labourer named Barke testified that the Clonbar branch of the League ordered Lord Mountmorres to be "done away" with, an euphemism for murder.

Patrick Mollery, a noted Fenian, connected with the Phœnix Park murders, having refused to obey a "Times" subpœna, has been taken to London under a warrant issued by Judge Mannen.

Prince Bismarck, in acknowledging the degree of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him by the Giessen University, says that his constant efforts have been in behalf of tolerant and practical Christianity.

The killing of Mr. Wake, the "Graphic" artist, by Arabs in the Soudan, while on duty for his paper, directs attention to one phase of the enterprise of modern journalism. The correspondents who go to the front in war times have to possess all the courage of the military man, and attend at the same time to onerous duties besides. They frequently distinguish themselves for bravery on the very field of battle itself. The artist and his purely literary confrere are exposed to much the same danger, and, as in the present case, are liable to be shot by the enemy.

Movement of Shot When Fired.

If a man could only stand thirty or forty yards away from the muzzle of the gun and watch the charges of shot fly past him, he would be astonished at what he saw. The shot not only spreads out into a widening target as they fly, but they string out one behind the other to a much greater distance than they spread. Thus, with a cylinder gun, when the first shot of a charge reach a target that is forty yards away the last shot are lagging along ten yards behind. Even with a choke bored gun the shot lag behind eight yards in forty. This accounts for the long swath that is mowed in a flock of ducks on whom the charge of shot fall just right. About 5 per cent. only of the charge of shot arrive simultaneously at the target, but the balance of the first half of the charge is so close behind that a bird's muscles are not quick enough to get it out of the way, although those who have watched sitting birds when shot at have often seen them start as if to fly when the leading shot whistled by them, only to drop dead as they were overtaken by the leaden hail that followed.

Something New in Fishing.

Fishing by artificial light is not a new thing, but the way some fishermen along the coast of Maine are using the electric light is new. The old way was to plunge an incandescent lamp into the water, the connection being made with some source of electricity on board the fishing vessel, and the mains to the lamp often got foul of the fishing tackle or the cable of the vessel, destroying its usefulness. Now a Frenchman has discovered a better way by adopting a lamp worked by a primary battery, the whole of which can be thrown overboard and regained when the trip is ended. The battery consists of six Bunsen cells, in which, however, chromic acid is placed instead of nitric acid, formerly used. The cells are connected in tension with a twelve-volt Edison lamp. The sucess of the experiments lately made presages the general adoption by our coast fishermen of this new discovery.—[Lewiston Journal.

Episcopal Incomes.

The Bishop of New York has the largest personal revenue in this country. It is $10,000 a year. The Bishop of Maine has the smallest. It is $1,300 a year. The Bishops of California, Chicago, Long Island and Massachusetts have each $6,000 a year. Others have incomes running from $5,000 down, while eight of the American prelates are content with $2,000 a year each, and are not perfectly sure of getting it in time to meet their butcher's books and coal bills. In England, where the State takes the place of the voluntary contribution in support of the church, the head of the prelacy has an income of $75,000 a year. Two of the bishops have each $30,000. Others run from $40,000 down, the average revenue of the episcopate below the greatest named being between $25,000 and $20,000 a year.—[Chicago Tribune.

Putnam's Corn Extractor

Is the best remedy for corns extant. It acts quickly, makes no sore spots and effects a radical cure. A hundred imitations prove its value. Take neither substitutes offered as good nor the close imitations of the genuine too often offered.

The Game Laws.

In publishing an extract from Judge Jellett's excellent synopsis of the game laws last week, we hit upon an old copy, and not upon the latest as revised. We, therefore, herewith present the whole and the latest:

The only season during which the following game may be hunted, taken or killed is as follows:

Deer—15th October to 20th November. Moose, elk, reindeer or caribou may not be killed before October 15, 1895. The number of deer which may be killed or taken live in any one season, prior to 1895, is limited as follows: One person, 5; two persons hunting together or from one camp or rendezvous, 8; three persons, as before, 12.

Partridges—1st September to 1st January.
Woodcock—15th August to 1st January.
Snipe, rail and golden plover—1st September to 1st January.
Ducks of all kinds and all water-fowl—1st September to 1st January.
Geese—1st September to 1st May.
Hare—1st September to 15th March,
The above dates are inclusive.

These may be exposed for sale for fifteen days after expiration of time for killing. No eggs to be taken or destroyed at any time. No traps, nets or snares, baited lines or similar contrivances to be used. These may be destroyed by any person without liability. No contrivances described or known as batteries, swivel guns, sunken punts or night lights to be used for killing wild fowl.

Fur bearing animals may be only taken, hunted or killed as follows:

Beaver, mink, muskrat, sable, martin, otter or fisher—1st November to 1st May, Nor shall any trap or snare or other contrivance be set for them outside this season. Nor shall any muskrat house be cut, speared, broken or destroyed at any time. Any person may destroy such traps, snares, etc., to set, without any liability.

N. B.—No poison to be used in killing the animals named and no poisoned bait to be exposed in any locality where dogs or cattle may have access to the same.

No deer-dog to run at large from the 15th November until the 15th October.

Foreigners must not hunt, take or kill deer in Ontario, except as follows: Shareholders in an incorporated company, on the grounds of such company or who obtain from the Commissioner of Crown Land's a permit at the cost of $10, and under the restrictions above quoted.

Deer may not be exported.

The penalties imposed by the Act are as follows: In case of deer, elk, moose, reindeer or caribou, not exceeding $50 or less than $10 with cost, for each offence; birds or eggs $25 to $5; fur-bearing animals, $25 to $5; other breaches of the Act, $25 to $5, foreigners, $20 to $10; exceeding number of deer, $20 to $5.

In default of immediate payment of fine and costs the defendant may be imprisoned in the county jail for not more than three months.

The accused shall be competent and compellable to give evidence.

Convictions shall not be quashed for want of form.

The whole of the fine shall be paid to the prosecutor, unless the convicting justice has reason to believe that accuser and accused are in collusion for the purpose of benefiting the latter, in which case the justice may order the disposal of the fine as in ordinary cases.

Under an act of the Legislature, prairie chickens have not been shot in Illincis for two years, and it will be another year before the limit expires. These birds were rapidly being exterminated, but since their respite they have increased with marvelous rapidity.

The game laws of Michigan in regard to deer are as follows: The open season in the upper peninsula is from Oct 1 to Nov. 15, and in the lower peninsula during the month of November only. The hounding of deer is unlawful at all times, and subjects the owner of the dog to punishment, and under the statue, the dog may be killed by any person without liability for damages. No deer shall be killed when it is red coat, and no fawn when in spotted coat. No deer shall be killed while in any waters of the State, nor by means of any pit or trap, nor the use of any artificial light. Transportation of deer, or any part of the carkass of the same beyond the limits of the state, is prohibited at all times. A violation of any one of these laws subjects the offender to a fine of $50, and every offender will be prosecuted.

Tooth Pulling by Electricity.

Boston people nowadays have their superfluous teeth drawn by means of electricity. Inasmuch as all new ideas in the arts and sciences are spread from this enlightened metropolis originally, and from hence extended over the country, there is little doubt that sooner or later this new method will supersede laughing gas and ether in other big cities of the Union. The process in question is very simple, scarce any apparatus being required beyond an ordinary two cell battery, with vibrator attachment. This attachment is a thin strip of metal, fastened at the ends, which is made to vibrate a thousand or more times per second by the electric current. At each vibration the circuit is cut off and renewed again, the effect being to give a perfectly steady flow of the mysterious fluid. In order to make sure that the flow is quite satisfactory the operator tunes the machine—assisted by a little reed tuning pipe—until the strip of metal sings "A." So far, so good.

Now to the battery are attached three wires. Two of them have handles at the ends, and the third is hitched to a forceps. The patient in the chair is given a handle to hold in each hand, and the current is turned on gradually until it becomes painful. Then he is told to grasp the handles as strongly as possible, the electricity—having been switched off for a moment—is turned on again suddenly, and the dental surgeon applies his forceps simultaneously to the tooth. The instant the molar is touched, it, as well as the parts surrounding, becomes electrified and obsolutely insensible to pain. When it is withdrawn from the socket, the subject of the operation feels not the slightest disagreeable sensation. A jerk and the tooth is out, the patient drops the handles and the affair is over.

A New Denomination.

The five Baptist ministers who were expelled from the Baptist Church of the Maritime Provinces for preaching the holiness doctrine have formed a new denomination, the principal tenet of which is complete sanctification. In Galt five members of the Presbyterian Church have since professed and taught the doctrine, and have in consequence been tried by the session and by a committee of the Presbytery. The session found them guilty and declared for their expulsion; but the Committee of the Presbytery has not yet reported. With a view to clearly understanding the position of the accused parties the Committee of the Presbytery submitted to them these four questions:

1. "Do you believe that in the case of any man such grace is given in this life that he may perfectly keep the commandments of God in thought, word and deed?"

2. "Do you believe that in any case the believer is, in this life, delivered from the in-being of sin?"

3. "Do you believe that in this life any mere man is able to keep the commandments of God perfectly?"

4. "Do you believe that there is any seasons in the experience of any Christians when he does not need to confess sin and ask pardon for same?"

All answered in the affirmative except one, who replied "no" to question No. 3. The accused parties admitted that they had held meetings for the propagation of the doctrine. It is probable that Ontario will soon have a branch of the new Maritime denomination.

Smith (deaf) — "What's the matter, Jones?" Jones—"I've got the headache.' Smith (who mistakes it for toothache)—"Why don't you have it filled?"

AGRICULTURAL.

American Evictions.

As long ago as 1850—four years after its admission as a State into the Union—the General Government granted to Iowa a large tract of land, in alternate sections, on the Des Moines river, and shortly afterwards Iowa granted these lands to the Des Moines Navigation and Railroad Company in payment for improving the river for the purpose of navigation. In latter years these lands, which were nearly unoccupied, were taken up by settlers, many of whom obtained patents from the United States Government, as there was a good deal of doubt as to the ownership of the title to them. Later settlers either bought the "rights" of older ones or exercised the immemorial frontier right of squatter sovereignty, hoping that they would ultimately obtain titles from the Government. Some of the settlers were foreigners—chiefly Norwegians or Swedes—others came from the neighboring sections and from Michigan, Indiana, Virginia, North Carolina, and other States. They were as a rule, men of ordinary intelligence and industry. They have now been settled there from one to 25 years. The river-land company has always contested their right to the lands, and years ago the settlers combined to defend their claims, and have spent thousands of dollars before the various courts. A short time ago, the United States Supreme Court decided that the company alone has title to the lands, and United States marshals have lately been busy driving out the settlers.

During the contest the latter showed their faith in the final outcome by building good houses and barns, fencing their fields, planting hedges, groves and windbreaks, setting out orchards and making other sorts of farm improvements. From all of these they are now being ruthlessly expelled just as the severity of winter has set in. Some of them, it is true, have bought their holdings, paying heavily for the improvements they themselves have made upon them; but the great majority are not able to pay the prices demanded, and must, for the present at any rate, lose all their investments in non movable property. They are driven out of their houses, their furniture is piled up on the public roads, and the doors and windows are barred against them. The sick, the old, and the children are bundled out alike. Official carelessness in the Land Office in Washington is primarily responsible for this suffering, and, in so far as it is, the settlers should be fully recompensed, and Iowa should see to it that none should suffer privations. Governor Larrabee shows a very favorable disposition towards the evicted settlers, and Senator Allison expresses hearty sympathy with them, and it is to be hoped that these sentiments will soon develop into material advantages for the sufferers.

Farm Life.

In many parts of the country farm life is beginning to lose many of the old features, not altogether unavoidable at one time, which made the life of the women on the farm very much that of drudges. But there is not yet a township where there are not many farms where the same drudgery yet exists; and, with rare exceptions, the condition of things is inexcusable. There is many a farmer who takes care to have his stables and everything that pertains to his own work arranged so as to minimize labor and indirectly to save money, who neglects to have the same economy of time and strength studied in the arrangements of the house, the arrangements which affect the labor of his wife and daughters, and of the female help. Often this neglect is due to downright selfishness, and will not be cured by merely calling attention to it. More often it is due to a culpable thoughtlessness with a dash of selfishness in it, as thoughtlessness generally has. But all the same the effects are bad and wasteful. Many an extra step might be saved to a tired woman, many a strain of muscle might be avoided by a little thoughtfulness, that would not only make life pleasanter to the housewife or her helpers, but would sometimes save time when time very plainly means money. A shelf here and there, a convenient box or drawer would save wearied limbs fatigue. High steps around the kitchen doors might be removed, or made easier, with advantage to the workers of the household and sometimes to the prevention of doctors' bills. Facilities for getting water might be made greater, and there are a hundred and one other things that come into the category of little conveniences that affect comfort and health, but which could be provided at little expense by a little thought on the part of the farmer and his sons and a little time devoted to them in hours that otherwise would be spent idly.

Agricultural Notes.

Wheat chaff with corn meal and bran makes a good mess for the horses.

A little sulphur once or twice a week in the feed of moulting hens will be beneficial.

If you wish to produce milk, no bull should be used whose dam is not a good milker.

Scientific farming is simply farming according to the best light that is thrown on the subject by what is now known about it.

Prof. Morrow still believes that this is a good time in which to buy foundations for herds of well-bred cattle, as it will be contrary to all precedent if they long remain at present remarkably low prices.

That the pumpkin seeds are injurious to stock is known to many who do not suspect the reason. They are strongly diuretic, and cause such flow of urine that the animal is weakened. They make fowls grow light and stop the production of eggs whenever hens eat them freely. Fed to cows the pumpkin with its seeds does not do half the good it will if the seeds are removed.

There is great advantage to the farmer in having something to sell all the year round. Most farmers keep a retail account at the country store, and many of them, doubtless, are often surprised how rapidly a bill will run up, especially if it is all buy and no sell on their part. The way to keep the store bill down is to have something to sell about every time you go to the shop.

Ne lengthy advertisement is necessary to bolster up Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Of all the appetites that curse young men, the appetite for office seems to me to be the silliest and meanest.

"I know 'tis a sin to
Bnt I'm bent on the notion,
I'll throw myself into
The deep, briny ocean," is the mental exclamation of many a sufferer from headache, indigestion, constipation, torpid liver, etc. The use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, however, would transform these unfortunates, and cause them to sing.—

But my spirit shall wander
Through gay coral bowers,
And frisk with the mermaids,
Ii shall, by the powers!

It has alway been considered best to dress according to one's business and position.

"The old Oaken Bucket
The Iron-bound Bucket
The Moss-covered Bucket,"

is very likely the one has that conveyed poisons to your system from some old well, whose waters have become contaminated from sewers, vaults, or percolation from the soil. To eradicate these poisons from the system and save yourself a spell of malarial, typhoid or bilious fever, and to keep the liver, kidneys, and lungs in a healthy and vigorous condition, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the greatest blood-purifier of the age.

Remember that education like some other things, does not consist in the multitude of things a man possesses.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respy, T. A. SLOCUM, 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

Office always brings obligations and a certain kind of slavery.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, dopsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon' Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Men. Book sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M V LUBON 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont

A. P. 429

KNITTING Creelman Bros., Georgetown, Ont. MACHINES

TO Save Time—Send for Illustrated catalogue of our PATENT PINLESS CLOTHES LINE. It will be ready very soon. TARBOX BROS., Toronto, Ont.

FARMS FOR SALE or RENT. ALL SIZES, KINDS and PRICES. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, DRAYTON, ONT.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 122 Yonge st., Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. Established No delay. Correspondence solicited. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt. 72 King-st. E., Toronto.

CANADA SHIPPING CO.—Beaver Line of Steamships, sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. Saloon tickets, Montreal to Liverpool $40, $50, and $60. Return tickets, $80, $90, and $110 according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate, $30; Round trip tickets, $60. Steerage, $20. Round trip tickets, $40. For further particulars and to secure births, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

Brown Engines
IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.
TORONTO ENGINE WORKS, PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

ALMA, THE LEADING CANADIAN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN. St. Thomas, - Ont.
Seventeen graduates and certificated teachers in the faculty. Nearly 200 students last year. Graduating courses in Literature, Music, Fine Arts, Commercial Science and Elocution. Low rates good board thorough work. McLaughlan Hall, costing $20,000, now open. Elegant Domitories for 40 more students. Address PRINCIPAL AUSTIN B.D.

Farm Loans
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - MONTREAL.
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO
This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms. For information apply to local agents, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto.

BUSINESS Education is very essential to the success of every young man and young woman. Good Bookkeepers are constantly in demand by business men. The best is no knowledge more SHORTHAND useful than Shorthand and Typewriting. A new avenue for female employment that pays. Constantly growing demand for shorthanders.
WRITE for descriptive Circulars, containing full particulars of all branches taught and rates of tuition.
Address—CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Public Library Building, Toronto. THOS BENGOUGH, President. C. H. BROOKS, Sec'y & MANAGER.

Young Men
SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto.

"The Racer"
Thin Back, Lance-Tooth, Cross-Cut Saw

The Maple Leaf Racer and Lance Cross cut saws are now sold in all parts of the world. The quality of these saws is unequalled. Their excellence is wholly due to their superior temper, the process of which is kept a profound secret by Shurly & Dietrich, the manufacturers of these saws. One of the best evidences of their superior quality is that other saw manufacturers put on the market as close an imitation of these saws as they are able to produce, and represent it to be as good as the Maple Leaf saw. They run their saw upon one name until the public become familiar with its inferior quality, then they change the name, in order to humbug the public another season, all of which is the very best evidence of the superior quality of the Maple Leaf saw, as it is not the custom to counterfeit a poor article. These counterfeits are sold for a much lower price than the Maple Leaf saw can be bought for; the dealer, of course, endeavors to sell them at nearly the same price, thereby realizing a larger profit. And some of the more unprincipled dealers, in order to sell the counterfeit saw, will tell untruths of various kinds regarding the quality of both the genuine and the counterfeit. Good goods are always cheap, poor goods are dear at any price. A saw, like a knife, will not cut fast unless it will hold a keen cutting edge. Price $1.00 per foot. Manufactured only by

SHURLY & DIETRICH,
SAW MANUFACTURERS,
GALT ONT.

WHAT
SCOTT'S EMULSION CURES
CONSUMPTION
SCROFULA
BRONCHITIS COUGHS COLDS
Wasting Diseases
Wonderful Flesh Producer.
Scott's Emulsion is not a secret remedy. Containing the stimulating Hypophosphites and Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, the potency of both being largely increased. It is used by Physicians all over the world.
PALATABLE AS MILK.
Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND
ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON
THE NERVES, THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS
This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.
Why Are We Sick?
Because we allow the nerves to remain weakened and irritated, and these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.
PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND
WILL CURE BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESS, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, AND ALL NERVOUS DISORDERS,
By quieting and strengthening the nerves, and causing free action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys, and restoring their power to throw off disease.
Why suffer Bilious Pains and Aches?
Why tormented with Piles, Constipation?
Why frightened over Disordered Kidneys?
Why endure nervous or sick headaches?
Why have sleepless nights?
Use PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND and rejoice in health. It is an entirely vegetable remedy, harmless in all cases.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1.00. Six for $5.00.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, MONTREAL, P. Q.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 63 Niagara St., Buffalo, N. Y.

GUELPH BUSINESS COLLEGE, Guelph, Ont.—Fifth Scholastic Year—its graduates are now employed as Book-keeper Business Managers, Stenographers, etc., by many of the largest business houses in Canada and the United States. Young men and women desiring a thorough business education will consult their own welfare be attending the Guelph Business College. For terms and particulars address M. McCORMICK, Principal.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888—New importations of English Sheeps, Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

Stained Glass
FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.
Subscribed Capital, ... $ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital, ... 2,500,000
Total Assets, ... 10,000,000
The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet will promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

I CURE FITS!
When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE.
I have made the disease of
FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS
A life long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and it will cure you. Address
H. G. ROOT, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. TORONTO, ONT.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER
A PERFECT FOOD FOR THE SICK
A NUTRITIOUS BEVERAGE
A POWERFUL INVIGORATOR
Every Housekeeper
should include in her HOLIDAY PURCHASES a supply of
Johnston's Fluid Beef,
ITS USES ARE MANY. It makes a WARMING PALATABLE winter BEVERAGE. It makes rich gravy for meat. It is indispensible in time of sickness. BEEF TEA made from Johnston's Fluid Beef is relished by Children and Adults and has a wonderful strengthening and invigorating effect. It is popularly known as
THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.
HEAD OFFICE, CAPITAL AND FUNDS NOW OVER $3,000,000.
15 TORONTO STREET, TORONTO, ONT.
A HOME COMPANY, ESTABLISHED OCTOBER, 1871.
To this date, October 31, 1887, there has been returned:
To the heirs of Policy-holders (death claims) $649,249 00
To the holders of matured Endowment Policies 26,492 63
To Policy-holders on surrender of Policies 98,656 00
To Policy-holders for Cash Profits (including those allocated and being paid) 432,544 02
To holders of Annuity Bonds 16,967 84
Loaned to Policy-holders on Security of their Policies 83,264 98
$1,306,174 47
Policies in Force over 10,000. Amount over $15,000,000
PRESIDENT—HON. SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G.
VICE-PRESIDENTS.—WILLIAM ELLIOTT, Esq.; EDWARD HOOPER, Esq.
J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director
Policies Nonforfeitable after 3 years and Indefeasible after 5 years.

BEST FOR FAMILY USE,
CARBON SAFETY OIL.
ASK DEALERS FOR IT.
Wholesale Depots:
ONTARIO—TORONTO, 30 Front street East.
" OTTAWA, 38 Spark street.
" BELLEVILLE, L. W. Yeomans & Co.
QUEBEC—MONTREAL, E. Cavanagh.
MARITIME PROVINCES—ST. JOHNS, Jos. Burns & Sons.
MANITOBA and N.W.T.—BRANDON, W. Johnston & Co
Sam'l Rogers & Co., Toronto, Canada.

RELY ON HOP BITTERS.
A WONDERFUL NERVE TONIC. A Medicine, not a Drink. Cure All Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, DRUNKENESS.
It may Save Your Life. $1,000 Reward paid for a case they will not cure.

Artificial LIMBS. For circulars address J. DOAN & SON, Toronto, Ont.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co, Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec: Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

H. WILLIAMS & CO. Slaters and Felt ROOFERS
MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN
Roofing Felt, Slaters' Felt, Deafening Felt, Carpet Paper, Building Paper, Roofing Pitch, Coal Tar, Lake Gravel.
Office: 4 Adelaide St. East, Toronto.

Merchants, Butchers, and Traders Generally.
We want a GOOD MAN in your locality to pick up
CALF SKINS
For us. Cash furnished on Satisfactory Guaranty. Address,
C. S. PAGE,
HYDE PARK, Vermont, U.S.

MANITOBA ST. PAUL MINNEAPOLIS AND RAILWAY.
Commencing on Saturday, Nov. 10th there will be a daily first-class through train service between St. Paul and Butte, Montana, comprised of Drawing-room, Sleeping Car, Day Coaches, Dining Car and Free Colonist Sleeper. Equipment new, modern and equal to the best.
Leaving St. Paul every morning, and running directly through to Butte. The only line without change and the only line via Ft. Buford, Ft. Benton, Great Falls and Helena.
For particulars, apply
F. I. WHITNEY, Gen Pass & Tk't Ag't, St. Paul.
J. M. HUCKINS, Travel'g Pass Ag't, 4 Palmer House Block, Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO
—Manufacturers of the highest grades of—
SILVER-PLATED WARES
TRADE MARK.
—FACTORIES and SALESROOM:—
420 to 428 King St. West, TORONTO
E. G. GOODERHAM, Manager
J. C. COPP, Treas.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!! Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILKHANDERCHIEF and The Marie Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Whiton Novelty Co., Toronto, Ont.

STANDARD CHOPPING MILLS.
USES BEST FRENC

A JAPANESE HOUSE.

Its Oddities Have No Counterpart in Western Architecture.

How to describe a Japanese house, where nothing is like anything corresponding to it at home? From the outside it is an uninviting big black barn; inside it is a spotless doll's house magnified a thousand diameters, all wood and wicker and white paper. The entrance hall is a platform raised a couple of feet above the ground, where you take off your boots if you are a foreigner, or leave your sandals if you are a Japanese. A screen door slides back and you are in—but that depends on circumstances. Sometimes you are in one room and sometimes in another. It may be a general sitting-room, fifty feet square; it may be a bedroom (if you call early in the morning); or you may find yourself in an impoverished sanctum and intruding upon somebody writing laborad descriptions for a far-away press. For here walls have not only ears, but they have legs, and when you wish to make a new room you simply "form square" by sliding enough panel in their grooves to enclose the space, or at your pleasure all the rooms can be thrown into one, inclosed, in our case, by forty-six panels. Those forming the sides of the house consist each of sixty little paper panes. To wet one's finger, stick it silently into the window, and peep through,—this is the natural Japanese counterpart of accidental surreptitious inspection by the keyhole. The floor is of mats; not mats strewed about as at home, but solid structures of delicate stuffed wicker an inch thick, of conventional and regular size, let into the floor—elastic, spotless, immovable, never profaned by even the daintiest of slippers. Chairs and tables are, of course, unknown, and the posture of repose is to seat oneself on one's heels. This squatting, by the way, is very painful at first, and, like the "blameless dances" in "Raddigore," "takes a deal of training." At meal times squat anywhere and your food is placed before you. When you are tired you throw yourself anywhere on the floor, with no fear of soiling your white linen suit. When evening comes you do not seek your bed chamber; you simply make it, by sliding the walls around the spot you have chosen for your slumbers. The rough and ready way according to my American friend, is to tread around on the floor till you find a specially soft mat, and then lay a few walls upon it for a couch. A more luxurious one is to have a futon or thick quilt spread out, and roll yourself in a rug or blanket upon it. The chief drawback for a foreigner is that his hip bone, which is more prominent than that of a Japanese, is terribly in the way, and my journalism not having yet advanced to graduation upon the plank bed, I have not learned the trick of obliterating the natural projections of the body. But you sleep comfortably in spite of the marauding rat, whose immunity from attack has rendered him equally inquisitive and harmless, and in the morning when you return from the bath, bed and bedroom have alike disappeared. It is the story of Aladdin domesticated.

LITERARY NOTES.

Miss Kathleen O'Meara, an authoress who recently died in Paris, is said by those who knew her to have been gifted with a sweet disposition, a quick wit, and an intelligent appreciation of what is best in art and literature. Her best known books were "Narka," "Mme Mohl and her Salon" and "Diane de Corignal."

Women booksellers in France are by no means rare. One of the largest booksellers in a city of Alsace is a well educated and charming French lady, familiar alike with English and German literature. At Nantes some years since one of the leading bookseller's businesses was held by two elderly ladies, and very intelligent and obliging they were. It is not unusual in France to find a brother and sister in partnership, and over the shop door the two names.

A careful estimate of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's profits from her now juvenile classic, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," makes the cheerful sum of $19,000, not including the payments made to her for the dramatic right of the play. Her second juvenile, "Sarah Crew," has already added $9,000 to her bank account, which, with the $15,000 soon to be paid to her by the Bonners for her Ledger story, starts her well on the road to opulence—that is, for an author.

A literary curiosity is a volume which is now being issued by a bookseller named Roux, at Lyons. The volume, which is to be complete in twenty five parts, of which fifteen have already appeared, at the price of $2 a number, is entirely of silk, into which the text is woven. As each number consists of only two leaves, the whole volume, containing the Roman Catholic mass and a number of prayers, will have only fifty leaves, round the Gothic text of which every leaf has a specially designed medieval border. Both text and border are woven in black silk on a white surface, and the effect is said to be "very artistic." Single numbers of the silken volume are not to be obtained, so that would-be purchasers have either to pay $40 for the complete work or renounce the desire for possession altogether.

Dr. O. Hartwigh, the chief of the University Library at Halle, has just published a volume on the subject catalogue made under his supervision. The catalogue was begun in 1879, and finished this year; it consequently took nine years to make. Halle possesses about 250 000 volumes, and ten specialists were employed. According to this calculation the library of the British Museum would require for the preparation of its catalogue at least fifty five years. The Bodlein Library, where there are nearly 650,000 books, would need over twenty years, with the help of ten specialists, for a subject catalogue. But as, unfortunately, that library is too poor to procure such an amount of aid, and, as far as we are informed, can employ only one classifier for the classification of the slips, although, able, cannot classify every subject, a subject catalogue of the Bodlein would take not less than a century to complete.

A Curious Broadway Lunch Room.

One of the most curious varieties of lunch room is down town in Broadway. No chairs are provided, both sides of the room being lined with shelves loaded with viands, all clearly marked with their different prices. In here rush bankers, lawyers, brokers and clerks. Each grabs a plate, knife, spoon, fork and cup, seizes what he likes from the shelves, bolts it standing, reckons up his own bill, draws a check from a pile near the door for an equal amount, presents it at the desk, pays and departs, unquestioned whether he has eaten a dime or a dollar's worth. This method of trusting to customers' honesty is found to pay better with the class of men who eat there than hiring waiters. Undoubtedly a certain quantity is eaten that is not paid for, but a dozen practiced detectives are on the floor during the rush hours at noon, watching people who are suspected, and the amazing rapidity with which a man can help himself, swallow and be gone, makes the place highly popular with men who only eat to live, and live only to hurry.—[New York Tribune.

A simple and efficient device has been in use for several years in France which relieves a horse from the severe strain that accompanies the starting of a heavy load. In cities especially such contrivances are needed, and most of all by the usually overdriven street-car horse. The device consists in a spiral spring, of power in proportion to the average load carried, and which is attached to the end of the trace. The horses at the Eastern Railway depot in Paris, where the springs have been used for six years in shifting cars, show an improvement since that time in general soundness of condition, while the number of sore and strained necks has greatly diminished. There has also been a large saving in the way of broken harness. The same idea has been applied to plowing harness, and was, we believe, among the exhibits of farming implements at the State Fair of New Jersey this year.

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR,

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XL.—At Rest at Last.

Winifred fell back on the pillows wearily. "I love him," she whispered once more. "He hates me, Elsie; but in spite of all, I love him, I love him."

For years she had locked up that secret in her own soul. She had told it to no one, least of all to her husband. But, confined to the narrow space of her poor small heart, and battling there with her contempt and scorn, it had slowly eaten her very life out.

Her face was growing very pale now. After all this excitement, she needed rest. The inevitable reaction was beginning to set in. She fumbled with her fingers on the bedclothes nervously; her face twitched with a painful twitching. The symptoms alarmed and frightened Elsie; she opened the door of the little salon and signalled to the English doctor to return to the bedroom. He came in, and cast a keen glance at the bed. Elsie looked up at him with inquiring eyes. The doctor nodded gravely and drew his long beard through his closed hand. "A mere question of hours," he whispered in her ear. "It may be delayed; it may come at any time. She's overtaxed her strength. Hysteria, followed by proportionate prostration. Her heart may fail from moment to moment."

"Where's her husband?" Elsie cried in fever of dismay.

"I've sent him off about his business for an hour's stroll," the doctor answered with professional calmness. "She's evidently in a highly hysterical condition, and the sight of him only increases her excitement. It's a sad case, but a painfully common one. A husband's presence is often the very worst thing on earth for a patient so affected. I thought it would do her far more good to have you alone with her—you're always so gentle and so soothing, Miss Challoner."

Elsie glanced back at him with swimming eyes. "But suppose she were to die while he's gone," she murmured low with profound emotion.

The doctor pursed up his lips philosophically. "It can't be helped," he answered with a faint shrug. "That's just what'll happen, I'm very much afraid. We can only do the best we can. This crisis has evidently been too severe for her."

As he spoke, Winifred turned up from the bed an appealing face, and beckoned Elsie to bend down closer to her. "Elsie," she whispered, in a low, hoarse voice, "send out for Hugh. I want him now.—I should like to kiss him before I die. I think I'm going. I won't last much longer."

Elsie hurried out to Warren in the anteroom. "Go," she cried eagerly, through her blinding tears—"go and find Hugh. Winifred wants him; she wants to kiss him before she dies. Look for him through all the streets till you find him, and send him home. She wants to forgive him."

Warren answered her never a single word, but, nodding acquiescence, rushed down by himself to the esplanade and the shore in search of his enemy. Poor baffled enemy, how his heart ached for him! At such a moment, who could help pitying him?

"Is he coming?" Winifred asked from the bed presently.

"Not yet, darling," Elsie answered in a hushed voice; "but Warren's gone out to try and find him. He'll be here soon. Lie still and wait for him."

Winifred lay quite still for some minutes more, breathing hard and loud on the bed where they had laid her. The moments appeared to spread themselves over hours. But no Hugh came. At last she beckoned Elsie near her again, with a frail hand that seemed almost to have lost all power of motion. Elsie leant over her with her ear laid close to Winifred's lips. The poor girl's voice sounded very weak and all but inaudible now. "I can't last till he comes, Elsie," she murmured low. "But tell him I forgave him. Tell him I asked him to forgive me in turn. Tell him I wanted to kiss him good-bye. But even that last wish was denied me. And Elsie"—her fingers clutched her friend's convulsively—"tell him all along I've always loved him. I loved him from the very depths of my soul. I never loved any one as I loved that man. When I hated him most, I loved him dearly. It was my very love that made me so hate him. He starved my heart; and now it's broken."

Elsie stooped down and kissed her forehead. A smile played lambent over Winifred's face at the gentle kiss. The doctor lifted his open hand in warning. Elsie bent over her with gathered brows and strained her eyes for a sign of breath for a moment. "Gone?" she asked at last with mute lips of the doctor.

"Gone," the calmer observer answered with a grave inclination of his head toward Elsie. "Rapid collapse. A singular case. She suffered no pain at the last, poor lady."

Elsie flung herself wildly into an easy-chair and burst into tears more burning than ever.

A touch on her shoulder. She looked up with a start. Could this be Hugh? Thank heaven, no! It was Warren who touched her shoulder lightly. Half an hour had passed and he had now come back again. But, alas, too late. "No need to stop here any longer," he said reverently. "Hugh's downstairs, and they're breaking the news to him. He doesn't know yet you're here at all. I didn't speak to him. I thought some other person would move him more. I saw him on the quay, and I sent an Italian I met on the beach to tell him he was wanted, and his wife was dying—Come up to my room on the floor above. Hugh needn't know even now, perhaps, that you're here at San Remo."

Too full to speak, Elsie followed him blindly from the chamber of death, and stumbled somehow up the broad flight of stairs to Warren's apartments on the next story. As she reached the top of the open flight, she heard a voice—a familiar voice, that would once have thrilled her to the very heart—on the landing below, by Winifred's bedroom. Shame and fascination drew her different ways. Fascination won. She couldn't resist the dangerous temptation to look over the edge of the banister for a second. Hugh had just mounted the stairs from the big entrance hall, and was talking by the door in measured tones with the English doctor

"Very well," he said in his cold, stern voice, the voice he had always used to Winifred—a little lowered by conventional respect, indeed, but scarcely so subdued as the doctor's own. "I'm prepared for the worst. If she's dead say so. You needn't be afraid of shocking my feelings; I expected it shortly."

She could see his face distinctly from the spot where she stood, and she shrank back aghast at once from the sight with surprise and horror. It was Hugh to be sure, but oh, what a Hugh! How changed and altered from that light and bright young dilettante poet she had loved and worshipped in the old days at Whitestrand! His very form and features, and limbs and figure, were no longer the same; all were unlike, and the difference was all to their disadvantage. The man had not only grown sterner and harder; he was coarser and commoner and less striking than formerly. His very style had suffered visible degeneration. No more of the jaunty old poetical air; turnips and foot-and-mouth disease, the arrears of rent and the struggle against reduction, the shifting sands and the weight of the riparian proprietors' question, had all left their mark stamped deep in ugly lines upon his face and figure. He was handsome still, but in a less refined and delicate type of manly beauty. The long smouldering war between himself and Winifred had changed his expression to a dogged ill-humour. His eyes had grown dull and sordid and selfish, his lips had assumed a sullen set, and a ragged beard with unkempt ends had disfigured that clear-cut and dainty chin that was once so eloquent of poetry and culture. Altogether, it was but a pale and flabby version of the old, old Hugh—a replica from whose head the halo had faded. Elsie looked down on him from her height of vantage with a thrill of utter and hopeless disillusionment. Then she turned with a pang of remorse to Warren. Was it really possible? Was there once a time when she thought in her heart that self-centred, hard-hearted, cold-featured creature more than a match for such a man as Warren?

"She is dead," the doctor answered with professional respect. "She died half an hour ago, quite happy. Her one regret seemed to be for your absence. She was anxiously expecting you to come back and see her."

Hugh only answered: "I thought so. Poor child." But the very way he said it—the half-unconcerned tone, the lack of any real depth of emotion, nay, even of the decent pretence of tears, shocked and appalled Elsie beyond measure. She rushed away into Warren's room and gave vent once more to her torrent of emotion. The painter laid his hand gently on her beautiful hair. "O Warren," she cried, looking up at him half doubtful, "it makes me ashamed"—— And she checked herself suddenly.

"Ashamed of what?" Warren asked her, low.

In the fever of her overwrought feelings, she flung herself passionately into his circling arms. "Ashamed to think," she answered with a sob of distress, "that I once loved him!"

CHAPTER XLI.—Redivivа!

Hugh sat that evening, that crowded evening alone in his dingy, stingy rooms with his dead Winifred. Alone with his weary, dreary thoughts—his thoughts, and a corpse, and a ghostly presence! Two women had loved him dearly in their time, and he had killed them both—Elsie and Winifred. It was a hateful night—hateful and ghastly; for in the bedroom at the side the attendants of death, despatched by by the doctor, were already busy at their gruesome work, performing the last duties for poor martyred Winifred.

He had offered her up on the altar of his selfish remorse and regret for poor martyred Elsie. The last victim had fallen on the grave of the first. She, too, was dead. And now his house was indeed left unto him desolate.

Somehow, as he sat there, with whirling brain and heated brow, on fire in soul, he thought of Elsie far more than of Winifred. The new bereavement, such as it was, seemed to quicken and accentuate the sense of the old one. Was it that Winifred's wild belief in her recognition of Elsie that day in the street had roused once more the picture of his lost love's face and form so vividly in his mind? Or was it that the girl whom Winifred pointed out to him did really to some slight extent resemble Elsie? and so recall her more definitely before him? He hardly knew; but of one thing he was certain—Elsie that night monopolised his consciousness. His three-year-old grief was still fresh and green. He thought much of Elsie, and little of Winifred.

Late at night the well-favoured landlady came up, courteous and Italian, all respectful sympathy, in a black gown and a mourning head dress, hastily donned, as becomes those who pay visits of condolence in whatever capacity to the recently bereaved. As for Hugh himself, he wore still his rough travelling suit of gray homespun, and the dust of his journey lay thick upon him But he roused himself listlessly at the landlady's approach. She was bland, but sympathetic. Where would Monsieur sleep? the amiable proprietress inquired in lisping French. Hugh started at the inquiry. He had never thought at all of that. Anywhere, he answered, in a careless voice; it was all the same to him; sous les toits, if necessary.

The landlady bowed a respectful deprecation. She could offer him a small room, a most diminutive room, unfit for Monsieur, in his present condition, but still a chambre de maître, just above Madame. She regretted she was unable to afford a better; but the house was full, or, in a word, crowded. The world, you see, was beginning to arrive at San Remo for the season. Proprietors in a health resort naturally resent a death on the premises, especially at the very outset of the winter; they regard it as a slight on the sanitary reputation of the place, and incline to be rude to the deceased and his family. Yet nothing could be more charming than the landlady's manner; she swallowed her natural internal chagrin at so untoward an event in her own house and at such an untimely crisis, with commendable politeness. One would have said that death rather advertised the condition of the house than otherwise. Hugh nodded his head in blind acquiescence. "Ou vous voulez, Madame," he answered wearily. "Up stairs, if you wish. I'll go now—I'm sorry to have caused you so much inconvenience; but we never know when these unfortunate affairs are likely to happen."

The landlady considered in her own mind that the gentleman's tone was of the most distinguished. Such sweet manners! So thoughtful—so considerate—so kindly respectful for the house's injured feelings! She was conscious that his courtesy called for some slight return. "You have eaten nothing, Monsieur," she went on, compassionately. "In effect, our sorrow makes us forget these details of every-day life. You do not derange us at all; but you must let me send you up some little refreshment."

Hugh nodded again.

She sent him up some cake and red wine of the country by the Swiss waiter, and Hugh ate it mechanically, for he was not hungry. Excitement and fatigue had worn him out. His game was played. He followed the waiter up to the floor above, and was shown—into the next room to Warren's.

He undressed in a stupid, half dead-alive way, and lay down on the bed with his candle still burning. But he didn't sleep. Weariness and remorse kept him wide awake, worn out as he was, tossing and turning through the long slow hours in silent agony.

Strange to say, the sense of freedom was the strongest of all the feelings that crowded in upon him. Now that Winifred was dead, he could do as he chose with his own. He was no longer tied to her will and her criticisms. When he got back to England—as he would get back, of course, the moment he had decently buried Winifred—he meant to put up a fitting gravestone at Orfordness, if he sold the wretched remainder of Whitestrand to do it. A granite cross should mark that sacred spot. Dead Elsie's grave should no longer be nameless. So much, at least, his remorse could effect for him.

For Winifred was dead, and Whitestrand was his own. At the price of that miserable manor of blown sand he had sold his own soul and Elsie's life; and now he would gladly get rid of it all, if only he could raise out of its shrunken relics a monument at Orfordness to Elsie. For three long years, that untended grave had silently accused the remnants of his conscience: he determined it should accuse his soul no longer.

The big clock on the landing ticked monotonously. Each swing of the pendulum tortured him afresh; for it called aloud to his heart in measured tones. It cried as plain as words could say: "Elsie, Elsie, Elsie! Elsie!"

Ah, yes! He was young enough to begin life afresh, if that were all. To begin all over again is less than nothing to a brave man. But for whom or for what? Selfish as he was, Hugh Massinger couldn't stand up and face the horrid idea of beginning afresh for himself alone. He must have some one to love, or go under for ever.

And still the clock ticked and ticked on; and still it cried in the silence of the night; "Elsie, Elsie, Elsie, Elsie!"

At last day dawned, and the morning broke. Pale sunlight streamed in at the one south window. The room was bare—a mere servant's attic. Hugh lay still and looked at the gaping cracks that diversified the gaudily painted Italian ceiling. All night through, he had fervently longed for the morning, and thought when it came he would seize the first chance to rise and dress himself. Now it had really come, he lay there unmoved, too tired and too feeble to think of stirring.

Five—six—half-past six—seven. He almost dozed out of pure weariness.

Suddenly, he woke with a quick start. A knock at the door!—a timid knock. Somebody came with a message, apparently. Hugh rose in haste and held the door just a little ajar to ask in his bad Italian, "What is it?"

A boy's hand thrust a letter sideways through the narrow opening. "Is it for you, signor?" he asked, peering with black eyes through the chink at the Englishman.

Hugh glanced at the letter in profound astonishment. O heavens, what was this? How incredible—how mysterious! For a moment the room swam wildly around him; he hardly knew how to believe his eyes. Was it part of the general bewilderment of things that seemed to conspire by constant shocks against his perfect sanity? Was he going mad, or was some enemy trying to confuse and confound him? Had some wretch been dabbling in hideous forgeries? For the envelope was addressed—O horror of horrors!—in dead Elsie's hand; and it bore in those well-known angular characters the simple inscription, "Warren Relf, Esq., Villa della Fontana (Piano 3°), Avenue Vittorio-Emmanuele, San Remo."

He recognized this voice from the grave at once. Dead Elsie! To Warren Relf! His fingers clutched it with a fierce mad grip. He could never give it up. To Warren Reif! And from dead Elsie!

"Is it for you, signor?" the boy asked once more, as he let it go with reluctance from his olive-brown fingers.

"For me?—Yes," Hugh answered still clutching it eagerly. "For me!—Who sends it?"

"The signorina at the Villa Rossa—Signorina Chaloner," the boy replied, getting as near as his Italian lips could manage to the sound of Challoner. "She told me most stringently to deliver it up to yourself, signor, into your proper fingers, and on no account to let it fall into the hands of the English gentleman on the second story."

"Good," Hugh answered, closing the door softly. "That's quite right. Tell her you gave it me." Then he added in English with a cry of triumph: "Good morning, jackinapes!" After which he flung himself down on the bed once more in a perfect frenzy of indecision and astonishment.

For two minutes he couldn't make up his mind to break open that mysterious missive from the world of the dead, so strangely delivered by an unknown hand at his own door on the very morrow of Winifred's sudden death, and addressed in buried Elsie's hand, as clear as of old, to his dearest enemy. What a horrible concatenation of significant circumstances. He turned it over and over again unopened, in his awe; and all the time that morose clock outside still ticked in his ear, less loudly than before: "Elsie, Elsie, Elsie, Elsie!"

At last, making up his mind with a start, he opened it, half overcome with a pervading sense of mystery. And this was what he read in it, beyond shadow of doubt, in dead Elsie's very own handwriting:

VILLA ROSSA, Thursday, 7.30, morning.

DEAREST WARREN—I will be ready, as you suggest, by the 9.40. But you mustn't go with me farther than Paris. That will allow you to get back to Edie and the Motherkin by the 6.39 on Saturday evening.—I wish I could have waited here in San Remo till after dear Winifred's funeral was over; but I quite see with you how dangerous such a course might prove. Every moment I stop exposes me to the chance of an unexpected meeting. You must call on Hugh when you get back from Paris, and give him poor Winifred's last forgiving message. Some day—you know when, dearest—I may face seeing him myself, perhaps; and then I can fulfil my promise to her in person. But not till then. And that may be never. I hardly know what I'm writing, I feel so dazed; but I'll meet you at the station at the hour you mention.—No time for more. In great haste—my hand shakes with the shock still.—Yours, ever lovingly and devotedly, ELSIE.

The revulsion was awful. For a minute or two, Hugh failed to take it all in. You cannot unthink past years at a jump. The belief that Elsie was dead and buried at Orfordness had grown so ingrained in the fabric of his brain that at first he suspected deliberate treachery. Such things have been. He had forged himself: might not Warren Relf, that incarnate fiend, be turning his own weapon—meanly—against him?

But as he gazed and gazed at dead Elsie's hand—dead Elsie's own hand—unmistakably hers—no forger on earth (not even himself) was ever half so clever—the truth grew gradually clearer and clearer. Dead Elsie was Elsie dead no longer; she had escaped on that awful evening at Whitestrand. It wasn't Elsie at all that was buried in the nameless grave at Orfordness. The past was a lie. The present alone—the present was true. Elsie was here, to-day, at San Remo!

He buried his face in his hands and wept—wept as he never had wept for Winifred—wept as he never had wept in his life before—wept with frantic gladness for Elsie recovered.

Slowly his conceptions framed themselves anew. His mind could only take it all in piecemeal. Bit by bit he set himself to the task—no less a task than to reconstruct the universe.—Winifred must have known Elsie was here. It was Elsie herself that Winifred and he had seen yesterday.

Fresh thoughts poured in upon him in a bewildering flood. He was dazzled, dazed, dumfounded with their number. Elsie was alive, and he had something left, therefore, to live for. Yesterday morning that knowledge would have been less than nothing worth to him while Winifred lived. To-day, thank heaven—for Winfred was dead—it meant more to him than all the wealth of Crœsus.

How opportunely Winifred had disappeared from the scene! In the nick of time—on the very stroke and crisis of his fate! At the turn of the tide that leads on to fortune! Felix opportunitate mortis, indeed! He had no regret, no remorse now, for poor betrayed and martyred Winifred.

Winifred! What was Winifred to him, or he to Winifred, in a world that still held his own beloved Elsie?

All's well that ends well. The Winifred episode had come and gone. But Elsie remained as permanent background.

And how strangely Winifred herself, in her mad desire, had contributed to this very denouement of his troubles. "I shall go to San Remo, if I go at all, and to nowhere else on the whole Riviera. I prefer to face the worst, thank you!" The words flashed back with fresh meaning on his soul. If she hadn't so set her whole heart on San Remo, he himself would never have thought of going there. And then he would never have known about Elsie. For that at least, he had to thank Winifred.

"When I'm dead and gone, you can marry Elsie!"

But this what was discordant note in the letter—Elsie's letter—to Warren Relf—Warren Relf, his dearest enemy? Was Warren Reif at the pension, then? Had Warren Relf been conspiring against him? In another flash, it all came back to him—the two scenes at the Cheyne Row Club—Warren's conversation with his friend Potts—the mistakes and errors of his hasty preconceptions. How one fundamental primordial blunder had coloured and distorted all his views of the case! He felt sure now, morally sure, that Warren Relf had rescued Elsie—the sneak, the eavesdropper, in his miserable mud-boat! And yet—if Warren Relf hadn't done so, there would be no Elsie at all for him now to live for. He recognised the fact; and he hated him for it. That he should owe his Elsie to that cur, that serpent!

Discordant note! Why, yes—see this: "Some day—you know when, dearest—I may face seeing him myself, perhaps. But not till then. And that may be never."

That may be never! O precious words! She was leaving the door half open, then, for her poet.

Poet! His heart leaped up at the thought. New vistas—old vistas long since closed—opened out afresh in long perspective before him. Ay, with such a flount of inspiration as that, to what heights of poetry might he not yet attain! What peaks of Parnassus might he not yet scale! On what pinnacles of glory might he not yet poise himself! Elsie, Elsie, Elsie! That was a talisman to crush all opposition, an "Open Sesame" to prize all doors. With Elsie's love, what would be impossible to him?

Life floated in new colours before his eager eyes. He dreamed dreams and saw visions, as he lay on his bed in those golden moments. Earth was dearer, fairer, than he ever deemed it. The fervor of love and ambition and hate was upon him now in full force. He reeled and revelled in the plenitude of his own wild and hectic imagination. He could do anything, everything, anything. He could move mountains in his fervent access of faith; he could win worlds in his mad delight; he could fight wild beasts in his sudden glory of heroic temper.

And all the while, poor dead Winifred lay cold and white in the bedroom below. And Elsie was off—off to England—with Warren Relf—that wretch! that serpent!—by the 9.40.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Empress Frederick on the Life and Death of Her Husband.

The following is a part of the letter written by the Empress Frederick which is published as an introduction to the memorial volume of her husband, prepared by Rennell Rodd:—

"As you knew him in sunny days when he was the picture of life and health, as well as in the last sad year when that life was overshadowed by sickness, I thought none would be better able than you to undertake the task of writing a short biography suitable for popular reading, which may make his name better known to the English public, and give him place in their affections beside that of my father, for whom he had so great a love, admiration, and veneration, and with whose views and aims he so truly sympathised. I feel sure that the life of a good and noble man must be interesting to all, and that an example so bright and pure can only do good.

"Those in humbler walks of life who are denied many of the blessings enjoyed by the rich, to whose lot fall the so-called good things of this world, are often apt to imagine that their burden is the hardest to bear, that struggles and pain and tears are only for them. These, perhaps, will think differently when they read of sufferings borne with such patience, and of duty so cheerfully performed while sickness was undermining the strength of the strong man; they will be able to enter in some degree into the depths of regret and disappointment felt by a ruler who loved his people at being unable to carry out the long-cherished plans for their welfare that he had so much at heart; they will gaze with admiration at the courage with which, when the shades of death were hanging over his path, he strode steadfastly along to the end.

"Grief and pain come alike to all; broken hearts are to be found in palaces as well as in cottages, and the bond of brotherhood seems strongest when love and pity unite all hearts, and reverence for what is good lifts up our souls. May this little history of the good and useful life of the Emperor Frederick appeal to the hearts of those who read it, and be as it were a greeting from him to his fellow-sufferers in the hospital, to whom I so earnestly desire to do a small service, and to which you have so kindly promised to devote your pen. Yours sincerely, VICTORIA."

Origin of Fans.

Kan Si was the first lady who carried a fan. She lived in ages which are passed, and for the most part forgotten, and she was the daughter of a Chinese Mandarin. Who ever saw a Mandarin, even on a tea chest, without his fan? In China and Japan, even to this day, every one has a fan; and there are fans of all sorts for everybody. The Japanese waves his fan at you when he meets you by way of greeting, and the beggar who solicits for alms has the exceedingly small coin "made on purpose" for charity, presented to him on the tip of the fan. In ancient times among Greeks and Romans, fans seem to have been enormous; they are generally made of feathers, and carried by slaves over the heads of their masters and mistresses, to protect them from the sun, or wave about before them to stir the air. Catherine de Medici carried the first folded fan ever seen in France; and in the time of Louis XIV., the fan was a gorgeous thing, often covered with jewels and worth a small fortune. In England they were the fashion in the time of Henry VIII. A fan set in diamonds was once given to Queen Elizabeth upon New Year's Day. The Mexican feather fans which Cortez had from Montezuma were marvels of beauty; and in Spain a large black fan is the favorite. It is said that the use of a fan is as carefully taught in that country as any other branch of education, and that by a well known code of signals a Spanish lady can carry on a long conversation with any one, especially an admirer. The Japanese criminal of rank is politely excuted by means of a fan. On being sentenced to death he is presented with a fan, which he must receive with a low bow, and as he bows, presto! the executioner draws his sword and cuts his head off. In fact there is a fan for every occasion in Japan.

An All-Rail Route Around the World.

A few weeks ago an editorial appeared in the "Oregonian" discussing the feasibility of constructing a railroad from the United States along the Alaskan shore to Behring's Straits to connect with a Russian railroad through Siberia to St. Petersburg, thus giving an all-rail route practically around the world. The despatches of last Sunday from San Francisco, tell of a traveller, trader, and miner, John W. Webber, at present in San Francisco, whose residence is Kodiak, Alaska, who confidently predicts the construction within the next ten years of just such a road, and declares it perfectly feasible. He says snow is never an obstacle along the Alaska coast, owing to the influence of the Japan currant, and as for Behring's Straits, they are only thirty miles wide and so dotted with islands that bridging would be made practicable. He speaks of Minneapolis people who are projecting the enterprise under consideration, and says that he has been down the Himalaya mountains through which the lines proposed will extend to Pekin, China, and Irkutsk, Siberia, and declares that the products of the country will abundantly justify the cost of building the road. He concludes by saying: "Of the resources to be developed the world is sceptical, but just as sure as the world moves that road will be built, and it will carry thousands of passengers and millions of tons of freight, and it will pay. Ten years will see it completed."—[Portland Oregonian.

The "Farm, Field and Stockman" says: Now that the "long days" of work are about over for a season, the farmer besides reading for his own benefit, and planning for his next year's work in the field, should give his attention to the teaching of his boys. This is the most important work for all concerned, and should be entered upon without fail. When fully occupied with the active duties of the busy season on the farm, the family was more or less neglected, but from now until spring, around the cheerful fire, or comfortable stove, the family circle should nightly gather, and an hour or two be profitably spent in social conversation, study and reading. There is something very attractive about winter evenings thus spent, and every farmer should look forward to the coming of such occasions with pleasure, and a determination that they shall be made profitable to himself and each member of his family circle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

We hear so constantly that the "relations" between this, that and the other powers are becoming so "strained" that as a rule we pay no great attention to any new announcement in that line. The latest "strain" is said to be between Russia and Persia, consequent upon Muscovite jealousy of British ascendancy of influence in the country of the Shah.

Canadian lawbreakers will now have to think twice before taking refuge in Mexico, as an extradition treaty, between that country and Great Britain, in which our Ottawa authorities have heartily concurred, is all but definitely concluded. It is very sweeping in its embraces, and includes no fewer that 73 offences, from threats to extort money up to dynamitardism and murder.

One must not yet give up all hope that Stanley is safe and sound after all, according to some recent despatches which assert that the explorer is proceeding at the back of the great oil rivers under the protection of the British Flag, and that the natives are friendly. Of course everyone will hope that this is true, and will be delighted to believe that the plucky little man is getting through.

Of the 128 young men who have graduated from the Canadian Royal Military College, and the 33 who obtained their discharge before graduation, about 45 per cent. are in the British army, or serving as civil engineers elsewhere than in Canada, while some 31 per cent. are engaged in various occupations, more or less of a military or civil engineering nature, in this country. Twenty-four of them are civil engineers, 12 are in the civil service, 4 in the Regiment of Canadian Artillery, 2 in the Infantry School Corps, 6 in the Mounted Police, 2 are instructors in the Military College, and the rest are engaged in miscellaneous employments.

General Harrison is to be inaugurated as President of the United States with a splendour that is expected to outshine the radiance of any similar event in the history of the Republic. His party are so gleeful at getting back to power that they intend to spare neither time, pains nor money to impress both friends and foes with the fact that it is a Republican President who is being enthroned. Already every hotel and boarding house in Washington is over-run with applications from those who wish to see the pageant, but, strange to say, with aself-restraint that does them credit, the hotel keepers it is said have agreed to stick to the ordinary transient rates, instead of making the hay which so much sunshine might naturally be expected to ripen very rapidly. The military display will be the most imposing thing of its kind since that immortal parade after the close of the civil war, and what with illuminations and other grandeurs, the expense is not likely to be less than $75,000, and it may be a great deal more.

For reasons which appeared to him to justify such a course King Milan of Servia has secured a divorce from his wife Natalie. He is not done with her yet, however, and is likely to learn by bitter personal experience the truth of the saying that "hell has no fury like a woman scorned." The way in which this particular woman who has been scorned is likely to show herself a fury, is by publishing a number of letters in which she says the real reasons are revealed why the king was so anxious for the divorce. Milan professes to be under no alarm at this threat because he says he knows Natalie well enough to rest assured that she would never condescend to such a way of taking revenge. His confidence is likely to prove ill founded, however, for the ex-Queen has entrusted her original documents to her banker, and given copies of them to an intimate lady friend with instructions to publish them at once upon certain eventualities. Just what these eventualities are is not certain, but the likelihood seems to be that a certain class of high-spiced, popular literature will be enriched by additions from the hands of their Servian majesties.

French Wines.

France has enjoyed the reputation of a much-drinking, but little-drunken country. Pure wines were plenty and cheap, and there was no swilling of strong spirits and drug-concocted liquors. Consequently the evils of intoxication were less prevalent than in many other lands. With the advent of the phylloxera and the wholesale failure of vineyards all this has changed until France has become a hopeful competitor for the palm of drunkenness. Recent Government reports show a startling increase in the number of crimes and cases of insanity due to alcoholism, and now a detailed statement by M. Laborde, of the Academy of Medicine, reveals the root of the evil. According to M. Laborde the manufacture of spurious liquors is conducted on an enormous scale, both in Paris and in provincial towns, and no attempt is made to conceal it. A very large proportion of the wines and spirits used are of this sort. And not only are these liquors great in quantity, but their quality is vile almost beyond description. Besides the familiar Indian hemp, nitro-benzol, and other products of the laboratory, poisonous in the extreme, such loathsome ingredients as hipparic acid, made from the drainings of stables, are freely used. The effect of such stuff upon the bodies and minds of the drinkers is of course ruinous. The Government is now about to order the classification of wines under the heads "natural," "manufactured," and "raisin," but shows no disposition to interfere with the manufacture and sale of these liquid poisons.

Dr. William Horne, in a recent issue of Hoard's Dairyman, says: "In travelling over large portions of the country I have noticed an exceedingly large quantity of smut upon the corn stalks. In fact, I do not remember ever seeing so much. Smut is a deadly poison. Many of our best cattle die every autumn and winter from the smut taken into the stomach by eating corn stalks. Before feeding corn stalks to cattle they should be carefully examined always. But especially this season of its prevalence."

The Use of Tobacco.

Tobacco contains an acrid, dark brown oil, an alkaloid, nicotine and another substance called nicotianine, in which exist its odorous and volatile principles. This description of the active principles of tobacco is of importance to smokers; for, when tobacco is burned, a new set of substances is produced, some of which are less harmful than the nicotine, and are more agreeable in effect, and much of the acrid oil—a substance quite as irritating and poisonous as nicotine—is carried off. Those fire produced substances are called, from their origin, the "pyridine series." By great heat the more aromatic and less harmful members of the series are produced, but the more poisonous compounds are generated by the slow combustion of damp tobacco. This oil, which is liberated by combustion, is bad both in flavor and in effect, and it is better, even for the immediate pleasure of the smoker, that it should be excluded altogether from his mouth and air passages.

Smoking in a stub of a pipe is particularly injurious, for the reason that in it the oil is stored in a condensed form, and the smoke is therefore highly charged with the oil. Smoking or chewing the stub of a cigar that one is smoking is a serious mistake, because the nicotine in the unburned tobacco dissolves freely in the saliva, and is absorbed. "Chewing" is on this account the most injurious form of tobacco the habit, and the use of a cigar holder is an improvement on the custom of holding the cigar between the teeth.

MISCHIEF OF CIGARETTES.

Cigarettes are responsible for a great amount of mischief, not because the smoke from the paper has any particularly evil effect, but because smokers—and they are often boys or very young men—are apt to use them continuously or at frequent intervals, believing that their power for evil is insignificant. Thus the nerves are under the constant influence of the drug, and much injury to the system results. Moreover, the cigarette smoker uses a very considerable amount of tobacco during the course of a day. "Dipping" and "snuffing" are semi-barbarities which need not be discussed. Not much effect is obtained from the use of the drug in these varieties of the habit.

Nicotine is one of the most powerful of the "nerve poisons" known. Its virulence is compared to that of prussic acid. If birds be made to inhale its vapor in amounts too small to be measured, they are almost instantly killed. It seems to destroy life, not by attacking a few, but all of the functions essential to it, beginning at the center, the heart. A significant indication of this is that there is no substance known which can counteract its effects: the system either succumbs or survives. Its depressing action on the heart is by far the most noticeable and noteworthy symptom of nicotine poisoning. The frequent existence of what is known as "smoker's heart" in men whose health is in no other respect disturbed is due to this fact.

AN EXPERIMENTAL OBSERVATION.

In an experimental observation of thirty-eight boys of all classes of society and of average health, who had been using tobacco for periods ranging from two months to two years, twenty-seven showed severe injury to the constitution and insufficient growth; thirty-two showed the existence of irregularity of the heart's action, disordered st

-:- YOU WILL FIND -:-

Urlin Bros., Dutton,

AND

A. D. Urlin's, Wallacetown,

HEADQUARTERS FOR

Christmas & Wedding Presents.

:o:

NO LARGER, BETTER OR CHEAPER STOCK OF

GROCERIES

was ever shown in this section. Teas, Sugars, Syrups, Currants, Raisins, Dates and Figs, Candied Peels, Etc., Etc.

:o:

A CHOICE LOT OF CHINA AND GLASSWARE.

New Patterns in China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Vases, China Cups and Saucers, Mugs, and a Fine Lot of Fancy Goods that are Very Cheap.

Immense Stock of TOYS and Fancy Goods for the Children.

:o:

HARDWARE OF ALL KINDS.

Cow Ties, Crosscut Saws, Axes, Lanterns, and a Full Line of Carpenters' Tools. TINWARE of All Kinds.

☞ A Job Lot of Table Knives and Forks at Half Price.

A Large Assortment of SILVER AND PLATED WARE. Cake and Cruet Stands, Pickle Dishes, Butter Dishes, Sugar Bowls, Spoon Holders, Cream Pitchers, and a choice lot of Fancy Goods which are both useful and ornamental.

:o:

—A FULL STOCK OF—

BOOTS & SHOES, OVERSHOES & RUBBERS

AT ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.

:o:

A call will convince you that you can get good value in every line we handle.
No trouble to show goods. Highest price paid for produce.

URLIN BROS., Dutton.

A. D. URLIN, Wallacetown.

THE PEOPLE'S POPULAR CASH STORE.

HOCKIN & POOL.

Bill of Fare for Christmas Week.

In order to make things lively for Xmas we have marked All Lines of Goods Away Down. Note the following prices:--

Dress Goods worth	50cts.	for	25cts.
" " "	40cts.	"	20cts.
" " "	25cts.	"	12½c.
" " "	15cts.	"	8cts.
Factory Cotton (yd. wide)		"	4cts.
White " "		"	5cts.
Canton Flannels		"	6½cts.
Grey Flannels		"	12½cts.
Crash Towelings	-	"	4cts.
Ladies' Mantles worth	$3	"	$1.00
Men's Heavy Shirts & Drawer			25c.
Ulster Cloth worth	$2.50	for	$1.00
Ladies' Astrachan Jackets		"	$20.00
Mink Sets Cheap.
Persian Lamb Sets Cheap.
Men's Overcoats worth	$7	for	$3.50.
" " "	$10	"	5.00.
Men's Pea Jackets	7	"	4.00.
Boys' Suits at All Prices.
Boys' Overcoats, All Sizes.
Men's Felt Hats worth	$1.50	for	25c.
A Good Trimmed Hat for	50cts.
Ladies' Buttoned Shoes for	$1.00.

CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Glass Sets, 8 pieces, at 25cts.
Glass Cake Stands, 25cts.
Glass Fruit Dishes, Breakfast Sets, Dinner Sets, Tea Sets, Bedroom Sets---all at Close Prices.

We show the Largest and Cheapest Stock of these goods in the west.

We are the only house that you can buy those SATIN GLASS NOVELTIES from, direct from Europe.

OUR LARGE STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

REDUCED IN PRICE.

GROCERIES.

NEW RAISINS.
NEW CURRANTS.
NEW PEELS.
NEW FIGS.
NEW TEAS.

Price our Groceries. Goods delivered promptly.

Call and examine our Goods before you buy. HOCKIN & POOL.

DUTTON, DECEMBER 27, 1888.

VOL. VIII., NO. 1, AND VALEDICTORY.

Again we give our readers our annual address; this time it combines our farewell, consequently we have not much to say and will diverge a little from the former language. The ENTERPRISE was started seven years ago this issue by W. F. Phelps with premature appearance, but we are thankful that with economy and hard work we have made a living and increased the plant. W. F. Phelps conducted the business until 1885, when he withdrew, leaving ourselves with but little experience to manage alone. However, we overcame the difficulties as they presented themselves and have, we believe, the business at present in the best state of its existence.

Since coming to Dutton we have made many acquaintances and found many friends. While the most of the business men have been very liberal in their patronage (which, as a matter of fact, was to their interest), a few have done little or nothing. To the former we return our many thanks; to the latter we will leave the world to deal with them as it may see fit.

We would ask that a good patronage be given to our successor, Mr. Sutherland, as he is a man of experience and ability. We trust he will satisfy in every department. We cannot say at present what changes he will make in the paper, but we believe it is his intention to enlarge at an early date. We ask our present subscribers to continue and induce their neighbors to subscribe and the paper will be made better. As we have said in the past, a paper is what the subscribers make it by their encouragement, for the publisher again expends in the business what he gets therefrom, hence the return to the subscriber.

Again we thank our many friends and patrons for past intercourse and should we enter into business of any kind in the future we would be pleased to meet them again.

We bid our many readers farewell and wish them a happy and prosperous New Year

Respectfully,
N. PHELPS

DON'T forget that you can buy a quarter of beef cheaper than you can a pound at the Dutton Meat Emporium. —JAS. BAKE.

WEEKLY WEAVINGS.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

THERE will be a total eclipse of the sun, partially visible in Dutton, on Jan. 1, 1889.

THE merchants report an unusual heavy sale in nearly all lines during Christmas week.

No trains excepting passenger, stock and perishable freight were run on Christmas over the M. C R.

SIFTON BROS., agents for agricultural implements, have engaged one of the stores in the Brown block for a store and showroom.

Mr. D. McPail, of Iona, purposes taking a trip to easern Ontario this winter, visiting friends and a like trip to the western states in the spring.

INSURE your buildings in the Waterloo Mutual. Risks taken on the cash or mutual systems. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. N. PHELPS, agent.

A MEETING of the Presbytery of London will be held in Knox church, Dutton, on January 3 for the purpose of inducting Rev. Mr. Wilson as pastor of the church.

THE annual meeting of the West Elgin Agricultural Society will be held in the town hall, Wallacetown, on Wednesday, Jan. 16, 1889, at 1 o'clock, sharp, for the purpose of receiving the auditors' report, the election of officers and other business.

This is our last issue of the ENTERPRISE, and we trust that all indebted to us in any way will call and settle immediately and not incur any cost or unnessary expense by their neglect. Next issue of the ENTERPRISE will be got out by our successor

ACCORDING to the Act passed at the last session of Parliament, compelling the reeve and treasurer of each municipality to make and sign a statement of the year's business, assets and liabilities, the same to be published and distributed among the ratepayers, has all been promptly done in this municipality.

THE Methodist church was filled to the doors on Sunday evening last at the anniversary service of the Sunday school. The pastor preached a sermon to the children on "The Christ Child." The service was a very interesting one, children and grown people giving the most excellent attention. The annual entertainment on Christmas night was also very well attended, especially considering the unfavorable night. The programme was a good one and well rendered. The Christmas music was very light and cheerful and the recitations and dialogues well given. The pieces entitled "Christmas Sights" and "Emblems of Christ" deserve special mention. The report was read by Mr Willson and showed progress all round. There are 14 officers and teachers and 116 scholars on the roll. Rev. E. Middleton was in the chair and the singing was in charge of Mr. Lacey and Mrs. Hill.

AT the entrance examination to High Schools, held in Dutton last week, W. Atkin, P. S. I., presided the first day and W. Rothwell, B.A., the balance of the time. Thirty-six candidates wrote.

MR. JAMES SHORT, formerly a teacher in the High School, but latterly at Cobourg, has secured a position in the Calgary schools. We will be pleased to hear from our friend Mr. Short often as letters from him on that country would be very interesting to our readers.

CHRISTMAS PARTY.—Christmas was spent very pleasantly at the residence of Thos. Kerr, sr., on con. 4, Dunwich. The family, which numbers twelve, was present excepting Mrs. Laing, of Woodstock, who was detained by some unknown cause. All were accompanied by their partners, with the exception of one who is still single. A number of grandchildren were also present. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr were the recipients of several presents, among which was a handsome cutter and robe, presented by their son of Bay City

THE annual meeting of S. S. No. 11 was held in the school-house, Dutton, on Wednesday, Dec. 26. Mr. A. M. McIntyre was appointed chairman and Wm. Rothwell, B.A., secretary. The trustees' report was read. Messrs. A. J. Leitch and L. J. Willson, auditors, looked over the treasurer's accounts and compared receipts, disbursements and vouchers and found them correct and a balance on hand in the treasury of about $100. The auditors' report was adopted as given. Mr. Dan. McPherson was elected trustee in the place of Neil McLean retiring. Three questions were discussed, viz., sidewalk and street crossing near the grounds; whether the noon intermission remain at one hour or be made an hour and a half, and the advisability of making a drain outlet from the grounds. We expect all will be acted on in a short time.

THE annual Sunday school entertainment in connection with the Regular Baptist church, West Lorne, was held in the church on Monday evening. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather there was a large audience, nearly forty dollars being taken at the door. Rev. O. C. Carey occupied the chair. The programme presented was of a highly interesting character, consisting of music, recitations, a cantata and tableauxs, all performed by the Sunday school scholars, some of the pieces were very beautiful and impressive and displayed an amount of talent seldom to be met with in children. We hope their parents will give them all the advantages they can afford and that their teachers will take pains in developing that talent. Rev. C. T. Scott made an eloquent speech, the moral of which was the inclination of the human family generally to practice a deceitful character, which he styled as "white-washing." A large number of nice presents were given to the scholars and friends. The whole programme was highly appreciated.

HERTEL,

Merchant - Tailor

EAST SIDE MAIN ST., DUTTON.

NEW IMPORTED

FALL -:- GOODS

My stock is very extensive with Elegant Fall Goods. Special attention has been directed towards securing the most complete and varied assortments of

New Suitings!
New Trouserings!
New Overcoatings!

Ever Displayed in this Village.

A visit is solicited from those who wish a

NEAT AND ELEGANT SUIT

—OR A—

STYLISH AND PERFECT-FITTING

FALL OVERCOAT.

Money can be saved by leaving your order with me. None but first-class work turned out. Best of Trimmings only are used. J. C. HERTEL, Merchant Tailor, Next door to Nelson's Hotel.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned havingpurchased dthe Bakery Business from W Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style.

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

A REASONABLE HOPE

Is one that is based on previous knowledge or experience, therefore those who use B B. B. may reasonably hope for a cure because the previous experience of thousands who have used it, shows it to have succeeded in even the worst cases.

BAPTIST Sabbath school entertainment in Leitch's hall on Friday evening, 28th.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown....a.m.	8 03		9 47p.m.	11 03
Rodney.....	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton a.m.....	9 09		10 29	1 00
Iona.....	9 29		....	1 36
Shedden	9 36		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't)p.m.	3 00	p.m.	1 10	5 25
Shedden.....	3 24		....	6 01
Iona	3 32		....	6 14
Dutton	3 45		12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00		....	7 10
Rodney	4 11		15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44		1 35	9 15
Windsor.....	7 25		3 45	4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 6.15 p.m 4.55 p.m. and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ..a. m.	9 55	p.m. 5 40
" Mixed ....p.m.	3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2 50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN, Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to ANGUS MACNISH, Solicitor, Glencoe.

Dutton Meat Market.

THE ORIGINAL.

Stands second to none in the County.

You can get what you want and when you want it. I buy and sell according to quality FOR CASH.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR

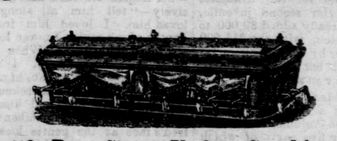
HOGS, DEAD OR ALIVE, HIDES, SKINS AND TALLOW.

☞ Parties indebted by favor are requested to settle account at once, to enable me to continue business and be your humble servant,

JAMES BAKE.

Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888.

Boar Hog.



THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles southwest of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

OUTSIDE OF THE COMBINE

25 to 50 Per Cent. Under Combine Prices.

A. C. GRAHAM, - Undertaker, Dutton.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

DUTTON MARKETS.

Flour per cwt.....	$2 50	to	2 75
Red Wheat per bush.	95	to	1 00
Barley		to	50
Peas.....	50	to	55
Oats.....		to	30
Beans.....		to	1 00
Potatoes per bag....	30	to	40
Green Apples	20	to	30
Hay per ton.....	9 00	to	10 50
Eggs.....			18
Butter			20
Shorts.....			75
Bran.....			65

NOMINATION.

The presence of the electors of the Corporation of the

TOWNSHIP OF DUNWICH

IS REQUIRED AT

BROWN'S HALL, DUTTON,

—ON—

Monday, December 31, '88,

To nominate persons to represent them in the Council for the ensuing year as Reeve and Councillors. The nomination for Reeve will take place at 10 o'clock, A.M., and for Councillors at 12 o'clock, noon. Should more than the requisite number be nominated the proceedings will then be adjourned until

Monday, January 7th, 1889,

When polls will be opened in the following places:—Polling Sub-division No. 1, in the Town Hall, Wallacetown; Polling Subdivision No. 2, in the School-house on lot 6, in the 7th concession; Polling Subdivision No. 3, in the School-house at Campbellton; Polling Sub-divison No. 4, in the School house on lot 12, in the 2nd Concession; Polling Sub division No. 5, in J. H. Westcott's waggon shop at Montreal; Polling Sub-division No. 6, in William McLandress' waggon shop, Iona; Polling Subdivision No. 7, in Brown's Hall, Dutton; Polling Sub-divison No. 8, in Dr. Leitch's Office, in the village of Dutton. Polls to be opened at 9 o'clock, A.M., in each place and kept open until 5 o'clock P.M., and no longer, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

D. C. CLAY
Municipal Clerk.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1888. NO. 2.

Professional Cards

ALEX. BEATON,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
WEST LORNE, ONT.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,
SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.
Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

Alex McKillop, M.D.
M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, L. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.
☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,
Barrister-at-Law,
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.
ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,
Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.
MONEY TO LOAN.
OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.
Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN
At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.
June 7, 1888. 1 yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE.
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY,
DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.
June 7.

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,
Surgeon - - Dentist,
Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,
SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,
Veterinary Surgeon,
DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS
For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.
F. A. Humpidge.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

The Star Loan Company
181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.
Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in
SAVINGS BANK!
from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. C asey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.
Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.
L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.
OFFICERS.
L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and P. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!
Pumps! Pumps!!
To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.
Repairing Promptly Done.
I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.
Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.
Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888. tf

A NARROW ESCAPE
People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

THIS -:- SPACE
BELONGS TO
—: W. H. VOGT, :—
THE JEWELLER.

To Farmers and Builders.
Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. Cochrane.
January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.
The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.
First-class Tailoring
IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.
30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED
This season to stock our new mills at Union.
L. J. Willson & Co.
Feb. 4, 1888. tf

-:- STOP! -:-
DON'T READ THIS
WE WILL SELL
COFFINS and CASKETS
CHEAPER THAN ANY HOUSE IN OR OUTSIDE THE COMBINE.
NO HUMBUG! TRY US!
WE HAVE ALSO A LARGE STOCK OF
FURNITURE !
which we will sell at
Prices which will Astonish you. Call and get Prices.
W. I. Schultz & Son

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Dutton Iron Works.
MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.
The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-
Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN, Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

NEW
BUTCHER SHOP.
THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.
Patronage Solicited.
M. McNULTY.

Expel the worms by using the safe and reliable anthelmintic Freman's Worm Powders.

HITCH UP!
But before you do that come 'round to
M'MILLAN'S - HARNESS - SHOP

BLANKETS, RUBBER RUGS, GOAT ROBE TRUNKS, VALISES, HALTERS, ETC. ETC.
WHIPS, BRUSHES, BRIDLES, OMBS, HARNESS OIL, ETC., ETC.
and buy a set of
HAND-MADE -:- HARNESS
Manufactured out of the Choicest Stock available in the country, at Moderate Prices. Those of my customers who want a SUPERIOR ARTICLE can, at a little additional, befurnished with Traces of Genuine American Oak Tanned Leather
:o:
A LARGE NUMBER OF
CURLED HAIR FACED COLLARS
Warranted to work with safety.
☞ The highest price will be paid for Cordwood, Beech and Maple, in exchange for Harness.
All who want an honest and serviceable article are cordially invited to call.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown....a.m.	8 03		9 47p.m	11 02
Rodney..	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton a.m	9 0		10 29	1 00
Iona	9 20		....	1 36
Shedden	9 36		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't)p.m	3 00 p.m	1 10	5 25
Shedden	3 24	....	6 01
Iona	3 32	....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Bidgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 6.15 p.m 4.55 p.m. and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ..a. m	9 55p.m.	5 40
" Mixed ....p.m.	3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2 50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

SALESMEN WANTED.
Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co,
Empire Nurseries, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.
Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

Largest Circulation in Western Ontario.
—:THE:—
FREE PRESS
LONDON - CANADA.
The Free Press is the only newspaper in the West receiving the Associated Press despatches. It contains ALL THE NEWS by Cable, Telegraph, Telephone and Mail, up to the hour of going to press. It gives in each issue original and valuable Illustrations of men and things, and is the only newspaper in Canada employing its own artists.
The Weekly Free Press
$1 PER YEAR. POSTAGE FREE.
Established Nearly Half a Century.
"THE THREE GRACES"
AND "BY THE LAKESIDE,"
TWO HANDSOME CHROMOS.
Also a beautiful Christmas Number, comprising 36 pages, given away free to every subscriber for 1889.
$6,000 in Premiums,
Comprising New and Useful Articles, given away free to agents. The most liberal inducements ever offered in Canada to agents. Send for agent's outfit and terms.
THE FREE PRESS
Is the only Morning and Evening Paper published in Western Ontario. It is forwarded on all early morning trains, reaching all places between Toronto and Windsor by night a.m., and is the only daily paper received at points west of London before the afternoon. The live newspaper of the west, $5 per year, postage free. Sold by agents everywhere. Address—
FREE PRESS CO.,
LONDON, CANADA.

Dutton Meat Market.
THE ORIGINAL.
Stands second to none in the County.
You can get what you want and when you want it. I buy and sell according to quality FOR CASH.
HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR
HOGS, DEAD OR ALIVE,
HIDES, SKINS AND TALLOW.
☞ Parties indebted by favor are requested to settle account at once, to enable me to continue business and be your humble servant.
JAMES BAKE.
Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888.

Luxuriant Hair
Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.
Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."
Ten Years Younger.
Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."
A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.
The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too earnestly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to bodily and temperate habits.
Ayer's Hair Vigor,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by Druggists and Perfumers

PREVAILING SICKNESS.
The most prevailing complaints at this season are rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, inflammations and congestions. For all these and other painful troubles Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best internal and external remedy.
Victoria Carbolic Salve is a great aid to internal medicine in the treatment of scrofulous sores, ulcers and abscesses of all kinds.
ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE NOMINATIONS.

On Monday, at 10 o'clock, the Clerk, D. C. Clay, Esq., opened the nominations for the office of Reeve of Dunwich for the year 1889. The nominations came in slowly and the time was nearly up when the last one was made. Following are the nominations:—A. J. Leitch, by Samuel McColl and Arch. P. McMillan; Duncan Buchanan, by H. Garbutt and A. P. McMillan; Alex. A. McKillop, by Duncan Buchanan and Richard Bobier; Geo. W. Ling, M. D., by Alex. McKillop and H. Braddon. A poll was demanded on behalf of A. J Leitch by Samuel McColl, and after declaring that a poll would be opened on the following Monday the Clerk declared the proceedings closed until 12 o'clock, when the Councillors were nominated as follows:—Ward No. 1—H. Garbutt, by H. Braddon and A. P. McMillan. Ward No. 2—John D. McDermid, by John C. McRae and Peter McKellar; Robert Hine, by Donald McKenzie and Thos. Woolridge; Jas. Beaty, by Alex. McRae and A. J Leitch. Ward No. 3—Peter J. McCallum, by Samuel McColl and Daniel Patterson. Ward No. 4—Duncan McLean, by Richard Bobier and Levi Pollard; Edward McKellar, by Donald McWilliam and Alex. Black. This closed the nominations, and after declaring Messrs. Garbutt and McCallum elected by acclamation, and that polls would be opened in Wards 2 and 4, Mr. Clay asked that they would select a chairman from those present, as he could not stay to the meeting.

Mr. James Beaty was unanimously chosen chairman, and after a few remarks introduced Mr. A. J Leitch, the Reeve for 1888, and who is again in the field. Mr. Leitch stated that when he entered the Council in 1888 there were a great many difficult questions to deal with, there being no less than 6 lawsuits threatening the Township. Now there is nothing of the kind on hand, the Township is free from debt, and he believed the Township was never in a better position He found fault with the present system of ward appropriations and believed that they had better be done away with, as better work could be done and better satisfaction given without it. Mr. Leitch also touched upon the financial report, county matters and his influence in the County Council, the new school section, giving his reasons for voting against a new section, and stating in reference to the High School that he was not trying to have the school saddled upon the municipality and that he could not do so if he wanted to. He spoke briefly on the subject of roads and the disputed gravel pit, and thanking the audience for their patient hearing asked re-election on the grounds that there would be many difficult questions to be settled the coming year which he would perhaps be better able to deal with than others.

Mr. McKillop, who is a new aspirant for the Reeveship, was next called upon. He stated that he had been asked some time ago by many electors to become a candidate and had decided to do so, saying that he had been working for some time and that Mr. Leitch would find it out soon enough. He gave a summary of his doings in Ward No. 4 during the past two years he had been in the Council. He was not in favor of doing away with the ward appropriations, as the money was generally better expended in this manner than it was by giving grants to roads. The material used had been poor and he thought that better material should in all cases be used on the public roads. Mr. McKillop also spoke for some time on the new school section question and considerable cross-firing was indulged in by persons in the audience. He asked the electors to support him if they thought him worthy of the trust and if they thought he was not to vote against him. After thanking them for their attention he took his seat.

Mr. Buchanan thanked his friends for nominating him and declined to appear as a candidate, saying a few words in favor of Mr. McKillop.

Dr. Ling spoke at some length upon some improvements which he thought should be made in the management of municipal affairs and gave the old Councils a lively setting out for the way they had conducted matters in past years, raking up some old affairs which would perhaps better be forgotten. He thanked his friends for nominating him and withdrew from the contest.

It having been decided at the start to allow the two remaining candidates for Reeve 15 minutes to reply, Messrs. Leitch and McKillop again addressed the meeting and some lively spats were had. The interruptions from the audience were so frequent that the chairman called upon those who had anything to say to come to the platform and say it, but only one, Mr. D. McMillan responded. He gave a lengthy stump speech on the Stalker-McMillan lawsuit, pitching into everybody at a lively rate. When Mr. McMillan sat down the Chairman asked if any others had anything to say on the Reeveship, and no one answering he then called upon the Councillors to state their cases to the electors.

Mr. Garbutt, the Councillor for Ward No. 1, thanked the electors for electing him by acclamation and said he would not make a lengthy speech, but gave a few figures on the expenditures in his ward, and touched on several disputed points in a spicy manner, saying, as he took his seat, that he would make room for those who wanted to fight.

Mr. McDermid, one of the nominees for Ward No. 2 and an old member of the Council, devoted his time principally to defending his action on the gravel pit question, saying that he had been misrepresented by the Reeve regarding it. He also spoke on other points under discussion, saying that he would discuss them further at a meeting to be held by him and his opponent at the rink, on Friday evening, at 7 o'clock.

Mr. Hine, a new aspirant for municipal honors in Ward No. 2, gave his opponent, Mr. McDermid, a lively talking to about his actions while in the Council and the means he was said to have used to obtain votes, and after thanking his friends for nominating him left discussion until Friday evening.

Mr. Beaty, another nominee for Ward 2, declined the honor conferred on him by his friends with thanks.

Mr. McCallum, who was elected by acclamation for Ward No. 3, on account of the late hour did not make any speech, but thanked the electors for returning him by acclamation.

Messrs. McLean and McKellar, both new men in the field for Ward No. 4, gave a few well timed remarks, but did not go into details on account of the lateness of the hour, but will have their say this (Thursday) night in Tracey's school house at 7 o'clock. Both promised to do their best for the Township and are pretty evenly matched.

At the close a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Beaty for the excellent manner in which he had filled the chair, without showing partiality to any of the candidates, and the good order maintained.

The attendance was very large and during the meeting Brown's Hall being so crowded that it was found necessary to remove to the rink to accommodate the people.

Some Sensible Suggestions.

I attended the meeting of the Board of High School Trustees, on Saturday last, and was exceedingly pleased to see such a large attendance of the ratepayers of the High School District, indicating, as we think, a deepening interest in the welfare of the school. The recent action of the Board had been very keenly criticised and a deputation had been appointed to ask for a reconsideration of their decision and to engage Mr Rothwell for at least another six months. Explanations were given as to their action, and by the courtesy of the Board a very interesting conversation took place. Messrs. McIntyre, Beaty and Pool addressed the Board, and several others who were present also spoke, expressing their satisfaction with the teaching staff.

There were a few things which struck "Watchman" as being misapprehensions of the design of the School. Several of the speakers for instance appearing to think that the one purpose of the School was just simply to secure certificates, and one trustee spoke of the large amount of money it cost to pass so few, quietly overlooking the benefits that the many had received who did not even write for certificates. "Watchman" hopes that hundreds will spend one or two terms at the School who will never write for certificates or who may never be able to attend a university. The time spent, the lessons learned, will be of untold benefit to these. I would like to make a few suggestions to all concerned:

1st. To the Trustees—If the Board could occasionally spend a morning in the School, watching the work done, etc., it would be an encouragement to the staff and, I am sure, beneficial to themselves as entrusted with the interests of the School.

2nd. To the Ratepayers—Let many of them attend the meetings of the Board and thus let the members see that their interest in the School is real abiding and deep, and it will be a stimulus and encouragement to the Board to do their very best for the School.

3rd. To the Teaching Staff—And I conceive that their task has been arduous and somewhat discouraging for several reasons, yet we trust their zeal for the best interests of the School will if possible yet largely increase, and that they will do their utmost to raise its reputation to the very highest point.

4th. To the Pupils—Try and be present at the very beginning of the term. The teachers and the school have been placed at a disadvantage by scholars coming in almst every week of the term. Be on hand on Monday, Jan. 7th, and let nothing keep you from school but absolute necessity. It would amazingly help the whole school if all endeavored to start at the commencement and run to the finish.

Pardon this long letter. My only apology for it is interest in the school.
WATCHMAN.

Kind Words.

Mr. N. Phelps, of Dutton, has sold the ENTERPRISE plant and good will to a Mr. Sutherland, who we understand will enlarge and otherwise improve that paper. Mr. S. is a practical young man and will no doubt boom the ENTERPRISE. The people of Dutton should be proud of their paper and patronize it to a man.—Belmont Times.

Underdone cakes in the course of time will batter down any man's stomach.

National Pills are a mild purgative, acting on the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, removing all obstructions.

There is a story told of a negro who was asked his opinion of opossums. Said he; "Dar is no truster a 'possum. Once I watched all night de hole of a 'possum, and at last de 'possum came out; what do you think de old rascal did? He came out and he was a polecat. Since dat day I'd neber trust de best 'possum liven."

ONE GOOD POINT
Out of the many possessed by Burdock Blood Bitters is that it may be taken at all the seasons of the year, and by either young or old. In this way the three busy B's are always at work doing good.

High School Board.

Dutton, Dec. 29, 1888.

Regular meeting of the Dutton High School Board held this date in the High School Buildings.

Members present—W. S. Jackson, P. Stalker, D. McLean D. McGregor, A. N. C. Black. P. Stalker in the chair.

Minutes of the last two meetings read and, on motion, passed.

Moved by D. McLean, sec. by A. N. C. Black, that the deputation now present be heard. Motion carried.

After remarks by the chairman D. McLean, D. C. Leitch, A. N. C. Black and W. S. Jackson, the deputation, were heard.

A. M. McIntyre addressed the Board, urging the advisability of retaining the services of Wm. Rothwell, M. A., as principal, also presenting a petition of the pupils of the Dutton High School regarding the action of the Board in deciding to part with the services of Mr. Rothwell Mr. Beaty then addressed the Board on behalf of Mr. Rothwell. Mr. Pool next addressed the Board on behalf of Mr. Rothwell, also Messrs. S. McColl, R. S. McMillan, Docker, Robt McMillan, Wm. McRae, Rev. Middleton, Arch'd McIntyre, Wm. Watson, Alex. McRae, M. Conn. Dugald Campbell strongly advised the propriety of retaining a good teacher when you get one. John Galbraith, J. D. Graham, A. J. Leitch, Mr. Morrison, all of which stated that in their opinion it would be in the interests of the School to retain the services of Mr. Rothwell as Principal for at least six months longer. Mr. Rothwell was then asked to address the Board.

On motion the meeting adjourned for one hour.

Board resumed at 8 p. m.

Moved by A. N. C. Black, sec. by D. McLean, that Wm. Rothwell be requested to send in his resignation at once and his services retained until the summer holidays at his present salary, and that Mr. Rothwell be asked to apologize to this Board for what he said to the Board at a meeting held on the 11th Dec., at which Mr. Gordon was Chairman; and the motion passed at a special Board meeting held on the 10th Dec., 1888, discharging Mr. Rothwell be now and hereafter rescinded. Motion carried.

Mr. Rothwell here made a statement regarding the above resolution which was accepted as satisfactory.

Moved by D. McLean, sec. by D. McGregor, that D. C. Leitch, W. S. Jackson, A. N. C. Black and Mr. Rothwell be a committee with power to engage two junior teachers. Carried.

Moved by D. McGregor, sec. by D. C. Leitch, that the Secretary be instructed to write the Minister of Education to extend the permit to Jas. Treemer, Esq., B. A., so as to enable him to teach during the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by D. C. Leitch, sec. by D. McLean, that the Secretary be instructed to advertise for 40 cords of green hard wood (Beech and Maple), two feet long and split so as to be easily put into a box stove, to be delivered in the High School yard and neatly piled as directed by the Principal, on or before March 1st, 1889. Carried.

Moved by D. C. Leitch, sec. by W. S. Jackson, that the Secretary advertise for a caretaker for 1889, specifying the duties to be performed. Carried.

Trenton has carried a by-law to spend $28,000 for a system of waterworks.

A ten thousand dollar fire occurred at Montreal on Monday morning.

Three acres of dwellings were destroyed by fire in Cincinnati Christmas morning. Loss, $300,000.

Twenty-four lives were lost by the burning of the river steamer John H. Hauna at Plaquemine last week.

An explosion at the Toronto Ammonia Works on Dec. 25th caused the death of George Sexsmith and the destruction of $20,000 worth of property.

J. Arnold, of Aylmer, was arrested on Dec. 29th on a charge of stealing $46 from J. Kindree, of Caradoc. He was tried before the Police Magistrate at St. Thomas on Saturday, found guilty and remanded for sentence.

Women can stand tight shoes, tight gloves and tight waists, but they very promptly draw the line at tight husbands.

To invigorate both the body and the brain, use the reliable tonic, Milburn's Aromatic Quinine Wine.

If time is money, those baseballists who have been stealing seconds all summer ought to be pretty well fixed for the winter.

RELIABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.
Procure a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil from your medicine dealer, and use according to directions. It cured Ida Johnston, of Cornell, Ont., of that complaint, and she recommends it as a sure cure. For 25 years it has never failed to give satisfaction.

He was fond of singing revival hymns, and his wife named the baby "Fort," so that he would want to hold it.

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

A boy out west has an ear shaped like a violin. That youth has an ear for music and no mistake.

WILL BE FULLY MET.
Indications of Dyspepsia, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Rising and Souring of Food, Wind on the Stomach, or a Choking or Gnawing sensation at the pit of the stomach are fully met by Burdock Blood Bitters which has cured the worst cases on record.

An Allegheny man was so badly frightened the other day that even his pantaloons became frayed.

A toilet luxury in every respect, Ayer's Hair Vigor never fails to restore the youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It also eradicates dandruff and prevents the hair from falling.

If men remembered everything that women tell them, nothing in this world could ever by any possibility go wrong.

Physicians prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla in cases of scrofula, and in every form of chronic disease, because this medicine is safer to take, and is more highly concentrated than any other preparation. It can always be depended upon as an effective blood purifier.

A REASONABLE HOPE
Is one that is based on previous knowledge or experience, therefore those who use B.B.B. may reasonably hope for a cure because the previous experience of thousands who have used it, shows it to have succeeded in even the worst cases.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

In the recent accident, four miles below Maberley, seventeen Canadian Pacific freight cars were wrecked, causing a loss of about $50,000.

While drilling on a farm a short distance west of St. Catharines on Monday night a pocket of natural gas was struck at a depth of 312 feet.

Kingston Retail Grocers' Association will protest against the Government increasing the duty on pork, as was asked by the Canadian packers.

Mr. Dewdney favours the acquisition of Mr. Redson's buffalo herd for the Rocky Mountain park, if they can be obtained at a reasonable figure.

The new Canadian Electric Light Company undertake to supply householders in Montreal with electric light at a less figure than is now being paid for gas.

The contract for the approaches to the locks of the proposed Sault canal has been awarded to Messrs. Ryan & Harvey, at something over a million dollars.

Mr. Perley, Dominion Engineer, says that the dry-dock at Kingston, when completed, will be the finest on the lakes, on either the American or Canadian side.

The new Canadian Pacific railway line between Montreal and Mattawamkeag, in Maine, is almost completed, and in about ten days freight trains will run over the line.

The total receipts of the Hamilton Art Exposition are $6,031, and as the expenses will not exceed $1,500, there will be a handsome balance left to endow the Art school.

The captain of an American schooner which put into Halifax for repairs asked and was refused permission to sell his fish there and had to tranship to the States under his license.

Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific shareholders in London are being asked to sign a petition asking the directors of the two companies to cease hostilities and work in harmony.

The teams sent out from Edmonton to meet Mr. Ogivie, of the Geological Survey, on his return from the Mackenzie River, failed to meet him, and nothing is known of his location.

The petition for the repeal of the Canada Temperance Act in the County of Frontenac has been signed by 2,019 persons, of whom 1,866 are qualified electors. The voting will take place in April next.

A man who appeared in the Montreal Police Court to answer to a charge of disorderly conduct said he was Jack the Ripper from Whitechapel, and that he wanted to be hanged for the murders he committed.

The Kingston grand jury very strongly urged the necessity of providing labour for the convicts, and suggested that the Government should start iron smelting works in connection with the prison, as such would not conflict with any private enterprise.

Monday afternoon a convict named Thornton, while working at the gas-house outside the walls of the Kingston penitentiary, slipped on a pair of overalls, took a couple of stovepipes under his arms, and coolly walked away. It was some time before he was missed.

Dr. Allen, collector of Customs at Fort MacLeod, says the Mormons are good settlers, but the people there will not tolerate the practice of polygamy, even should the Government feel inclined to close an eye on their peculiar custom.

The two Montreal police officers who a couple of weeks ago assaulted a private citizen at the Bonaventure station because he had remonstrated with them for arresting an Italian, who could not speak English, were fined $5 and $1 respectively by Judge Dandurand for an excess of duty.

A London cable despatch states that Mr. Duncan McIntyre has been invited by the Joint Committee of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific shareholders to undertake the settlement of the difficulties between the two companies. He has been promised full powers, and will doubtless accept and proceed to Canada at once.

At a meeting of the Queen's University Ima Mater Society, the question of Canada maintaining a standing army was decided in the negative. Major Mayne, R. E., of the Royal Millitary College, was in favour of an army of four or five thousand to take the place of the militia system, which he characterized as inefficient, incapable, and wholly inadequate.

AMERICAN.

Mr. O'Brien, who was defeated in the Boston mayoralty election on Tuesday, had been mayor of the city for four consecutive years.

Landserdel, of Allegheny City, P., who has seven wives living, quarreled yesterday with the last of them and then blew his brains out.

The feeling is growing that the exigencies of Republican politics will require General Harrison to call an extra session of Congress soon after his inauguration.

Ida Newman, a young lady well known in charitable circles in Providence, R. I., has married a Chinese laundryman, who was one of her Sunday school scholars.

It is announced that the United States whiskey trust has determined on a crusade of extermination against the distillers who have refused to join the combination.

To provide for the spiritual wants o poor Italians in America the Congregation De Propaganda Fide has decided to despatch priests from Italy to the United States.

Active steps are being taken in Indianapolis to suppress the White Caps, and many members of that organization have been indicted, with a strong probability of their conviction.

The United States steamer Andes sailed from New York on Saturday for Port au Prince with 100,000 cartridges and 1,000 Winchester and Remington rifles for the Haytian Government.

Gen. Legitime, Chief of the Haytian Executive power, says Hayti has international law on her side in seizing the Haytian Republic, which was carrying munitions of war into a blockaded port.

The United States authorities, who were advised that a large consignment of opium was being smuggled through Canada, succeeded in capturing on Friday night about $20,000 worth near Sandbeach, Mich.

Mr. John Henniker Heaton, M. P. for Canterbury, will visit the United States next year, and will endeavour to have a bill submitted to Congress providing for the adoption of a universal penny postage.

If Lord Salisbury adheres to his idea of not appointing any Minister to Washington during President Cleveland's term of office, it is probable that U. S. Minister Phelps will ask for leave of absence and go home.

Sheriff Smith, of Birmingham, Ala., has been re-arrested in connection with shooting into the mob which attempted to lynch Hawes, and the troops have been ordered to remain as further trouble is apprehended.

The Paris "Figaro" says that the Chamber of Deputies has played into the hands of the Americans, who always predicted the noncompletion of the Panama canal, and the Republic will be the first to suffer for their blunder.

A fight occurred on Sunday night at Wahalak, Miss., between negroes and white men, in which it is reported twelve whites and one hundred and fifty negroes were killed., There had been ill-feeling between the two colours for some time.

Congressman Butterworth, on Friday introduced a joint resolution proposing the appointment of a commission consisting of English, Canadian, and American representatives to consider a basis of union between Canada and the United States.

Bishop Vladimer, of Sitka, has given some startling evidence regarding immorality in Alaska. He says it is usual for the whites to buy Indian girls from their depraved parents for immoral purposes, who after a time are turned loose on the community.

Rev. Mead Holmes, of Rockford, Ill., who has been threatened with White Cap vengeance unless he ceases his crusade against the liquor traffic, now sleeps with a brace of revolvers under his pillow, and promises any White Caps who attempt to carry out their threats a warm welcome.

FOREIGN.

The Berlin National Zeitung denies that there is any truth in the sinister rumours regarding Emperor William's health.

A band of Chinese pirates in Tonquin has been dispersed by the French. Eleven of the pirates were captured and summarily shot.

It is said that the recent accidents to the Czar's train was caused by carelessness on the part of officials, several of whom will be tried.

The cowardly behaviour of the Egyptian troops in the recent sortie is assigned as a reason for the increase of the Imperial troops at Suakim.

Moroney, who was imprisoned in Kilmainham gaol for contempt of court under the Crimes Act, was released yesterday on the ground of ill-health.

All Spanish Treasury officials have been imprisoned pending an inquiry into the robbery of $240,000 from the Government's deposit bank in Madrid.

The Berlin "National Gazette" says if Emin has been captured it becomes more than ever a duty and an honour to send an expedition to his assistance.

It is understood the Rothschilds have contracted to construct at Batoum fifteen reservoirs for storing kerosene, with a capacity of 6,000,000 pounds each.

Emperor William has received a report from Gen. von Witlich, showing the possibility of Germany sustaining a war against Russia and France simultaneously.

Mr. Gladstone made a speech in the Limehouse town hall, London, on Saturday, in which he declared his belief that the time had come to grant Ireland Home Rule.

The British and American residents of Rome are subscribing money for the purchase of an album of Roman views to be presented to Mr. Gladstone as a souvenir of his visit.

It is stated that the Pope's object in granting permission to Italian Catholics to vote is to create a great Catholic Conservative party to keep alive the discussion of Vatican grievances.

Lord Dufferin was given a banquet in Bombay prior to leaving for England, and in his speech he said he handed over the country to Lord Lansdowns with a cloudless political hohizon.

A woman named Gallagher, on her arrival at Queenstown on Saturday from the New York steamer Umbria, was searched, and fifty dynamite cartridges were found concealed in her dress.

At yesterday's sitting of the Parnell Commission the Court ordered that Mr. William O'Brien must appear to explain the article in "United Ireland" reflecting upon the integrity of the judges.

The French Government announce they will introduce a bill into the Chamber of Deputies providing for a postponement for three months of the payment of the Panama Canal Company's liabilities.

Miss Weidmann, who was recently nonsuited in her action for breach of promise against Capt. Walpole, has returned to London from Germany with evidence of the birth of her child, and will apply for a new trial.

The English Government have not received and news confirmatory of the capture of Emin Bey and Stanley by the Mahdi, but the Belgian authorities have despatches which leave no doubt as to the capture of the former.

A letter has been received at Suakim from Osman Digma stating that both Emin Pasha and Stanley are in the hands of the Mahdi, and it is rumoured that both captives will be killed unless Suakim is abandoned by Egypt.

The latest news from Zanzibar represents the Germans to be in a dangerous plight. Bushire, with 2,500 men, is entrenched within 500 yards of the German company's stronghold, cutting off retreat to the sea and preventing the landing of supplies.

A correspondent in a despatch from London gives what purports to be the inner history of the Parnell letters in the possession of the Times. He says they were forged by Richard Pigott, a Fenian formerly connected with the Dublin Irishman, and that this fact can be legally established.

Women of Mexico.

"Naturally, their position is not to be compared to that of European women. The Kirguis woman is always bought from her parents by her future husband. As a rule the payments are made in cattle, as money is scarce among these people.

"A charming and good nature? girl can be purchased for, say one hundred horses, ten or twenty camels and a few hundred sheep, in addition to a large tent, some cloth and some money, if the man has any. Once the price of the girl is settled upon and one-half or one-third of the amount is paid the future husband can come to the tent of the girl's father, and is even allowed to remain there with her in the absence of the girl's parents, but only for a short time.

"When the whole amount is paid the husband can take his wife to his own tent. There in that country, as in Europe, it is not wise to let the future husband take his wife without getting from him all that he has promised to give for her.

"I remember a charming young woman who was bought by her husband for 150 horses. As the husband was very old and she was the third wife, and moreover as she bore him no children, she was beaten nearly every day and finally came to me for consolation. I have a sketch of her in one of my albums, and you will see that she is a most beautiful woman. Unfortunately, I could not change her position, and I fear that if her husband is not dead she is still beaten every day.

"The Kirguis look on their women, as I learned from actual conversation with a Kirguis chief, who introduced me to his young and pretty wife, as having no other object in life than to vie each with other wives in their efforts to please the head of the family.

"As the Kirguis woman I refer to was speaking of the fact that the tribe contemplated moving to fresh pasturages and showed her joy at the prospects of a change, I asked her if she did not want to go still further, and I would take her with me, 'far, far, very far.' She laughed and answered:

"'Not yet; but I see that my husband has the intention to take another wife. Should he do so, then, yes; I will ask you to take me away, far, far, very far.'

"I said 'all right; I find it is quite correct.'

"'How correct?' asked the husband. 'Do you mean to say that your custom to have only one woman is better than ours, which is to have many of them?'

"'Certainly,' I answered.

"'But do you not understand,' he continued. "that when they are many they get along much better? Every one of them understands that if she ceases to please me, or if she is capricious I shall leave her tent and go to the tent of another wife and live with the other wife. So they strive one against the other to be kind to me.'

"I did not approve of this reasoning, and I said: 'In our opinion there is something more in the woman than her person.' Our women,' I added, 'are united to their husbands not only by the body, but by the mind, heart and soul.'

"'What!' he exclaimed. 'But if my wife by accident should lose an eye, and be blind in one eye for life? Do you mean to say that I must remain with her for the rest of my life?"

"'Certainly,' I answered.

"'Then the Kirguis chief spat in disgust on the floor of the tent, and exclaimed: 'What a miserable law!'"—New York Herald.

A Japanese Girl's Dress.

As an infant, Yum Yum dresses like her mother, and the girls of Japan spend less upon clothes than do their American sisters. Spring bonnets they never get, for all womanhood here goes bareheaded. Skirts they do not use, and the long stockings and the high-heeled shoe never clasp their toes and calves. The Japanese girl wears no gloves, and she never loses her shoe-buttoner. Her shapely little feet clatter over the street in wooden sandals two inches high, and she holds these on by a white cord, which, tied to the wood between her first two toes crosses the foot and is fastened to the sands at the heel. In place of stockings she has foot mittens, and these have a "finger" for her great toe, and they do not come higher than her ankle at the leg. Above this comes her dress, and if the weather be wet she will think nothing of pulling it up to her knees and in wobbling along with her bare calves showing at the back.

This dress, however, is a curiosity. It has no pins nor hooks and eyes to keep it together, and as for buttons, they are a foreign invention. It consists of a long robe made of silk, crepe, or cotton, and this is open at the front like a long jacket. When worn one side of it folds over the other at the front, and it is held in place by a wide belt or obi. This belt is the finest part of Yum Yum's toilet, and it forms her girdle and bustle, all in one. It is four yards long and its material is as rich as her circumstances will warrant. Sometimes it is made of magnificent stiff fabrics and loaded with embroidery. It is tied in a big butterfly bow at the back, and, though not a pin is used, it keeps its place and holds the dress perfectly. Yum Yum, however, does not want her dress spread out like the tail of the peacock. She runs rather to the pull-back and the the loose folds of the unstarched stuffs, which wrap themselves about the form, showing its every outline. They impede the walking of the ladies, and the result is that the Japanese girl totters along in a half pigeon-toed fashion, and when she tries to run she goes off in a gait like a cow. The dress in the summer is open at the neck and Yum Yum does not know what a breast pin is.

My wife made a girl in the country, who had done her a favor, a present of one and pinned it at her neck. The girl was delighted with the present, but she at once removed it from her neck and fastened it to her girdle in the region of her bustle. The Japanese girls never wear ear-rings, and their only ornaments are on this belt. The belt is the costliest part of the dress, and I have seen some which I am told cost as much as $100 and upward. The cheaper ones go as low as a few dollars, and some can be bought which are made of cotton and bright colours, and which cost only a few cents.

VARIETIES.

Among the Mingrelian and Grusinian tribes of the Caucasus the scale of numeration is octodecimal—a scale of eighteen, that is; their hundred, to use a phrase not scientifically correct, but still intelligible to the reader, being eighteen times eighteen.

Some interesting experiments made by Sir John Lubbock upon his black poodle, Van, are of great value in evidence of his theory that the system of signals used in teaching deaf-mutes might bring about appreciable results, if adapted to the case of dogs.

The experimenter took two similar pieces of card-board about ten inches by three, printed on one of them the word "food," and left the other blank. He then placed cards over two saucers, and in the one labelled "food" put a little bread and milk, which Van, after his attention had been called to the card, was to eat. In about ten days he began to distinguish between the two cards. They were then thrown on the floor, and when he was told to bring one, he readily did so. When, however, he brought the plain card, his master at once threw it back, while the one marked "food" procured for him a piece of bread. In about a month he had learned very accurately to distinguish the difference between them.

Some other cards were then prepared bearing the words "out," "tea," "bone," "water," and also a few to which his master did not intend him to attach any significance, such as "naughty," "plain" and "ball."

Van soon learned that, in bringing a card he was making a request, and he not only became able to distinguish between the plain and printed cards, but also to recognize the difference between words. If he were asked whether he would like to go out for a walk, he would joyfully choose the "out" card from all the others, and take it in triumph to his master; or, mere conclusive still, run with it to the door.

The cards were not always put in the same places, and the greatest precautions were taken against the possibility of Van's recognising them by scent. Several cards were printed with the same word, and whenever he had used one, a fresh one was put in its place, that he might not, next time, be guided by his sense of smell.

A card marked "water" was left in a dressing-room, the door of which Van passed many times a day. Generally he took no notice of it, but would occasionally trot in and bring it out to his master. At such times, it was invariably found that he wanted to drink.

Van was exceedingly conscientious in his requests. One morning, he seemed to be feeling ill, but a visitor at breakfast nevertheless expressed a desire to see him bring his cards. His master urged him to do so, but, to the general surprise, he only selected the three dummy cards, one being marked "ham," one "bag," and another "brush."

"O Van, bring 'food' or 'tea'," said his master, reproachfully, and Van slowly produced the "tea" card. When the beverage was given him, however, he would not touch it, though, like many old ladies, he was fond of his cheering cup.

The Social Uses of the Kicker

"Kicking," of sufficient quantity, and quality, is a remedy for the lesser as well as for the greater evils of life, and whereas, against the latter, joint effort and particularly time and circumstances are required, against the former the kick may always be ready and efficacious, though single. And it is seriously true that a certain preparation for effectual public kicking in affairs of great consequence is the habit of private revolt against small forms of injustice and wrong. A man who will make a baggage-smasher pay for smashing, who will spend five dollars' worth of time to get a twenty-five cents overcharge refunded, who will give a day to removing the cause of a five minutes' delay which has lost him his train, will be ready to deal effectively with affairs of national administration. To "kick" implies high qualities—self-respect (as we have said), self-forgetfulness, contempt of ease, some courage (though not so much as may be supposed), and tenacity of will. These things are not plentiful, but a virtue of the practice of kicking is that it breeds them. And with kicking enough, and good enough, the face of the world would be changed.

Pain Cannot Stay

Where Polson's Nerviline is used. Composed of the most powerful pain subduing remedies known, Nerviline cannot fail to give prompt relief in rheumatism, neuralgia, cramps, pain in the back and side, and the host of painful affections, internal or external, arising from inflammatory action. A 10 cent sample bottle of Nerviline will give sufficient proof of its superiority over every known remedy. Try Nerviline. Large bottles 25 cents; trial bottles only 10 cents.

LATE CABLE NEWS.

Both Stanley and Emin Found—They Met in January of 1888 at Saukin.

Osman Digna lied very adroitly when he pretended that Stanley and Emin Bey had been caught. The latest information, and which is considered trustworthy, is that the two met on January 20th of last year at Wadelai.

A fortnight after Stanley's arrival Emin received via Lado a message from the Mahdi pompously intimating his intention to subdue the whole country as far as the great lakes and promising good treatment if Emin submitted.

Emin replied that before evacuating he must wait for the Mahdi to prove the legitimacy of his claim to the province.

AN AWKWARD POSITION.

Stanley, in the meantime, applied himself to restoring order among the troops and distributing stores and munitions. Emin told Stanley that he did not desire to leave Wadelai. The entire route to the east coast was most dangerous on account of the incessant agitation among the tribes and the hostility of Mwanga. Toward the middle of April, hearing that a force of Mahdists was coming, Emin ordered his advanced posts between Dafile and Lado to retire to Wadelai, and Stanley sent messengers to the Kings of Uganda and Unyoro.

URGING EMIN TO QUIT.

About the end of April, when the traders left Wadelai, Stanley was anxious, owing to the absence of news from the rear guard on the Aruwhimi, and was arranging to send a strong detachment in search of them along the route which he himself had followed. Stanley also urged Emin to leave Wadelai with him and regain the coast.

Stanley sent out several couriers with news for Europe. One was the courier who was sent by the foreign Consuls at Zanzibar to apprise Emin of the departure of the relief expedition. This courier had remained at Wadelai, and was sent back to the east coast after the arrival of Stanley. Another courier was sent in the direction of the Aruwhimi.

The copy of the Khedive's letter to Emin Pacha forwarded to General Grenfell by Osman Digna proves to be an exact reproduction of the original.

A spy from Handoub reports that the village is crowded with wounded Arabs, among them being several Emirs.

"WELL DONE, MY LADS!"

General Grenfell reviewed the troops of his command after the battle. He afterwards addressed them, praising the bravery which they had shown in Thursday's battle. He also read telegrams from Mr. Stanhope, Secretary for War; the Duke of Cambridge and the Queen, congratulating them on their victory. The troops enthusiastically cheered the General.

Capturing Mosley.

The truth of the following comical war story is vouched for by its narrator, John Esten Cooke. A body of Federal cavalry had approached very near the Confederate lines, and two or three of them who had gone out to forage, came to a cabin in the woods, and after careful reconnoitring, rapped at the door. A negro woman answered the knock, and seemed very much disturbed at the sight of the blue coats.

"We want some supper."

"Yes, sir."

"But first, is there anybody here?"

"No, sir."

"Are you sure?"

"Oh, they ain't nobody here but me—'cept"—

"Except who?"

"Only Colonel Mosby, sir."

"Colonel Mosby!!" exclaimed the speaker, with at least three exclamation points in his accent, and getting hastily into his saddle.

"Are you joking?" he added. "You'd better not. Is Colonel Mosby here?"

"Ye-s sir," stammered the woman in great terror; and at the same moment a low noise like that produced by the footstep of a man was heard inside.

No sooner did the men hear this than they turned their horses' heads and galloped off to their command, where great excitement at once ensued.

It was necessary to act with much caution. Mosby's desperate courage was well known, and he would make all the stouter resistance because he was sure to be hanged to the first tree if he was captured,—as a "bushwhacker" and an outlaw.

Elaborate preparations were made, the cabin surrounded, and the door suddenly burst open. Men rushed in with cocked pistols. But no rebel was to be found.

"Where is Mosby?" thundered the officer.

"Oh, there he is," was the trembling reply of the woman.

"Where?"

"There, sir." And the woman pointed to the cradle.

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, sir! I don't mean—I didn't mean nothin'. I call him 'Mosby,' sir.—'Colonel Mosby,' sir—that's his name, sir."

Awaiting her doom, she stood trembling before the intruders. They, on their part, looked from the woman to the baby, sucking away at his thumb; scowled, growled, took another look; saw that the old woman had told the truth; then they burst out laughing, took to their horses, and were soon out of sight.

A Great Sleeper.

The case of M. Chauffat, a Frenchman, is attracting medical attention in London. On one occasion last year, he slept continuously for thirteen days and a half, and, at the latest advices from England, he was lying asleep at the Alexandra Palace, having fallen into a sort of trance six days before. His appearance is generally normal, but at times his limbs are set in uncommon rigidity. No respiration is perceptible, and there is a constant twitching of the eyelids.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Resp'y, T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

Poetry has something divine in it and is necessary to the satisfaction of the human mind.

ITCHING PILES.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture: intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. DR. SWAYNE & SON, Proprietors, Philadelphia. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT can be obtained of druggists. Sent by mail for 50 cents.

A man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart; his next, to escape the censures of the world.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

Office always brings obligations and a certain kind of slavery.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, despomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Man—young, old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Men. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V LUBON 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont.

Don't You Know

that you cannot afford to neglect that catarrh? Don't you know that it may lead to consumption, to insanity, to death? Don't you know that it can be easily cured? Don't you know that while the thousand and one nostrums you have tried have utterly failed that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is a certain cure? It has stood the test of years, and there are hundreds of thousands of grateful men and women in all parts of the country who can testify to its efficacy. All druggists.

Whatever employment you follow with perseverance and assiduity, will be found fit for you.

The Power of Ink.

A small drop of ink, falling, like dew, upon a thought, proclaims that which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think," wrote Byron. The inspiration of his pen might give the dusky fluid such a far reaching power, and we wish we were possessed of such an inspiration, that we might, through a like medium, bring into such extended notice the matchless virtues of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, those tiny sugar-coated granules which contain, in a concentrated form, the active principles of vegetable extracts that Dame Nature designed especially to promote a healthy action of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Life has been compared to a race; and illusion improves by observing that the most swift are ever the most apt to stray from the course.

Poor Widow Bedott!

She tried to write love poetry to the deacon, and could frame only—

"Affliction sore
Long time I bore."

Had the lone creature used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the sure remedy for the weaknesses and peculiar ailments of her sex—she might have secured the deacon's favor by the cheerful character of her verses.

In a multitude of words there wanteth not sin.

DON'T DIM THE JOYS of Christmas Eve by having smoky lamp chimneys and poor light—Use only Carbon Safety Oil. For sale by dealers everywhere.

A. P. 430

KNITTING Creelman Bros., Georgetown, Ont. MACHINES

FARMS FOR SALE or RENT. ALL SIZES, KINDS and PRICES. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, DRAYTON, ONT.

CANOES. Send for Ill. Catalogue WM. ENGLISH, Peterboro, Ont.

PATENTS procured, Patent Attorneys, and experts Est'd 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

"THE DANDY" PATENT BAGHOLDER, which every farmer wants now, costs only 75 cts., and if there is no local agent, may be obtained (free by express or mail), on sending price to C. W. ALLEN & CO., World Building, Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 122 Yonge St., Toronto.

BEAUTIFUL STORY" AND GOLDEN GEMS of Religious Thought, by J. W. Buel and T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; beautiful illustrations, colored and plain; handsomely bound; large quarto book; plain type and just such a book that takes the eye at a glance; terms to agents extra liberal. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. C. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt., Established 72 King-st. E., Toronto

CANCER, TUMORS, ULCERS, SCROFULA, etc., cured permanently without the knife. Apply to DR. W. L. SMITH, 124 Queen St. E., Toronto.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. ROSS, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas

MONEY TO LOAN CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN. CAPITAL, $5,000,000. HEAD OFFICE, MONTREAL. OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION, Wellington St. Toronto. This Company is prepared to make advances on the security of GOOD FARM PROPERTY at lowest Current rate of interest, and on favorable terms. MORTGAGES PURCHASED. For information apply to the Local Agents of the Company, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto, Ont.

Stained Glass
FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

Farm Loans
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - MONTREAL.
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO.
This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms. For information apply to local agents, or to W. H. LONG, Manager, Toronto.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 65 Niagara St., Buffalo, N.Y.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES.
It is Palatable as Milk.
It is three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil.
It is far superior to all other so-called Emulsions.
It is a perfect Emulsion, does not separate or change.
It is wonderful as a flesh producer.
It is the best remedy for Consumption, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Cough and Colds.
Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

H. WILLIAMS & CO. Slaters and Felt ROOFERS
MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN
Roofing Felt, Slaters' Felt, Deafening Felt, Carpet Paper, Building Paper, Roofing Pitch, Coal Tar, Lake Gravel.
Office: 4 Adelaide St. East, Toronto.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888—No importations of English Sheeps. Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

DELICIOUS AND NOURISHING
ROYAL Dandelion COFFEE,
Manufactured only by
Ellis & Keighley, Toronto.

Diamond Dyes

Brilliant! Durable! Economical!

Diamond Dyes excel all others in Strength, Purity and Fastness. None other are just as good. Beware of imitations, because they are made of cheap and inferior materials, and give poor, weak, crocky colors. To be sure of success, use only the DIAMOND DYES for coloring Dresses, Stockings, Yarns, Carpets, Feathers, Ribbons, &c., &c. We warrant them to color more goods, package for package, than any other dyes ever made, and to give more brilliant and durable colors. Ask for the Diamond and take no other.

A Dress Dyed
A Coat Colored
Garments Renewed } FOR 10 CENTS.

A Child can use them!

At Druggists and Merchants. Dye Book free.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO.,
Montreal, P. Q.

AGENTS WANTED! Illustrated particulars about the Patent PINLESS CLOTHES LINE, free on application. It is new, successful and cheap. TARBOX BROS., Toronto, Ont.

CANADA SHIPPING CO.—Seaver Line of Steamships, sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. Saloon tickets, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60. Return tickets, $80, $90, and $110 according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate, $30; Round trip tickets, $55. Steerage, $20. Round trip tickets, $40. For further particulars and to secure births, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

Brown Engines
IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.
TORONTO ENGINE WORKS,
PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

ALMA, THE LEADING CANADIAN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN. St. Thomas, - Ont.
Seventeen graduates and certificated teachers in the faculty. Nearly 200 students last year. Graduating courses in Literature, Music, Fine Arts, Commercial Science and Elocution. Low rates—good board thoroughly. McLaughlin Hall, costing $20,000, now open. Elegant Dormitories for 60 more students. Address PRINCIPAL AUSTIN B.D.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Canard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brooks, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

LADIES, LOOK:
BERLIN WOOLS, all colors, 8c per oz.
SHETLAND AND ANDALUSIAN WOOLS, 8c per oz.; Saxony Wool, all colors, 10c per skein; Ice Wool, best quality, 10c per ball; Embroidery Silk, every shade, 10c dos. skeins; Arrasene, all colors, 30c dozen skeins; Filoselle, best quality, 45c and 55c dozen skeins; Macrame Cord, 15 colors, 10c ball; Felt, extra quality, 2 yards wide, $1.00 per yard; Woolen Java Canvas, all colors, 45c yard. Always on hand the newest materials for fancy work, at lowest prices. Letter orders have prompt and careful attention. Goods can be sent to any part of Canada by post. Write for price list. A trial solicited. HENRY DAVIS, Importer, 232 Yonge Street, Toronto. Please mention this paper.

LADIES' Dress and Mantle Cutting by this New and Improved
TAILORS' SQUARES.
Satisfaction guaranteed to teach ladies the full art of cutting all garments worn by ladies and children. PROF. SMITH, 849½ Queen St. W., Toronto. Agents Wanted.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS
Don't wait until you are burnt out or robbed. Buy a Safe now and sleep easy, and be sure and get prices, etc., of the New Champion Safe
S. S. KIMBALL,
577 Craig St., P.O. Box 945, Montreal, P.Q.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF. THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER. A PERFECT FOOD FOR THE SICK. A WARMING & NUTRITIOUS BEVERAGE. A POWERFUL INVIGORATOR
A Beautiful Christmas Card
MAILED TO
Every Boy and Girl
Sending a ONE CENT STAMP and naming this paper. Address
The Johnston Fluid Beef Co., 27 St Peter St, Montreal

STANDARD CHOPPING MILLS.
USES BEST FRENCH BURR MILLSTONES
FINEST GRINDER IN THE WORLD NO REMOVING PLATES AS IN IRON MILLS
STONES WILL LAST A LIFETIME
SPOUT
WATEROUS
20 INCH STANDARD CHOPPER
COMBINED FEED MILL ELEVATORS AND SCREEN
Have also Peek Corn and Cob Grinder. Send for circular.
WATEROUS
E.W.Co.-BRANTFORD, CANADA.

FREELTON, Ont., Dec. 17th, 1888.
W. E. W. Co.,
Brantford,
I received your letter saying you would accept my order for 20 inch Standard Chopper.
Please ship immediately, as I cannot afford to keep buying plates for this iron grinder, and I have a good deal of grinding just now.
Yours truly,
JOSHUA WHEELER.

Replaced three iron grinders last week. We have them for sale cheap.

Use Hop Bitters.
Cure All Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Liver, Kidney, Urinary Organs, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, DRUNKENESS. $1,000 Reward paid for a case they will not cure.

PURE GOLD FLAVORING EXTRACTS BAKING POWDER
BAKING POWDER IS MADE FROM ABSOLUTELY PURE CREAM TARTAR FLAVORING EXTRACTS ARE THE STRONGEST PURE AND BEST

Leather Belting
BEST VALUE IN THE DOMINION.
F. E. DIXON & CO., MAKERS, 70 KING ST. E, TORONTO
Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.
Subscribed Capital,.....$ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital,..... 2,500,000
Total Assets,..... 10,000,000
The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

Are you Bald. Is your Hair Gray or Falling Out, Try Dr. Dorenwend's
GREAT HAIR MAGIC. GERMAN
It is the finest in the world. Hair Tonic
Price $1 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $5. Try it. It will make your hair grow thick and strong. For sale by all druggists everywhere, or send direct to the manufacturer enclosing the amount.
A. DORENWEND, Paris Hair Works,
103 and 105 Yonge Street, Toronto, Can.

Young Men
SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address
M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto.

WANTED.
EVERY MUSIC TEACHER
in Canada to send for our SPECIAL CATALOGUES of Sheet Music and Music Books.
WE SELL CHEAPER
than any other house in the trade. Manufacturers of Band Instruments and Dealers in all kinds of Musical Merchandise.
WHALEY ROYCE & CO.,
283 Yonge St.,
TORONTO.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!!
Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILK HANDKERCHEIF, and The Magic Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Whiton Novelty Co., Toronto, Ont.

We are children who cheerfully join in the chorus
When Breadmaker's Yeast is the sweet before us—
Mamma tried all the rest,
So she knows it's the best,
Lightest,
Cause her bread is the whitest, her buns are the
And we eat all the pancakes she dare set before us.
BUY THE BREADMAKER'S YEAST. PRICE 5 CENTS.

I CURE FITS!
When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE. I have made the disease of
FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS
A life long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial

Senator Sherman on Annexation.

Senator Sherman is by many regarded as the coming Secretary of State for the United States in the Harrison Administration. This expectation gives to his views on political questions a certain weight in excess of that which belongs to them in virtue of his character and senatorial position, whatever that weight may be. The lengthy deliverance on the relations between Canada and the United States, ascribed to him in the New York Sun, will, therefore, be read with considerable curiosity and interest. Amusing the genuineness of the interview and the accuracy of the report, assumptions which, considering how they do these things in the United States, are in themselves by no means small, Senator Sherman's views as to the manner in which the annexation he sees impending is to be brought about, are not at all complimentary to Canadian spirit. The wonder is that he, or any patriotic American, would be willing to receive into the bosom of the Great Republic a people so destitute of manliness as to submit to being transferred in the manner he indicates. He admits, in effect, that the Maritime Provinces would "welcome political union" only if it come "without shock to their loyal sensibilities;" that Ontario is "still as loyal as the Eastern Provinces," and that Quebec, for reasons peculiar to itself, "will be the last fortress of resistance to consolidation." The three sections which contain all but a few hundred thousands of the population of the Dominion being thus unprepared—for what can be more inconceivable than the transfer of a loyal people from one flag to another without "shock to their loyal sensibilities?"—the manner in which Senator Sherman would proceed in the business becomes peculiarly interesting. He would have the President or Senate open communication with the British Government, "and proceed thenceforth by the ordinary diplomatic methods of treaty making." Can it be that a Senator of the United States is so obtuse as not to perceive that such a proposal would be a flagrant insult to both the parties concerned? Where in all the history of England's dealings, with her colonies can anything be found to encourage the supposition that she would not resent deeply an invitation to dispose of an important colony? And what more intolerable offence could be given to a free and essentially self-ruling people like the Canadians, than to assume that they and their country could be made the subject of barter between the Mother Country and another nation? If Senator Sherman understood anything of the spirit of the people of whom he learned so much in the course of a trip from Montreal to Victoria, he would perceive that when they wish to become absorbed in the United States they will ask for it, and that in the absence of such request, any negotiations, were such possible, between the United States and British Government, with that end in view, would arouse their fiercest indignation.—"Toronto Week."

A Noble Deed.

All the world has heard of Hoe's printing-presses, which have done so much to make books cheap. The founder of the business was Robert Hoe, a young English carpenter. The story of his arrival in New York is thus related by the man who saw him, a stranger, and took him in, little dreaming of the kindness he was doing to mankind in general:

In 1803 the yellow-fever swept the streets of New York like a Turkish plague. I kept a grocery store, and one afternoon was sitting outside the door with one of my children by my side. I saw a strange man coming along and reading the signs.

"Mr. Thornburn?" said he.

"Where did you get my name?" said I.

"I read it on the sign-board," said he; and he continued, "I am just come on shore from the ship Dragon from Liverpool. I am a carpenter by trade, but can't get work on account of the fever. If you can tell me where to board, I will pay when I get work."

"How old are you?" I asked.

"Eighteen years."

"Did you serve out your apprenticeship"

"I never was bound. My father was a carpenter."

"If my wife is willing, I will board you myself," said I, and I stepped to the foot of the stairs. My wife stood at the head.

"Good wife," said I, "a stranger standeth at the door. He has no money; he wants board. Will you take him in?"

"If thee pleaseth," she replied.

"If he takes the fever, will you help me to nurse him?"

"I will," she replied.

"Thank you, my dear," said I. "For this God will bless you."

Within a week he was down with the fever. I got the best medical advice. My wife and I nursed him. On the fourth day of the fever he was under the operation of powerful medicine. The fever ran through his veins and drank his English blood. I stood by his bedside. He fixed his eyes on mine.

"O Mr. Thornburn, I shall die! I shall die! I can never stand this!"

"Die!" said I, "Robert, we must all die, but you won't die this week." I spoke unadvisedly, but I thought the end would justify the means. "I hope to see you marry one of our bonnie Yankee lasses, and to carry your grandchild in my arms."

I saw this prediction fulfilled to the letter. From that hour the fever left him, and to-day his worthy sons are improving upon their father's inventions.

A Hairless Mare.

A very interesting equine curiosity, in the shape of a horse absolutely without hair, arrived at San Francisco the other day from Australia. It was exhibited to a few connoisseurs in horseflesh by the owner, R. A. Cunningham. The horse, or rather the mare, for it belongs to the latter gender, is a pronounced phenomenon. Her skin is black and as smooth and fine as that of a human being. She stands over fifteen hands high, and is about seven years old. It would be difficult to find a handsomer or more shapely animal. She looks well bred and is strongly developed. In action the movement of every muscle is plainly discernible by reason o the animals utter nakedness. Were it not for her abnormal appearance the mare would make a most excellent carriage horse. Anything more peculiar than the appearance of the beast, with her smooth, shiny skin, black as ebony, attempting to whisk from her back with a hairless, stumpty tail the flies clustering there it is impossible to conceive. The softness and smoothness of every part of her anatomy, even where the mane ought to be found, precludes the idea that the hair has been gotten rid of artificially, as by shaving. Mr. Cunningham purchased the mare in Echuca, Victoria, from a farmer, who utilized her as a buggy horse.

The greatest evils in life have had their rise from things that were thought of too little importance to be attended to.

When the cork-tree is about fifteen years old, the bark has attained a thickness and quality suitable for manufacturing purposes; and, after stripping, a further growth of eight years produces a second crop; and so on at intervals for even ten or twelve crops. The bark is stripped from the tree in pieces two inches in thickness, of considerable length, and of such width as to retain the curved form of the trunk when it has been stripped.

There is now not much room for doubt that Germany will shortly be driven to adopt vigorous measures against the natives of East Africa who have been making such short work of the German Colonization Company. The martial spirit of Bismarck and the Reichstag is being aroused. The old story, so familiar in the history of English colonization, will, it is not unlikely, be repeated. The enterprise begun by private individuals for commercial purposes will develop into a national expedition with conquest and domination as its results. The blunders of the Company and the insurrection thereby provoked have paved the way for military occupation and appropriation. Present indications seem to point to the Sultan of Zanzibar as the first victim.

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XLII.—Face to Face.

That hint sobered him. He roused himself to actual action at last. It was now eight, and Elsie was off by the 9.40! Too many thoughts had crowded him fast. That single hour enclosed for Hugh Massinger a whole eternity.

He rose and dressed himself with all expedition, remembering—though by an after thought—for decency's sake to put on his black cutaway coat and his blackest trousers—he had with him none black save those of his evening suit—and to approach as near to a mourning tie as the narrow resources of his wardrobe permitted. But it was all a hollow, hollow mockery, a transparent farce, a mere outer semblance: his coat might be black, but his heart was blithe as a lark's on a bright May morning. He drew up the blind: the sun was flooding the bay and the hillsides with Italian lavishness. Flowers were gay on the parterres of the public garden. Who could pretend to be sad at soul on a day like this, worthy of whitest chalk, when the sun shone and flowers bloomed and Elsie was alive again? Let the dead bury their dead. For him, Elsie! for Elsie was alive again. He lived once more a fresh life. What need to play the hypocrite, here, alone, in his own hired house, in the privacy of his lonely widowed bedchamber? He smiled to himself in the narrow looking-glass fastened against the wall! He laughed hilariously. He showed his even white teeth in his joy: they shone like pearl. He trimmed his beard with unwonted care; for now he must make himself worthy of Elsie. "If I be dear to some one else," he murmured, with the lover in Maud, then I should be to myself more dear." And that he was dear to Elsie, he was quite certain. Her loved had suffered eclipse, no doubt: Warren Relf, like a shadow, had flitted for a moment in between them; but when once he, Hugh, burst forth like the sun upon her eyes once more, Warren Relf, paled and ineffectual, would hide his diminished head and vanish into vacancy.

"Warren Relf! That reptile—that vermin! Ha, ha! I have you now at my feet—my heel on your neck, you sneaking traitor. Hiding my Elsie so long from my sight! Let I nick you now, on the eve of your victory. You think you have her safe in the hollow of your hand. You'll carry her off away from me to England! Fool! Idiot! Imbecile! Fatuous! You reckon this time without your hostess. There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. I'll dash away this cup, my fine fellow, from yours. Your lip shall never touch my Elsie's. Nectar is for gods, and not for mudlarks. I'll bring you down on your marrow-bones before me. You tried to outwit me. Two can play at that game, my friend.—He seized the bolster from the bed, and flinging it with a dash on the carpetless floor, trampled it in an excess of frenzy under foot for Warren in effigy. The relief from his strain had come too quick. He was beside himself now with love and rage, mad with excitement, drunk with hatred and joy and jealousy. That creature marry his Elsie, forsooth. He danced in a fever of prospective triumph over the prostrate body of his fallen enemy.

Warren Relf, meanwhile, by himself next door, was saying to himself, as he dressed and packed, in sober sincerity: "Poor Massinger! What a terrible time he must be having, down there alone with his dead wife and his accusing conscience! Ought I to go down and lighten his burden for him, I wonder? Such remorse as his must be too heavy to bear. Ought I to tell him that Elsie's alive?—that that death at least don't lie at his door?—that he has only to answer for poor Mrs. Massinger?—No. It would be useless for me to tell him. He hates me too much. He wouldn't listen to me. Elsie shall break it to him in her own good time. But my heart aches for him, for all that, in spite of his cruelty. His worst enemy could wish him no harm now. He must be suffering agonies of regret and repentance. Perhaps at such a moment he might accept consolation even from me. But probably not. I wish I could do anything to lessen this misery for him."

Why did no answer come from Elsie? That puzzled and surprised Warren not a little. He had begged her to let him know first thing in the morning whether she could get away by the 9.40. He wondered Elsie could be so neglectful—she, who was generally so thoughtful and so trustworthy. Moment after moment, he watched and waited: a letter must surely come from Elsie.

After a while Hugh's excess of mania—for it was little else—cooled down somewhat. He began to face the position like a man. He must be calm; he must be sane; he must deliberate sensibly.

Elsie was going by the 9.40; and Warren Relf would be there to join her. "I'll meet you at the station at the hour you mention." But not unless Relf received that letter. Should he ever receive it? That was the question.

He glanced once more at the envelope—torn hastily open: "Warren Relf, Esq., Villa della Fontana (Piano 3°)." Then Warren Relf was here, in this self-same house—on this very floor—next door, possibly! He would like to go in and wring the creature's neck for him!—But that would be rash, unadvisable—premature, at anyrate. The wise man dissembles his hate—for a while—till occasion offers. Some other time. With better means and more premeditation.

If he wrung the creature's neck now, a foolish prejudice would hang him for it, under all the forms and pretences of law. And that would be inconvenient—for then he could never marry Elsie!

How inconsistent! that one should be permitted to crush under foot a lizard or an adder, but be hanged, by a wretched travesty of justice, for wringing the neck of that noxious vermin! He stamped with all his might upon the bolster (vice Warren Relf, not then producible) and gnashed his teeth in the fury of his hatred. "Some day, my fine fellow, it'll be your own turn," he muttered to himself, "to get really danced upon."

Happy thought! If he let things take their own course, Relf would probably never go down to the station at all, waiting like a fool to hear from Elsie; and then—why, then, he might go himself and—well—why not?—run away with her himself off hand to England?

There, now, would be a dramatic triumph indeed for you! At that very moment when the reptile was waiting in his lair for the heroine, to snatch her by one bold stroke from his slimy grasp, and leave him, disconsolate, to seek her in vain in an empty waiting-room! It was splendid!—it was magnificent! The humour of it made his mouth water.

But no! The scandal—the gossip—the indecency! With Winifred dead in the room below! He must shield Elsie from so grave an imputation. He must bide his time. He must simulate grief. He must let a proper conventional interval elapse. Elsie was his, and he must guard her from evil tongues. and eyes. He must do nothing to compromise Elsie.

Still he might just go to the station to meet her. To satisfy his eyes. No harm in that. Why give the note at all to the reptile?

But looking at it impartially, the straight road is always the safest. The proverb is right. Honesty appears to be on the whole the best policy. He had tried the crooked path already, and found it wanting. Lying too often incurs failure. Henceforth, he would be—reasonably and moderately—honest.

Excess is bad in any direction. The wise man will therefore avoid excess, be it either on the side of vice or virtue. A middle course of external decorum will be found by average minds the most prudent. Ob this, O British ratepayer, address yourself!

Hugh took from his portmanteau an envelope and his writing case. With Elsie's torn envelope laid before him for a model, he exercised yet once more his accustomed skill in imitating to the letter—to the very stroke, even—the turns and twists of that sacred handwriting. But oh, with what different feelings now! No longer dead Elsie's, but his living love's. She wrote it herself, that very morning. Addressed as it was to Warren Relf, he pressed it to his lips in a fervour of delight and kissed it tenderly—for was it not Elsie's?

His beautiful, pure, noble-hearted Elsie! To write to that reptile! What desecration! Pah! It sickened him.

But it was not for long. The sun had risen. Before its rays the lesser Lucifers would soon efface themselves.

He rang the bell, and after the usual aristocratic Italian interval, a servant presented himself. Your Italian never shows a vulgar haste in answering bells. Hugh handed him the letter, readdressed to Warren in a forged imitation of Elsie's handwriting, and asked simply: "This gentleman is in the pension, is he?"

Luigi bowed and smiled profusely. "On the same floor; next door, signor," he answered, indicating the room with a jerk of his elbow. The Italian waiter lacks polish.

Hugh noted the gesture with British disapproval. His tastes were fine; he disliked familiarity.

On the same floor—as yet unchoked! And he couldn't get at him. Horrible! horrible!

For Elsie's sake he must assume some regret for dead Winifred.

So he told the landlady with a sigh of sensibility he had no heart that morning to taste his breakfast. He would go and stroll by the sea-shore alone. Everything had been arranged about the poor signora. "What grief!" said the landlady. "Look you, Luigi, he can eat nothing."

At a shabby trattoria in the main street, he took his breakfast—a sloppy breakfast; but the coffee was good, with the exquisite aroma of the newly roasted berry, and the fresh fruit was really delicious. On the Mediterranean slope, coffee and fresh fruit cover a multitude of sins. What could you have nicer, now, than these green figs, so daintily purpled on the sunny side, and these small white grapes from the local vineyards with their faint undertone of musky flavour? The olives, too, smack of the basking soil; "the luscious glebe of vine-clad lands;" he had called it himself in that pretty song in A Life's Philosophy—He repeated the lines for his own pleasure, rolling them on his palate with vast satisfaction, as a connoisseur rolls good old Madeira;

My thirsty bosom pants for sunlit waters,
And luscious glebe of vine-clad lands,
And chanted psalms of freedom's bronze-cheeked daughters,
And sacred grasp of brotherly hands.

That was written before he knew Winifred! His spirits were high. He enjoyed his breakfast. A quarter to nine by the big church clock; and Elsie goes at 9.40.

He strolled down at his leisure to the station with his hands in his pockets. Fresh air and sunshine smiled at his humour. He would have liked to hide himself somewhere, and "see unseen," like Paris with the goddesses in the della of Ida; but stern fact intervened, in the shape of that rigid continental red-tape railway system which admits nobody to the waiting-room without the passport of a ticket. He must buy a ticket for form's sake, then, and go a little way on the same line with them; just for a station or two—say to Monte Carlo.—He presented himself at the wicket accordingly, and took a first single as far as the Casino.

In the waiting room he lurked in a dark corner, behind the bookstall with the paper-covered novels. Elsie and Relf would have plenty to do, he shrewdly suspected, in looking after their own luggage without troubling their heads about casual strangers. So he lurked and waited. The situation was a strange one. Would Elsie turn up? His heart stood still. After so many years, after so much misery, to think he was waiting again for Elsie!

As each new-comer entered the waiting-room, his pulse leaped again with a burst of expectation. The time went slowly: 9.30, 9.25 9.36, 9.38—would Elsie come in time for the 9.40!

A throb! a jump!—alive! alive! It was Elsie, Elsie, Elsie, Elsie!

She never turned; she never saw. She walked on hastily, side by side with Warren, the serpent, the reptile. Hugh let her pass out on to the platform and choose her carriage. His flood of emotion fairly overpowered him. Then he sneaked out with a hangdog air, and selected another compartment for himself, a long way behind Elsie's. But when once he was seated in his place, at his ease he let his pent-up feelings have free play. He sat in his corner, and cried for joy. The tears followed one another unchecked down his cheeks. Elsie was alive! He had seen Elsie.

The train rattled on upon its way to the frontier. Bordighera, Ventimiglia, the Roya, the Nervia, were soon passed. They entered France at the Point St-Louis.

Elsie was crying in her carriage too—crying for poor tortured, heart-broken Winifred. And not without certain pangs of regret for Hugh as well. She had loved him once, and he was her own cousin.

And all the time, Hugh Massinger, in his own carriage, was thinking—not of poor dead Winifred, not of remorse, or regret, or penitence; not of his sin and the mischief it had wrought—but of Elsie. The bay of Mentone smiled lovely to his eyes. The crags of the steep seaward scrap on the Bay Martin side glistened and shone in the morning sunlight. The rock of Monaco rose sheer like a painter's dream from the sea in front of him. And as he stepped from the carriage at Mont Carlo station, with the mountains above and the gardens below, flooded by the rich Mediterranean sunlight, he looked about him at the scene in pure aesthetic delight, saying to himself in his throbbing heart that the world after all was very beautiful, and that he might still be happy at last with Elsie.

CHAPTER XLIII.—At Monte Carlo.

Hugh had not had the carriage entirely to himself all the way; a stranger got in with him at Mentone station. But so absorbed was Hugh in his own thoughts that he hardly noticed the newcomer's presence. Full of Elsie and drunk with joy, he had utterly forgotten the man's very existence more than once. Crying and laughing by turns as he went, he must have impressed the stranger almost like a madman. He had smiled and frowned and chuckled to himself, exactly as if he had been quite alone; and though he saw occasionally, with a careless glee, that the stranger leaned back nervously in his seat and seemed to shrink away from him, as if in bodily fear, he scarcely troubled his head at all about so insignificant and unimportant a person. His soul was all engrossed with Elsie. What was a casual foreigner to him, with Elsie, Elsie, Elsie, recovered!

The Casino gardens were already filled with loungers and children—gamblers' children, in gay Parisian dresses—but the gaming-rooms themselves were not yet open. Hugh, who had come there half by accident, for want of somewhere better to go to, and who meant to return to San Remo by the first train, strolled casually without any thought to a seat on the terrace. Preoccupied as he was, the loveliness of the place nevertheless took him fairly by surprise. His poet's soul lay open to its beauty. He had never visited Monte Carlo before; and even now he had merely mentioned the name at random as the first that occurred to him when he went to take his ticket at the San Remo booking-office. He had stumbled upon it wholly by chance. But he was glad he had come; it was all so lovely. The smiling aspect of the spot took his breath away with wonder. And the peaceful air of all that blue bay soothed somewhat his feverish excitement at the momentous discovery that Elsie, his Elsie, was still living. Elsie was alive, and he must be a poet still. He must build up a fortune for himself and for Elsie.

Somebody touched his elbow as he sat there. He looked up, not without some passing tinge of annoyance. What a bore to be discovered! He didn't want to be disturbed or recognized just then—at Monte Carlo—and with Winifred lying dead on her bed at San Remo!

It was a desultory London club acquaintance—a member of the Savage—and with him was the man who had come with Hugh in the train from Mentone.

"Hullo, Massinger," the desultory Savage observed compliacently: "who'd ever thought of meeting you here? Down in the South for the winter, or on a visit? Come for pleasure, or is your wife with you? Whitestrand too much for you in a foggy English November, he?"

Hugh made up his mind at once to his course of action; he would say not a single word about Winifred. "On a visit," he answered, with some slight embarrassment. "I expect to stop only a week or two." As a matter of fact, it was not his intention to remain very long after Winifred's funeral. He was in haste, as things stood, to return to England—and Elsie. "I came over with your friend from Mentone this morning, Lock."

"And he took you for a maniac, my dear boy," the other answered with a quiet smile. "I've duly explained to him that you are not mad, most noble Massinger; you're only a poet. The terms, though nearly, are not quite synonymous." Then he added in French: "Let me introduce you now to one another. M. le Lieutenant Fedor Raffalevsky, of the Russian navy."

M. Raffalevsky bowed politely. "I fear, Monsieur," he said with a courtly air, "I caused you some slight surprise and discomfort by my peculiar demeanor in the train this morning.—To tell you the truth, your attitude discomposed me. I was coming to Monte Carlo to join in the play, and I carried no less a sum for the purpose than three hundred thousand francs about my body. Not knowing I had to deal with a person of honor, I felt somewhat nervous, you may readily conceive, as to your muttered remarks and apparent abstraction. Figure to yourself my situation. So much money makes one naturally fanciful! Monsieur, I trust, will have the goodness to forgive me."

"To say the truth," Hugh answered frankly, "I was so much absorbed in my own thoughts that I scarcely noticed any little hesitation you may have happened to express in your looks and manner. Three hundred thousand francs is no doubt a very large sum. Why it's twelve thousand pounds sterling—isn't it, Lock?—You mean to try your luck, then, en gros, Monsieur?"

The Russan smiled. "For once," he answered nodding his head good-humouredly. "I have a system, I believe: an infallible system. I'm a mathematician myself by taste and habit. I've invented a plan for tricking fortune—the only safe one ever yet discovered.'

Hugh shook his head almost mechanically. "All systems alike are equally bad," he replied in a politely careless tone. Gambler as he had always been by nature, he had too much commonsense to believe in martingales. "The bank's bound to beat you in the long run, you know. It has the deepest purse, and must win in the end, if you go on long enough."

The Russian's face wore a calm expression of superior wisdom. "I know better," he answered quietly. "I have worked for years at the doctrine of chances. I've calculated the odds to ten places of decimals. If I hadn't, do you think I'd risk three hundred thousand francs on the mere turn of a wretched roulette table?"

The doors of the Casino were now open, and players were beginning to crowd the gambling rooms. "Let's go in and watch him," Lock suggested in English. "There can be no particular harm in looking on. I'm not a player myself, like you, Massinger; but I want to see whether this fellow really wins or loses. He believes in his own system most profoundly, I observe. He's a very nice chap, the Paymaster of the Russian Mediterranean squadron. I picked him up at the Cercle Nautique at Nice last week; and he and I have been going everywhere in my yacht ever since together."

"All right," Hugh answered, with the horrible new-born careless glee of his recent emancipation. "I don't mind two pence what I do to day. Vogue la galere! I'm game for anything, from pitch-and-toss to manslaughter." He never suspected himself how true those casual words of the stock slang expressions were soon to become. Pitch-and-toss first, and afterwards manslaughter.

They strolled round together to the front of the Casino, that stately building in the gaudiest Hausmannised Parisian style, planted plump down with grotesque incongruity beneath the lofty crags of the Maritime Alps. The palace of sin faces a large and handsome open square, with greensward and fountains and parterres of flowers; and all around stand coquettish shops, laid temptingly out with bonnets and jewelry and æsthetic products; for people who win largely disburse freely, and many ladies hover about the grounds, with fashionable dresses and shady antecedents, by no means slow to share the good fortune of the lucky and all too generous hero of the day. Hugh mounted the entrance staircase with the rest of the crowd, and pushed through the swinging glass doors of the Casino. Within, they came upon the large and spacious vestibule, its roof supported by solid marble and porphyry pillars. Presentation of their cards secured them the right of entry to the salles de jeu, for everything is free at Monte Carlo—except the tables. You may go in and out of the rooms as you please, and enjoy for nothing—so long as you are not fool enough to play—the use of two hundred European newspapers, and the music of a theatre, where a splendid band discourses hourly to all comers the enlivening strains of Strauss and of Gungl. But all that is the merest prelude. The play itself, which forms the solid core of the entire entertainment, takes place in the gambling saloons on the left of the Casino.

Furnished with their indispensable little ticket of introduction, the three newcomers entered the rooms, and took their places tentatively by one of the tables. The Russian, selecting a seat at once, addressed himself to the task like one well accustomed to systematic gambling. Hugh and his acquaintance Lock stood idly behind, to watch the outcome of his infallible method.

And all the time, alone at San Remo, Winifred's body lay on the solitary bed of death, attended only at long intervals by the waiting-women and landlady of the shabby pension.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

He Will Do the Typewriting.

Oh, the type-writing girl, Oh, the type writing girl, With her debonair smile and her hair All in curl; And her finger tripping all o'er the machine—The slenderest fingers that ever were seen—While my heart like the alphabet, jumps up and down, Depending, of course, on her smile or her frown. And I gaze on the maiden so fresh and so pretty, and say to myself It is really a pity That she should be sitting there Thumping for money, When I am just dying to call her my honey. Then I slowly draw up Near the maiden so fair, And tremblingly gaze On her shimmering hair. Then, never once thinking it may be displaced, I put my arm suddenly Right round her waist And beg her to be my type-writer through life—Implore her to be my own dear little wife. She blushes and struggles and, ceases her letter, And says, very sternly, "You ought to know better!" But stoutly I hold her, The dear little miss, And double my guilt by the theft of a kiss, And implore her again To be my dear wife—To be my type-writer the rest of her life. And then with a smile her whole countenance lighting Says, "I will be your wife, But you'll do the typewriting."

A Doubting Heart.

Where are the swallows fled?
Frozen and dead,
Perchance upon some bleak and stormy shore.
O doubting heart!
Far over purple seas
They wait in sunny ease,
The balmy southern breeze,
To bring them to their northern home once more.

Why must the flowers die?
Prisoned they lie
In the cold tomb, heedless of tears, or rain.
O doubting heart!
They only sleep below
The soft white ermine snow
While winter winds shall blow,
To breathe and smile upon you soon again.

The sun has hid its rays
These many days;
Will dreary hours never leave the earth?
O doubting heart!
The stormy clouds on high
Veil the same sunny sky
That soon—for Spring is nigh—
Shall wake the summer into golden mirth.

Fair hope is dead, and light
Is quenched in night.
What sound can break the silence of despair?
O doubting heart!
The sky is overcast,
Yet stars shall rise at last,
Brighter for darkness past,
And Angels' silver voices stir the air.

Miss Proctor.

Eyes and Voices.

I.

If I could look with gently perfect eyes
On this strange human world—as one who fears
No duty and no task, and who reveres
Truth more than any dream that minds devise;
One who can trace the false, the weak, the wise;
In each new day that dawns and disappears;
Who, through some wild, heart breaking clamor, hears
Hope singing sweetly in the earth and skies:
Then I should be what men and women are
When they are wholly just and wholly brave;
Then I should speak from life and from the grave,
From every ashen globe and throbbing star;
No word of mine would be a word of wrong,
And there would be no discord in my song.

II.

There are two voices in a human life—
One, the sharp cry of passion, hissing hot;
The other, calm and sweet, as though begot
Of perfect peace in some heaven hallowed spot;
One is the cruel, mocking voice of strife,
Which falls to every heart, to every lot,
And one the voice that whispers to the clot,
"Rise to thy living spirit: Death is not!"
Hearing these voices, there are men who hear
No message to their soul; they lust and plod
Under the flashing menace of a rod;
But there are natures touched so deep and near
That, like the seed of beauty piercing sod,
They break their flesh and crave the thought of God.

George Edgar Montgomery.

The Land o' the Leal.

I'm wearin' awa', John,
Like snaw-wreaths in thaw, John,
I'm wearin' aw
To the land o' the leal.
There's nae sorrow there, John;
There's neither cauld nor care, John;
The day's aye fair
I' the land o' the leal.

Our bonny bairn's there, John;
She was baith gude and fair, John;
And, oh! we grudged her sair
To the land o' the leal.
But sorrow's sel' wears past, John—
And joy's coming fast, John—
A joy that's aye to last
I' the land o' the leal.

Sae dear's that joy was bought, John,
Sae free the battle fought, John,
That sinfu' man e'er brought
To the land o' the leal.
Oh, dry your glisteniu' ee, John!
My saul langs to be free, John!
And angels beckon me
To the land o' the leal.

Oh, haud ye leal and true, John!
Your day's wearin' though, John!
And I'll welcome you
To the land o' the leal.
Now, fare-ye-weel, my ain, John;
This warld's cares are vain, John;
We'll meet, and we'll be fain,
I' the land o' the leal.

Baroness Nairne.

The New Year.

Pass out Old Year;
Scourged with sin,
Stained with many a tear,
Is the record here.—
Young Year enter in.

He comes with childish grace
And roses a-bloom;
Lilacs in his embrace;
Whitely glows his face
'Gainst the Old Year's gloom.

As he in turn grows old,
O grant we may
More costly guerdons hold,
Have holier litanies told,—
Oramus te.

Then enter, laughing year
Fling wide the door
Between a hope and fear,
We bid thee welcome here,—
Welcome once more.

Brad Courtlana.

"Lord, I Believe!"

BY JOHN IMRIE, TORONTO.

"Lord, I believe" yet oft I fear
My faith is like the mustard seed,
'Tis then I pray that Thou be near—
A very present help indeed.

"Lord, I believe" Thy promise true.
That Thou art near to those who seek;
The fainting heart Thou wilt renew
And words of heavenly comfort speak.

"Lord, I believe" though vision fails
To see the hand that points the way;
The man who trusts in Thee prevails,
Nor sin, nor death o'er him holds sway.

"Lord, I believe" that Thou hast died
To save me from the power of sin;
Oh! let me near to Thee abide.
Till Thou to glory draw me in!

Like the pilchard and the herring and the sardine, the lobster is capricious as to his whereabouts. The same hunting ground does not always yield the same kind of prey. It is easy to know where you will not find him and where you ought to find him, but not where you will find him. He likes a ledge of rock where, hidden among the seaweed, he may lie in wait for his prey. Part of the "stock-in-trade" of the fishermen who catch him is to know the lie of these rocks and their attraction to shell-fish.

Love and Serve.

The New Testament, while every page and verse of it breathes of righteousness, scarcely contains any religionism at all, scarcely any organization even the most rudimentary, scarcely any ritual even the simplest, scarcely any dogmatic creed even the most brief. What was the sum total of the preaching of the glorious Eremite, John the Baptist? Just two words: Repent, Obey. What is the sum total of the moral revelation of Christ? Just two words, the two words carved on the statue of that noble philanthropist which has just been added to our Abbey—the two words: Love, Serve.

Are you in truth, each of you, a good man or a good woman? If you are, then, though every Pharisee who lived should hate you, and though every Church in the world should excommunicate you, and though every priest that ever lived should hurl at you his separate anathema, as they once did to the King of Saints, yet to you the golden gates of heaven shall open, harmonious on their golden hinges, and you shall be folded for ever under the wings of Eternal Love. But if you are not simply in God's sight a good man or a good woman, then, like a saint of old, you may torture yourself for long years together with fasts and miseries, or, like St. Simon Stylites, you may bow yourself twelve hundred times a day, or like another saint, you may make your boast that you daily offer seven hundred prayers, and after all this you may say to Christ your Lord, "Have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name wrought miracles, and in Thy name done many wonderful works?" but if, in spite of this externalism and profession, you have not truly loved God, and have not been true to your neighbor—true by God's standard, and not by the conventional standard of the world, on the one hand, or of churches and party on the other—if, I say, you have not been thus essentially true to God and man, then shall He say unto you "I never knew you."

If any one, while he prides himself on his orthodoxy or on his Churchmanship, is mean in his conduct, false in his judgment, dishonest in trade, a slanderer in society, impure in life—if he be a liar—and many a man who calls himself religious, and many a man who tries to stand on good terms with the world, is a liar down to the very hilt—if in his heart, in spite of his profession, be a false witness, or a covetous man who is an idolator, he may present himself at the wedding feast, but he has not on a wedding garment. But if, on the other hand, you be indeed pure, and kind and true; if you always admire that which is admirable and follow that which is noble; if in humility and love you be a follower of Christ's example, you may die hated by all the world and hated by all the nominal Church, yet your Saviour, in whose footsteps you have humbly desired to walk, shall decide your destinies for ever when he shall whisper to your weary spirit, "Well done good and faithful servant."

STATISTICS.

The five heaviest hammers in the world were built in the following order: Krupp, at Essen, 1867, 49 tons: Terni Works, Italy, 1873, 50 tons; Creusot, France, 1877, 80 tons; Cockerill, Belgium, 1885, 100 tons, and Krupp, Essen, 1886, 150 tons.

The earnings of the Canadian railways are showing up well when compared with other through lines across the border. The statements of the New York Central and Lake Shore roads show considerable deficiencies as compared with last year. The Grand Trunk continues to increase, the earnings for the past four weeks being $50,100 more than the corresponding four weeks of 1887. The gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific for Ontario were $1,348,700; working expenses, $768,837; net profits, $579,933. For the ten months ending October 31, 1888, the figures are as follows:—Gross earnings, $10,720,130; working expenses, $7,847 289; net profits, $2,872 841; a gain of $243,529 over the corresponding period of last year. The earnings for the week ending Nov. 30th were $391 000, as against $372,000 the same week of 1887.

Here is a curious study in figures," said the expert accountant. "Multiply the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, by 45 and we get this result: 1,555,555,505. Reverse the figures: 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 and use the same multiplier, and we get another curious string as follows: 444,444 444 445. Taking the same figures as the multiplicand and reversing the figures 45—54—we get an equally curious result: 6,666 666,606. Again reversing the multiplicand and using the same multiplier makes the sum total all 3's except the first and last figures, to wit: 5,333,333,334. You will perceive that the first and last figures put together make 54—the multiplier. Take the half of 54—27—or reverse 2 and 7 and use it as the multiplier and the result will be just as astonishing—all 6's and 1's. There is a witchery in these figures that I can't understand; can you?"

Sir Henry Drummond Wolfe's Clever Diplomatic Work.

London, Dec. 10.—England has scored a diplomatic victory, which changes the complexion of the whole Central Asian question. Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, whose mission to Persia was bitterly attacked by the Liberals as a sinecure and a partisan job, has succeeded in getting Persia to give a lot of valuable trading privileges to the English, and to commercially boycott the Russians. The importance of this will be recognized when it is remembered that Persia is the real game at which the Russians have been aiming through all their feints on the Afghan frontier. The Russian papers have gone into a frenzy of rage at this ontoward development, and are talking more excitedly against England than they have done before since the Penjdeh incident. Official despatches from St. Petersburg to-day recognize that the old Anglo-Russian difficulty is reopened in a new and threatening direction, and deplore the fact in language which is taken to mean that Germany will seize the opportunity to disarm France and make herself master of Europe.

A CHILD'S CRY.

Just One of These Little Stories Which Go to the Heart.

My name is Anthony Hunt. I am a drover, and live miles and miles away upon the Western prairie. There wasn't a house in sight when I first moved there, my wife and I, and now we have not many neighbors, though those we have are good ones. One day about ten years ago I went away from home to sell my fifty head of cattle—fine creatures as I ever saw. I was to buy some groceries and drygoods before I came back, and, above all, a doll for my youngest—Dolly. She had never had a store doll of her own—only rag babies her mother had made her.

Dolly could talk of nothing else, and went down to the very gate to call after me to get a big one. Nobody but a parent can understand how full my mind was of that toy; and how when the cattle were sold, the first thing I hurried off to buy was Doll's doll. I found a large one with eyes that would open and shut when you pulled a wire, and had it wrapped up in paper, and tucked it under my arm, while I had the parcels of calico and delaine and tea and sugar put up. Then, late as it was, I started for home. It might have been more prudent to stay until morning, but I felt anxious to get back, and eager to her Dolly's praises about her doll.

I was mounted on a steady-going old horse and pretty well loaded. Night set in before I was a mile from town, and settled down as dark as pitch while I was in the middle of the darkest bit of road I know of. I could have felt my way, though, I remembered it so well; and when the storm that had been brewing broke, and pelted the rain in torrents, I was five or may be six miles from home.

I rode as fast as I could, but all of a sudden I heard a little cry like a child's voice. I stopped short and listened—I heard it again. I called and it answered me. I couldn't see a thing. All was as dark as pitch. I got down and felt around in the grass—called again, and again was answered. Then I began to wonder. I'm not timid, but I was known to be a drover and to have money about me. It might be a trap to catch me unawares and rob and murder me. I am not superstitious—not very; but how could a real child be out on the prairie in such a night, at such an hour? It might be more than human. The bit of a coward that hides itself in most men showed itself to me then; but once more I heard the cry, and said I:

"If any man's child is nereabouts Anthony Hunt is not the man to let it die."

I searched again. At last I bethought me of the hollow under the hill and groped that way. Sure enough, I found the dripping little thing, that moaned and sobbed as I took it in my arms. I called my horse and the beast came to me, and I mounted and tucked the little soaked thing under my coat as well as I could, promising to take it home to mamma. It seemed so tired, and pretty soon cried itself to sleep on my bosom. It had slept there over an hour when I saw my own windows. There were lights in them, and I supposed my wife had lit them for my sake; but when I got into the doorway I saw something was the matter, and stood still with a dread fear of heart five minutes before I could lift the latch. At last I did it, and saw the room full of neighbors, and my wife amid them weeping.

When she saw me she hid her face.

"Oh, don't tell him," she said, "it will kill him."

"What is it, neighbors?" I cried.

"Nothing now, I hope—what's that you have in your arms?"

"A poor lost child," said I, "I found it on the road. Take it, will you? I've turned faint." And I lifted the sleeping thing and saw the face of my own child, my Dolly.

It was my own darling and none other, that I had picked up on the drenched road. My little child had wandered out to meet papa and the doll, while the mother was at work and they were lamenting her as one dead. I thanked heaven on my knees before them. It is not much of a story, neighbors, but I think of it often in the nights and wonder how I could bear to live now if I had not stopped when I heard the cry for help upon the road, hardly louder than a squirrel's chirrip. That's Dolly, yonder with her mother in the meadow, a girl worth saving—I think (but then I'm her father and partial, maybe) the prettiest and sweetest thing this side of the Rockies.

Church Music.

The standard of American music is low. In the church, where first of all sincerity should prevail, and where nothing but healthy food should be given, the music is looked upon as an attraction and given as an amusement. It is largely operatic, it appeals to the senses only, and is too often of the sickly sentimental order. In those churches only which have congregational singing is the sense of what is suitable and decorous not offended. Pleasing music need not be trifling or sentimental; there are many beautiful works, not suited for the concert-room, which are intended for dev

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Sereet, by D. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

DUTTON, JANUARY 3, 1889.

SALUTATORY.

This week we come before the readers of the ENTERPRISE for the first time, Mr. Phelps' connection with it ceasing with last week's issue. We will endeavor to keep up the reputation of the ENTERPRISE as a first-class local newspaper, and will add improvements from time to time as business improves. We have cast our lot among the people of Dutton, believing that they can appreciate the value of a local newspaper in the right manner, and that the place itself, already the most pushing, go-ahead place in the Southern counties, will continue to grow in size and beauty. The ENTERPRISE will be conducted as a strictly non-political and non-sectarian local newspaper devoted to the best interests of Dutton and vicinity and to the social and moral welfare of its readers. Its columns will always be open for the discussion of live questions of the day, but not for the airing of petty grievances or private quarrels, and nothing of an impure or doubtful character will be allowed in either news or advertising columns.

The job department will be under the charge of an experienced printer, and with improvements to be made shortly we will be able to give the best of satisfaction to all who may favor us with their patronage.

We would bestow a word of praise on Mr. Phelps, the retiring publisher, who has carried on the business through all difficulties for the past seven years, and we trust that he may have every success in any business he may hereafter undertake.

We wish all our readers a happy and prosperous New Year, and if they do well by us we will give them no cause to regret the change.

Date your letters 1889.

Municipal election next Monday.

There was a eclipse of the sun on Tuesday.

The stores were all closed on New Years Day.

Residents of St. Thomas are agitating for a park.

The rural schools will open on Thursday, Jan. 3.

Mr. Hollingshead is shipping a carload of flour to Pictou, N. S., this week.

The Presbyterian Snnday School at Wallacetown held its annual entertainment on Tuesday evening.

Annie May Lipsey, aged 9 years, died on Tuesday and will be buried at Cowal to-day at 11 o'clock.

Freeman McDonald and Wm. Regis J. P., of Newbury, have been committed for trial for assisting in the escape of a prisoner named Hayes.

Boyd Zavitz, the 12-year-old son of Robt. Zavitz, of South Yarmouth, was drowned by breaking through the ice in the Minor mill pond, near Sparta, on Saturday.

Sunday night a number of stones were thrown at the caboose of a M. C. R. east-bound freight, Conductor Arch. Morrison, when the train was about two miles east of Dutton.

J. E. Crane has sold his house and lot on Nancy St. to J. C. Price for the sum of $800, and has purchased a lot on Nancy St. from Peter Duncanson, on which he intends building in the spring.

During the absence of the family from home on Christmas Day some sneak thief entered the house of Jas. Ruddy, Glencoe, and carried of several teaspoons, a watch and some jewelry.

Orton P. Peckham, of Cowal, has obtained a patent for the buggy gear which he invented this year. He talks of forming a stock company and manufacturing buggies on a large scale in Dutton.

A child threw a piece of lighted paper behind a window curtain in Mr. H. Hollingshead's dwelling last Thursday, setting the curtain on fire. Had it not been noticed in time a bad fire would have been the result.

Mr. Jos. H. Coyne, of St. Thomas, was appointed Registrar of the County of Elgin at a meeting in council of the Ontario Government on Thursday night last week Mr. Coyne will no doubt give general satisfaction in his new position.

Among your resolves for the New Year make one that you will endeavor to work harmoniously with your neighbors for the good of society, of yourself and of the place you live in, and do not stand in your own light by opposing any scheme tending towards the good of the town.

Mr. Wm. Pope met with an accident on Saturday, in Messrs. Clarke & Son's banking office, Bothwell, which will leave its mark. He was in the act of shutting the safe door and a farmer passing touched his arm, pushing it forward at the moment the door swung shut, catching the top of the thumb of the left hand, cutting it off clean, the piece dropping to the floor when the safe was opened.

The Salvation Army paraded the streets New Years Eve, singing the old year out and the new year in. Some smart juveniles placed boxes and barrels on the sidewalk for the purpose of tripping the lassies, but they wouldn't "take a tumble."

The meetings of the Campbellton literary society are well attended and much interest is manifested in the proceedings. Among the interesting parts of the programme at last meeting the essay of Peter Johnston on "Natural History" deserves special mention. The next meeting will be held Friday evening.

Constable James Coffey, of Ridgetown, was in Windsor last week looking for Robert Bensette. It seems that Bensette has been working for a farmer named Murray, living near Ridgetown, and on Christmas, during the absence of the family, it is alleged that he stole $25 and a watch. It is thought that Bensette is in Detroit.

The following officers were installed in Cameron Lodge, No. 232, A. F. & A. M., Wallacetown, on Thursday evening, Dec. 27th:—Bro. W. H. Nelson, W. M.; Bro. W. T. Sifton, S. W.; Bro. Henry Raplejie, Jr. W.; Bro. G. W Ling, Treasurer; Bro. E. S. Sifton, Recorder; Bro. W. Monson, Chaplain; Bro. G. B. McGill, Sr. Deacon; Bro. John McLean, Jr. Deacon; Bro. J. C. Price, Inner Guard; Bro. Stora Backus, Tyler.

J. C. Graham, furniture dealer, who has been doing business in Dutton for some time, has made an an assignment. It appears that a judgment was obtained against him some years ago, which he supposed was settled. The bailiff called the other day and closed the business and Mr. Graham has since made an assignment for the benefit of the rest of his creditors. A notice of a meeting in connecton with the above is given elsewhere in this issue.

While Mr. Doyle was shaving a gentleman in his shop on Tuesday a spent bullet from a rifle, with which some parties were practicing, crashed through the window and struck him on the leg just above the knee, making a bad bruise. The bullet had sufficient force to cut through his clothing and draw blood. The foolhardy practice of firing off revolvers and rifles in a crowded place like Dutton, where the bullet is almost sure to hit somebody if it misses the target, cannot be too strongly condemned.

On Sunday morning about 12.10, when an M. C. R. east-bound freight, Conductor T Barrett, was about two miles this side of Bismarck, the report of a revolver was heard, and a bullet went crashing through the cupola of the caboose. Two other shots were fired in rapid succession at the train, but only that one took effect, going through the glass of the cupola. Conductor Barrett and Brakeman George Learn were in the cupola at the time, and the shots were fired at them, no doubt, by some murderously inclined or drunken ruffians. One of Mr. Barrett's fingers was injured, and it is thought it was struck by one of the bullets when rebounding. Detective Heenan is working on the case, and it is hoped he will be able to capture and have the dastardly ruffians punished severely.

The induction of the Rev. T. C. Wilson into the pastoral charge of the Dutton Presbyterian Congregation will take place in the church to-day at 11 a. m., Rev Mr. Urquhart to preside, Rev. Mr. Kelso to preach, Rev. Geo. Francis to address the congregation and Rev. Mr. Sutherland to address the minister A meeting of the London Presbytery will be held after the induction and in the evening a tea meeting will be given in Leitch's hall, at which addresses are expected from the rev. gentlemen attending the Presbytery, besides local ministers, and vocal and instrumental music by local and other talent. A good programme has been prepared and the ladies promise a good time to all who attend. Admission, 25c. Tea served from 7 to 8.

The Dutton Baptist Sunday School held its annual entertainment in Leitch's Hall on Friday evening last, when an excellent programme was rendered by the children and others. The children performed their parts in good style, showing that great pains had been taken in their instruction. The dialogues and tableaux were especially good, while the other parts were above the average of these entertainments. After the lengthy programme had been brought to a close Mr. N. Phelps read a statement of the finances of the school for the past year, showing the total receipts, including the entertainment, to be $40 59, and the expenditure for school purposes $13 69. The number of junior scholars on the roll was 98 and the average attendance for the year 55. Santa Claus then appeared, loaded with presents which were quickly distributed and all returned home well satisfied with the evening's entertainment. Mr. A. J. Leitch occupied the chair.

Shedden.

F. J. Ball has opened out a new store with a stock of dry goods and groceries.

Neil McLachlin, of Lawrence Station, started a boot and shoe shop and engaged C. Smith, of Dutton, to manage it. Smith worked a few days and walked off with what cash he had taken in, and some of the stock is missing. McLachlin had a warrant issued for his arrest.

Mr. Kern, of Culloden, is about to enter into partnership with W. J. Wallace in the merchantile business.

Mrs. Dr. Howell is spending the holiday season with relatives at Cannington.

Middlemiss.

Miss Tennie Wade is the guest of Mr. J. Batton.

Miss Nellie Ousterhout is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Minshall.

The Chfistmas tree held in the Methodist Church, Christmas Eve, passed off very pleasantly, Mr. Torrance, of Melbourne, acted as chairman. Speeches, recitations and readings were given by a number of talented ladies and gentlemen, after which thegifts were taken off the tree, it being well loaded with presents for the Sabbath School children and others, among which was a beautiful hanging lamp and a plush album, about as nice as they could put on, for Mrs. Jas. Batton. Mrs. Jno. Robinson also got a hanging lamp, and John McVicar a beautiful album as a present from the members of the Bible class in which he took an active part, as he does in everything that is for the welfare of his friends. The proceeds of the evening amounted to about $25.

On Wednesday evening a Christmas tree was given in the Thames River School House in compliment to the teacher, Miss McLachlin, who is about to leave. Mr. Dodds, an old resident of that place, occupied the chair. After the presents had been taken off Miss McLachlin was made the recipient of a fine album and a set of vases, after which she made a suitable reply, saying she was sorry she was going to leave but hoped the scholars would mind their next teacher as well and better, if possible, than they did her. God save the Queen was then sung and the meeting dismissed.

West Lorne.

A quiet wedding took place here on Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. Liddell, it being the marriage of their third daughter, Maggie, to Samuel J. Draper, of London. On account of berievement, which took place in the family a few weeks ago, there were not many invited guests outside of the family circle. The happy couple took a trip east on Wednesday and will visit friends at Thorndale and elsewhere. The bride was the recipient of valuable presents.

F. J. Lindenman, merchant, of this place, has adopted the "ready, come down" business.

Mr. Wm. Buckler's daughter was married to Mr. Danby by the Rev. C. T. Scott on Tuesday, 1st inst.

The stock of goods of Messrs. McColl & McCallum, merchants, has been bought by the gentleman that bought Mr. Ward's stock.

Dutton High School.

The following is a list of the successful candidates at the recent entrance examination held at Dutton, on the 19th, 20th and 21st December:—(Minimum required to pass, 367 marks). Bessie McCallum, 477; A. W. Marshall, 400; W. S. Pearce, 428; Maud McLaren, 424; Lyda Munger, 412; Annie J. Dewar, 401; Jessie Blackwood, 398; Fred Brown, 387; Harry Drumgould, 380; Leslie Pearce, 371.

MARRIED.

DRAPER—LIDDELL—In West Lorne, on the 1st inst., at the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. O. C. Carey, Miss Maggie Liddell to Mr. S. J. Draper, of London.

NOTICE.

As before announced we have sold the ENTERPRISE to Mr. R. Sutherland, formerly of Glencoe, who has taken possession this week and publishes this as his first issue. He is to fulfil all advertising contracts made and started by me, and will collect pay for the same, except a portion to be paid to myself, of which notice will be given. The subscription list has been transferred to Mr. Sutherland and all due thereon, except such as is otherwise booked to me of those with whom I have accounts, is to be paid to him. Those indebted to me must settle immediately as I desire to have all accounts closed at once.

Respectfully,
N. PHELPS.

TENDERS FOR WOOD.

SEALED TENDERS will be received by the undersigned until Saturday, 12th inst., at noon, for 40 cords of Green Hard Wood (Beech and Hard Maple) 2 feet long, and split so as to be easily put into a box stove, delivered and neatly piled in the High School Yard as directed by the Principal on or before March 1st, 1889. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

2 D. C. LEITCH, Dutton.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In the matter of Angus C. Graham, of the Village of Dutton, in the County of Elgin, Furniture Dealer.

NOTICE is hereby given that the abovenamed Angus C. Graham has made an assignment of his estate and effects to me in pursuance of R.S.O. 1887, cap. 124.

A meeting of the creditors of the said debtor will be held at my office in the Village of Dutton, aforesaid, on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, 1889, at the hour of 2 o'clock p.m., for giving directions as to the disposal of the estate. All persons having claims against the said debtor are required to furnish me with the particulars thereof upon affidavit, together with the securities held by them, on or before the date of such meeting, after which time I will proceed to distribute the said estate among the persons only of whose claims I shall have received notice.

Dutton, December 27th, 1888.

JAMES M. GLENN, A. J. LEITCH,
Solicitor for Assignee. Assignee.

The Reason Why

Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.

In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C., writes:

"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."

Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia

and Constipation are almost universal Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:

"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say, that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."

The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

ISLAND HOME STOCK FARM

Percheron Horses. French Coach Horses. Savage & Farnum, Importers and Breeders of Percheron and French Coach Horses, Island Home Stock Farm, Grosse Isle, Wayne County Mich. We offer a very large stud of horses to select from, we guarantee our stock, make prices reasonable and sell on easy terms. Visitors always welcome. Large catalogue free. Address
Savage & Farnum,
DETROIT MICH.

REMOVAL.--After this issue the ENTERPRISE office will be located in Brown's Block, Main St., next door to Dr. McKillop's office.

YOU WILL FIND

Urlin Bros., Dutton,

AND

A. D. Urlin's, Wallacetown,

HEADQUARTERS FOR

HARDWARE, GROCERIES, BOOTS AND SHOES, &c.

NO LARGER, BETTER OR CHEAPER STOCK OF

GROCERIES

was ever shown in this section. Teas, Sugars, Syrups, Currants, Raisins, Dates and Figs, Candied Peels, Etc., Etc.

A CHOICE LOT OF CHINA AND GLASSWARE.

New Patterns in China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Vases, China Cups and Saucers, Mugs, and a Fine Lot of Fancy Goods that are Very Cheap.

Immense Stock of TOYS and Fancy Goods for the Children.

HARDWARE OF ALL KINDS.

Cow Ties, Crosscut Saws, Axes, Lanterns, and a Full Line of Carpenters' Tools. TINWARE of All Kinds.

A Job Lot of Table Knives and Forks at Half Price.

A Large Assortment of SILVER AND PLATED WARE. Cake and Cruet Stands, Pickle Dishes, Butter Dishes, Sugar Bowls, Spoon Holders, Cream Pitchers, and a choice lot of Fancy Goods which are both useful and ornamental.

—A FULL STOCK OF—

BOOTS & SHOES, OVERSHOES & RUBBERS

AT ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.

A call will convince you that you can get good value in every line we handle.
No trouble to show goods. Highest price paid for produce.

URLIN BROS., Dutton.

A. D. URLIN, Wallacetown.

HERTEL,

Merchant - Tailor

EAST SIDE MAIN ST., DUTTON.

NEW IMPORTED

FALL -:- GOODS

My stock is very extensive with Elegant Fall Goods. Special attention has been directed towards securing the most complete and varied assortments of

New Suitings!
New Trouserings!
New Overcoatings!

Ever Displayed in this Village.

A visit is solicited from those who wish a

NEAT AND ELEGANT SUIT
—OR A—
STYLISH AND PERFECT-FITTING

FALL OVERCOAT.

Money can be saved by leaving your order with me. None but first-class work turned out. Best of Trimmings only are used.

J. C. HERTEL,
Merchant Tailor.
Next door to Nelson's Hotel.

$4 REWARD.

STRAYED from Lot 13, Con. 1, Dunwich, a steer of high grade Shorthorn breed; color, red and white; age, two years at Christmas; nose, dark color; it broke a horn off when a calf, showing the damage to horn yet. A reward of four dollars will be paid by the subscriber to any person giving such information as will lead to its recovery. R. COAD.

Ekfrid, Dec. 18, 1888.

Vick's Floral Guide

FOR 1889,

Now ready, contains 2 Colored Plates, hundreds of Illustrations, and nearly 200 pages—33 pertaining to Gardening and Flower Culture, and over 150 containing an Illustrated List of nearly all the FLOWERS and VEGETABLES grown, with directions how to grow them, where the best SEEDS, PLANTS, AND BULBS can be procured, with prices of each. This book mailed free on receipt of 10 cents, and the 10 cents may be deducted from the first order sent us. Every one interested in a garden, or who desires good, fresh seeds, should have this work. We refer to the millions of persons who have planted our seeds. BUY ONLY VICK'S SEEDS AT RELIABLE AGENCIES.

JAMES VICK, SEEDSMAN,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THRESHERS

WILL FIND IT PAYS TO USE THE FAMOUS

LARDINE

THE BEST MACHINE OIL IN CANADA.

McCOLL'S -:- CYLINDER -:- OIL

Should be used in every Engine Cylinder. 600 Fire Test. Not injured by extreme heat.

McCOLL, BROS. & CO., - TORONTO.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles south-west of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8 ins

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adult.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

G. J. WEIR.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

DUTTON MARKETS.

Flour per cwt	$2 50	to	2 75
Red Wheat per bush.	95	to	1 00
Barley		to	50
Peas	50	to	55
Oats		to	30
Beans		to	1 00
Potatoes per bag	30	to	40
Green Apples	20	to	30
Hay per ton	9 00	to	10 50
Eggs			18
Butter			20
Shorts			80
Bran			70

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1889. NO. 3.

Professional Cards

Alex McKillop, M.D.

M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.

☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,

Barrister-at-Law,

Commissioner in the High Court.

☞ Money Loaned.

ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,

Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.

MONEY TO LOAN.

OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.

Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN

At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.

ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.

June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.

First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.

Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.

S. JOHN SCHULTE.

OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY,
DENTIST.

D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.

351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.

June 7. 1 yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,

Surgeon - Dentist,

Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,

SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,

Veterinary Surgeon,

DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.

W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS

For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.

F. A. Humpidge.

Satisfaction guaranteed.

Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

The Star Loan Company

181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.

G. C. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex

Mutual Fire Insurance Company,

LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.

BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!

Pumps! Pumps!!

To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price

Repairing Promptly Done.

I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.

Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works

Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

Dutton Meat Market.

THE ORIGINAL.

Stands second to none in the County.

You can get what you want and when you want it. I buy and sell according to quality FOR CASH.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR

HOGS, DEAD OR ALIVE, HIDES, SKINS AND TALLOW.

☞ Parties indebted by favor are requested to settle account at once, to enable me to continue business and be your humble servant.

JAMES BAKE.

Dutton, Nov. 28, 1888.

SALESMEN WANTED.

Salary and expenses paid or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.

L. P. Thurston & Co.,
Empire Nurseries, ROCHESTER, N.Y

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do

Lumber Dressing of all Kinds

with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate

☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.

M. Cochrane.

January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a

General Line of Blacksmithing.

IN HORSESHOEING.

☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.

M. L. MILLAR.

Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS

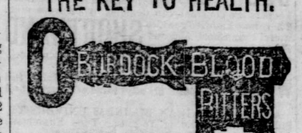
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.

First-class Tailoring

IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.

30,000 POUNDS

—OF—



WOOL WANTED

This season to stock our new mills at Union.

L. J. Willson & Co.

Feb. 4, 1888. tf

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Eryaipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow, The Eclipse Wheelbarrow

-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.

C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.

Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

NEW BUTCHER SHOP.

THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.

Patronage Solicited.

M. McNULTY

BURDOCK PILLS

SUGAR COATED.

A SURE CURE

FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROMPT IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE AID TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In the matter of Angus C. Graham, of the Village of Dutton, in the County of Elgin, Furniture Dealer.

NOTICE is hereby given that the abovenamed Angus C. Graham has made an assignment of his estate and effects to me in pursuance of R.S.O. 1887, cap. 124.

A meeting of the creditors of the said debtor will be held at my office in the Village of Dutton, aforesaid, on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, 1889, at the hour of 2 o'clock p.m., for giving directions as to the disposal of the estate. All persons having claims against the said debtor are required to furnish me with the particulars thereof upon affidavit, together with the securities held by them, on or before the date of such meeting, after which time I will proceed to distribute the said estate among the persons only of whose claims I shall have received notice.

Dutton, December 27th, 1888.

JAMES M. GLENN, Solicitor for Assignee. A. J. LEITCH, Assignee.

HITCH UP!

But before you do that come 'round to

M'MILLAN'S - HARNESS - SHOP

BLANKETS, RUBBER RUGS, GOAT ROBE, TRUNKS, VALISES, HALTERS, ETC. ETC.

WHIPS, BRUSHES, BRIDLES, COMBS, HARNESS OIL, ETC., ETC.

and buy a set of

HAND-MADE -:- HARNESS

Manufactured out of the Choicest Stock available in the country, at Moderate Prices. Those of my customers who want a SUPERIOR ARTICLE can, at a little additional, befurnished with Traces of Genuine American Oak Tanned Leather.

—:o:—

A LARGE NUMBER OF

CURLED HAIR FACED COLLARS

Warranted to work with safety.

☞ The highest price will be paid for Cordwood, Beech and Maple, in exchange for Harness.

All who want an honest and serviceable article are cordially invited to call.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown.....a.m.	8 03		9 47 p.m.	11 02
Rodney.....	8 33	10 11		12 15
Bismarck.....	8 50	....		12 33
Dutton a.m.....	9 0	10 29		1 00
Iona.....	9 20	....		1 36
Shedden.....	9 36	....		2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05	11 05		2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't) p.m.	3 00	p.m. 1 10	5 25
Shedden.....	3 24	....	6 01
Iona.....	3 32	....	6 14
Dutton.....	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck.....	4 00	....	7 10
Rodney.....	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown.....	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor.....	7 25	3 45	4 50

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 6.15 p.m 4.55 p.m and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ..a.m.	9 55	p.m. 5 40
" Mixed ....p.m.	3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2 50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

For 1888 is better than ever, and should be in the hands of every person contemplating buying SEEDS, PLANTS or BULBS. It contains 3 Colored Plates. Thousands of Illustrations, and nearly 150 pages, telling what to buy, and where to get it, and naming lowest prices for honest goods. Price of GUIDE only 10 cents, including a Certificate good for 10 cents worth of Seeds.

JAMES VICK, SEEDSMAN,
Rochester, N. Y.

DR. FOWLER'S EXT: OF WILD STRAWBERRY

CURES

CHOLERA Cholera Morbus COLIC and CRAMPS DIARRHŒA DYSENTERY

AND ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS AND FLUXES OF THE BOWELS IT IS SAFE AND RELIABLE FOR CHILDREN OR ADULTS.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on

tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

REMOVAL

THE OFFICE OF THE

DUTTON ENTERPRISE

HAS BEEN REMOVED TO

BROWN'S BLOCK

Main Street.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVean, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. Martyrs to headache should try

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

Municipal Elections.

The election for Reeve in Dunwich was one of the most hotly contested that the Township has yet seen. Each candidate worked hard, and much interest was taken in the contest by the electors generally. When the result became known in Dutton the successful candidate was cheered again and again, and a bonfire was built on Main street in honor of the occasion. Mr. Leitch's majority is considerably smaller than on former occasions. Mr. Hine was elected as Councillor for Ward No. 2, and Mr. D. McLean for Ward No. 4. Following is the official count as furnished by Mr. Clay, returning officer:

FOR REEVE.

Polling Sub-division.	Leitch.	McKillop.
No. 1	27	107
" 2	38	60
" 3	70	56
" 4	70	28
" 5	90	35
" 6	22	113
" 7	94	21
" 8	65	27
	476	447

Majority for Leitch.....29

COUNCILLOR, WARD 2.

Polling Sub-division.	Hine.	McDiarmid.
No. 3	53	73
" 4	29	10
" 7	65	25
	147	108

Majority for Hine.....39

COUNCILLOR, WARD 4.

Polling Sub-division.	McKellar.	McLean.
No. 1	20	11
" 5	3	19
" 6	58	77
" 8	10	5
	91	112

Majority for McLean.....21

OTHER PLACES.

South Dorchester.--Reeve, Andrew Cline; deputy, Wilson McCready; councillors, Jno. Wilson, John James, D. Appleford.

Bayham.—S. Goodwin, reeve, by 170 majority; first deputy, Geo. W. Best; second deputy, Wm. Backhouse; councillors, Robt. Draper ad David Stratton.

Aldborough.—Reeve, J. J. Stalker, by 86 over D. McLaren; No. 1 Ward, Alex. McDougall; No. 2 Ward, Thos. Dymick; No. 3 Ward, D. McGregor, (acclamation); No. 4 Ward, N. S. Lusty.

Southwold.—Reeve, D. Turner (acclamation); first deputy, Thomas Jackson; second deputy, R. R. Cranston; councillors, Henry Dougherty and Frank Benner.

Port Stanley.—Reeve, M. Payne; councillors, W. Thomas, Geo. Thorne, Samuel Nicholas and Jos. Hough, (all by acclamation.)

Yarmouth.—Reeve, W. O. Pollock (by acclamation); Ward No. 1, F. B. Hathaway, majority, 27; No. 2, W. L. Baily, majority, 92; No. 3, J. H. Westlake, (acclamation); No. 4, A. C. Brower, (acclamation.)

Vienna.—Reeve, J. Teal; councillors, L. Baldwin' J. Brasher, O. Pratt and J. Wildern.

Aylmer.—Mayor, J. W. Hutchinson; reeve, Morris Leeson; deputy reeve, J. L Lambeth; councillors, No. 1 Ward, Messrs. J. H. Ingram, L. B. McConnell and J. B. Huffman; No. 2, Jas. Dingwell, R. H. Hempstreet, Jas. Edgecombe; No. 3, Messrs. D. C. Davis, Huffman and D. Ferguson.

Malahide.—Reeve, B. E. Dancey, 446; Sheldon Ward, 347; majority for Dancey, 72. First deputy reeve, John Richardson, 351; Rich. Locker, 350; majority for Richardson, 41. Second deputy, Mahlon Lyon, 321; W. R. Andrews, 315; majority for Lyon, 76. Councillors, Chas. Timpany, Sam. Little, 361, (elected), Marwood Ashton, 330; T. W. Benner, 267.

Newbury.—Reeve, Thomas Robinson; councillors, John Gray, Wm. Bayne, H. S. Laviel and John Armstrong.

Glencoe.—Reeve, Isaac Rathburn; councillors, Dr. W. G. Lumley, R. C. Vause, John M. Cornell and J P. McMillan.

MAYORS.

Guelph—Thos. Gowdy.
St. Catharines—J. B. McIntyre.
Ottawa—Ex-Ald. Cratt
Belleville—W. J. Diamond.
Brantford—C. B. Hyed.
Stratford—H. T. Butler.
Toronto—Clark, (acclamation).
London—Ald. Geo. Taylor.
St. Thomas—Israel Morse.

Conscience.

The counting-room people in newspaper offices run across some remarkable specimens of humanity occasionally. Not long ago a woman came into the counting room of a certain newspaper and drew a long face at the same moment that she drew a handsome pocketbook from the depths of her dress.

"I want an advertisement put in the newspapers," said the woman to one of the clerks at the counter, fumbling the pocketbook.

"Yes; what kind of an advertisement?"

The woman fidgeted a little and fumbled the pocketbook some more.

"I'll tell you how it is," she said, "six months ago I—I stole this pocketbook in a store. I was a pretty bad woman then, but since that time I have experienced religion an' I want to make my conscience easy, you see. So I want to put in an advertisement that for ten dollars in cash I'll return this pocketbook."

National Pills are a mild purgative, acting on the Stomach Liver and Bowels, removing all obstructions.

An editor of an Iowa paper being asked, 'Do hogs pay?' says that a good many do not; that they take the paper for several years and then have the postmaster send it back marked 'refused,' 'gone west,' etc.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

"So old Brown is dead, eh? Well, well! Did he leave anything?" "Yes. It broke his heart to do it, but he left everything."

PREVAILING SICKNESS.

The most prevailing complaints at this season are rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, inflammations and congestions. For all these and other painful troubles Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best internal and external remedy.

She (examining illustrations in Milton's "Paradise Lost")—His satanic majesty looks thin. What do you suppose he lives on." He (grimly)—"Fried soles."

Victoria Carbolic Salve is a great aid to internal medicine in the treatment of scrofulous sores, ulcers and abscesses of all kinds.

All things come around to him who waits including a bald head, false teeth, ear trumpet and heaps of miscellaneous troubles.

ONE GOOD POINT

Out of the many possessed by Burdock Blood Bitters is that it may be taken at all the seasons of the year, and by either young or old. In this way the three busy B's are always at work doing good.

INDUCTION SERVICES.

A large congregation assembled in Knox Church on Thursday last to witness the induction of the Rev. T. Wilson into the pastoral charge of the congregation. After the usual services, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Kelso, who preached an excellent sermon, the moderator, Rev. Mr. Urquhart, formally inducted Mr. Wilson as pastor. Rev Mr. Sutherland then delivered a short and pointed address to the minister and was followed by Rev. Geo. Francis, who gave the congregation some solid advice as to their position in relation to their pastor. Mr. Wilson was then welcomed by the congregation and members of the Presbytery present.

Rev. Mr. Wilson, in his sermons on Sunday last, defined the standing of himself and the people towards each other, saying that he thought a good understanding at the beginning would ensure harmony in their work together. Mr. Wilson is a gentleman of ability and under his charge the congregation, already one of the most prominent in the London Presbytery, will receive a fresh impetus.

In the evening a teameeting was held in Leitch's Hall, where, after an abundant supper, served by the ladies in their usual excellent manner, the following spicy and interesting programme was introduced by the chairman, Dr. Leitch:—Opening address, chairman; vocal duet, Mrs. Jno. McPherson and Miss Searle; instrumental, Miss Flo. McIntyre; address, Rev. Mr. Middleton; solo, Mrs. D. Cameron; instrumental, Miss Belle Patterson; address, Rev. Mr. Kelso; solo, Miss A. C. Leitch; instrumental, Mrs. McPherson and the Misses Searle; address, Mr. Jas. Beatty; solo, Mrs. McPherson; instrumental, Mrs. Cameron; address, Dr. Ruthven; solo, Mrs. McPherson; address, Rev. T. Wilson; instrumental, Mrs. McPherson and the Misses Searle; closing with a chorus, "God be with You till we Meet Again," by the choir. Each part was so well taken that it would be almost out of place to mention any one particularly. The proceeds amounted to over $63.

Watchman Again.

Allow me a few words more on the High School, and in the first place to express my satisfaction at the re-appointment of the Principal, also to extend a cordial welcome to Mr. Porter, the newly appointed teacher, who comes to the school with a good reputation. We regret that the Department did not see fit to grant the request of the Board for the re-engagement of Mr. Treemer—if that had been granted the school would have been well manned. The village is, and must be, deeply interested in the prosperity of the school, for the improvement and growth of the one will correspondingly improve the other.

Some steps should also be taken to put the building on a more satisfactory footing—probably the subscribers may have some plan in view. The citizens and the friends of the School around should take the matter into consideration and by some means place it in a thoroughly satisfactory condition.

We are glad that the School has opened the term with a large number of students, and we trust that this will be in every regard the most prosperous and successful term it has yet seen. Watchman would like to see an attendance of one hundred and twenty students, and in the near future an additional teacher.

Every effort should be made within the next few years so to improve its reputation, that large numbers will be attracted to it from all over the district. Let all do their part and we shall have an institution of which the inhabitants of Dutton and West Elgin will feel proud. WATCHMAN.

Iona.

The Methodist S. S. anniversary and entertainment came off last Sunday and Monday. Rev. J. E. Holmes, of Melrose, preached in the morning. The entertainment was a success both in a financial and literary sense. Rev. J. E. Holmes occupied the chair and kept everybody in good spirits. A choice programme was presented to the audience and a fine time enjoyed by those present. Proceeds, $47.

A wild cat was seen one day last week in the woods north of the village by some wood choppers.

Dr. N. D. Gunne, of St. Marys, and Dr Stuart, of McGill College, spent New Years in the village

Our esteemed friend Mr. James Mitchell has returned home, much improved in health, from an extended tour through Michigan and the Northwest Territories.

Miss Maud Liddell, of Bismarck, left on Monday for her home after a short visit to her brother John.

An assembly will be held in Mill's hotel to night.

To invigorate both the body and the brain, use the reliable tonic, Milburn's Aromatic Quinine Wine.

A dollar in the bank is worth two in the pocket.

RELIABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.

Procure a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil from your medicine dealer, and use according to direction. It cured Ida Johnston, of Cornell, Ont., of that complaint, and she recommends it as a sure cure. For 25 years it has never failed to give satisfaction.

A school of design is a fashionable mother with half a dozen marriageable daughters,

WILL BE FULLY MET.

Indications of Dyspepsia, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Rising and Souring of Food, Wind on the Stomach, or a Choking or Gnawing sensation at the pit of the stomach are fully met by Burdock Blood Bitters which has cured the worst cases on record.

Self Cure.

The body, to a large extent, is a machine which when disarranged, repairs itself. Physicians tell us of the power to heal inherent in nature. It is natural to get well. The body's recuperative resources are not equal to every need, but they are very great. It is because of this, even, that even the well man tends to keep well, if he conforms to nature's laws, for the system is ever full of poison from its own waste, the disposal of which nature has provided for, better than any city has for the disposal of its deadly sewerage.

Take the case of an ordinary wound. It needs only to have the disrupted parts brought together and nature does the healing; and even in many cases where the parts are not brought together, nature fills up the space with new flesh. So nature will mend a broken bone, on the simple condition that the adjusted parts be allowed the requisite rest.

Dyspepsia, whether induced by improper eating, the neglect of exercise, brain overwork, or care, worry and fret, will in time wholly disappear on removal of the cause and compliance with the laws of nature.

The best physicians now freely admit that typhoid patients, in the great majority of cases, would recover without a drop of medicine; that they need medicine mainly to promote ease and comfort and that pure air is better for them than all drugs. The same is true of some other diseases. More and more is it being admitted that, in no case, no drugs have any curative powers, but only aid nature, as the surgeon aids in the case of a badly broken limb, by removing irritating bits, spiculae, etc., and securing the proper adjustment and fixation of the parts.

The old-time doctors greatly overdosed people; in many cases literally dosed people to death. Within less than twenty years a personal friend, called to watch with a neighbor fat gone in consumption, was shown eleven different medicines, each of which she was to administer during the night, according to the varying symptoms.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that those who observe the laws of their physical nature are likely to keep well—and even infectious diseases have little power over such persons, and would wholly disappear if all observed these laws.—Farmer's Advocate.

Cowal.

Dugald Murray, of Ekfrid, had John Campbell before Squires Hatton and Thompson on Thursday for assault and battery. It appears that on Christmas Murray, who owns a farm in Dunwich just west of Campbell's, to which there is no road, went to open Campbell's fence and drive through his land when he was forbidden by Campbell and, as Murray says, struck on the head with a stick. Murray claims there was a road allowance left when the land was surveyed years ago, but Campbell does not agree with him on the subject. The Squires thought the evidence was not sufficient to convict Campbell and would not give a decision until they consulted the County Crown Attorney. The decision was given on Monday. Campbell was fined $1 and each paying portion of the costs. Murray intends notifying the Council to open a road at once or he will serve them with a writ.

While Mrs. John McCallum, of Argyle St., was attending to her household duties one day last week a spent bullet from a rifle, which some parties were practicing, crashed through the door and struck the wall on the opposite side of the room. More care should be observed in such practice.

The foundations have been laid for the Montreal ice palace.

Grain in the Belleville district has been damaged lately by frosts.

There is a quantity of counterfeit bills in circulation in Montreal.

It will cost $4,000,000 to complete the G. T. R. tunnel at Port Huron.

Work will be commenced on the new Government buildings at Goderich this week.

The vote on the Dunkin Act in Essex Centre resulted in its repeal by ten majority. At the close of the poll the hotel men had a demonstration.

Mr. William Thompson, the retiring city editor of the Advertiser, was presented Monday, on behalf of the staff, with an address and a handsome gold-headed cane, as a mark of the esteem in which he has always been held by fellow-workers, and their regret at losing his genial companionship. Mr. Thompson will be succeeded by Mr. E. A. Hutchinson.

The Anarchists of Chicago have frequently exhibited a contempt for the law and a total disregard of decency, but the most brazen thing they have ever attempted was to appeal to the courts for an injunction to prevent the police from interfering with their seditious meetings. People who avow enmity to all law and order present a peculiar spectacle when they demand that the law shall protect them in their endeavors to compass its own destruction. Such a spectacle would be ridiculous were it not for the insulting insolence of the human brutes who thus defy the law and yet claim its protection in their hellish work.

When a small boy bats a ball through a plate-glass window he may not lose his inning, but the man who owns the window is invariably put out.

DEAFNESS CURED. A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness, Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St John Street, Montreal.

A "fly-by-night combination"—a valise, the banker's funds and the cashier.

Tramps will not split wood, but if you have a shed they will lay in your coal.

A REASONABLE HOPE

Is one that is based on previous knowledge or experience, therefore those who use B. B. B. may reasonably hope for a cure because the previous experience of thousands who have used it, shows it to have succeeded in even the worst cases.

Look not upon your neighbor's wood pile when it is sawed and split and yours is not.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

An Ottawa official is in Halifax investigating the recent transhipment of fish in bond.

Owen Sound yesterday carried the by-law bonusing the Polson Iron Works Co. to the amount of $15,000.

Sir Charles Tupper cables that the middle of April will suit him to come to Canada to testify before the Canadian Pacifac arbitration case.

The Windsor Custom's authorities have seized an iron bridge in course of construction at Wallaceburg on the ground that the iron was entered at too low a figure.

Major Mayne, of the Royal Military College, absolutely denies the words attributed to him by a Kingston reporter. He denies having said that the Canadian militia was inefficient.

It is reported the Dominion Executive has decided to let the law take its course in the case of Jones, the British Columbia murderer, who is sentenced to be hanged on January 9.

Owing to the scarcity of feed, farmers in the neighbourhood of Kingston and Ottawa are parting with their stock at unprecedentedly low prices, young horses going for $6 and $7 each.

Surveyor Ogilvie, who left Ottawa some eighteen months ago to survey the Alaskan boundary, and about whose safety some anxiety was felt, has arrived at Victoria, B. C. His delay was caused by ice.

It is reported in St. Catharines that Manager VanHorne has definitely decided to bring the line of the Canadian Pacific railway from Chicago to Niagara Falls, through Hamilton, St. Catharines, and Merriton.

Six Ottawa lumber firms threaten to move their mills to the lower end of the Island of Montreal if the Government insist upon their getting rid of their sawdust otherwise than by dumping it into the Ottawa river.

AMERICAN.

Notwithstanding the Governor's statement that the White Caps had disbanded in Ohio, they are still sending out warnings in different parts of the state.

A strong representation is being made to the United States Government to recognize Gen. Hyppolite and the northern portion of Hayti against Gen. Legitime.

A terrible explosion of nitro-glycerine occurred on Friday evening near Bradford, Pa., which wrecked the suburb of Tarport and injured a number of persons.

On the New York Stock Exchange yesterday there was a general advance in securities. Lackawanna, Missouri, Pacific and Rock Island were the prominent features.

The New York Excise Revision Committee decided yesterday that all saloons must be kept closed on Sundays, and that the sale of intoxicating liquor shall not be permitted in them.

A petition signed by 32,328 citizens of Massachussets prays for a constitutional amendment that will prohibit the interference of any religious sect with the system of common Public schools.

Dr. James E. Reeves, of Chattanooga, Tenn., the eminent microscopist, has discovered a micro-organism in the kidney of yellow fever patients that he believes is the specific germ of the disease.

The New York Tribune is trying hard to create dissatisfaction over the Sackville affair, because Lord Salisbury shows no inclination to oppoint his successor during the fag end of President Cleveland's term.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Whiteling, of Philadelphia, was sentenced on Saturday to be hanged for poisoning her husband and two young children to recover a few hundred dollars' insurance which they carried on their lives.

The New York Herald yesterday had a despatch from Indianapolis which stated that a plot was recently formed to assassinate President-elect Harrison, but was discovered and thwarted. There is good reason to believe that the dispatch was a "fake."

Gustave Herman, a tailor, of Ann Arbor, Mich., has become insane from election excitement. Believing that Gen. Harrison is intended visiting him, he was extravagantly spending money in furnishing his house for the occasion, until his friends had to put him under restraint.

A second attempt has been made to wreck the Texas express on the St. Louis and San Francisco railway, by removing switch bolts and spreading the rails near an embankment. The attempt would undoubtedly have succeeded had not a wild engine ahead of the express been first to reach the spot.

FOREIGN.

A threatening agitation in the French Province has been caused by the rejection of the Panama Canal Bill by the Deputies.

King Leopold of Belgium has received a telegram from St. Thomas confirming the report of the safety of Stanley and Emin Pasha.

The Imperial House of Commons on Wednesday evening finished the consideration of the votes for supply and passed the Appropriation bill.

It is stated that one thousand Austrian and German subjects were expelled from Warsaw on the 18th inst. no reason being assigned for the action.

It is believed that King Milan has succumbed to the Russian and Radical pressure, forming an alliance with Russia and deciding to appoint a Radical Ministry.

A heavy fog prevailed yesterday in all parts of England, and caused a delay of two hours in the Queen's departure from Windsor for Osborne in the morning.

Lord Salisbury, dwelling upon the progress the Liberal-Unionists were making, rejoiced over the impossibility of their reuniting with the Gladstonian party.

Owing to fears that the Panama Canal Co.'s difficulties may give rise to disorders on the Isthmus, France has sent a man of war to Colon to protect French interests.

The Radical Servian peasants are celebrating the victories of their party in the parliamentary elections by firing the homes of political opponents in the vicinity of Belgrade.

Anglo-Indian experts are now assuring the susceptible English public that Blackman, used by Lord Salisbury, is no term of reproach, but quite the contrary with the native population.

Wilkinson & Co., who supplied the arms used by the troops at Suakim, account for their poor quality by alleging the lack of skilled workmen and the incompletion of their new factory.

In the House of Commons on Saturday a motion was passed instructing the clerk to appear before the Parnell Commission with the members' roll in order to show Mr. Parnell's signature.

The Bavarian bishops have sent an address to the Pope on the temporal power, in which they promise to labor with inexhaustible zeal to restore the Holy Father to true and complete independence.

The English soldiers at Suakim complain bitterly of the inferior weapons with which they were furnished. Their swords and bayonets twisted or snapped off, and their revolvers would not explode.

Lord Dunraven inquired yesteday regarding the appointment of Lord Sackville's successor, and the Premier replied in effect that the Government could give no information of such matters beforehand.

Lord Salisbury last night repeated his statement that there would be no expedition into the Soudan, and that Suakim would not be abandoned. He further stated that the substitution of England for Egyptian rule at Suakim was out of the question.

The prisoners taken in the trenches at Suakim say the natives were forced to fight, and that there is very little enthusiasm for the Mahdi or Osman Digna. They believe if the English were at once to march on Handoub it would at once surrender.

AGRICULTURAL.

A 40,000 ACRE FARM.

The following is a description of the great Grandin farm of Dakota, which is the largest farm in America:

The big Grandin wheat farm in Dakota comprises about 40,000 acres, of which 13,000 are under cultivation, 11,000 acres being sown to wheat. There are used on the farm 45 gang plows, two plows in each gang, each cutting 14 to 15 inches. There are 45 gang harrows. These are six feet square, but are arranged together side by side to work 24 feet wide. One long evener draws the four with a pair of mules near each end. One man drives both teams. The advantage of this system is worthy of notice by other farmers. It reduces the number of men usually required by one half. There are forty-four broadcast sowers, sowing eight feet each, but two of these are attached end to end with a span of mules before each, and one man drives both spans, another saving of half the man force. There are sixty-five self-binding harvesters employed on the place. Modern improvements have so perfected these that only one expert is required for the whole, especially since the experienced workmen on the machine are kept from year to year, and they are able to attend to any little repairs. The harvesters are drawn by three mules and one and one-half to two men are required to shock the bundles from each machine. The thrashers, of which there are six, are quite extensive affairs compared with those of former times or with these of the flails or the animals on the thrashing floor of our boyhood. Each one of these machines, driven by steam power, thrashes out from 1900 to 2000 bushels a day. They are set down in the centre of a hundred acres of shocks, and when these are thrashed are moved to the centre of another hundred acres. The working force on a single thrasher forms quite a little army. Thus there is, first, the general superintendent, eight bundle teams to haul the shocks, with eight drivers and eight other men, part in the field and part at the machine as pitchers and unloaders. At the machine two men are required simply to cut the band. There are three feeders, two at work and an alternate. Then there are the engineer, the fireman, the waterman, the "straw-bucker," who, with two mules and a pole, removes the straw accumulating before the machine, a farm man to care for the animals, and the cook and his assistant. The wheat is received into wooden tanks holding 100 bushels each, and four men with four wagons drawn by four mules each, one tank wagon at the machine and three on the road, take the wheat to the elevators. This saves bags and bagging. It will thus be seen that there is a force of 30 men employed to run a single machine.

A NEW WEED.

In August, 1879, says Science, Prof. Lester F. Ward, while returning from a hunting excursion in the North woods, discovered near Carthage, N. Y., a new variety of hieracium (house leek), of which he obtained two specimens. The next day, after a long search, he found on a farm at Evans Mills—a small village about ten miles from Watertown—large colonies of the same plant. The individuals were many of them smaller and slenderer than, but there was no doubt that they were of the same species as, the specimens secured the day before. He secured a great number of the specimens, and remarked to his companion that unless the farmers of that region adopted some measures to destroy that weed it would give them much trouble in the future.

On his return to Washington, Prof. Ward identified his specimens as belonging to the species hieracium præaltum, a variety of house leek very common, and a great pest to farmers in many parts of Europe, but little known in America.

Last summer Prof. Ward visited St. Lawrence county again, and one of the first things he was informed of was the appearance, and the rapid spread since, of a weed they called the "king devil." Prof. Ward at once identified it as the novel variety of house leek he had discovered during his former visit in that neighborhood, and, of course recalled to mind the warning he then uttered. When the king devil once gets into a field it completely covers the ground with its continuous green leaves, preventing the growth of any other plant or weed. It took such complete possession of one field of thirty acres that there was absolutely nothing else on it—there could be nothing else.

Enquiry as to the local origin of the King devil traced it to the farm where Prof. Ward had found the colony in 1879; and here, therefore, was the nest in which was hatched one of the worst pests the farmers of the United States have ever had to encounter, and from which it has spread over the country. In the region where it first appeared it has already extended over a belt of country 15 miles wide, the length of which Prof. Ward did not ascertain. It has been reported 30 miles west of Kingston, Ont., and in other places.

Various methods of eradicating the king devil have been suggested, but none of them have proved effective except the thorough tasing of the land. This, of course, is expensive, and destroys all other vegetation as well as the noxious weed against which it is directed; but the field can be restored, and, while the king devil has possession of it, it is of no use whatever to its owner.

BARENESS AND BARRENNESS.

If the reader will visit any bit of timber land in his neigborhood and notice what small growth is made on the portions where from its exposure the winds sweep the ground bare of leaves, and notice again the vigorous growth made in those portions where the leaves are lodged, he may learn something of value to him in farm operations. If he will notice further the remarkable gain in fertility on the line where an old rail fence has stood for years and where no manure had been applied, and contrast it with the barrenness of the exposed portions of the field where the winds had full sway, he may learn the necessity of keeping as far as possible the soil of his farm covered during as many months of the year as he can. By continuing his observations on these lines he may learn the close connection between bareness of soil and barrenness. Bareness in the pasture leads to barrenness by the exposure of the soil to the scorching suns of July and August, thereby killing out the weak plants and impairing the vitality of the strong. Notice how much more vigerously grass recovers from a drouth when there is a good stand, partly, it is true, because the ground is rich from other causes, but often because it has been kept rich by being kept covered by the grass. The same bad effects follow from too close fall pasturing. If anyone will but notice the difference in the growth of timothy in two portions of the same field where one part has been cut for seed and therefore cut high and the other mown closely, he may learn something to his advantage.

Bareness on cultivated land leads to barrenness from the drying and desiccating effects of the winter winds and the blowing dust. A soil kept bare for any great length of time tends to barrenness, whilst the soil that is kept covered with leaves, with stubble or with grass increases in fertility with the recurring years.

This is one of the subjects on which close and accurate observation is more convincing than pages of argument, and to set farmers to observing, to see things, is one of the main objects of an agricultural paper.—[Live Stock Journal.]

BUFFALO BREEDING.

Our readers were informed, a year or more ago, that Hon. C. J. Jones, of Garden City, had begun experimenting with buffalo. He had at that time collected enough animals to make a show, but the number has been increased since by a large purchase in Manitoba, and now he has 127 full-blood buffalo about equally divided as to sex, and twenty-three cross-bred animals, ranging from one-half to fifteen-sixteenths pure blood.

He says they eat whatever our native cattle eat, the bulls weigh 2,000 to 3,000 pounds, cows a little more than half as much. One steer that he slaughtered dressed 1,280 pounds. They are not difficult to herd, but he says that the bulls require a stronger fence than domesticated bulls. The cross is made by the buffalo bull and domestic cow. No case is known, Mr. Jones says, of offspring from a domestic bull and buffalo cow though frequently mated. Cross breed cows breed to domestic bulls readily. Improved milking qualities appear in the cross breed cows. He says the cross breeds face storms like the buffalo do. He advises the use of Galloway or Polled Angus on the grade cows. That cross has been tried; the meat is excellent, and the robes are next to seal skin. Crossing breeds away the hump and shaggy mane. The half breed calf is very large at birth, which suggests that only "loose-made wide-hipped cows" should be permitted to bear them.

Mr. Jones' experiment is an interesting one. His object is to produce a breed of cattle having the good qualities of domestic breeds with the range qualities of the buffalo. He hands us some photographs showing the native buffalo, a half breed calf and two yearling grades without hump or mane. Improvement is shown in each degree of crossing. Western farmers will await the outcome of this proceeding with much interest.

WINTER COW FEEDING.

The German formula for a daily winter ration for a cow giving milk is twenty-four pounds of dry organic food, of which fifteen pounds should be digestible, containing of nitrogenous matter two and one-half pounds, and carbonaceous twelve and one-half pounds, or the nitrogenous to the carbonaceous as one to five. They tell us that they may feed with profit hay, fodder corn, corn stalks, straw, corn, oats, barley, wheat bran, shorts, beets, carrots, potatoes, in fact everything that grows on the farm; but they should be so combined in feeding as to contain the desired amount of digestible nutriments in nearly the proportion named. Thirty pounds of timothy hay, which is about the amount that a cow is supposed to eat, when fed alone, contains eleven pounds of digestible food, of which one and one-fourth pounds will be nitrogenous and ten pounds carbonaceous. So hay alone will not furnish a full milk ration. It is claimed by a newspaper correspondent, who visited the Darlington farm where 250 cows are kept for butter, that their daily ration was eight pounds corn meal, eight pounds bran, and eight pounds of cut hay mixed and fed together. This would very nearly correspond to the German ration, but a cheaper ration, and one equally well balanced, was used by Prof. Henry in some experiments last winter. It consists of sixteen pounds hay, seven pounds wheat bran and five pounds of corn meal.

TORONTO CHURCH STATISTICS

DENOMINATION.	CHURCHES.	Salaries.	Average Sunday Collection.	Average yearly income.	Debt	Total value property.	Seating capacity.	Attendance. A. M.	Attendance. P. M.	Sunday School attendance.
Church of England	35	$35,620	$1,299 20	$125,970	$282,900	$ 985,600	16,785	4,410	7,288	6,909
Methodist	27	41,300	1,388 10	127,510	400,610	1,042,815	27,675	7,178	13,930	7,825
Presbyterian	24	43,070	1,375 67	133,420	265,567	736,860	17,290	5,685	7,965	6,022
Baptist	13	16,050	477 87	42,000	59,850	339,000	8,625	1,770	2,950	2,828
Catholic	9	.....	292 50	32,473	61,000	634,630	7,610	5,526	3,992	.....
Congregational	7	11,610	12 00	2,700	63,750	177,200	4,900	1,580	2,838	1,540
Swedenborgian	2	2,000	.....	4,000	3,500	14,200	300	50	47	75
Jewish	2	2,000	142 40	11,471	28,480	10,000	677	225	41	130
Salvation Army	2	4,227	116 00	28,640	55,800	27,000	7,025	8,736	6,430	.....
Miscellaneous	12	5,000	.....	.....	.....	121,000	6,125	809	964	580
Grand Total	145	$161,537	$5,093 64	$508,144	$1,251,457	$4,282,305	97,010	31,068	.....	.....

A Fool and His Money

One man at the end of the season (says Viscount Milton in speaking of the extravagance of some Australian miners) found himself possessed of thirty or forty thousand dollars. Having filled his pockets with 20-dollar gold pieces, on his arrival in Victoria he proceeded to a bar-room and treated the crowd to champagne. The company present being unable to consume all the barkeeper's stock, assistance was obtained from without, and the passers-by compelled to come in. Still the supply held out, and not another drink could anyone swallow. In the emergency the ingenious giver of the treat ordered every glass belonging to the establishment to be brought out and filled. Then, raising his stick, with one fell sweep he knocked the army of glasses off the counter. One hamper of champagne, however, yet remained, and, determined not to be beaten, he ordered it to be opened and placed on the floor, and, jumping in, stamped the bottles to pieces beneath his heavy boots, severely, cutting his shins in the operation; but although the champagne was at last finished, he had a handful of gold pieces to dispose of, and walking up to a large mirror, worth several hundred dollars, which adorned one end of the room, dashed a shower of heavy coins against it and shivered it to pieces. The hero of this story returned to the mines in the following spring without a coat, and was working as a common labourer at the time of our visit.

For the Year 1889

No better resolution can be made than to resist buying any of the substitutes offered as "just as good" as the great only sure-pop corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It never fails to give satisfaction. Beware of poisonous flesh eating substitutes.

Mr. Kiralfy's new spectacular drama is called "The Water Queen." One of the most striking scenes is "The Stalactite Grotto." The bottom of the cave is a lake, and from the water rise pillars of basalt in which are embedded glittering stones. Sea flowers blossom in a hundred crevices, and from the roof of the great cavern water drips incessantly. Huge water lilies float on the surface of the water, and from these points of vantage the airily clad nymphs and spirits take frequent headers into the lake.

The Duty of Wives.

Professor Blackie, of Edinburgh, has been attending, among other things, to wives, and has been giving his views on matters matrimonial. The Professor is somewhat of an old rattle, yet he sometimes stumbles on very sensible remarks and advices. For instance, on this matter matrimonial he says:

1. What are your expectations of the married life? If you expect to find in it a paradise of delights and a field of clover you are sure to be disappointed. Expect from it only a more sacred sphere of moral sympathy, and the best school of moral training, and it is not in the power even of a bad husband to deprive you altogether of the rich spiritual blessing of the bond.

2. It is not in the power of the most sagacious young lady to discern the character of the future husband in that of the present lover. . . . . Look, therefore, for a certain change in the character of your present admirer. The best woman in the world would be spoiled, and become intolerable, if she were habitually to receive such tributes and such service as lovers so lavishly offer on the shrine of their idol.

3. Men are naturally less amiable and more intractable than women. The first point, therefore, to secure a married woman's happiness, after the holidays of the honeymoon are over, is that she should study carefully the peculiarities of her husband's temper. Let no woman foolishly attempt to gain from her husband in a rough way what she can surely achieve by gentleness.

4. In your study to master your husband's temper, do not forget to keep a firm hold of your own.

5. Obey your husband in all reasonable matters. When he becomes imperious about crotchets, take your own way and smile bewitchingly.

6. Always attend conscientiously to the kitchen and the pantry; also to the wardrobe, and, if you have children, to the nursery. But beware of becoming altogether a mere housekeeper or bringer-up of bairns.

7. To ensure the continuance of your husband's love, behave so in all points as to command his respect.

8. Dress well. Good dress is a sort of poetry addressed to the eye, which it is in the power of every well-conditioned woman to compose; and a woman who has no taste for decoration is as much out of nature as a bird without wings.

9. When you wish to obtain anything from your husband, and have reason to anticipate his refusal, choose with delicate care a favourable moment.

10. Don't annoy your husband with officious displays of loving attention in small matters when he is busy, and occupied with affairs of serious concern.

11. Bear in mind also that your husband, though a very important person in your eyes, may be a very small person in the eyes of the world. Do not therefore, be eager to bring him forward on all occasions, quoting all his opinions as if he were an oracle, and discussing publicly his small peculiarities, as if the manner in which he smoked his cigars and shaved his beard were a matter of Parliamentary concern. To parade your husband after this fashion is the surest way to make the man appear ridiculous and the wife petty..... Whatever his faults, a man naturally expects sympathy from his helpmate in the first place, and not criticism.

12. If your husband is a weakling, and cannot manage his own establishment properly, you are entitled to assume the reins by the law of the stronger, but in doing so be careful to use this superiority wisely, and to display it as little as possible. . . . No proper woman should wish to exercise any power over her husband save that which is the natural and quiet result of conjugal love and loyalty, acting in harmony with the graciousness and the tact which are the characteristic excellences of the sex.

Acquiring Distinction.

It is natural to every man to wish for distinction; and the praise of those who can confer honour by their praise, in spite of all false philosophy, is sweet to every human heart; but as eminence can be but the lot of a few, patience of obscurity is a duty which we owe not more to our own happiness than to the quiet of the world at large. Give a loose, if you are young and ambitious, to that spirit which throbs within you; measure yourselves with your equals, and learn from frequent competition, the place which nature has allotted you; make of it no mean battle, but strive hard; strengthen your soul to the search of truth, and follow that spectre of excellence which beckons you on beyond the walls of the world to something better than man has yet done. It may be, you shall burst out into light and glory at the last; but if frequent failure convinces you of that mediocrity of nature which is incompatible with great actions, submit wisely and cheerfully to your lot; let no mean spirit of revenge tempt you to throw off your loyalty to your country, and to prefer a vicious celebrity to obscurity crowned with piety and virtue. If you can throw new light upon moral truth, or by any exertions multiply the comforts, or confirm the happiness of mankind, this fame guides you to the true ends of your nature; but in the name of God, as you tremble at retributive justice, and in the name of mankind, if mankind be dear to you, seek not that easy and accursed fame which is gathered in the work of revolutions; and deem it better to be forever unknown than to found a momentary name upon the basis of anarchy and irreligion.

SYDNEY SMITH.

A Prince's Tiger Hunt.

"Is tiger-hunting fun?" "Yes, it's fun when you hunt the tiger, but its isn't fun when the tiger hunts you." This answer, made by an old hunter to a boy's inquiry, might be made by the Duke of Orleans, a member of the once royal family of France, and his young cousin, Prince Henry of Orleans, who, in the course of a tour around the world, lately went on a tiger-hunting expedition in Northern India.

Mounted upon elephants, the Duke of Orleans and young Prince Henry were in the lead of the hunt, when a tigress which had been fired upon attacked the duke's elephant, and leaping upon its side, clung to one of the steps of the howdah, or elephant saddle, in which the duke was riding.

From this point the animal began to climb, and for one terrible moment it seemed as if she would leap into the howdah and seize the duke.

It was a terrible moment. Prince Henry, from his elephant, tried to get a shot at the tiger, but the animal was now so near the duke that he did not dare to fire for fear of killing his cousin.

Just at this moment the step of the howdah broke under the weight of the tiger, which fell to the ground and then quickly took to flight. She was followed and killed.

Giving Signs of Recovery.

An ill-tempered old Scottish laird lay dangerously ill. His tenants were naturally interested in his condition, and awaited with anxiety the daily bulletin concerning him. The laird's factotum, Geordie, was seen coming from the "big house" with a very cheerful countenance one morning, and was quickly surrounded by an inquiring group. "And hoo's the laird this morning?" they inquired eagerly. "Oh, fine, fine!" replied Geordie joyously. "Please Heaven, we'll sune be haen him aboot yince mair! He took a hale basin o' broth this mornin', and when it was dune he flung the bowl at the lassie's heid!"

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

"Timely Wise"! For Sharp Eyes.

"Nor love, nor honor, wealth, nor power,
Can give the heart a cheerful hour—
When health is lost. Be timely wise:
With ill-health all taste of pleasure flies."
So speaketh Gray, and who denies?
No surer fact beneath the skies.
Alas! for him who early dies
Because he is not timely wise.
Alas! for him who will endure
The ills he might so quickly cure:
Night-sweats, and cough, and hard-caught breath
Consumption's heralds, signs of death.

To be cured, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Thousands have been cured by it who, otherwise, would now be filling untimely graves. For all liver, blood, and lung diseases, it is specific.

Sarah Bernhardt's earnings in Constantinople are South American in size. She is having enormous success there.

Time-tried, Truly Tested.

Tried for years; severely tested, and still growing in popular favor and use, is the record enjoyed by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets—the little sugar coated laxative granules, sold by druggists, anti-bilious and cathartic.

The only jubilee gift which Emperor Francis Joseph accepted was a mosaic image of the Virgin from the Pope.

Favorite.

Fame is a word ambition loves,
And art has ne'er its portrait painted,
Virtue the heart of avarice moves,
Oblivious to the "shekels" saint'd;
Rarer than these, by far,
Is health, defying poet's diction.
Then with it trifle not, nor mar—
Read ills that female pleasures bar
by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy so satisfactory for all those weaknesses and diseases peculiar to women, that they need no longer suffer from them if they will but use this world-famed remedy.

It is said that Browning wrote "Lady Geraldine's Courtship" in two consecutive hours.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Resp'y, T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

The value of next year's Derby will be almost unprecedentledly small, only about £4,000.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, dipsomania, the morphine habit nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Book sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M V Lubon 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont.

A. P. 431

FARMS FOR SALE or RENT. ALL SIZES, KINDS and PRICES. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, DRAYTON, ONT.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates No delay. Correspondence solicited E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt. Established 72 King-st. E., Toronto

AGENTS WANTED! about the Patent PINLESS CLOTHES LINE. Free on application. It is new, successful and cheap. TAREX BROS., Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 122 Yonge st., Toronto.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888—No importations of English Sheeps. Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.

JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DR. MCMICHAEL, No. 63 Niagara St., Buffalo, N.Y.

GUELPH BUSINESS COLLEGE, Guelph, Ont.—Fifth Scholastic Year—its graduates are now employed as Book-keeper Business Managers, Stenographers, etc., by many of the largest business houses in Canada and the United States. Young men and women desiring a thorough business education will consult their own welfare be attending the Guelph Business College. For terms and particulars address M. MCCORMICK, Principal.

Merchants, Butchers, and Traders Generally.

We want a GOOD MAN in your locality to pick up CALF SKINS

For us. Cash furnished on Satisfactory Guaranty. Address,

C. S. PAGE,
HYDE PARK, Vermont, U.S.

Farm Loans

CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - MONTREAL.
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO.

This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms. For information apply to local agents, or to W. E. HOGG, Manager. Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec: Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO
—Manufacturers of the highest grades of—
SILVER - PLATED WARES
TRADE MARK.
—FACTORIES and SALESROOM:—
420 to 426 King St. West, TORONTO
E. G. GOODERHAM, Manager J. C. COPP, Treas.

BRONCHITIS CURED.

After spending Ten Winters South, was Cured by Scott's Emulsion.

146 Centre St., New York, June 25th, 1888.

The Winter after the great fire in Chicago I contracted Bronchial affections, and since then have been obliged to spend nearly every Winter South. Last November was advised to try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and to my surprise was relieved at once, and by continuing its use three months was entirely cured, gained flesh and strength and was able to stand even the Blizzard and attend to business every day. C. T. CHURCHILL.

Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON THE NERVES, THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS

This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.

Why Are We Sick?

Because we allow the nerves to remain weakened and irritated, and these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

WILL CURE BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESS, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, AND ALL NERVOUS DISORDERS,

By quieting and strengthening the nerves, and causing free action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys, and restoring their power to throw off disease.

Why suffer Bilious Pains and Aches?
Why tormented with Piles, Constipation?
Why frightened over Disordered Kidneys?
Why endure nervous or sick headaches?
Why have sleepless nights?

Use PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND and rejoice in health. It is an entirely vegetable remedy, harmless in all cases.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1.00. Six for $5.00.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, MONTREAL, P. Q.

Artificial LIMBS. For circulars address J. DOAN & SON, Toronto, Ont.

Brown Engines

IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.

TORONTO ENGINE WORKS
PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

Young Men

SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto.

BUSINESS Education is very essential to the success of every young man and young woman. Good Bookkeepers are constantly in demand by business men. There is no knowledge more useful than Shorthand and Typewriting. A new avenue for female employment that pays. Constantly growing demand for shorthanders. SHORTHAND

WRITE for descriptive Circulars, containing full particulars of all branches taught and rates of tuition.

Address—CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Public Library Building, Toronto. THOS BENGOUGH, President. C. H. BROOKS, Sec'y & MANAGER.

Stained Glass

FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

STANDARD CHOPPING MILLS.
USES BEST FRENCH BURR MILLSTONES
FINEST GRINDER IN THE WORLD NO RENEWING PLATES AS IN IRON MILLS
STONES WILL LAST A LIFE TIME
COMBINED FEED MILL ELEVATORS AND SCREEN
No. 370
SHIELD AND WATERBOX
WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS BRANTFORD CANADA
20 INCH STANDARD CHOPPER
Have also Feed Cutters and Cob Grinders. Send for circular.
WATEROUS E. W. Co.-BRANTFORD. CANADA.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.

Subscribed Capital, ... $ 4,000,000
Paid Up Capital, ... 2,500,000
Total Assets, ... 10,000,000

The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

"The Racer"
Thin Back, Lance-Tooth, Cross-Cut Saw

The Maple Leaf Racer and Lance Cross cut saws are now sold in all parts of the world. The quality of these saws is unequalled. Their excellence is wholly due to their superior temper, the process of which is kept a profound secret by Shurly & Dietrich, the manufacturers of these saws. One of the best evidences of their superior quality is that other saw manufacturers put on the market as close an imitation of these saws as they are able to produce, and represent it to be as good as the Maple Leaf saw. They ran their saw upon one name until the public become familiar with its inferior quality, then they change the name, in order to humbug the public another season, all of which is the very best evidence of the superior quality of the Maple Leaf saw, as it is not the custom to counterfeit a poor article. These counterfeits are sold for a much lower price than the Maple Leaf saw can be bought for by the dealer, of course, endeavors to sell them at nearly the same price, thereby realizing a larger profit. And some of the more unprincipled dealers, in order to sell the counterfeit saw, will tell untruths of various kinds regarding the quality of both the genuine and the counterfeit. Good goods are always cheap, poor goods dear at any price. A saw, like a knife, will not cut fast unless it will hold a keen cutting edge. Price $1.00 per foot. Manufactured only by

SHURLY & DIETRICH,
SAW MANUFACTURERS,
GALT ONT.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!! Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILK HANDKERCHEIF and The Magic Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Whiton Novelty Co., Toronto, Ont.

I CURE FITS!

When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE. I have made the disease of

FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS

A life long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and it will cure you. Address

H. G. ROOT, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. TORONTO, ONT.

We are children who cheerfully join in the chorus
When Breadmaker's Yeast is the subject before us—
Mamma tried all the rest,
So she knows it's the best, [lightest,
Cause her bread is the whitest, her buns are the*
And we eat all the pancakes she dare set before us.

BUY THE BREADMAKER'S YEAST. PRICE 5 CENTS.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER
A PERFECT FOOD FOR THE SICK
A WARMING & NUTRITIOUS BEVERAGE
A POWERFUL INVIGORATOR

Warming AND Palatable

Are the words used by everybody to express their opinion of the merits of

Johnston's Fluid Beef

as a WINTER BEVERAGE, and as a matter of fact it has a Wonderfully Stimulating effect upon the circulation and not only so but it supplies lasting strength and vigor and is justly called

THE GREAT STRENGTH-GIVER.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSN.

HEAD OFFICE, - - 15 TORONTO STREET, TORONTO, ONT.
CAPITAL AND FUNDS NOW OVER $3,000,000.
A HOME COMPANY, ESTABLISHED OCTOBER, 1871.

To this date, October 31, 1887, there has been returned:

To the heirs of Policy-holders (death claims)	$649,249 00
To the holders of matured Endowment Policies	36,492 63
To Policy-holders on surrender of Policies	98,656 00
To Policy-holders for Cash Profits (including those allocated and being paid)	232,544 02
To holders of Annuity Bonds	10,967 84
Loaned to Policy-holders on Security of their Policies	83,264 98
	$1,808,174 47

Policies in Force over 10,000. Amount over $15,000,000.

PRESIDENT—HON. SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G.
VICE-PRESIDENTS.—WILLIAM ELLIOTT, Esq.; EDWARD HOOPER, Esq.
J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director

Policies Nonforfeitable after ears and Indefeasible after 2 years.

ROGERS'S "CARBON SAFETY" TORONTO ONT. HAS NO EQUAL ILLUMIN

PERSONALS.

Mme. Clara Schumann, the great composer's widow and one of the foremost of modern pianists, played recently in Frankfort-on-the-Main a number of her husband's compositions. Mme. Schumann has been before the public sixty years.

Queen Maria Christina of Spain is now thirty years old. Her face, without being decidedly pretty, is very pleasing, and wears an expression of cheerfulness and kindness. She is tall and graceful, and her complexion is fair. She is a "good mother," the Spaniards say, and their interest in her domestic life at the Royal Palace at Madrid never ceases. She passes there a large part of each day with her children. She is no sooner released from her ceremonial duties than she retires to her private apartments, and begins her play with them.

In Russia there is a lady known to English chess circles, who, to use an Americanism, beats them hollow. She is a chess player whose father, once a wealthy land owner of the South of Russia, lost all his fortune over the chess board. His daughter, now Mme. Lavroffsky, when still a young girl, was seized with the fixed idea of winning it back in that manner in which it was lost. She studied that game with unexampled assiduity under her father's guidance, and in time became a past master—or mistress—therein. Then she began her career as a professional. She has since then amassed a considerable fortune, playing for large stakes, and lately married M. Lavroffsky, also a lover of chess.

The Countess Caroline, an enthusiastic girl of great beauty, became the object of Schubert's romantic passion. His exterior was anything but that of an ideal lover. Rude, unshapely features, thick nose, coarse protruding mouth and a shambling, awkward figure, were redeemed only by eyes of uncommon splendor and depth. The inexperienced maiden, belonging to a haughty family, hardly understood the devotion of the humbly-born genius. Only once he was on the verge of a full revelation. She asked him why he had dedicated nothing to her. With abrupt, passionate, intensity of tone, Schubert answered: "What's the use of that? Everything belongs to you." This brink of confession seems to have frightened him from any further intercourse with the family, yet he never forgot his beautiful dream, or loved another woman.

Patti is fast becoming a rival of the famous Minon de l'Enclos, who preserved her beauty to such an extent up to her sixtieth year that the grandsons of the men who loved her in her youth adored her with as much fervor as their ancestors had done in their days. Patti is, to say the very least, a long way from "sweet and twenty" more like "fair and forty," without the third qualification, yet people who saw her the other day in Paris could see no visible change, no mark of the last ten or fifteen years upon her. She was still as slim and rounded, still without a gray hair in her head, or a wrinkle upon her. There had not come under her chin that small break in the contour of the throat which is the first knell of dead youthfulness. Her hair lay in rich, plentiful black locks about a brow where not one line was to be seen. Her eyes were clear and bright as a child's, her cheeks smooth and pink, her teeth snowy and faultless and the delicate lines of her figure just exactly what they were a score of years back. Some impulsive woman seized her and demanded to be told the secret of her eternal youth and this is what Patti revealed to her. She said: "When I am at home I go to bed early—at 10.30. I rise early, that is, early for singers, which means 10.30. So you see when I am not singing I sleep nearly twelve hours in the twenty-four. Plenty of sleep, that is the secret of beauty and freshness. I don't sleep until 10, of course, but I make it a point not to get up at once when I wake, but to take a glass of hot water and a lemon and read my letters before getting out of bed. It's a mistake to jump up right away after waking. I bathe in tepid water and then sponge off with a cold sponge. On singing days I take a light and early dinner at 3 and only a biscuit and a cup of hot bouillon after the performance. No great quantity of food and plenty of sleep, that's the way to keep one's complexion and figure intact. I rarely touch wine, a liqueur-glass full of whiskey after luncheon or dinner, sometimes a glass of champagne. Nothing more."

To Start a Balky Horse.

Mr. Joseph A. Titus of Worchester, Mass., writes to Our Dumb Animals as follows: I have had to do with many balky horses and I have never known the following simple expedient to fail, provided it was not a case where some other person had been tampering with the will of the horse before I had taken him in hand. It is another method of "diversing the horse's attention."

Whenever a horse driven by myself has balked I have got out of my carriage and gone to his fore feet, lifted it from the ground and struck the shoe a few blows with a stone or with a wrench (which I always carry in my carriage.) I have never failed to start a horse in that very simple way, and I have on several occasions had balky horses which have exhausted the patience of all former owners.

I have undertaken to start balky horses, being handled by others, after other methods of starting them had failed. I request the driver generally to move out of the way, that his voice or presence may not be recognised by the horse. I then first inform the animal, by patting him and talking to him, that there is a new man at the helm, thereby partly diverting his attention. As soon as he begins to give me his attention I take up his feet and tap it a few times, and never failed except in one instance to start the horse. And that exceptional case was one where the horse was overloaded and knew it.

The very worst method of attempting to start a balky horse, according to my experience and observation, is that of pulling the head of the animal by the bit, and it is a method almost universally adopted by the inexperienced users of the horse. The stubbornness of the horse is only increased by that method. I offer this suggestion in the interests of your cause.

The Man of Many Passes.

Life with the general passenger agent of a railroad is one continued round of pleasure. He is about the only official connected with the management of a railroad who can travel around the country without money and without price. His fat pocketbook contains the magical open sesame to all lines of road in the country, and he also possesses the privileges of the sleeping cars and the dining cars. When the general freight agent travels he has his annual railroad passes, but he is obliged to produce to the representatives of the sleeping car companies and pay the usual tariff for his meals in the dining cars. A general passenger agent can start for New York with only his collection of annuals and the price of two cocktails and return home with the entire outfit, as some one will certainly turn up to purchase his cocktails for him. To paraphrase the old time chestnut, the general passenger agent could go around the world with a paper collar and a $2 bill and change only the collar.

The cross-bred buffalo is the latest innovation in live stock. The domesticated buffalo promises to be the most profitable live stock of the future. An able article in the "American Agriculturist" for December describes the only two herds of domesticated or cross-bred buffalo in America, and is accompanied by illustrations of the cross-bred buffalo steer, cows and calf, with which is contrasted the native animals. The advantages and pecuniary profit from the cross-bred buffalo are very great. A cross with the Galloway will make a very fine robe, which will sell at thirty dollars. The half-bred animal is much heavier in the hind quarters and more beefy than the aboriginal buffalo. The hair is somewhat longer and thicker on the hind quarters and less dense on the shoulders than the half-bred, which adds to the value of the robe. The meat commands a fancy price, and breeding animals are not to be had at any money.

THE THREAD OF LIFE:

OR,

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XLIV.—"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, MAKE YOUR GAME!"

Though play had only just begun when Hugh and his companions entered the saloon, the rooms were already pretty well crowded with regular visitors, who came early to secure their accustomed seats, and who lent forward with big rolls of gold piled high in columns on the table before them, marking down with a dot on their tablets the winning numbers, and staking their twenty or thirty napoleons with mechanical calmness on every turn of that fallacious whirligig. Hugh had often heard or read sensational descriptions of the eagerness depicted upon every face, the anxious gaze, the rapt attention, the obvious fascination of the game for its votaries; but what struck him rather on the first blush of it all was the exact opposite: the stolid indifference with which men and women alike, inured to the varying chances of the board, lost or won a couple of dozen pounds or so on each jump of the pea, as though it were a matter of the supremest unconcern to them in their capacity of gamblers whether they or the bank happened to take up each particular little heap of money. They seemed, indeed, to be mostly rich and blase people, suffering from plethora of the purse, who could afford to throw away their gold like water, and who threw it away carelessly out of pure wantonness, for the sake of the small modicum of passing excitement yielded by the uncertainty to their jaded palates.

Nevertheless, he remarked with surprise from the very first moment that even at that early hour of the morning, when the day's work had hardly yet got well under weigh, the rooms, though large and lofty, were past all belief hot and close, doubtless from the strange number of feverish human hearts and lungs, all throbbing and panting their supressed excitement, in that single Casino, and warming the air with their internal fires. He raised his eyes and glanced for a moment around the saloon. It was spacious and handsome, after its own gaudy fashion, richly decorated in the Mauresque style of the Spanish Alhambra, though with far less taste and harmony of colour than in the restorations to which his eye had been long familiarised in London and Sydenham. At Monte Carlo, to say the truth, a certain subdued tinge of vulgar garishness just mars the native purity of the style into perfect accord with the nature and purposes of that temple of Mammon in his vilest avatar.

Hugh, however, for his part had no scruples in the matter of gambling. He gazed up and down at the ten or twelve roulette tables that crowded the salles de jeu, with the utmost complacency. He liked play, and it diverted him to watch it, especially when the man he meant to observe was the propounder of a new and infallible system. Infallible systems are always interesting: they collapse with a crash—amusing to everybody except their propounder. He bent his eyes closely upon the hands of the Russian, who had now pulled out his roll of gold and silver, and was eagerly beginning to back his chosen numbers, doubtless with the blind and stupid confidence of the infatuated system monger.

Raffalevsky, however, played a cautious opening. He started modestly with four five franc pieces, distributed about on a distinct plan, and each of them staked on a separate number. The five-franc piece, in fact, is the minimum coin permitted to show its face on those aristocratic tables; and six thousand francs is the maximum sum which the bank allows any one player to hazard on a single twist of the roulette: between these extreme limits, all possible systems must needs confine themselves, so that the common martingale of doubling the stake at each unsuccessful throw becomes here practically impossible. Raffalevsky's play had been carefully calculated. Hugh, who was already well versed in the mysteries of roulette, could see at a glance that the Russian had really a method in his madness. He was working on strict mathematical principles. Sometimes he divided or decreased his stake; sometimes, at a bound, he trebled or quadrupled it. Some times he plunged on a single number; sometimes for several turns together he steadily backed either red or black, pair or impair. But on the whole by hap or cunning, he really seemed to be winning rapidly. His sustained success made Hugh more anxious than ever to watch his play. It was clear he had invented a genuine system. Might it be after all, as he said, an infallible one?

If only Hugh could find it out! He must, he would marry Elsie. How grand to marry her, a rich man! He would love to lay at Elsie's feet a fortune worthy of his beautiful Elsie.

Things were all changed now. He had something to live, to work, to gamble for! If only he could say to his recovered Elsie: "Take me, rich, famous, great—take me, and Whitestrand, no longer sand-swept. I lay it all in your lap for your gracious acceptance—these piles of gold—these heaps of coins!" But he had nothing, nothing, save the few napoleons he carried about him. If he had but the Russian's twelve thousand pounds now! he would play and win—win a fortune at a stroke for his darling Elsie.

Fired with the thought, he watched Raffalevsky more closely than ever. In time, he began to perceive by degrees upon what principle the money was so regularly lost and won. It was a good principle, mathematically correct. Hugh worked it out hastily on the back of an envelope Yes, in one hundred and twenty chances out of one hundred and thirty-seven, a man ought to win ten louis and a turn against seven lost, on an average reckoning. At last Raffalevsky, after several good hazards, laid down five louis boldly upon 24. Hugh touched his shoulder with a gentle hand. 'Wrong," he murmured in French. "You make a mistake there. You abandon your principle. You ought to have backed 27 this time.

The Russian looked back at him with an angry smile; so slight a scratch at once brought out the Tartar. "Back it yourself, then, Monsieur," he said sullenly. "I make my own game. Pray, don't interrupt me. If your calculations go so very deep, put your own money down and try your luck against me. My principles, when I first discovered them, were not worked out on the back of an envelope."

The gibe offended Hugh. In a second he saw that the fellow was wrong: he was misinterpreting the nature of his own discovery. He had neglected one obvious element of the problem. The error was mathematical: Hugh snapped at it mentally with his keen perception—he had taken a first in mathematics at Oxford—and noted at once that if the Russian pursued his present course for many turns together he was certain before long to go under hopelessly. For the space of one deep breath he hesitated and held back. What was the use of gambling with no capital to go upon? Then, more for the sake of proving himself right than of winning money, he dived into his pocket with a sudden resolution, and drawing forth five napoleons from his scanty purse, laid them without a word on 27, and awaited patiently the result of his action.

"The game is made," the croupier called out as Hugh withdrew his hand. After that warning signal, no stakes can be further received or altered. Whir-r-r went the roulette. The pea span round with whizzing speed. Hugh looked on, all eager, in a fever of suspense. He half regretted he had backed 27. He was sure to lose. The chances, after all, were so enormous against him. Thirty-six to one! If you win, it's a fluke. What a fool he had been to run the risk of making himself look small in this gratuitous way before the cold eyes of that unfeeling Russian.

He knew he was right, of course: 27 was the system. but a sensible system never hangs upon a single throw. It depends upon a long calculation of chances. You must let one risk balance another. Raffalevsky had twelve thousand pounds to fall back upon. If he failed once, to him that didn't matter: he could go on still and recoup himself in the end by means of the system. Only under such circumstances of a full purse can any method of gambling ever by any possibility be worth anything. Broken reeds at the best, even for a Rothschild, they must almost necessarily pierce the hand that leans upon them if it ventures to try them on a petty scrap of pocket capital. And Hugh's capital was grotesquely scrappy for such a large venture—he had only some seventy-five pounds about him.

How swift is thought, and how long a time it seemed before the pea jumped! He had reasoned out all this, and a thousand-fold more, in his own mind with lightning speed while that foolish wheel was still whirling and spinning. If he won at all, it could only be by a rare stroke of fickle fortune. Thirty-six to one were the odds against him! and if he lost, he must either leave off at once, or else, in accordance with the terms of the system, stake ten louis next turn on 14, or nine louis on odd or even. At that rate, his poor little capital would soon be exhausted. How he longed for Raffalevsky's twelve thousand to draw upon. He would feel so small if 27 lost. And if there was anything on earth that Hugh Massinger hated it was feeling small: the sense of ignominy, and its opposite the feeling of personal dignity, were deeply rooted in the very base and core of his selfish nature.

At last the pea jumped. A breathless second! The croupier looked over at it and watched its fall. "Vingt sept," he cried in his stereotyped tone. Hugh's heart leapt up with a sudden wild bound. The fever of play had seized on him now. He had won at a stroke—a hundred and seventy-five louis.

Here was a capital indeed upon which to begin. He would back his own system with this against Raffalevsky's. Or rather, he would back Raffalevsky's discovery, as rightly apprehended and worked out by himself, against Raffalevsky's discovery as wrongly applied and distorted through an essential error of detail by its original inventor.

It was system pitted against system now. The croupier raked in the scattered gold heaped on the various cabalistic numbers, squares, and diamonds—and amongst them, Raffalevsky's five napoleons upon 24. Then he paid the lucky players their gains; counting out three thousand five hundred francs with practised ease, and handing them to Hugh, who was one among the principal winners by that particular turn. In two minutes more, the board was cleared; the wooden cue had hauled in all the bank's receipts; the fortunate players had added their winnings to the heap before them; and all was ready for a further further venture. "Messieurs et mesdames, faites le jeu," the harsh voice of the croupier cried mechanically. The players laid down their stakes once more; the croupier waited the accustomed interval. "Le jeu est fait," he cried at last; and the pea again went buzzing and whizzing. Hugh was backing his system this time on the regular rule: three louis on the left-hand row of numbers.

He lost. That was but a small matter, of course. He had won to begin with; and a stroke of luck at the first outset is responsible for the greater part of the most reckless playing. Time after time he staked and played—staked and played—staked and played again, sometimes losing, sometimes winning; but on the whole, the system, as he had anticipated, proved fairly trustworthy. The delirium of play had taken full possession of him, body and soul, by this time. He was piling up gold; piling it fast: how fast he never stopped to think or count: enough for him that the system won: as long as it won, what waste of time at a critical moment to stop and reckon the extent of his fortune.

He only knew that every now and then he thrust a fresh handful of gold or notes into his pocket—for Elsie—and went on playing with feverish eagerness with the residue of his winnings left upon the table.

By two o'clock, however, he began to get hungry. This sort of excitement takes it rapidly out of a man. Lock had dissapeared from the scene long since. He wanted somebody to go and feed with. So he leaned over and whispered casually to Raffalevsky: "Shall we turn out now and take a mouthful or two of lunch together?"

Raffalevsky looked back at him with a pale face. "As you will," he said wearily. "I'm tired of this play. Losses, losses all along the line. The system breaks down here and there, I find, in actual practice."

So Hugh had observed with a placid smile for the last hour or two.

They left the tables, and strolled across the square to the stately portals of the Hotel de Paris. Hugh was in excellent spirits indeed.

"Permit me to constitute myself the host, monsieur," he said with his courtliest air to Raffalevsky. He had won heavily now, and was in a humour on all grounds to spend his winnings with princely magnificence.

The Russian bowed. "You are very kind, monsieur," he answered with a smile. Then he added, half apologetically, at the end of a pause: "And after all, it was my own system."

The carte was tempting, and money was cheap—cheaper than in London. Hugh ordered the most sumptuous and recherche of luncheons, with wine to match, on a millionaire scale, and they sat down together at the luxurious tables of that lordly restaurant. While they waited for their red mullet, Hugh pulled out a stray handful of notes and gold and began to count up the extent of his winnings. He trembled himself when he saw to how very large a sum the total amounted. He had pocketed no less in that short time then fourteen hundred louis! Fools that plod and toil and moil in London for a long, long year upon half that pittance! How he pitied and despised them! In three brief hours, by the aid of a system, he had won offhand fourteen hundred louis!

He mentioned the sum of his winnings with bated breath to the unsympathetic Russian. Raffalevsky bit his lip with undisguised jealousy, "And I," he said curtly, in a cold voice, "have dropped sixteen hundred."

It's wonderful with what placid depths of heroism the winners can endure the losses of the losers. "Never mind, my friend," Hugh answered back cheerily. "Fortune always takes a turn in the long run. Her wheel will alter. You'll win soon. And besides, you know, you have an infallible system."

"It's the cursed system that seems to have betrayed me," the Russian blurted back with a savage outburst of unchecked temper. "It worked out so well on paper, somehow; but on these precious tables, with their turns and their evolutions, some thing unexpected is always bobbing up to spoil and prevent my legitimate triumph. Would you believe it, now, last turn but one, and the turn before it, I had calculated seven hundred and twenty-two distinct chances all in my favour to a miserable solitary one against me; and not one of the seven hundred and twenty-two good combinations ever turned up at all, but just the one beastly unlucky conjunction that made against me and ruined my speculations. You might play for seven hundred and twenty-two turns on an average again without that ever happening a second time to confound you."

CHAPTER XLV.—PACTOLUS INDEED.

After a sumptuous lunch, Hugh and the Russian returned to the rooms. To the rooms!—say rather to the treasure house of Croesus! On the steps, they passed a young English lad, who looked barely twenty. "Don't tell mamma I played," he was saying to a companion ruefully as they passed him. "She'd break her heart over it, if she ever knew it." But Hugh had no time to notice in passing the pathos of the remark. Who could bother his head about trifles like that, forsooth, when he's coining his hundreds on the turn of a roulette table?

He meant to win hundreds—thousands—now. He meant to build up a colossal fortune—for Elsie, for Elsie.

These years had taught him a certain sort of selfishness. It was no longer for his own use that he wanted money; he longed to lay it all down at Elsie's feet. She was his Queen: he would do her homage.

The tables had filled up three files deep with players by this time. Hugh had hard work to edge his way dexterously in between them: the Russian followed with equal difficulty. But a croupier, recognising them, motioned both with a courteous wave of his hand to two vacant chairs he had kept on purpose. Men who win—or lose—large sums command respect instinctively at Monte Carlo. Hugh and the Russian had each qualified, on one or other of these opposite grounds, for a seat at the table. Hugh's turn by the system, however, had not yet come on: he had to wait, according to his self-imposed law, till one of the four middle numbers should happen to turn up before he again began staking. So he gazed around with placid interest for some minutes at his crowded fellow-players. Success excites some nervous heads; it always made Hugh Massinger placid. There they sat and stood, not less, he thought, than five hundred busy men and women, fifty or sixty jostling one another round each separate board, playing away as if for dear life, and risking fortunes giddily on the jump of a pea in that meaningless little whirligig of a spinning roulette wheel. She was a German, he conjectured, that flat-faced impassive lady opposite, gambling cautiously but very high, and laden on her neck and arms and ears with an atrocious dead-weight of vulgarly expensive jewelry. Then the bold but handsome young girl at her side, with the exquisite bonnet and well-cut mantle, and the remarkably full-blown Pennsylvanian twang, must surely by her voice be an American citizen. By her voice and by her play; for she risked her broad gold hundred-franc pieces with true-born American recklessness of consequence. And there, a little way off, stands a newly married Englishman, with his pretty small bride nestling close up to him in wifely expostulation. Hugh could even catch snatches of their whispered colloquy: "Don't George, don't." —"Just this once, Nellie: a napoleon on red."—Black wins: he loses,—"H'm, the chances there are only even. If I win next time, I get nothing but my own old napoleon back again. I'll go it one better now: a nap on a column. Then if I win, you see, I get four times my stake, Nellie."—Lost again! How fast they rake it in!"—"Well, then, I'll back a number this time."—"Oh, but, George dear, you know you really can't afford it."—George, unabashed by her wifely reproof, plumps down his napoleon on 32. Whir goes the roulette.—"Dix-huit," cries the croupier, and sweeps in the gold with a careless curve of his greedy hand-rake. Poor souls! In his heart, Hugh Massinger was genuinely sorry for them. If only they had known his infallible system!

But even as he thought it, he roused himself with a start. Eighteen was one of the very numbers he had just been waiting for. No time for otiose reflections now; no time for foolish waste of sympathy: the moment had arrived for vigorous action. With a sharp decisive air, he plunged down a hundred louis on white. Bystanders started and whispered and nudged one another. White won, and he took up his winnings with the utmost complacency. How quickly one accustoms one's self to these big figures! A hundred louis seemed nothing now, in pursuance of the system. Then he glanced across at George, poor luckless George, with a mute inquiry. How that smooth-faced young Englishman envied his success; for George, poor George, had lost again. "Madame," Hugh said, addressing himself with an apologetic smile to the pretty young wife, "allow me to venture ten louis for you."—The blushing girl shrank back timidly. Hugh laid down ten pieces of gold on a number again, backing his own luck separately by the regular rule on a column of figures. Chance seemed to favour him: he was "in the vein," as gamblers say in their hateful dialect. The number won for poor shrinking little Mrs. Nellie, and the column also won as well for Hugh himself. He pulled in his own pile of gold carelessly and handed the other to the pretty young Englishwoman. "It isn't ours," she murmured with a shy look. "You mustn't ask me; I really couldn't take it."

Hugh laughed, and pressed on to the anxious husband, who cast a sidelong glance at the heap of gold, and finally in some vague half-hearted way decided upon accepting it. "Now go," Hugh said with a fatherly air. "You don't understand this sort of thing, you know. You belong to the class predestined to be cheated. The sooner you leave this place the better. Let nothing induce you ever to risk another penny on these precious tables." We can all be so wise and prudent for others

"But it's really yours," the young Englishman went on, glancing down at it sheepishly. "You risked your own money, you see, to win it."

"Not at all," Hugh answered with his pleasantest smile; he knew how to do a gracious act graciously. "I've taken back my own ten louis out of it for myself. The rest is your wife's. I staked it in her name. It was her good luck alone that won for both of us. If you compel me to keep it, you spoil my break. A burst of fortune must end somewhere. Don't stand in my way, please, for such a mere trifle."

The Englishman's hand closed, half reluctantly, over the ill-gotten money, and Hugh, undisturbed, turned back again with a nod to his own gambling. The episode warmed him up to his work. A pleasant sense of a generous action prettily performed inspired and invigorated his play from that moment. He went on with his game with an approving conscience. Some people's consciences approve so blandly. The other players, too, observed and applauded. Gamblers overflow with petty superstitions. One of their profoundest is the rooted belief that meanness and generosity bring each its due reward: whoever gambles in a lavish free-hearted open-handed way is sure, they think to become the favourite of fortune.

The Russian, on the other hand, kept on losing steadily. Now and again, indeed, he won for a while on some great coup, raking in his fifty or a hundred louis; but that was by exception: for the most part, he frittered away his winnings time after time, and had recourse with alarming frequency of isteration to his bundle of notes, from which he changed a thousand francs every half hour or so with persistent ill-fortune. Turn upon the relentless bank with unvarying regularity. Now it was zero that turned up, to confound his reckoning, and the coupier with his bow made a clean sweep, offhand, of the entire table: now it was a long succession of left-hand numbers that won with a rush, while he had staked his gold with unvarying mishap upon the right-hand column. It was agonising each time to him to see the bank carelessly ladling out large sums to Hugh, while he himself went on losing and losing. But at all hazards, he would follow his calculations to the bitter end. Luck must have a turn somewhere; and at anyrate, punging would never improve matters. Hugh pitied him from his heart, poor ignorant devil. Why couldn't he find out with an exercise of reason that obvious flaw in his own system?

A thousand francs on seven! The table stares, gapes, and whispers. Heavy for a number! Who puts it on? This Monsieur on the seat here—pointing to Hugh. The coupier shrugs his shoulder and spins. Out jumps the pea. Fourteen wins.—Monsieur was very nearly right again, voyez-vous?—Fourteen, my frirnd, is just the precise double of seven. Monsieur's luck is something truly miraculous. He goes a thousand francs once more, still on seven. Ciel! but he has the courage of his convictions. mon ami! Twenty-three wins.—Wrong again! He drops on that a second thousand. But with what grace! A thousand francs is nothing to these milords. Hugh smiles imperturbably and stakes a third. On seven again! The man is wonderful. What wins this time?—"Sept gagne," cries everybody in hushed admiration; and Hugh, more sphinx-like in his smile than ever, but conscious of a dozen admiring eyes fixed full upon him, takes coolly up his thirty-five thousand. Thirty-five thousand francs is not to be sneered at. Fourteen hundred pounds sterling! The biggest haul yet, but nothing when you're accustomed to it. What a run of luck? Monsieur was in the vein indeed. He played on and on, more elated than ever. At this rate, he would soon earn a fortune for Elsie.

Elsie, Elsie, Elsie, Elsie! Through the din and noise of that crowded gambling hell, one sacred name still rang distinct and clear in his ears. It was all for Elsie, for Elsie, for Elsie! He must make himself rich, to marry Elsie.

He played on still with careless eagerness till the tables closed—played with a continuous run of luck, often varying, of course—for who minds a few hundreds to the bad now and then when he's winning one time with another his thousands?—but on the whole a run of luck persistently favourable. Raffalevsky, meanwhile, had played and lost. At the end of the day, as the lackeys came in to bow the world out with polite smiles, they both rose and left the rooms together. Then a sudden thought flashed across his soul. Too late to return to San Remo now! Awkward as it was, he must stop the night out at Monte Carlo. Full of himself—of play and of Elsie—he had actually forgotten all about Winifred!

They walked across side by side to the Hotel de Paris. Hugh was far too feverishly excited now with his day's play to care in the least about the slight and the insult to that poor dead girl. The mere indecency of it was all that he minded. A cynical hardness possessed him at last. Nobody need know. He strolled to the telegraph office and boldly sent off a message to the pension:

"Detained at Mentone with sympathising friends. Return to-morrow. Make all arrangements on my account.—MASSINGER."

Then he presented himself at the bureau of the Hotel de Paris. Monsieur had no luggage; but no matter for that; the hotel made haste to accommodate him at once with the best of rooms, not even requiring a deposit beforehand. All Monte Carlo knew well, indeed, that Monsieur had been winning. His name and fame had been noised abroad by many-headed trumpeters. His pockets were literally stuffed with gold. He was the hero of the day. He had carried everything at the Casino before him. Attentive servants awaited his merest beck or nod; everybody was pleased; the world smiled on him. Alphonse, Marie, look well after Monsieur! Monsieur has had the very best of fortune.

He supped with Raffalevsky in a beautifully decorated salle-a-manger. They recounted to one another, gleefully, gloomily, their winnings and losses. The totals were heavy. They totted them up with varying emotions. Hugh had won three thousand four hundred pounds. Raffalevsky had made a hole in his larger captital to the tune of something like two thousand seven hundred. At the announcement, Hugh smiled his most benevolent and philosophical smile. "After all," he said, as he scanned the wine-card, toothpick in hand, in search of a perfectly sound Burgundy, "if one man wins, another must lose. You have there the initial weak point of gambling. It's at bottom a truly anti-social amusement. But these things equalise themselves in the long run; they equalise themselves by the doctrine of averages. Taken collectively, we're better off than we were at lunch at anyrate. Then, his Serenity of Monaco had pocketed a couple of hundred louis out of the pair of us viewed in the lump. This evening, on the contrary, we're seven hundred pounds to the good, as a firm, against him.—I like to beat these hereditary plunderers. It's a comfort to think that, in spite of everything we're more than even with him on the day's transaction!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

How Many Apples Did Adam and Eve Eat?

Some say Eve 8 and Adam 2, a total of 10 only.

We think the above figures entirely wrong. If Eve 8 and Adam 8 2 certainly the total will be 90. Scientific men, however, on the strength of the theory that the antediluvians were a race of giants, reason something like this: Eve 8 1 and Adam 8 2; total, 163

Wrong again. What could be clearer than If Eve 8 1 and Adam 8 1 2 the total was 803?

Is Eve 8 1 1st and Adam 8 1 2, would not the total be 1,623?

George Washington says: Eve 8 1 4 Adam and Adam 8 1 2 4 Eve; together they got away with 8,938.

But Eve 8 1 4 Adam, Adam 8 1 2 4 2 oblige Eve. Total 82,056.

We think this, however, not sufficient quantity, for though we admit that Eve 8 1 4 Adam, Adam, if he 8, 0 2 8 1 2 4 2 keep Eve company. Total, 80,282,056.

Everybody is wrong again. Eve, when she 8 1, 8 1 2 many, and probably felt sorry for it, but her companion, in order to relieve her sorrow, 8 1 2. Therefore, Adam, if he 8 1, 8 1 4 2 4 2 fy Eve's de pressed spirit. Hence both ate 81,896,054 apples.

A Furious Bloodhound.

Two young women have had a terrible encounter with a bloodhound at Waverley, Baltimore County, Maryland. The animal was owned by Charles Saulsbury, and was quite a pet in the household. It had been, with one or two exceptions, gentle and easily controlled. The excessive heat of the last few days had made it fretful and ugly. About 11 o'clock at night, Miss Amelia Saulsbury, aged 18 years, a daughter of the owner of the dog, entered the garden in front of the house, accompanied by Miss Jennie Brown, aged 22 years. While walking towards the house, the hound rushed out from the side yard, barking furiously. Miss Saulsbury spoke to him, but he jumped upon her, threw her to the ground, and next attacked her companion. The ferocious beast tore the clothing from them, and lacerated their legs and arms fearfully. Miss Saulsbury's brother, a lad of 14, came to their assistance, when the brute turned upon him and nearly tore him into pieces. A policeman finally killed the dog. Young Saulsbury was bitten in twenty-two different places, and on his arms and legs the flesh was torn to the bone. Both of his arms and hands and his left thigh were terribly mangled. The wound on his thigh is particularly dangerous. Miss Saulsbury's right hand and arm were horribly lacerated, and were immediately cauterised. Seven lacerated wounds were found to have been received by Miss Brown on the left hand and arm, and a dangerous wound made by the dog's teeth on her left hip has almost paralyzed her. Miss Saulsbury was bitten some time ago by the same dog on the right arm. It is thought that the dog was afflicted with hydrophobia, and fear is entertained for the three victims. The physicians say that the hound was not mad, but only vicious. The neighbors, however, are of opinion that it was a case of rabies, and that the doctors are concealing the fact in their effort to save the young women and the boy from a horrible fate.

Women Voters.

The municipal elections held in Boston on Tuesday last were, for several reasons, probably the most remarkable known in the history of that city.

Throughout the State of Massachusetts women are allowed to vote in school elections, but hitherto in Boston never more than 2,000 have done so. This year, more than 21,000 women registered and over 18,000 voted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A fine specimen of fifteenth century Burgundian art has been acquired by the Louvre. This is the tomb of Philippe Pot, Seneschal of Burgundy, who died 1494. It is very much defaced.

The "Old Songs," illustrated by Abbey and Parsons in numbers of "Harper's Magazine," have been attired in a most chaste but costly dress for the holidays.

The New York "Independent" celebrated its fortieth birthday Dec 6. In the issue of that date Dr. Richard S. Storrs, Henry C. Bowen and Dr. Samuel T. Spear, who are the only original editors and proprietors surviving, contributed to that number as they did to the first ever published.

Fear small temptations rather than great ones. These come only now and then; those every day. Beware of being witty at the expense of reverence; sarcastic at the expense of charity; entertaining at the expense of truth; coarse at the expense of purity.

Rome, once mistress of the world, has made wonderful material progress during the past twenty years. Within that time eighty-two miles of new streets have been made, over 3000 houses have been built or enlarged, about $27,000,000 have been spent in public improvements and the population has increased from 244,000 to 379,000.

The oldest female professional thief in the country is May Fitzgerald, now in the Tombs at New York and eighty years of age. She has spent the greater portion of the last sixty years in prison. She was arrested one day last week for picking pockets, and made a desperate fight for liberty. She began her wicked career at eleven years of age.

Frith tells a good story against Daniel Maclise, the talented Irishman, whose paintings can be seen at the houses of Parliament in London and who was very famous in his day. He had a brother in the army, who was asked one day by a fellow-officer if he were any relation to the Maclise. He replied promptly: "I am the Maclise, and Dan is me brother.

A proceeding which is perhaps the first of its kind is the return to a French painter, Leroux, of a painting which has been hung for years in an American public gallery. The sky of Leroux's "Tuccia, the Vestal" having deteriorated, the authorities of the Corcoran at Washington have shipped it over to him for retouchment—a favor for which the artist doubtless is most grateful.

An ingenious chicken raiser from Pomona, Cal., has devised a way of preventing chickens from scratching up his garden. He crosses the long-legged brahmas with the short-legged bantams, and the result is a new breed of fowls with one long leg and one short leg. When they raise either leg to scratch they lose their balance and come to grief. After a few demoralizing attempts they desist.

An elaborate and costly catalogue of the Stebbins collection which is about to be sold at American Art Galleries, will contain 24 etchings by well-known artists after pictures in the collection, 40 vignette portraits of artists by Stephen J. and Gerome Ferris, and a number of Meisenbach etchings made by the process used by Furtz. The edition is limited. The gallery will be sold some time in February.

The Sandwich Island alphabet has only 12 letters; the Bermese, 19; the Italian, 20; the Bengalese, 21; the Hebrew, Syriac, Chaldee, Samaritan and Latin, 22 each; the French, 23; the Greek, 24; the German and Dutch, 26 each; the Spanish and Slavonic, 27 each; the Arabic has 28; the Persian and Coptic, 32; the Georgian, 35; the Armenian 38; the Russian, 41; the Muscovite, 43; the Sanscrit and Japanese, 50; the Ethiopic and Tartaric, 202.

Katherine Prescott Wormeley, who is just now especially well known to the literary world as the translator of Balzac, was, during the war, a prominent worker in active service in the sanitary commission. She sent home, during these trying days, letters from the front, which have been arranged and published by Ticknor & Co., under the title, "The Other Side of the War." and give most graphic pictures of soldier life in battle field, camp and hospital.

In 1881 the Bank of England stock of paid notes for five years was about 77,745,000 in number, and filled 13,400 boxes, which, if placed side by side, would reach 2½ miles: if the notes were placed in a pile they would reach to a height of 5-2 3 miles; or, if joined end to end, would form a ribbon 12,455 miles long; their superficial extent was rather less than that of Hyde Park; their original value was over £1,750,626,600; and their weight over 90½ tones.

The Eiffel Tower in Paris has reached the great height of 200 meters, or about 660 feet. A large flag was run up to apprise Paris of the event. The tower is now so high that standing on a balcony overlooking the Boulevard de Courcelles one can see it towering above the intervening Trocadero hill and the tall houses standing thereon. As it stands, it is far the highest erection in the world. The tower will probably be ready for the painters earlier than the contractor engaged to let them have it.

A twelve year old Philadelphia boy was bitten in the lip and cheek by a dog on October 24 last. The wounds were promptly cauterized and seen healed, leaving two ugly scars. One day a strange man who noticed the scars asked the boy what had caused them, and upon being informed said: "You will go mad soon." The little fellow became so frightened that he ran home crying and from that moment brooded over the possibility of an attack of hydrophobia. He actually took it, and died not long since in terrible agony.

The United States Geological Survey gives some mining statistics that show something of the wonderful wealth of the country, judged by the immense mineral output for the past year. The total value of all minerals mined in 1887 was $538,000,000. This is $70,000,000 more than the output for 1886, and over $100,000 greater than that for 1885. The year's yield is not only the greatest ever produced in the United States, but is at least $100,000,000 greater than the output of any country, and, leaving out England, is greater than that of all Europe.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

A German Paper's Attack on the English Ambassado —Rumors about the Czar —Gladstone's Birthday.

The Cologne "Gazette," which does nothing without Bismarck's knowledge, is engaged now in a spirited attack upon Sir Robert Morier, the big bluff white-headed country squire who is the English Ambassador at St Petersburg. The "Gazette" charged, a while ago, that Bazaine declared at Madrid, in 1886, that his first news of the movements of German troops in August, 1871, came from Sir Robert, who was then plain Mr. Morier and the Minister at Darmstadt. Sir Robert, thereupon, gave this statement the lie. He said he had a letter from Bazaine denying that he ever said any such thing. The "Gazette" now reiterates the charge and challanges Morier to produce the letter, adding that, even if it exists, it will prove nothing in the face of evidence at the "Gazette's" disposal of men who heard Bazaine's words. All this in itself is not over-important, save as a clue to what Bismarck meant when he alluded to English court influences over the late Emperor Frederick and as a sign that Bismarck for some reason is anxious now to disturb England's relations with Russia.

Curious rumors have been afloat during the last week or so in Russian circles that the Czar has come around into a reforming frame of mind. There is a public official announcement that Count Tolstoi's plan for further reactionary changes has been rejected. This Tolstoi, who is not to be confounded with the novelist of the same name and title, is the head and front of the despotic party in the Russian bureaucracy, and his present defeat comes, curiously enough, in the same week as the death in exile of his great antagonist, Loris-Melikoff. The reforms which Melikoff tried to institute were rudely interrupted. He himself was thrown into disgrace by the assassination of Alexander II., and now, after eight years, it looks as if another start had been made. No hint has been given as yet as to what the Czar purposes doing, but it seems that he has been greatly impressed by the good will shown to him and the Czarina all through the recent journey to the Caucasus and by the general manifestation of loyal thankfulness at their escape in the terrible accident at Borkin. The confidence thus inspired in the imperial mind may or may not bear important fru

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Sereet, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

DUTTON, JANUARY 10, 1889.

Who ordered the blizzard?

Ed. Corliss has removed to Michigan.

Jerone Ecker has removed back to Eden.

The clay roads have been almost impassable lately.

The M. C. R. pay car passed through yesterday.

The new High School at Glencoe was opened on Monday.

Miss S. Kane has left for Ottawa to attend the Normal School.

Jas. Crane is building a house on his lot on Ridge street, to cost $700.

Mr. Hollingshead shipped two cars of flour to Pictou and one car to Halifax this week.

The street crossings are getting into a dilapidated condition and repairs are badly needed.

The ENTERPRISE wants live correspondents at West Lorne, Wallacetown and Campbellton.

Mr. Alex. Cameron and daughter and Mrs. D. Cameron, of Glencoe. were in town last week.

A yonng woman named Cook has become insane at London through the desertion of her husband.

The losses by fire in London during the past year amounted to $78,000. There were eighty alarms.

Mr. Phelps is utilizing the rooms formerly occupied by the ENTERPRISE as a dwelling and private office

Jacob Van Clark was robbed on the road near Melbourne of a gold watch, chain and $15. Two men did it.

All parties indebted to the ENTERPRISE for subscriptions are requested to call and settle at this office at once.

During the heavy wind storm yesterday afternoon the smoke stack on the Dutton roller mills was blown down.

Mr. McCarthy, of St. Catharines, will ship several carloads of baled hay from this station this week and next.

A carpenter named Flemning was crushed under a pile driver on the new C P. R. bridge at London on Friday.

Rev. Middleton will deliver a song sermon in the Methodist Church next Sunday evening. Subject, "The Wanderer."

S. S. Clutton's woolen mills at Aylmer were destroyed by fire Tuesday morning. Loss, $5,000; insured for $3,500.

The crop of black eyes has been abundant in this vicinity the past week or two, a large number being harvested election night.

Jas. Green is home from the Northwest on a visit. He is greatly taken up with that country and intends returning in a few weeks.

Fleata Healy, a sixteen year-old girl, has tried to poison herself at St. Thomas on being discovered leading a life of shame by her mother.

We have received a handsome lithographed calender from Mr. H. Hollingshead, advertising the popular brands of flour manufactured at his mills.

The Dutton High School opened on Monday under the most favorable auspices. The prospects are good for a much larger attendance than usual.

A public meeting was held in St. Thomas last week to discuss questions relating to the repeal of the Scott Act, It was decided to oppose the movement.

Mr. McLaren, caretaker of the Crinan Presbyterian Church for the past hirty years, was recently presented with a $70 parlor suite in recognition of his services.

Mr. Colin McGregor, of Wallacetown, has purchased a lot on Main St., on which he intends building shortly. Mr. McGregor intends moving to Dutton in the spring.

Mrs. Agnes Cole, of St. Thomas, was stricken with paralysis while marking her ballot in one of the polling booths in that city on Monday. She died on Tuesday morning.

A man named Black stole patent medicine to the amount of $10 from a travelling doctor in St. Thomas, and was followed to Chatham and arrested for the offence. What next?

The annual meeting of the West Elgin Agricultural Society will be held at Wallacetown next Wednesday, at 1 p. m., for the purpose of receiving reports, etc., and electing officers for the ensuing year.

The creditors of A. C. Graham, furniture dealer, met at the assignee's office yesterday afternoon and instructed A J. Leitch, the assignee, to dispose of the goods belonging to the estate as soon as possible.

Mr. W. R. Phillimore, representing the well-known oil firm of McColl Bros. & Co., Toronto, called on us this week. He reports prospects favorable for a larger sale than ever of their popular "Lardine" machine oil, the quality of which will be better than in the past, if that is possible.

County Constable Mason Friday arrested Mrs. and Nellie Jarvis, Geo. Myers and Geo. Cleghorn, all of Delaware village, charged with obstructing a constable in the discharge of his duty. It appears Constables R. Coulter and John McKay were attempting to arrest F. C. Jarvis, hotel-keeper, of the same place, on a warrant of commitment for violation of the Scott Act, when the defendants interfered and prevented the arrest. They were admitted to bail.

While we sympathise with the defeated candidates we offer our congratulations to the successful ones and hope that they will act with prudence, zeal and integrity in their management of municipal affairs for 1889.

The friends of Mr. Alex. Gordon treated him to an oyster supper at the Eustace House, last evening, prior to his departure for his home in Acton. We are sorry to lose Mr. Gordon as a citizen and hope he will make up his mind to come back to Dutton shortly.

Aylmer Council has been elected by acclamation in a new way. There were probabilities of contests for both reeve, deputy-reeve and councillors in each Ward. The candidates accordingly met and resolved to allow the toss of a coin to decide which should serve and which should resign.

At Glencoe on the 4th inst. Police Magistrate Noble imposed the respective fines upon the following with costs for violation of the Scott Act: P. McAlpine, R. R. McKellar, Arch. McKellar, Alex. McRae, all of Glencoe, each $100, and J. H. Cady, Wardsville, $100. The case against John Mullens, of Appin, was dismissed.

There has not been much stir in the markets this week, the bad roads keeping the farmers at home. Considerable pork was marketed on Saturday, and butter and eggs are reported very plentiful, with prices high. Following are yesterday's quotations:—Wheat, $1; barley, 40c.; pease, 45c.; oats, 20c.; beans, $1; pork, $6 to 6.50; butter, 20c.; eggs, 19c.; dried apples, 4c. per lb.; lard, 12½c.; tallow, 5c.

A town bell to ring at 7 and 12 a. m. and 1 and 6 p. m. would be a great boon to the working population of Dutton. As it is every person has a different kind of time, including standard time, railroad time, town time, sun time, easy times, good times and every kind of times except hard times, which are never known in Dutton. Will somebody tell us when we will have the correct time.

What do the weather-wise prophets who have been foretelling a long and hard winter think of themselves now? Here it is the middle of January and no snow or frost of any account, and no indications of any. This week we have had genunine April weather with its rain and muddy roads. If the foolkiller would direct his attention to the so-called weather prophets he would confer a great favor on a suffering humanity.

At a meeting of the London Presbytery held in Knox Church, Dutton, on Thursday last, at which were present Revs. Currie, Boyle, Wilson, Kelso, Urquhart, Francis and Sutherland, Rev. Mr. Boyle reported that a call had been moderated in favor of Rev. Mr. Bloodsworth, a licentiate, by the Port Stanley congregation. The call has been accepted and the induction fixed for Tuesday, Jan. 22. Rev. T. Wilson, of this place, will preach at the induction services.

In addition to a dozen new passenger engines similar to the No. 277, which the Michigan Central has been using for the past year, the road proposes to get some consolidation engines, having eight driving wheels and a four wheel truck. The wheel base of the driving wheels will be fifteen feet four inches and the weight on the driving wheels will be 121,000 pounds and 23,000 pounds on the truck, giving a total weight of the engine without tender, 144,000 pounds.

The production of oats in the United States shows a great increase. In the last eight years the average crop has been 549,000,000 bushels, against an average of 314,000,000 for the ten years preceding. This increase is owing to the requirements of the increased number of horses, to the substitution of oats for corn in the South for feeding horses, and to a more general use of oatmeal as food for man. The area of the oat fields has also increased proportionately more than that of wheat or corn, and the price showed a less proportionate decline.

Last week particulars were given of the firing of revolver shots at the caboose of an M.C.R. train at Bismarck on the morning of Dec. 30. Detective Heenan succeeded in capturing the culprits at Bismarck two days later. Their names are Henry Watson, aged 20, and James Vogan, aged 18. Both are laborers. On being brought up for trial at St. Thomas Watson, who is a son of Widow Watson, of Aldborough, pleaded guilty to firing the shots. He was intoxicated at the time. Vogan was found guilty of being drunk, and was fined $10 and $6 costs. Watson was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. A large deputation of his friends waited on the magistrate with a view of having a lighter sentence imposed, but owing to the frequency of such cases the magistrate refused to do so, remarking that the next case would have a still severer punishment.

On Tuesday evening a large number of the young people of Knox Church met at the residence of Mrs. A. McPherson for the purpose of bidding farewell to Miss Maggie McPherson, who leaves for Toronto to-day, and of testifying in a substantial manner their appreciation of her services as organist in that church. On reaching the house the young folks immediately took possession and spent a few hours in various pleasant amusements. Rev. Mr. Wilson then gave a short address to those present and on their behalf presented Miss McPherson with a handsome purse, containing about $20, asking her acceptance of it as a slight expression of the esteem in which she was held by them. After a substantial lunch had been served by the ladies the company dispersed, all declaring that they had spent a most pleasant evening and wishing Miss McPherson every success in her new home.

"How dare you swear before me sir?" said the old gentleman. "Well," drawled the dutiful son, "you are cranky; how'd I know you wanted to swear first?"

Stop that cough, by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—the best specific for all throat and lung diseases. It will allay inflammation, aid respiration, and strengthen the vocal organs. Ayer's Almanac is free to all. Ask for one.

The Sunday School entertainment in connection with the Tyrconnel English Church was held at the parsonage, on Tuesday evening last. It was necessarily of a private character and exclusively for the Sunday School scholars and a few of their friends. The children enjoyed themselves immensely. They first partook of a substantial tea provided chiefly by their kind hostess, Mrs. Chance. After tea they had some games, which were followed by sacred and moral songs, recitations, readings and dialogues. At intervals Miss Eliza Bobier and her brother, Mr. Joshua Bobier, delighted the young people with some excellent and inspiring music—the latter performed on the violin, accompanied by his sister on the melodeon. Mr. Alexander Patterson played some lively tunes on the mouth organ. Mr. Joseph Docker gave his magic lantern exhibition, which afforded great pleasure and provoked much merriment. Finally the Star of Bethlehem appeared in all its glory, calling forth great admiration. After the distribution of the presents a hymn was sung, the benediction pronounced and the entertainment, which occupied four hours, was closed.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of St Andrew's Society will be held at the Commercial House, Dutton, on Saturday, the 12th day of January, 1889, at 7.30 o'clock p. m. All interested are respectfully requested to attend, as new governing rules and arrangements will be discussed.—C. St. Clair Leitch, secretary.

MARRIED.

DANBY—BUCKLER—On Jan. 1st, by Rev. C. T. Scott, at the residence of the bride's father, West Lorne, Miss Sarah Jane Buckler, only daughter of Mr. Wm. Buckler, to Mr. George Danby, of the same place.

Sale Register.

Auction sale of farm stock, implements, etc., on lot 8, con. 7, Dunwich, on Thursday, Jan. 10, at 12 o'clock. Peter Duncanson, auctioneer; Donald McWilliam, proprietor.

Credit sale of farm stock, implements, &c., on lot 9, con. 3, Southwold, two miles southeast of Lawrence, on Tuesday, Jan. 15, at 1 o'clock. L. W. McIntyre, auctioneer; Malcolm McArthur, proprietor.

A large number of invited guests were present at the marriage of Mr. Geo. Danby to Miss Sarah J. Buckler, at West Lorne, on Jan. 1st, and an enjoyable time was spent. The presents were numerous and costly, of which the following is a partial list:—Mr. John Keefer, silver pickle dish; Mr Wallace Buckler, silver butter dish and knife; Miss Maud Mogg, butter, dish with silver top; Mr and Mrs Danby, glass pitcher; Miss Effie Racher, Ridgetown, cake stand; Miss Annie McPherson, glass butter dish and silver knife; Mrs Walter Paris and Miss Millie McPhate, large parlor lamp; Mrs Jas Patterson, glass cake stand; Mrs Edward Grigg, Dutton, water pitcher and mug; Mr Wm Ward, pair flower vases; Messrs. A & Jno A McKillop, fruit dish; Mr affd Mrs F Linderman, china toilet set; Messrs. John McMillan and D McKillop, set of glassware; Mr Wm Racher, Ridgetown, glass bread tray; Mr Stewart Anderson, cheese dish; Dr and Mrs Eaton, six fruit dishes, molasses jug and cake stand; Miss A Evans, pickle dish; Mrs S Buckler, kitchen lamp; Mr and Mrs Alton, table cloth and six table napkins; Mr and Mrs Petherick, two large table cloths and silk handkerchief; Mrs Noah Dodd, bed spread; Mr Thos Farr, large oil painting; Mr and Mrs Wm Danby, rocking chair; Mrs Geo Dodd, a handsome present; Mr Wm Trigger, a set of silver napkins rings. The happy couple return thanks to their friends for the many valuable presents.—Com.

No sufferer from any scrofulous disease, who will fairly try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, need despair of a cure. This remedy purges the blood of all impurities, destroys the germs of scrofula, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the physical organization.

NOTICE.

As before announced we have sold the ENTERPRISE to Mr. R. Sutherland, formerly of Glencoe, who has taken possession this week and publishes this as his first issue. He is to fulfil all advertising contracts made and started by me, and will collect pay for the same, except a portion to be paid to myself, of which notice will be given. The subscription list has been transferred to Mr. Sutherland and all due thereon, except such as is otherwise booked to me of those with whom I have accounts, is to be paid to him. Those indebted to me must settle immediately as I desire to have all accounts closed at once.

Respectfully,
N. PHELPS.

TENDERS FOR WOOD.

SEALED TENDERS will be received by the undersigned until Saturday, 12th inst., at noon, for 40 cords of Green Hard Wood (Beech and Hard Maple) 2 feet long, and split so as to be easily put into a box stove, delivered and neatly piled in the High School Yard as directed by the Principal on or before March 1st, 1889. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

2 D. C. LEITCH, Dutton.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THE WATERLOO MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

PIMPLES. I will mail (FREE) the recipe for a simple Vegetable Balm that will REMOVE Tan, Freckles, Pimples and Blotches, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, including 3c stamp, Gen. Vandelf & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

ALEX. BEATON,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
WEST LORNE, ONT.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,
SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.
Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

PATENTS
MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience.
Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

The Best EDUCATION.
Prepares young men and women to support themselves and accumulate wealth. Send for facts to DETROIT BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Detroit, Mich. This is a College of Business, School of Shorthand, School of Penmanship, and English Training School. Elegant Catalogue free to applicants.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,
Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1886.
122 E. 27th st.

DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.,
Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:
My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold nor any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in acute cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, life has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

A Priceless Blessing

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

-:- STOP! -:-
DON'T READ THIS
WE WILL SELL
COFFINS and CASKETS
CHEAPER THAN ANY HOUSE IN OR OUTSI E THE COMBINE.
O HUMBUG! TRY US!
WE HAVE ALSO A LARGE STOCK OF
FURNITURE !
which we will sell at
Prices which will Astonish you. Call and get Prices.
W. I. Schultz & Son

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE
An Infallible Remedy in the worst cases of ASTHMA, PHTHYSIC, or Hay Fever,—Never failing to instantly relieve the most violent attack. With this remedy there is no waiting for results; its effects are immediate.
Price, $1 a bottle. Trial size, 10 cents.
For sale by Druggists generally. Send for Circular, explaining its Pathology, Nature and Points of Treatment. T. G. SANDERS, Rodney, Ontario.
Sole Agent for the Dominion

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE. DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

The Reason Why
Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.
In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C., writes:
"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."
Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia
and Constipation are almost universal Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:
"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say, that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."
The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

Ayer's Pills,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

-:- YOU WILL FIND -:-
Urlin Bros., Dutton,
AND
A. D. Urlin's, Wallacetown,
HEADQUARTERS FOR
HARDWARE, GROCERIES, BOOTS AND SHOES, &c.
NO LARGER, BETTER OR CHEAPER STOCK OF GROCERIES
was ever shown in this section. Teas, Sugars, Syrups, Currants, Raisins, Dates and Figs, Candied Peels, Etc., Etc.
A CHOICE LOT OF CHINA AND GLASSWARE.
New Patterns in China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Vases, China Cups and Saucers, Mugs, and a Fine Lot of Fancy Goods that are Very Cheap.
Immense Stock of TOYS and Fancy Goods for the Children.
HARDWARE OF ALL KINDS.
Cow Ties, Crosscut Saws, Axes, Lanterns, and a Full Line of Carpenters' Tools. TIN WARE of All Kinds.
A Job Lot of Table Knives and Forks at Half Price.
A Large Assortment of SILVER AND PLATED WARE. Cake and Cruet Stands, Pickle Dishes, Butter Dishes, Sugar Bowls, Spoon Holders, Cream Pitchers, and a choice lot of Fancy Goods which are both useful and ornamental.
—A FULL STOCK OF—
BOOTS & SHOES, OVERSHOES & RUBBERS
AT ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.
A call will convince you that you can get good value in every line we handle.
No trouble to show goods. Highest price paid for produce.
URLIN BROS., Dutton.
A. D. URLIN, Wallacetown.

HERTEL,
Merchant - Tailor
EAST SIDE MAIN ST., DUTTON.
NEW IMPORTED
FALL -:- GOODS
My stock is very extensive with Elegant Fall Goods. Special attention has been directed towards securing the most complete and varied assortments of
New Suitings!
New Trouserings!
New Overcoatings!
Ever Displayed in this Village.
A visit is solicited from those who wish a
NEAT AND ELEGANT SUIT
—OR A—
STYLISH AND PERFECT-FITTING
FALL OVERCOAT.
Money can be saved by leaving your order with me. None but first-class work turned out. Best of Trimmings only are used.
J. C. HERTEL,
Merchant Tailor,
Next door to Nelson's Hotel.

$4 REWARD.
STRAYED from Lot 13, Con. I, Dunwich, a steer of high grade Shorthorn breed; color, red and white; age, two years at Christmas; nose, dark color; it broke a horn off when a calf, showing the damage to horn yet. A reward of four dollars will be paid by the subscriber to any person giving such information as will lead to its recovery. R. COAD.
Ekfrid, Dec. 18, 1888.

D. LOW'S WORM SYRUP
DESTROYS AND REMOVES WORMS OF ALL KINDS IN CHILDREN OR ADULTS SWEET AS SYRUP AND CANNOT HARM THE MOST DELICATE CHILD.

FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam: 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888. tf

THRESHERS
WILL FIND IT PAYS TO USE THE FAMOUS
LARDINE
THE BEST MACHINE OIL IN CANADA.
McCOLL'S -:- CYLINDER -:- OIL
Should be used in every Engine Cylinder. 600 Fire Test. Not injured by extreme heat.
McCOLL, BROS. & CO., - TORONTO.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.
A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.
Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish
ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER
(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line
AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.
LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.
PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED
ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE ENTERPRISE JOB DEPARTMENT
—HAS BEEN—
Thoroughly Refitted
And being under the management of a practical and competent job printer of long experience, we are prepared to turn out all classes of
Commercial and Poster Printing
On short notice and in the best style of the art.
ORDERS BY MAIL RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION.

Boar Hog.
THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles southwest of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a
High Grade Durham Bull.
T. WOOLDRIDGE.
Dutton, Nov. 20. 8-ins

NEW BAKERY
THE undersigned having purchased the Bakery Business from W Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in
First-class Style,
BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.
Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.
C. J. WEIR.

Cowal Carriage Works.
THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.
Repairing Promptly Done.
CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.
A Specialty made of our
NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,
which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities
Give Us a Call.
TURNER & PECKHAM.
Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888. tf

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1889. NO. 4.

Professional Cards

Alex McKillop, M.D.

M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.

☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,

Barrister-at-Law,

Commissioner in the High Court.

☞ Money Loaned.

ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,

Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.

MONEY TO LOAN.

OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.

Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN

At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.

ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.

June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.

First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.

Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.

S. JOHN SCHULTE.

OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.

D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.

351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.

June 7. 1-yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon - Dentist,

Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN.

SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,

Veterinary Surgeon,

DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.

W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS

For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.

F. A. Humpidge.

Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on

tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

A. J. LEITCH,
pb ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
d DUTTON.

The Star Loan Company

181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.

G. C. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex

Mutual Fire Insurance Company,

LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.

BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!

Pumps! Pumps!!

To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.

Repairing Promptly Done.

I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.

Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.

Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY
IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

D. C. Leitch, M. D.,

SUCCESSOR TO DR. MILLS.

Office and Residence same as those lately occupied by Dr. Mills

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do

Lumber Dressing of all Kinds

with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate

☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.

M. Cochrane.

January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a

General Line of Blacksmithing.

IN HORSESHOEING.

☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.

M. L. MILLAR.

Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS

Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.

First-class Tailoring

IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.

30,000 POUNDS

—OF—

WOOL WANTED

This season to stock our new mills at Union.

L. J. Willson & Co.

Feb. 4, 1888. tf

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,

The Eclipse Wheelbarrow

-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.

C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.

Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

NEW

BUTCHER SHOP.

THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.

Patronage Solicited.

M. McNULTY.

SALESMEN WANTED.

Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.

L. P. Thurston & Co,

$500.00 Reward

For any Testimonials recommending McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Costiveness, Headache, etc., that are not genuine; none of which are from persons in the States or thousands of miles away, but from persons in and around Hamilton, Ont. We give trial bottles free of cost, so that you cannot be deceived by purchasing a worthless article, but know its value before buying. Trial bottles and testimonials given free at R. A. Kirkland's Drug Store.

The Best

EDUCATION.

Prepares young men and women to support themselves and accumulate wealth. Send for facts to DETROIT BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Detroit, Mich. This is a College of Business, School of Shorthand, School of Penmanship, and English Training School. Elegant Catalogue free to applicants.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In the matter of Angus C. Graham, of the Village of Dutton, in the County of Elgin, Furniture Dealer.

NOTICE is hereby given that the above-named Angus C. Graham has made an assignment of his estate and effects to me in pursuance of R.S.O. 1887, cap. 124.

A meeting of the creditors of the said debtor will be held at my office in the Village of Dutton, aforesaid, on Wednesday, the 9th day of January, 1889, at the hour of 2 o'clock p.m., for giving directions as to the disposal of the estate. All persons having claims against the said debtor are required to furnish me with the particulars thereof upon affidavit, together with the securities held by them, on or before the date of such meeting, after which time I will proceed to distribute the said estate among the persons only of whose claims I shall have received notice.

Dutton, December 27th, 1888.

JAMES M. GLENN, A. J. LEITCH,
Solicitor for Assignee. Assignee.

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR

Will clear out his ENTIRE STOCK to

MAKE ROOM

—TO—

SPRING :-: IMPORTATIONS.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SECURE BARGAINS IN CLOTHING.

CALL AND SEE

J. C. HERTEL, Merchant Tailor.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE FOR 1889.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

THE ENTERPRISE will be made the liveliest and most interesting local paper in Western Ontario, and advertisers will find it an valuable medium for their announcements.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Liberal commissions to canvassers for new subscribers; besides which a valuable prize will be given to the person sending in the largest number of NEW names, accompanied by the cash, during the next three months. Watch for particulars next week.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Dosor Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE ENTERPRISE JOB DEPARTMENT

—HAS BEEN—

Thoroughly Refitted

And being under the management of a practical and competent job printer of long experience, we are prepared to turn out all classes of

Commercial and Poster Printing

On short notice and in the best style of the art.

ORDERS BY MAIL RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION.

THRESHERS

WILL FIND IT PAYS TO USE THE FAMOUS

LARDINE

THE BEST MACHINE OIL IN CANADA.

McCOLL'S -:- CYLINDER -:- OIL

Should be used in every Engine Cylinder. 600 Fire Test. Not injured by extreme heat.

McCOLL, BROS. & CO., - TORONTO.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

Dunwich Council.

Minutes of regular meeting of the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the Township of Dunwich, held in Brown's Hall, Dutton, on Monday, January 14th, 1889.

All the members present.

Minutes of last meeting were read, approved of and signed.

Moved by A. A. McKillop, sec. by J. Milligan, that the Clerk be instructed to communicate with J. M. Glenn and get a statement of the amounts due the witnesses in the Stalker vs. McMillan and Dunwich suit, stating the amount which the township is entitled to pay each of the witnesses, and that the amounts be paid to the said witnesses immediately after receiving statement from Mr. Glenn. Carried.

Moved by J. D. McDiarmid, sec. by H. Garbutt, that a cheque be granted to D. C. Clay for $52.00 to pay to Deputy-Returning Officers for services and use of buildings, as follows:—D. A. Gunn, $5.00; Geo. Braddon, $7.00; A. D. McIntyre, $7.00; Daniel McMillan, $7.00; Mungo McFarlane, $7.00; Wm. M. Landress, $7.00; Henry Clay, $5.00, and C. S. Leitch, $7.00. Carried.

Moved by A. A. McKillop, sec. by H. Garbutt, that applications be received at the next meeting of Council on Jan. the 21st, 1889, for the offices of Assessor and Collector for the year 1889, at salaries to be fixed by said Council before opening the applications. Carried.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by J. Milligan, that the Reeve leave the chair and that Alex. McKillop take the chair. Carried.

Moved by A. J. Leitch, seconded by H. Garbutt, that this Council tenders thanks to Messrs. McKillop, McDiarmid and Milligan, the retiring members of this Council, for the able, efficient and courteous manner in which they discharged their duties for the year 1888. Carried.

Moved by J. D. McDiarmid, sec. by H. Garbutt, that this Council adjourn sine die, and the Reeve sign cheques for members' wages. Carried.

The following cheques were granted:

GENERAL FUNDS.

Arch'd S. McIntyre, $4.10, for gravel; William Melters, $2.00, statute labor refunded; John Braddon, $6.60, plank for bridge; Neil McLean, $1.00, repairing culvert; N. Phelps, $25.01, printing account to date; William Carruth, $2.00, repairing Deadfall hill; Daniel McPherson, $4.00, use of rink for nomination meeting; Malcolm McPherson, $15.60, for gravel; Alex. McBeth, $8.60, for gravel; C. W. Heidt, $10.00, for gravel; Daniel McPhail, $15.00, cleaning ditch; Alex'r Crane, $5.40, for gravel; D. C. Clay, $52,00, to pay to Deputy-Returning Officers; James Rhill, $48.60, gravelling on Currie Road; Alex'r A. McKillop, $2.50, services as Councillor; Judson Milligan, $2.50, services as Councillor; H. Garbutt, $2 70, services as Councillor; J. D. McDiarmid, $2.80, services as Councillor; A. J. Leitch, $6.00, services as Reeve.

WARD NO. 1.

Hector McPherson, $9.00, drawing gravel.

WARD NO. 2.

Peter Walker, $6.00, for plank; Angus McArthur, $9.00, ditching; John McMurdy, $3.75, work on west townline.

WARD NO. 3.

D. Fitchit, $4.80, for plank; J. Kindree, $16.00, building culvert; Peter McCallum, $8.50, for 1 scraper; Thomas Griffin, $3.04, plank; Duncan McCallum, 50 cts., clearing fallen tree off road.

WARD NO. 4.

James Brown, $2.50, work done; Richard Patterson, $1.50, repairing culvert; James Small, $3.20, for plank.

DOG FUND.

Zachariah McCallum, $10 76, sheep killed by dogs; D. Graham, $1.00, dog tax refunded; Duncan McKellar, $9.33, sheep killed by dogs.

Council adjourned sine die.

'Why, 'Lijah,' said the farmer, discovering the old man in his hen house, 'I never expected this of you. I always thought you were as honest as the day is long.' 'Deed I is, sah,' replied the old reprobate. 'Yo' mus' recommember dat de days am gettin' short.'

What a wretchedness is this, to trust all our riches outward, and be beggars within; to contemplate nothing but the little, vile and sordid things of the world; not the great, noble and precious! We serve our avarice; and not content with the good of the earth that is offered us, we search for all the evil that is hidden.

A new jail filler has been discovered. At a recent meeting of the London West School Board, one of the members in the course of some remarks said that over-education of the pupils nowadays was filling up our jails. We would advise the asserter to take a look through the jail some day. We venture to say he will not be particularly struck with the intellectual appearance of those confined. Better leave the jail-filling subject for the temperance advocate to handle.

When the eyes become weak or the lids inflamed and sore, a disordered system or a scrofulous condition of the blood is indicated, for which Ayer's Sasaparila is the best remedy. It invigorates and vitalizes the blood and expels all humors.

If young women knew what desperate things a young man will do under the influence of disappointed love, they would be more careful how they trifle with their deep affections. A Boston girl refused to marry a young man the other evening, and he went right away and proposed successfully to another girl before 10 o'clock.

West Elgin Fair Association.

At the meeting of the West Elgin Fair Association held at Wallacetown, yesterday, the following officers were elected for the current year:—President, L. W. McIntyre; 1st Vice-President, Arch. McColl, Aldborough, 2nd Vice-President, Southwold; Directors—Aldborough—D. McColl, A. D. McGugan, D. S. McColl. Dunwich—Stephen Backus, John A. McKay, Jos. Pearce. Southwold—Arch. Kerr, Duncan McAlpine, Duncan Brown. The auditors' report was read and adopted, showing the finances in a satisfactory state. The election for President was hotly contested between L. W. McIntyre and Dr. Ling, the former securing the position by a majority of 6. The directors held a meeting afterwards at which Alex. McCallum was elected Secretary and John L. Pearce Treasurer. A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring Secretary, Mr. Campbell, for the able manner in which he had performed his duties during the past year.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Society was held at the Commercial House on Saturday evening, Jan. 12, Vice-Pres., D. C. Leitch, M. D., in the chair.

The following officers were elected for 1889:—Pres., Samuel McColl; 1st Vice-Pres., A. N. C. Black; 2nd Vice-Pres., John McKay; 3rd Vice-Pres., H. Hollingshead; Secretary-Treasurer, C. St. Clair Leitch; Chaplain, Rev. Thos. Wilson; Pipers, D. McMillan and Donald Cochrane; Committee to draft by-laws to govern Society, A. J. Leitch, A. N. C. Black, C. St. C. Leitch and D. McMillan. General Committee, D. McMillan, M. C. Leitch, Jas. Duncanson, John A. McKay, Duncan McKillop, Arch. McLean and the Secretary-Treasurer.

Adjourned to meet at call of Secretary.

Mrs. Jay Gould is dead.

Dominion Parliament meets on the 31st inst.

The nomination for the vacant seat in Haldimand will be held on Jan. 23, and the polling will take place Jan. 30.

Five thousand dollars worth of opium and twelve Chinamen have been seized by the U. S. custom officials at Puget Sound.

Mr Henry Becher, of Becher & Blackburn, barristers, London, died Tuesday after an illness of two months. He will be buried this afternoon.

Leading members of the Baptist Church are advocating the doing away of tax exemption on church property, arguing that as long as their church property is exempted they are not a free and independent body.

Truth.

Truth is relative.

The comprehension of truth is progressive.

High truth is for clear heads and honest hearts.

Inferior truths are designed for undeveloped minds.

Truth is "Jacob's ladder," which is ascended step by step.

Truth's highway has neither beginning or end, top or bottom.

The philosopher is not positive in his affirmations, nor hasty in his conclusions.

The unwise and the unlettered make bold assertions and stammer when asked for proof.

The end of education is to teach the pupil to think independently, methodically and correctly.

Weigh the opinions of others with your own and then decide.

Respect another's opinions as you would your own.

Great names are often quoted to sustain great lies.

Delicacy of touch, physical, moral, mental, psychical or argumentative, proclaims the lady or gentleman.

Truth which operates on the head, heart and circumstance, is the builder of character, and Wisdom is the architect who furnishes the plan.

SITTING ON THE STYLE

I'm sitting on the style, Mary,
That you've maintained before,
It's too, too tendencies, my love,
Have cramped my shekel's store.

Those annual bills from Worth, Mary,
My check book quite uproots,
Besides the lace and gloves, Mary,
The twenty button boots.

The diamonds you affect, Mary,
Quite extirpate my pile,
And so I'm sitting down, Mary,
Upon your reckless style.

Skin diseases are most annoying because so noticeable. Dr Low's Sulphur Soap heals and cleanses the skin.

A good reason—Mistress—Why, Nora, how dusty the chairs are? Maid—Yes, mim, there's nobody sat on them to day, mim.

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

Facetious visitor in newspaper office (to editor)—May I use your brains for a moment? Editor—My brains? Visitor (smilingly picking up scissors)—Yes sir. Only a moment. I want to— Editor (with great cordiality)—Certainly you may. Use them as long as you please. Always glad to furnish brains to a man who has'nt any.

Ayer's Hair Vigor improves the beauty of the hair and promotes its growth. It prevents the accumulation of dandruff, cleanses the scalp, and restores natural color to gray hair. Have you received Ayer's Almanac for the new year?

Mrs. Nibbs—I'm shocked, Willie Jones, to hear you use such awful language, positively shocked. I think its high time your mother took you in hand. Willie—Yes'm, she has. She told me this morning I must stop 'sociating with your little boy, 'cause he was making me as bad as hisself.

GREATLY EXCITED.—People are apt to get greatly excited in case of sudden accident and injury. It is well to be prepared for such emergencies. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the handiest remedy known for burns, scalds, bruises, lameness, pain and all wounds of the flesh. It is used internally and externally.

Middlemiss.

A large number of the boys have gone to Dawn lumber woods to spend the winter months, there being nothing doing at home.

R. S. Campbell is teaching in the village again. He says that the holidays are not half long enough; but I heard one of the fair sex remark that it seemed about a month since he left.

Leap year has gone, and the girls are going too. On New Years Eve, at the residence of Jas. Amos, Miss Jane Jackson and Mr. David Lambkin were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Mr. Smith, of St. Paul's Church, Munceytown.

There was not much excitement over the elections this year except in the Reeveship. A. P. McDougall gained a victory over Bray Willey by 203. It shows that the electors have a lots of confidence in Mac. M. Galbraith was elected Deputy-Reeve by a majority of 3 over Mr. Scates. The Councillors went in by acclamation.

A STUDY OF SHINGLING.

In my youth I helped take down a barn which my father inherited from his mother, and which stood 40 years without re-shingling' says O. S. Bliss in the New York Tribune. The shingles were of a style long gone out of use, four feet four inches long, laid two feet to the weather, with a narrow edge lap, and fastened with only one nail to each shingle upon narrow hewn ribs, two feet apart, from centre to centre. The shingles were shaven thin, except the lap edge of the exposed portion, and the roof when new was not over about half an inch thick in the thickest parts. But these shingles, after 40 years' exposure, still shed water well, and were almost as sound as when laid, except immediately upon the ribs. This experience led to a sort of life long study of roofs. I have seen shingles laid upon closely-matched boards; into freshly laid mortar; over and all the way from three thicknesses to more than four and a half. My belief is that shingles laid upon narrow ribs, so as to expose the under side of them to the free circulation of air, and just as much to the weather as is possible and properly cover all the joints, will last longer and do better service than those laid by any of the more expensive methods. I believe there is a double economy in thin roofs. Re-shingling by laying new shingles over the old ones is a not infrequent, but false economy. In the sight of where I sit is a building so treated, but the entire roof soon went to decay and was removed in a very few years. During the past year an article on "Laying Shingles" was widely published and met with much approval, evidently because of the learned manner in which the writer, a Michigan man, makes it as clear as mud that by laying eighteen-inch shingles only four inches to the weather a very large saying is effected. Of course, if three inches of shingle are laid in place of two, the roofs must be 50 per cent. thicker and must cost 50 per cent. more for shingles, nails and labor. How anybody but a shingle-maker or dealer can figure an economy out of that is beyond my comprehension; but the writer claims to do it, and many people claim to be able to see it. In laying eighteen-inch shingles six inches to the weather, with well broken joints, every joint in the exposed course has two thicknesses of shingles under it, and I never knew such a roof to leak a drop. The extra 50 per cent. of shingles is not only a needless waste, but it causes a more rapid decay of the shingles, and more frequent re-shingling becomes a necessity.

A BUSINESS LETTER.

Tilsonburg, March 15th, 1887.

T. Milburn & Co.,

Sirs,—Please ship at once three dozen B. B. Bitters. Best selling medicine in the shop. Sold seven bottles to day.

Yours truly, C. Thompson.

The above is but one of hundreds of similar expressions regarding B.B.B.

B.B.B. STOOD THE TEST.—"I tried every known remedy I could think of for rheumatism, without find any relief, until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, which remedy I can highly recommend to all afflicted as I was." Henry Smith, Milvelton, Ont.

There is no better remedy for worms of any kind in children or adults than Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

VERY VALUABLE.—"Having used B.B.B. for biliousness and torpid liver, with the very best results, I would recommend it to all so troubled. The medicine is worth its weight in gold. Tillie White, Manitowaning, Ont.

DIPHTHERIA.—"Last January," says J. N. Teeple, of Orwell, Ont., "there appeared diphtheria in our neighborhood. Doctors ran night and day, but I kept right to Hagyard's Yellow Oil and brought my children through all right." Yellow Oil cures all painful complaints and injuries.

A FATAL ATTACK.—A fatal attack of croup is a frequent occurrence among children. Every household should be guarded by keeping Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It breaks up colds, coughs, croup, asthma and bronchitis in a remarkable manndr.

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.

Soothes and Heals

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with

Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

PIMPLES. I will mail (FREE) the recipe for a simple Vegetable Balm that will REMOVE Tan, Freckles, Pimples and Blotches, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, including 3c stamp, Gen. Vandelf & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

The Onderdonk arbitration, after its adjournment in Ottawa, will resume its session in Toronto, January 22.

Bishop Cleary on Sunday administered the rite of confirmation to twenty-one convicts in Kingston penitentiary.

A much better demand for wheat is noted, and Manitoba grades especially are wanted. The result is higher prices.

The gas well near Thorold is now down about 2,500 feet, and by a rough estimate it is yielding 30,000 cubic feet per day.

The managers of the cotton mills in Kingston say there are sufficient orders on hand to keep the mill working full time up to July next.

Mr. Herbert, the Canadian sculptor, has forwarded from Paris a bronze bust of Sir George Cartier, which is on exhibition in Montreal.

The declaration of the Great North-Western Telegraph Company against the Montreal Telegraph Company, in connection with the proposed reduction of the dividend, has been filed in the Montreal Court.

Mr. Scarth, who has returned to Winnipeg, says that his visit to Ottawa was to induce the Government to make changes in the land laws by which more foreign capital could be invested in the North-West.

The funeral of Simpson Thompson, the eldest Mason on the continent, took place in London yesterday afternoon. He was within three months of being a hundred years of age, and was a Mason for 78 years.

Hamilton has a tramp test, which the Mayor declares to be very effective. All able-bodied applicants for relief are sent to the quarries, where they can earn $1 a day. If they refuse to work, they are not given any relief.

Mr. J. H. Metcalfe, M.P.P., takes a most optimistic view of the prospects of the North-West. He says that since March last 17,000 immigrants have located in that region, and he thinks that next year there will be a great influx of European settlers.

The trouble between the Great North-Western and the Montreal Telegraph Companies still continues. Mr. Wiman, who was in Montreal yesterday, said that as far as the Montreal shareholders were concerned he could do no more than offer them six per cent., and if they could not see their way to accept it he could not help them. His offer was again declined.

The Montreal Judges on Saturday ordered the liberation of Adeline Trempe from the Good Shepherd convent, to which she had been commited in 1885 for five years on a charge of vagrancy trumped up by her uncle, who wished to remove the girl from her mother, who was a Protestant. The court was very severe on the Recorder for his action in illegally depriving the girl of her liberty.

AMERICAN.

The watermelon growers of South Carolina have organized a trust to limit the acreage and fix prices.

The dynamite cruiser Vesuvius, from which the United States authorities expected so much is reported to be a failure.

Mrs. Frank Cheesebrough, of Bay City, Mich., was aroused from sleep on Saturday morning by a burglar attempting to chloroform her.

The wool-growers of Texas want the United States Government to enact more stringent regulations against the importation of foreign wools.

Another desperate fight occurred last week between the police boat of Baltimore and a fleet of oyster pirates. After 600 shots had been fired, five of the rebel craft were captured.

The Methodist Preachers' Association of Columbus, Ohio, have adopted a resolution calling upon President-elect Harrison to dispense with the extravagance of the inauguration ball.

It is understood that United States Secretary Bayard has complained to England of language used by Secretary of State Chapleau, in his Laprairie speech, regarding the United States Senate.

Owing to the clamour of a portion of the female inhabitants of Norwich, Conn., against a magnificent collection of nude statuary for the Slater Memorial Museum, they had to be submitted to local stonecutters for alteration before being put in position.

Some organized attempt is at last being made to obtain a uniform observance of Sunday as a day of rest in the United States. The convention of the American Sabbath Union, which met last week in Washington, has demanded a national law against Sabbath desecration, and a bill embodying the aims of the union has already been introduced into Congress.

Early on Christmas morning, a couple who had unsuccessfully endeavoured to obtain work and had knelt in vain at the hand of charity for assistance, crept into a doorway for shelter, and while the bells of New York city pealed out a merry Christmas, their child, only a month old, died in its mother's arms. The police are now looking after the mother, whose education is superior to her unfortunate position.

FOREIGN.

Owing to the protest of the British representative at Zanzibar, the Sultan has cancelled his order for a wholesale execution of prisoners.

Mr. Gladstone arrived in Naples on Saturday night and was given a very enthusiastic welcome by the students of the University and the citizens.

There is great dissatisfaction in the Samoan Islands at the part played by the Germans in supporting Tamasese, who is generally regarded as a rebel.

The statement that the English East Africa Company has entered into an agreement with the Arabs to tolerate slavery is emphatically denied.

The Czar has summarily dismissed Secretary of State Palovtzoff for prolonging his visit to Paris instead of attending the opening of the Imperial Council.

Sir Robert Morier emphatically denies that he furnished any information regarding the movement of German troops during the Franco-Prussian campaign.

At a meeting in Paris recently of 4,000 bondholders of the Panama canal a resolution was unanimously adopted expressing confidence in M. de Lesseps.

Owing to Emperor Francis Joseph's remonstrance, the proposed Hungarian demonstration in favour of the Pope's restoration to temporal power has been abandoned.

The appointment of the Crofters' Canadian Commission is announced. The members are the Marquis of Lothair, Sir Charles Tupper, and Messrs. King and Thomas Skinner.

The Vienna Tagblatt has a despatch saying the Russian Consul at Malta has been arrested on suspicion of having placed an explosive shell in the theatre there while the Duchess of Ediubargh was present.

M. Goblet, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, having learned that British lobster canning factories have been erected on French territory in Newfoundland, to the prejudice of French fishers, will apply at once to England to have them removed.

On Saturday morning the horribly mutilated body of a boy was found in Bradford, and the town was immediately horrified with the fear that Jack the Ripper was in their midst. A milkman named Barrett was subsequently arrested and committed for trial.

The Dublin "Freeman's Journal" states that the "Times" sent an agent to the States and offered Sheridan £10,000 to testify before the Parnell Commission. If there is anything more improbable than the story itself, it is the statement that Sheridan refused.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

A GENEROUS DUCHESS.

A Paris despatch to the London Daily Telegraph says:—The Duchesse de Galliera, who died on Sunday night at her historical mansion in the Faubourg St. Germain was as large-hearted and as open-handed as the late Madame Boucicault, though perhaps less judicious in the use she made of one of the largest fortunes of this age. The late Duke of Galliera was one of the Continental railway kings, and a keen and venturesome speculator. He died leaving personality in France alone amounting to £11,000,000, and in Italy over £3,000,000. The Univers gives the following list of her well-known deeds of generosity:—£400 a year to the poor of the Seventh Arrondissement, £800 a year to the poor of all Paris, £250 a year to the poor of her own parish; for the Brignole Galliera Museum, near the Trocadero, £250,000; for the creation of an orphanage at Meudon, £560,000; for the support of that institution, £400,000; for the building of three working class lodging houses in Paris, £80,000. To deepen the port of Genoa she gave £340,000, to the present Pope, £100,000, to build two hospitals £380,000. Besides the above donations she gave Genoa the palace called the Palazzo Rosso, with its art furniture and pictures, comprising a collection of ancestral portraits by Rubens and Vandyke. The gift of a palace and estate at Bologna to the Due de Montpensier can hardly be called a charity. He last great benefactions were the founding of two asylums, one for two hundred old men and one hundred old women, and another for Christian Brothers too old or broken down in health to teach. It was at the opening of the former at which she caught cold, which, degenerating into inflammation of the lungs, killed her. How she disposed of the remnant of her vast fortune is not yet known. The Duchesse had an idea that she was insulting the poor to ask them to live in meanly-constructed alms-houses. She therefore created palaces for them.

SPANISH COURT ETIQUETTE.

At no court is etiquette so tyranically rampant as in Spain, and many of the usages which are now in full sway smack strongly of the Dark Ages from which they have descended. It is, for instance, a rule which is most stringently enforced, that none but a privileged few may touch the person of King or Queen, and on one occasion a Queen of Spain was in imminent danger of her life in consequence. She had been thrown by her horse, and her foot catching in the stirrup she would certainly have been dashed to pieces but for the heroism of a young man who stopped her horse and released her from her dangerous position. He immediately fled, however, for his life, and did not stop until he had crossed the frontier, for fear of the penalty. Similarly quite recently his aunt made the little King of Spain a present of a swing. When he used it for the first time the motion frightened him, and he began to cry, whereupon a jacquey lifted him quickly out of it, and no doubt preserved him from falling. This, however, was such a grave breach of etiquette that the Queen Regent was obliged to dismiss him from his post. She engaged him, however, in another position in the Royal house hold as a compensation.

TO REDUCE THE QUEEN'S EXPENCES.

London "Truth" says:—Lord Sydney visited the Queen at Windsor last week, when, I hear, he submitted to her Majesty a precis of his scheme for reducing the expenses of the Royal household, of which I gave a sketch on Novemoer 8. He recommended the abolition of the buckhounds, the amalgamation of several highly-paid offices in the departments of Lord Chamberlain, Lord Steward, and Master of the Horse; a very large cutting down of the salaries of these three and other functionaries, the economical reconstruction of the gentlemen-at arms and the yeomen of the guards, the withdrawal of the salaries of the Lords-in-waiting, who now get £700 a year each, the reduction of the number of equerries (£600 a year each) from seven to four, of the grooms in waiting (£334 a year each) from eight to four, and of the pages of honour from four to two, the abolition of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and a considerable reduction in the number of gentlemen ushers and women of the bed-chamber, as well as root and branch economies in the chapels Royal, which now cost about £12,000 a year. It is proposed to reduce the office of Black Rod on the next vacancy from £2,000 a year to £1,000, and Prince Victor, of Hohenlohe, will be the last Governor of Windsor Castle, with £1,200 a year. The office of mistress of the robes is in future to be honorary, the salary of £500 a year being abolished.

TWO STORIES OF TWINS.

The other night the subject of twins was up as a matter of conversation. The resemblance of twins is always interesting, and some stories were told which were new. One was about a pair of twin sisters, excellent ladies, who lived near each other in a Massachusetts town. One of these twins was ailing somewhat, and one day her sister, bonnetless and shawdless, ran in to see how she was, and found that the ailing one wanted her to do an important errand. So she put on the ailing sister's shawl and bonnet and went to the store. Arriving there she saw her own image in a large looking-glass and exclaimed.

"Why, you decided to come yourself, after all. I didn't think you were well enough!"

By way of the opposite of this story, a member of the party told of a country woman who was asked if her twin sister resembled her.

"Laws, no!" exclaimed the old lady; "we ain't no more alike than 's if 't want us 't all. She's just as different as I be t' other way!"

FASHION NOTES.

A thick bindin of fur, either seal or Persian lamb, is a favourite garniture for cloth jackets.

Red morocco and suede kid toilet slippers with pointed Chinese toes are popular for house wear.

Flexible Swedish kid gloves of pale tan, with delicately corded backs, are the fashionable choice for visiting and carriage wear.

Some of the most expert poultrymen occasionally feed their fowls turnips in winter. They are not peeled, but cut into quarters and thrown into the yard.

The Siamese ape is stated to be in great request among the Siamese merchants as a cashier in their counting houses. Vast quantities of base coin obtain circulation in Siam, and the faculty of discriminating between good money and bad would appear to be possessed by these gifted monkeys in such an extraordinary degree of development that no human being, however carefully trained, can compare with them. The cashier ape immediately puts into his mouth each coin presented to him in business payments, and tests it with grave deliberation. His method of testing is regarded in commercial circles as infallible, and as a matter of fact, his decision is uniformly accepted by all parties interested in the transaction.

By this time the men who become ex-Presidents of the United States know that they must look after their own welfare, for the ungrateful republic, being done with them, does not, as a general rule, concern itself much whether they live or die. Ex-President Hayes probably knows this, and owes his survival to a vigorous old age to his own exertions. He has been paying a visit to General Harrison, and a reporter found him looking hale and hearty. "I can see to read without glasses," he said, "and I am 66 years old, I will tell you how I have preserved my eyes. I wash them every morning in cold water, keep them closed for an instant, then apply more water. My general good health is due to the good care I take of myself and to the exercise which I take freely and regularly. If you are in poor health get out into the air and sunshine."

A ROYAL MYSTERY.

Romance which Menaces the Ex-Reigning Family of France.

The death of Lord Newborough three weeks ago at the advanced age of 86 will, it is said, lead to a revival by the present peer of the claims of the family to the whole of the property of the princely house of Orleans. The wife of the first Lord Newborough and the grandmother of the present holder of the title was a certain Mari Stella, the adopted daughter of one Chiappini, the gaoler of the city prison of Modena. Proofs, however, are said to exist not only in the Newborough family, but also in the imperial and royal archives at St. Petersburg and at Amsterdam, which conclusively prove that Maria Stella was the daughter of Philippe Egalite, Duke of Orleans, and of his wife, the Duchess. It will be remembered that King Louis Philippe was born at Modena on exactly the same date as Lady Newborough, and the proofs above-mentioned show without a doubt that the infant son of the gaoler Chiappini was substituted for the newborn daughter of Philippe Egalite and his wife; the illustrious pair were then Duc and Duchess de Chartres, and, having no male issues, the motives for the substitution were both obvious and of a powerful nature.

The little girl who was victim of this fraud grew up into a beautiful woman and made the conquest of the first Lord Newborough. Not only did the gaoler Chiappini make a confession on his death bed concerning the whole matter, but at his own request it was taken down in writing by the procurator and by the head of the ecclesiastical tribunal of Modena. Chiappini's wife confirmed the dying statement of her husband, and related how the substitution had been effected at the time when the duchess was confined in her house. The story was further corroborated by the registry of the parish in which Maria Stella was christened, and in which she figures as the legitimate daughter of their royal Highnesses the Duc and Duchess de Chartres. On the demand of the first Lord Newborough the Supreme Court of Modena issued a judgment fully confirming the claims of his wife to public recognition as the legitimate daughter of Philippe Egalite and his wife. Copies of the judgment exist to this day in many of the public libraries of France, and notably in that of Rouen.

Fearing that the French monarchical Government might possibly attempt to rob her of the documents relating to her claims, Lady Newborough took the precaution of addressing duly legalized copies thereof to the Emperor of Russia and to the King of Holland, with both of whom she was acquainted, and the fact remains that not only the Dutch monarch, but the Czar Nicholas professed a firm belief in their authenticity, absolutely declining to recognize King Louis Philippe in any possible way. During the whole of the Citizen King's reign both Holland and Russia were without diplomatic representation at Paris.

The whole story was well known 40 and 50 years ago and the political caricaturists of the day delighted to represent King Louis Philippe in the garb of a gaoler, with the subscription of "Bon chien chasse de race" underneath. Even Thiers is reported to have expressed an opinion entirely favourable to the Newborough claims; it is true he was no longer Louis Philippe's minister at the time. As the Citizen King inherited the whole of Egalite's vast property, which constitutes the basis of the immense Orleans fortune, the recognition by the French and English tribunals of the decision of the Supreme Court of Modena, relative to Lady Newborough's parentage, would be of extreme importance. Indeed, it would invalidate the pretensions of the Comte de Paris, the Duc d'Aumale, and of all the other members of Louis Philippe's family to the throne of France, to royal blood, and even to the very name and fortune which they now possess.—[London Truth.

The Far North-West.

William Ogilvie, D. L. S., who has been engaged since 1887 in exploring in extreme northwestern Canada, arrived at Calgary recently. The route puraned by the party was from the Pacific coast up Cleat Iniet by steamer, over the Taing Pass to Lake Lyndeman, on Lewis River, a large branch of the Yukon, and down the Lewis River by canoes to the international boundary line. It had always been supposed that the Lewis was the main stream of the Yukon, but the Hootilenqua, which joins the Lewis from the east, is the main stream proper. The party went into winter camp on the Yukon, near the international boundary, in the latter part of September. The greatest cold was in February.

57° BELOW ZERO.

Camp was struck on March 4th, when the party descended the Yukon 35 miles, to where a small creek runs in. They ascended this to the head through a pass in the Nehaunie range of mountains to the headwaters of Porcupine River, another of the principal branches of the Yukon. This pass is 3,200 feet above sea-level. The Porcupine was descended twenty miles, when on April 10th camp was made until the ice broke in the spring, which was on May 18th. The average depth of snow during the winter was about three feet. The Porcupine was decended to its confluence with Bell's River, coming in from the east. This was ascended to a pass in the Rockies about eight and a half miles long, with nothing to prevent a first-class railway being built through it. From the east end of the pass a small mountain stream was followed to its junction with the Peel River, flowing into the Mackenzie. On this stream and an abundant outcrop of asbestos were seen. The distance from the foot of the Rockies to where they entered the Peel was seventeen miles in a straight line. The total distance travelled from the Yukon at the boundary to the Peel River was 318 miles, crossing two mountain ranges, one in winter and one in summer. McConnell's geological survey party was met at the Peel. The ascent of the Mackenzie was begun on January 27th, and the survey continued until it combined at Chippewayan with the survey of the Peace and Athabasca Rivers, made by Mr. Ogilvie in 1886. A distance of 1,417 miles was covered. The only real obstacle to navigations in this distance was the rapids at Fort Smith. Wheat and barley are grown every summer at Fort Providence, in north latitude 61. A sample of wheat grown there was brought out and makes good flour. Mining is carried on on the Yukon and tributaries and pays during three months of the year. Forty-mile Creek, the scene of the gold excitement of 1887, unites with the Yukon about forty-one miles from the boundary. Twenty-three miles of this creek is in Canada. Mr. Ogilvie and his party left Edmonton for Calgary by team on Christmas Day.

COAL OF GOOD QUALITY.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

Almost Choked to Death in a Flour Mill.

A despatch from Montreal says:—The particulars of an accident which occurred at Isle aux Coudress a few days ago have been received, to the effect that a mill owner named Duford came very near being strangled to death under a peculiar circumstance. He was in his flour mill in company with his six year-old son, and while there a large scarf he had about his neck became entangled in one of the wheels of the machinery, which was in motion, and Mr. Duford was instantly jerked off his feet and swung in the air. His little boy ran home for assistance, and when help arrived the unfortunate man was released and found to be almost choked to death. He remained unconscious for quite a while and was thought to be dead, but finally came to, and is now no worse from the effects of his narrow escape.

Struck With Lightning,

Neatly describes the position of a hard or soft corn when Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is applied. It does its work so quickly and without pain that it seems magical in action. Try it. Recollect the name—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere.

Why Discriminate Against the Weaker?

Is woman the equal of man? The question has been asked many thousands of times and answered with fierce negatives, which, however, have been growing fainter and fainter as civilisation has progressed. Generally speaking, the greater the degree of civilization of the individual man, the more willingly does he concede that woman was created the equal of the other sex, though with differing qualities. But there are very few believers in the equality of the sexes, who carry their opinions into practice even in their own families. Theoretically the girls of a family are entitled to have as much spent on their education as is spent on that of the boys; to have the same care bestowed upon fitting them to fight this world's battle as is bestowed upon the boys; to have a business or profession chosen for them and to be fitted for it; to be furnished with capital to the same extent with the boys; and finally to share alike with the boys in the partition of the family property on the death of the parents. In how many Canadian homes is this equitable treatment of the daughters carried out? In very few, we opine, and the better off the parents are in this world's goods the worse are the girls likely to fare.

It is too much the habit of fathers to spend all their means in pushing along their sons, leaving the daughters to take the chances in the matrimonial lottery. Hence we often see a son launched into the world with abundant capital, the benefit of his father's financial backing, and what is better still, the incalculable advantage of the experience of men and affairs gained by the father in a long and successful business career. What does the father do for the sister of the young man? If the father is lucky enough to possess a managing wife, he marries her off early to some young fellow with apparently good prospects. He gives her a dowry not at all proportioned to what he had given the son, and then he is gathered to his fathers. Twenty years afterward the son has made his mark in the world. He is a well-off man with a growing and expensive family around him. We can see ways for all the money he has, and more, in setting up his own sons, and he has nothing to spare—or which comes to the same thing, thinks he has nothing to spare—for his sister. She, poor woman, has not been so lucky. Her husband has not been successful, or perhaps has died after providing her with a family of children. She finds herself at forty already old and looked upon as a failure, though perhaps she has more of her father's business tact than fell to the lot of her brother. But there she is, as poor as a church mouse, while her brother, having taken the major part of the possessions of the family, has plenty. If the brother does as much for her as to take her boys into his office, the world will applaud his generosity.

Discrimination like this is being practised every day in thousands of homes. If there is to be discrimination among children, should it not be in favor of the girls instead of against them? What is the good of admitting the equality of the sexes if the very people who admit it act towards their own offspring as though they did not believe it? And where do those people stand who, maintaining that women are the weaker vessels, rob their daughters in order better to equip their sons? If the sons, in consideration of having the major part of the family money spent upon them, undertook to care for their sisters in the event of the latter requiring help, there would be some element of fairness in the arrangement. But sons do not undertake any such thing. Even if they did undertake it, they might fail to carry out their engagements. It would be better all round if all the children of a family were treated alike rather than that the seed of future bickerings should be sown by unfair preferences of one before another.

This is a side of the woman question which cannot be reached by law. It is the outgrowth and survival of the time when women were chattels and were bought and sold like so many sheep. Custom sanctions the deliberate cruelty of which the father is guilty who sacrifices his daughter's earthly future in order that his son may carry on the business and the home in the old style. Every one of the political disabilities of women can and will be soon removed. But the removal of this social wrong will be a work of many years. The sexes will be equal in the eyes of the law for a long time before public opinion can make them equal in the eyes of fathers.

PASSING NOTES.

The "British-made" swords and bayonets that broke against Arab bones at Suakim were imported from Germany in an advanced state of manufacture and were put through a finishing process by the contractor. The Government was paying him a large extra sum on the understanding that the articles were to be made in Britain.

A Montreal man is astonished. He writes to the papers that his wife, while pouring out the milk the other morning, poured out a small minnow, which jumped about in a lively manner, as if in its native element. Now, cows do not live on fish diet, and the question is, where did the minnow come from? There remains the suspicion that water was mixed with the milk, but why the reckless extravagance of including a valuble minnow gratis?

The United States Inland Revenue returns for 1888 show that the consumption of distilled spirits has increased to 73,177,603 gallons, against 68,385,094 gallons last year. This is a large increase in the consumption per head after all allowances have been made for increase of population. The figures convey a great disappointment, for there had been a decrease in the consumption of whiskey for forty years past. To add to the seriousness of the matter, the consumption of liquors of all kinds has gone up to 14 gallons per head, against 10.09 in 1888, 7.70 in 1870 and 4.17 in 1840.

The Vancouver "News-Advertiser" is well satisfied with the report that the Canadian Pacific railway will build 15 miles of line to the United States boundary, to meet there the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern Railway from the south. The line will give the Canadian road direct connection with the ports on Puget Sound and the great country tributary to them, and with San Francisco by the California and Oregon railway, thus enabling it to compete with the Northern Central and Southern Pacific roads. From such connection the amount of traffic secured will doubtless be great.

The Prince of Wales has been performing a very singular act. The coffin of King Charles I. was opened seventy years ago and certain jewels, trinkets and miniatures were taken from it. These were soon afterwards stolen, probably by some zealous antiquarian. A short time ago by a roundabout route they returned to the possession of the Royal Family. On Thursday last the coffin was again opened, and in the presence of Dean Davidson, of Windsor, only, the Prince with his own hands placed the property back. He then prayed over the coffin, and the latter was returned to its resting-place.

A Queer Old Fellow.

London "Life" says:—Of people who have curious ways of living few can be more original than was the late Rev. Dunckley Thomas, who had engaged rooms in Mrs. Wildish's house in 1881, and lived there till 1887. He never permitted her or her servants to enter his room, except once a fort-night. He paid his rent weekly, and at each payment he also gave notice that he would quit in the week following. He never did quit, but he thus preserved his liberty unimpaired. Among his property, consisting of £8,000 or $10,000, he had a note of deposit of £1,500, which, whenever he became ill, he would always present to his landlady on the condition that if he recovered she should give it back to him. This occurred frequently, Mrs Wildish always returning the note. Finally Mr. Thomas died, and his executor sued her for the note, which the courts finally gave to her.

A Newfoundland Railway.

ST. JOHN, Jan. 12.—The Newfoundland Government proposes to build a big railway line, with the object of developing the interior of the island and promoting the fishing industry. A short line of railway is already built from St. John's west to Spread Eagle and thence north-east to Harbor Grace. This railway, it is proposed, will be extended in a north-westerly direction about two hundred miles, and thence turning north-easterly running to Hall's Bay on the east coast. The construction of the road will, it is said, prove an especial boon to fishermen who, instead of being compelled to make tedious journeys from the northern fishing ground to St. John's, will be enabled to forward their cargoes by rail from Hall's Bay. Tenders close March 18.

"One Foot in the Grave."

How often do we hear the above said of some poor pilgrim o'er life's thorny path, whose tottering step, pallid face, unnatural glitter of the eye and hacking cough, and its accompanying involuntary pressure of the hand over the lungs, the seat of the dread disease—consumption—that causes the remark? Too frequently, alas! and in the interests of such unfortunates this is penned, to assure them that their steps need tend no longer toward that narrow receptacle that awaits all—that is, until life's allotted space is covered—from any such cause, for the scientific researches of Dr. R. V. Pierce, resulting in the "Golden Medical Discovery," have wrested from Nature a remedy which never fails to cure this scourge of our race (which is really nothing more nor less than Scrofula of the Lungs), if taken in time. Druggists sell it.

The Baxter family of Norwich, Ct., found a valuable diamond ring stowed away in the interior of their Christmas turkey.

For Ladies Only.

Ladies—why is it, that when your husband or your children are ill, you consult the best physician at once, care for them day and night, wear yourselves out with sleepless watching, and never begrudge the heaviest doctor's bill, if only the dear ones are restored to health; while day after day, week after week, you endure that dull pain in your back—that terrible "dragging-down" sensation—and do absolutely nothing to effect a cure? In a few years you will be a helpless invalid, and soon your broken hearted husband and motherless children will follow you to the grave. Perhaps delicacy prevents you consulting a physician—but even this is not necessary. Poor sufferer, tell your husband how miserable you feel—perhaps you never did—and ask him to stop to night and get you a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has cured thousands of women suffering from weaknesses and complaints peculiar to your sex.

Harper, of the Fidelity Bank, Cincinnati, has become insane in the Ohio Penitentiary where he is serving a ten years' sentence.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures when every other so-called remedy fails.

It is poor policy to keep heavy, slow motioned fowls in the same flock with the light and nervous Spanish breeds. They each require different feeding and treatment.

LIGHT, SAFETY AND ECONOMY are matters of very great importance to every household. The use of inferior grades of coal oil shows a disregard of all three of these. The careful housekeeper should use only Rogers' Carbon Safety Oil, sold by dealers everywhere.

Lord Roland Gower's monument to Shakspeare has been unveiled at Stratford-upon-Avon. James Russell Lowell was one of the orators.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

A well-known lawyer of San Diego, Cal., while in a barber's chair turned suddenly to speak to his friend; and a piece of his nose was sliced off.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respy, T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

Georgia is to have an immigration bureau to encourage immigration to the State of industrious and intelligent farmers and mechanics.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, dipsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-assertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, old, middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V. LUBON 19 Wellington street E., Toronto Ont.

Republicans turned out of office by Cleveland expect to be restored to their places by Harrison. They clamor to be "vindicated."

A. P. 432

PATENTS procured, Patent Attorneys, and experts Est'd 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

CANOES. Send for Ill. Catalogue WM. ENGLISH, Peterboro, Ont.

KNITTING Creelman Bros., Georgetown, Ont. MACHINES

TRAPPERS, HUNTERS and COLLECTORS of Raw Furs—Don't sell your Furs until you write to G. RAYMOND, 85 Dundas Street, London, Ont., for list of prices paid by him for all kinds of Raw Skins.

FARMS FOR SALE or RENT. ALL SIZES, KINDS and PRICES. Some special bargains. H. S. MITCHELL, DRAYTON, ONT.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt., Established 1860. 72 King-st. E., Toronto

CANCER, TUMORS, ULCERS, SCROFULA, etc., cured permanently without the knife. Apply to DR. W. L. SMITH, 124 Queen St. E., Toronto.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada. Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.—Send for our Large Illustrated Catalogue of Band Instruments, Violins, Guitars, Flutes, etc., and all kinds of Trimmings. Agent for Frenche's and DeWitt's Plays. BUTLAND'S MUSIC STORE, 37 King st. West, Toronto, Ont.

AGENTS WANTED, AGENTS. The Beautiful Story. The History of Canada. The History Methodism. Living Words, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. The Cottage Physician. Platform Echoes. Royal Path of Life. Family and Pictorial Family Bibles. WILLIAM BRIGGS Publisher, Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 122 Yonge st. Toronto.

Brown Engines
IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.
TORONTO ENGINE WORKS
PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

Diamond Dyes

Brilliant! Durable! Economical!

Diamond Dyes excel all others in Strength, Purity and Fastness. None other are just as good. Beware of imitations, because they are made of cheap and inferior materials, and give poor, weak, crocky colors. To be sure of success, use only the DIAMOND DYES for coloring Dresses, Stockings, Yarns, Carpets, Feathers, Ribbons, &c., &c. We warrant them to color more goods, package for package, than any other dyes ever made, and to give more brilliant and durable colors. Ask for the Diamond and take no other.

A Dress Dyed, A Coat Colored, Garments Renewed } FOR 10 CENTS.

A Child can use them!

At Druggists and Merchants. Dye Book free.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Montreal, P. Q.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.

Subscribed Capital, ... $ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital, ... 2,500,000
Total Assets, ... 10,000,000

The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly. Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brooks, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

WHAT
SCOTT'S EMULSION CURES
CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, Wasting Diseases

Wonderful Flesh Producer.

Scott's Emulsion is not a secret remedy. Containing the stimulating Hypophosphites and Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, the potency of both being largely increased. It is used by Physicians all over the world.

PALATABLE AS MILK.
Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

Young Men

SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto Ont.

Farm Loans
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - MONTREAL.
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO.
This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms. For information apply to local agents, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto.

FINE HEADS OF HAIR

IF YOU ARE BALD, have GREY or THIN HAIR, send to A. DORENWEND, Toronto & get particulars of his Wigs, Toupees, Switches, etc., also Frontpieces, Bangs, etc., all made of finest quality human hair, as natural as life.
A. DORENWEND, PARIS HAIR WORKS, 103 and 105 Yonge St., Toronto.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!!
Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILK HANDKERCHIEF and The Magic Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Whitton Novelty Co., Toronto, Ont.

I CURE FITS!

When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE. I have made the disease of
FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS
A life long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and it will cure you. Address
H. G. ROOT, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. TORONTO, ONT.

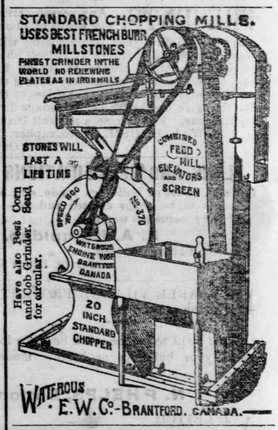
PURE GOLD FLAVORING EXTRACTS BAKING POWDER

Leather Belting
BEST VALUE IN THE DOMINION.
F. E. DIXON & CO., MAKERS, 70 KING ST. E. TORONTO
Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

LADIES, LOOK:
BERLIN WOOLS, all colors, 8c per oz.

SHETLAND AND ANDALUSIAN WOOLS, 8c per oz.; Saxony Wool, all colors, 10c per skein; Ice Wool, best quality, 10c per ball; Embroidery Silk, every shade, 10c doz skeins; Abrasene, all colors, 30c dozen skeins; Filoselle, best quality, 45c and 85c dozen skeins; Macrame Cord, 15 colors, 10c ball; Felt, extra quality, 2 yards wide, $1.00 per yard; Woolen Java Canvas, all colors, 45c yard. Always on hand the newest materials for fancy work, at lowest prices. Letter orders have prompt and careful attention. Goods can be sent to any part of Canada by post. Write for price list. A trial solicited. HENRY DAVIS, Importer, 202 Yonge Street, Toronto. Please mention this paper.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 63 Niagara St., Buffalo, N.Y.



PURITY AND STRENGTH COMBINED IN THE
EMPIRE BAKING POWDER
Manufactured by
Ellis & Keighley, - Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN. CAPITAL, $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, MONTREAL. OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION, Wellington St. Toronto. This Company is prepared to make advances on the security of Good Farm Property at lowest Current rate of interest, and on favorable terms MORTGAGES PURCHASED. For information apply to the Local Agents of the Company, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto, Ont.

SAUSCAE CASINGS—Season 1888-9. Importations of English Sheeps, and Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

Stained Glass
FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

STANDARD CHOPPING MILLS.
USES BEST FRENCH BURR MILLSTONES
FINEST GRINDER IN THE WORLD NO RELIEVING PLATES AS IN IRON MILLS

WATEROUS E. W. Co.-BRANTFORD, CANADA.

LADIES' Dress and Mantle Cutting by this new and improved
TAILOR

AS YOU LIKE IT.

TOEING THE LINE.

The Christmas carols had been sung;
The guests had turned to go;
Down from the chandelier there hung
A spray of mistletoe.

Beneath, along the polished floor,
A clear-marked line there ran;
No face was peering at the door;
I was alone with Nan

Her hair in ripples ringed her brow,
An aureole divine;
Then courage came—I knew not how—
I dared her toe the line.

She smiled a roguish smile and fleet;
She gave a dainty trip—
And oh the honey, Hybla-sweet,
I tasted from her lip!

A few months more and I opine—
(Perhaps you'd like to know)—
'Twill be the matrimonial line
This charming miss'll toe.

—BISSELL CLINTON, IN Harper's.

An earthquake shock was felt yesterday morning in Hampshire, England.

Francis Murphy, who has been laboring in the temperance field for twelve years, estimates that 14,000,000 persons have signed the pledge under his crusade, and that of these 85 per cent. have remained faithful to their vows.

The London "Times," discusing the debate in the House of Commons about appointing a successor to Lord Sackville, says the United States would hardly expect a foreign nation to send a new Minister to Washington at the fag end of an Administration.

Heretofore no marriage in the Argentine Republic was legal that was not celebrated by a priest of the Catholic Church. The Government has issued a decree establishing civil marriages after the 1st of next January, and the result is a great social commotion in the country.

J. Drew Gray, late colonel in the Ottoman army, and for eighteen years war correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, writes to the Montreal press about recent adverse comment upon the Canadian volunteers. He says: "Canadians to-day possess many volunteer and militia regiments which could take the field alongside of any line regiments in Europe with credit and confidence."

Some of the Surprising Effects of Explosive Oatmeal, Flour and Sugar.

"It's all nonsense," said Dr. Charles Perry, the pharmaceutical expert, "to say that the two explosions in Chicago this week were caused by dynamite or bursting boilers. They were caused by dust and only dust. The public doesn't seem to realise that the dust of any vegetable substance which will burn will explode when mixed with air, but every chemist knows it to his sorrow. If you blow your gas out and go away, you know that when you come back and strike a match there's going to be an explosion of the mixed gas and air. You also know that if you put a lighted match in an empty benzine or naphtha barrel, where a little of the original liquid is left, you are pretty sure to have the barrel disappear in small pieces and find yourself in the next lot. The same rule applies to any fine dust which can be burned, and which, by reason of its fineness, can be suspended in the atmosphere. Here is a large tin can. I throw into it a teaspoonful of pouore de riz and a pinch of lycopodium. I shake it until the can is full of dust-laden air, and touch a match to it. Off it goes, and, ouch! I burned my hand in showing the fact. With gas it takes about eight times as much air as gas to make a good blow-up. With dust the proportion is about the same.

"The last explosion in Chicago was occasioned by oatmeal, which is, I think, the first time that Scotland a gastronomic mainstay has behaved so badly. Flour has a much wickeder record. It blew a great mill in Minneapolis all to pieces; it made a first-class wreck of a building in Hamilton avenue, Brooklyn; it knocked out the Jewell's establishment at Fulton Ferry, in that city, and it has ruined I don't know how many other places.

"Flour isn't alone," continued Dr. Perry, "in this property. Powdered sugar cleaned out a huge store in Courtland street only a few years since. Pulverised cocoanut shells came near burning up a seven-stery building in West Broadway. Drug grinding mills are frequently the scenes of such explosions. Paint mills, which reduce lampblack and similar pigments to a dust, run a similiar risk. Bakers are ever within an ace of being blown into eternity by the dust of starch, flour and sugar. Fine sawdust is apt to indulge in the same pyrotechnic display. Wood turners and finishers are always on the alert for accidents of this sort. Even in cotton, linen and woollen mills, the fine lint which fills the air of every room is liable to ignite, and, if the proportion of air to lint is right, to explode with more or less force. Lady housekeepers, who do not clean their furniture, but alow the dust to accumulate, run the risk of an explosion, when, in a fit of reform, they vigorously sweep a close room in the night time with the gas lit."—N. Y. Sun.

THE DEADLY CYCLONE.

The Havoc Wrought in the State of Pennsylvania.

The storm which passed over Pittsburg that awful afternoon and wrought such frightful destruction to life and property possessed every feature of a tornado. United States Signal Officer Stewart said that the storm came from the south-west. It made its first appearance in Texas on Monday, reaching Arkansas on Tuesday and struck Chicago at eight o'clock on Wednesday morning. The storm then swerved in a direct line for Pittsburg, which, however, escaped the greatest severity, as the track of its force lay north-west of the city. Just before the storm struck the city the barometer recorded 26 08, the lowest point reached there since the establishment of the signal service in the city. At 12 30 o'clock the velocity of the wind was fourteen miles an hour. Five minutes later it had attained twenty-five miles, at 12.45 the maximum of forty miles an hour was reached and the tornado was over. It was the most furious storm ever known there. The thermometer fell fourteen degrees. The new Iron City Nut Works were demolished by the wind. Wm. Heinz, a workman there, was killed. Loss, $10,000. The historic Fort Pitt foundry was badly wrecked. Loss $7,000. Telegraph and other wires were broken and tangled all over the city. The roof of the south side market house and part of the roof of the Oliver mill were blown off. Many houses were more or less damaged. There was but little damage in Alleghany City.

KILLING THE LUMBER TRADE.

The Open Winter Disastrous to the Business.

An Ottawa despatch says:—The open winter is working havoc with lumbering operations. Mr. Thomas Hale, of Booth & Hale, says that unless snow comes pretty soon, and a foot and a half of it, that there will be a big break up in shantying, as no one wishes to make logs and leave them over all summer, in the woods to get wormy. Unless there is a big snowfall soon, lumbermen will have to disperse their crews, and even should snow come now some small firms will have to give up. He says there is hardly a stick drawn to the ice yet, as there is no more snow in the bush than there is on Sparks street, Ottawa, and Ottawaites can testify how little there is on the capital's main street. Booth says this winter caps the climax of any winter he ever saw in Canada.

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR,

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XLVI.—THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

At Paris Warren Relf parted with Elsie. He saw her safely to the Northern Railway Station, put her into the first night-train for Calais, and then wriggled back himself to his temporary lair, a quiet hotel on the Cours-la-Reine, just behind the Palais de l'Industrie. He went back to bed, but not to sleep. It was a gusty night, that night in Paris. The wind shook and rattled the loose panes in the big French windows that opened on to the balcony. It must be blowing great guns across the North Sea now, he felt only too sure, and forcing whole squadrons of angry waves through the narrow tunnel of the Straits of Dover.

As the night wore on, however, the wind rose steadily, till it reached at last the full dignity of a regular tempest. Warren Relf couldn't sleep in his bed for distress. He rose often, and looked out on the gusty street for cold comfort. The gas was flaring and flickering in the lamps; the wind was sweeping fiercely down the Cours-la-Reine; and the few belated souls who still kept the pavement were cowering and running before the beating rain with heads bent down and cloaks and overcoats wrapped tight around them. It must indeed be an awful night on the English Channel; Warren stood aghast to think to himself how awful. What on earth could ever have possessed him, he wondered now, to let Elsie make her way alone, on such a terrible evening as this, without him by her side across the stormy water!

He would receive a telegram, thank Heaven, first thing in the morning. Till then, his suspense would be really painful.

As for Elsie, she sped all unconscious on her way to Calais, comfortably ensconced in her first-class compartment "pour dames seules," of which she had fortunately the sole monopoly. The rain beat hard against the windows, to be sure; and the wind shook the door with its gusts more than once, or made the feeble oil lamp in the roof of the carriage flicker fitfully; but Elsie, absorbed in deeper affairs, hardly thought of it at all in her own mind till she reached the stretch of open coast that abuts on the mouth of the Somme near Abbeville. There, the fact began at last to force itself upon her languid attention that the Channel crossing would be distinctly rough. Still, even then, she hardly realized its full meaning, for the wind was off-shore along the Picardy coast; and it was not till the train drew up with a dash on the quay at Calais that she fully understood the serious gravity of the situation. The waves were breaking fiercely over the mouth of the harbour, and the sea was rising so high outside that passengers were met with stern resolve at the terminus wall by the curt notice:

"Owing to the rough weather prevailing to-night, the Dover boat will not sail till morning."

So Elsie went perforce to an hotel in the town and waited patiently for the sea to calm itself. But she, too, got no sleep; she lay awake all night, and thought of Winifred.

Away at Monte Carlo, no wind blew. Hugh Massinger went to rest there at his case at the Hotel de Paris, and slept his sleep out with perfect complacency. No qualms of conscience, no thoughts of Winifred, disturbed his slumber. He had taken the precaution to doubly lock and bolt his door and to lay his winnings between the bolster and the mattress; so he had nothing to trouble about. He had also been careful to purchase a good six-chambered revolver at one of the numerous shops that line the Casino gardens. It isn't safe, indeed, at Monte Carlo, they say, for a successful player, recognised as such, to go about with too much money as hard cash actually in his possession. Raffalevsky, in fact, had told him, with most unnecessary details, some very unpleasant stories, before he retired to rest, about robberies committed at Monte Carlo upon the helpless bodies of heavy winners. Raffalevsky was clearly in a savage ill-temper that evening as having dropped a few thousand pounds at the tables—strange, that men should permit themselves to be so deeply affected by mere transient trifling monetary reverses—and he took it out by repeating or inventing truculent tales, evidently intended to poison the calm rest of Hugh Massinger's innocent slumbers. There was that ugly anecdote, for example, about the lucky boulevardier in the high financial line who won three hundred thousand francs at a couple of sittings—and was murdered in a first-class carriage on his way back to Nice by an unknown assailant, never again recognized or brought to justice. There was that alarming incident of the fat Lyons silk-merchant with the cast in his eye who deposited his gains, like a prudent bourgeois that he was, with a banker at Monaco, but was, nevertheless set upon by an organised band of three well-dressed but ill-informed ruffians, who positively searched him from head to foot, stripped him, and then threw him out upon the four-foot way, a helpless mass, in the Mont Boron Tunnel, happy to escape with bare life and a broken leg from the merciless clutches of the gang of miscreants. And there was that dramatic incident of the Nevada heiress who, coming to Monte Carlo with the gold of California visibly bulging her capacious pockets, had to fight for her life in her own bedroom at this very hotel, and defend her property from unholy hands by the summary process of shooting down with her own domestic revolver two of her cowardly midnight visitors. She was complimented by the authorities on her gallant defence, and replied with spirit that, for the matter of that, this sort of thing was really no novelty to her; for she'd shot down more than one importunate suitor for her hand and heart already in Nevada.

Then Raffalevsky had grown more lugubrious in his converse still, and descended to tales of the recurrent suicides that diversify the monotony of the Monegasque world. He estimated that twelve persons at least per annum, on a moderate average, blew their brains out in the Casino and grounds, after risking and losing their last napoleon at the roulette tables. To kill yourself in the actual saloons themselves, he admitted with a sigh, was indeed considered by gentlemanly players as a boorish solecism: persons of breeding intent on an exit from this vale of tears, usually retired for the purpose of shooting themselves to a remote and sequestered spot in the Casino gardens, behind a convenient clump of picturesque date-palms. This spot was known to habitual frequenters of Monte Carlo as the Place Hari-kiri, or Happy Despatch Point. But if, by hazard, any inconsiderate person was moved to shoot himself in the salles de jeu, a rapid contingent of trained lackeys stood ever at hand ready to rush in at a moment's notice to drag away the offender's body or wipe up the mess; and play proceeded at once the same as usual.

Nevertheless, Hugh slept soundly in spite of it all in his bed till morning, and when he woke, found his goodly pile of gold and notes intact as ever between bolster and mattress. He had never slept so well since he went to Whitestrand.

But at Whitestrand itself that night things went quite otherwise. Such a storm was hardly remembered on the German Ocean within the memory of the oldest sailors. Early in the evening the coastguardman at the shelter just beyond the Hall grounds, warned by telegram from the Meteorological Office, had raised the cone for heavy weather from the north-east. By nine o'clock, the surf was seething and boiling on the bar, and the waves were dashing themselves in huge sheets of foam against Hugh Massinger's inchoate breakwater. The sand flew free effectual breakwater. The sand flew free before the angry gusts: it blinded the eyes and filled the lungs of all who tried to face the storm on the sea-front: even up the river and at the Hall itself it pervaded the air with a perfect bombardment of tiny grains. It was only possible to remain outdoors by turning one's back upon the fierce blast, or by covering one's face, not with a veil, but with a silk pocket-handkerchief. The very coastguardmen, accustomed by long use to good doses of solid silica in the lungs, shrank back with alarm from the idea of facing that running fire of driven sand-particles. As for the smacks and boats at large on the sea, they were left to their fate—nothing could be done by human hands to help or save them.

By midnight, tide was well at its full, and the beach being covered, the bombardment of sand slowly intermitted a little. But sheets of foam and spray still drove on before the wind, and fishermen, clad in waterproof suits from head to foot, stood facing them upon the shore to watch the fate of Hugh Massinger's poor helpless breakwater. The sea was roaring and raving round its sides now like a horde of savages, and the scour was setting in fiercer than ever to wash away whatever remained of Whitestrand.

"Will it stand, Bill?" the farm bailiff asked in anxious tones of Stannaway, the innkeeper, as they strained their eyes through the gloom and spray to catch signt of the frail barrier that alone protected them—the stone breakwater which had taken the place of the old historical Whitestrand poplar.

Stannaway shook his head despondently. "Sea like that's bound to wash it away," he answered hard through the teeth of the wind. "It'd wash away anything. An when it goes, it'll all up with Whitestrand."

The whole village, indeed, men, women and children alike, had collected by this time at the point by the river, to watch the progress of the common enemy. There was a fearful interest for every one of them in seeing the waves assail and beat down that final barrier of their hearths and homes. If the breakwater went, Whitestrand must surely follow it, now or later, bit by bit, in piecemeal destruction. The sea would swallow it up wholesale, as it swallowed up Dunwich and Thorpe and Slaughden. Those domestic examples gave point to their terror. To the Suffolk coast dwellers, the sea indeed envisages itself ever, not mere natural expanse of water, but as a slow and patient yet implacable assailant.

By two in the morning a fresh excitement supervened to keep up the interest: a collier hull, deserted and waterlogged, came drifting in by slow stages before the driving gale across the broad sand flats. She was a dismasted hulk, rickety and unseaworthy, abandoned by all who had tried to sail her; and she drifted slowly, slowly, slowly on, driven before the waves, foot by foot, a bit at a time, over the wet sands, till at last, with one supreme effort of force, the breakers cast her up, a huge burden, between the shore and the breakwater, blocking with her broadside one entire end of the channel created by the scour behind the spot once occupied by the famous poplar. The waves, in fact, dashed her full against the further end of the breakwater, and jammed her up with prodigious force between shore and wall, a temporary barrier against their own advances. Then retiring for a moment to recruit their rage, they broke in sheets of helpless foam against the wooden bulwark they had raised themselves in the direct line of their own progress.

What followed next, followed so fast that even the sturdy Whitestranders themselves, accustomed as they were to heavy seas and shifting sands and natural changes of marvellous rapidity, stood aghast at its suddenness and its awful energy. In a few minutes, before their very eyes, the sea had carried huge masses and shoals of flying sand over the top of the wall and the stranded ship, and lodged them deep in the hollow below that the scour had created in the rear of the breakwater. The wall was joined as if by some sudden stroke of a conjurer's wand to the mainland beyond; and the sea, still dashing madly against the masonry and the ship, set to work once more to erect fresh outworks in front against its own assaults by piling up sand with incredible speed in dunes and mounds upon their outer faces. Even as they looked, the breakwater was rapidly lost to view in a mountain of beach: the broken stump of mast on the wrecked collier hardly showed above the level of the mushroom hillock that covered and overwhelmed with its hasty debris the buried hull of the unknown vessel. Hummock after hummock grew apace outside with startling rapidity in successive lines along the shore to seaward. New land was forming at each crash of the waves. The Æolian sand was doing its work bravely. By five in the morning, men walked secure where the sea had roared but six hours before. It had left the buried breakwater now a quarter of a mile inland at least, and was still engaged with mad eagerness in its rapid task of piling up fresh mounds and heaps in endless rows, to seaward and to seaward and ever to seaward.

Whitestrand was saved. Nay more than that: it was gaining once more in a single night all that it had lost in twenty years to the devouring ocean.

When morning broke, the astonished Whitestranders could hardly recognise their own shore, their own salt marshes, their own river. Everything was changed as if by magic. The estuary was gone, and in its place stretched a wide expanse of undulating sandhills. The Char had turned its course visibly southward, bursting the dikes on the Yondstream farms, and flowing to the sea by the old channel from which Oliver's engineers had long since diverted it. The Hall stood half a mile farther from the water's edge than it had done of old, and a belt of bare and open dune-land lay tossed between its grounds and the new high-tide mark. The farm-bailiff examined them in the gray dawn with a practical eye. "If we plant them hills all over with maram-grass and tamarisk," he said reflectively, "they'll mat like the other ones, and Squire'll have as many acres of new pasture land north o'Char as ever he lost o'sal marsh and meadow south of the old river.

If Hugh Massinger had only known it! Indeed, the storm and the strange chances of tempest had done far more for him that single night while he slept at Monte Carlo than luck at roulette had managed to do for him the day before in that hot and crowded sink of iniquity in the rooms of the Casino.

For from that day forth Whitestrand was safe. It was more than safe; it began to grow again. The blown sand ceased to molest it: the sea and the tide ceased to eat it away: the breakwater had done its work well, after all; and a new barrier of increasing sandhills had sprung up spontaneously by the river's mouth to guard its seaward half from future encroachment. If Hugh could only have known and believed it, the estate was worth every bit as much that wild morning as ever it had been in the palmiest days of the Elizabethan Meyseys. And the family solicitor, examining the mortgages in his own office, remarked to himself with a pensive glance that the Squire might have raised that little sum, if only he'd waited, at scarcely more than half the interest, on his own security and his improved property. For Whitestrand now would fetch money.

CHAPTER XLVII.—FORTUNE OF WAR.

At Monte Carlo, on the other hand, day dawned serene and calm and cloudless. Hugh Massinger rose, unmindful of his far-away Suffolk sandhills, and gazed with a pleasant dreamy feeling out of his luxurious first floor bedroom. It was a strange outlook. On one side, the ornate and over-loaded Parisian architecture of that palace of Circe, plumped down so grotesquely, with its meretricious town-bred airs and graces, among the rugged scenery of the Maritime Alps: on the other side, the inaccessible crags and pinnacles of the Tete-de-Chieu, gray and lonely as any mountain side in Scotland or Savoy—the actual terminus of the main range of snow-clad Alps, whose bald peaks topple over sheer three thousand feet into the blue expanse of the Mediterranean, that washes the base of their precipitous bluffs. The contrast was almost ludicrous in its quaint extremes.

He did not wholly approve the decoration. Hugh Massinger's tastes were not all distorted. Dissipation to him was but a small part and fraction of existence. He took it only as the mustard of life—an agreeable condiment to be sparingly partaken of.—The poet's instinct within him had kept alive and fresh his healthy interest in simpler things, in hill and dale, in calm and peaceful country pleasures. After that feverish day of gambling at Monte Carlo, he would dearly have loved to rise early and saunter out alone for a morning walk; to scale before breakfast the ramping cliffs of the Tete de Chien, and to reach the mouldering Roman tower of Turbia, that long mounted guard on the narrow path where Gaul and Italy marched together. But that hateful pile of gold and notes between the pillow and the mattress restrained his desire. It would be dangerous to wander among the lonely mountains with so large a sum as that concealed about his person; dangerous to leave it unguarded at the hotel, or to entrust it to the keeping of any casual stranger. "Cantabit vacuus coram latrone viator," he murmured to himself half aloud with a sigh of regret, as he turned away his eyes from that glorious semicircle of jagged peaks that bounded his horizon. He must stop at home and take care of his money-bags, like any vulgar cheesemongering millionaire of them all. Down, poet's heart, with your unreasonable aspirations for the lonely mountain heights! Amaryllis and asphodel are not for you. Shoulder your muckrake with a manful smile, and betake you to the Casino where Circe calls, as soon as the great gate swings once more on its grating hinges. You cannot serve two masters. You have chosen Mammon to-day, and him you must worship. No mountain air for your lungs this morning; but the close and crowded atmosphere of the roulette tables. Keep true to your creed for a little while longer; it is all for Elsie's sake!—For Elsie! For Elsie!—He withdrew his head from the window with a faint flush of shame. Ah, heaven, to think he should think of Elsie in such a connection and at such a moment!

He dressed himself slowly and went down to breakfast. Attentive waiters, expectant of a duly commensurate tip, sniffing pourboire from afar, crowded round for the honour of his distinguished orders. Raffalevsky joined him in the salle-a-manger shortly. The Russian was haggard and pale from sleeplessness; dark rings surrounded his glassy black eyes: his face was the face of a boiled codfish. No waiter hurried to receive his commands: all Monte Carlo knew him well already for a heavy loser. Your loser seldom overflows into generous tipping. Hugh beckoned him over to his own table: he would extend to the Russian the easy favour of his profuse hospitality. Raffalevsky seated himself in a sulky humour by the winner's side. He meant to play it out still, he said, to the bitter end. He couldn't afford to lose and leave off; that game was for capitalists. For himself, he speculated—well—on borrowed funds. He must win all back or lose all utterly. In the latter case—a significant gesture completed the sentence. He put up his hand playfully to his right ear and clicked with his tongue, like the click of a revolver barrel. Hugh smiled responsive his most meaning smile. "Esperons toujours," he murmured philosophically in his musical voice and perfect accent. No man on earth could ever bear with more philosophical composure than Hugh Massinger the misfortunes of others.

Before he left the breakfast-table that morning, a waiter presented the bill, all deferential politeness. "I sleep here to-night again," Hugh observed with a yawn, as he noted attentively the lordly conception of its various items. The waiter bowed a profound bow. "At Monte Carlo, Monsieur," he said significantly, "one pays daily." Hugh drew out a handful of gold from his pocket with a laugh and paid at once. But the omen disquieted him. Who wins to-day may lose to-morrow. Clearly the hotel at least had thoroughly learnt that simple lesson.

They filed in among the first at the doors of the Casino. Once started, Hugh played with scarcely an intermission for food, till the tables closed again. He kept himself; up with champagne and sandwiches. That was indeed a glorious day! A wild success attended his hazards. He staked and won staked and lost; staked and won; staked and lost again. But the winnings by far outbalanced the losses. It went the round of the tables, in frequent whispers, that a young Englishman, a poet by feature, was breaking the bank with his audacious plunging. He plunged again, and again successfully. People crowded up from their own game at neighbouring boards to watch and imitate the too lucky Englishman. Give him his head! He's in the vein!" they said. "A man in the vein should always keep playing." The young lady with the fine Pennsylvanian twang remarked with occidental plainness of speech that she "wouldn't object to running a partnership." Hugh laughed and demurred.—"You might dilute the luck, you know," he answered good-humouredly. "But if you'll hand me over a hundred louis, I don't mind putting them on 31 for you." He did, and they won. The crowd of gamblers applauded, all hushed, with their usual superstitious awe and veneration. "He has the run of the numbers," they said in concert. To gamblers generally, fate is a goddess, a living reality, with capricious likes and dislikes of her own. They are ever ready to back her favorite for the time being; they look upon play as a predestined certainty.

Raffalevsky meanwhile lost and lost with equal persistence. He drank as much champagne as Hugh; but the wine inspired no lucky guesses. When they came to count up their gains and losses at the end of the day, they found it was still a neck-and-neck race, in opposite ways, between them. Hugh had won altogether close on nine thousand pounds. Raffalevsky had lost rather more than eight thousand five hundred.

"Never mind," Hugh remarked with his inexhaustible buoyancy. "We're still to the good against his Monegasque Highness. There's a balance of something like five hundred pounds in our joint favour.'

"In other words," Raffalevsky answered with a grim smile, "you've won all my money and some other fellow's too. You're the sponge that sucks up all my lifeblood. I've got barely three thousand five hundred left. When that goes"——And he repeated once more the same expressive suicidal pantomime.

That night Hugh slept at Monte Carlo once more. He had lost all sense of shame and decency now. He sent off a note for two thousand francs to the people at the pension, just as a guarantee of good faith—as the newspapers say—and to let them know he was really returning. But he had formed a shadowy plan of his own by this time. He would wait another day at the Casino and go home to San Remo with Warren Relf by the train that reached there at 6.39—the train by which Elsie had said in her note he would be returning.

Why he wished to do so, he hardly with distinctness knew himself. Certainly he did not mean to pick a quarrel; he only knew in a vague sort of way he was going by that train; and until it started, he would keep on playing.

And lose every penny he'd won, perhaps! Why not leave off at once, secure of his eight thousand? Bah! what was eight thousand now to him? He'd win a round twenty before he left off—for Elsie.

So he played next day from morning till night; played, and drank champagne feverishly. Such luck had never been known at the tables. Old players stood by with observant faces and admired his vein. Was ever a system seen like his? Such judgment, they said; such restraint; such coolness!

But inwardly, Hugh was consumed all day by a devouring fire. His excitement at last knew no bounds. He drank champagne by the glassful to keep his nerve up. He had won before nightfall, all told, no less a sum than eleven thousand pounds sterling. What was the miserable remnant of Whitestrand, now, to him! Let Whitestrand sink in the sea for all he cared for it! He had here a veritable mine of wealth. He would go back to San Remo to bury Winifred—and return to heap up a gigantic fortune.

Eleven thousand pounds! A mere bagatelle. At five per cent. five hundred and fifty a year only!

His train was due to start at five. About four o'clock, Raffalevsky came up to him from another table. The Russian's face was white as death. "I've lost all," he murmured hoarsely, drawing Hugh aside. "The whole, the whole, my three hundred thousand francs of borrowed capital!—And what's worse still, I borrowed it from the chest—government money—the treasury of the squadron! If I go back alive I shall be court-martialed.—For heaven's sake, my friend, lend me at least a few hundred francs to retrieve my luck with!"

Hugh put his hand to his pile and drew out three notes of a thousand francs each—a hundred and twenty pounds sterling in all It was nothing, nothing, "Good luck go with them," he cried good-humouredly. "When those are gone, my dear fellow, come back for more. I'm not the man, I hope and trust, to turn my back upon a comrade in misfortune."

The Russian snapped at them with a grateful gesture, but without hesitation or spoken thanks, and returned in hot haste to his own table. Gamblers have little time for needless talking.

At a quarter to five, after a last hasty draught of champagne at the buffet, Hugh turned to go out, with his cash in his pockes. In front of him, he saw just an apparition of Raffalevsky rushing wildly away with one hand upon his forehead. The man's face was awful to behold. Hugh felt sure the Russian had lost all once more, and been too much ashamed even to renew his application.

The great door swung slow upon its hinges, and Raffalevsky burst into the outer corridor, bowed from the room with great dignity, in spite of his frantic haste, by a well liveried attendant. There is plenty of obsequiousness at Monte Carlo for every player, even if he has lost his last louis.

They emerged once more upon the beautiful terrace, the glorious view, the pencilled palm trees. All around, the sinking Italian sun lit up that fairy coast with pink and purple. Bay and rock and mountain side showed all the more exquisite after the fetid air of those crowded gaming saloons. High up on the shoulders of the inaccessible Alps the great square Roman keep of Turbia gazed down majestically with mute contempt on the feverish throng of miserable idlers who poured in and out through the gaudy portals of the garish Casino. A serene delight pervaded Hugh Massinger's placid soul; he felt himself vastly superior to these human butterflies; he knew his own worth as he turned entranced from the marble steps to the beautiful prospect that spread everywhere unrolled like a picture around him. Poet as he was, he despised mere gamblers; and he carried eleven thousand pounds odd of winnings in notes in his pocket.

R'r'r! A sharp report! A cry! A concourse! Something uncanny had surely happened. People were running up where the pistol went off. Hugh Massinger turned with a shudder of disgust. How discomposing! The usual ugly Monte Carlo incident! Raffalevsky had shot himself behind the shade of the palm-trees.

The man was lying, a hideous mass, in a crimson pool of his own blood, prone on the ground—hit through the temple with a well-directed bullet. It was a horrid sight, and Hugh's nerves were sensitive. If it hadn't been for the champagne, he would really have fainted. Besides, the train was nearly due. If you hover about where men have killed themselves, you're liable to be let in for whatever may happen to be the Monegasque equivalent for that time-honoured institution, our own beloved British coroner's inquest. He might be hailed as a witness. Is that law? Ay, marry, is it? Crowner's quest law! Better give it all a wide berth at once. The bell was ringing for the train below. With a sudden shudder, Hugh hurried away from the ghastly object. After all, he had done his best to save him—lent him or given him three thousand francs to retrieve his losses. It was none of his fault If one man wins, another man loses. Luck, luck, the mere incalculable chances of the table! If their places had been reversed, would that morose, unsociable, ill-tempered Russian have volunteered to give him three thousand francs to throw away, he wondered? Never, never: 'twas all for the best. The Russian had lost, and he won—eleven thousand pounds odd, for Elsie.

He rushed away and dashed headlong into the station. His own revolver was safe in his pocket. He carried eleven thousand pounds odd about him. No man should rob him without a fight between here and San Remo.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TORTURED BY A LIZARD.

A Woman Swallows a Reptile which is Removed After Five Years—Horrible Agony of the Sufferer.

The wife of Mr. John Hawkins, foreman of one of the Toronto street cleaning gangs and residing at 41 Gloucester street, has been a sufferer for a number of years and has been treated during that time by several medical men for consumption, catarrh of the stomach, etc. Her sufferings grew more and more excruciating, until last week, when the symptoms told unmistakably that something was biting her internally. Medical aid was summoned and a mixture was administered which killed and finally expelled a lizard some eight inches in length and about as big around as the top of one's finger.

The medicine caused the creature to bite the unfortunate lady in the throat and stomach so severely as to make her scream with pain. Latterly Mrs Hawkins, life has been one of great misery and discomfort. She could not lie down, as in that position the lizard would come up in her throat and bite her, so that she could get no sleep.

Since the reptile has been removed Mrs. Hawkins has made very rapid progress towards recovery. Mr. Hawkins is of the opinion that his wife swallowed the lizard, some six years ago, when they lived in the country near Stratford, and were in the habit of drinking spring water.

Japan's Want of Religion.

Says an intelligent Government officia of Japan:—"Our country is in a deplorable state as far as religion is concerned. The people of the better classes are largely agnostics. They believe in no religion, and though the bulk of them are nominally Buddhists, they are really infidels. I believe that any religion is better than no religion, and there is at present room in Japan for all the work that both the Buddhists and Christians can do. When the two religions have conquered the Empire and the sects come together, there may be trouble, but not before. We have now our preachers and the Christians have their missionaries. There is a vest field before us, and there is room for both to do good."—[N. Y. Tribune.

Many a man has strained himself trying to lift a mortgage.

Black Russian lambskin, with waves like those of moire, is used for the fronts of handsome black plush coats.

One of the most remarkable records of service noted recently was that of Paul Misonne, who lately died in Belgium, after having been in the employ of the coal mining corporation of Amercoeur for 77 years. He was 90 years of age at the time of his death.

Saved by a Hymn.

The wonderful faith and trust of the Huguenots carried them through many perils. The following story of early pioneer life is only one of many such:

Three years after their arrival in Kingston, a woman, Catherine Dubois, wife of Louis Dubois, and three of their children, were seized by prowling Indians and carried into captivity, and all the efforts of the distressed husband and father to trace them proved unavailing. At length a friendly Indian came and told him that if he would follow Roundout Creek and up Wallkill River, to a certain point in the forest, he would find the Indian camp where his wife and children were; but that he must go in haste, for the savages would soon put the captives to torture and death. The unhappy man started immediately, with a company of friends, through the wilderness, and arrived barely in time to stop the barbarous preparations before the prisoners' lives were sacrificed. Dubois and his men fell upon the camp, and soon routed the Indians; and when he saw his wife and children safe again, he had time to contemplate the fate she had just escaped, and to learn the astonishing details. Mrs. Dubois told him that the savages had placed her on a pile of dry wood, to burn her alive; and just before they applied the torch, she looked up to heaven and began to sing a hymn. The singing seemed to charm the Indians, and the torturer waited with the fire brand in his hand. They listened till she finished the hymn; and then visibly softened, they bade her "sing another." She complied, and again they said "sing another;" and thus she sang hymn after hymn of hope and holy trust in God, while the savages listened, pleased, and apparently filled with a kind of awe, at the sound of a death music they had never heard before, until the rescuers surprised them, and the precious life was saved.

In gratitude to God for this remarkable deliverance, Louis Dubois and his companions, so continues the tradition, determined to commence a settlement on the spot where the Christian wife and mother so nearly met her death. So the town of New Paltz was founded; and the Reformed Church edifice now stands only about a hundred yards from the place where Catherine Dubois sang her hymns of faith on her funeral pile.

PARALYSED AT THE POLLS.

Distressingly Sudden Death of a Lady Voter.

A St. Thomas despatch says:—Mrs. Agnes Cole, mother of Robert Cole, one of the successful candidates for alderman in No. 5 Ward, attended the polling booth about four o'clock the afternoon of election day to record her vote, and while in the act of marking the ballot fell to the floor. Her son, who was standing near at hand, hastened to her and found that she had been stricken with paralysis. The unfortunate lady was carried into Dr. Corlis' surgery, whence she was conveyed to her residence on Flora street, where in spite of all that medical skill could do, she died at one o'clock next morning. The deceased was 68 years of age, and leaves two sons, Robert of St. Thomas, and Archibald, residing in Dakota.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

Canada's Trade With the Mother Country.

A cable from London says:—The Board of Trade returns show that British trade with Canada for 1888, like the British foreign trade generally, is less satisfactory than was expected. The exports to Canada amounted to £5,162,145, a decrease of 10.91 per cent, as compared with 1887. The imports from Canada were £7,017,820, a decrease of 11.65 per cent. The largest decrease in exports occurs in cotton, woolen and worsted goods, probably due to the enlarged Canadian home make. Iron exports were about stationary. The inports of oxen remain about stationary at £1,036 269. Cows decreased from £45,470 in 1887 to £40 351 Sheep increased from £65.738 to £89,272. Wheat and flour decreased from £2,045,846 to £886,785; butter, from £139 565 to £40,797; cheese, from £1,552,761 to £1,523,833. Fish increased from £336 657 to £367,662, and lumber increased from £2,645,883 to £3,012,581.

Since the death of Mr. Crowley at Central Park, the largest chimpanzee in captivity in America is Topsy, of the Philadelphia "Zoo." She has had lung trouble and heart trouble and several severe coughs, but now she is fully recovered and in excellent health. She has two male attendants; they are of the lowest species of the monkey. They lick Topsy's face two or three times a day and comb her hair with their fingers. Then Topsy plays with them. She is very vain and sits for hours before a looking-glass in the back of her cage and gazes at herself in silent admiration.

In the immediate anxiety regarding the fate of Emin and Stanley attention has been little directed to all that is implied by the generally admitted fact that the steut-hearted governor of Egypt's equatorial provinces is a prisoner. There can be can doubt that all his stations have been given up and his administrative "plant" scattered and destroyed. This disaster to the cause of African civilization is the greater since Emin Pasha had done a work in the Upper Nile region which promised to be permanent. He had taught many of the natives useful trades and had aroused in them a desire to profit by the advantages of civilization. Around his military posts people collected alike for protection against the raids of slave traders and for participation in the community life which Emin established. These stations were the central points of the Governmental establishment which Emin sought to introduce. He had become so interested in his task that he announced in the latest letters sent by him to the coast his purpose of continuing it at all hazards. Now the work of years is largely undone, although its influence cannot be wholly lost.

A FROG STORY.

A Little Animal Which Probably Lived Over 20,000 Years.

London Engineering says:—The daily press have recently devoted some length to the detailing the later history of an old toad, who was only allowed to live three days after having been dug out of a cavity where in he had secluded himself for a trifle of 20,000 years or more, and how a "local surgeon," endeavouring to improve on nature, "hoping to enable him to take food, slit the membrane by which his mouth was closed, and the patient unfortunately had not sufficient vitality to survive the operation." The theory has been discussed as to whether the toad would have continued to live above ground had he been left in the natural condition in which he was found. The following is the authentic history of how such another reptile of a kindred species was found, the length of whose retirement could only be measured by a geological period of time, and who was returned to his long past overground life and condition by natural means. In the Plenty valley, Victoria, some time in the early 70's, a road party were making a deep cutting through some clay beds to improve local traffic facilities. The city bed was a tertiary formation; it was hard and of a yellow colour. On the clay bank gum-trees, some hundreds of years old, were growing. When about thirty feet below the surface a block of this clay in falling broke into two pieces, out of which tumbled a little frog, with a body about two and a half inches long an one and a quarter inches wide. He seemed blind and sleepy, though showing every evidence of life; he was apparently as strong as any other frog of the same size; he was in no way thin; in fact, seemed to be a well-nurtured and properly cared for frog. The block of clay was reduced in size and the frog with the two pieces which formed his dwelling, was sent to the Technological museum, Melbourne. Mr. Newberry, the chief of that institution, examined him very closely, and found that all the natural orifices of the body had closed completely; in fact there was of them not a trace remaining. In colour the frog was a dirty yellow, such as the clay, without any variation of tinge.

Mr. Newberry sent this creature for identification to Frederick McCoy, F. R. S., Professor of Natural Sciences, Melbourne University. Prof. McCoy identified him as a member of a well known species whose habits were, in times of trouble, such as drought or cold, to bury themselves in the earth and remain there until the condition of things was more to their liking. Members of the species mentioned, however, were a yellow color mottled with brown; after the identification the creature was again returned to Mr. Newberry. This gentleman determined to see if he could by some natural process educate the sleepy specimen into more vigorous and better undstanding of his duties as a live frog. He was then domiciled in a small fernery in the museum, and it was decided to give him a bath every morning, a proceeding froggy seemed strongly to object to, though he swam vigorously while in the water. When put into his clay cavity he wriggled himself about until he found the old grove, folded himself up and seemed most contented. This cavity might be described as fitting him when it touched him, that is to say, though touching him all over the more prominent parts of the body, the clay was not moulded into the hollows formed by the folding of his limbs. After a short while the clay bed was taken from him and he was put among the ferns on the mould, into which he rapidly sank stern first by a peculiar motion of his hind legs. For his morning bath he had to be dug up daily, then back he would go again into seclusion. In a

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Sereet, by R. Sutherland, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

DUTTON, JANUARY 17, 1889.

S. Wilton, tailor, has left the country.

Read advertisement of logs wanted in this issue.

The Leamington Post has changed hands again.

Mud, rain and bad colds are the order of the day.

The Belmont Presbyterians have decided to build a new church.

The attendance was very small at the Council meeting on Monday.

M. Cochrane has the contract for building a kitchen for J. C. Price.

Anniversary Services will be held in the Presbyterian Church on the 27th inst.

The storm of Wednesday did great damage to fences and buildings in this vicinity.

May Bros. roller flour mill at St. Thomas was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. J. Lutz, of St. Thomas, attempted suicide by taking laudanum. A doctor saved her life.

Arthur Leitch, who had his foot badly injured while playing football a few weeks ago, is able to be around again.

A meeting will be held in Knox Church to-night for the purpose of organizing a society for the young people.

Mr. Neil Mulligan, of Iona Station, has purchased a house and lot on Luton street from Jerome Ecker and moved in last Friday.

Weather prophets are now predicting good sleighing for the balance of the year, and we may look for rain every day until May 1st.

Mr. Ferguson, sr., removed his livery outfit from the stables near the Nelson House to his son's stables, south of the track.

Squire Regis and Freemont McDonald have been acquitted at the London Assizes of the charge of assisting a man to escape arrest.

Rev. Thos. Wilson will preach in Knox Church next Sunday evening on the subject, "How to Entertain Strangers coming into the Church."

It is almost impossible to get any dry wood in town just now, and those who are willing to draw it over the rough roads get a good price.

The temperance people of Essex Centre intend enteiing an appeal against the result of the late vote on the Dunkin Act in that town.

The High School Literary Society, which had been discontinued during the holidays, re-organized last Friday evening with a good attendance.

A large wild cat was brought in on Thursday by Alex. Erskine, who shot it in A. McMillan's bush, a short distance from Dutton. It weighed 28 lbs.

A man who was a little overloaded fell down the stairs of Brown's hall a night or two ago while the S. A. were holding their meeting. He escaped with a few bruises.

Elgin County Council meets on Tuesday, Jan. 22nd. The aspirants for the Warden's chair will likely be Pollock, Reeve of Yarmouth, and Godwin, Reeve of Bayham.

An effort is being made to have the mail from the east arrive earlier in the day. The change would be a great benefit to both the postmaster and public and we hope to see it effected.

Mr. L. J. Cullen has opened a new furniture and undertaking store in Wallacetown and announces great bargains in all lines. He is a reliable, energetic business man and is sure to succeed.

Following are yesterday's market quotations :—Wheat, $1 ; barley 40c. ; pease, 55c. ; oats, 30c. ; beans, $1 ; pork, $6 to 6.50 ; butter, 20c. ; eggs, 16c. ; dried apples, 3½c. 'per lb. ; lard, 12½c. ; tallow, 5c.

A. N. C. Black's spirited team endeavored to run away while being hitched up yesterday. They made things lively around the stable yard for a while, but beyond breaking the buggy slightly no damage was done.

The annual report of the Dunwich Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co. has been issued from this office. The payment of claims have been heavier this year than usual, but the Company still stands on a solid footing.

A concert will be given in Wallacetown in aid of St. Peter's Sunday School Tyrconnell, to-night, by the German Choral Band. A splendid programme has been prepared and a good time is promised to all who attend.

Mr. O'Malley is having the windows of his department of the Public School frosted. The teachers say it would be a great benefit to them if every window in the school was provided with blinds so that they could regulate the amount of light.

From the Postmaster-General's report for 1888 we make the following extracts in reference to the Dutton post office : Gross revenue from sale of stamps, etc., $1,180.71 ; salary of postmaster, $385 ; allowance for rent, etc., $40.00 No. of money orders, 397 ; total amount of orders, $8,708.77 ; total commission received from the public. $54.54 ; total amount of orders paid, $2,014.91 ; compensation paid to postmaster on money order business, $23.15. There were no cases of registered or unregistered letters containing money sent from the Dutton P. O. being lost or stolen during the year. This report speaks well for the manner in which our post-office is conducted.

The Canadian Express Company has taken charge of the express business on the Credit Valley, with the result that two charges must be paid on express from Toronto here. Monopoly is a good thing sometimes—for those who have it.

Complaints are made that M. C. R freight trains are allowed to block the Main street crossing for a longer time than the law allows. Our civil authorities should make it their business to stop this, as great inconvenience is often caused to persons crossing.

A petition has been circulated among the ratepayers of the Dutton Public School to have the hour for re-assembling in the afternoon changed from 1 to 1.30, giving half an hour more Good and sufficient reasons are given in the petition for the change, and every parent should give it his or her careful consideration. If Dutton was an incorporated village—as it should be—the law would demand 1½ hours for noon.

Some time ago Wiggins, the Ottawa weather prophet, prognosticated that a terrific blizzard would pass over this country' Jan. 15. We are prepared to bet a hat that Wiggins will now claim the present outbreak of winter as one of his own peculiar brand, and that he will presently tell us it has merely come in a few days ahead of time, as irregular institutions like it are apt to do. That is how he explained away his earthquake stories.

On Sunday Rev. Thos. Wilson preached his farewell sermon to a congregation which crowded the church to the doors. He left on Monday morning and expects to get settled in Dutton early in the year. We regret his departure, for he is an earnest, outspoken preacher, a thorough hard worker, who has made the attendance of the Beeton Kirk so great that a new church is a necessity. Dutton Presbyterians have a pastor in every way worthy their love and confidence.—Beeton World.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in raising the smokestack on Hollingshead's mill, which was blown down by Wednesday's gale. It was nearly raised to its position once when a rope broke, letting it fall across the roof of the mill, narrowly missing the head of Wm. Hollingshead, who was looking out of the sky-light at the time, and spoiled the work of hours. The mill is again running, however, the repairs being completed Monday. About half the roof on the west side of the mill had to be renewed, the wind having torn it off.

At the Middlesex Assizes at London last week the case of Cusack vs. Cameron was tried. This was an action of seduction, brought by a tinsmith of Wallacetown, against a yovng man who used to work at the cabinet making business. The girl is a pretty and refined looking young woman of about 20 years. It was stated that the girl was clandestinely removed from home to Detroit for the purpose of having an abortion performed. This, however, was not done. The case was undefended, and the jury returned a verdict for for plaintiff for $2,000.

The West Elgin Farmers' Institute met at Rodney on Saturday, President Gow in the chair. M. Jeffs read an excellent paper on sheep breeding, holding up the Southdowns as the best, reserving the opinion, however, that this did not apply to all districts. The paper was closely criticised by Jabez Spencer, Alex. McColl, Prof. Robertson and others. Prof. Robertson followed with an address on diary farming. By the aid of a chart he pointed out the best points in a good cow and the false economy practiced by many farmers. He was very attentively listened to for a couple of hours, and closely questioned as to the points he had advanced, queries pouring in from all parts of the hall. The next meeting is to be held at Shedden early in February. About 56 members joined the institute during the day.

Mr. N. Currie died at Glencoe on Sunday, at the age of 64. He had been in ill-health for some time past, but rallied from time to time till seized with an attack of palsy, to which he succumbed. He had lived in the district known as the West Riding of Middlesex during the greater part of his life, and was one of the best known residents of that section of the country. He represented the riding in the first Parliament of Ontario, and was subsequently a candidate in the Conservative interest on several occasions for Legislature and for the House of Commons. He sat in the County Council as Reeve of Ekfrid and of Glencoe during several years, and contributed not a little to the value of its proceedings. As a man of general information he came to be regarded as an authority on many matters, particularly those appertaining to municipal affairs. He was blessed with a very kindly disposition, and had hosts of friends. He was buried on Tuesday at two o'clock p. m. with Masonic honors.

On three separate occasions in November and December last the Glencoe Public School Board engaged a lady teacher for the second division of the school, and in two cases the applicant, after being accepted by the Board, wrote back declining the position, and the latter were at a loss to account for the unsatisfactory manner in which the engagements turned out. It is now learned that Miss Tassie, who was finally engaged as teacher, received an anonymous letter after her engagement, giving various reasons why it would be advisable for her not to accept the position of teacher at Glencoe. Miss Tassie, however, instead of breaking her engagement, forwarded the letter to Inspector Carson, and asked his advice. The inspector replied, advising Miss Tassie not to be guided by the contents of the letter, but to act as she would had she not received it. It is supposed that the other applicants also received letters of the same purport, and the School Board is endeavoring to find out the guilty persons.

Milburn's beef, iron and wine is prepared from fresh beef, soluble iron, and pure sherry wine, combined with choice aromatics.

At the meeting of the Aldborough Agricultural Society the following officers were elected for 1889 : President, H. B. Dickson ; vice-president, A. Campbell ; directors, S. B. Morris, D. McArthur, D. McLearn , Alex. McColl, J. Spencer, D. S. McColl, D. Walker, A. D. McGregor, J. McGregor: and A. Humphrey, secretary-treasurer, at a salary of $50. The society will hold their second spring show in April, and will likely have two days for the fall exhibition.

To make a paper interesting to the people they must take an interest in the paper. When you have company, go away, or return, let us know it. Every one turns to the personal column of a paper and are disappointed because there is so little in it. Why ? Because it is impossible for one or two persons to know about every one. Hand in any little item of news you may have aud you will be helping to please your neighbor.

The blizzard of Wednesday night caused great damage and loss of life. At Reading, Pa., a silk mill, in which 250 girls were at work, blew down just before the hour of quitting work. The loss of life is reported at 80. The number of injured is very large. A new four-story building was blown down at Pittsburg, Pa. with the loss of 15 lives and a large number wounded. The storm also caused great damage throughout Pennsylvania, New York and Ontario. The Niagara foot and passenger suspension bridge was blown down. A Michigan Central train running between Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Suspension Bridge narrowly escaped being wrecked by a falling tree, which struck the engine, but did no damage beyond knocking off the smokestack. Barns were unroofed, chimneys blown off, and in many instances buildings were totally demolished in parts of Ontario by the force of the storm.

THE GREAT CARNIVAL.—Tremendous interest is being taken in the approaching Carnival in Montreal. The Governor-General is to inaugurate the festivities and give the entire week's programme his patronage. State Governors, Lieut.-Governors and prominent people from all parts of the world are to view the spectacles. Letters are pouring in to the Committee from Europe and the United States enquiring for particulars. The Committee are making extraordinary preparations for a magnificent Carnival. Those who cannot go to Montreal for a week of wonderoer merriment will we hear, find the events in all their marvellous beauty reproduced in the Carnival Number of the Montreal STAR, which, it is said, will be a perfectly stunning number.

The man who finds fault with his newspaper when it is damp, is equally dissatisfied when it is dry.

Burdock Pills cure sick headache by regulating the stomach, liver and bowels.

The kingdom of Denmark runs the railroads within its jurisdiction. It employs men as track walkers and women as flaggers. The flagger and track walker on a section have to be married to each other. If a flagger die the bereaved track walker is given by law six weeks in which to find another wife, and if at the end of that time he is a widower he is discharged. In such cases there are very few failures of marriage.

LOGS WANTED.

ANY QUANTITY of First-class Elm Logs, 13 feet long, also a quantity of Basswood Bolts, 38 inches long.

HUMPIDGE & GRAHAM,
1-17 3 Dutton Stave Factory.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE

In the matter of Angus C. Graham, of the Village of Dutton, an insolvent.

PURSUANT to instructions from the creditors of the said Angus C. Graham there will be offered for sale by public auction the stock of furniture, etc., of the said debtor, at the premises lately occupied by him, in the Village of Dutton, on Friday, the 25th day of January, 1889, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. Inventory may be seen or had on application at my office,

A. J. LEITCH, Assignee.
Dutton, Jan. 16, 1889.—2

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to
1-17tf N. PHELPS.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head ; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing ; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass
Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered ; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

STRAYED.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF the undersigned, lot No. 1, con. 5, Dunwich, on or about the 1st Nov., 1888, a one-year-old steer. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges and take the animal away.

JOHN D. MCDIARMID.
Dutton, Jan. 14, 1889. 1-31

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

One hundred acres, being the North half of Lot 7, 2nd Con., Dunwich; 85 acres cleared. Good orchard, frame house, barn and stable. Also the job of clearing and fencing 50 or 100 acres on lot 6, 5th con., north of con. A, Dunwich. For farther particulars apply to JOHN C. MCRAE, Dutton. 2-14

NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Dunwich Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company will be held in Leitch's Hall, Dutton, on Saturday, January 26, 1889, at 1 p. m., for the purpose of receiving and passing the auditors' report, and appointing two directors to take the place of the two retiring, D. S. McColl, Eagle, and John Pearce, Tyrconnell. All interested in mutual insurance will do well to attend.

ANGUS PATTERSON, President. JOHN L. PEARCE, Secy.-Treas.
1-24d

$4 REWARD.

STRAYED from Lot 13, Con. 1, Dunwich, a steer of high grade Shorthorn breed ; color, red and white ; age, two years at Christmas ; nose, dark color ; it broke a horn off when a calf, showing the damage to horn yet. A reward of four dollars will be paid by the subscriber to any person giving such information as will lead to its recovery. R. COAD.
Ekfrid, Dec. 18, 1888.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

FOR SALE.

THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam ; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.

Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888 tf

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles southwest of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.
Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience. Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.
Apply to ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

YOU WILL FIND

Urlin Bros., Dutton,

AND

A. D. Urlin's, Wallacetown,

HEADQUARTERS FOR

HARDWARE, GROCERIES, BOOTS AND SHOES, &c.

NO LARGER, BETTER OR CHEAPER STOCK OF

GROCERIES

was ever shown in this section. Teas, Sugars, Syrups, Currants, Raisins, Dates and Figs, Candied Peels, Etc., Etc.

A CHOICE LOT OF CHINA AND GLASSWARE.

New Patterns in China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Vases, China Cups and Saucers, Mugs, and a Fine Lot of Fancy Goods that are Very Cheap.

Immense Stock of TOYS and Fancy Goods for the Children.

HARDWARE OF ALL KINDS.

Cow Ties, Crosscut Saws, Axes, Lanterns, and a Full Line of Carpenters' Tools. TINWARE of All Kinds.

A Job Lot of Table Knives and Forks at Half Price.

A Large Assortment of SILVER AND PLATED WARE. Cake and Cruet Stands, Pickle Dishes, Butter Dishes, Sugar Bowls, Spoon Holders, Cream Pitchers, and a choice lot of Fancy Goods which are both useful and ornamental.

—A FULL STOCK OF—

BOOTS & SHOES, OVERSHOES & RUBBERS

AT ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.

A call will convince you that you can get good value in every line we handle.
No trouble to show goods. Highest price paid for produce.

URLIN BROS., Dutton.

A. D. URLIN, Wallacetown.

REMOVAL

THE OFFICE OF THE

DUTTON ENTERPRISE

HAS BEEN REMOVED TO

BROWN'S BLOCK

Main Street.

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown....a.m.	8 08		9 47p.m	11 02
Rodney.....	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton a.m.....	9 0		10 29	1 00
Iona.....	29		....	1 26
Shedden	9 26		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't)	p.m 3 00	p.m 1 10		5 25
Shedden.....	3 24	....		6 01
Iona	3 32	....		6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58		6 34
Bismarck	4 00	....		7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15		7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35		9 15
Windsor.....	7 25	3 45		4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 6.15 p.m 4.55 p.m. and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ..	a. m. 9 55	p.m. 5 40
" Mixed	p.m. 3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 8.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arr. St. Thomas	9.30	2.50	8.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.
Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL 8—No. 5. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1889. WHOLE No. 369.

Professional Cards

Alex McKillop, M.D.

M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.

☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,

Barrister-at-Law,

Commissioner in the High Court.

☞ Money Loaned.

ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,

Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.

MONEY TO LOAN.

OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.

Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOA

At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.

RMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.

June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.

First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.

Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.

S. JOHN SCHULTE.

OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.

D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.

351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.

June 7. 1-yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,

Surgeon - Dentist,

Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,

SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,

Veterinary Surgeon,

DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.

W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS

For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.

F. A. Humpidge.

Satisfaction guaranteed.

Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on

tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

A. J. LEITCH,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
pb DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON,
LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
d DUTTON.

The Star Loan Company

181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.

G. C Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex

Mutual Fire Insurance Company,

LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887	2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887,	$2,044,242
ASSETS,	72,369,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.

BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!

Pumps! Pumps!!

To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.

Repairing Promptly Done.

I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.

Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.

Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY
IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glenco.

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do

Lumber Dressing of all Kinds

with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate

☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.

M. Cochrane.

January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a

General Line of Blacksmithing.

IN HORSESHOEING.

☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.

M. L. MILLAR.

Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS

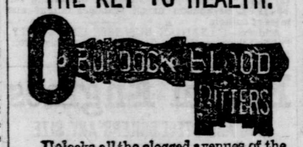
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.

First-class Tailoring

IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.

30,000 POUNDS

—OF—



WOOL WANTED

This season to stock our new mills at Union.

L. J. Willson & Co.

Feb. 4, 1888. tf

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow

-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.

C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.

Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

SALESMEN WANTED.

Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed. Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.

L. P. Thurston & Co.,

CANADA SOUTHERN DIV.

GOING EAST.

	Exp's	Mail	Exp's	Local
Ridgetown....a.m.	8 03		9 47	p.m 11 02
Rodney.....	8 38		10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50		....	12 33
Dutton a.m.....	9 0		19 29	1 00
Iona.....	2?		....	1 36
Shedden	9 36		....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05		11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

St. Thomas (dep't)	p.m 3 00	p.m 1 10	5 25
Shedden.....	3 24	....	6 01
Iona	3 32	....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor.....	7 25	3 45	4 30

Arrive in Buffalo 3.35 a.m., 15 p.m 4.55 p.m. and 8.05 p.m.

ST. CLAIR DIV.

	Arrive	Depart
St. Thomas—Express ..a. m.	9 55 p.m.	5 40
" Mixed ....p.m.	3 00	5 00

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

L've St. Thomas	a.m. 6.30	p.m. 6.00	a.m. 10.15
Ar. at London..	7.25	6.50	11.00

GOING SOUTH.

L've London ..	a.m. 6.50	p.m. 2.10	p.m. 7.40
Arv. St. Thomas	9.30	2.50	6.35

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR

Will clear out his ENTIRE STOCK to

MAKE ROOM

—FOR—

SPRING :-: IMPORTATIONS.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SECURE BARGAINS IN CLOTHING.

CALL AND SEE

J. C. HERTEL, Merchant Tailor.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE ENTERPRISE JOB DEPARTMENT

—HAS BEEN—

Thoroughly Refitted

And being under the management of a practical and competent job printer of long experience, we are prepared to turn out all classes of

Commercial and Poster Printing

On short notice and in the best style of the art.

ORDERS BY MAIL RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

BURDOCK PILLS
SUGAR COATED

A SURE CURE

FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROMPT IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE AID TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

FOR SALE.

THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.

Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.

March, 22, 1888. tf

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:

G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene I. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

Spring and Family Medicine

in use. "It beats all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "how

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

does sell." Prepared by

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

Dunwich Council.

Minutes of a meeting of the Municipal Council of the Township of Dunwich, held in Brown's Hall, Dutton, on Monday, Jan. 21st, 1889.

Council met in accordance with the provisions of the Statutes. The following persons having been elected at the municipal elections held January 7th, 1889, viz:—A. J. Leitch, reeve, Henry Garbutt, councillor for Ward No. 1; Robert Hine, councillor for Ward No. 2; Peter McCallum, councillor for Ward No. 3, and Duncan McLean, councillor for Ward No. 4.

All the members took the necessary declaration of office and of property qualification, after which the reeve took the chair and called the meeting to order.

The minutes of the last meeting of Council were read, approved of and signed.

Moved by Robert Hine, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that H. Garbutt be first deputy-reeve of Dunwich for the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that Robert Hine be appointed second deputy-reeve for the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that applications for the offices of assessor and collector for the year 1889 at a salary of $75 for assessor and $80 for collector, be received. Carried.

The Council adjourned one hour for dinner and after re-assembling it was Moved by Duncan McLean, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that C. St. Clair Leitch be appointed auditor to audit the accounts for the year ending 31st December, 1888. Lost.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by Robert Hine, that John D. Blue be appointed auditor for the year 1889. Carried.

The reeve appointed Henry Clay to act as the other auditor.

Moved by D. McLean, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that John Galbraith be appointed assessor for the year 1889. Lost.

Moved by Robert Hine, seconded by H. Garbutt, that A. N. Patterson be appointed assessor for the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by Robert Hine, that Andrew Goldie be appointed collector for the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by D. McLean, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that a cheque be granted to D. C. Clay for $70.10 to pay the Township's portion (being one-half) of witness fees in suit, Stalker vs. McMillan and Dunwich. Mr. McMillan to pay his portion to the said D. C. Clay, who shall on application pay to witnesses their fees, according to statement presented to this Council. Carried.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by Robert Hine, that a cheque be granted to W. H. Backus for $35 for building a bridge on the 9th concession. Carried.

Moved by Robert Hine, seconded by D. McLean, that the treasurer be instructed to accept $12 in advance from Chas. Doyle as license fee for billiard and pool tables for the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by Robert Hine, seconded by H. Garbutt, that in compliance with the recommendation of the arbitrators who formed S. S. No. 16, this Council agree to give a grant of $50 to assist such section, provided that the Government give said section a like amount, and that the reeve be appointed to lay the matter before the Government. Carried.

Moved by Peter McCallum, seconded by Robert Hine, that a committee be appointed, composed of A. J. Leitch and the mover, to settle the dispute between Dugald Murray and John Campbell, in reference to a road through Mr. Campbell's farm, said committee to meet on January 28th at 10 o'clock a.m, and that the clerk notify Mr. John Campbell to that effect. Carried.

Moved by D. McLean, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that this Council appoint Monday, the 27th day of May, 1889, as the date for holding the Court of Revision on the assessment roll, and that this Council do now adjourn to meet on the 18th day of March.

Elgin County Council.

The Elgin County Council for 1889 commenced Tuesday afternoon at the court house, St. Thomas. Following is the list of those composing it, with the exception of Aylmer, the Councillors of which are not elected:

Aldborough—J. J. Stalker, reeve; D. McGregor, first deputy; — Macdougall, second.

Dunwich—A. J. Leitch, reeve; H. Garbutt, first deputy: R. Hine, second.

Southwold—D. Turner, reeve; Thos. Jackson, first deputy; R. R. Cranston, second.

Yarmouth—W. O. Pollock, reeve; B. F. Hathaway, first deputy; C. A. Brower, second; W. L. Bailey, third.

Malahide—B. F. Dancey, reeve; J. Richardson, first deputy; M. E. Lyon, second.

Bayham — H. T. Godwin, reeve; Geo. Best, first deputy; W. Backhouse, second.

South Dorchester—A Cline, reeve, W. McCreadie, deputy.

Port Stanley—M. Payne, reeve.

Vienna—John Teall, reeve.

Springfield—W. Kirkley, reeve.

The council assembled at 1.15, when, after final business, the election of warden was proceeded with, Mr. H. T. Godwin, reeve of Bayham, being elected on the 15th ballot.

Milburn's beef, iron and wine is prepared from fresh beef, soluble iron, and pure sherry wine, combined with choice aromatics.

Elgin Division Grange.

Elgin Division Grange met in the Court House, St. Thomas, on Thursday when the following granges were represented;—Apple Grove, 166; Gordon, 260; Forest Rose, 77; Lorne, 98; and Union, 448. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were received and adopted, showing a balance in hand of $105.75. The resolutions passed at the last meeting were confirmed. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Master, James Glen, Glanworth; overseer, James Muirison, Dutton; secretary; Jabel Robinson, Middlemarch; lecturer, Samuel McColl, Cowal; chaplain, Arch. H. Duncanson, Dutton; treasurer, B. F. Hathaway, Union; steward, John Blewit, St. Thomas; assistant steward, Wm. Prangley, St. Thomas; Ceres, Mrs. Robinson; Pomona, Mrs. McBane; Flora, Sister Robinson; lady assistant steward, Mrs. Lindsay; executive committee, Muirison, Hathaway and Blewitt.

The secretary was instructed to write to the neighboring Division Granges with a view to arrange for the annual picnic in June.

The report of the Committee on Legislation of the Dominion Grange was taken up and discussed at length. It was unanimously resolved to press the following questions on the Legislature,

The amendment to the Ditches and Watercourses Act, so that two competent farmers with the engineer's decision, shall be final;

The reduction of the number of members forming the county council;

The amendment eo the Assessment Law, so that mortgage and bank and other stocks shall pay a fair share of taxation;

That rural schools shall be made more effective, and that mutual fire insurance companies shall have the power to issue policies for five years, if they think proper.

Grange adjourned to meet on the third Thursday in March.

Literary Societies.

The High School Literary Society holds its regular meetings every Friday evening. At the last meeting there was a large attendance, and a good programme had been prepared, but, owing to the absence of several of those who were to take part, was not fully carried out. The next evening's programme promises to be an unusually interesting one and it will repay anyone well to attend. Following is the programme for to-morrow evening:—Reading, John Patton; essay, A. E. Leitch; Music, Jas. Tremeer, B. A.; debate, "Resolved, that the Indian has suffered more than the Negro at the hands of the white man, "affirmative—C. Patterson and D. G. McPherson, negative—D. F. McRae and D. G. Ruthven, music, J. W. Wilson; dialogue, J. McKillop, J. Milloy and D. F. McRae; payer—Retaliator—C. E. Knight, editor; critics, Jno. Gillies and Miss K. McCallum; music, Glee Club.

Last Thursday evening the young people of Knox Church met for the purpose of forming a society for mutual improvement and assisting in church work. There was a large attendance and much interest was taken in the matter. After a few preliminary remarks by the pastor the work of organizing and electing of officers was proceeded with. The society will be known as the Young People's Christian Advance Society, and has officers as follows:—Hon. president, Rev. T. Wilson; president, C. St. Clair Leitch; 1st vice-president, Miss M. Hollingshead; 2nd vice president, R. Sutherland; secretary, H O'Malley; treasurer, Miss F. McIntyre; council, W. Hollingshead, Miss Ada Black, A. N. Patterson, Miss A. McIntyre, Jno. McNeil, Miss K. McPherson and Malcolm McArthur. The society starts with a good membership and is sure to be a source of much pleasure and profit to its members. The following is the programme prepared for the first regular meeting, to be held Tuesday evening January 29th: Music, Misses McIntyre and Hollingshead; inaugural address, president; reading, Miss K. McPherson; hymn, Society; address, Rev. T. Wilson, essay on Shakespere, H. O'Malley; debate, "Resoeled, that the reading of fiction is morally and intellecttally beneficial," affirmative, R. Sutherland and Colin Patterson, negative, M. McArthur and J. R. Wilson; reading, Miss F. McIntyre; quartette, Misses A. McIntyre and M. Hollingshead, Messrs. Hollingshead and Saunders; critic, Miss Belle Patterson.

A portion of the Montreal ice palace was blown down last Thursday.

Wilson's oatmeal mill at Fergus was destroyed by fire Saturday morning.

A French policeman arrested three men, and, not having the handcuffs to secure them, he just cut off their suspender buttons. Their hands were thus occupied, and they couldn't run away, so they were marched safely to prison.

Toronto is still good. When tramps go there to the House of Industry, in the "casual ward"—has not that the full flavor of the vicious English pauper system?—they are supplied with a bed, blankets, pillow, towel, night-shirt and slippers. How many honest, industrious workingmen are there in Toronto, struggling to keep body and soul together, who cannot boast of such accommodation? But Toronto is "good"—for the tramps.—London Advertiser.

A FATAL ATTACK.—A fatal attack of croup is a frequent occurrence among children. Every household should be guarded by keeping Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It breaks up colds, coughs, croup, asthma and bronchitis in a remarkable manner.

Cowal.

A Woman's Missionary Society was organized in connection with the Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening. Miss Rogers, of London, President of the society, was present. A delegation from this place goes to London this week.

The annual congregational meeting of the Presbyterian Church of this place will be held on Friday next at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Fultz, of Bear Lake, Mich., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Turner.

Last Tuesday evening as Arch Stacey was getting his horse shod in McKenzie's blacksmith shop a goat-skin robe was stolen from his rig. Two young men named Nathaniel Beach and Emerson Walker, of Middlemiss, were observed to pass through the village and were suspected of the theft. Arch. had a warrant sworn out before A. A. Campbell, J. P., of Southwold, and placed it in Detective Miller's hands. He and Miller drove to Middlemiss about midnight and arrested both men and found the robe upstairs in Walker's house. The accused were taken to St. Thomas next morning and arraigned before P. M. Leonard and remanded until Tuesday of this week. Detective Miller has been in the village, subpœnaing witnesses on the case.

There will be a rousing wedding on the gore on Wednesday evening if nothing happens to prevent it. Particulars will be given next week.

Iona.

Misses Lizzie McIntyre and Mary McCallum are visiting in Bismarck.

Mr. Wm. Fletcher, our popular mail carrier, has become the father of another bouncing boy.

The Free-will Baptists are making great preparations for their entertainment to-night.

Dances are all the rage at present in our neighborhood. No less than four last week.

Messrs. J. Lumley and A. Preston, of Manistee, Mich., are here visiting their old friends.

Miss Stark, milliner, left last week for her home at Hensall. She intends returning in the spring, and will open out a large stock.

Wallacetown.

The twenty-ninth annual meeting of the West Elgin Agricultural Society was held at this place last Wednesday for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. A large number of the members were present. The affairs of the society were quietly discussed and the meeting was proceeding very harmoniously till it came to the election of the president, which caused more than a little excitement. The nominees were Mr. L. W. McIntyre and Dr. Ling. After a warm discussion of the respective abilities of the candidates the former was declared elected by a vote of 27 to 21. Mr. Alex. McCallum was appointed secretary in place of Mr. D. Campbell, resigned. Messrs. P. Cameron and J. R. Gow were appointed auditors.

The concert which was held in this place on Thursday, Jan. 17, in aid of St. Peter's Church Sunday School was a decided success. Excellent music was furnished by Prof. Wright and his German Choral Band. Rev. Jas. Chance, incumbent, acted as chairman in his usual entertaining manner. The programme consisted of dialogues and recitations by the S. S. scholars.

Mr. D. P. McColl, our late teacher, is attending Toronto University.

Our public school attendance is over 100, Mr. J. R. Patton having 56 in his room.

Concert at Wallacetown.

The concert, of which notice was given in the last issue of the ENTERPRISE, was duly held in the handsome and commodious school house at Wallacetown on Thursday evening last, and the prediction added to the notice that "a good time might be expected" was verified in a superlative degree. The roads, owing to the pouring rain on the day and night previous, were very muddy, but the weather was fine and the air was just frosty enough to render it bracing and exhilarating. The sky was clear and the moon shed forth its silvery light in all the rich plentitude of its brilliancy and glory, and the house was well filled with an appreciative audience, but room could have been found for at least one more from Dutton, Wallacetown or Tyrconnell, who had "any music in his soul which could be moved with concord of sweet sounds," as saith the poet, and on the same illustrious authority, "such an one only is worthy of esteem and trust."

The members of the Choral are of German origin—from that great country which produced the heroic reformer and master-singer, Martin Luther, and also the most brilliant constellation of mighty composers, Handel, Hrydon, Mozart, Beethoven and Mendelsohn—and they seem to have inherited largely the power of vocal music, and under their able conductor, Professor Wright, they gave an excellent concert. The performance of some parts of the programme elicited the most rapturous applause from the audience, and the demands for encores, expressed by voices and by hands and feet, were deafening almost.

At intervals, and in order to give the members of the choir rest, there were recitations by Masters Willie and Leslie Pearce, sacred music by the Misses Bertha Fraine and Eva Pearce, led on the organ by Mrs. B. Sifton, and the ever memorable invitation of the Saviour to little children was sweetly and admirably rendered by the clergyman and his wife and Miss Eva Pearce, who stood between them on the platform. Addresses were given, both instructive and interesting, by Drs. Ruthven and Ling, who elegantly commended the members of the Choir and their conductor. The concert was a success financially, inasmuch as the proceeds or receipts met the requirement of the object for which it was held; but strictly speaking that was not the only object in view. There was another object aimed at, and that was to afford the means for an evening's enjoyment of the sweet charms of music, and no one who has a soul for music will deny its consoling and charming power. All those who attended the concert found it good to be there and expressed a hearty desire for it to be repeated. It was concluded with the national anthem and the benediction, pronounced by the chairman, the Rev. James Chance.

The members of the German Choral Choir, about seventeen in number, partook of tea before the concert and afterwards of substantial supper at the house of Mr. J. L. Pearce, and both Mr. Pearce and his estimable wife are deserving of all praise for their great kindness and noble hospitality.

A Bad Boy.

"Say young feller," said Johnny Swisher to the gentleman who was calling on his sister, "did you notice me rush into the parlor to night where you and Lizzie was sittin' and say 'I'm very much obliged to you, Sister Lizzie, for sewing that suspender button on so nicely,' just like that; and then Sis got red and looked confused, and said I oughtn't to speak of such things before company—did you take notice of it?"

"Oh, yes, I remember the little incident very well."

"Well, I just thought I would step around and tell you that there wasn't no suspender button sewed on nor nuthin' of the kind."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, I was to get a quarter for coming in and sayin' that, and when I asked for the money she said she didn't have any change. As I rather looked on it as a cash transaction, and you always treated me pretty good, I thought I'd put you on to the scheme and maybe it would save you trouble in the future."

And the young man thoughtfully put his hand in his pocket and gave Johnny half a dollar.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

The Dominion treasury shows a surplus of $4,250,000 at the close of the six months ending December 31.

Matthew Jones, a man of 56, was yesterday convicted of arson at Sarnia and given a life sentence in the Kingston penitentiary.

Prof. Goldwin Smith has written a letter to a Conservative M. P. in England in which he warns the party against adopting woman suffrage.

So far the number of private bills to come before the next session of the Dominion Parliament is 64, not including eight applications for divorce.

Chief Justice Taylor, of Manitoba, set aside a sale of land for taxes, on the ground that municipalities cannot recover interest on taxes in arrear.

It is understood that during 1889 the newspapers taken by various Government departments in Ottawa will be greatly reduced in numbers.

A little life was put into the C. P. R. arbitration at Ottawa yesterday in the cross-examination of Sir John Macdonald and Hon. Mr. Pope.

Advices from Rome state that the Archbishop of Ottawa and other Canadian Church dignitaries were received at the Vatican with marked distinction.

The bill of costs in the Ayer case had been taxed, and the amount that the Dominion Government has to pay is $4,930, of which $1,300 are for counsel fees.

The different candidates for municipal honors in the town of Aylmer met on Thursday, and by "head or tail" with a coin elected the mayor and council.

Owing to navigation being still practicable in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the Department of Marine has ordered that the usual lights shall be continued until further orders.

It is stated that the judges of the Supreme Court prepared elaborate judgments on the Manitoba crossing case, which can be had on application by any of the parties to the suit.

The police of Montreal are troubled about tramps, who have quadrupled in number within ten years, Over 8,000 men and women have sought refuge at the station houses of the city this year.

The Railway Committee of the Privy Council at Ottawa decided that the crossings of the C. P. R. by the Portage la Prairie extension should be put in and maintained at the expense of the Province of Manitoba.

The Customs returns for the month of December, 1888, at the port of Toronto amounted to the sum of $242,698 40, as compared with $263 921.12 for the corresponding month in 1887, or a decrease of $21,222.72

Mr. Gustave Gaser, representative of the Berlin "National Zeitung," is at present in Ottawa, for the purpose of comparing the climate of this country with that of Siberia. He is greatly impressed with the mildness of the weather here.

Mr. Justice Rose, in the case of Gooderham & Worts v. the C. P. R. Company, decided that the company has not power to give notice to expropriate 221 feet, as they seek to do, in making their entrance into Toronto by the east and south.

Sir A. A. Dorion, Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, Montreal, in ordering the release of the girl Trempe, who has been confined in a convent for three years under an order from the Recorder, said that the statute which gave that official such summary jurisdiction without the intervention of a jury was atrocious.

AMERICAN.

The alleged cotton bagging trust in St. Louis is dead. The price of bagging has fallen two cents.

A man at Huntington, Ind., has started a "skunkery." He says it pays to raise skunks for their skins and oil.

It is estimated that there has been a decrease of $15,000,000 in the United States public debt during December.

The National Convention of Coloured Catholics, the first ever held in the United States, was opened in Washington on Tuesday.

The St. Louis flour mills with one exception, closed down yesterday, in accordance with the decision of the Milwaukee convention.

Rev. F. Israel, pastor of the first Unitarian church at Salem, Mass., committed suicide in his church on Saturday evening by cutting his throat.

There is intense excitement in Southern California over the reported discovery of rich gold deposits, and immense crowds are rushing to the new diggings.

Evictions are proceeding at a lively rate in Kansas, the soldiers vigorously assisting in driving off the squatters just as if the State were an Irish farm.

Lumbermen are being discharged in large numbers both in Michigan and Minnesota owing to the absence of snow, which renders work in the woods impossible.

During 1888 there were 330 accidents in and about the collieries of the Scranton, Pa., districts. Of these 72 were fatal, making 31 widows and 121 orphans.

Besides the 2,800 all-night bakers in Philadelphia, there are 1,400 male and female workers in twenty-two steam bakeries for the making of cakes, crackers, and knick-knacks.

The Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railroad Company propose building a line from Fargo, Dakota, to connect with the south-western branch of the Canadian Pacific railway.

The feeling is very bitter in Hayti against the Americans for enforcing the surrender of the Haytian Republic, and threats are indulged in against United States citizens in the island.

Dr. Kate Bushnell on Saturday lectured before the Women's Temperance Union in Chicago, and described from personal experience the cruelties and crimes of the pinery dives of Wisconsin.

Before a gathering of Methodist ministers in Minneapolis yesterday Rev. James Door read a paper on "Christian Science," in which he pronounced the faith cure to be a "prodigious fraud."

The British steamer Montana was run into and sunk by the German steamer Main on Saturday near North Point, off Baltimore. Engineer Young, of the Montana, was killed, the rest of the crew were saved by the Main.

Four of the seven original founders of the Knights of Labour have issued a circular in Philadelphia stating that the present organization has departed from the original designs of the order, and proposing a convention to mend matters.

Representative Baker, of New York, contemplates introducing a bill to impose a duty on the product of Canadian nurseries entering the States, because, he contends, notwithstanding such products are admitted free from each country into the other, the Canadian authorities have placed such restrictions on the American articles as to virtually amount to prohibition.

FOREIGN.

The Pope has sent to Ireland a number of gifts which have been specially blessed.

Eight persons have been drowned by floods at Castlemaine, in the Colony of Victoria.

The peasants in the vicinity of Domferaghy, County Donegal, are arming to resist eviction.

Copious rains have fallen in South Australia, putting an end to the distressing drought.

Two summonses have been served on William O'Brien for inciting tenants not to pay rents.

Emperor William, replying yesterday to a congratulatory deputation, predicted peace during 1889.

Ninety-six thousand Germans emigrated from the Fatherland, chiefly to the States, during the past year.

The greater part of the village of Brano, in Switzerland, has been destroyed by a fire started by a madman.

General Boulanger expresses confidence that Paris will elect him to the vacant seat in the Chamber of Deputies.

Snow continues to fall heavily in Southern Russia. Odessa is ice-bound and several trains have been snowed under.

Severe storms have prevailed in Southern Russia, and 200 persons are reported to have been frozen or lost in the snow.

Two Italian Engineer officers, disguised as stonemasons, have been arrested in Russia with plans of fortifications in their pockets.

Prince Murat, a Lieutenant of Dragoons, who retired from France with the other Orleans princes, has been reinstated in the army.

Uneasiness is felt at Panama regarding the position of the canal company, and discorders are feared as a result of the stoppage of work.

One of Osman Digna's lieutenants has deserted his leader, and states that Emin Bey is a prisoner at Khartoum, where he is well treated.

A deputation waited on Lord Salisbury yesterday to urge the adoption of a comprehensive scheme for the defence of the British mercantile ports.

The number of policemen detailed to protect Mr. Balfour has been increased, in consequence of a report that the Invincibles are planning to murder him.

A letter from the Pope was read in the Irish Catholic churches yesterday sympathising with the Irish people in their present suffering and praising their fortitude.

A snow blockade in Russia resulted in the death of fourteen persons and severe injury to twenty others from frost. A relief party lost their way and were also frozen to death.

Four hundred million pounds sterling is the amount of capital invested in joint stock enterprises as registered in London during 1888. This is more than double the amount or 1887.

According to the gossip of the bar, the Parnell Commission costs precisely three guineas a minute. This calculation includes the whole expenditure of all the parties concerned, the State included.

Resistance to the evicting forces on the Olphert estates, in Donegal, very nearly culminated in a bloody battle, as the defenders had rifles, and would have used them but for the intervention of the priests.

Several arrests have been made in connection with the recent accident to the Czar's train, the belief prevailing that the disaster was the result of a conspiracy between railway officials and the Nihilists.

What gives special importance to Mr. Harrington's six months' imprisonment is the fact that the Parnellites will be deprived of his assistence during the remainder of the commission sittings. Mr. Labouchere intends bringing the matter up in Parliament.

Emperor William has raised much hostile criticism by conferring the order of the Black Eagle upon Herr Von Puttkamer, formerly Minister of the Interior, but dismissed by Emperor Frederick and recognized through-out Germany as a hateful type of the "junker" bureaucracy.

Some time since the Cologne Gazette published the statement that Sir Robert Morier while Ambassador to Berlin furnished information to Marshal Bazaine regarding the movement of Prussian troops during the war of 1870. Sir Robert denied this, and, submitting a strong refutation of the story, asked Count Herbert Bismarck to take action in the matter. Count Bismarck refused in a letter which degrades diplomacy and brings disgrace upon the name he bears.

WHAT IS WATER?

Simple Principles Worth Re-examining.

Water is the only drink provided by nature for man and other animals. No animal but man uses any other.

In all animals provided with a stomach for receiving food water is the medium by which the materials of nutrition are conveyed to all parts of the body.

Water is the medium by which the waste material of the body is carried away. Water flushes the system, cleansing and washing away impurities, bathes every tissue, and dissolves and removes the products of tissue metamorphosis.

Sir John Ross and other Arctic navigators testify that exclusive water-drinkers endure the rigors and withstand the diseases of the frigid zone better than any other persons.

Considering that water, taken into the stomach, is quickly absorbed into the current of the blood and circulated through the body, its absolute purity is a matter of vital importance.

Water from reservoirs, streams and wells should never be used for drinking purposes without first filtering and then boiling it. Pure water can be kept pure for several days it put in air-tight bottles, and may be kept cool by putting the bottles in the ice-box until required for use. Ice, on account of its impurity, should never be placed in drinking water.

River and brook water is a mixture of rain and spring water; it always holds in suspension a greater or less amount of decomposing animal and vegetable matter.

Well water is generally impregnated with earthy salts, especially bicarbonate and sulphate of lime. Horses and cattle have a natural repugnance to hard water, and will drink out of a turbid or muddy pool provided the water is soft, in preference to drinking the cleanest hard water. Lake water is generally very impure, being a collection of rain, river and spring water, contaminated with animal and vegetable impurities.

Spring water only differs from rain water in having percolated through the earth and having, during its passage, either imparted some of its particles to the soil or taken up soluble matter from the soil.

Marsh water is similar to lake water, but still more loaded with offensive and putresent organic matters.

Pure water, and pure water only, should be used for drinking purposes.—[Dr. Alex. M. Ross, Toronto.

REPENTED TOO LATE.

A Sad Spectacle Witnessed in the Chicago Court of Insane Enquiry.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—The stories of the horrors suffered by unfortunate girls in the dance house stockades in Northern Wisconsin were recalled by a scene in the Court of Insane Enquiry this morning. A slight and handsome young girl, dressed in black, was led in. Hattie Nathan was her name, so the doctor told Judge Prendergast. He said her ailment was acute manis. As he spoke the prisoner glanced behind her and cowered in her chair, muttering "Save me; they are after me, I hear them barking and the men are right behind them."

Hattie Nathan was the daughter of parents who live in Oconto, Wis. She was a wayward girl and got into trouble, which resulted in her entering one of the brothels near Marinette. She soon realized the horrors of her position, and made repeated but unsuccessful attempts to escape, with the result that she became demented. Then she was released. She next appeared at the door of a house of ill repute in this city and was cared for. She has remained there since, being rational a portion of the time. Of late her dementia has been more acute, and the result was to-day's proceedings. She will be sent back to her home in Oconto.

The floods in the South of France have caused enormous damage.

Prince Bismarck's health is again causing a good deal of anxiety.

The London papers administer some hard blows to Count Herbert Bismarck for the course he pursued in regard to Sir R. D. Morier.

The Athaletic Craze.

Athletic sport is of course the "craze" of the day, the popular idol to which the popular knee is bent with great readiness and every sincere homage. And the "craze" is, within certain limitations, a very sensible one As idols go, the idol of Athleticism is a much more respectable individual, than Mammon is, or Venus or Bacchus. The day has passed when sneers can be heard from any one whose opinions are worth anything, against proper physical development or even muscularity. A big head and spindle shanks is now considered rather a deformity than otherwise, and men more generally than ever they did recognize the advantages of having the sanum corpus as the basis of the vana mens. It is perhaps coming to be too much the case in some quarters to look after the body too exclusively, on the plea apparently that if that is done the mind will look after itself. This tendency to extravagance is the reason why some college professors for instance have set themselves the somewhat thankless task of acting as a breakwater against the current of athleticism which threatens to overflow its banks and swamp things which are much more valuable. Quite apart from this, however, here is a marked tendency towards degeneracy in amateur athletics at the present day The athletic auf klarung which has served a good purpose would seem to have outlived the period of its highest usefulness, and to be settling down to something almost ominously unsatisfactory. As with so much else it is the gambling spirit that has crept in and is proving a deplorable curse. The London Field says on this point:—

To whatever cause may be ascribed the serious retrogression in amateur athletics that is everywhere apparent, the fact remains that a point has been reached in the downward course which these sports cannot pass without danger of becoming disreputable. Many who are interested in the maintenance of athletic pursuits are keenly alive to the deterioration which the last few years have produced in the amateur, and to the fact that a crisis cannot be far distant. It is one thing, however, to recognize the evil and another to devise an efficient remedy. . . .

And still further in the same connection it observes:—

The open betting that is now permitted to go on at so many athletic meetings is in thorough accord with the downward tendency to be observed in other directions. That this is demoralizing in the extreme, especially to the young competitors, cannot be doubted, and that it is deliberately tolerated by the promoters of meetings is equally certain, as the betting men are well known in most cases, and the law has but to be enforced to put a stop to the practice. That many amateurs, especially those in the North and Midlands run under bookmakers' orders, is also well known.

These evils are not confined to England, for Mr. William B Curtis, a veteran athlet in America, was recently interviewed, and expressed himself seriously alarmed at certain tendencies in athletic circles on this side of the water. Though open betting, in his opinion, has not yet attained serious proportions, there is one evil threatening American amateur sport, and that is, to use Curtis' own words, "the practical purchase of athletes by the larger clubs.' The system which allows this is very demoralizing in Mr. Curtis' opinion, inasmuch as, to use his own words again,

"It not only makes a liar and hypocrite out of the athlete, but it discourages and frequently breaks up the smaller clubs. Why? The smaller clubs are not able to support their champions in idleness, so when the inducements of the richer organizations come to their notice they join the latter, and the smaller clubs thus not only being constantly poor in money but kept poor in athletic ability as well, they soon give up the struggle and disband. There is in New York city to-day an athletic club, few in the number of its members and wealth in pocket, which could, in a contest against the world in the competitions of the American championship programme, win that title if the athletes which it developed and have been stolen from it by richer clubs were returned."

All this of course is somewhat disheartening, but not more so than might have been expected. The athletic revival of some years ago, was induced by an unintelligent depreciation of physical exercise, which worked out its own revenge in an excessive glorification of athletic pursuits. There is always sure to be a period of retrogression in such cases. Sport, for its own sake, is found to lose attractiveness, and the tendency comes to be towards a lower standard of morals and social position in those prominently connected with it. There is no good reason why this should be so, but the facts seem nevertheless to point in that direction, and the American and English testimony already quoted, bears witness to it. Nevertheless we do not believe that there will be any permanent retrogression from the position already taken by the intelligence of the world regarding the propriety, the necessity, indeed, of proper physical training. The very reverse is true. Everything goes to show that men and women everywhere are becoming alive to the dangers which follow the custom of excessive mental forcing, and are taking steps to have muscular fibre harmoniously developed step by step with the development of nervous tissue. Only in that way can a really noble type of manhood and womanhood ever be realized.

Farmers in Dakota Without Clothes and Starving.

FARGO, Dak., Jan. 6.—A letter from Rev. C. W. Riches, Park river, Dakota, conveys the first authentic information of the extreme sufferings and privation among the Norwegian settlers in Western Walsh county. Men with the relief party report that they found about seventy families in about as destitute circumstances as it is possible for human beings to be and still exist. Many were found with barely enough clothing to cover their nakedness, and that of the thinnest material. Shoes were almost unknown. These farmers have lived on their little capital until nothing remained. Most of them have been living on a kind of porridge made by cooking frozen green wheat and oats, stuff not fit to feed a hog. One family had not seen any flour for six weeks. The people have been dividing with each other their potatoes until now they are gone too.

A Bank Thief's Haul.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—A very cool robbery took place at the Banque Ville Marie in Hull at noon the other day. During the temporary absence of the manager in Montreal two clerks were left in charge of the bank. Between the hours of twelve and one, while one of the clerks was at dinner, a man stepped into the bank and threw down an envelope on the counter, stating that it contained $40, which he wished to deposit. The clerk after counting it said that the parcel contained only $38 The stranger insisted that it contained $40. Just then a little girl entered the bank and told the clerk that the priest wanted to speak to him. The clerk went outside to speak to the clergyman and on returning in about half a minute found that the stranger had disappeared by the back door. On examination he found that $7,600 had been abstracted from a drawer. It is supposed that the little girl and the thief were in collusion. The money taken was all in bank bills.

The Russian czarina, though nearly forty years of age, has still a girlish appearance; her sparkling eyes and her joyful smile, her elastic figure, her graceful and yet natural movements, as she shows them when dancing, all combine to impress her with that stamp of youthfulness rare at her time of life. And how she laughs—so heartily, so loud, so naturally, that she herself seems now and then to think it almost frivolous, when a bashful red at once covers her face, and makes her look still more like a big girl or an overgrown child.

LATE CABLE NEWS

The Epidemic of Murder—Crusade Against Feeing on Atlantic Lines—An Unpleasant Superstition.

It is sad to have to say so, but murder in its most unattractive shape is becoming positively fashionable in Britain. Stories of wanton butchery come from all parts of England, to help the sale of the London newspapers and increase the growing panic. The British maiden is fairly hysterical, the matron chronically faint, the steady Briton painfully worried in his mind, while the citizen with tendencies not law abiding gives daily evidence of the spirit of emulation which fires him.

A review of the list of crimes, apparently foundered on the Whitechapel series, would be useless. Through very imperfect imitations these crimes all recall those of Whitechapel, through the unvarying success displayed by the murderers in keeping clear of the simple-minded English detectives. A man who strangled a woman at Poplar is still at liberty to plan improvements on his presumably first attempt. So is the cowardly brute who killed and mutilated a little boy at Havant, and the murderer who killed another boy seven years old at Bradford under such horrible circumstances, and a lot more.

A crusade has broken out in the newspapers against the fees paid to stewards on the trans-atlantic ships. Excited correspondents are very numerous who tell how much they had to pay for having things brought to them in their cabin, and for having their wives looked after when ill. The companies are accused of underpaying or not paying the stewards, and so practically pocketing the ten shilling pieces extorted from their passengers.

A curiously unpleasant peasant superstition has just been revealed at a trial in southern Russia, which ended in the conviction of four peasants for the murder of a girl 11 years old. The superstition recalls that about thieves' candles narrated in connection with the Whitechapel murders. These peasants, it seems, were believers in the superstition that candles made of human fat rendered the bearers invisible. To obtain these articles they first attempted to murder a boy in a forest. They next tried to kill an old peasant, thirdly a Russian clergyman, and being disturbed on all three occasions they at last succeeded in murdering Sukena Cherkaschina. With the fat from the child's body they made candles and with their help attempted to commit a robbery. The light of the candles betrayed their doings, and on being arrested they confessed everything. The evidence in court showed the belief in the thieves' candle superstition to be very widespread in Russia.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Crawshay, of Brecon, Wales, has placed in the hands of William Rossetti the sum of $12,000, the income from which is to be used annually as a prize to the woman who shall pass the best examination in the writings of Byron, Keats, and Shelley.

It is said that Alexandre Dumas lives strictly by measure and weight. He rises at half-past 6 in summer and 7 in winter. His first breakfast invariably consists of a glass of milk. The second, which he takes at noon, is a very plain meal. Dinner occurs exactly at 7 o'clock, and by 10 he is in bed. He walks three miles every day, and never works after 4 in the afternoon, and he is a strong and thoroughly healthy man.

To an Englishman who lately visited him Mr. Whittier expressed his surprise that his guest should know so much of his poetry by heart. "I wonder," he said, "thou shouldst burden thy memory with all that rhyme. It is not well to have too much of it; better get rid of it as soon as possible. Why, I can't remember any of it. I once went to hear a wonderful orater, and he wound up his speech with a poetical quotation, and I clapped with all my might. Some one touched me on the shoulder and said, "Do you know who wrote that?" I said, "No, I don't; but it's good." It seems I had written it myself. The fault is, I have written far too much. I wish half of it was in the Red Sea."

Mrs. Mary E. Brown, wife of a New York broker, has a wonderful collection of musical instruments, which is probably the largest, most complete and valuable owned by any woman in the world. She had been years gathering them together, but they now number several hundred and represent all the races of the globe. There are Chinese gongs; flutes, drums, bells and the little stringed san hsien, which the singing women make music with in the flower-boats on the rivers when folk come forth to float on the water in the cool of the evening. All the instruments of Japan, too. The sonoroto, which is played at the wedding feasts, and the tinkling samise that the moon-eyed Yum-Yums play in the tea-gardens under the flowering peach trees, with their many other resonant wind and stringed instruments. The vina is another woman's instrument and comes from India, being made of a stringed sounding board fastened on two small gourds to increase the resonance. The dayadere puts one of these close up under her left arm, the other on the waist at the right side, and with the instrument thus held diagonally across her bosom she wanders through the country making her plaintive music at temple and tope. There are besides instruments from Burmah, Corea, Turkey, Arabia, Persia, Africa, North America, Mexico, Central and Southern America and Europe.

Laurence Oliphant, the writer, who died recently, was a remarkable traveller, and during his youth a daring adventurer. His first journey was to Ceylon, his father having been appointed Chief Justice in 1838. Just before the Crimean war he travelled through Russia.

His first visit to this country was made in the capacity of Private Secretary to the Earl of Elgin, who was then Governor-General of Canada. He was made Superintendent of Indian affairs and he also assisted Lord Elgin in negotiating the Reciprocity treaty of 1852. He tired, however, of the peacefulness of mere diplomatic employments, and began a systematic exploration of the United States and Central America. During these trips he fell in with Walker the Nicaraguan filibuster, and joined his forces. He was, however, captured before he entered serious warfare by a British man-of-war. The Admiral in command proved to be Oliphant's cousin and he was released without much difficulty. He accompanied Omar Pasha in a campaign as a war correspondent. He went with Lord Elgin to China and Japan in 1857, and in 1861, while acting as Charge d'Affaires in Japan, he was nearly cut to pieces by assassins. He saw the whole of the Schleswig-Holstein war and penetrated to the camps of the Polish insurgents. He left the diplomatic service in 1862.

He was in Parliament in 1865, but he was not prepared to settle down. He became interested in a religious reformatory movement conducted by Thomas S. Harris, and came with him to Portland, N. Y., where he stayed for several years. His last travels were in the East.

Rheumatic Pains

Require no description, since, with rare exception, all at some time have experienced their twinges. Rheumatism is not easily dislodged, only the most powerfully penetrating remedies reach to its very foundations. The most successful treatment known, and it is now frequently resorted to by medical men, is the application of that now famous remedy for pain—Polson's Nerviline. It is safe to say that nothing yet discovered has afforded equal satisfaction to the suffering. A trial can be made at a small cost, as sample bottles of Nerviline can be had at the drug stores for 10 cents, large bottles 25 cents.

Better Things.

Better to smell the violet cool than sip the glowing wine;
Better to hark a hidden brook than watch a diamond shine.

Better the love of a gentle heart than beauty's favor proud;
Better the rose's living seed than roses in a crowd.

Better to love in loneliness than to bask in love all day;
Better the fountain in the heart than the fountain by the way.

Better to feed by a mother's hand than eat alone at will;
Better to trust in God than say, "My goods my storehouse fill."

Better to be a little wise than in knowledge to abound;
Better to teach a child then toil to fill perfection's round.

Better to sit at a Master's feet than thrill a listening State;
Better suspect that thou art proud than be sure that thou art great.

Better to walk the real unseen than watch the how's event;
Better the "Well done" at the last, than the air with shouting rent.

Better to have a quiet grief than a hurrying delight;
Better the twilight of the dawn then the noonday burning bright.

Better a death when work is done than earth's most favored birth;
Better a child in God's great house than the king of all the earth.

—[GEORGE MACLONALD.

"Why Do I Suffer So

with headache and vertigo, doctor? I have a bad cough, too, and dull aches under the shoulder-blades; I'm losing weight, and am bilious all the time." The courteous physicians answers: "If you inquire what is the cause of all this mischief, it is a torpid liver. That organ, you are aware, is the largest gland in the body, and its office is to carry off the waste of the system. When it fails to do its proper work, the refuse of the body is re-absorbed and goes circulating round and round in the blood, poisoning, not nourishing the tissues. But why you continue to suffer in this way I am at a loss to understand, since Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery would give prompt relief, and future immunity from such attacks."

If explorer Stanley is alive, will he please rap three times on the table.

Never Heard of "Davy Crockett's Coon"?

That's queer! Well, it was like this: Col. Crockett was noted for his skill as a marksman. One day he leveled his gun at a racoon in a tree, when the animal, knowing the Colonel's prowess, cried out, "Hello, there! Are you Davy Crockett? If you are, I'll just come down, for I know I'm a gone coon." Just take a dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, and see how quickly your biliousness and indigestion will emulate the example of "Davy Crockett's coon," and "climb down." They are specifics for all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Corn is a maize and a dance is a maze, which is pretty conclusive proof that there is a bond between dancing and corns.

Cure Your Catarrh, or Get $500.

For many years, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, who are thoroughly responsible, financially, as any one can easily ascertain by proper enquiry, have offered, in good faith, through nearly every newspaper in the land, a standing reward of $500 for a case of nasal catarrh, no matter how bad, or of how long standing, which they cannot cure. The Remedy, which is sold by druggists at only 50 cents, is mild, soothing, cleansing, antiseptic and healing.

All things come round to him who waits, including a bald head, false teeth and ear trumpets, and heaps of miscellaneous trouble.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Resp'y, T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

An embankment caved in on some railroad laborers near Oil City, and the verdict of the jury was: "Died of gravel."

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

When the stock broker tells you that some specialty is a "good buy" take care it is not a good by to your money.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, dipsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, a fleeing of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, older middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M V LUBON 47 Wellington street East, Toronto, Ont. A. P. 433

WHY YOU SHOULD USE
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES.
It is Palatable as Milk.
It is three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil.
It is far superior to all other so-called Emulsions.
It is a perfect Emulsion, does not separate or change.
It is wonderful as a flesh producer.
It is the best remedy for Consumption, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Cough and Colds.
Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. E. W. B. BUTLER, Financial Agt. Established 1860 72 King-st E., Toronto

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.—Send for our Large Illustrated Catalogue of Band Instruments, Violins, Guitars Flutes, etc., and all kinds of Trimmings. Agents for Frenche's and DeWitt's Plays. BUFLAND'S MUSIC STORE, 87 King st. West, Toronto, Ont.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 65 Niagara St., Buffalo, N.Y.

Artificial LIMBS. For circulars address J. DOAN & SON, Toronto, Ont.

GUELPH BUSINESS COLLEGE, Guelph, Ont.—Fifth Scholastic Year—its graduates are now employed as Book-keeper Business Managers, Stenographers, etc., by many of the largest business houses in Canada and the United States. Young men and women desiring a thorough business education will consult their own welfare be attending the Guelph Business College. For terms and particulars address M. MCCORMICK, Principal.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND
ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON
THE NERVES, THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS
This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.
Why Are We Sick?
Because we allow the nerves to remain weakened and irritated, and these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.
PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND
WILL CURE BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESS, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, AND ALL NERVOUS DISORDERS,
By quieting and strengthening the nerves, and causing free action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys, and restoring their power to throw off disease.
Why suffer Bilious Pains and Aches?
Why tormented with Piles, Constipation?
Why frightened over Disordered Kidneys?
Why endure nervous or sick headaches?
Why have sleepless nights?
Use PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND and rejoice in health. It is an entirely vegetable remedy, harmless in all cases.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1.00. Six for $5.00.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, MONTREAL, P. Q.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York. H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec: Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

BUSINESS Education is very essential to the success of every young man and young woman. Good Bookkeepers are constantly in demand by business men. The science knowledge more useful than Shorthand and Typewriting. A new avenue for female employment that pays. Constantly growing demand for shorthanders.
WRITE SHORTHAND
for Descriptive Circulars, containing full particulars of all branches taught and rates of tuition.
Address—CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Public Library building, Toronto. THOS. BENGOUGH, President. C. H. BROOKS, Sec'y & MANAGER.

Brown Engines
IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.
TORONTO ENGINE WORKS
PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co, - Toronto.

YOU MAY HAVE ONE!!
Just send your name and address, and 10c. for postage, and receive by Mail a HANDSOME SILK HANDKERCHEIF and The Magic Needle! Astonishes everyone! Address, Walton Novelty Co., Toronto, Ont.

Merchants, Butchers, and Traders Generally.
We want a GOOD MAN in your locality to pick up
CALF SKINS
For us. Cash furnished on Satisfactory Guaranty. Address,
C. S. PAGE, HYDE PARK, Vermont, U.S.

Stained Glass
FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

Young Men
SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address
M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto

THE Glory of a Man is His Strength AND JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF IS THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888 No importations of English Sheeps, Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

Farm Loans
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - MONTREAL
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO.
This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms. For information apply to local agents, or to
W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto.

FOR ONE CENT
480 ACRES FREE,
in Dakota or Montana, Broad Prararies, Fertile Valleys, Wood, Coal and clear mountain streams. Send your address on Postal Card to J. M. HUCKINS, 4 Palmer House Block, Toronto, or, F. I. WHITNEY, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.
Subscribed Capital,.....$ 4,800,000
Paid Up Capital,..... 2,500,000
Total Assets,..... 10,000,000
The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to
J. HERBERT MASON, Manager Director Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO
—Manufacturers of the highest grades of—
SILVER - PLATED WARES
TRADE MARK.
—FACTORIES and SALESROOM:—
420 to 426 King St. West, TORONTO
E. G. GOODERHAM, Manager J. C. COPP, Treas.

STANDARD CHOPPING MILLS.
USES BEST FRENCH BURR MILLSTONES
FINEST CRIMPED IN THE WORLD. NO REMEDYING PLATES AS IN IRON MILLS
STONES WILL LAST A LIFE TIME
COMBINED FEED MILL ELEVATORS AND SCREEN
SPEED 400
No. 370
WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS CO. LIMITED CANADA
20 INCH STANDARD CHOPPER
Have also Peet Corn and Cob Grinder. Send for circular.
WATEROUS E.W. Co. BRANTFORD. CANADA

I CURE FITS!
When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE. I have made the disease of
FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS
A life long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and it will cure you. Address
H. G. ROOT, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. TORONTO, ONT.

We are children who cheerfully join in the chorus When Breadmaker's Yeast is the subject before us—
Mamma tried all the rest, Whitest, Lightest,
So she knows it's the best, Cause her bread is the whitest, her buns are the
And we eat all the pancakes she dare set before us.
BUY THE BREADMAKER'S YEAST. PRICE 5 CENTS.

ILLUMINATING OIL ROGERS & CO. CARBON SAFETY TORONTO ONT. CARBON SAFETY OIL HAS NO EQUAL BEST FOR FAMILY USE,
CARBON SAFETY OIL.
ASK DEALERS FOR IT.
Wholesale Depots:
ONTARIO—TORONTO, 30 Front street East.
" OTTAWA, 88 Spark street.
" BELLEVILLE, J. W. Yeomans & Co.
QUEBEC—MONTREAL, E. Cavanagh.
MARITIME PROVINCES—ST. JOHNS, Jos. Hall & Sons.
MANITOBA and N.W.T.—BRANDON, W. Johnston & Co
Sam'l Rogers & Co., Toronto, Canada

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.
HEAD OFFICE, CAPITAL AND FUNDS NOW OVER $3,000,000.
15 TORONTO STREET, TORONTO, ONT.
A HOME COMPANY, ESTABLISHED OCTOBER, 1871.
To this date, October 31, 1887, there has been returned:
To the heirs of Policy-holders (death claims)..... $649,749 00
To the holders of matured Endowment Policies..... 26,492 63
To Policy-holders on surrender of Policies..... 98,666 30
To holders of Annuity Bonds..... 433,144 02
Loaned to Policy-holders on Security of their Policies..... 16,967 85
89,264 86
$1,308,174 47
Policies in Force over 10,000. Amount over $15,000,000.
PRESIDENT—HON. SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G.
VICE-PRESIDENTS.—WILLIAM ELLIOTT, Esq.; EDWARD HOOPER, Esq.
J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director
Policies Non-forfeitable after three years and indestructible after 5 years.

RELY ON HOP BITTERS.
A WONDERFUL NERVE TONIC. A Medicine, not a Drink. Cure All Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Urinary Organs, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, DRUNKENESS. It may Save Your Life. $1,000 Reward paid for a case they will not cure.

FOR FIVE YEARS.

Reidy and Jennings, the Murderous Ruffians, Get Their Reward.

Richard Reidy and John Jennings, the toughs who on Saturday night brutally beat and robbed old William Dugdale in his grocery at 46 and 48 Jarvis street, Toronto, were sent to the penitentiary for five years by the Police Magistrate.

They were arraigned on the charge of assault and robbery. Mr. Dugdale said that about eight o'clock Saturday night the prisoners entered his store and Reidy asked for tobacco. When payment was demanded, Reidy threw on the counter a piece of blackened tin which Mr. Dugdale declined to accept. Jennings then talked of purchasing a pound of nails, and while Mr. Dugdale was getting the nails Reidy grasped him by the throat and tried to strangle him. The witness had been cutting tobacco, and with the knife that he still retained in his hand he slashed at Reidy and inflicted some deep wounds.

"Although 73 years of age," said Mr. Dugdale, "I am pretty strong, and Reidy finding that I was too much for him called to Jennings who caught hold of me and together they threw me down and jumped on me. They placed their hands on my mouth and almost smothered me, and one of them ripped open my vest and searched my pockets, remarking at the same time, "I can't find any money." Thinking that if I gave them some money they would let me up and I would have another chance for my life I handed Reidy $5. Just at that moment a crowd commenced hammering on the door but they could not get in as Jennings had barricaded it with a 350 lb. barrel of sugar. The noise startled the robbers and they ran to the back of the shop. Jennings hid under the stairway, but Reidy returned to the front and was captured by the crowd who had succeeded in forcing the door. The $5 given Reidy was subsequently found on the floor by a police man."

AN UNLUCKY CANADIAN.

A Series of Reverses Followed by a Painful Death.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 23.—If ever a person could lay claim to having been born under an unlucky planet, certainly Alexander Love, a French Canadian, was that one. Love, with his wife and two small children, came to this city last spring from Canada. Soon after arriving here he was taken sick, and for a long time lay at death's door. He had hardly recovered when his wife met with an accident that left her a cripple for life. Then Love was thrown out of employment. He moved to Alexandria where he built a cabin in the woods. He had got out a few cords of wood, when his axe slipped and nearly cut his foot off. He was laid up for two months. After getting out again he had cut some five cords when he was caught by a falling tree and killed, not instantly—that was not his luck—but he was so severely injured that he died in a few hours, after suffering terribly. His crippled wife and children were in the cabin near by, but a mile from any other building, and were compelled to witness, without power to alleviate, the death struggles of the unfortunate husband and father. The next morning, with crutches and pushing a child in a chair, the wife of Love went nearly three miles before she could make herself understood and secure help to care for her dead husband. Charitable neighbors have contributed enough money to send the family back to their Canadian friends.

Dr. Abbott on Newspapers.

Dr. Lyman Abbott s the successor to Henry Ward Beecher in Plymouth church, but the mantle of Beecher's common sense does not seem to have fallen on his successor. Beecher would never have been so silly as to say what Abbott gave utterance to recently—this, namely, that "no power on earth visible or invisible, can make the newspapers tell the truth." This of course is one of those sweeping denunciations of a whole class which some clergymen are prone to indulge in from time to time, and which injures their reputation for sober judgment and the Christian grace of charity in the minds of all right thinking persons. Some newspapers lie occasionally, and a few do so pretty often; but to say that all newspapers lie persistently, and constantly roll the sin of falsehood like a sweet morsel under their tongues, as Dr. Abbot virtually says they do, is to take asgreatliberties with truth as it would be to say that all ministers are bigots, or toadies and tuft-hunters, thinking more of their salaries and getting into good society, than of saving the souls and bodies of fallen men and women. Some ministers are bigots and some are Pharisees, and some are toadies and tuft-hunters and snobs, but for any newspaper writer to say that "no power on earth, visible or invisible can make ministers anything but toadies and tuft-hunters" would be at once to write himself down an ass, and men would regard him as one, and would esteem the worth of his opinions as altogether vitiated by his extravagance of statement.

Stopped By a House.

Did any one ever imagine a mouse could stop a railway train? Nevertheless it was done recently near Modena in Italy.

On the Italian railroads an electrical apparatus, upon the departure of a train from any station, rings six strokes upon a gong in the next station. The station master at Capri, hearing his gong ring three where there should be six, immediately suspected something wrong and ordered up the electric signals of warning. The train, by this time under full headway, came to a dead stop.

Then began a transfer of telegraphic messages, the passengers anxious to know what was the matter. Everything was right on the line, and the train after considerable delay was ordered forward.

The station master thought it might be well to look into his gong, and there found, stuck fast between the cogs of the electrical apparatus, a poor little mouse.

The unhappy animal happening to be in the interior of the clock when it "struck one" attempted to run down, but was caught between the murderous wheels. His little body was big enough to stop the whole apparatus, and consequently the train as well.

Dr. Brydon's Escape Recalled.

One of the most terrible, as it is also one of the most thrilling, tales that history has to tell is recalled by the announcement in the Scottish papers of Miss Edith Brydon's marriage in Inverness cathedral. The lady's father was the famous Dr. Brydon of the Afghan massacre of January, 1842—the one survivor who, wounded and faint and weary, after a most perilous ride, reached Jellalabad to tell Gen. Sale the piteous story of what had taken place in the Khyber Pass. They were 16,000—or, counting women and children, 26,006—who set out from Cabul on that ill-starred journey, and he was the only man who had escaped. Between the dark crags of Jugduliak the murderous Afghans had their fill of blood. The death trap ran with the gore of soldiers, camp followers, women, and children alike. Dr. Brydon alone escaped.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

Curious Photograph Apparatus.

A curious photographic apparatus, in which a camera is raised by a rocket and lowered by a parachute, is being developed by a French inventor, M. Amedee Denisse. In its experimental form the cylindrical camera has 12 lenses round its circumference, with a sensitive plate in its centre, and is provided with a shutter, which opens and instantly closes as the apparatus commences to fall. The descent is eased by the opening of the attached parachute, which is drawn back to the operator by a cord attached before the firing of the rocket. For securing bird's-eye views the photo-rocket offers several important advantages over balloon photography, such as comparative cheapness in operating and freedom from risk in case of use for military reconnoitering.—[Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR,

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER XLVIII.—At Bay.

Honest folk give lucky winners a wide berth at the Casino railway station, lest they should be suspected of possible evil designs upon their newly got money. Hugh found, therefore, he could pick his own seat quite at will, for nobody seemed anxious to claim the dubious honour of riding along with him. So he strolled along the train, humming a gay tune, and inspecting the carriages with an attentive eye, till he reached a certain first class compartment not far from the front, where a single passenger was quietly seated. The single passenger made his heart throb; for it was Warren Relf—alone and unprotected.

He hardly knew why, but, flushed with wine and continued good fortune, he meant to ride back in that very carriage, face to face with the baffled and defeated serpent; for Hugh had already discounted his prospective victory. Warren was looking the opposite way, and did not perceive him. Hugh waited, therefore, till the train was just about to start from the station, and then he jumped in—too late for Warren, if he would, to change his carriage.

In a second, the painter turned round and recognised his companion. He gave a sudden start. At last the two men had met in earnest. A baleful light burned in Hugh's dark eye. His blood was up. He had run too fast through the whole dispason of passion. Roulette and champagne, love and jealousy, hatred and vindictiveness, had joined together to fire and inflame his heart. He was at white-heat of exultation and excitement now. He could hardly contain his savage joy. "Have I found the, O my enemy?" he cried out, half aloud. Another time, it was just the opposite way. "Hast thou found me, O my enemy?" he had cried to Warren with an agonised cry at their last meeting in the club in London.

Warren Relf, gazing up in surprise answered him back never a word; he only thought to himself silently that he was not and had never been Hugh Massinger's enemy. From the bottom of his heart, the painter pitied him; he pitied him ten thousand times more than he despised him.

They stood at gaze for a few seconds. Then, "Where have you been?" Hugh asked at last insolently. The champagne had put him almost beside himself. Drunk with wine, drunk with good fortune, he allowed his true nature to peep forth for once a little too obviously. He would make this fellow Relf know his proper place before gentlemen at last—a mere ignorant upstart, half way between a painter and a common sailor.

"To Paris," Warren answered with curt decision. He was in no humour for a hasty quarrel to-day with this half-drunken madman.

"What for?" Hugh continued, as rudely as before. Then he added with a loud and ugly laugh: "You need tell me no lies. I know already. I've found you out.—To see my cousin Elsie across to England."

At the word, Warren s face fell somewhat ominously. He leaned back, half irresolute, in the corner of the carriage and played with twitching fingers at the leather window strop. "You are right," he answered low, in a short, sharp voice. "I never lie. I went to escort Miss Challoner from you and San Remo."

Hugh flung himself into an attitude of careless ease. This colloquy delighted him. He had the fellow at bay. He began to talk, as if to himself, in a low monologue. "Heine says somewhere, he observed, with a sardonic smile, directing his observation into blank space, as if to some invisible third person, "that he would wish to spend the evening of his days in a cottage by the sea, within sound of the waves, with his wife and children seated around him—and a large tree growing just outside his grounds, from whose branches might dangle the body of his enemy."

Warren Relf sat still in constrained silence. For Elsie's sake, he would allow no quarrel to arise with this madman, flown with insolence and wine. He saw at once what had happened; Massinger was drunk with luck and champagne. But he would avoid the consequences. He would change carriages when they stopped on the frontier at Ventimig'ia.

The bid for an angry repartee had failed. Sir Hugh tried again; for he would quarrel. "A great many murders take place on this line," he remarked casually, once more in the air. "It's a dangerous thing, they tell me, for a winner at Monte Carlo to go home alone in a carriage by himself with one other passenger."

Still Warren Relf held his peace, undrawn.

Hugh tried a third time. He went on to himself in a musing monologue. "Any man who travels anywhere by train with a large sum of money about his person is naturally exposed to very great peril," he said slowly. "I've been to Monte Carlo, playing, to-day, and I've won eleven thousand pounds; eleven—thousand—pounds—sterling. I've got the money now about me. There it is, you see, in French bank notes. A very large sum. Eleven—thousand—pounds—sterling."

Still Warren said nothing, biting his lip hard, but with an abstracted air looked out of the window. Hugh was working himself up into a state of frantic excitement now, though well suppressed. Fate had delivered his enemy plump into his hands, and he meant to make the very best use of his opportunity.

"A fool in Paris once called in a barber," he went on quietly, with a studious outer air of calm determination, "and ordered him, for a joke, to shave him at once, with a pistol lying before him on the dressing-table. "If your hand slips and you cut my skin,' the fool said, "I'll blow your brains out.' To his surprise, the barber began without a word of reply, and shaved him clean with the utmost coolness. When he'd finished, the patient paid down ten pounds, and asked the fellow how he'd managed to keep his hand from trembling. "Oh," said the barber, "easy enough: it didn't matter the least in the world to me. I thought you were mad. If my hand had slipped, I knew what to do: I'd have cut your throat without one moment's hesitation, before you had time to reach for your pistol. I'd say it was an accident; and any jury in all Paris would without a doubt at once have acquitted me." The story is illustrative. I hope, Mr. Relf, you see its applicability?"

"I do not," Warren answered, surprised at last into answering back, and with an uneasy feeling that Massinger was developing dangerous lunacy. "But I must beg you will have the goodness not to address your conversation to me in futu e."

"The application of my remark," Hugh went on to himself, groping with his hand in his pocket for his revolver and withdrawing it again as soon as he felt quite reassured that the deadly weapon was safely there—"ought at once to be obvious to the meanest understanding. There are some occasions where homicide is so natural that everybody jumps at once to a particular conclusion.—Observe my argument. It concerns you closely. Many murders have taken place on this line—murders of heavy winners at Monte Carlo. Many travellers have committed murderous assaults on the persons of winners with large sums of money about them. Now follow me closely. I give you fair warning. If a winner with eleven thousand pounds in his pocket were to get by accident into a carriage with one other person, and a quarrel were by chance to arise between them, and the winner in self-defence were to fire at and kill that other person—do you think any jury in all the world would convict him for protecting his life from the aggressor? No, indeed, my good sir! In such a case, the other person's life would be wholly at the offended winner's mercy.—Do you understand me now?—Ahs, I expected so! Warren Relf, I've got you in my power. I can shoot you like a dog; I can do as I like with you."

With a sudden start, Warren Relf woke up all at once to a consciousness of the real and near danger that thus unexpectedly and closely confronted him. It was all true; and all possible; Hugh was mad—or maddened at least with play and drink: he deliberately meant to take his enemy's life and trust to the authorities accepting his plausible story that he was forced to do so in self-defence or in defence of his money.

"You blackguard!" the painter cried as the truth came home to him in all its naked ugliness, facing Hugh in his righteous indignation like an angry lion. "How dare you venture on such a cowardly scheme? How dare you concoct such a vile plot? How dare you confess to me you mean to put it into execution?"

"I'm a gentleman," Hugh answered, smiling across at him still with a hideous smile of drunkenness, and fingering once more the revolver in his pocket. "I'll shoot no man without due explanation and reason given. I'll tell you why. You've tried to keep Elsie out of my way all these long years for your own vile and designing purposes—to beguile and entrap that innocent girl into marrying you—such a creature as you are; and by your base machinations you've succeeded at last in gaining her consent to your wretched advances. How she was so lost to all sense of shame and self-respect—she, a Massinger on her mother's side—as to give her consent to such a degrading engagement, I can't imagine. But you extorted it somehow—by alternate threats and cringing, I suppose—by scolding her and cajoling her—by lies and by slanders—by frightening her and libelling me—till the poor terrified girl, tortured out of her wits, decided to accept you, at last, out of pure weariness. A man would be ashamed, I say, to act as you have done; but a Thing like you—pah—there—it revolts me even to talk to you!"

Warren Relf's face was livid crimson with fiery indignation; but he would not do this drunken madman the horour of contradicting or arguing with him. Elsie to him was far too sacred and holy a subject to brawl over with a half-tipsy fool in a public conveyance. He clutched his hands hard and kept his temper; he preferred to sit still and take no outer notice.

Hugh mistook his enforced calm for cowardice and panic. "Aha!" he cried again, "so you see, my fine friend, you've been found out! You've been exposed and discredited. You've got no defence for your mean secretiveness. Going and hiding away a poor terrified, friendless, homeless girl from her only relations and natural protectors—working upon her feelings by your base vile tricks—setting your own wretched womanskin1 to bully and badger her by day and by night, till she gives her consent at last—out of pure disgust and weariness, no doubt—to your miserable proposals. The sin and the shame of it! But you forget you had a Man to deal with as well! You're brought to book now. I've found you out in the nick of time, and I mean to take the natural and proper advantage of my fortunate discovery. Listen here to me, now: before I shoot you, I propose to make you know my plans. I shall have my legitimate triumph out of you first. I shall tell you all; and then, you coward, I'll shoot you like a dog, and nobody on earth will ever be one penny the wiser."

Warren saw the man had fairly reached the final stage of dangerous lunacy. He was simply raving with success and excitement. His blood was up, and he meant murder. But the painter fortunately kept his head cool. He didn't attempt to disarm or disable him as yet; he waited to see whether Hugh had or had not a pistol in his pocket. Perhaps Hugh, with still deeper cunning, was only trying to egg him into a vain quarrel, that he might disgrace him in the end by a horribly plausible and vindictive charge of attempted robbery.

"I've won eleven thousand pounds," Hugh went on distinctly, with marked emphasis, in short sharp sentences. "My wife's dead, and I've inherited Whitestrand. I mean to marry Elsie Challoner. I can keep her now as she ought to be kept: I can make her the wife of a man of property. You alone stand in my way. And I mean to shoot you, just to get rid of you off hand—Sit still there and listen; don't budge an inch, or, by heaven, I'll fire at once and blow your brains out. Lift hand or foot and you're a dead man.—Warren Relf, I mean to shoot you. No good praying and cringing for your life, like the coward that you are, for I won't listen. Even if you were to renounce your miserable claim to my Elsie this moment, I wouldn't spare you; I'd shoot you still. You shall be punished for your presumption—a creature like you; and when you're dead and buried, I shall marry Elsie.—Think of me, you miserable cur—when you're dead and gone, enjoying myself for ever with Elsie.—Yes, I mean to make you drink it, down to the very dregs. Here me out. You shall die like a dog; and I shall marry Elsie."

Warren Relf's eye was fixed upon him hard, watching him close, as a cat watches, ready to spring, by an open mouse-hole. This dangerous madman must be disarmed at all hazards, the moment he showed his deadly weapon. For Elsie's sake, he would gladly have spared him that final exposure. But the man, in his insolent drunken bravado, made parley useless and mercy impossible. It was a life-and-death struggle between them now. Warren must disarm him; nothing else was feasible.

As he watched and waited, Hugh dived with his hand into his pocket for his revolver, and drew it forth, exultant, with maniac eagerness. For a second, he brandished it, loaded, in Warren's face, laughing aloud in his drunken joy; then he pointed it straight with deadly resolve at the painter's forehead.

CHAPTER XLIX.—The Unforeseen.

Quick as lightning Relf leaped upon his frantic assailant, and with one powerful arm, stiffened like an iron bar, dashed down the upraised hand, and the revolver in its grasp, with all his might, toward the floor of the carriage. A desperate struggle ensued in that narrow compartment. The two men, indeed, were just evenly matched. Warren Relf, strong from his yachting experience, with sinewy limbs much exercised by constant outdoor occupation, fought hard in sheer force of thew and muscle, with the consciousness that therein lay his one chance of saving Elsie from still further misery. Hugh Massinger, on the other hand, well knit and wiry, now mad with mingled excitement and drink, grappled wildly with his adversary in the fierce strength pure adventitious nervous energy. The man's whole being seemed to pour itself forth with a rush in one frantic outburst of insane vigour. He gripped the revolver with all his utmost force, and endeavored to wrench it, in spite of Warren's strong hand, from his enemy's grasp, and to turn it by sheer force of wrist and arm once more upon Elsie's new lover. "Blackguard!" he cried, through his clenched teeth, as he fought tooth and nail with frenzied struggles against his powerful opponent. "You shan't get off. You shall never have her. If I hang for you now, I'll kill you where you stand. I've always hated you. And in the end I mean to do for you."

With a terrible effort, Warren wrested the loaded revolver at last from his trembling hands. Hugh battled for it savagely like a wild beast in a life-and-death struggle. Every chamber had a cartridge jammed home in its recess. To fight for the deadly weapon would be downright madness. If it went off by accident, somebody would be wounded; the ball might even go through the woodwork into the adjoining compartments. Without one moment's hesitation Warren raised the fatal thing aloft in his hand high above his head. The window on the seaward side was luckily upon. As he swung it, Hugh leaped up once more and tried to snatch the loaded pistol afresh from his opponent's fingers; but the painter was too quick for him before he could drag down that uplifted arm with his whole weight flung upon the iron biceps, Warren Relf had whirled the disputed prize round his head and flung it in an arch far out to sea through the open window. The railway runs on a ledge of rock overhanging the bay. It fell with a splash into the deep blue water. Hugh Massinger, thus helplessly balked for the moment of his expected revenge, sprang madly on his foe in a wild assault, with teeth and nails and throttling fingers, as a wounded tiger springs in its vindictive death throes on the broad flanks of an infuriated elephant.

Next instant, they were plunged in the deep arch of a tunnel, and continued their horrible hand-to-hand battle for several minutes in utter darkness. Rolling and grappling in the gloom together, they rose and fell, now one man on top and now the other, round after round, like a couple of angry wrestlers. The train rushed out into the light once more and plunged a second time into a still blacker tunnel. But still they fought and tore one another fiercely. All the way from Monte Carlo to the frontier, indeed, the line alternates between bold ledges that just overhang the deep blue bays and tunnels that pierce with their dark archways the intervening headlands. When they emerged a second time upon the light of day, Hugh Massinger had his hands tight pressed in a convulsive grasp upon Warren Relf's throat; and Warren Relf, purple and black in the face, was tearing them away with horrible contortions of arms and legs, and striving to defend himself by brute force from the would-be murderer's close gripped clutches.

"Aha!" Hugh cried, as he held his enemy down on the seat with a gurgle in his throat, "I have you now! I've got you? I've done for you. You shall choke for your insolence! You shall choke—you shall choke or it."

With an awful rally for dear life, Warren Relf leaped up and turned the tables once more upon his overspent opponent. Seizing Hugh round the waist in his powerful arms, in an excess of despair, he flung him from him as one might fling a child, with all his store of gathered energy. If only he could hold the man at bay till they reached Mentone, help would come—the porters would see and would try to secure him. He had no time to think in the hurry of the moment that even so all the world would believe he himself was the aggressor, and Hugh Massinger, with that great roll of notes stowed away in his pocket, was the injured innocent. Fighting instinctively for life alone, he flung his mad assailant right across the carriage with his utmost force. Hugh staggered and fell against the door of the compartment; his head struck sharp against the inner brass handle. With a loud cry the would-be murderer dropped helpless on the floor. Warren saw his temple was bleeding profusely. He seemed quite stunned—stunned or dead? His face, which but a moment before had glowed livid red, grew pale as death with a horrible suddenness. Warren leaned over him, flushed with excitement, and hot with that terrible wild-beast-like struggle. Was the man feigning, or was he really killed?—O heavens, would they say he, Warren, had murdered him?

In a moment the full horror of the situation came over him.

He felt Hugh's pulse: it was scarcely beating. He peered into his eyes: they were glazed and senseless. He couldn't tell if the man were dead or alive; but he stood aghast now with equal awe at either horrible and unspeakable predicament. Only four minutes or so more till Mentone! What time to decide how to act in the interval? O dear heaven, those accusing, tell-tale banknotes! Those lying bank-notes with their mute false witness against his real intentions! If Hugh was dead, who would ever believe he had not tried to rob and murder him? Whatever came of it, he must try to recover Hugh from his dead-faint at all hazards. Water, water! Oh, what would he not give for one glass of water! He essayed to bind up the wound on the head with his own handkerchief. It was all of no avail: the wound went bleeding steadily on. It went bleeding on; that looked as though Hugh were still alive. For if Hugh was dead, they would take him for a murderer!

Four minutes only till they reached Mentone; but oh, what an eternity of doubt and terror! In one single vivid paronamic picture, the whole awfulness of his situation burst full upon him. He saw it all—all, just as it would happen. What other interpretation could the outside world by any possibility set upon the circumstances? A winner at Monte Carlo, returning home to San Remo with a vast sum in bank-notes concealed about his person, gets into a carriage along with a fellow-countryman of his acquaintance, to whom he would naturally at once confide the fact of his luck and his large winnings. He is found dead or dying in the train at the next station, his coat torn after a frantic struggle, and the carriage bearing every possible sign of a desperate fight for life between aggressor and defender. His revolver gone, his head broken, his arms black with numerous bruises, who could doubt that he had fought hard for his life and his money, and succumbed at last by slow degrees to the must brutal violence? Who would ever believe the cock-and-bull story which alone Warren Relf could get up in self justification? How absurd to pretend that the man with the money was the real aggressor, and that the man with none acted only in pure self-defence, without the slightest intention of seriously injuring his wild assailant! An accident, indeed! No jury on earth would accept such an incredible line of defence. It was palpably past all reasonable belief—to any one but himself and Hugh Massinger—on the very face of it.

And then, a still more ghastly scene rose clear before his eyes with the vividness and rapidity of a great crisis. At such supreme moments, indeed, we do not think in words or logical phrases at all; we see things unrolled in vast perspective as a living tableau of events before us; we feel and realise past, present, and future in incredible lightning-like flashes and whirls of some internal sense: our consciousness ceases to be bound and cabined by the narrow limits of space and time: a single second suffices for us to know and recognise at a glance what in other phases it would take us a whole hour deliberately to represent by analytic stages to our mental vision. Warren Relf, alone in that cramped compartment with Hugh Massinger, or Hugh Massinger's corpse—he knew not which—beheld in his mind's eye in a graphic picture a court of justice, installed and inaugurated: advocates pleading his case in vain: a juge d'instruction cross questioning him mercilessly with French-persistence on every detail of the supposed assault: a jury of stolid bourgeois listening with saturnine incredulity in every line of their faces to his improbable explanations—a delay—a verdict—a sentence of death: and behind all—Elsie, Elsie, Elsie.

Therein lay the bitterest sting of the whole tragedy. That Elsie should ever come to know he had been forced by circumstances, however imperious, into laying violent hands on Hugh Massinger, was in itself more than his native equanimity could possibly endure. What would Elsie say? That was his one distinct personal thought. How could he ever bring himself even to explain the simple truth to her. He shrank from the idea, with a deadly loathing. She must never know Hugh had tried to murder him—and for her as the prize. She must never know he had been compelled in self-defence to fling Hugh from his throat, and unwillingly to inflict that awful wound—for death or otherwise—upon his bleeding forehead.

Three minutes, perhaps, to Mentone still. On those three minutes hung all his future—and Elsie's happiness.

In the midst of the confused sea of images that surged up in endless waves upon his mind, one definite thought alone now plainly shaped itself in clear-cut mental outline before him. He must save Elsie—he must save Elsie: at all hazards, no matter how great—let him live or die—he must save Elsie. Through the mist of horror and agony and despair that dimmed his sight, that thought alone loomed clear and certain. Save Elsie the anguish of that awful discovery Elsie the inexpressible pain of knowing that the man she now loved and the man who once pretended to love her, had closed together in deadly conflict, and that Warren had only preserved Hugh from a murderer's guilt by himself becoming, in a moment of despair, perhaps Hugh's unwilling and unwitting executioner.

He glanced once more at the senseless mass that lay huddled in blood upon the floor of the carriage. Alive or dead? What hope of recovery? What chance of restitution? What room for repentance? If Hugh lived, would he clear Warren? or would he die in some hospital with a lie on his lips, condemning his enemy for the very assault he had himself so madly yet deliberately committed? What matter to Warren? Whichever way things happened to turn, the pain would be almost the same for Elsie. Concealment was now the only possible plan. He must conceal it all—all, all, from Elsie.

The train was slowing round a dangerous curve—a curve where the line makes a sharp angle round a projecting point—a triumph of engineering, experts consider—with the sheer rock rising straight above, and the blue sea dimpling itself into ripples below. He moved to the door and gazed anxiously out. No room to jump just there; the rock and sea hemmed him in too closely. But beyond, by the torrent, a loose bank of earth on the further side might break his fall, if he chose to risk it. Madness, no doubt, ay, almost suicide; but with only two minutes more to Mentone, he had no time to think if it were madness or wisdom: time only to act, to act for the best, on the spur of the moment, while action of some sort still was possible. At such times, indeed, men do not reason: they follow only the strongest and deepest impulse. Warren Relf did not wait to argue out the result of his conduct with himself. If he leaped from the train, he must almost certainly be stunned or maimed, perhaps even killed outright by the concussion. At best, he must soon be taken by the myrmidons of justice and accused of the murder. To get away unperceived, along that single track of open coast, backed up in the rear by high mountains, was simply impossible. Had he stopped to reason, he might have remained where he was—and lost all. But he did not stop to reason; he only felt, and felt profoundly. His instincts urged him to leap while there was still time. He opened the door, as he reached the torrent, and looking out upon the bank with cautious deliberation, prepared, to jump for it at the proper moment.

The train was slowing much more distinctly now. He thought the brake must be put on hard. He could surely jump as he reached the corner without serious danger. He stepped with one foot on to the open footboard. It wasn't much to risk for Elsie. A single plunge and all would be settled.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Pure Gold.

There is no such thing as a menial office when you put a true man into it. A menial office is an office with a mean man in it; and it makes no difference whether it is a king's office or a scavenger's office.

Everything lives, flourishes, and decays everything dies, nothing is lost; for the great principle of life only changes its form and the destruction of one generation is the vivification of the next.—[Good.

Envy may justly be called "the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity." It is the most acid fruit that grows on the stock of sin—a fluid so subtle that nothing but the fire of divine love can purge it from the soul.

The truest and fullest conception of right and duty which a man can form must be his standard for to-day; if he is living a true and noble life, increasing intelligence, wisdom, and love will combine to form a still higher and better conception for to-morrow. We cannot always dwell in an imaginative state, be it ever so pure and good, nor would it be desirable. Work of hand and head rightly absorbs much of our time and thoughts. Yet all duty will be better performed for the refreshing air and wide outlook gained by frequently dwelling on the heights—that is, by gaining and cherishing clear conceptions of the right, the good, the true, and the beautiful, and bringing all forces to bear upon their still further elevation.

While the heart is clouded with passion, while the desires are impure, while selfishness excludes sympathy, it is impossible to think lucidly, to reason clearly, or to obtain from any source sound and true views of life or duty. Experience proves this every day. We may reason with the miser on the folly of hoarding, we may expose its self-evident absurdity as a road to happiness, we may prove beyond question the superior power of a generous life—and all without the least effect. The knowledge we strive to instil is all true and good, but he is in no condition to receive it. Even though he has no answer to make, he is not convinced. His habits are too fixed and his desires are too strong to allow his mind to act freely or normally, and what is so clear to us we cannot by our utmost efforts make clear to him.

A Boy's Reading.

On early reading largely depends the boy's taste in after life. If he can be induced to take good books at the start, he is seldom likely to have any dangerous leading toward poor ones thereafter. Whether it be true or not that virtue wins followers by its inherent qualities, it is certain that a knowledge of good literature makes the taste of poor reading flat, stale and unprofitable on the mental palate. It is hardly too much to say that any parent may cultivate a taste for good literature in his child if he is only willing to take the trouble. It is sometimes hard work, perhaps, but it can certainly be done.

How to combine the two ends, that of having the lad read whatever will interest him, and having him read what will beget in him a taste for desirable books, is a question which will have to be answered differently in each individual case. There is a point where the two considerations come together, but in every case the personal equation comes in, and no general rule can be laid down to cover all. In our day, however, the field of juvenile literature is so well filled that there is the widest latitude for choice, and this in itself goes far towards simplifying the problem.

A NEGRO'S CRIME.

Without Provocation he Murders a White Woman and her Son.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 17.—At Pratt Mills, five miles from this city to-day, Mrs. J. S. Kellan, wife of a mechanic, and her son Willie, 9 years old, were murdered by a negro. The woman and boy had been in the woods a short distance to drive up their cows. They met a negro, who told them he could show them where the cows were. They followed him a short distance, when he turned and struck Mrs. Kellan with a heavy club. The boy screamed for help, and was immediately brained by the negro. The boy died instantly. Mrs. Kellan was removed to her home and lived long enough to describe the murderer and give particulars of the crime. The negro fled, but is being pursued by a posse with bloodhounds, and will be lynched if caught. So far as known there was no motive for the crime.

Bismarck Breaking Down.

Bismarck is ill—so ill that his son is unable to leave his bedside. Telegrams by the thousand are pouring into the chancellor's country house. Germany is excited. Europe is restless, as well she may be. The Iron Prince who welded the German Ttates into a fatherland could ill be spared as this juncture. For years his hand and head have saved the Continent from disruption. For good or ill he has guided the policy of the nations. If at times he has seemed to court the enmity of France, he has more than once delayed the perhaps inevitable struggle. He gone, who will check the hot impetuosity of young Wilhelm or bar the way of the Pretender across the Rhine?—[N. Y. Herald.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

"SALARY NOTES"

Apropos to the above; book-keepers are paid $500 to $1000; and in some great houses, where the chief book-keeper is in some degree a financier he may receive $2,000, but such instances are very rare. Salesmen are paid according to their skill and experience. In the large retail stores they only want fine looking young men, who, so long as they can keep up this attraction, can earn $500 a year, but when they lose it they are no longer wanted. In jobbing stores salesmen often work on commission, and first class men sometimes make $3,000 a year. Salaried salesmen are rated from $500 to $800. The reader must remember that these figures are offset by heavy expenses. Board, in what are called clerk s boarding houses, is from $5 to $8 a week, and there is the car fare and lunches, and taking all in all, a clerk has but a small chance of getting ahead unless he is particularly brainy, and a very close economist. As the New Year brings some changes amongst the salaried men in the public department, I add a brief reference to this class. In the custom house a $1,000 berth is considered highly desirable, and there are fifty applications for every vacancy. There is also a great pressure for police appointments, and then when you descend to the lower grade of employes you find an equal rivalry, for no job is so small but what it has its crowd of applicants, many of whom have seen better days, for in this city the son of a millionaire may occasionally be found asking for the humblest employment. One of this class is glad to be gate keeper on the elevated road at $1.75 a day for twelve hours, work, seven days in a week, while on the other hand I know of three members of the New York Club who are clerks in a small jewelry establishment on Broadway. Another striking instance is found in the case of Frank Holman, who died wretchedly in Cincinnati not long ago. Formerly he was one of Stewart's favorite men, and had a salary of $15.000, but when his employer died he lost his situation, and gradually sunk until relieved by death. How many similar instances may be found in the social record of the metropolis. There are hundreds of clerks here whose wages are mortgaged a month ahead, and who are so afraid of having this fact known that they pay their usurer in self defense. The pressure to which our salaried men are subject often renders them victims of the salary-skinner or money-lender.

"SPECULATIVE CLERKS."

The recent arrest of two young men, both holding positions of trust, is but another instance of the amount of speculating among clerks, who indeed have been the principal supporters of those bucket shops whose pernicious influence so often appears in the police reports. These clerks plead as an excuse for speculation that they cannot live on their salaries, and it is sadly true that the condition of salaried men in this city is one of constant pressure, especially as many of the number have families. Hence they are so often lead to steal small sums from their employers, in order to speculate.

It is estimated that before the supression of the big bucket shop in Wall street more than 300 clerks speculated there daily, and this explains the immense profits which it yielded the sharks that ran the concern. Salaries of course must be small when there is such a pressure for employment, but speculation is a poor way to supplement the difficulty when it is done with other people's money. In a first-class banking house a clerk is fortunate to obtain the privilege of serving with no other pay than the opportunity of learning the business. Rich men's sons are always looking for such an opening.

"NOTES OF EMIGRATION."

There has been the usual increased arrival of emigrants of Castle Garden during the past year. Among the 383,595 souls landed were many Poles and Russians, who make first class laborers and hence add to the national wealth. It should be borne in mind that a constant effort is made abroad to ship off the most worthless part of society, and the success of this effort may be seen by the fact that two-thirds of the inmates of the New York almshouse are of foreign birth, of the 10,000 inmates only aboat 3,000 are natives. This immense mass of pauperism includes the insane, whose number is over 5,000. A sad picture, but it is an inevitable result of the vices which mark this reckless age. Another sad feature in metropolitan life is the tendency of a great city to eat itself up by the destruction of human life to such a degree that its population can only be maintained by a constant inflow. For instance the deaths in New York during 1887 were 38,938 while the births were 34,028 and during 1888 there were 40,142 deaths against 36,136 births. In other words the death call occurs every thirteen minutes night and day all the year around. I might add that there were 35,000 arrests, 253 suicides, 3,202 fires doing a million and half damage and 167 foundlings picked up in various parts of this gay town.

"THE EXPLOITS OF A BROOKLYN GIRL."

The power of love, when active in the heart of woman, is inconceivable. It was enough to make an accomplished young lady of excellent family and active in church elope with a floor-walker in a Brooklyn drygoods store, the other day, notwithstanding she knew there was another woman in the City of Churches and elevated roads, to whom the dashing dude must either have been married or false. The girl was willing to commit bigamy or to trample on the heart of another, and all this she did with her eyes open. But did she? or is it true that as a woman's heart opens her eyes close? Was Shakespeare right after all, when he sang: "Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind, and therefore is winged Cupid painted blind." The young lady might have been reading Amelie Rive's "Quick or the Dead," or some critic's remarks about the latter which are actually worse. But the young lady has had her lesson too late, but it should serve for others who may be tempted in a similar way. The fellow who is willing to desert another woman to marry you, girls, had better be shunned.

"RUSSEL SAGE AND DIOGENES."

It is attributed to that distinguished statesman and financier, the Hon. Russell Sage, who reminds me so much of Diogenes of Sinope, with whose history the esteemed readers of TRUTH are familiar, the confession that he already has more money than he wants, but keeps on in Wall street, because there is nothing else for which he has any taste. And the joy of making money, according to this New York sage, is simply "the pleasure of successful competition." But I cannot find any fun in successful competition if the success has lasted until he is weary and finds even that a vanity. To think there is nothing new for this Solomon of the street. He should temper the weariness of business with astronomy as Deacon White does, with literature, like Andrew Carnegie, with philanthropy, like George W Childs. Old man Cato began to study Greek when he was 80. Who ever heard of Washington until he was well along in years, or Martin Luther for that matter. He might read Plato or study Volapuk, poor soul! A pile of nobody knows how many million, and yet he isn't happy. Vanity of vanities, as my good friend Talmage would say.

"OLD TIME INDUSTRY AND ECONOMY"

It is evident that one reason of the present hard times is the neglect of old fashioned virtues. Foreigners everywhere acquire wealth while Americans remain poor. It is industry and economy that does it. The rich men of the older time lived much plainer than most of the salaried clerks of the present day, with the sole exception of house room. They had more space, for land was cheap, but aside from this they were economists. Fine houses, trips to Europe, or even to Saratoga, were then unknown. There were no Newport villas nor Long Branch cottages. Merchants in many instances lived over the store, and clerks generally boarded with their employers. John Jacob Astor used to wear a blouse and sort fur in his warehouse. The Lorillards were just as fond of sorting tobacco, in which they became experts, and thus laid the foundation of their wealth. Old Jacob Lorillard, uncle of the late Catherine L. Wolfe, who did so much for the poor in this vicinity, was one of the plainest of men of that day. John Mason, then the autocrat of dry goods, used to walk down to his store as early as his clerks, and few of them could equal him in a day's work. In fact, plain living and industry were then the fashion, and the result was fully as beneficial to business as to social circles.

ANNA DUNHAM.

A LIVELY CHASE.

Farmer Oke, in Night Apparel, Chases a Burglar North two Miles.

WATFORD, Jan. 21.—About two o'clock the other morning Richard Oke, a farmer living about two miles north of Alvinston, was awakened by a noise in his house, and on investigating found a burglar rummaging through the drawers of a bureau which contained $250. The intruder made a bolt for the door as soon as he saw he was discovered, closely followed by Mr. Oke, who did not even carry to don his pantaloons, but gave hot chase to the burglar under the impression that his $250 was gone. The chase was kept up

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Sereet, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

DUTTON, JANUARY 24, 1889.

REMARKS BY A RAMBLER.

Rambler attended the meeting of the High School Literary Society last Friday evening and was pleased to see so many present, but surprised that such poor order should be maintained. I noticed one case especially, where a gentleman who wished to speak was stamped down without any reason whatever. The subject of debate was not one to admit of much argument on either side, but was very well handled. The subject for next evening is much more sensible and is one on which a good many points can be brought up. Work it up right, boys, and you can make your literary society one which will be a credit to yourselves, to the school, and to Dutton.

Won't somebody rise and explain why our citizens do not take more pride in keeping the sidewalks in front of their stores and residences free of snow, boxes, barrels, wood and other obstructions which are to be seen on them occasionally. Many an unwary pedestrian has knocked his shins against a wheelbarrow, box or other unwieldy article while going home on dark nights lately, and now and again he might trip against a snow bank or drop, with a jerk that would loosen every tooth in his head onto the bare sidewalk, where some kindhearted person, having more sympathy for his fellow citizens, had shovelled the snow clear off his portion. Come, gentlemen, spruce up and see that the walks are cleared every morning.

The steps now being taken to free the High School building from its present debt should meet with the encouragement of every citizen of the District. The sum asked for, $4,300 is not very large, and if the residents of the two townships only determined to raise it they might do so easily. Don't draw back and say you can't afford it just now, but put down your name with a good figure opposite it, thus helping to advance the best interests of the school.

While one of our High School students was cudgelling his brains over some knotty Greek problem a few evenings since, a light of glass was shattered in a window near by him. He was at a loss to account for the accident and, visions of midnight burglars and assassins filling his mind, he ran down stairs in great haste, his face as white as the mantle which covered the earth on Monday, and his trembling limbs, almost refusing to perform their office. After recovering a little he secured assistance and proceeded to search for the bullet, which was found after a long and arduous search deeply imbedded in a fold of his unmentionables in the shape of a 22 calibre—snowball!

How is it that none of our citizens appear to take much interest in the subject of incorporation. Surely it is a matter of enough importance to at least have a thorough discussion. Rambler would like to see some one get up and give his views on the question.

I see that Wallacetown is gradually moving into our town. So much the better. We want all the Wallacetown people to follow the example of Dr. Ruthven, and between us, Mr. Editor, it would not be a bad plan for them to move here in a body, thus bettering themselves and the town.

Well Mr. Editor, I think you have had enough from my pen for one week. I will endeavor to give you a better budget next time.

Yours, to command,
RAMBLER.

DUTTON AND VICINITY.

Fitchit's sawmill is again running.

Read Sifton Bros'. advertisement in another column.

We have received a copy of Vick's Floral Guide for 1889.

C.P.R. agents are purchasing the right of way west of Glencoe,

Division Court will be held in Brown's Hall on Feb. 7th.

A pair of bob-sleighs for sale cheap. Apply to JAS. GRIFFIN, Dutton.

A patrol wagon has been added to the London police department.

The roller mill has been running night and day lately in order to fill orders.

The new municipal councils held their first meetings on Monday last.

A. N. C. Black has purchased the property recently owned by S. Wilton.

Good use is being made of the sleighing in bringing in logs and wood.

Mrs. Liddell, of West Lorne, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Phelps, this week.

A petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in Elgin County will be fyled in about two weeks.

A thief stole 300 pounds of pork from Mrs. Ben Edwards, of Newbury, one night recently.

$3,000 damage was caused by fire in T. M. Ley's shoe store at St. Thomas on Thursday night.

Rev. A. T. Fowler, of London, is assisting Rev. O. C. Carey at special services in West Lorne.

The route of the C.P.R. Western extension will not be changed to suit the villages near the line.

Fremont McDonald, of Newbury, was convicted by P. M. Noble of breach of the Scott Act and fined $50 and costs.

D. McKee has set his sawmill south of the railway and is now prepared for work. Read his advertisement in another column.

The sheriff is in possession of the McDermid Manufacturing Company's premises at Aylmer on a $1,000 claim by the Traders' Bank.

Geo Milligan, of Shackleton St., was married last evening to Miss Sarah Marshman, at the residence of the bride's parents near Cowal.

Dr. Ruthven's office was moved to Dutton from Wallacetown yesterday afternoon. The Doctor will make Dutton his headquarters henceforth.

A number of dishes and baskets were left at the residence of Mrs. Blue after the last Presbyterian teameeting. The owners may have them on application.

A couple of boys were upset from a cutter while turning the corner at Urlin Bros. store on Monday. Beyond a good shaking up they received no hurt.

Anniversary services will be held in Knox Church on Sunday next. Rev. T. Wilson will preach at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., and Rev. Mr. Middleton, of the Methodist Church, at 7 p. m.

Mrs. Mann wishes to inform old customers and the public generally that she is now prepared to do all kinds of dress and mantle making in the latest styles. A perfect fit guaranteed.

The hour for re-assembling the Public School has been changed from 1 to 1.30. There were 78 votes for the change and only 10 against it. Only 3 persons in the town voted against the change.

A meeting under the auspices of the Dutton W. C. T. U. will be held in Knox Church on Monday evening next. Addresses on Scott Act topics will be given by Revs. Wilson and Middleton and others.

The G. T. Railway has issued a neat programme for the winter carnival at Montreal. Tickets at excursion rates from points in Canada will be issued on February 1 to 8, and will be valid for return from February 5 to 13.

L. J. Wilson & Co. have engaged F. Millard to do their tailoring, and he has removed to the room lately occupied by Coyne & Shannon as a dental office, they having removed to the rooms lately occupied by S. Wilton, tailor.

A. P. McDonald, one of the oldest and widest known contractors in the province, died at the advanced age of 76 years, Tuesday evening, at Toronto. For the greater part of his life he lived at the family homestead, at Glencoe, County of Middlesex.

Mr. Orton Peckham, of the City Favorite Gear Co., has issued posters setting forth the advantages of their improved buggy gear. Mr. Peckham purposes manufacturing them on a laege scale and will remove to Dutton if sufficient inducement be given.

F. C. Campbell, of St. Thomas, tried to ship his furniture off to the States without paying some accounts. J. G. Bennett, to whom he owed $12, got out an attachment, and broke into a railway car and seized thee goods after a lively contest. Campbell then paid.

His Honor the Lieutenant Governor has appointed the following gentlemen license commissioners under the provisions of the Ontario License Act:—Elgin (West), A. N. C. Black, David King, Angus McCrimmon; Essex (South), Simon Fraser, Philemon Phillips, R. H. Abbott, M. D.; Kent (West), O. H. McNaughton, David Smith, John Holmes.

Emerson Walker and Nathaniel Beach charged with stealing a goat robe from the buggy of Mr. John Stacey at Cowal the other day, were arraigned before P. M. Leonard to-day. The county attorney prosecuted, and Mr. J. A. Robinson appeared for the accused, who elected to be tried by a jury and pleaded not guilty. They were committed for trial, bail being accepted. —St. Thomas Journal.

It is probable the Southern Counties Fair, at St. Thomas, will be allowed to drop back into a district show. At a meeting of the association the other night the general opinion of the members was that the society could not afford to continue as at present, as it was paying out more money yearly than came in, and it was only a question of time when, if the existing state of affairs was continued, the whole Fair would collapse.

A meeting of the subscribers to the Dutton High School building fund was held in Leitch's Hall, Dutton, Monday evening for the purpose, of devising some means for the purchasing of the School building by the District, instead of paying rent as at present. It was decided to circulate a subscription list and that the present owners should contribute 50 per cent. of their interest towards the purchase of the building. The amount required is about $4,300.

At a meeting of the Muncey Agricultural Society, held in the Central School House on Jan. 15, the following officers were elected:—President, Chas. Timothy, 2nd chief; 1st vice-president, Elijah Waddilove; 2nd vice-president, Washington Doxtater, Oneida; secretary, Scobie Logan; ass't sec. Cephas Noah; treasurer, James Fox; board of directors, L. Logan, David Hank, Sam St. John, Peter Jones, Silas Logan, Cornelius Logan, Enoch Tomico, David William, Oneida. Eleven members were added from the Oneida reserve.

The grain market has been quiet the past week, no large quantity being offered, except in oats, which bring 30c. per bushel. The other grains remain at last week's quotations. Large quantities of dried apples have been brought in lately and the stores have more on hand than they can dispose off. 3½c. per lb. is the highest offered. Butter remains firm at 20c. per lb. and there is a large supply of eggs at 16c. per doz. Turkeys are plentiful at 8c. per lb., geese are quoted at 6c. per lb.; chickens 5c.; tallow, 5c.; lard, 12½c.

Skin diseases are most annoying because so noticeable. Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap heals and cleanses the skin.

A report was circulated in the St. Thomas papers last week that Mr. A. N. C. Black, of Dutton, was about to remove to West Lorne to open a banking office there. We have Mr. Black's authority for stating that he has no intention whatever of either starting a banking office or making his home in that place, and the report is absolutely false. The rumor probably arose from the fact that Mr. Black has removed the Division Court office in West Lorne to a more central part of the village.

The decision in the case of Nelles vs. the Ontario Investment Association is the sensation of the day in London financial circles. Defendants claim that the Nelles case will not be taken as a precedent. Judgment was given on the ground of misrepresentation by the company's officers, a contention of which the other plaintiffs cannot avail themselves, because they did not take action immediately on the frauds becoming known. At the same time the question as to the legal right of the societies to amalgamate was not decided, and will have to be tried at the spring assizes.

Coyne's Corners.

A number of the people of this neighborhood gave Mr. Robinson a surprise party on Friday, Jan. 18th. An enjoyable time was spent.

Owing to the sickness of our teacher, Mr. D. McKillop, school has been closed for the past week.

There is some talk of a literary society being started in this section. It would add much to the welfare of the school.

Mr. Jos. Crowley, son of Mr. T. Crowley, is very low at present.

Mr. and Mrs. McCallum, of Glencoe, are visiting friends in this neighborhood.

An invited party was given by Mr. Ripley on Monday evening last. After tea was served the guests were treated with music on the violin.

Mr. Page is very sick again.

Burwell Park Church Entertainment.

The above mentioned entertainment was appointed to be held at the residence of Mr. Wm. Bobier, Port Talbot, last Wednesday week, but, as all know, it was a rainy, stormy hurricane day and night, and the event was postponed until last Wednesday night, when the weather was almost equally unfavorable and consequently it was only a partial success. The young people who assembled enjoyed themselves very much. There were some very interesting and amusing dialogues and recitations and much excellent music, vocal and instrumental. The wonders of the magic lantern were displayed by Mr. Harry Nott, and the presents to the children were distributed by him and Miss Sutherland, who took a great interest in them. Their pastor was present at the early part of the entertainment, but had to leave before the close. Mr. Bobier has a very roomy house and fine organ, both of which were most cheerfully placed at the disposal of the entertainers, and Mr. and Mrs. Bobier have the heartfelt gratitude of all concerned. Your correspondent is informed that when the minister went away he did not go empty, for through the secret kindness of Mrs. Bobier he took with him a large basket, which was found to contain a good fat turkey and other good things to make glad the heart of man and woman too.

CHOW-CHOW.

Fast fell the flakes upon the ground
As he glided into view.
"Is this the editor?" "It is."
"Sir, will you publish Beau——"

But ere he could complete the word,
The querist met his fate,
He doubled up and calmly died,
Struck by a paper-weight.

The weight struck him with an awful blow
For well the editor knew
That he meant to add "tiful Snow,"
When he cut him off at beau——

Burdock Pills cure sick headache by regulating the stomach, liver and bowels.

Inquisitive son—"Pa, do you think we ought to annex Canada?"

Speculative cashier—"Well my boy, that depends upon how the market goes next week.

"Did you hear about the burglar who was arrested this morning?" "No. What for." "For breaking into song." "Is that so?" "Yes. He got through two bars when some one hit him with a stave."

After having listened at a Thanksgiving dinner to Jones' stale jokes, Smith said. "I say Jones, the Thanksgiving turkey is luckier than we are."

Jones—"In what way."

Smith—"He isn't stuffed with chestnuts until after he is dead."

B.B.B. STOOD THE TEST.—"I tried every known remedy I could think of for rheumatism, without finding any relief, until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, which remedy I can highly recommend to all afflicted as I was." Henry Smith, Milvelton, Ont.

"Say, bub, I hear your family are going to have a conversation club at your house this winter."

"Yeh, we got one."

"Who are the members?"

"Me and mother. I furnish the conversation and mother provides the club."

There is no better remedy for worms of any kind in children or adults than Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

"But George," said she to the handsome young Grenadier, "what would you really do if there was a sudden cry, "to arms, to arms!"

"Well," said George, "it would depend. If the cry issued from torm your lips I think I should come."

VERY VALUABLE.—"Having used B.B.B. for biliousness and torpid liver, with the very best results, I would recommend it to all so troubled. The medicine is worth its weight in gold. Tillie White, Manitowaning, Ont.

De Hass stood on the corner of King and Yonge with his single glass in his ocular and wearing his usual expression of painful effort, when up steps a newsboy.

"Say mister, I'll wear that thing for you for ten cents an hour; will you mister?

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

What is that which has neither legs nor feet, yet frequently runs? The water in your tap these cold nights.

DIPHTHERIA.—"Last January," says J. N. Teeple, of Orwell, Ont., "there appeared diphtheria in our neighborhood. Doctors ran night and day, but I kept right to Hagyard's Yellow Oil and brought my children through all right." Yellow Oil cures all painful complaints and injuries.

They tell me you are married again, Pat; is that so?"

"It is, sor."

"How are you satisfied with the change?"

"Moighty well, sor. Ef the furst Mrs. McGlacherty was aloive today; me ownly regrit wud be that Oi hadn't married me second wife furst."

A BUSINESS LETTER.

Tilsonburg, March 15th, 1887.

T. Milburn & Co.,

Sirs,—Please ship at once three dozen B. B. Bitters. Best selling medicine in the shop. Sold seven bottles to-day.

Yours truly, C. Thompson.

The above is but one of hundreds of similar expressions regarding B.B.B.

"I say, Brown, did you hear how Jones put his foot in it the other day?"

"No; how was that?"

"Well, he went into the shoemaker's." But Brown had fled.

GREATLY EXCITED.—People are apt to get greatly excited in case of sudden accident and injury. It is well to be prepared for such emergencies. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the handiest remedy known for burns, scalds, bruises, lameness, pain and all wounds of the flesh. It is used internally and externally.

Young Lady—"Anything new in writing paper?"

Dealer—"Yes, miss; we have the new style ugly enough to give folks a fit, and so rough that no human being can write on it."

"How cute! Give me a box!"

"Can it be possible she's your daughter," said old Swank. "I declare, madam, I thought she was your sister."

"No, sir!" said madam, tickled beyond control. "She is my daughter, I assure you."

"Well, she certainly looks old enough, madam."

Ayer's Sar aparilla is prescribed and recommended by eminent physicians, and is taken with pefect safety by old and young. Its cleansing and vitalizing effects are sure and speedy, and it is universally conceded to be the most effective of all blood purifiers.

Why is a newspaper like a pretty girl? To be perfect it must be the embodiment of many types, its form well made up, it is chased though inclined to be giddy, it enjoys a good press, the more rapid the better, has a weakness for gossip, talks a good deal, can stand some praise, and is awful proud of a new dress. It cannot be kept in good humor without cash.

Ayer's Pills cure constipation, improve the appetite, promote digestion, restore healthy action, and regulate every function. This medicine is pleasant to take and gentle in its operation. See article in Ayer's Almanac.

An agreeable young man whom I often meet was calling with due ceremony on a nice Auburn girl the other evening, when her brother Tom, just arrived home from college on the evening train, rushed into the room and embraced his sister.

"Why how plump you've grown, Edith!" he exclaimed. "You're really quite an armful."

"Isn't she?" exclaimed the agreeable young man, and then he felt a chill racing down his spinal column.

"That is," he stammered, "I've no doubt of it—I—"

The brother looked carving knives at him, and the maiden blushed furi usly.

"I mean—er," said he, "I should judge so."

REPEAL OF THE SCOTT ACT.

NOTICE is hereby given that a petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Elgin will be fyled in the Registrar's office of the said county at St. Thomas, on or about the 7th day of February, A. D. 1889, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

NEW SAWMILL
—IN—
DUTTON.

Having placed a Sawmill south of the railway, between the Currie Road and Humpidge & Graham's Stave Factory, in Dutton, I am now prepared to do all kinds Custom Sawing, and solicit patronage from all who want satisfactory work. Lumber handled with care and not split or otherwise damaged while about the mill.

Sawing done at $3 per 1,000, on shares, or lumber taken in exchange.

A quantity of Ash, Hickory and Oak Logs wanted.

D. McKEE.

Dutton, Jan. 24, 1889—4

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.

Soothes and Heals

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with

Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to

1-17tf N. PHELPS.

NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Dunwich Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company will be held in Leitch's Hall, Dutton, on Saturday, January 26, 1889, at 1 p. m., for the purpose of receiving and passing the auditors' report, and appointing two directors to take the place of the two retiring, D. S. McColl, Eagle, and John Pearce, Tyrconnell. All interested in mutual insurance will do well to attend.

ANGUS PATTERSON, President. JOHN L. PEARCE, Secy.-Treas.

1-24d

STRAYED.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF the undersigned, lot No. 1, con. 5, Dunwich, on or about the 1st Nov., 1888, a one-year-old steer. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges and take the animal away.

JOHN D. MCDIARMID.

Dutton, Jan. 14, 1889. 1-3t

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

One hundred acres, being the North half of Lot 7, 2nd Con., Dunwich; 85 acres cleared. Good orchard, frame house, barn and stable. Also the job of clearing and fencing 50 or 100 acres on lot 6, 5th con., north of con. A, Dunwich. For further particulars apply to JOHN C. MCRAE, Dutton. 2-14

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

LOGS WANTED.

ANY QUANTITY of First class Elm Logs, 13 feet long, also a quantity of Basswood Bolts, 38 inches long.

HUMPIDGE & GRAHAM,
1-17-3 D Stave Factory.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE

In the matter of Angus C. Graham, of the Village of Dutton, an insolvent.

PURSUANT to instructions from the creditors of the said Angus C. Graham there will be offered for sale by public auction the stock of furniture, etc., of the said debtor, at the premises lately occupied by him, in the Village of Dutton, on Friday, the 25th day of January, 1889, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. Inventory may be seen or had on application at my office.

A. J. LEITCH, Assignee.

Dutton, Jan. 16, 1889.—2

DR. LOW'S
WORM SYRUP
DESTROYS AND REMOVES WORMS OF ALL KINDS IN CHILDREN OR ADULTS. SWEET AS SYRUP AND CANNOT HARM THE MOST DELICATE CHILD

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience. Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles southwest of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

NEW
BUTCHER SHOP.

THE undersigned, having commenced business in the shop recently occupied by F. D. Carter, wishes to state that he will keep on hand a supply of Fresh Meats, Sausages, Etc.

Patronage Solicited.

M. McNULTY.

CUTTERS
—AND—
SLEIGHS!

If you want to buy the best and cheapest Cutters and Sleighs now in the market call on

SIFTON BROS.

Next door to Hockin & Pool,

MAIN ST., DUTTON.

We are agents for all kinds of Farm Machinery and Implements, representing the most reliable firms.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE FOR 1889.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

THE ENTERPRISE will be made the liveliest and most interesting local paper in Western Ontario, and advertisers will find it a valuable medium for their announcements.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

A SILVER WATCH!

VALUE $18.

Will be given to the person bringing in the largest number of NEW subscriptions, accompanied by the cash, before the 1st of May, 1889. Competition open to all. The usual commission will be paid in addition to the above offer.

WORK -:- FOR -:- IT!

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL 8—No. 6. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1889. WHOLE No. 340.

Professional Cards

Alex McKillop, M.D.

M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. London; L. R. C. S. Edinburgh; L.M. Edinburgh and London, F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S. Ont.

☞ Office—Main street, Dutton.

HENRY CLAY,

Barrister-at-Law,

Commissioner in the High Court.

☞ Money Loaned.

ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,

Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.

MONEY TO LOAN.

OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.

Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN

At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.

RMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.

June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.

First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.

Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.

S. JOHN SCHULTE.

OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.

D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.

351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.

June 7. 1 yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,

Surgeon - Dentist,

Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,

SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-1y

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,

Veterinary Surgeon,

DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.

W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS

For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.

F. A. Humpidge.

Satisfaction guaranteed.

Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on

tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

A. J. LEITCH, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
pb DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON, LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
d DUTTON.

The Star Loan Company

181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.

G. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex

Mutual Fire Insurance Company,

LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.

BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!

Pumps! Pumps!!

To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.

Repairing Promptly Done.

I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.

Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.

Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY
IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.

Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glenaga.

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do

Lumber Dressing of all Kinds

with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate

☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.

M. Cochrane.

January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a

General Line of Blacksmithing.

IN HORSESHOEING.

☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.

M. L. MILLAR.

Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS

Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.

First-class Tailoring

IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.

30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED

This season to stock our new mills at Union.

L. J. Willson & Co.

Feb. 4, 1888. tf

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.

C. W. ALLEN, Proprietor.

Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

SALESMEN WANTED.

Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.

L. P. Thurston & Co.,

Burdock
BLOOD BITTERS

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

FOR SALE.

THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.

Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.

March, 28, 1888. tf

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR

Will clear out his ENTIRE STOCK to

MAKE ROOM

—FOR—

SPRING :-: IMPORTATIONS.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SECURE BARGAINS IN CLOTHING.

CALL AND SEE

J. C. HERTEL, Merchant Tailor.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE ENTERPRISE JOB DEPARTMENT

—HAS BEEN—

Thoroughly Refitted

And being under the management of a practical and competent job printer of long experience, we are prepared to turn out all classes of

Commercial and Poster Printing

On short notice and in the best style of the art.

ORDERS BY MAIL RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL

"The Niagara Falls Route."

CANADA SOUTHERN DIVISION.

GOING EAST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
Ridgetown	8 08	9 47	11 02
Rodney	8 38	10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50	.....	12 30
Dutton	9 09	10 20	12 58
Iona	9 25	.....	1 30
Shedden	9 36	.....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05	11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
St. Thomas (dep't)	3 00	12 25	5 25
Shedden	3 24	.....	6 01
Iona	3 32	.....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	.....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	A. M.
Leave St. Thomas	6 30	6 00	10 15
Arrive at London	7 25	6 50	11 00

GOING SOUTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	P. M.
Leave London	8 50	2 10	7 40
Ar. at St. Thomas	9 30	3 50	8 45

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto.

STRAYED.

CAME INTO THE PREMISES OF the undersigned, lot No. 1, con. 5, Dunwich, on or about the 1st Nov., 1888, a one-year-old steer. The owner is requested to prove property, pay charges and take the animal away.

JOHN D. McDIARMID.

Dutton, Jan. 14, 1889. 1-31

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

One hundred acres, being the North half of Lot 7, 2nd Con., Dunwich; 85 acres cleared. Good orchard, frame house, barn and stable. Also the job of clearing and fencing 50 or 100 acres on lot 6, 5th con., north of con. A, Dunwich. For further particulars apply to JOHN G. McRAE, Dutton. 2-14

You Carry

A whole medicine chest in your pocket, with one box of Ayer's Pills. As they operate directly on the stomach and bowels, they indirectly affect every other organ of the body. When the stomach is out of order, the head is affected, digestion fails, the blood becomes impoverished, and you fall an easy victim to any prevalent disease. Miss M. E. Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., puts the whole truth in a nutshell, when she says: "I use no other medicine than Ayer's Pills. They are all that any one needs, and just splendid to save money in doctors' bills."

Here is an instance of

A Physician

who lost his medicine chest, but, having at hand a bottle of Ayer's Pills, found himself fully equipped.—J. Arrison, M. D., of San José, Cal., writes:

"Some three years ago, by the merest accident, I was forced, so to speak, to prescribe Ayer's Cathartic Pills for several sick men among a party of engineers in the Sierra Nevada mountains, my medicine chest having been lost in crossing a mountain torrent. I was surprised and delighted at the action of the Pills, so much so, indeed, that I was led to a further trial of them, as well as of your Cherry Pectoral and Sarsaparilla. I have nothing but praise to offer in their favor."

John W. Brown, M. D., of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I prescribe Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

T. E. Hastings, M. D., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "That Ayer's Pills do control and cure the complaints for which they are designed, is as conclusively proven to me as anything possibly can be. They are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of the profession."

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

County Council.

The Committee on Petitions and Legislation had a number of subjects of interest brought under their notice. In their report upon them they recommended that no action be taken with reference to the communication from the county of Waterloo, asking for the petition for amendments to the Act relating to hawkers' and peddlers' licenses. In committee of the whole this was amended, and it was decided to concur in the petition, the object of which is to still further protect established traders from the competition of non-residents.

It was recommended that the council concur in the suggestions of the council of Bruce to petition the Legislature to amend the system of conducting the sale of lands in townships and villages for taxes, to permit the corporations to conduct the sales in the same manner as counties, cities and towns.

No action was recommended on the request of the corporation of the city of Ottawa for co-operation in an attempt to secure the abolition of all exemptions.

No action was recommended on the request of the county council of Kent that the council petition the Legislature to pass a bill providing for the construction and repair of roads under the local improvement plan.

It was recommended that Boswell Tomlinson be granted a free hawker's and peddler's license.

It was recommended, as requested by the council of Oxford, that the council petition the House of Commons to pass an act to prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage in this Dominion.

That the second communication from the county of Oxford be not concurred in, but that our representatives in the Legislative Assembly be requested to oppose any legislation that will curtail and limit the powers of county councils over jailers, police magistrates, and other officials of the county council, and the duties and expenditures pertaining to their offices, and that this council petition the Legislative Assembly to provide:

1. For the election of all county officials paid by fees.

2. For the appointment by county councils of all officials paid partly by fees and partly by salary received from the Government and county, said appointments to be approved by the Government before being confirmed.

3. For the appointment by the county councils of all officials whose salaries are wholly paid by the council.

With the exception mentioned, the report was adopted.

In the afternoon a deputation from the Dutton High School, consisting of Mr. Peter Stalker and Dr. Leitch, addressed the council on behalf of the school. The expenditure of the school, $3,090, is made up as follows: Head master, $1,000; first assistant, $700; second assistant, $600; maps, etc., $126; janitor, $75; rent, $175; incidentals, $4.14. Number on register, 107; average attendance, 70; passed midsummer examination, 8; passed university matriculation, 2, both obtaining first-class honors and one a scholarship; one passed medical matriculation and one law; two received second-class and five third-class certificates.

Moved by Mr. Cranston, seconded by Mr. Stalker, that this council petition the Local Legislature to change the ending of the financial year in municipalities from the 31st to the 15th of December, and have the auditing done at that time instead of the statement now required by statute, and the local members be asked to pass a bill to that effect.

Moved by Mr. Payne, seconded by Mr. McGregor, that this council pay off the debts of the Dutton High School, said to be about $600.—Lost.

Moved by Mr. Turner, seconded by Mr. Leitch, that the equalization committee be asked to consider the advisability of appointing valuators to value the real property in the county, the said committee to report at the June sessions. Carried.

Mr. A. McDougall gave notice that he would apply for a grant of $200 to assist in building a lock-up at Rodney.

The Educational Committee reported as follows: That the sum of $50 be granted to defray expenses of distributing public school promotion examination papers and printing; that the account of the County Board of Examiners amounting to $59.65 be paid; that the following accounts for high school entrance examinations be paid: Vienna, $32.76; Aylmer, $20.50; Dutton, $40.85. That the grants to high schools be the same as in 1888, viz., Aylmer, $1,700; Dutton, $1,500; St. Thomas, $1,400; Vienna, $750, on condition that all country pupils be admitted to said schools free of charge.—Adopted.

On motion of Mr. McGregor, seconded by Mr. Hine, Samuel S. McColl was appointed trustee of the Dutton High School.

Moved by Mr. Cline, seconded by Mr. McCredie, that all monies needed to carry on high schools outside of county and legislative grants be raised by rate on said pupils.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cranston, seconded by Mr. Turner, that the council petition the Local Legislature to pass an act to make it compulsory in all high schools to charge an uniform fee on all attending such schools.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stalker, seconded by Mr. Dancey, that $200 be granted towards the erection of a lock-up in the village of West Lorne.—Laid over until June session.

Moved by Bower, seconded by Hathaway, that this council petition the Legislature to so amend the law that the expense of conducting the high school examinations and reading papers be borne by the high school boards.—Lost.

The Joint Committees of the city and county councils met in the City Engineer's office on Thursday evening to arrange a basis of agreement, for the next five years, for the amounts to be paid by each for the administration of justice in the county and city. There were present: For the city—Mayor Morse, Alds. Martyn, Arkell, Cole, McCully, Idsardi and City Clerk Ellis. For the county—Warden Godwin, Councillors Cline, Leitch, Turner, Dancey, Pollock, Payne and County Clerk K. W. McKay. Warden Godwin was appointed chairman and K. W. McKay secretary. After a lengthy discussion an offer was made on behalf of the county that the administration of justice be arranged on the basis of population, which would make the city's share about one-quarter, the repairs to jail and court house to be arranged on the basis of assessment, which would be about one-fifth that the city would have to pay, and for the maintenance of prisoners each to pay according to the number of prisoners committed from each. This was not accepted by the representatives from the city, but the following resolution was finally put and carried:

Moved by A. J. Leitch, seconded by Thomas Arknell, that the basis of settlement of administration of justice and all other accounts to which the city should contribute, not including the jail expenditure, be one-fifth for the city and four fifths for the county, on an average of cost for last five years; that jail expenditure be divided in proportion to the number of city prisoners to whole number, also on an average of cost for last five years.—Carried.

City Clerk Ellis and County Clerk McKay were instructed to go over the accounts for the past five years, and determine the sum to be paid yearly for the next five years by the city to the county, on the terms of the above resolution. The city for the past five years has been paying the county $2,200 per year, but by the terms agreed upon during the next five years the amount to be paid will exceed $3,000, and probably reach in the neighborhood of $4,000.

Address and Presentation.

On Thursday evening last a large number of the members and adherents of the Methodist Church paid an unexpected and unceremonious visit to Mr. Lacey, the esteemed leader of the choir, which he has so long and so ably conducted. After they had taken possession of the house Mr. and Mrs. Lacey were called into the parlor, and the pastor of the church read the following address:

To Mr. Lacey:

Dear Friend,—We, representing the members of the Methodist Church in Dutton, have met to night in order to show our appreciation of your services in connection with the choir. For many years the "service of song" has been largely under your care, and you have spared neither time nor labor in endeavoring to promote its efficiency. We have seen with pleasure the fidelity with which you have attended to your work, considering the distance from your home. Your attendance at practice and the public services has been commendable; your willingness also to assist the Sabbath School at the anniversary services for so many years is well known and highly appreciated. Allow us then to present you with this easy chair, not as a return for your services, but as an expression of our appreciation.

Also, to Mrs. Lacey, we would ask her acceptance of this silver pickle cruet, for we doubt not she would have preferred your company at home while duty called you to the choir.

Trusting that God may long preserve you both, and that for many years your services may be continued to the church and choir, and that at last we may meet in the higher sanctuary and join in its "service of song."

On behalf of the church and congregation.

Mr. Lacey, in reply, expressed his sincere thanks to all for their appreciation of his services, spoke of the harmony existing among the members of the choir, and said that they had made his work a pleasure to him, and expressed a desire for increased prosperity of the church and choir.

The ladies then busied themselves in serving tea, and the rest all seemed bent on having a most pleasant and enjoyable evening, every one being ready to do anything possible for the entertainment of the company.

Shedden.

A tea meeting in connection with the Methodist Church was held on Monday evening and was a grand success financially, about $70 being taken at the door, which goes to the building fund. Speeches were delivered by Revs. Hamilton, of Fingal; Claris, of Frome; George, of Iona; Kershaw, of Talbotville, and Chas. Moore, of Plattville. Music was furnished by Messrs. J. Long and W. Bingham, assisted by Miss Bingham and Miss McIntyre, all of Union. The programme deserves much praise. We would be pleased to have the Rev. Mr. George at some future time to give his address on "This Canada of Ours," as it is very interesting.

C. W. Heidt, who has been seriously ill, is rapidly recovering. Drs. Howell and Penwarden were the attending physicians.

Mr. T. Tanner, an aged gentleman, is very low at present.

Miss Bowlsby, of Talbotville, has returned home after spending two weeks with friends here.

W. H. Morrison left for Haldimand on Tuesday to cast his vote in the election there.

Coyne's Corners.

Malcolm Buchanan, who has been visiting friends in this neighborhood lately, has returned to the States to resume his duties.

Messrs. Alex. and D. McKillop are visiting friends in Southwold.

Master John Patton, who has been confined to the house lately, is improving slowly.

Daniel McKillop, of Clay street, intends building a large brick house in the spring, which will add greatly to the appearance of that street.

The school is again open.

The Literary Societies.

A good programme was rendered at the meeting of the Young People's Christian Advance Society, held in Knox Church last Tuesday evening. The attendance was good and the society is now fairly started, with the brightest of prospects before it. The evening's programme was opened with a duet by Misses McIntyre and Hollingshead, after which the president, C. St. Clair Leitch delivered a fitting inaugural address; Miss K. McPherson followed with an amusing reading, entitled "How Five Bachelors kept house." A hymn was then sung, after which the pastor, Rev. T. Wilson, gave an address, full of good council and instruction; H. O'Malley read a well prepared essay on Shakespere; the debate, "Resolved, that the reading of fiction is morally and intellectually beneficial," was argued for the affirmative by R. Sutherland and C. L. Patterson, and for the negative by M. McArthur and J. R. Wilson, the decision being given for the affirmative. A well given recitation by Miss F. McIntyre, an excellent quartette by Misses McIntyre and Hollingshead, Messrs. Patterson and Saunders, and the report of the critic, Miss Belle Patterson, closed the programme of this, the first meeting of the society. The next meeting will be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 12, of which the programme will be published next week.

The High School Literary Society is adding largely to its membership at every meeting and appears to be getting a more solid footing than ever before. Last Friday evening officers were elected as follows—President, J. Patton; vice-president, R. Sutherland; secretary, M. Campbell; treasurer, B. Graham; council, Miss K. McPherson, J. Tremeer, B. A., J. Gillies, E. Knight, Miss Lizzie Cameron. The programme was carried out with the best of order, and was well rendered. A solo by J. Tremeer, B. A., an essay by A. E. Leitch, a harmonica solo by J. R. Wilson, instrumental music by Miss K. McPherson, a lively and interesting newspaper read by Mr. McRae, and the debate, "Resolved that the Indian has suffered more than the negro at the hands of the white man," by D. McRae and J. R. Wilson for the affirmative and C. L. Patterson and D. D. McPherson for the negative, made up the evening's programme. The debate was well argued, the decision being given in favor of the negative. Following is the programme for next Friday evening:—Reading, J. R. Patton; essay, Estella McLean; music, Belle Patterson; debate, "Resolved, that Pitt was a greater statesman than Chatham," affirmative, A. E. Leitch and R. Fletcher, negative, J. E. Saunders and D. McCallum; music, J. Tremeer, B. A.; music N. Campbell; critics, Misses B. and Jessie Mitton; editor, J. McKillop.

Shooting.

The Dutton Gun Club had a friendly match at Ridgetown on Tuesday with the club of that place, of which the following is a condensed score:—Ridgetown—H. A. Mallory, 3; Chas. Scane, 11; Wm. Thorold, 13; Henry Scane, 12; H. O'Lone, 7; Cottam, 9; total, 55. Dutton—Wm. James, 6; C. Doyle, 7; Jos. Sifton, 6; W. Hollingshead, 7; Wm. Eustice, 12; Jos. Bake, 10; total, 48. Macomber targets were used, each person having 15 shots. Afterwards a match with glass balls was had, Dutton winning by 1. Following is the score:—Dutton—W. James, 0; C. Doyle, 1; Jos. Sifton, 3; W. Hollingshead, 3; W. Eustice, 2, J. Bake, 4; total, 13. Ridgetown—A. H. Mallory, 0; Chas. Scane, 3; H. O'Lone, 1; Cottam, 1; total, 12. Five balls each were used. Our boys speak highly of the manner in which they were treated by the members of the Ridgetown club, and say that they have one of the best organized clubs they have yet met with. The Ridgetown boys will visit Dutton about Feb. 15.

Cowal.

Jno. Campbell had Dugald Murray before Squire Hatton last Wednesday for carrying a revolver. He was fined $10 and costs.

Duncan McCallum, who lives east of the village, had his feet badly bruised while working in the Michigan lumber woods. He returned home last week.

The marriage of Miss Sarah Marshman to Geo. Milligan took place at the residence of the bride's parents on Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Hann, of Iona, in the presence of about 80 invited guests. The bride, beautifully attired in cream muslin, was supported by Miss Mary Marshman, sister of the bride, and Henry Robbins acted as groomsman. The presents were numerous and costly, but lack of space forbids us to give a full list of them.

Wallacetown.

The following is the result of the examinations held in this school during the month of January. Those in class I getting 50 per cent. or over; class II 33 per cent., and class III below 33 per cent:

Algebra—class I, Florence Davis; class II, Ed. Stillwell. Edythe Connel; class III, Mary J. Sutherland.

History—class I, Duncan Bell, Mattie Gerow; class II, Albert McGill, Mary McLaws, Wm. Sutherland; class III, Maggie McKillop, Kate Campbell. [Maggie McCallum, absent.

Literature—class I, William Sutherland, Duncan Bell; class II, Mary McLaws, Maggie McCallum, Albert McGill; class III, Mattie Gerow.

J. R. PATON, teacher.

Mrs. Whyte, who has been laid up for the past week, is able to be around again.

A large dance took place in the Town Hall, Wallacetown, on Wednesday, Jan. 23rd, under the auspices of the young gentlemen. A very enjoyable time was spent, over 40 couples being present. Excellent music was furnished by J. Waddell, of St. Thomas.

The prospects of the railroad coming through this place are very good. Land is increasing in value very fast. Places that were offered for sale a while ago for anything they would bring, cannot be purchased at any reasonable price at present.

For more than forty years, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been successfully prescribed in cases of consumption. This medicine always affords great relief in pulmonary diseases. Ask your druggist for it.

"I'm laying for you," said the hen to the housekeeper.

Milburn's beef, iron and wine is prepared from fresh beef, soluble iron, and pure sherry wine, combined with choice aromatics.

A drawn battle—A war picture.

A man troubled with the big-head complaint feels very small after he has been cured.

A FATAL ATTACK.—A fatal attack of croup is a frequent occurrence among children. Every household should be guarded by keeping Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It breaks up colds, coughs, croup, asthma and bronchitis in a remarkable manner.

"SHALL I LEAVE MY POST?"

THE LAST BRAVE WORDS OF THE HERO OF KHARTOUM.

A Circumstantial Account of Gordon's Death.

THE FIRST AUTHENTIC DESCRIPTION OF THE LAMENTABLE TRAGEDY—BETRAYED BY A TRUSTED LIEUTENANT—CRUELLY AND TREACHEROUSLY DONE TO DEATH.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The mail from Suakim brings despatches from Gen. Grenfell, among which is the latest, and this time an absolutely authentic, account of the last hours of Gen. Gordon. The account, which has been officially declared to be true, is furnished by Demetrio Gorgio, a Greek who was present at the capture of Khartoum. He says:—I was at Khartoum the night it was taken. The Nile had gone back so that a part of the city was open. Gordon did not construct fresh trenches and ramparts, because he thought there were sufficient troops to defend the city. There were three thousand, I think. The gaps and all round about were held by a large force under Farig Pasha. That night Farig moved his troops, especially the blacks, from the gap, saying the soldiers were wanted on the other side. Gordon had perfect

CONFIDENCE IN FARIG.

The attack took place at two points. At the largest gap there was no resistance. If the British army or even a few of them had arrived, even one hour before the attack took place, Khartoum would not have been taken and Gordon's troops would have fought to the last. Farig had sent word to the Mahdi, "Unless you attack to-night all is lost." On that night all was blood and flames. The city had passed over from the command of Gordon to the Mahdi. It was

A DREADFUL NIGHT.

The air echoed with horrible shrieks, yells, lamentations and wailings, and smelt of blood. I had three friends, Greeks. I hastened to rescue them. I had two Mahdist uniforms given me by an Arab friend. One I gave to one friend, putting on the other myself. It was nearing daybreak when I took my friends to my house. Some Arabs rushed in, telling me I ought to go to the Government House, the Seraglio they called it, at once. I asked why. They replied, "All the great officers of the Mahdi have gone there to kill Gordon Pasha." When they saw that the third friend had no Mahdist uniform on they slew him. We were then taken into the court yard. I saw Gordon Pasha on the balcony facing the river. We had entered at the back of the palace, entering the yard where the sycamore tree is. Georgio Demetrio, the principal medical officer of the Soudan and the Provinces, and Nicola Lemindata, the Greek Consul, were with him. Five hundred dervishes, who had been sent by the Mahdi with special orders to take Gordon alive, stood at the foot of the staircase. I went up the stairs, being sent by the men below, who were vociferating "Gordon Pasha, Gordon Pasha." Gordon coolly left the balcony.

SMOKING A CIGARETTE

"Fly!" said the other two, "while there is yet time. Go in at the little door and take the boat."

"Shall I fly and leave my post?" Gordon replied indignantly. "That, indeed would be a disgrace. I shall not fly."

He then went into his inner room and donned his full uniform and sword. Then came out and

GRANDLY DREW HIMSELF UP

to his full height. On his visage was a look of scorn.

"Whom seek ye?" he asked on gazing at the sea of angry faces.

"Gordon Pasha," they cried.

"You want him, do you? I am he. Come up hither," Gordon replied.

On being again urged by Demetrio and the Greek Consul to fly, Gordon replied. "For shame; would you have me abandon my post ignominiously?" He could easily have escaped at the rear then. As Gordon stood boldly facing the dervishes several superior Mahdist generals came up. The dervishes allowed them to pass. They ascended the stairs and asked for the Pasha. Gordon met them saying, "I am he," and in military fashion, intimating that he knew that they had taken the place, and that consequently he surrendered according to the usages of war. But Nassas, one of the generals, snatched hold of his sword, at the same time in a brutal and most cowardly manner striking Gordon an unexpected blow. The Pasha would have fought desperately had he thought he would not be treated in an honorable manner. He fell, rolling down the stairs. As he rolled another general speared him in the left side, inflicting a terrible wound. Thus died Gordon. I was there a spectator to the ghastly deed. I got out of the way when he rolled to the bottom of the stairs.

HANDED THEM HIS SWORD

Some say Gordon was cut up in little pieces, but others relate that they embalmed his body and took it to the Mahdi. There were bodies cut up, but I am inclined to believe these were the bodies of the Consul and the doctor.

The Sugar-Electricity Swindle.

Sugar is good, and electricity is good, but a certain combination of the two which was known as the Freund process has proved anything but good, and a number of sore-hearted speculators are mourning their gullibility as they realize that Professor Freund was a good deal of a humbug, and that his so-called "process" of refining raw sugar, by means of electricity very much of a sham. The Professor was a believer in the gullibility of human nature, knowing that if a thing be asserted with enough dogmatic assurance, especially if it throw out hints of large prospective money profits, there are plenty of sucking doves, and lambkins about to take the bait. He invented some plausible story about a wonderful discovery he had made in the adaptation of electricity to the refining of raw sugar. It was to work marvels, a revolution in sugar making indeed. Those who took hold of it would find millions in it. They would soon control the market. No competitor could stand against them, so cheaply and effectively could the work be done. Here indeed was richness. Dreams of wealth buzzed in many a greedy brain. What a chance, to be sure, to drive all competitors off the field, and secure a bouncing monopoly all to oneself. And so the flies were not long in gathering about the Freund fly trap, and buzz right merrily they did when a "company" was formed which was to knock all competitors in the sugar refining business higher than Gilderoy's kite ever soared. For a time all went well. New York "smart" men, and English "smart" men and in fact "smart" men pretty well everywhere were eager to take shares in the bonanza, and prices boomed skyward. Their career was rocket-like, however, and now they have dropped earthward like the useless stick of the fiery rocket. The bottom has fallen out of the company; it has been discovered that Freund's method, which he treated as the most precious thing in existence, to be guarded with jealous secrecy from every peering eye, was mere jugglery, and that the money which credulous shareholders had furnished had gone to fine houses, and carriages, and silver plate, etc., for the Professor and his friends. One does not like to say that the defrauded shareholders deserve little more sympathy them the more vulgar gulls who receive a brick-bat or a box full of sawdust in return for the dollars they sent in response to some "Catching" advertisement, but after all it does not seem as if there had been much more honest, careful investigation in one case than in the other. The Sugar Fraud was a nine days' wonder, and has moved off the stage to make room for other frauds, leaving a good many people blowing on their burned fingers, and regretting the day they ever meddled with so "friendly" a man, and his new plan for refining raw sugar.

AS YOU LIKE IT.

A Mother's Kiss.

There's the kiss of the sister, so loving and true,
Whose impress but lasts till the morrow:
The kiss of a wife when adversity comes,
A token of grief, or of sorrow,
The kiss of a husband, so burdened with love,
The seal of a tender affection;
The kiss of a friend, who doth conjure up dreams
In his mind of a past recollection.
The kiss of a child, sweet and pure as the rose
Or the lily that blooms in the valley;
The kiss of a sweetheart, ere parting at eve,
And longing, tho' late, yet to dally.
The kiss of a nephew, the kiss of a niece,
The kiss of a father or brother;
All taken together and salted to taste,
Don't compare with the kiss of a mother.
—M. J. Donnelly.

Patti charges more every year for her absolutely farewell warbling. She is now singing in England for $3,500 a night.

A trading establishment in the Congo recently sent an order to England for a consignment of rum, and very appropriately it was added in the postscript, "Send more handcuffs."

When a rich man dies who has been notoriously niggardly, the obituarian remarks that he was "quiet and unostentatious in his charities"; but fails to say he was so very secretive no living soul ever discovered them.

Gen. John M. Palmer of Illinois, estimates that he travelled more than 7,000 miles and made more than 100 speeches during his campaign for the Governorship. Such work by a man of 72 ought to have won, but it didn't.

In fashionable Philadelphia households instead of the parents sending out announcements of the latest family addition the newcomer announces himself or herself by a tiny visiting card—the date of birth and the address following the name.

A man in Malton, Nev., tipped a couple of barrels of whisky into a natural spring which flowed on his premises and invited all the ranchmen for miles around to come and see it. The next day he sold the spring for $10,000 in gold dust and fled the country.

Theatres in Madrid are in a bad fix. They have been compelled by law to use the electric light only. The electric service is very bad, and the lights became so dim at a recent performance that the audience compelled the manager to return their money.

The mailing of charged phonograms from England has caused a row in the British Postoffice. The senders claim "printed matter rates," while the authorities claim letter postage. They have an eye to the postal revenue when phonograms shall have largely superseded letters.

H. Rider Haggard has become a vegetarian. He found by experiment that he could work longer and to better effect on a meatless diet than when he indulged freely in beef and mutton. He has become a convert to the theory that the imagination becomes more active when the body abstains from animal nourishment.

Telegraph operators, it seems, are developing a disease of their own. One or two cases recently occurred abroad, in which the finger nails dropped off, one after another. The affection is supposed to be due to the constant hammering and pushing with the finger ends required by the working of the telegraph instruments.

The iron chairs arranged so thickly along the Champs Elysees belong to the City of Paris. There are 7,500 of them. The right to control them for the period of four years will soon be sold at auction, the upset price being 42,000 francs. The buyer may demand three sous for the use of an armchair, and one sou for a plain chair, and must keep them in good order.

The management of the Wabash railway is having all the bridges and cattle guards on its lines covered with whitwash with which salt is mixed, the effect being both to preserve the timber and make it fire-proof, beside somewhat improving its appearance. This work is done about once a year and is believed to liberally repay the comparatively small expense.

Toothpicks are made in Michigan from white birch, and are sold at a little less than $2 a case of 150,000 picks. Birch logs are sawed, steamed and cut into ribbons three inches wide, which are run through the machinery, eight or ten at once, and fall in finished pieces into baskets placed for their reception. The packing is done principally by expert Indian women

The experiments of Mach, the Austrian chemist, show that rifle bullets in motion may be photographed. His process requires the illumination of the bullet by letting it break an electric current. The photographs obtained showed an air formation in front of the bullet having the form of a hyperbole, while behind it almost a vacuum was formed, in which, when the initial velocity was very great, there was some curious spiral motions. From the description given, there appeared from these photographs to be a great similarity between the motion of a body through the water and that of a projectile through the air.

The Work of Literary Women.

It is one of the significant and not reassuring phases of present day life that the moral purity and spiritual peace, if not also the intellectual sanity, of very many, is seriously threatened by the work of literary women Women have been "emancipated," and evil results as well as good are to be expected from the process. Much as every well-wisher of humanity would like to believe the contrary, woman is not all angel, even at her best, and as the loveliest things may be the strongest temptations to evil, or women lifted intellectually, and given the full freedom of expression which she now possesses, may easily approve herself one of the strongest disintegrating forces in intellectual and spiritual life. The influence of some women has undoubtedly been powerful for good in many directions, but from women of another stamp, influence of another kind is radiating, which, if it does not counteract the good work done, does at anyrate offset much of it. Some of the frankest, most outspoken attacks on the marriage relation, as generally legalized in Christian countries have been made by women. And other attacks by the same agency have not been less dangerous because more veiled and insidious. It is a woman to whom belongs the notoriety of having first put the question, "Is Marriage a Failure?" which has percolated so rapidly through the various strata of thought that it is already a catchword in the very slums of intellectual life. Who shall say for how much looseness and flabby deterioration of moral fibre that woman must be held responsible? Other women, in the more seductive form of the novel, have pleaded not less boldly, if more artfully, for more generous latitude in the indulgence of passion. Two of the most petted literary women in the United State to day are so unblushing in some of their erotic utterances that even the vigorous and certainly not too sensitive natures of some of the writers on the New York press, have felt compelled to enter a protest. Then it is needless to say that one of the most insidious attacks ever made—not one of the most powerful—against Christianity as a divinely inspired and superhuman religion has been made by a woman. These are surface indications of the trend which the thought currents of the world are taking under the influence of "literated" women.

It is pleasant to turn from the vagaries of this class of literary women who are really doing mischief, whatever they and their worshippers may think, to the unpretentious and self-denying labour of one specimen of another sort of woman, who is giving practical demonstration of what a determined, common sense young lady can do, single handed, in the way of independent missionary effort. The lady in question is Miss Grace Howard, who is living among the Sioux Indians of Dakota, and trying to teach them a better art of life than that to which they are accustomed. Though reared in luxury in New York, her enthusiasm for the aborigines led her out into the wilderness, and there she has lived now two or three years, teaching the Indian women how to sew, cook and take care of their children, and give their primitive houses some of the elements of civilization. She has won the confidence of the men also to such an extent that they come to her house to receive instruction in the elements of the white man's civilization. Miss Howard's efforts are wholly independent. She lives on an allowance made her by her father, and is unconnected with and so untrammelled by any society. So well has she succeeded that she now has more to do than she can personally attend to, or her private means sustain, and she has recently succeeded in interesting U. S. Secretary Vilas in her work and getting a grant of $600 a year from his department.

Patience With the Living.

Sweet friend, when thou and I are gone
Beyond earth' sweary labor,
When small shall be our need of ace
From comrade or from neighbor;
Passed all the strife, the toil, the care,
And done with all the sighing,
What tender ruth shall we have gained,
Alas! by simply dying?

Then lips too chary of their praise
Will tell their merits over,
And eyes too swift our faults to see
Shall no defect discover.
Then hands that would not lift a stone
Where stones were thick to cumber
Our steep hill path, will scatter flowers
Above our pillowed slumber.

Sweet friend, perchance both thou and I,
Ere love is past forgiving,
Should take the earnest lesson home—
Be patient with the living.
To-day's repressed rebuke may save
Our blinding tears to-morrow;
Then patience—e'en when keenest edge
May whet a nameless sorrow.

'Tis easy to be gentle when
Death's silence shames our clamor,
And easy to discern the best
Through memory's mystic glamor;
But wise it were for thee and me,
Ere love is past forgiving,
To take the tender lesson home—
Be patient with the living.

O'Rell on American Women.

Max O'Rell says in the January "Forum"—That which struck me most in America, from first to last, is the total absence of stupid-looking faces. All are not handsome, but all are intelligent and beaming with activity. In my opinion it is in this that American beauty chiefly consists. In the large cities of the East the first thing which caught my attention was the thinness of the men and the plumpness of the women. This seemed to hint that the former lived in a furnace of activity and the latter in cotton wool. This impression soon deepened into a conviction. It seemed to me that her lot was as near to being perfection as an earthly lot could be. A respect amounting to reverence is shown for her and it appears to be the chief aim of her protectors to surround her with luxury and make her path through life a sunny one.

So far as adding to her mental and physical grace goes, this plan of making every woman an uncrowned queen has answered completely. Seeing her high position, she has set herself to work to fill it becomingly and it is the cultivation of America's daughters, it is their charming independence and a consciousness of their power that make them so attractive, and render American society so delightful to the stranger. In their treatment of women the Americans might give more than one lesson to the men of the old world, even to the Frenchman, who, in the matter of politeness, lives a good deal, I am afraid on the reputation of his ancestors. The respect for women in America seemed to be perfectly disinterested, purely platonic.

In France this respect almost borders on gallantry. A Frenchman will always stand back to let a woman pass, but he will generally profit by the occasion to take a good look at her.

If an outsider be competent to form an opinion, I venture to say that the American woman does not render to man a tithe of the devotion she receives from him. The French wife repays a husband's devotion by protecting his interest—an American too often repays it by breaking into his capital.

Serious Railway Collision.

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—A very serious railway collision occurred at Point St. Charles the other afternoon, attended by the very sudden death of one woman, also causing grave injuries to several others. At half-past four, as the Delaware and Hudson train was leaving for New York, an engine was coming into the Bonaventure station to take out the St. Laurent train. After crossing the canal the locomotive in question was standing in the siding waiting for the outgoing train to pass, and it appears Engineer Atkinson by a fatal miscalculation started his engine with the intention of moving out on the main line, but before the latter was quite clear the locomotive ran into the first-class car of the New York train. The shock was so great that the car was shattered and the engine and tender were thrown from the track. The wrecked car contained twenty passengers, one of whom, an unknown lady, was killed almost instantly. The different hospital doctors were on hand at once and attended to the wounded, who, it is believed, will be all right in a few days. The lady killed was dressed in mourning, was about 50 years of age, and unknown to anyone on board the train, although it is quite probable that the body will be identified before very long. Atkinson, the unfortunate driver, was known personally to Mr. Stone, the agent at Bonaventure station, who states that he was one of the best and most careful men on the road.

Mrs. Snyder's Snake.

During the summer of 1871 Mrs. George Snyder, of Philadelphia, came home from a party one evening feeling very thirsty. She went to a hydrant in the yard and drew a cupful of water and began to drink, when suddenly she became aware that something other than water was passing down her throat. The incident was almost forgotten until about January, 1878. One night she awoke with her mouth wide open and something creeping out of it, but beforer he husband, who had been awakened by her struggles, could seize the reptile, it had drawn itself back into the throat and out of sight. Mrs. Snyder soon began to decline in health and lost daily until her weight was reduced to ninety pounds. She had an enormous appetite, and no amount of food, however large, could satisfy her cravings.

For months she tasted nothing but meat and milk. This state of affairs continued for ten years. The reptile had grown to considerable size and strength, and was still growing, and her death was soon expected. She had never tasted beer until the early part of last month, when an uncontrollable desire for that beverage seized her. Snyder was surprised when he came home at night and his wife asked that beer be procured for her. He granted the request and with happy results. The sight of the liquor made her sick, but nevertheless, believing that it should be taken, she drank several glasses, and in a few minutes was seized with violent fits of vomiting and fainted. She had ejected a curious creature with the head of a lizard and a body not unlike that of a snake. She rapidly recovered, and soon regained her former weight and strength.

Sir Charles and Lady Dilke are expected to return to England from their Indian trip before the end of the present month.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

Colchester, N. S. is asking for the repeal of the Scott Act.

The Grocers' Guild of Kingston is compiling a dead-beat list for private use.

Lady Macdonald is learning type-writing, to facilitate her correspondence and literary work.

Coal at the rate of a hundred tons a day is at present being taken out of the Anthracite mine at Banff.

There were 509 cases tried before the Police Magistrate in St. Thomas last year, of which 243 were drunks.

During the past six months live stock to the value of 30,453 has been exported to the United States from Kingston alone.

Montreal society is excited at present over the elopement of a married lady, the mother of two children, with a commercial traveller.

It is rumoured that the Dominion Government intend giving the Orient Steamship Company the contract for the fast Atlantic mail service.

The London (Ont.) boot and shoe dealers have sensibly decided not to display any goods outside their doors, owing to the amount stolen during last year.

Ottawa claims to have the oldest voter in the Dominion in the person of Mrs. Jones, over one hundred years, who voted in the municipal elections on Monday.

Xavier Batoche is in Ottawa at present representing the interests of his Metis brethren, who are not yet entirely satisfied with the settlement of their claims.

The Dominion Postmaster-General has issued a circular to postmasters forbidding the presentation of address and testimonials by officials to those placed in authority over them.

The Hamilton Police Magistrate has intimated that lotteries at church bazaars are illegal, and that the good people who initiate them in the interests of the funds of the church will, if prosecuted, be fined.

Rev. S. G. Bland, of Kingston, in an address on Thursday night, strongly condemned Saturday shopping, which keeps dry goods and other clerks so late at work that they are unfit for Sunday service.

The Canadian Pacific railway will apply at the next session of the Dominion Parliament for an Act enabling them to consolidate the capital charges upon their entire railway system and to make arrangements for steamship plant and equipment.

It is expected that the St. Catharines Milling and Lumber Company will present a claim to the Dominion Government for $200,000, for the privileges of which they are deprived by the recent Privy Council decision giving the control of the timber and minerals in the disputed territory to the Ontario Government.

AMERICAN.

Mrs. Jay Gould died in New York Monday evening.

The financial affairs of Plymouth church, in Brooklyn, N. Y., are in a critical condition.

Six inches of snow have fallen in the Wisconsin pineries, and the lumbermen are jubilant.

American lumbermen are petitioning Congress to impose an import duty on Canadian manufactured lumber.

There is unusual activity in the United States Navy Department, and it is believed a force will be sent at an early date to Samoa.

There was another big decline in Chicago wheat yesterday, Cash went to 94½c and May delivery to 99c, the lowest prices since August last.

On Sunday in New York Rabbi Gottheil vigorously denounced Baron Hirsch's scheme for the assimilation of the Jewish people with the Christians.

Governor West, of Utah, is in Washington, and will testify before the House that the Mormons are unfitted to exercise the rights of American citizenship.

The Hiram W. Davis carriage factory, in Cincinnati, on Monday discharged their 600 employes, whom they will take back individually, but not as Knights of Labour.

It is stated that in a special audience the Pope instructed the visiting American prelates to strenuously combat the socialism spreading among Irish Catholics in America.

The members of the Indianapolis Ministerial Association have decided that unless the Legislature pays $5 for each prayer during the coming session, they will refuse to officiate.

The State Grange of Virginia wants a bounty of 55 per cent. on exported agricultural products to equalize their position with that of the manufacturers, who are protected to that extent.

A railway collision occurred yesterday morning near Talmage, Ohio, by which a passenger and a freight train were badly wrecked, and four train hands and eight passengers were killed.

FOREIGN.

Twenty-seven Socialists have been arrested within a few days in the suburbs of Vienna.

The Russian Government are preparing to introduce a tobacco monopoly throughout the kingdom.

An Imperial ukase orders that the number of sharpshooters in the Russia army shall be doubled.

The Queen Regent of Spain will visit the Queen of England immediately after her arrival at Biarritz.

Emperor William, in opening the Landtag in Berlin yesterday, declared that all Germany's foreign relations were friendly.

The Socialists have unanimously decided to support Gen. Boulanger, and this will probably secure his return by a large majority.

A fight in Zanzibar is reported between the Germans and the natives, in which the latter, after a stubborn resistance, were defeated.

The English Government have decided not to appoint a successor to Lord Sackville at Washington until after General Harrison's inauguration.

The Shah of Persia is announced to be in St. Petersburg in April for two weeks, after which he will visit France, Spain, Italy, Montenegro, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor and Caucasia.

The Russian budget for 1889 shows a surplus of 4,500,000 roubles, and the Minister of Finance declares that the satisfactory prospect for the coming year is due to the sincerely pacific policy of the Czar.

Mr. Gladstone, accompanied by the directors, witnessed an interesting excavation at Pompeii on Tuesday. He afterwards visited the museum and the house of the Fauns, and lunched in Jupiter's Temple.

The Panama canal difficulty has been temporarily averted, all the contractors having consented to receive shares in the Panama railway as a guarantee for sums becoming due to them in the immediate future.

A Melbourne despatch says Cardinal Moran stated that the Parnell letters were offered to Archbishop Walsh before they were offered to the London Times, and they were soon found to be imprudent forgeries.

The San Francisco papers, commenting on Samoan affairs, say the Germans have been wrong throughout, and the United States ought to interfere to secure Samoan independence and protect American citizens on the islands.

The Victor's Crown

Should adorn the brow of the inventor of the great corn cure, Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It works quickly, never makes a sore spot, and is just the thing you want. See that you get Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, the sure, safe and painless cure for corns.

A Salt Trust.

As a popular expression of contempt the phrase "not worth his salt" will begin to lose piquancy if the English Salt Trust succeeds in its designs. They may talk about the magnitude of their "truste" in Yankee land, but "Hold Hengland" is going to outstrip them all, and is trying to combine all the salt interests in the world in one monster cuttlefish of a Trust. The projectors sent an agent through Canada and the States recently, and he is said to have returned with a favourable report, and now, it is said, he is coming back again with definite proposals. The English syndicate offers to buy out every salt works on this continent. There is to be a consolidated directorate, with offices in New York. One half the capital is to be held in England, and the other half on this side the water. Manufacturers who sell out must bind themselves not to engage in manufacturing on their own account for ten years to come, but they have the privilege of investing one-third of the proceeds of their plant in the stocks of the Trust, which it is stated, promises to return a yearly dividend of 25 per cent. Gigantic as this enterprise is, there is nothing unlikely about it, and no very formidable obstacles to overcome. On this side the line at anyrate salt making has been a losing business for the most part for years, and the manufacturers would be glad enough no doubt to retire on such favourable terms.

An English Medical Authority

affirms that the best regimen for preserving health may be summed up in the maxim. "keep the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels active." There is a world of wisdom in the observation. Obstinate constipation, or costiveness, is an exciting cause of other diseases; and, with many persons of sedentary habits, or occupations, this inaction of the bowels is a source of constant annoyance, producing piles, prolapse of the rectum, fistula, and various dyseptic symptoms. All these are warded off, and health is maintained, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets.

A single gold dollar can be made into a sheet that will carpet two rooms 16 1 2 feet square.

Don't disgust everybody by hawking, blowing and spitting, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and be cured.

The coal mines at Monterey, Cal., which have been idle for years, are to be reopened and vigorously worked.

"Like sunshine in a shady place,"
The poet called a woman's face
That gladdened all who saw its beauty.
A face, no doubt, that beamed with health,
Treat blessing which is more than wealth,
And lightens every daily duty.
O how can woman, whose hard life
With many a wearing pain is rife,
Escape the grasp of such affliction,
And be a power to bless and cheer?
The answer comes both swift and clear—
Take Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, of satisfaction being given in every case, or money refunded. See guarantee printed on bottle-wrapper.

Kentuckians raised enough sunflower seeds last summer to supply the wants of the whole United States.

Coff No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

Tan-coloured leggings are the most fashionable for children.

A Cure for Drunkenness.

The opium habit, depsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, old or middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 10 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V. LUBON 47 Wellington street East, Toronto Ont.

A Brooklyn cat got into the store of an oyster dealer one night last week and devoured eight quarts of oysters.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respy, T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

Tuscumbia, country seat of Miller county, Missouri, has not had a church building of any kind in forty years.

A. P. 434

BRONCHITIS CURED.

After spending Ten Winters South, was Cured by Scott's Emulsion.

146 Centre St., New York, June 25th, 1888.

The Winter after the great fire in Chicago I contracted Bronchial affections, and since then have been obliged to spend nearly every Winter South. Last November was advised to try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and to my surprise was relieved at once, and by continuing its use three months was entirely cured, gained flesh and strength and was able to stand even the Blizzard and attend to business every day. C. T. CHURCHILL.

Sold by all Druggists. 50c. and $1.00.

PATENTS procured. Patent Attorneys, and experts Est'd 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

CANOES. Send for Ill. Catalogue WM. ENGLISH, Peterboro, Ont.

KNITTING Creelman Bros., Georgetown, Ont. MACHINES

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO.
G. C. ROSS, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should visit us. Scientific and reliable systems taught whereby perfect fitting garments are produced. Circular with full information on application. S. CORRIGAN, Prop., 122 Yonge st. Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED, AGENTS.
The Beautiful Story. The History of Canada. The History Methodism. Living Words. Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. The Cottage Physician. Platform Echoes. Royal Path of Life. Parallel and Pictorial Family Bibles. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

SAUSAGE CASINGS—Season 1888—Now importations of English Sheeps, Finest American Hog Casings. Orders filled for any desired quantity. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
41 to 47 St. Lawrence Market, Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt., Established 1860. 72 King-st. E., Toronto

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.—Send for our Large Illustrated Catalogue of Band Instruments, Violins, Guitars, Flutes, etc., and all kinds of Trimmings. Agent for Frenche's and DeWitt's Plays. BUTLAND'S MUSIC STORE, 87 King st. West, Toronto, Ont.

Diamond Dyes

Brilliant! Durable! Economical!

Diamond Dyes excel all others in Strength, Purity and Fastness. None other are just as good. Beware of imitations, because they are made of cheap and inferior materials, and give poor, weak, crocky colors. To be sure of success, use only the DIAMOND DYES for coloring Dresses, Stockings, Yarns, Carpets, Feathers, Ribbons, &c., &c. We warrant them to color more goods, package for package, than any other dyes ever made, and to give more brilliant and durable colors. Ask for the Diamond and take no other.

A Dress Dyed
A Coat Colored
Garments Renewed
} FOR 10 CENTS.

A Child can use them!

At Druggists and Merchants. Dye Book free.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Montreal, P. Q.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 63 Niagara St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Leather Belting
BEST VALUE IN THE DOMINION.
F. E. DIXON & CO., MAKERS, 70 KING ST. E, TORONTO
Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

CANCER TUMORS, ULCERS, SCROFULA, etc., cured permanently without the knife. Apply to DR. W. L. SMITH, 124 Queen St E., Toronto.

MONEY TO LOAN
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN. CAPITAL, $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, MONTREAL. OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION, Wellington St. Toronto. This Company is prepared to make advances on the security of GOOD FARM PROPERTY at lowest Current rate of interest, and on favorable terms. MORTGAGES PURCHASED. For information apply to the Local Agents of the Company, or to
W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto, Ont.

Stained Glass
FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
M'CAUSLAND & SON,
76 King St. W., Toronto.

Brown Engines
IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.
TORONTO ENGINE WORKS
PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

Farm Loans
CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - MONTREAL.
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO.
This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms. For information apply to local agents, or to
W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Company
INCORPORATED 1855.
Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.

Subscribed Capital	$ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital	2,500,000
Total Assets	10,000,000

The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory real estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to
J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto

Young Men
SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address
M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto

MONEY A large amount of TRUST FUNDS to Loan at a very low rate of interest on first-class security. Apply to
BEATTY, CHADWICK, BLACKSTOCK & GALT, Barristers and Solicitors,
Wellington St., cor. Church, (over Bank of Toronto)
TORONTO, ONT.

FOR ONE CENT
480 ACRES FREE,
In Dakota or Montana, Broad Prararies, Fertile Valleys, Wood, Coal and clear mountain streams. Send your address on Postal Card to J. M. HUCKINS, Palmer House Block, Toronto, or, F. I WHITNEY, Gen. Pass. Agt., St Paul, Minn.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS
Don't wait until you are burnt out or robbed Buy a Safe now and sleep easy, and be sure and get prices, etc., of the New Champion Safe
S. S. KIMBALL, 577 Craig St., P.O. Box 945, Montreal, P Q.

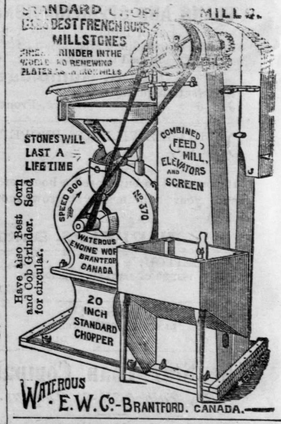
JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
THE GREAT STRENGTH GIVER
A PERFECT FOOD FOR THE SICK
A WARMING & NUTRITIOUS BEVERAGE
A POWERFUL INVIGORATOR

Delicious Beef Tea
That contains all the NUTRITIOUS and STRENGTH-GIVING properties of meat is made from
Johnston's Fluid Beef.
It is recommended by the leading doctors in England and America as being The Most Perfect Food, vastly superior in every way to any other preparation of meat. TRY IT.

Use Hop Bitters.
Cure All Diseases of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Liver, Kidney, Urinary Organs, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, DRUNKENESS. $1,000 Reward paid for a case they will not cure.

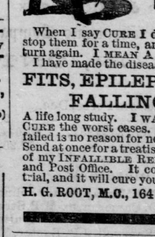
PURE GOLD FLAVORING EXTRACTS BAKING POWDER
BAKING POWDER IS MADE FROM ABSOLUTELY PURE CREAM TARTAR AND SODA
FLAVORING EXTRACTS ARE THE STRONGEST PUREST AND BEST.

TRY THE CELEBRATED
EMPIRE BLEND COFFEE,
Guaranteed Pure.
Ellis & Keighley, - Toronto.



Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Port ans every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thompson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec: Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

FOR THE LADIES.
EMBROIDERY SILKS
All Colors, 10c per dozen skeins.
BERLIN WOOLS, all colors, 8c per oz.
SHETLAND AND ANDALUSIAN WOOLS, 8c per oz; Fleecy Wool, extra quality, 10c per skein; Arrasene, all colors, 30c per dozen skeins; Macrame Cord, 15 colors, 10c per ball; Felt, best quality, $1 00 per yard; Woolen Java Canvas, all shades, 45c per yard; Stamped Toilet Sets, 5 pieces, 35c set; Tidy's 25c each; Splashers, 40 and 50 cents each. A large stock of newest Stamped Goods for outlining to hand. Letter orders have prompt and careful attention. Goods can be sent by post to any part of Canada. Write for price list. HENRY DAVIS, Importer, 232 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont. Please mention this paper.



FINE HEADS OF HAIR

IF YOU ARE BALD, had GREY or THIN HAIR, send to A. DORENWEND, Toronto and get particulars of his Wigs Toupees, Switches, etc., also Frontpieces, Bangs, etc., all made of finest quality human hair, as natural as life.
A. DORENWEND,
PARIS HAIR WORKS, 103 and 105 Yonge St., Toronto.

Whaley Royce & Co
Dealers in all kinds of MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Agents for the BESSON and HIGHAM Band Instruments. SHEET MUSIC and MUSIC BOOKS. Manufacturers of the "IMPERIAL" BAND INSTRUMENTS,
Best in the world, Eight Years' Guarantee. Send for Illustrated Catalogue and testimonials.
283 Yonge St.
TORONTO.

WATEROUS E.W.Co.-BRANTFORD. CANADA.

I CURE FITS!
When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE.
I have made the disease of
FITS, EPIL

Fashions in Furs.

"As the days begin to lengthen, the cold begins to strengthen," and soft warm furs are in great demand, while often the most acceptable present a lady can receive is a handsome muff and boa, a pretty fur collar, or stylish shoulder cape. These small pieces of fur, too, come at all prices and to suit any purse or taste, all the way from the costly Russian sable down through the various grades of beaver, black marten, lynx, fox, bear, badger and monkey skins to the common Russian hare, muffs of which are retailed as low as thirty-nine cents. A fashionable set of furs consists now of a very fluffy boa, long enough to touch the foot of the underskirt, and a round, full muff somewhat larger than those carried last year. For boas, long fur is preferred, although a few flat ones of short mink, seal and beaver are shown, but they are neither so effective nor becoming as the large fluffy "snakes" wound about the neck, with the ends thrown over the shoulders. If a collar is desired, the choice lies between the Russian style—which is round behind, reaching to the shoulder tips, while the fronts cross like a fichu and extend to the waist-line—and the shawl collar, which is short and round and simply laps in front.

With cloth suits, shoulder capes or pelerines are more liked than ever; but they should never be worn over anything that is not perfectly tight-fitting. They are both comfortable and convenient, as they can readily be put off and on, while they afford desirable protection to the chest and the sensitive place between the shoulders. In length, they should come just inside the arms when they are folded, for, if longer, they are liable to push up and look awkward; the shoulders are somewhat raised and the standing collar is cut on the cape.

The short, jaunty seal-skin jacket has almost superseded the half-long seal-skin sacque, except for elderly ladies. It is cut a trifle longer than those sold last season, fits the figure closely, is single-breasted and has either coat or bell sleeves. These jackets, if new, are generally untrimmed, though a few show a collar and revers of leopard skin or a plastron of plucked beaver. Short wraps or dolmans of seal-skin are also popular, a favorite model being the "Modjeska," which has long pointed fronts and a short back without plaits, fitting smoothly over the tournure. All seal-skin garments are copied in seal skin plush which are made exactly in the same manner, while they are much less costly. The same designs also serve for cloth wrappings. For those wearing mourning, pretty fur cloaks come of Persian lamb-skin—which is often known as Astrakhan—while a few showy jackets for young ladies are made of gray krimmer to complete gray costumes or of spotted leopard which is considered extremely stylish and decidedly English.

Fur-lined circulars are useful for evening wraps and hack garments, but are no longer fashionable for dressy wear; but cloth suits, wrappings and even evening dresses are extensively trimmed with fur. Thus a tailor-fitted jacket of blue or black diagonal cloth is lovely with collar, cuffs and vest of natural beaver; while the same in black Persian lamb-skin looks well on dark red broad cloth. For trimmings, both long and short furs are used, the former serving for length-wise rows and borderings, while the latter are set in as vests or plastrons, and laid on for revers, cuffs and caps to sleeves.

Brown furs are once more in favor and ladies are bringing out the old mink and sable sets they have had stored away and are utilizing them in various ways, while the most durable of all furs are the black and brown bear skins which often border very heavy cloths or velvets. Tail pendants, like fringe, are seen on dolmans but are never very pretty; while the fancy for combining black with all colors is carried out by trimming brown, green, red and blue cloth or plush garments with black fur, such as Russian lamb, black marten or black fox. Chinchilla is little used, its place having been taken by the gray krimmer and the skin of the Australian opossum. These soft gray furs are particularly liked for children while very small girls wear cunning little cape coats of white, mandarin lamb-skin, with a tiny muff to match. Dainty and fashionable muffs to match costumes can be also easily made at home, by a clever girl, of ribbon and fur. These are placed in alternate rows and finished by a long-looped bow of the ribbon, set on top.

For sleighing, tobogganing and all winter sports, nothing in the world is as comfortable as a fur hood, or, if this is unobtainable, one of plush bordered with fur; while this season they promise to be the very highest style, the Princess of Wales having set the fashion. They should fit very snugly about the head and face, have a cape falling on the neck and be tied with ribbon strings beneath the chin. Young girls, however, may prefer the velvet or plush turbans, which have high, round, soft crowns folded and wrinkled, and sometimes caught over on one side, while they are finished with a border of beaver or lamb skin.

A Fiendish Crime.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 29.—This morning three men arrived in the city from Jamison, Shelby county, forty miles south, in search of W. R. Kennedy, a white man. Kennedy is married and has several children. Last Friday night his wife was very ill, and he went to the house of a neighbor named Gray for assistance. Miss Ellen Gray, 19 years old, volunteered to go and spend the night with Mrs. Kennedy. Kennedy and the young lady left the house together, and when only a short distance away he made a criminal assault on her. She resisted desperately, but with several blows on the head he rendered her unconscious and helpless, and then accomplished his purpose. He left her lying in the woods, bleeding from several frightful wounds in the head. It was several hours before she regained consciousness, and then she made her way home, where weak from loss of blood she fainted before she could tell the story of the crime. It was late on Saturday before Miss Gray sufficiently recovered to give the particulars of the assault, and then Kennedy was gone. He was seen early on Saturday morning, about ten miles from the scene of the crime, making his way across the country on foot. The people living in the vicinity of Jamison are terribly aroused and searching parties are scouring the country in all directions. Miss Gray was so badly injured by the blows on her head that there is little or no chance of her recovery.

Sample of Ready Wit.

Parliamentary elections usually afford a field for the exercise of wit. While a noble lord was conducting his canvass he met a bully, who declared fiercely that he would "sooner vote for the devil than for him."

"I've not the slightest doubt of it, my friend," said the candidate quietly; "but in the event of your friend not coming forward may I count on your vote?"

Here is another of the same kind: At an open political meeting a man cried, "for Jackson!" to which a bystander retorted, "Hurrah for a jackass!"

"All right, my man exclaimed the first speaker; "you hurrah for your favorite candidate, and I'll do the same for mine."

An enviable quickness of repartee was shown by a French actor when the head of a goose was thrown upon the stage. Advancing to the footlights he said: "Gentlemen, if any one among you has lost his head, I shall be glad to restore it at the conclusion of the piece."

Deservedly severe also was the reply of Descartes to a nobleman, who, seeing that he enjoyed the pleasure of the table, remarked: "I see, sir, that philosophers can sometimes indulge in good cheer."

"Why not?" asked Descartes. "Do you really imagine that Providence intended the good things of this earth only for the foolish and ignorant?"—Chambers' Journal.

Baron Hirsch, the Paris banker, believes that the best thing for the Jewish people is their assimilation with the Christians, and he has given the Russian Government 100,000,000f. to establish mixed schools in that country.

THE THREAD OF LIFE

OR

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER L.—The Cap Martin Catastrophe.

As Warren Relf paused there on the step of the carriage one second, before he jumped, he was dimly aware of a curious fact that caught his attention, sideways, even at that special moment of doubt and danger: many other doors on the landward side of the train stood also open and other passengers beside himself, with fear and surprise depicted visibly on their pale faces, were stepping out, irresolute, just as he himself had done, upon the narrow footboard. Could they have heard the struggle? he wondered vaguely to himself. Could they have gained some hasty inkling of the tragic event that had taken place, so secretly, all unknown as he supposed, in his own compartment? Had some neighbouring traveller caught faintly the muffled sounds of a desperate fight? Had he suspected an attack upon some innocent passenger? Had he signalled the guard to stop the train? for it was slowing still, slowing yet more sensibly and certainly each moment. More and more pale faces now appeared at the doors; and a Frenchman standing on the footboard of the next compartment, a burly person of military appearance, with an authoritative air, cried aloud in a voice of quick command, "Sautez, donc! Sautez!" At the word, Warren leaped, he knew not why, from the doomed carriage. The Frenchman leaped at the self-same moment. All down the train, a dozen or two of passengers followed suit as if by a concerted order. Warren had no idea in his own mind what was really happening, but he knew the train had slackened speed immensely, and that he had landed on his feet and hands on the rubbly bank with no more result, so far as he himself could see just then, than a sprained ankle and some few bleeding wounds on his knees and elbows.

Next instant a horrible crash resounded through the air, and bellowed and echoed with loud reverberation from the rocky walls of those sheer precipices. Thud, thud, thud followed close on the crash, as carriage after carriage shocked fiercely against the engine and the compartments in front of it. Then a terrible sight met his eyes. The train had just reached the ledge of cliff beyond, and with a wild rocking disappeared all at once over the steep side into the sea below. Nothing in life is more awful in its unexpectedness than a great railway accident. Before Warren had even time to know what was taking place by his side, it was all over. The train had fallen in one hugh mass over the edge of the cliff, and Hugh Massinger, with his eleven thousand pounds safe in his pocket, was hurried away without warning or reprieve into ten fathoms deep of Mediterranean.

Everybody remembers the main features of that terrific accident, famous in the history of French railway disasters as the Cap Martin catastrophe. Shortly after passing Roquebrune station (where the through trains do not stop), one of the engine-wheels became loosened by a violent shock against a badly-laid sleeper, and, thus acting as a natural brake, brought the train almost to a stand-still for a few seconds, just opposite the very dangerous ledge known locally as the Borrigo escarpment. The engine there left the rails with a jerk, and many of the passengers, seeing something serious was likely to take place, seized the opportunity, just before the crash, of opening the doors on the landward side, and leaping from the train while it had reached its slowest rate of motion, on the very eve of its final disaster. One instant later, the engine oscillated violently and stopped altogether; the other carriages telescoped against it; and the entire train, thrown off its balance with a terrible wrench, toppled over the sheer precipice at the side into the deep water that skirts the foot of the neighbouring mountains. That was the whole familiar story as the public at large came, bit by bit, to learn it afterwards. But for the moment, the stunned and horrified passengers on the bank of the torrent only knew that a frightful accident had taken place with incredible rapidity, and that the train itself, with many of their fellow-travellers seated within, had sunk like lead in the twinkling of an eye to the bottom of the bay, leaving the few survivors there on dry land aghast at the inexpressible suddenness and awfulness of this appalling calamity.

As for Warren Relf, amid the horror of his absorbing life-and-death struggle with Hugh Massinger, and the abiding awe of its terrible consummation, he had never even noticed the angry jerking of the loosened wheel, the whir that jarred through the shaken carriages, the growing oscillation from side to side, the evident imminence of some alarming accident. Sudden as the catastrophe was to all, to him it was more sudden and unexpected than to any one. Till the actual crash itself came, indeed, he did not realize why the other passengers were hanging on so strangely to the narrow footboard. The whole episode happened in so short a space of time—thirty seconds at best—that he had no opportunity to collect and recover his scattered senses. He merely recognized at first in some stunned and shattered fashion that he was well out of the fatal train, and that a dozen sufferers lay stretched in evident pain and danger on the low bank of earth beside him.

For all the passengers had not fared so well in their escape as he himself had done. Many of them had suffered serious hurt in their mad jump from the open doorway, alighting on jagged points of broken stone, or rolling down the sides of the steep ravine into the dry bed of the winter torrent. The least injured turned with one accord to help and tend their wounded companions. But as for the train itself, it had simply disappeared. It was as though it had never been. Scarcely a sign of it showed on the unruffled water. Falling sheer from the edge of that precipitous crag into the deep bay, it had sunk like a stone at once to the very bottom. Only a few fragments of broken wreckage appeared here and there floating loose upon the surface. Hardly a token remained beside to show the outer world where that whole long line of laden carriages had toppled over bodily into the profound green depths that still smiled so sweetly between Roquebrune and Mentone.

For a while, distracted by this fresh horror, Warren could only think of the dead and wounded. His own torn and blood-stained condition excited no more attention or curiosity now on the part of by-standers than that of many others among his less fortunate fellow-passengers. Nor did he even reflect with any serious realisation that Elsie was saved and his own character practically vindicated. The new shock had deadened the sense and vividness of the old one. In the face of so awful and general a calamity as this, his own private tears and doubts and anxieties seemed to shrink for the moment into absolute insignificance.

In time, however, it began slowly to dawn upon his bewildered mind that other trains might come up from Monaco or Mentone and dash madly among the broken debris of the shattered carriages. Whatever caused their own accident might cause accidents also to approaching engines. Moreover, the wounded lay scattered about on all sides upon the track, some of them in a condition in which it might indeed be difficult or even dangerous to remove them. Somebody must certainly go forward to Mentone to warn the chef de gare and to fetch up assistance. After a hurried consultation with his nearest neighbours Warren took upon himself the task of messenger. He started off at once on this needful errand, and plunged with a heart now strangely aroused into the deep darkness of the last remaining tunnel.

His sprained ankle caused him terrible pain at every step; but the pain itself, joined with the consciousness of performing an imperative duty, kept his mind from dwelling too much for the moment on his own altered yet perilous situation. As he dragged one foot wearily after the other through that long tunnel, his thoughts concentrated themselves for the time being on but one object—to reach Menton and prevent any further serious accident.

When he had arrived at the station, however, and despatched help along the line to the other sufferers from the terrible disaster, he had time to reflect in peace for a while upon the sudden change this great public calamity had wrought in his own private position. The danger of misapprehension had been removed by the accident as if by magic. Unless he himself chose to reveal the facts, no soul on earth need ever know a word of that desperate struggle with mad Hugh Massinger in the wrecked railway carriage. Even supposing the bodies were ultimately dredged up or recovered by divers, no suspicion could now possibly attach to his own conduct. The wound on Hugh's head would doubtless be attributed to the fall alone; though the chance of the body being recognisable at all after so horrible a catastrope would indeed be slight, considering the way the carriages had doubled up like so much trestle-work upon one another before finally falling. Elsie was saved; that much at least was now secured. She need know nothing. Unless he himself were ever tempted to tell her the ghastly truth, that terrible episode of the death-struggle in the doomed train might remain for ever a sealed book to the woman for whose sake it had all been enacted.

Warren's mind, therefore, was made up at once. All things considered, it had become a sacred duty for him now to hold his tongue for ever and ever about the entire incident. No man is bound to criminate himself; above all, no man is bound to expose himself when innocent to an unjust yet overwhelming suspicion of murder. But that was not all. Elsie's happiness depended entirely upon his rigorous silence. To tell the whole truth, even to her, would be to expose her shrinking and delicate nature to a painful shock, as profound as it was unnecessary, and as lasting as it was cruel. The more he thought upon it, the more plain and clear did his duty shine forth before him. Chance had supplied him with a strange means of honourable escape from what had seemed at first sight an insoluble dilemma. It would be folly and worse, under his present conditions, for him to refuse to profit by its unconscious suggestion.

Yet more: he must decide at once without delay upon his line of action. News of the catastrophe would be telegraphed, of course, immediately to England. Elsie would most likely learn the whole awful episode that very evening at her hotel in London: he could hear the very cries of the street boys ringing in his ears:

"Speshul Edition. Appalling Railway Accident on the Riviayer! Great Loss of Life! A Train Precipitated into the Mediterranean!" If not, she would at anyrate read the alarming news in an agony of terror in the morning papers. She knew Warren himself was returning to San Remo by that very train. She did not know that Hugh was likely to be one of his fellow-passengers. She must not hear of the accident for the first time from the columns of the Times or the Pall Mall Gazette. He must telegraph over at once and relieve beforehand her natural anxiety for her future husband's safety. But Hugh's name and fate need not be mentioned, at least for the present; he could reserve that revelation for a more convenient season. To publish it, indeed, would be in part to incriminate himself, or at least to arouse unjust suspicion.

He drove to the telegraph office, worn out as he was with pain and excitement, and despatched a hasty message that moment to Elsie: "There has been a terrible accident to the train near Mentone, but I am not hurt, at least to speak of—only a few slight sprains and bruises. Particulars in papers. Affectionately, WARREN." And then he drove back to the scene of the catastrophe.

It was a week before all the bodies were dredged up by relays of divers from the wreck of that ill-fated and submerged train. Hugh Massinger's was one of the last to be recovered. It was found, minus a large part of the clothing, which the sea had torn off. The eleven thousand pounds in French bank-notes never turned up at all again. His money indeed had perished with him.

They buried all that remained of that volcanic life on the sweet and laughing hill-side at Mentone. A plain marble cross marks the spot where he rests. On the plinth stand graven those prophetic lines from the plaintive poem to A Life's Philosophy:

Here, by the heaven with the hoary trees,
O lurid poet's heart, lie still;
No longer strive amid tempestuous seas
To curb wild waters to thy wayward will.
Above thy grave
Wan olives wave,
And oleanders court deep-laden bees.

That nought of fulfilment might be wanting to his prayer, Warren Relf with his own hand planted a blushing oleander above the mound where that fiery poet's heart lay still for ever. He had nothing but pity in his soul for Hugh's wasted powers. A splendid life, marred in the making by its own headstrong folly. And Winifred, who loved him, and whose heart he broke, lay silent in the self-same grave beside him.

CHAPTER LI.—Next of Kin Wanted.

The recovery of Hugh's body from the shattered train gave Warren Relf one needful grain of internal comfort. He identified that pale and wounded corpse with reverent care, and waited in solemn suspense and unspoken anxiety for the result of the customary post-mortem examination. The doctors' report reassured his soul. Death had resulted, so the medical evidence conclusively proved, not from the violent injuries observed on the skull, and apparently produced, they said, by a blow against the carriage door, but from asphyxiation, due to drowning. Hugh was still alive, then, when the train went over! His heart still beat and his breath still came and went feebly till the actual moment of the final catastrophe. It was the accident, not Warren's hand, that killed him. Innocent as Warren knew himself to be, he was glad to learn from this authoritative source that even unintentionally he had not made himself Hugh Massinger's accidental executioner.

But in any case they must break the news gently to Elsie. Warren's presence was needed in the south for the time being, to see after Winifred's funeral and other necessary domestic arrangements. So Edie went over to England on the very first day after the fact of Hugh's disappearance in the missing train had become generally known to the little world of San Remo, to soften the shock for her with sisterly tenderness. By a piece of rare good fortune, Hugh Massinger's name was not mentioned at all in the earlier telegrams, even after it was fairly well known at Mentone and Monte Carlo that the lucky winner, whose success was in everybody's mouth just then, had perished in one of the lost carriages. The despatches only spoke in vague terms of "an English gentleman lately arrived on the Riviera, who had all but succeeded in breaking the bank that day at Monte Carlo, and was returning to San Remo, elated by success, with eleven thousand pounds of winnings in his pocket." It was not in the least likely that Elsie would dream of recognising her newly bereaved cousin under this highly improbable and generalized description—especially when Winifred, as she well knew, was lying dead meanwhile, the victim of his cold and selfish cruelty, at the pension at San Remo. Edie would be the first to bring her the strange and terrible news of Hugh's sudden death. Warren himself stopped behind at Mentone, as in duty bound, to identify the body formally at the legal inquiry.

He had another reason, too, for wishing to break the news to Elsie through Edie's mouth rather than personally. For Edie knew nothing, of course, of the deadly struggle in the doomed train, of that hand-to-hand battle for life and honour; and she could therefore with truth unfold the whole story exactly as Warren wished Elsie first to learn it. For her, there was nothing more to tell than that Hugh, with incredible levity and brutal want of feeling, had gone over to Monte Carlo to gamble openly at the public tables, on the very day while his poor young wife, killed inch by inch by his settled neglect, lay dead in her lonely lodging at San Remo: that he had returned a couple of evenings later with his ill gotten gains upon the fated train: and that, falling over into the sea with the carriages from which Warren just barely escaped with dear life, he was drowned in his place in one of the shattered and sunken compartments. That was all: and that was bad enough in all conscience. What need to burden Elsie's gentle soul any further with the more hideous concomitants of that unspeakable tragedy?

Elsie bore the news with far greater fortitude than Edie in her most sanguine mood could have expected. Winifred's death had sunk so deep into the fibres of her soul that Hugh's seemed to affect her far less by comparison. She had learnt to know him now in all his baseness. It was the recognition of the man's own inmost nature that had cost her dearest. "Let us never speak of him again, dear Warren," she wrote to her betrothed, a few days later. "Let him be to us as though he had never existed. Let his name be not so much as mentioned between us. It pains and grieves me ten thousand times more, Warren, to think that for such a man's sake as he was, I should so long have refused to accept the love of such a man as I know you to be."

Those are the hardest words a woman can utter. To unsay their love is to women unendurable. But Elsie no longer shrank from unsaying it. Shame and remorse for her shattered ideal possessed her soul. She knew she had done the true man wrong by so long rejecting him for the sake of the false one.

At sand-girt Whitestrand, meanwhile, all was turmoil and confusion. The news of the young Squire's tragic death, following so close at the heel of his frail little wife's, spread horror and surprise through the whole community. The vicar's wife was all agog with excitement. The reticule trembled on her palpitating wrist as she went the round of her neighbours with the surprising intelligence. Nobody knew what might happen next, now the last of the Meyseys was dead and gone, while the sandbanks were spreading halt a mile to seaward, and the very river was turned from its course by encroaching hummocks into a new-cut channel. The mortgagees, to be sure, were safe with their money. Not only was the property now worth on a computation almost as much as it had ever been, but Winifred's life had been heavily insured, and the late Mr. Massinger's estate, the family attorney remarked with a cheerful smile, was far more than solvent—in fact it would prove a capital inheritance for some person or persons unknown, to the heirs-at-law and next-of-kin of the possessor. But good business lay in store, no doubt, for the profession still. Deceased had probably died intestate. Endless questions would thus be opened out in delicious vistas before the entranced legal vision. The marriage being subsequent to the late Married Woman's Property Act, Mrs Massinger's will, if any, must be found and proved. The next of kin and heir-at-law must be hunted up. Protracted ligitation would probably ensue; rewards would be offered for certificates of birth; records of impossible marriages would be freely advertised for, with tempting suggestions of pecuniary recompense to the lucky discoverer. Research would be stimulated in parish clerks; affidavits would be sworn to with charming recklessness; rival claimants would commit unblushing alternative perjuries on their own account, with frank disregard of common probability. It would rain fees. The estate would dissolve itself bodily by slow degrees in a quagmire of expenses. And all for the benefit of the good attorneys! The family lawyer, in the character of Danae—for this occasion only, and without prejudice—would hold out his hands to catch the golden shower. A learned profession would no doubt profit in the end to a distinct amount by the late Mr. Massinger's touching disregard of testamentary provision for his unknown relations.

Alas for the prospects of the learned gentlemen! The question of inheritance proved itself in the end far easier and less complex than the family attorney in his professional zeal had at first anticipated. Everything unravelled itself with disgusting simplicity. The estate might almost as well have been unencumbered. The late Mrs. Massinger had left no will, and the property had therefore devolved direct by common law upon her surviving husband. This was awkward. If only now, any grain of doubt had existed in any way as to the fact that the late Mrs. Massinger had predeceased her unfortunate husband, legal acumen might doubtless have suggested innumerable grounds of action for impossible claimants on either side of the two families. But unhappily for the exercise of legal acumen, the case as it stood was all most horribly plain sailing. Hugh Massinger, Esquire, having inherited in due course from his deceased wife, the estate must go in the first place to Hugh Massinger himself, in person. And Hugh Massinger himself having died intestate, it must go in the next place to Hugh Massinger's nearest representative. True, there still remained the agreeable and exciting research for the missing heir-at-law; but the pursuit of hunting up the heir-at-law to a given indisputable possessor is as nothing in the eyes of a keen sportsman compared with the Homeric joy of battle involved in the act of setting the representatives of two rival and uncertain claims to fight it out, tooth and nail together, on the free and open arena of the Court of Probate. It was with a sigh of regret, therefore, that the family attorney, good easy man, drew up the advertisement which closed for ever his vain hopes of a disputed succession between the moribund houses of Massinger and Meysey, and confined his possibilities of lucrative litigation to exploiting the house of Massinger alone, for his own use, enjoyment, and fruition.

It was some two or three weeks after Hugh Massinger's tragic death that Edie Relf chanced to observe in the Agony Column of that morning's Times a notice couched in the following precise and poetical language.

"Hugh Massinger, Esquire, deceased, late of Whitestrand Hall, in the county of Suffolk.—Any person or persons claming to represent the heirs-at-law and next of kin of the above-named gentleman who died at Mentone, in the Department of the Alpes Maritimes, in the French Republic, on or about the 17th day of November last past) are hereby requested to apply immediately to Alfred Heberden, Esq., Whitestrand, Suffolk, solicitor to the said Hugh Massinger."

Edie mentioned the matter at once to Warren, who had come over from France as soon as he had completed the necessary arrangements at San Remo and Mentone; but Warren heard it all with extreme disinclination. He couldn't bear even to allude to the fact in speaking to Elsie. Directly or indirectly, he could never inherit the estate of the man whose life he had been so nearly instrumental in shortening. And if Elsie was soon, as he hoped, to become his wife, he would necessarily participate in whatever benefit Elsie might derive from inheriting the relics of Hugh Massinger's ill-won Whitestrand property.

"No, no," he said. "The estate was simply the price of blood. He married that poor little woman for nothing else but for the sake of Whitestrand. He killed her by slow degrees through his neglect and cruelty. If he hadn't married her, he would never have been master of that wretched place; if he hadn't married her, he would have had nothing of his own to leave to Elsie. I can't touch it, and I won't touch it. So that's flat, Edie. It's the price of blood. Let it, too, perish with him."

"But oughtn't you at least to mention it to Elsie?" Edie asked with her plain straightforward English common-sense. "It's her business more than it's yours, you know, Warren. Oughtn't you at least to give her the option of accepting or refusing her own property?—It's very kind of you, of course, to decide beforehand so cavalierly.—Perhaps, you see when she learns she's an heiress, she may be inclined to transfer her affections elsewhere."

Warren smiled. That was a point of view that had never occurred to him. Your male lover makes so sure of his prey; he hardly allows in his own mind the possibility of rejection. But still he prevaricated. "I wouldn't tell her about it, just yet at least," he answered hesitatingly. "We don't know, after all, that Elsie's really the heir-at-law at all, if it comes to that. Let's wait and see. Perhaps some other claimant may turn up for the property."

"Perhaps," Edie replied, with her oracular brevity. "And perhaps not. There's nothing on earth more elastic in its own way than a good perhaps. India-rubber bands are just mere child's play to it.—Suppose, then, we pin it down to a precise limit of time, so as to know exactly where we stand, and say that if the estate isn't otherwise claimed within six weeks, we'll break it to Elsie, and allow her to decide for herself in the matter?"

"But how shall we know whether it's claimed or not?" Warren asked dubiously.

"My dear, there exists in this realm of England a useful institution known to science as a penny post, by means of which a letter may be safely and inexpensively conveyed even to so remote and undistinguished a personage as Alfred Hebenden, Esquire, solicitor to the deceased, Whitestrand, Suffolk.—I propose, in fact, to write and ask him."

Warren groaned. It was an awkward fix. He wished he could shirk the whole horrid business. To be saddled against your will with a landed estate that you don't want is a predicament that seldom disturbs a modest gentleman's peace of mind anywhere. But he saw no possible way out of the odd dilemma. Edie was right, after all, no doubt. As yet, at least, he had no authority to answer in any way for Elsie's wishes. If she wanted Whitestrand, it was hers to take or reject as she wished, and hers only. Still, he salved his conscience with the consolatory idea that it was not actually compulsory upon him to show Elsie any legal advertisement, inquiry, or suggestion which might happen to emanate from the solicitors to the estate of the late Hugh Massinger. So far as he had any official cognisance of the facts, indeed, the heirs, executors, and assigns of the deceased had nothing on earth to do in any way with Elsie Challoner, of San Remo, Italy. Second cousinhood is at best a very vague and uncertain form of relationship. He decided, therefore, not without some internal qualms, to accept Edie's suggested compromise for the present, and to wait patiently for the matter in hand to settle itself by spontaneous arrangement.

But Alfred Heberden, Esquire, solicitor to the deceased, acted otherwise. He had failed to draw any satisfactory communications in answer to his advertisement save one from a bogus firm of so called Property Agents, and one from a third-rate pawnbroker in the Borough Road whose wife's aunt had once married a broken-down railway porter of the name of Messenger from Weem in Shropshire, and who considered himself, accordingly, the obvious representative and heir-at-law of the late Hugh Massenger of the Utter Bar, and of Whiteside Hall, in Suffolk, Esquire, deceased without issue. Neither of these applications, however, proving of sufficient importance to engage the attention of Mr. Alfred Huberden's legal mind, that astute gentleman proceeded on his own account to investigate the genealogy and other antecedents of Hugh Massinger, with a single eye to the discovery of the missing inheritor of the estate, envisaged as a person from whom natural gratitude would probably wring a substantial solatium to the good attorney who had proved his title. And the result of his inquiries into the Massinger pedigree took tangible shape at last, a week or two latter, in a second advertisement of a more exact sort, which Edie Relf, that diligent and careful student of the second column, the most interesting portion of the whole newspaper to Eve's like-minded daughters, discovered and pondered over one foggy morning in the blissful repose of 128 Bletchingley Road, South Kensington.

'CHALLONER: Heir-at-law and Next of Kin Wanted. Estate of Hugh Massinger, Esquire, deceased, intestate.—If this should meet the eye of Elsie, daughter of the late Rev. H. Challoner, and Eleanor Jane his wife, formerly Eleanor Jane Massinger, of Chudleigh, Devonshire, she is requested to put herself into communication with Alfred Heberden, Esq., Whitestrand, Suffolk, when she may hear of something greatly to her advantage.'

Edie took the paper up at once to Warren. 'For "may" read "will,"' she said pointedly. 'Lawyers don't advertise unless they know. I alway understood Mr. Massinger had no living relations except Elsie. This question has reached boiling-point now. You'll have to speak to her after that about the matter."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

MINING IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Arrangements Being Made for Extensive Operations in Pictou County.

PICTOU, N.S., Jan. 29.—The lucky shareholders of the Pictou Coal and Iron Company, of Montreal, who own such extensive and valuable deposits of iron ore in the county of Pictou, are to be congratulated Mr. J. H. Bartlett, of Montreal, and well known in connection with the Canadion iron trade, has been here for some days and has obtained from the county council a cash subsidy of $20,000, as well as remission of all taxes for twenty years. Mr. Bartlett has made a contract with R. G. Reid, of Montreal, for the construction of a branch railway ten miles long leading to the iron mines, and the Dominion Government have arranged to operate the branch as a part of the Intercolonial and provide for all the rolling stock. It is estimated that over ten million tons of iron ore can be easily and cheaply mined from the Pictou Coal and Iron Company's mines, which are only seven miles from the Pictou coal mines and ten miles from the Atlantic tide water. The location of the blast furnaces has not yet been definitely settled.

England's Chapels-Royal.

The chapels-royal establishments of England, maintained by public moneys, are extensive and expensive luxuries. Lord Sydney advises the Queen to cut down expenses in this department, and its civil list seems to offer a fair chance of judicious reform. The chapels-royal are fitted out with a dean (usually the Bishop of London, with a stipend of £200 a year), a sub-dean, a clerk of the closet, three deputy clerks of the closet to assist the clerk doing nothing whatever, thirty-six chaplains in ordinary, thirteen honorary chaplains, two university preachers, nine priests, eight gentlemen, singing men of the chapels-royal, six retired gentlemen who receive pensions, twenty children choristers of the chapels-royal, a master of the children, an organist and composer, a musical instructor, two sergeants of the vestry, and a host of vergers and other attendants, all well paid, and most of them with many desirable perquisites. The total expense of these is £10,000 annually. The congregations are small, and the chapels are closed two months in the year. There are also chapels-royal at Buckingham palace, where there has not been a service for more than twenty-seven years, at Windsor castle, at Hampton court, and at Kensington palace, all with adequate establishments maintained by her Majesty.—[Utica Herald.

American factories produced 36,000,000 lbs. of oleomargarine last year in defence of hostile legislation—an increase of about 25 per cent. over the former year. We have not yet seen any explanation of the curious fact that the importation of soap-grease into Canada free of duty took a sudden jump just at the time when the importation of oleomargarine under its own name was forbidden.

Sunrise Beside the Jordan.

Moonlight was still in the air, as away from our tenantless beds fell the folds of canvas there beside the fountain off Elisha on the opening of that memorable day when we had our first sight of the Jordan River. The ride was to be long, the start must be early. So the thin tents were struck while we were dressing ourselves for the saddle.

Weird and strange appeared the scene; for the embers yet lay unextinguished, glowing sullenly against the lazily smoking brands; deep shadows of the rocks were flickering under the flashes of flame. Most of our company awoke pensive and thoughtful. For one, I admit I never found myself more painfully imaginative; things seemed unreal. Still, there grew to be a kind of subtle sympathy between those scenes around me and my own excited feeling. We cherished a common memory and hope. Gilgal was close by somewhere; Naaman came down this way or that to be cured in the Jordan yonder over behind the bushes; these hills and low reaches of plain looked as if they felt desolate at the departure that was imminent, rather sorry that some body, who knew that they had surely seen better days, did not offer them some kind of pitying help. It struck me that mute nature, in that singular morning beneath the starlight, was asking our best offices of intervention at the throne of an upright God, who understood that she had been more sinned against that sinning; indeed, I never had so touching a sense before of the meaning of the apostle when he made the familiar statement: For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." In the midst of these suggestive surroundings, one learns to appreciate the poetic sensibility of Goethe: "When I stand alone at night in open nature, I feel as though it were a spirit and begged redemption of me; often have I had the sensation as it nature in wailing sadness was entreating something at my hands." Nowhere on the earth does this lonesome and pitiful emotion sway one's mind as it does in Palestine. The land appears waiting—waiting for something it seems to expect.

The Holy Spirit's Sympathy.

The Holy Spirit is our comforter and our sanctifier, as well as our teacher. The scholar is in trouble, and he wants somebody to sympathise with him. He is in doubt as to a course of conduct and he wants somebody to counsel with and advise him. He is tempted to do wrong, and he wants a monitor to help him resist evil and do what is right. In other words he wants not only a teacher with a clear head, but a friend with a warm and loving heart. Such a friend the spirit is to those who cultivate communion with him. He comes with divine insight and sympathy into our innermost nature. He sees just what we need as no human friend can see. He is able to meet the longing, fill the aching void, confirm the good desire and purpose with superhuman tenderness and skill. And thus he can be to us more and better than all the dearest and best who are mortal and finite, like ourselves. Think again of the fellowship of the primitive Christians with the Apostles in Jerusalem. It was not that of instruction merely. Those converts went to their inspired teachers for everything, and they gave to them not only their fullest confidence, but their time, their money, themselves and all that they had. And the result was gladness and singleness of heart. The church to-day would be as united and as full of joy as that apostolic church if it had the communion of the Holy Ghost according to the weekly benediction of the ministers of the gospel.

Interruptions.

Liability to unforeseen interruption is a most annoying liability to every one who diligently pursues his vocation in life. Interruptions are stops of our train not provided for by the time-table; they dissipate the accumulated momentum of our progress, which would be sufficient to carry us on by itself They not only throw us behind time for a few minutes, but by our loss of those few minutes we may be prevented from making connections at the junctions, and thus be cut off entirely from the reaching of our destination, while the danger of collisions in our engagements, and the subsequent wreck in our projects, is thereby increased. And yet the unavoidable interruptions in our life's work are providential, and therefore work together with all other things for our highest good in God's service. The callers who throw us off the track, or the severe sickness which brings us to a stop, may have been sent to put us in a better place than the track we were on, or to reveal to us that we were going wrong when we thought we were going right. The interposition of internal and external difficulties, of a refractory intellect, or of inclement weather, between ourselves and our object, may be the very best thing for us. We may need to be stimulated, or we may need to be hindered. In fact, life's continuity needs to be broken up and interrupted for us. We are to be not one-sided, but many sided. We ought not to desire to devote ourselves so exclusively to the pursuit of any one object as that thereby we shut all others out. Hence it is that interruptions, even though they be unpleasant and annoying at the time, are often blessings in disguise.

Dr. Tanner and Mr. John O'Connor, Irish members, have been summoned, but refused to obey.

There has just been consecrated in Philadelphia a church for the exclusive use of the deaf.

Ivory ornaments are quickly cleaned by brushing them with a new, not very sharp toothbrush, to which little soap is given; then rinse the ornament in lukewarm water. Next dry the trinket and brush a little, and continue brushing until the luster reappears, which can be increased by pouring some alcohol upon the brush and applying it to the trinket. Should this have became yellow, dry it in a gentle heat and it will appear as if new.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"It's a long way for a shilling, remarked cabby, looking sulkily at his proper fare. "I know it is," said the lady quietly; "if it had not been, I should have walked."

The American railways during 1887 moved 552,074,752 tons of freight a total distance of 50,061,996 miles, or on an average haul per ton of 108.79 miles. The total amount received from freight was upwards of £127,333,000, which was 68·38 per cent. of the gross earnings.

Marriage enlarges the scene of our happiness and miseries. A marriage of love is pleasant, a marriage of interest easy, and a marriage where both meet happy. A happy marriage has in it all the pleasures of friendship, all the enjoyments of sense and reason, and indeed all the sweets of life.

Sir Lyon Play fair says that during seventeen years' service as member of parliament he came in contact with the most eminent medical men of England and he put the question to most of them: "Did you, in your extensive practice, ever know a patient that was afraid to die?" With two exceptions they answered "No."

TO DETECT ALUM IN BREAD.—Mix the bread with water to a pulp, and place in this a piece of gelatine. At the end of twenty-four hours, wash the gelatine with water containing a little tincture of logwood and solution of ammonium carbonate. If alum be present, the gelatine will turn blue.

Elderly lady, to boy in irommonger's shop; "Hev ye got any o' them handbellows fer makin' fires?" Boy: "Yes'm; there's somethin' nice—one shilling each." Elderly lady: "Is that the cheapest you've got?" Boy: "Yes'm; but I'll tell yer what I'll do—as yer don't look to be a very strong old leddy, I'll fill it with wind for yer."

Government statistics recently published place the population of the Russian Empire at 108,787,235 of which 81,725,185 are in Russia proper, 10,136,725 are in the other provinces of Russia in Europe, and 16,925,325 in Asiatic Russia. St. Petersburg is the most populous city, with a total of 861,303. The population of Moscow is 753,469, of Warsaw 454,293, and of Odessa 240,000.

Rev. Dr. Bolles, of New York, in his sermon last Sunday, pronounced a new idea of religion. He said that but a small part of a church should be used for purpose of worship. "I would make of it a vast hive of human endeavor, in which there should be everything to stimulate the intellect, such as libraries and industrial schools, where children could be taught the mechanic arts. I would make all these things free, and let the church fill itself.

The following is said to be used by the United States Government for gumming postage-stamps: it has the properties of being very adhesive, does not become br

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Sereet, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

DUTTON, JANUARY 31, 1889.

REMARKS BY A RAMBLER.

I was glad to see so many of our citizens shovelling the snow off the sidewalks last Monday morning. If the rest would follow suit, and remove their packing boxes to the back yard, we could boast of having as good sidewalks as any town in the west.

Rambler heard it remarked the other day that the Foresters were about starting a brass band in connection with their order. Soon may we hear their inspiring and soul-stirring strains floating upon the evening breeze. But, seriously speaking, Mr. Editor, I think there is nothing more calculated to enliven a town than a good band and we all hope to see the movement succeed. Go on and prosper,gentlemen, you may be sure the Duttonites will not be backward in affording pecuniary assistance.

One sensible move of the County Council held last week was the motion that the council petition the Legislature to amend the Municipal Act as to make it compulsory upon person receiving a nomination to either go to the poll or resign upon the day of nomination. If a man does not intend to run for office it would be just as easy for him to resign upon the day of nomination as any day afterwards, and it would give the returning officer two days more in which to prepare the necessary ballots and other papers for the election.

Why don't some of our capitalists build a few dwelling houses for renting purposes? At present there is not more than one or two vacant houses in town, and I know of several who are only waiting to secure a good dwelling to move in with their families.

The rink is being well patronized this winter, and rightly so. There is no healthier amusement to be found than skating, and when a rink is rightly managed--and the Dutton rink is one of the few that are rightly managed—there can be no better place for the young people to spend an evening. Would it not be a good plan to cover it with ice during the winter months?

Rambler desires to make a few rambling remarks on the subject of incorporation, which is likely to engage the attention of our townsmen again shortly. Dutton is growing rapidly and it is only a matter of a few months at most when the people must wake up to the fact that the township Council, which is all well enough in its place, cannot supply our needs properly. The question is asked, "What good will it do to have incorporation;" well, it will give the place a prestige amongst the surrounding villages which we cannot have in our present state. It would give us a Council of our own which would be better able to supply our wants. It would give us a representative in the County Council. It would give us a chance to make improvements on our streets and sidewalks, and a chance to spend all of our taxes in our own town. We could then have a public park and fair ground, which would give a better chance for securing the removal of the West Elgin Fair from Wallacetown to Dutton. We could bring more weight to bear upon the M. C. R. to secure a new station and better train service, and in a thousand other ways it would be a help to us. But, you say, it will raise the taxes. Perhaps it may raise them a mill or two, but what would that in comparison with the benefits to be derived from it. Again, I heard a citizen remark the other day that the first thing the new Council would do would be to provide for fire protection, and this would add more taxes. But did you ever consider that the fact of having good fire protection would save some insurance? With a proper fire engine and apparatus, which would cost from $2,000 to $2,500, exclusive of buildings, the insurance companies would lower the rate of insurance from ¼ to 1 per cent. on all risks. Taking 1-2 per cent. as the average decrease, and placing the total amount of property insured in Dutton at $300,000, which is a lowestimate, the saving each year would be $500, which in ten years would pay for apparatus, buildings, etc., to the amount of $4,000 and interest besides. It is also said that it would be almost impossible to get incorporated again, but an application to Parliament would bring about the desired end with very little trouble. Let us hope that a public meeting will be called to discuss the matter, at once. It would do no harm, and might do an immense amount of good.

While Rambler was going home last Saturday evening he noticed a man on the sidewalk, crying piteously and saying "Boo hoo, that darn barber was going to stab me." On inquiring into the particulars it was found that the man had been ejected from the barber shop for creating a disturbance while intoxicated and had followed Mr. Doyle into Eustice's hotel, where, without any warning, he pulled a knife out of his pocket and attempted to stab Mr. Doyle. He was promptly floored and the knife taken from him, after which he left the place just before he was seen by Rambler. He has since left town.

I notice that our Reeve, Mr. A. J. Leitch, has kept his promise given on nomination day to work for a higher amount to be paid by the City of St. Thomas for the administration of justice and that the County will be about $1,000 richer every year by the new agreement. Mr. Leitch is always found working for the interest of the County.

DUTTON AND VICINITY.

Sign painter wanted. Apply at this office.

Wanted to rent—a dwelling house. Apply at this office.

The Foresters of Dutton talk of organizing a brass band.

Geo. Wilkie is building a house on Shackleton street, to cost $700.

Mrs. Milloy, of Crinan was the guest of Mrs. R. S. McMillan last week.

Mr. Tremeer closes his engagement as teacher in the Dutton High School this week.

Windsor feels so elated over the entrance of the C. P. R. that it wants to become a city.

The sale of the stock of A. C. Graham, assigned, has been postponed until next Tuesday.

Samuel S. McColl has been appointed trustee of the Dutton High School by the County Council.

One of the cottages attached to the London Asylum for the Insane was burned on Saturday night.

W. R. Meredith, M. P. P., succeeds the late Mr. Beacher as solicitor to the Bank of Montreal in London.

Farmers in the vicinity of Kingsville, where the natural gas has been discovered, will not sell land at any price.

Rev. Duncan McMillan, one of the oldest Presbyterian ministers in Canada, died in London Monday, aged 85.

James Scott was caught in a shaft at London Friday and had his clothes torn completely off, escaping with a few bruises.

The Glencoe High School Board has engaged Miss Cloney, of St. Catharines, as second assistant teacher at a salary of $450.

Rambler has a few well-timed remarks on incorporation this week. We should like to hear from others on this subject.

75,000 bill heads, letter heads, note heads and statements received this week at the ENTERPRISE office. Call and see our stock.

The first number of the "New Party" Bulletin, a bright little monthly in the interests of the prohibition party in Canada, has been received.

Misses Bella McLean, Lillie McBride and Sarah Talmon, and Mr. D. McLean, of the Currie Road, leave this evening to visit friends in Caradoc and Lobo.

Rev. T. Wilson will preach in Knox Church next Sunday morning on the text, "Am I my brother's keeper," and in the evening will deliver a special sermon to young men.

Sifton Bros. have started on the rosd taking orders for farm implements and machinery. They are meeting with good success and are sure to please their customers every time.

The necessary number of names asking for the repeal of the Scott Act in Middlesex county has been secured, and the liquor party will no doubt bring on a vote as soon as possible.

Alex. Milligan, of Iona Station, attempted to light the fire with coal oil one day last week. He came near losing his sight in consequence of the explosion which followed, and his face is terribly burned.

The last assembly of the season by the Dutton Quadrille Club will be held in Leitch's Hall to-morrow evening. The previous assemblies have been most enjoyable affairs and this one promises to be well attended.

The snowfall of Sunday and Monday has already had a livening effect on business of all kinds. Millmen especially are going about with faces wreathed in smiles at the prospect of securing logs and stave bolts.

The following high school trustees were appointed by the Middlesex County Council last week: Wardsville, Thomas Harold; Glencoe, Rev. D. Currie, B. A.; Parkhill, J. M. Gibbs; Strathroy, D. M. Cameron.

A meeting of the West Elgin Farmers' Institute will be held in the Hall at Shedden, on Friday, Feb. 8th. A most interesting programme has been prepared and a interesting and instructive time is looked for.

The Quarterly Meeting Services will be held in the Methodist Church next Sabbath. Rev. E. Middleton will preach at both services—morning at 10.30, evening at 7. Subject in the evening, "The Child Prophet."

Our County Council is again agitating for the election of all County officials paid by fee instead of appointing them as at present. The proposal has much to commend it, and the feeling of the people is strong in its favor.

WANTED.—One million feet of elm logs wanted at the Dutton Stave Factory. Every one must mark or put their name on their logs. All logs must be measured before the end of March. Also basswood bolts wanted.

Mr. Peter J. McCallum wishes us to state that he did not second either motion for the appointment of deputy reeves at the last meeting of Dunwich Council. The minutes were copied off the official records and published in the ENTERFRISE as such.

The value of the fire drill in public schools was shown at Ingersoll a few days ago, when a serious fire started in the Central School without causing a panic. The teachers and hundreds of children in the building displayed great coolness and nerve in the crisis.

The announcement has been made that a paper coffin has been invented and put on the market. A man may build his house with paper, eat his dinner from paper dishes, wipe his face with a paper handkerchief, buy his wife a paper piano and go to his grave in a paper coffin. The coffin may be paid for with a piece of paper and the death published on another piece. There are few things more useful than paper and every person should be a regular subscriber to his local paper, and pay for it in advance with another piece of paper.

There is not a prospect of a plethora of ice this season, and next summer will probably see a dearth of the article. In view of this it would be well to keep a sharp lookout for the quality of it. A season such as this is a great temptation to lay by a store from doubtful sources.

In view of the universal complaint of farmers living near towns that it is impossible to raise sheep, owing to the depredations committed by dogs, it is suggested that an act should be passed by the Ontario Legislature compelling owners of dogs to keep them chained at night.

In the case of St. Thomas vs. the C. V. R., referred to Col. Shanley, master in chancery, to assess damages, he has given St. Thomas $2,500, or $120 annually. A jury originally gave the city $12,000. The alleged damages were sustained by the refusal to run trains to the Church street station.

Anniversary services were held in Knox Church last Sunday. Rev. T. Wilson preached able and effective sermons in the morning and afternoon and Rev. E. Middleton also gave an impressive sermon in the evening, taking for his subject, "Our Father who art in Heaven." The services were all well attended.

The Mayor of Toronto proposes that the assessment returns should be published. The idea is a good one. Rightly or wrongly, and in all probability rightly, there is an idea abroad that there is a great deal of inequality in the assessment, and publication would remove this or confirm it by giving all chance for comparison.

A circular issued by the Provincial Educational Department announces that the next entrance examinations for the High Schools and Collegiate Institutes will be held on July 4th, 5th and 6th. It is also announced that after the December examinations this year there will probably be only one examination per year, namely, at mid-summer.

Our Wallacetown correspondent writes: The new railroad has created quite a boom here. Capitalists from New York and eastern points are contemplating letting large contracts for the manufacture of ties for its construction. The work will likely commence early in the spring. Property has already advanced to a remarkable price. —Journal.

MARKETS.—The grain market remains quiet, with prices the same as last week. In provisions there is not much change, butter remaining firm at 20c; eggs, a large supply at 15c.; dried apples, an immense stock, and no market, 75c. per bush.; onions, 50c. per bush., large supply and no demand; geese, none offering; chickens, in demand at 6 to 8c. per lb.; dressed turkeys, 8c. per lb.; lard, 12 1-2c.; tallow, 5c.

About two years ago a man representing himself to be Mr. Archibald McPherson, of Dunwich, called on a St. Thomas lawyer and wanted to raise $1,000 on his farm. He was taken by the solciitor to Mr Hiram Comfort, stated that he was Mr. Arch. McPherson, and that he owned a 150-acre farm in Dunwich, valued at $8,000. On these representations and thinking that the solicitor knew the man was what he represented himself to be the money was advanced. It being necessary to communicate about the money the real Mr. A. McPherson was written to, and was dumfounded. He went to St. Thomas Friday afternoon, and the fraud was discovered. Mr. Comfort is out the $1,000 and the interest, that is if the bank can not be made to pay, they having not paid the money to Mr. McPherson, as the check called for.

A serious accident happened to a young son of Robert McMillan, of Largie, who was attending the High School here on Tuesday afternoon. He had jumped on a sleigh loaded with logs just after leaving the school grounds and when opposite Mr. A. J. Leitch's dwelling the driver of the team turned out of the road to allow a cutter to pass. This swung the end of the load, on which young McMillan was sitting, towards the centre of the road and the horse which was following, becoming frightened at some object, attempted to jump over the load, striking the boy on the breast and knocking him off the load. On being picked up it was found that he was seriously hurt, having sustained severe spinal injuries as well as numerous bruises. He was taken home in the evening and has since been very low; but Dr. McKillop hopes to bring him around again all right unless he becomes paralyzed from the effects of the injury to his back.

The Supreme Court will resume at Ottawa on February 19.

Collector of Customs Bedson, of Windsor, was 77 years old Monday.

Frontenac County Council yesterday approved of prohibition by a vote of 19 to 4.

Listowel has had nine fires, supposed to be incendiary, since September 16 last.

Colbert's brewery at Seaforth was badly damaged by fire on Thursday night.

John Fraser, brother-in law of Hon. Oliver Mowat, died at Kingston Sunday.

We have received the handsome carnival number of the Montreal Witness.

The Parnell inquiry has developed nothing so far except a heavy bill of expenses.

Albert D. Kean, of Orillia, who was killed by a train at that place lately, was insured for $54,000.

George Meager, of Montreal, has entered a suit for $5,000 damages against the Witness for libel.

An hostler named Harkness was fatally shot by a drunken Indian at Allenford, Bruce County, on Saturday.

Instead of carting away the snow the Montreal people are packing it down with heavy rollers, and secure satisfactory results.

A Gananoque man, suspected of being a wife-beater, was taken out of his bed the other night by several young men and ordered to quit town. He quit.

The opening of Provincial Legislature was attended with no fuss or pageant whatever. All the other formalities will soon go, and the sooner the better.

Ottawa's mayor has been denied admission to a club of that city on the ground that he is a "tradesman." Very likely the persons who blackballed him are civil servants who won't pay their debts.

There was no ostentation and vulgar display at the funeral of Mrs. Jay Gould. It was simplicity itself. The example of a few such rich people might have a good effect in bringing about a much needed reform in such matters.

Chicago at last is making a break to settle forever its claim of being the greatest pork-packing centre in the world. A cab driver of that city, bearing the august name of John Kelly, has undertaken to eat 30 young roast pigs in as many days.

Already over 80,000 Americans have engaged passages for Europe during the coming season. In case of a war between Germany and the United States this number will be materially reduced. Then our American friends will, perhaps, be inclined to go over the C. P. R. to admire the scenery of the Rocky mountains, which is superior to that of the Alps; or take a run down the lower St. Lawrence, in comparison with which the Rhine is insignificant.

Middlemiss.

Revival services are being carried on in this place by Revs. Silcox, of Mount Brydges, and Truman, of Iona.

The scholars in S. S. No. 11 are preparing for an olio to be held in the hall on Friday evening, Feb. 8th.

Nat. Beech and E. Walker were committed to stand their trial at the spring assizes for picking up a buffalo robe while returning home from their day's work. The owner was just going to see if the boys had found the robe when he was told by a meddlesome party that they had stolen the robe and advised him to get out a warrant for their arrest. They promise to make it warm for some one.

R. H. Reynolds has resumed his duties again after an absence of about two weeks.

We regret very much to record the death of Mrs. John Graham, which took place at her home, on Saturday, after a lingering illness of about two years.

CHOW-CHOW.

"Which will you have, sir?" quoth the host,
"The breast? a leg? or wing?"
"It matters not," the guest replied,
"Oh, give me anything."

Then righteous wrath possessed the host,
And anger most intense.
And to his guest he gave the part
That last sailed o'er the fence.

Burdock Pills cure sick headache by regulating the stomach, liver and bowels.

A Chinaman with seven arms is one of the freaks in a Philadelphia dime museum, This is probably the same man that Bret Hart and Bill Nye played poker with.

Skin diseases are most annoying because so noticeable. Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap heals and cleanses the skin.

Miss Gazeaway—He's the dearest, loveliest, handsomest fellow you ever saw, and I'm going to get him or perish in the attempt.

Aunt Priscilla—Aren't you ashamed, Margaret, to throw yourself at a man in that fashion?

Miss Gazeaway—I'ts funny, auntie, you're always thinking about men. I was referring to a Saint Bernard puppy I saw yesterday.

A BUSINESS LETTER.

Tilsonburg, March 15th, 1 7.

T. Milburn & Co.,

Sirs,—Please ship at once three dozen B. B. Bitters Best selling medicine in the shop. Sold seven bottles to day.

Yours truly, C. Thompson.

The above is but one of hundreds of similar expressions regarding B.B.B.

Dudish Customer—See here; these pants have already worn shiney. Dealer—Mien frient, dot vas vot dey style Vrench goots. De longer you vear dem de bedder dey match your boots.

A clear skin adds to the beauty of a fine face, and often lends a charm to homeliness. To beautify your complexion, you should purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. As a tonic and alterative medicine, it has no equal. Price $1. Six bottles $5.

Caller—Is Mr. Jones in? The new servant maid (a jewel of honesty from the country)—Yes sir; but he's not well. He can't see you. Ill is he? I hope it's nothing serious. Not very serious; he's drunk, sir.

B.B.B. STOOD THE TEST.—"I tried every known remedy I could think of for rheumatism, without find any relief, until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, which remedy I can highly recommend to all afflicted as I was." Henry Smith, Milvelton, Ont.

There is no better remedy for worms of any kind in children or adults than Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

GREATLY EXCITED.—People are apt to get greatly excited in case of sudden accident and injury. It is well to be prepared for such emergencies. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the handiest remedy known for burns, scalds, bruises, lameness, pain and all wounds of the flesh. It is used internally and externally.

Servant man (to colleague in the employ of a poet)—What does your master do for a living? He sits on the sofa for six hours at a stretch waiting for an idea."

DIPHTHERIA.—"Last January," says J. N. Teeple, of Orwell, Ont., "there appeared diphtheria in our neighborhood. Doctors ran night and day, but I kept right to Hagyard's Yellow Oil and brought my children through all right." Yellow Oil cures all painful complaints and injuries.

Oculist—"When did your eye first become inflamed?"

Patient—"Yesterday, I went up to a lady to speak to her and the peak of her bonnet—"

"I see. We have many such cases. Use this lotion and be careful while the present fashion lasts to do your talking to ladies by telephone."

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 132 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NICHOLSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

VERY VALUABLE.—"Having used B.B.B. for biliousness and torpid liver, with the very best results, I would recommend it to all so troubled. The medicine is worth its weight in gold. Tillie White, Manitowaning, Ont.

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to
1-17tf N. PHELPS.

REPEAL OF THE SCOTT ACT.

NOTICE is hereby given that a petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Elgin will be fyled in the Registrar's office of the said county at St. Thomas, on or about the 15th day of February, A. D. 1889, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

NEW SAWMILL
—IN—
DUTTON.

Having placed a Sawmill south of the railway, between the Currie Road and Humpidge & Graham's Stave Factory, in Dutton, I am now prepared to do all kinds Custom Sawing, and solicit patronage from all who want satisfactory work. Lumber handled with care and not split or otherwise damaged while about the mill.

Sawing done at $3 per 1,000, on shares, or lumber taken in exchange.

A quantity of Ash, Hickory and Oak Logs wanted.

D. McKEE.

Dutton, Jan. 24, 1889—4

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

LOG WANTED.

ANY QUANTITY of First-class Elm Logs, 13 feet long, also a quantity of Basswood Bolts, 38 inches long.

HUMPIDGE & GRAHAM,
1-17-3 Dutton Stave Factory.

BURDOCK PILLS
SUGAR COATED
A SURE CURE
FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROMPT IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE AID TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

Boar Hog.

THE undersigned has a Berkshire Boar Pig for service, about 1½ miles southwest of Dutton. Terms of Service only 75 cents. Also a

High Grade Durham Bull.

T. WOOLDRIDGE.

Dutton, Nov. 29. 8-ins

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM
CURES COUGHS COLDS HOARSENESS &C.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeYean, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. Martyrs to headache should try

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

CUTTERS
—AND—
SLEIGHS!

If you want to buy the best and cheapest Cutters and Sleighs now in the market call on

SIFTON BROS.

Next door to Hockin & Pool,

MAIN ST., DUTTON.

We are agents for all kinds of Farm Machinery and Implements, representing the most reliable firms.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE FOR 1889.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

THE ENTERPRISE will be made the liveliest and most interesting local paper in Western Ontario, and advertisers will find it a valuable medium for their announcements.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

A SILVER WATCH!

VALUE $18.

Will be given to the person bringing in the largest number of NEW subscriptions, accompanied by the cash, before the 1st of May, 1889. Competition open to all. The usual commission will be paid in addition to the above offer.

SPECIAL EDITION!

On Thursday, February 14th, we will print a speciai edition of 2,000 COPIES, which will be distributed free throughout Dunwich, Southwold and Aldborough.

A BIG CHANCE FOR ADVERTISERS!

As the orders for advertlsing are coming in rapidly those desiring a space should SECURE IT AT ONCE!

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL 8—No. 7. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1889. WHOLE No. 341.

Professional Cards

HENRY CLAY,
Barrister-at-Law,
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.
ROCHE BLOCK, - - DUTTON.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B.,
Barrister, Solicitor, Etc.

MONEY TO LOAN.
OFFICES—ST. THOMAS AND DUTTON.
Dec. 1, 1887. 1-yr

MONEY TO LOAN
At 6 per cent on the most favorable terms for repayment.
RMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.
June 7, 1888. 1-yr

Money to Loan at Lowest Rates.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE.
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY,
DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.
June 7. 1 yr

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S.,
Surgeon - Dentist,
Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
OFFICE—LEITCH BLOCK, DUTTON. Office hours, 9 to 5. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Home the last three days of each week. All contracts made with Mr. J. W. Coyne will be fulfilled. March 23.

DR. C. ADAMS SWANN,
SURGEON DENTIST. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday. May 19-ly

WILLIAM DRINKWATER,
Veterinary Surgeon,
DUTTON, ONTARIO.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS
For all Classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order.
F. A. Humpidge.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Jan. 6. OFFICE, Front St.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on
tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

A. J. LEITCH,
pb ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON,
d LICENSED AUCTIONEER, DUTTON.

The Star Loan Company
181, Talbot St., St. Thomas.
Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in
SAVINGS BANK!
from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.
Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,369,24
DIRECTORS.
L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.
OFFICERS.
L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

PUMPS!
Pumps! Pumps!!
To all intending purchasers of pumps I beg to announce that I am prepared to furnish a first class article at the proper price.
Repairing Promptly Done.
I would solicit a call from all who are in need of a good pump.
Factory opposite the Dutton Iron Works.
Feb. 4 John Kiefer.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY
IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y
Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.
Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glenco.

REPEAL OF THE SCOTT ACT.
NOTICE is hereby given that a petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Elgin will be fyled in the Registrar's office of the said county at St. Thomas, on or about the 15th day of February, A. D. 1889, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

To Farmers and Builders.
Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds,
etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. Cochrane.
January 27, 1887 tf

BLACKSMITHING.
The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

DUTTON WOOLEN MILLS
Having decided to remain in Dutton and carry on business in the future as in the past, we will be pleased to see all our old customers and many new.
First-class Tailoring
IN CONNECTION WITH THE BUSINESS.
30,000 POUNDS
—OF—
WOOL WANTED
This season to stock our new mills at Union.
L. J. Willson & Co.
Feb. 4, 1888. tf

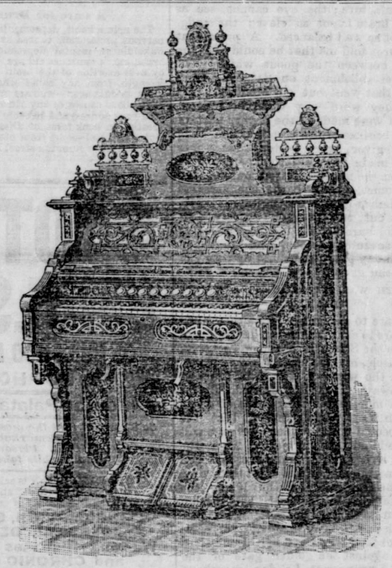
THE KEY TO HEALTH.
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS
Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Drops, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

Dutton Iron Works.
MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.
The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE-
Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888

SALESMEN WANTED.
Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed. Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co,

BURDOCK PILLS
SUGAR COATED
A SURE CURE
FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROMPT IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE AID TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

Cowal Carriage Works.
THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.
Repairing Promptly Done.
CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.
A Specialty made of our
NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,
which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities
Give Us a Call.
TURNER & PECKHAM.
Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.



FOR SALE.
THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.
Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888. tf

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR
Will clear out his ENTIRE STOCK to MAKE ROOM
—FOR—
SPRING :-: IMPORTATIONS.
NOW IS THE TIME TO SECURE BARGAINS IN CLOTHING.
CALL AND SEE
J. C. HERTEL, Merchant Tailor.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.
A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.
Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish
ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER
(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line
AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.
LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.
PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED
ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE BELL ORGANS AND PIANOS.

W. BELL & CO., GUELPH, ONT.
CALL AND SEE OUR STOCK OF INSTRUMENTS BEFORE BUYING.
THE BEST VALUE GUARANTEED.
A large stock of small instruments, viz:
VIOLINS, ACCORDEONS, HARMONICAS, &C., ALSO SHEET MUSIC.
We also keep in stock the best American Sewing Machine Oil, Needles and Repairs, at
J. M. JACKSON'S MUSIC EMPORIUM,
Opposite the Commercial Hotel, Main Street, Dutton.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE FOR 1889.
UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.
THE ENTERPRISE will be made the liveliest and most interesting local paper in Western Ontario, and advertisers will find it a valuable medium for their announcements.
SUBSCRIBE NOW.
A SILVER WATCH!
VALUE $18.
Will be given to the person bringing in the largest number of NEW subscriptions, accompanied by the cash, before the 1st of May, 1889. Competition open to all. The usual commission will be paid in addition to the above offer.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Black diptheria exists near Windsor.

The Montreal ice palace is completed.

The Manitoba Legislature resumed its sittings Thursday.

Leamington is making an effort to be incorporated as a town.

Victoria County has petitioned for the repeal of the Scott Act.

Diphtheria is prevalent at Belmont, and the schools have been closed.

Eastern Ontario Orange Grand Lodge will meet in Campbellford this week.

John D. Gilbert, of Essex Centre, was killed while hauling logs on Saturday.

Majory Sharpe, the St. Thomas young woman who swallowed carbolic acid, died on Sunday.

Chief-Justice Macdonald has been sworn in Administrator of the Government of Nova Scotia.

Neil McArthur, who was injured in a railway accident at Campbellford on Friday, died on Saturday.

It is said that a New York company has purchased the Empire Oil Company's business at London.

A fire over Webb's dry goods store at Cobourg Monday did considerable damage to several offices.

J. Y. Shantz & Co., of Berlin, Ont., lost $18,000 in the Buffalo fire, on which their insurance is $9,000.

Kingston police have arrested three of a gang of burglars which had made its headquarters in an old barge.

James Enright, of Hamilton, took Paris green on Saturday while temporarily insane, but is now recovering.

The vote on the repeal of the Scott Act will take place between the 15th and 30th of April, in the conty of Kent.

Pews in Dr. Talmage's church, at the recent auction, netted premiums amounting to $6,394. The first choice cost $500.

A league of seventy leading citizens of Cape Breton county, N. S., has been formed and $1,000 subscribed to enforce the Scott Act.

The house of Mrs. Croft, a widow, of Paisley, was burned Monday morning and her eleven-year-old grandson was burned to death.

Angus Sandfield Macdonald, son of the late Hon. Sandfield Macdonald, died at Portage la Prairie on Saturday, friendless and destitute.

Mrs. Pendin, of Hamilton, is suing the Grand Trunk for $1,000 damages for the death of her husband, who was killed on the road last winter.

Hiram Wecks lost $800 at two sittings of poker, which he played with some sharpers at Lyn. They compromised by refunding $320

The mines at Spring Hill, N. B., have shut down, and eleven hundred hands are partially idle because of increased freight rates on the Intercolonial.

John Naughton, of Chatham township, and his colored mistress have been ordered to leave the vicinity by some persons who styles themselves White Caps.

Mr. Coulter, the Reform candidate, was elected for the County of Haldimand by a majority of 39 over his opponent, Dr. Montague. This is the fourth election for the Dominion House held in the county within the past 28 months.

At Saturday night's session of the Sandwich Town Council Reeve McKee remarked that a certain drain cost a good deal of money. "Not half as much as the one you had dug when you had things all your way," remarked James Titheredge, who was sitting in the lobby. One word led to another, and finally McKee took up a chair and brought it down on Titheredge's head. Others joined in the fracas. Mayor Mason commanded order, and called for the police. Prominent citizens took part in the squabble, which was decidedly lively while it lasted.

"Windsor cannot be made a city of refuge or harbor of safety for robbers," said Magistrate Bartlet in closing the Frank Aldrich case at Windsor Tuesday. Aldrich was charged with "buncoing" J. K. Lemon, of Pittsburg, out of $10,000. Lemon said the money was taken from him by force, and on this ground made a charge of robbery. The technical difference between "bunco" and robbery, as claimed by the defence, had no effect on the court, and Magistrate Bartlet so informed the prisoner. "You robbed this man of $10,000," said he, "and I'm going to send you back for trial. You will be taken to Sandwich jail and held there until extradition papers can be made out, and then you will be taken to Pittsburg." This settles the case so far as Magistrate Bartlet is concerned. Aldrich said after the trial: I shall not take an appeal. I have a great sufficiency of Canadian justice and will take my chances in the United States.

Tongue Tanglers.

The popularity of Peter Piper's celebrated peck of pickled peppers will probably never wane as a snare to catch the tongue that would be fain agile; but that test has formidable rivals. The following short sentences do wonders in baffling the ordinary power of speech:

Gaze on the gay gray brigade.
The sea ceaseth, and it sufficeth us.
Say, should such a shapely sash, shabby stitchs show?
Strange strategic statistics.
Give Grimes Jim's gilt gig whip.
Sarah in a shawl shovelled soft snow softly.
She sells sea shells.
A cup of coffee in a copper coffee pot.
Smith's spirit flask split Phillip's sixth sister's fifth squirrel's skull.

A little enlightenment is more to be desired than a big gas bill.

Watchman.

Watchman has heard that an appeal is being made to our citizens on behalf of the High School, also that the friends of the township will likewise be called on in connection with this matter. Let there be on the part of the people a generous and hearty response. The subscribers merit the the thanks of the community for their public spirit in erecting such a building, and they are doing nobly in the matter, but they ought not to bear the full responsibility any longer. Every foot of property in the town is more valuable because of the school being here, and one of the principle attractions for people coming to town is the advantage it offers for education.

Then the number coming here to school have to be fed, books are required, &c., and it means the expenditure of money in all kinds of business We have, I believe, over one hundred pupils on the roll, many of them from the country, and this number will constantly increase. If it brings one hundred dollars weekly into the village all are more or less benefitted.

Then to our country friends—the growth and prosperity of the village means an increase of prosperity to the country, an increasing market at your door. There is no need and no room for jealousy in this matter. Your prosperity increases ours, our prosperity increases yours, and the High School is a benefit to both. Success to the collectors on behalf of the school.

While on the question of High School allow me a word of suggestion to the principal and teachers.

Would it not be advisable to hold bimonthly examinations for the entire school and promote pupils whose papers warrant their promotion. It would be, I believe, a stimulus.

We simply offer it as a suggestion. I am sure, Mr. Editor, you would willingly publish the result in the ENTERPRISE.
WATCHMAN.

The Country Cigar.

When the average man has smoked his first rural cigar, he cannot help imagining, if he have any palate, that that cigar was grown in the country, for country consumption.

There are different kinds of country cigars, but each one represents a different kind of vileness. They come in boxes decorated with spread eagles and vivandieres, and other combinations of ships, cannon-balls, sunsets, and halfdressed goddesses, after the manner of the seals of the various states of the Union.

The brands are equally inconsistent and misleading. Why a cigar should be called "The 2:40" is a mystery, unless it means that they are worth $2.40 a thousand, or the man who smokes two of them never lives longer than forty years.

In the country cigars there are the "soft moist" specimen, and the "hard dry." When you bite the end of the former, you leave it like the edge of a wedge; and when you light it, it tastes like gall, loosens your teeth, and makes your tongue feel as though asleep.

The hard dry cigar you cannot squeeze like the soft one, without having it crack like a wish bone. You bite on it, and you think you are biting a pretzel, it is so brittle. And when you bite the end off, a long splinter usually comes out of the heart of the weed, the outside wrapper suddenly uncolls like a shaving, and silently steals away.

As soon as you draw on it, slivers of tobacco get into your throat and nose, and when you light it, it burns all the way down one side, while the other remains intact.

Sometimes a country cigar will lose its outside wrapper, and as you draw, the smoke will pass through it about an inch in front of your mouth. This will not satisfy you if you are fond of smoking, but it will greatly benefit your health, or rather husband it. It makes little difference which end of one of these cigars you light, it will smoke about the same. Many a countryman will carry one of these cigars—spelled with an "s"—around in his vestpocket awaiting the arrival of Sunday. By that time the cigar is so dry that it has warped, and in trying to straighten it, it breaks and he is obliged to fasten a newspaper wrapper about it with mucilage, and then he smokes it with great joy while reading the dry goods advertisement that enwraps it.

The man who's a slave to this kind of weed
Is a slave indeed.

The rural grocer hands out one of these "Intimidads" to every customer when he settles his bill; and it is said the reason most country people do not pay the grocer is that they wish to escape the cigar, which should be classed with green groceries, such as cabbage and parsley.

The country cigar is no doubt the thing that drives most long-headed countrymen to the pipe for the long-headed countrymen doesn't care for a cigar that has no nicotine in it. He likes cowhide well enough on his feet, but he doesn't care for it or its flavor in a cigar. The country cigar does not sooth one, or drive away dull care, or throw one into a vision full of languishing landscape and Persian pomp, and the proper place for it is in the box, that it may not put the smoker into one.

Oh, while the weed holds out to burn,
The average man may get
Diviner joy if he but turn
To the deadly cigarette.

For while the countryman reduces the country cigar to ashes, the country cigar also reduces him to ashes.

A PROFESSIONAL OPINION.—Rev. F. Gunner, M. D., of Listowel, Ont., says regarding B. B. B., "I have used your excellent Burdock Compound in practice and in my family since 1881, and hold it No. 1 on my list of sanative remedies. Your three busy B's never sting, weaken or worry.

A wonderful strong number, in the variety and practical value of its articles in every department, is the American Agriculturist for February. "The Florida orange harvest" forms the topic of a full-page illustration. How to have vegetables early, the wintering of cows, and other subjects are treated in full.

"It is worth its weight in gold," is a common expression. But, while the value of gold is easily affected, the worth of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as a blood purifier, never depreciates. It will eradicate scrofula from the system when everything else fails.

Iona.

Mud with us is a thing of the past. We have good sleighing and business generally is improving.

Messrs. Britton & Robertson, who entered into partnership as millers a short time ago, have dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Robertson intends running the mills in future. No doubt those who patronize him will be well pleased.

A large dance will take place in the Mills House, of this place, on Friday, February 22nd. A good time is expected.

Mr. James Lawther has rented the blacksmith shop formerly occupied by the late Geo. Brown. "Opposition is the life of trade."

Revival services will be held in the Methodist Church next week.

The tea meeting given by the ladies of the Free Baptist Church was a grand succes, both intellectually and financially. Proceeds, $60.

Some unknown person or persons broke into J. O. Lumley's store one night last week and carried off a number of small articles.

Wallacetown.

The good sleighing makes things lively. An immense number of logs are coming into Shleihauf's mills. They will soon require more room, although the mill is running to its full capacity.

Messrs. T. L Pearce, J. R. Gow, and B. E Sifton went to London last week with over a ton each of as fine pork as ever went on the market, but were too late in the season, the prices having fallen. However they realized good figures and were quite satisfied.

Our enterprising townsman, Mr. L. W. McIntyre, went on a visit to Glencoe and proposes visiting Windsor and other western towns before returning. It is quite probable he will bring back valuable information regarding the extension of the Windsor Lake Shore R. R.

The ladies of the Presbyterian Church are contemplating a tea meeting in the near future, and should the sleighing continue a good programme will be arranged. Our ladies are proverbial in securing good talent on these occasions.

Mr. Peter Cameron purchased a valuable Wilkes colt rising one year old from Joshua Wothin, 10th concession, for which he paid a large sum. This same colt carried off the silver medal in the Wilkes class and 1st prize in roadsters.

Coyne's Corners.

The first meeting of our Literary Society will be held next Friday evening for the purpose of organizing and preparing a programme for the following Friday. It will certainly be a success under the management of some of our energetic young people.

Mr., Mrs. and Miss Shaw, of Ridgetown are visiting friends in this neighborhood.

On Friday evening last a number of our young people got up a sleigh load and went to the residence of Mr. Peter Gow, Lake Shore. They were treated to a sumptuous feast, after which the evening was spent in playing games, music, dancing, etc. This is getting to be very common around here, being the second one on the same night.

Winter Work for the Boys.

The carpenter shop may be made one of the most valuable buildings on the farm, especially where there are boys with a mechanical turn. The number of useful implements and appliances that may be made here is large, and the time for this kind of work is rapidly passing. Teach the boys to first make a drawing of the article they propose to make, drawn to a scale, and then to work to measure. Among the articles to be needed are markers for different crops. Stone boats, or sleds to use in place of them, shoes to put over the points of plows while taking them afield, boxes to hold a bushel, and others a half bushel, extra whiffletrees, and gates, both large and small. Have oil cans to go with each wagon or seed sower, spare chains, extra plow points and duplicate parts of machines most liable to be broken.

Posts and Rails.

The weakest board or rail determines the strength of the fence.

Land in a square can be enclosed with less fence than an equal area in any other form bounded by straight lines.

The animals will certainly find the weak spots; but it is bad policy to have them show you where those spots are.

The width of the fence row is a large item in the cost of fencing; even more important is what the fence row grows.

Crops would suffer less from many a noxious insect and its progeny, were it not for the shelter of the hedge, or of the rubbish in the fence row.

As the posts are the foundation of the fence, unless they are deeply and solidly set, good material and fine workmanship in the superstructure count for little.

Where the law is founded on the good sense to require a man to restrain only his own animals, instead of all the world's from his fields, much less fencing is required.

As fencing is one of the most considerable items of the farm expense, it is fruitful economy to make the fields of that size and shape which will require least fencing.

As the length of the field is increased at the expense of its breadth, more fence is required; but for this there may be compensation in the greater ease of cultivation.—American Agriculturist for February.

Our Boys.

A correspondent asks to what trade we would recommend him to apprentice his son. Our answer is, to none. In the old days, when men went on foot and in stage-coaches, it would do to grind out a few years in the manifold drudgery of an imposed task, but in these days of quick communication—the news of the day at almost every hour, and the opportunity for boys to see and know what is going on around them a thousand-fold better than their fathers did twenty years ago—we say emphatically, give the boy a voice in the matter. Let him look and choose. If he have a mania for robbing birds' nests and littering up his room with them, put him in the way of becoming a naturalist. If he be forever experimenting and whittling, and trying to do something which he cannot do for lack of means, let him visit machine shops of various kinds. If he wants to know how a thing can happen at midnight, and descriptions and pictures of the event and its surroundings be given to fifty millions of people before seven o'clock in the morning, let him visit a well organized printing-office. A few doses of this kind of stimulant will show what path of life the young man will be likely to travel with the best success. By all means, give him the opportunity to select, and, when he has made his choice, encourage his efforts, and do not grind him down by a servile apprenticeship in which he takes no interest, and where nine-tenths of his time is spent in making money for his "master" without benefit to himself.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

CANADIAN.

Queen's University has re-elected Mr. Sandford Fleming, C. M. G., Ottawa, Chancellor for the fourth time.

A carload of cotton (144 bales) was shipped from Kingston yesterday for China, via the Canadian Pacific railway.

The funeral yesterday in Montreal of Chas. McKirnan, more familiarly known as Joe Beef, was very largely attended.

A branch of the Imperial Federation League is shortly to be organized at Windsor, as an offset to the Political Union Club.

Kingston temperance advocates are preparing petitions to the License Commissioners praying for a reduction in a number of city saloons.

Mrs. Oliver E. Friend, who has attained international notoriety in connection with the electrical sugar refinery fraud, is staying at the Crawford house, Windsor.

Premier Mercier will give a reception in Parliament House on Saturday week in honour of Mme. Albani, to whom he will present the freedom of the Province of Quebec.

The collection of one cent a month from each Roman Catholic for the completion of St. Peter's church, Montreal, realized for the month of December, in four parishes, the sum of $1,053.67.

Mr. Joseph Letourneaux, the Conservative candidate for Laprairie, intends taking an action for libel against Cure Bedard, for reflections in a letter written by him and read at the church door last Sunday.

The Governor-General was present at the annual meeting of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers. Mr. Keefer delivered the annual address, which was listened to with marked interest.

During the summer Superintendent Folger, of the Kingston and Pembroke railway, will give sacred concerts on Sunday afternoons on the lawn of the station, which he thinks will help to keep some people out of mischief.

The will of the late Alex. Murray, president of the Canada Shipping Company, was filed in Montreal yesterday. It leaves the bulk of his property to his wife, which, on her decease, will go to the Montreal General Hospital.

Celina Metayer, a thirteen-year-old girl who was confined in a dark room at the back of a Montreal barber's shop, and kept for immoral purposes, was on Saturday sent to the Reformatory for five years. Her seducer has escaped to the States.

Official notice was given the other day that the bills of the Bank of Toronto will be redeemed at par at the offices of the British North America Bank in British Columbia, Manitoba, and New Brunswick, and at the Union Bank of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

A telegram from St. Paul states that the stocks of wheat in the North-West are about seventeen millions of bushels less than at the corresponding period of last year, and that good milling wheat is expected to become scarce before the next harvest.

Mr. E. V. Wright, the well-known miner, has lodged a complaint with the Dominion Government that while machinery for the development of mines in British Columbia is admitted duty free, similar machinery for the same purpose in Ontario is taxed 30 per cent.

Senator John Macdonald read a report last night before the Toronto Board of Trade respecting his recent trip to the West Indies and British Guiana, in which he commented upon the desirability and possibility of closer commercial relations between Canada and the islands.

A womanin Montreal was yesterday charged with unlawfully detaining her niece, a girl of eleven, but as she has had unmolested possession of her for eight years, the magistrate dismissed the case, and told the child's mother that she would have to resort to the civil process if she wished to recover her girl.

It is stated that the French-Canadian Catholics in the New England States outnumber the Catholics of all other nationalities by 5,000, and a proposition will be laid before Cardinal Taschereau to appoint four coadjutor bishops in the four bishoprics which cover the States in which so many of the French-Canadians dwell.

Quebec is greatly agitated over a marriage question, A short time since two Roman Catholics, both of age, were married by a Protestant clergyman, and it is now contended by the friends of the bride, who has left her husband, that the marriage was not legal, and an action to test the question has been entered in the Supreme Court.

Judge Charland gave a lengthy judgment yesterday in the Morrissette case, in which a girl of nineteen changed from the Roman Catholic to the Protestant religion, and voluntarily went to and remained at the Grande Ligne Baptist mission. He ordered that the girl should be restored to her father, and refused a delay of twenty-four hours to enable a writ of appeal to be taken out and served.

AMERICAN.

Serious racial troubles are reported from Ty Ty, Ga., where in a recent riot two negroes were shot dead for resisting a bailiff in making an arrest.

It is stated in Washington that President Cleveland intends consulting Gen. Harrison with regard to the course the States ought to take in the Samoan affair.

Allen Campbell, cashier, of Evarts, Mich., has departed with embezzled funds to the amount of $10,000, and is supposed to be heading his flight for Canada.

Wheat sold down a cent in Chicago on Saturday. The reason given is that the visible stocks in the United States and Europe are twenty-one million bushels greater than a year ago.

A circular from Archbishop Corrigan was read in the Roman Catholic churches of New York yesterday declaring the penalty for attendance at Anti-poverty meetings would be the denial of absolution.

Henry P. Marshall, cashier of the Seaman's Bank, of New York, died in November last, and an investigation of his accounts shows that he embezzled missionary and other trust funds to the amount of $75,000.

Gen. Poe, who is constructing a new channel for the United States through the St. Clair flats, says that part of the channel undoubtedly lies in Canadian waters, but he anticipates no trouble between the two Governments.

The Detroit Customs officers on Monday stopped a Windsor music teacher, and told him he would have to pay duty on his music every time he brought it into the city, as under the Foreign Labour law it was regarded as "workman's tools."

A few nights ago a number of White caps seized an idiot of Coal River, Pa., and on a charge of having assaulted a girl, beat him into insensibility, and then with a rope tied around him dragged the unfortunate man up and down an ice-cold stream. He is not expected to recover.

FOREIGN.

M. De Lesseps will be president, and his son Charles vice-president, of the new Panama canal.

During the political riot in Waterford on Monday a police inspector and 14 constables were injured.

Prince Bismarck is suffering from indisposition, in consequence of his exertions in the Reichstag on Tuesday.

The Arabs have destroyed the German missionary station at Tuga, and eight missionaries were massacred.

The Anarchists in attendance at the Peace Congress at Milan have decided to foment a revolution in Europe in the event of war.

A shock of earthquake was felt yesterday in a portion of the Leith valley and in Western Edinburgh, but no damage was done.

Emperor William has ordered the dismissal of all the French cooks employed in the palace, and their places will be taken by Germans.

Rumours are current that the dervishes are massing at Khartoum for an advance on Dongola, and that the Mahdi intends to invade Egypt.

Mr. Gladstone finds the air of Naples so invigorating that he will remain there until the end of is tour, and consequently will not visit Rome.

The earthquake of December 30, in Costa Rica, wrecked public and private buildings to the value of $5,000,000. It also caused some loss of life.

An explosion occurred yesterday in the Hyde colliery, near Manchester. Seven bodies have been recovered, and one hundred persons are still entombed.

Four hundred families are leaving Limerick to-day for Buenos Ayres despite the repeated warnings of the Bishop of Limerick, who is opposed to their emigrating.

The Exchequer division of the High Court of Justice in Ireland has refused to confirm the conditional writ of habeas corpus granted for the release of Edward Harrington.

Mme. di Murska, the singer, died in Munich on Thursday, in extreme poverty. Her daughter, who was heart-broken at the loss of her mother, committed suicide.

The "Osservatore Romano" says the Pope cannot accept the guarantee law, which instead of recognizing his ancient rights, confers new sovereignty upon him.

Mr. O'Brien yesterday was cautioned by the Parnell Commissioners for his article on the judges, which exceeded fair criticism; but under the circumstances he was not punished.

A letter has been received in Brussels from Stanley, which was written to Tippoo Tib from Boma or Bonalija Muretia on August 17 in which he says Emin Bey is well and prosperous.

The officers of the German war ship Eber, which arrived at Auckland, N. Z., yesterday, deny the reports sent via San Francisco as to tearing down American flags, burning houses, etc.

Patrick Delany, a convict, gave very damaging evidence before the Parnell Commission yesterday, connecting some members of the Irish Parliamentary party with the Fenians and Invincibles.

The weather in the Trans-Caspian Territory is very severe. The port of Usunada is entirely frozen over. Whole herds of cattle have perished, and the inhabitants are suffering great hardships.

The London Chronicle expects that the Government will be shortly informed of Stanley's safety, and adds that there are certain reasons for keeping secret at present the whereabouts of the explorer.

The Manchester Cotton Spinners' Association have passed a resolution by a unanimous vote to form a fund to be used for trying in the law courts a test case relative to the excessive dampness of American cotton.

It is stated that the General of the Carthusian order is disposed to reject the proposals of a London firm, which has offered him $3,000,000 for a monopoly of the manufacture of the famous Chartreuse liqueur.

TIRED OF HIS BEAT.

Michael Larkin, P. C., Sends a Bullet Through His Head.

TORONTO, Jan. 31.—A case of suicide occurred on Frederick street at a quarter to seven o'clock the other morning—a suicide involved in mystery as to its cause. Police Constable Michael Larkin (123), residing at 33 Wilton avenue, unmarried, aged 29, has been 6 years on the police force, and has always borne an excellent character. He went on duty on King street east early in the morning and was twice visited by his superior officers, once by the patrol sergeant and once by the station sergeant, and on both occasions he seemed to be all right. At a quarter to seven o'clock, just before being relieved from duty, and when opposite the Newsboys' Home on Frederick street, he placed the muzzle of it over his right ear and fired. The bullet went clean through his head, coming out on the left side about 2½ inches over the outer corner of the left eye, a quantity of brain matter oozing from the wound. The suicide was witnessed by a young man named Whelan. The body was taken to the morgue, where an inquest was held at three o'clock in the afternoon.

DREW HIS REVOLVER,

RESULT OF THE INQUEST.

The inquest into the cause of the death of Constable Larkin took place at the Morgue in the afternoon before Coroner Johnson. Several witnesses were examined, among them Geo. McCracken, an inmate of the Home, who was an eye-witness of the tragical event. The evidence of the police examined showed that Larkin was in his usual spirits, and cheerful up to the last moment. No reason for his taking his own life was advanced.

WIRELETS.

McKay's flouring mills at Bowmanville are gone up in smoke.

Hon J. A. Chapleau is still in Paris, and his condition is favorable.

Six vessels are overdue at Philadelphia, with crews numbering sixty men.

Charges of extensive frauds are made in connection with the New York customs office.

Gen. Boulanger was elected in Paris by the immense majority of 81,550.

Sir William Richards, late Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, died in Ottawa on Saturday, in his 74th year.

A plasterer was turned back to Windsor on Friday by the Detroit Customs officials because he had his tools with him.

A G. T. R. employe at Niagara Falls, named Gideon, is suffering from lockjaw, the result of injuries received ten days ago. His recovery is doubtful.

Benjamin McMahon, of Wheatly, has been arrested and taken to Chatham on suspicion of having been concerned in the Holton murder in Tilbury last July.

Saturday was the fourth anniversary of the death of General Gordon. His statue in Trafalgar square was bedecked with flowers and wreaths.

At Allenford, county of Bruce, on Saturday, a drunken Indian named Moses Moon, shot Hostler Joseph Harkness, of Warrilow's hotel, fatally. Moon was arrested.

Have You Neralgia?

If you are suffering the agonies of neuralgia, and have failed to get a remedy that will afford relief, we want you to try Polson's Nerviline. No remedy in the market has given any thing like the same degree of satisfaction. Its action on nerve pain is simply marvellous, and as it is put up in 10 cent sample bottles no great expense is involved in giving it a trial. Polson's Nerviline is the most pleasant, powerful, and certain pain remedy in the world. Sold by all dealers in medicine, 10 and 25 cents a bottle.

Perhaps the most potential letter of the alphabet is "n" because it can make a man of "ma."

We have pleasure in calling the attention of farmers and others who are desirous of effecting loans on their property, to the advertisement (to be found in another column) of the Credit Foncier Franco-Canadien, a company with a large capital which is prepared to make advances on very favorable terms. Borrowers who desire to do with a company who will treat them well, and meet their wishes in everything that is reasonable, need have no hesitation in applying to the Credit Foncier. Full information as to their rates, &c., can be obtained by writing to the Manager, Toronto.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER

In all the eastern part of New York city, notably between Houston or Harry Hills to Fortieth Street, there is an overcrowding of human beings in a degree far beyond anything that has ever been known in any civilized country. In the Fourth and Sixth wards and in portions of the Eleventh and Seventeenth, the population is packed at the rate of 200,000 individuals to the square mile, and in the Fourth ward alone at the rate of over 300,000 inhabitants to a square mile. The most densely populated districts of London do not approach any where near the above figures. Some 500,000 persons live in the tenement houses of this city, some of which are ten stories high, and there is one house in Mulberry street wherein 1,500 tenants dwell. What refining or restraining influences of family life are possible under such surroundings? Drunkenness is but too prevalent, weary and complaining wives, cross and hungry husbands, for the reader must bear in mind there are over 100,000 people in this city out of work, almost as many as all the ministers of the States, owing to the continued strikes and overcrowding of professions. There also wild and ungoverned children will inevitably jar and wrangle with each other. Dr. Elisha Harris, of the New York Prison Association, once said: "The younger criminal seems to come almost exclusively from the worst tenement districts, that is, when traced back to the very places where they first had homes." Those very domiciles, as one can daily see from the windows of the elevated railroad, are nurseries of crime and of the vices and disorderly courses that lead to crime. At least 50 per cent. of the crimes against property and against person are perpetrated by individuals who never had any home life, or whose home had ceased to be sufficiently separate, decent and desirable to offer what are regarded as ordinary wholesome influences of home and family. The Christian workers, such as the late Mrs. Jay Gould, Catherine Wolff and Mrs. Astor find a large field in the wards above mentioned, and one can daily see the fruit of the seeds their hands have sown and by accurate observations in the history of crimes and criminals.

MRS JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

The late Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who died at the age of sixty years, left behind her such a reputation as those who live in the enjoyment of great wealth seldom acquire. Mrs. Astor would have been recognized in any station of life as a woman of unusual breadth of character and range of ability. Her intellectual perceptions were as keen and active as her sympathies, her religious feeling was as deep and sincere as her enthusiasm for humane work. She not only gave generously for objects of practical benevolence, but she spared no pains to see that her money, as well as that of others, was well bestowed. Prominent in all forms of well doing, she helped at least to leaven with the love of human kind the society in which she was a recognized leader. It is something to make philanthrophy fashionable, but it is a greater thing to be constantly and intelligently philanthrophic from the impulse of a warm heart and a discerning mind. All this and much more was Mrs. Astor, and in the humblest no less than in the most luxurious homes of New York, she has many a sincere mourner. The writer has had ample proof of this during brief visits to the various missions and homes.

ASTOR AS A LAWYER.

William Waldorf Astor was admitted to the bar about twelve years ago, since which time he has never had a client nor has his name appeared in connection with a case in court. If he were a poor man, it might awaken our sympathy, but with him the matter of professional practice is rather a trifle. He is the first Astor that ever studied law, and probably will be the last, as the family do not show much intellectual power. He pursued his legal studies in the office of Daniel Lord, the counsellor of the Astor family for more than half a century. He drew old John Jacob's will, and his portrait graces the Astor library. Young Astor is now fully employed in the management of his vast estate. It will be remembered that his father placed everything in his hands and gave him unlimited power—the most extensive instrument of the kind ever executed in this country. One might think this as good as a prosperous law practice, but the mere watching of an estate has a tendency to narrow the mind and certainly will not help the mental development. Gray's elegy speaks of poverty "freezing the genial currents of the soul," but I have noticed that excessive wealth often has the same tendency. Horace tells us in one of his odes that "great want is to great wealth allied."

SWELL FOREIGNERS.

Mrs Langtry's intimate friends, the Baron and Baroness Blanc, (in name only) are interesting and familiar figures about the neighborhood of Madison Square. They have the reputation of being the handsomest couple in New York, and it is certainly well merited. Both are unusually tall, and of stately carriage which correspond most harmoniously with their supposititious title. The Baroness is a decided blonde, and her wavy yellow hair is not the least of her attractions. She usually dresses in black, which seems to show her superb form and set off her pale beauty to great advantage. The baron is a brunette, with brown curly hair, dark eyes, and the daintiest of mustachios. His form must be the delight of his tailor, and an excellent advertisement. They have a magnificent suite of rooms at the Brunswick, and always dine at Delmonico's. Their equipages, which are of the most approved style, consist of a barouche and phæton, drawn by spirited bays. The Baroness drives the low broad phæton, herself, and may be seen every pleasent morning, spinning through Central Park, accompanied by a low-legged, black-eyed bull-dog, of the most sportive type, and attracts quite as much attention as his mistress. I fancy he is a near relative of the noble and stately Pink that belongs to Gov. Griggsley.

FASHION REMARKS.

For the past week wedding bells have been hourly ringing and merrily announcing the nuptials of happy people in this city of wealth and fashion. At the society gatherings of late and the Charity Ball in particular the most marked characteristic has been the perfect blaze of jewels. The great mania for jewelry has resulted in the bringing out of a number of novelties since the holidays, such as knobs of gold and oxidized silver filagree representing marguerites and pansies, simulating flowers and foliage. An interesting effect is the production of autumnal tints by the association of various different coloured metals, as gold, silver, platinum, brass, and copper. These are to be seen in the windows of all the leading jewelers and in some of the Sixth avenue stores in the usual imitation, and like the silver-mounted pocket-books, they are quickly copied and sold by street fakirs. For gentlemen, the most novel conception is the glove fad. The gloves are no longer worn upon or carried in the hand or in the upper pocket of the great coat, but must nestle snugly in the rim of the hat on the outside, that he may devote more time to his pipe, which is now considered the correct thing. I am afraid some dudes are nonenities.

THE BLESSINGS OF CHRISTIANITY.

Counting up the various creeds that predominate in New York, and adding to them the theological odds and ends that exist by their side, I learn that there are nearly one hundred different religions to be found here. The ancient Roman Catholic faith, strong in the number of its adherents and in the grandeur of its churches, the numerous Protestant, good old sterling denominations, ranging from the orthodox Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, and Baptists to the Unitarians and Universalists. Here are the Jewish synagogues, which may be found in all quarters of the city, and are well filled on the seventh day of every week. Here are the Quakers and not a few Shakers, whose modest meeting houses stand in quiet places. And the Spiritualists who do not build churches, but gather in circles and groups for converse with the ghosts. Here are the Adlerites (Ethical Culture) Mc-Glynnites, Faith Curists, and strange dogmatists—ay, perhaps, even Skoptchi—among the immigrants from Russia and the countries near its eastern boundary. Here are Chinese Pagans, many of them who worship Joss before the burning candles and amid the sweet incense. A multitude of agnostics, atheists and adversaries of all religion. Should we not rejoice that people of so many religions, and of no religion, can all live together in peace and good will?

ANNA DUNHAM.

Keeping Holy the Sabbath.

There is an element of gloom striking through all false religions. Paganism is a brood of horrors. The god of Confucius frowned upon its victims with blind fate. Mohammedanism promises nothing to those exhausted with sin in this world but an eternity of the same passional indulgences. But God intended that our religion should have the grand characteristic of cheerfulness. St. Paul struck the key-note when he said: "Rejoice evermore, and again I say, rejoice." This religion has no spikes for the feet; it has no hooks for the shoulder; it has no long pilgrimages to take, it has no funeral pyres upon which to leap; it has no Juggernauts before which to fall. Its good cheer is symbolized in the Bible by the brightness of waters, and the redolence of lilies and the sweetness of music, and the hilarities of a banquet. A choir of seraphim chanted at its induction, and pealing trumpet, and waving palm, and flapping wing of archangel are to celebrate its triumphs. It began its chief mission with the shout: "Glory to God in the highest!" and it will close its earthly mission with the ascription: "Hallelujah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!" But men have said that our religion is not cheerful because we have such a doleful Sabbath. They say: "You can have your religious assemblages, and your long faces, and your sniffling cant and your psalm books, and your Bibles. Give us the Sunday excursion, and the horse race, and the convivial laughter. We have so much joy that we want to spread it all over the seven days of worldly satisfaction or religion." I want to show these men—if there are any such in the house this morning—that they are under a great delusion, and that God intended the 52 Sundays of the year to be hung up like bells in a tower, beating a perpetual chime of joy and glory and salvation and heaven; for I want you to carry out the idea of the text, "and call the Sabbath a delight." I remark in the first place we are to find in this day the joy of

HEALTHY REPOSE.

In this democratic country we all have to work—some with hand, some with brain, some with foot. If there is in all this house a hand that has not during the past year been stretched forth to some kind of toil let it be lifted. Not one, not one. You sell the goods. You teach the school. You doctor the sick. You practice at the bar. You edit a newspaper. You tan the hides. You preach the Gospel. You mend the shoes. You sit at the shuttle. You carry the hod of bricks up the ladder on the wall. And the one occupation is as honorable as the other, provided God calls you to it. I care not what you do if you only do it well. But when Saturday night comes you are jaded and worn. The hand cannot so skilfully manufacture; the eye cannot see as well; the brain is not so clear; the judgment is not so well balanced. A prominent manufacturer told me that he could see the difference between the goods which went out of his establishment on Saturday from the goods that went out on Monday. He said: "They were very different indeed. Those that were made in the former part of the week, because of the rest that had been previously given, were better than those that were made in the latter part of the week, when the men were tired out." The Sabbath comes, and it baths the soreness from the limbs, quiets the agitated brain, and puts out the fires of anxiety that have been burning all the week. Our bodies are seven-day clocks, and unless on the seventh day they are wound up they run down into the grave.

THE SABBATH WAS INTENDED AS A SAVING BANK.

Into it we are to gather the resources upon which we are to draw all the week. That man who breaks the Sabbath robs his own nerve, his own muscle, his own brain, his own bones. He dips up the wine of his own life and throws it away. He who breaks the Lord's day gives a mortgage to disease and death upon his entire physical estate, and at the most unexpected moment that mortgage will be foreclosed and the soul ejected from the premises. Every gland, and pore, and cell and finger nail demands the seventh day for repose. The respiration of the lungs, the throb of the pulse in the wrist, the motion of the bone in its socket declare: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." There are thousands of men who have had their lives dashed out against the golden gate of the Sabbath. A prominent London merchant testified that 30 years ago he went to London. He says: "I have durig that time watched minutely, and I have noticed that the men who went to business on the Lord's day, or opened their counting-houses have, without a single exception, came to a failure." A prominent Christian merchant in Boston says: "I find it doesn't pay to work on Sunday. When I was a boy I noticed out on Long Wharf there were merchants who loaded their vessels on Sabbath day, keeping their men busy from morning till night, and it is my observation that they themselves came to nothing—these merchants—and their children came to nothing. It doesn't pay," he says, "to work on the Sabbath." I appeal to your observation. Where are the men who twenty years ago were Sabbath breakers, and who have been Sabbath breakers ever since? Without a single exception, you will tell me, they have come either to financial or moral beggary. I defy you to point out a single exception, and you can take the whole world for your field.—[Talmage.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEAD.

Father Cornyn, of Strathroy, Found Dead in His Study.

STRATHROY, Ont., Feb. 4.—Shortly after one o'clock the other day Rev. Father Cornyn was found by his housekeeper shot through the head in his own study. From what can be gleaned it appears that Father Cornyn had been unwell for some time, and his medical attendant, Dr. Bettridge, had been in constant attendance; in fact, Dr. Bettridge had just left him at one o'clock, and Father Cornyn had seen him to the door. A few minutes later the housekeeper was startled by a loud report, and thinking the stove had fallen over, went up to his study, where she found Father Cornyn with a gun shot wound through his head, the gun lying near his body. Death must have been instantaneous, as the charge had entered near the chin, passed out near the top of his head and entered the ceiling above. Whether the shooting was the result of accident or suicide while laboring under a fit of temporary insanity no one is in a position to state. The sad intelligence has cast a gloom over the whole town, where the deceased was well known and a general favorite with all classes.

Cod No More.

Watson's cough drops are the best in the world for the throat and chest, for the voice unequalled. See that the letters R. & T. W. are stamped on each drop.

Grumblers are of people the most depressing. It is not necessary for you yourself to be personally found fault with to make it worse than misery to be with them. It is the atmosphere they create about themselves, the life they give you to lead. And, when their cross humor translates itself into personal displeasure and quarelling over trifles, then are they the very scourges of their time and place, and no one can be blamed who tries to escape from them.

Wanted. 10,000 Disabled Men, must be in poor health and unable to do a good day's work. A disordered liver or any disease caused by scrofula or bad blood will be considered a qualification, but preference will be given to those having obstinate affections of the throat and lungs or incipient consumption. Apply to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

A pretty pin to fasten the bonnet strings is in the form of a grape-vine leaf of gold and set with tiny pearls.

"That Diabolical Apparatus,

the stomach," is the energetic phrase which Carlyle applied to his own troublesome organ of digestion. The great essayist was a dyspeptic from his youth; but had he used Dr. Pierce's pleasant Purgative Pellets he might have shaken off the incubus of indigestion, "like a dewdrop from a lion's mane," and there would have been more "sweetness and light" in his writings and his home. All druggists; 25 cents a vial.

Dark dresses for children are made very showy by garnitures of narrow ribbon of a bright contrasting color.

"There are moments when silence prolonged and unbroken
More expressive may be than all words ever spoken."

Look at that wan and wasted woman, once the picture of health, now so pallid. She cannot begin to tell her sufferings, but as from day to day she goes through the house, attending to her many cares, her attenuated form, her white face, her stooping shoulders, her pinched features, all tell that she is a silent martyr to disease. Her once cheery voice is seldom heard, but her silence tells her suffering more than words could do. O! ye silent, sorrowing, suffering sisters, there is a cure for your troubles; Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a sovereign remedy for the derangements and maladies peculiar to your sex. As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, "Favorite Prescription" is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

Evening gloves should meet the sleeves, of whatever length. In some cases they reach quite to the shoulders.

French-Canadian girls have about driven Yankee girls out of the Manchester, (Mass) mills, because they are ready to work cheaper.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor,—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respy, T. A. SLOCUM, M.C., 164 West Adelaide St. Toronto, Ont.

It is said that Mrs. Ingersoll has persuaded her husband not to write any more infidel articles for the magazines.

A Cure for Drunkenness

The opium habit, dæsomania, the morphine habit, nervous prostration caused by the use of tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, etc., premature old age, loss of vitality caused by over-exertion of the brain and loss of natural strength, from any cause whatever. Men—young, old, middle-aged—who are broken down from any of the above causes, or any cause not mentioned above, send your address and 6 cents in stamps for Lubon's Treatise, in book form, of Diseases of Man. Books sent sealed and secure from observation. Address M. V. LUBON 47 Wellington street East. Toronto Ont. A. P. 435

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES.

Almost as Palatable as Milk.

So disguised that the most delicate stomach can take it. Remarkable as a FLESH PRODUCER. Persons GAIN rapidly while taking IT.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is acknowledged by Physicians to be the FINEST and BEST preparation of its class for the relief of

CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, GENERAL DEBILITY, Wasting Diseases of Children, and CHRONIC COUGHS.

Sold by all Druggists, 50c. and $1.00.

Artificial LIMBS. For circulars address J. DOAN & SON, Toronto, Ont.

CANCER and Tumors CURED; no knife; book free. DRS. MCMICHAEL, No. 63 Niagara St., Buffalo, N.Y.

MONEY TO LOAN on Farms. Lowest Rates. No delay. Correspondence solicited. E. W. D. BUTLER, Financial Agt., Established 1860. 72 King-st. E., Toronto

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.—Send for our Large Illustrated Catalogue of Band Instruments, Violins, Guitars, Flutes, etc., and all kinds of Trimmings. Agent for Frenche's and DeWitt's Plays. BUTLAND'S MUSIC STORE, 37 King St. West, Toronto, Ont.

Brown Engines

IRON AND STEEL BOILERS ANY SIZE.

TORONTO ENGINE WORKS
PRINCESS AND FRONT STS
J. Perkins & Co. - Toronto.

Merchants, Butchers, and Traders Generally.

We want a GOOD MAN in your locality to pick up

CALF SKINS

For us. Cash furnished on Satisfactory Guaranty. Address,

C. S. PAGE,
HYDE PARK, Vermont, U.S.

Farm Loans

CREDIT FONCIER FRANCO-CANADIEN.
CAPITAL, - - $5,000,000.
HEAD OFFICE, - - MONTREAL.
OFFICE ONTARIO DIVISION:
WELLINGTON STREET - TORONTO.

This Company lends on good farm property at lowest current rate of interest and on favorable terms For information apply to local agents, or to W. E. LONG, Manager, Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO
—Manufacturers of the highest grades of—
SILVER - PLATED WARES
TRADE MARK.
—FACTORIES and SALESROOM:—
420 to 426 King St. West, TORONTO
E. G. GOODERHAM, Manager J. C. COPP, Treas.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON
THE NERVES, THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS

This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.

Why Are We Sick?

Because we allow the nerves to remain weakened and irritated, and these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

WILL CURE BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESS, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, AND ALL NERVOUS DISORDERS,

By quieting and strengthening the nerves, and causing free action of the liver, bowels, and kidneys, and restoring their power to throw off disease.

Why suffer Bilious Pains and Aches?
Why tormented with Piles, Constipation?
Why frightened over Disordered Kidneys?
Why endure nervous or sick headaches?
Why have sleepless nights?

Use PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND and rejoice in health. It is an entirely vegetable remedy, harmless in all cases.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1.00. Six for $5.00.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, MONTREAL, P. Q.

CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Public Library Building, Toronto. Students' from British Columbia, California, Kansas, Illinois and quite a number of the other States and provinces now in attendance. Write for descriptive circulars. THOS. BENGOUGH, President. CHAS. H. BROOKS, Secy & Manager.

BARKER'S SHORTHAND SCHOOL, 45 King Street East, Toronto.

Formerly, for over five years Principal of the Shorthand Institute in connection with the Canadian Business University. Typewriting Department under the management of Mr. GEO. BENGOUGH, agent for the Remington Typewriter. Apply or circular. Mention this paper in writing.

GUELPH BUSINESS COLLEGE, Guelph, Ont.—Fifth Scholastic Year—Its graduates are now employed as Book-keeper Business Managers, Stenographers, etc., by many of the largest business houses in Canada and the United States. Young men and women desiring a thorough business education will consult their own welfare by attending the Guelph Business College. For terms and particulars address M. McCORMICK, Principal.

MONEY A large amount of TRUST FUNDS to Loan at a very low rate of interest on first-class security. Apply to BEATTY, CHADWICK, BLACKSTOCK & GALT, Barristers and Solicitors, Wellington St., cor. Church, (over Bank of Toronto) TORONTO, ONT.

Stained Glass

FOR CHURCHES, DWELLINGS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

M'CAUSLAND & SON, 76 King St. W., Toronto.

FOR ONE CENT

480 ACRES FREE,

in Dakota or Montana, Broad Prararies, Fertile Valleys, Wood, Coal and clear mountain streams. Send your address on a Postal Card to J. M. HUCKINS, Palmer House Block, Toronto. or, F. I. WHITNEY, Gen. Pass. Act., St. Paul, Minn.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS

Don't wait until you are burnt out or robbed Buy a Safe now and sleep easy, and be sure and get prices, etc., of the NewChampionSafe

S. S. KIMBALL, 577 Craig St., P.O. Box 945, Montreal, P.Q.

SEEDS

RENNIE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST and may be sent by mail to any Post Office in Canada. New Illustrated Catalogue now ready. Containing Description and Prices of the choicest FIELD, GARDEN & FLOWER SEEDS Mailed free. Every Farmer and Gardener should have a copy before ordering seeds for the coming season. Handsomest catalogue published in Canada.

Wm. RENNIE, TORONTO.

Young Men

SUFFERING from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on the Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON Wellington St. E. Toronto

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland; also from Baltimore, via Halifax from St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal weekly; Glasgow and Boston weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York, H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec: Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allen, Portland Boston Montreal.

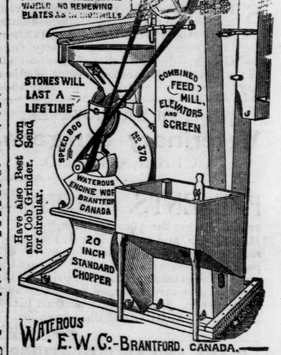
CANADA PERMANENT

Loan & Savings Company

INCORPORATED 1855.

Head Office: Toronto St., Toronto.

Subscribed Capital..... $ 4,500,000
Paid Up Capital..... 2,500,000
Total Assets..... 10,000,000



The enlarged capital and resources of this Company, together with the increased facilities it has recently acquired for supplying land owners with cheap money, enable the Directors to meet with promptness and at the lowest current rate of interest all requirements for loans upon satisfactory estate security. Application may be made to either of the Company's local Appraisers or to J. HERBERT MASON Manager Director Toronto

NEW TOMATOES

Our Illustrated Annual of Tested SEEDS, BULBS, etc., enlarged and improved, a handsome book of 113 pages, beautiful colored plate, mailed FREE to all buyers. Tells all about SEEDS AND GARDENING RARE NOVELTIES Our Art Collection of Flowers in large Chromo Lithographed Packets is superb. 16 varieties $1.40, Free by mail. Write now.

The STEELE BROS. CO., Toronto

THE STEELE BROS CO LTD TORONTO ONTARIO

WATEROUS E.W. Co.-BRANTFORD, CANADA.

SEEDS

Our Annual DESCRIPTIVE and Illustrated Catalogue of RELIABLE SEEDS is now ready and will be sent free to all applicants. It contains all the leading and most popular sorts of Vegetable, Farm and Flower Seeds, besides all the desirable novelties of this and last season, and everything else in our line of business. Every Farmer, Market Gardener, Florist, Private Gardener and Amateur, should see a copy of our Catalogue before ordering It will pay you.

J. A. SIMMERS 147 KING Street (Three doors West of the Market) TORONTO, ONTARIO

I CURE FITS!

When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them return again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE. I have made the disease of

FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS

a life long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and it will cure you. Address

H. G. ROOT, M.D., 164 West Adelaide St. TORONTO, ONT.

We are children who cheerfully join in the chorus When Breadmaker's Yeast is the subject before us—
Mamma tried all the rest, [lightest,
So she knows it's the best,
Cause her bread is the whitest, her buns are the
And we eat all the pancakes she dare set before us.

BUY THE BREADMAKER'S YEAR. PRICE 5 CENTS.

Johnston's  Fluid Beef.

It is a GENUINE and RELIABLE Meat Food.

In its Manufacture nothing is used but the finest QUALITY OF BEEF and every package is guaranteed to be ABSOLUTELY PURE, and free from any ad

MISCELLANEOUS.

A recent analysis of tea made in Moscow, Russia, shows that it is very largely adulterated in that country. The only apology for the adulterants of this drug is the fact that the substances used are generally less harmful than the thing itself.

A Parisian fancy for an Empire evening an dress is worthy of imitation, so delightful effect is produced. Over a skirt of white silk are sewed five unhemmed skirts of white or colored tulle. On the last numerous rows of gold, silver or copper braid are stitched in straight lines or from Persian arabesques.

None of us can live well by an occasional good resolution, any more than a seed can grow into a healthy plant by being used as a common plaything and only now and then put into the earth for a minute or two. Everything depends on storing up in ourselves by a habit of well doing, a great and an ever increasing fund of moral power which shall be available to brace us against sudden temptation and help us to carry out better purposes.

A chapel is about to be built at the Berlin station on the Consolidated Railroad in Connecticut. The money which is to pay for the building has been raised by ladies who have gone about securing the names of persons who would pay for one brick or more which is to go into the chapel. One of the ladies wrote President elect Harrison and asked him to buy some bricks in the chapel. He did so, sending $2. Two bricks are to be marked with his name and put in the corner of the building.

The English Congregational "Year Book" for 1889, which has just been published, gives some very interesting and instructive figures. A feature of the publication is the prominence given to the Sunday schools of the denomination. The grand total of children attending Congregational Sunday schools in England and Wales on the books is 619,371, with 60,170 teachers. The figures of the non-reported schools, estimated by the editor of the "Year Book," raises the figure of Sunday scholars to 700,000. The Baptist "Handbook" for the year, also just published, claims for the denomination in England and Wales Sunday scholars to the number of 439,382, with 44,555 teachers. The non-reported are estimated at 30,000 scholars and 3,000 teachers.

A London clergyman named Baxter, who has become noted for his interpretations of Scriptural prophecy, has been lecturing on "Revelation." In a recent announcement of his subject, he says:—"Only eight more Christmases before Britain is desolated and becomes a red republic, as one of the ten red republics predicted in Revelation, xviii., which are to give their power and strength to Napoleon, the anti Christ who, as the leader of the Papists, Mohammedans, socialists and communists, is to make war with Christians and overcome them during the final forty-two months.—Rev., xiii., 5. A preliminary proof is to be furnished by the greatest war ever known between 1889 and 1891, changing twenty three kingdoms into the ten mentioned (Dan., vii., 24), which afterward become, in Revelation, xvii., red republics.

It is believed that the day of gunpowder as an explosive in war is doomed. The French claim to have discovered a substitute for gunpowder which can be used effectively for the firing of projectiles from either rifles or guns of large calibre, and the authorities at the Royal gunpowder factory at Waltham Abbey, England, are experimenting in the same direction. The coming explosive is smokeless and noiseless, and, it is said, is being made successfully in small quantities at the English Government factories. Our neighbours across the border are experimenting with dynamite, large quantities of which they have succeeded in discharging from pneumatic guns. Altogether the horrors of war are to be intensified in the near future, but, as has been predicted, the invention of new and appalling implements of destruction may lead to the abandonment of war as a method of settling international disputes.

The following method is said to be in use in Germany for waterproofing woolen goods. A solution is made of one hundred parts of alum, one hundred parts of glue, five parts of tannin, and two parts of soluble glass, by dissolving the alum in a moderate quantity of boiling water. The glue is steeped in cold water until it has absorbed twice its weight of water, and is then dissolved by heat. The tannin and solution is then added, and the whole is stirred and allowed to cool. One kilo. of the gelatinous mass is boiled for three hours in from ten to fifteen litres of water, fresh water being continually added to compensate for evaporation. The bath is then allowed to cool to 80° C., and the material to be rendered waterproof is kept in it for half an hour, then withdrawn, and the moisture is allowed to drip from it for several hours. Finally the cloth is stretched on a frame and allowed to dry at a temperature of fifty degrees, then calendered. The cloth gains considerably in weight, and is perfectly waterproof, though it impedes neither air nor perspiration.

Elopement of Four Daughters.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 25.—The little town of Bolar, in Mercer county, Mo., turns out the following tragic story:—Henry Thomas, an old farmer, has four grown daughters named Hattie, Margaret, Nancy, and Jane, aged 16, 18, 20, 22 years respectively. Last Wednesday night Samuel and Charles Hasburn, brothers, procured a ladder and helped Margaret and Jane out of a second storey window of their father's house, and as they were about to elope with the girls the old man appeared on the scene, but too late to prevent their escape. He at once procured the best horse he had and a shotgun and started in hot pursuit. When about twelve miles from home he overtook the fleeing party. He immediately opened fire on them killing both the boys and seriously wounding Margaret. After getting nearly home with the girls he was told that the other two, Hattie and Nancy, had eloped with Ned Gleason and Thos. Allison. He at once left the girls he had with him in charge of some neighbours, and started after the others. After securing the other two girls without any serious trouble he started back but when about two miles from home a mob took possession of him and strung him up to a tree. The old man was terribly strict with the girls. He would hardly let them out of his sight, hence the elopements. He always bragged that he would not be bothered with lazy sons-in-law. Public feeling is strongly in favour of lynching. Margaret died last night.

A Cure for Narrowness.

The beginning of spiritual life lies in the personal knowledge of God. That is the first stage. But it ought to be followed by the second, which is like unto it—namely, personal recognition of the Kingdom of God and identification with it. Unless that second stage be reached, character tends to become narrow if intense. The very fact that a man has withdrawn himself from "the world" will make him marrow unless his sympathies broaden in another direction And this need of the human soul to expand, to have large freedom of thought and aspiration, is provided for in the sphere of the Kingdom of God. Identification with any great cause develops in a man great qualities and endlessly widens his personality. And to feel himself part of God's Kingdom, to abandon himself to it, makes a man a great Christian.

Take the Record Along.

The Vienna correspondent of The Times says:—American couples about to travel in Austria ought to take with them their marriage certificates. An American lady recently gave birth to a child here and the father, accompanied by witnesses, went to register the birth. Owing to the absence of a marriage certificate the clerk said he must record the birth as "illegitimate," and the only concession made after much expostulation was the substitution of the word "doubtful" for the word illegitimate. Further, on being told than the parents belonged to the Anglican Church the clerk wrote down "no religion."

THE THREAD OF LIFE
OR,
SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER LII.—THE TANGLE RESOLVES ITSELF.

"You must never, never take it, Elsie," Warren said earnestly, as Elsie laid down the paper once more and wiped a tear from her eye, nervously. "It came to him through that broken-hearted little woman you know. He should never have married her; he should never have owned it. It was never truly or honestly his, and therefore it isn't yours by right. I couldn't bear, myself, to touch a single penny of it."

Elsie looked up at him with a twitching face. "Do you make that a condition, Warren?" she asked, all tremulous.

Warren paused and hesitated, irresolute, for a moment. "Do I make it a condition?" he answered slowly. "My darling, how can I possibly talk of making conditions or bargains with you? But I could never bear to think that wife of mine would touch one penny of that ill-gotten money."

"Warren," Elsie said, in a very soft voice—they were alone in the room and they talked like lovers—"I said to myself more than once in the old, old days—after all that was past and done for ever, you know, dear—I said to myself: "I would never marry any man now, not even if I loved him—loved him truly—unless I had money of my own to bring him." And when I began to know I was getting to love you—when I couldn't any longer conceal from myself the truth that your tenderness and devotion had made me love you against my will—I said to myself again, more firmly than ever: "I will never let him take me thus penniless. I will never burden him with one more mouth to feed, one more person to house and clothe and supply, one more life to toil and moil and slave for. Even as it is, he can't pursue his art as he ought to pursue it; he can't give free play to his genius as his genius demands, because he has to to turn aside from his own noble and exquisite ideals to suit the market and to earn money. I won't any further shackle his arm. I won't any further cramp his hand—his hand that should be free as the air to pursue unhampered its own grand and beautiful calling. I will never marry him unless I can bring him at least enough to support myself upon."—And just the other day, you remember, Warren—that day at San Remo when I admitted at last what I had known so long without ever admitting it, that I loved you better than life itself—I said to you still: "I am yours—at heart. But I can't be yours ready for a long time yet. No matter why. I shall be yours still in myself, for all that." Well, I'll tell you now why I said those words.—Even then, darling, I felt I could never marry you penniless."

She paused, and looked up at him with an earnest look in her true gray eyes, those exquisite eyes of hers that no lover could see without an intense thrill through his inmost being. Warren thrilled in response, and wondered what could next be coming. "And your're going to tell me, Elsie," he said with a sigh, "that you can't marry me unless you feel free to accept Whitestrand?"

Elsie laid her head with womanly confidence on his strong shoulder. "I'm going to tell you, darling," she answered, with a sudden outburst of unchecked emotion, "that I'll marry you now, Whitestrand or no Whitestrand. I'll do as you wish in this and in everything. I love you so dearly to-day, Warren, that I can even bear to think that wife of mine would touch one penny of that ill-gotten money. I will myself upon you without reserve: I can take back all I ever bought or said, and be happy anywhere, if only you'll have me, and make me your wife, and love me always as I myself love you. I want nothing that ever was his; I only want to be yours, Warren."

Nevertheless, Mr. Alfred Heberden did within one week of that date duly proceed in proper form to prove the claim of Elsie Challoner, of 128 Bletchingley Road, in the parish of Kensington, spinster, of no occupation, to the intestate estate of Hugh Massinger, Esquire, deceased, of Whitestrand Hall, in the county of Suffolk.

The fact is, an estate, however acquired, must needs belong to somebody somewhere; and since either Elsie must take it herself, or let some other person with a worse claim endeavour to obtain it, Warren and she decided, upon further consideration, that it would be better for her to dispense the revenues of Whitestrand for the public good, to let them fall by default into the greedy clutches of the enterprising pawnbroker in the Borough Road, or be swallowed up for his own advantage by any similar absorbent medium elsewhere. From the very first, indeed, they were both firmly determined never to spend one shilling of the estate upon their own pleasures or their own necessities. But if wealth is to be dispensed in doing good at all, it is best that intelligent and single-hearted people should so dispense it, rather than leave it to the tender mercies of that amiable but somewhat indefinite institution, the Court of Chancery. Warren and Elsie decided, therefore, at last to prosecute their legal claim, regarding themselves as trustees for the needy or helpless of Great Britain generally, and to sell the estate, when once obtained, for the first cash price offered, investing the sum in consols in their own names, as a virtual trust-fund, to be employed by themselves for such special purposes as seemed best to both in the free exercise of their own full and unfettered discretion. So Mr. Alfred Heberden's advertisement bore good fruit in due season; and Elsie did at last, in name at least, inherit the manor and estate of Whitestrand.

But neither of them touched one penny of the blood-money. They kept it all apart as a sacred fund, to be used only in the best way they knew for the objects that Winifred in her highest moods might most have approved of.

And this, as Elsie justly remarked, was really the very best possible arrangement. To be sure, she no longer felt that shy old feeling against coming to Warren unprovided and penniless. She was content now, as a wife should be, to trust herself implicitly and entirely to her husband's hands. Warren's art of late had every day been more sought after by those who hold in their laps the absolute disposal of the world's wealth, and there was far less fear than formerly that the cares of a household would entail on him the miserable and degrading necessity for lowering his own artistic standard to meet the inferior wishes and tastes of possible purchasers, with their vulgar ideals. But it was also something for each of them to feel that the other had thus been seriously tried by the final test of this world's gold—tried in actual practice and not found wanting. Few pass through that sordid crucible unscathed: those that do are of the purest metal.

On the very day when Warren and Elsie finally fixed the date for their approaching wedding, the calm and happy little bride-elect came in with the first tidings of the accomplished arrangement, all tremors and blushes, to her faithful Edie. To her great chagrin, however, her future sister-in-law received the news of this proximate family event with an absolute minimum of surprise or excitement. "You don't seem to be in the least astonished, dear," Elsie cried, somewhat piqued at her cool reception. "Why, anybody'd say, to see the way you take it, you'd known it all a clear twelve-month ago!"

"So I did, my child—all except the mere trifling detail or the date," Edie answered at once with prompt common-sense, and an arch look from under her dark eyebrows. "In fact I arranged it all myself most satisfactorily beforehand. But what I was really thinking of just now was simply this—why shouldn't one cake do duty for both at once, Elsie?"

"For both at once, Edie? For me and Warren? Why, of course, one cake always does do for bride and bridegroom together, doesn't it? I never heard of anybody having a couple, darling."

"What a sweet little silly you are, you dear old goose, you! Are you two the only marriageable people in the universe, then, I didn't mean for you and Warren at all, of course; I mean for you and myself, stupid?"

"You and myself, did you say, Edie?"

"Why, yes, you dear old blind bat, you." Edie went on placidly, with an abstracted air; "we might get them both over the same day, I think seriously: kill two weddings, so to speak, with one parson. They're such a terrible nuisance in a house always."

"Two weddings, my dear Edie?" Elsie cried in surprise. "Why, what on earth are you ever talking about? I don't understand you."

"Well, Mr Hatherly's a very good critic," Edie answered with a twinkle: "he's generally admitted to have excellent taste; and he ventured the other day on a critical opinion in my presence which did honor at once to the acuteness of his perceptions and the soundness and depth of his æsthetic judgment. He told me to my face, with the utmost gravity, I was the very sweetest and prettiest girl in all England."

"And what did you say to that, Edie?" Elsie asked, amused, with some dawning perception of the real meaning of this queer badinage.

"I told him, my dear, I'd always considered him the ablest and best of living authorities on artistic matters, and that to would ill become my native modesty it differ from his opinion on such an important question, in which, perhaps, that native modesty itself might unduly bias me to an incorrect judgment in the opposite direction. So then he enforced his critical view in a practical way by promptly kissing me."

"And you didn't object?"

"On the contrary, my child, I rather liked it than otherwise."

"After which?"

"After which he proceeded to review his own character and prospects in a depreciatory way, that led me gravely to doubt the accuracy of his judgment in that respect; and he finished up at last by laying those very objects he had just been deprecating, his hand and heart, at the foot of the throne, metaphorically speaking, for the sweetest girl in all England to do as she liked—accept or reject them."

"And the sweetest girl in all England?"—Elsie asked, smiling.

"Unconditionally accepted with the most pleasing promptitude. You see, my dear, it'll be such a splendid thing for Warren, when he sets up house, to have an influential art-critic bound over, as it were, not to speak evil against him, by being converted beforehand into his own brother-in-law. Besides which, you know, I happen, Elsie, to be ever so much in love with him."

"That's a good thing, Edie."

"My child, I consider it such an extremely good thing that I ran up-stairs at once and had a regular jolly old-fashioned cry over it—Elsie, Arthur's a dear good fellow. And you and I can be married together. We've always been sisters, ever since we've known each other. And now we'll be sisters even more then ever."

[THE END.]

PRISONERS ESCAPED.

They Make a Rope of Their Blankets and Successfully Scale the Wall.

WOODSTOCK, Jan. 31.—Melville James and James Mahoney, two prisoners confined in the jail, made good their escape the other day at noon. The former was serving a term for larceny, and the latter was arrested on Friday at the expiry of his term in the Central Prison and was in jail on a remand charged with stealing a horse and rig from Flood Bros.' livery. The prisoners escaped by means of a rope, which they made by tearing their blankets into strips and knotting them together. At the end of the rope they attached an iron hook, which on being thrown up caught fast in the wall, by which means they were enabled to scale it.

How the prisoners became possessed of the hook is a mystery, for there was nothing like it around the premises. It is supposed it was smuggled in by a tramp.

A Canadian Inventor.

The Chicago "Canadian-American" says:—The British Government has at last selected a new arm for the service, and it seems to have given the preference to a very fine weapon. An exchange, alluding to this rifle, says:

"The new English rifle has such a phenomenally long range that the War Office has been under the necessity of providing new ranges for its use in order to avoid accident. It is pronounced superior to any other arm in Europe in the important particulars of range, accuracy, and rapidity of firing, and the military authorities are reported as being correspondingly elated over its success."

Probably many of our readers are aware the fact that the inventor of the rifle in question is Mr. James Lee, a Canadian-American, formerly of Galt, Ont. For many years Mr. Lee has been aiming to have his invention adopted by one of the European Governments. During the course of his campaign as an interviewer of war offices his inventive genius has had full play, and the result is an arm that is considered perfect by one of the great powers of the world. Recently the Chicago "Tribune" claimed Mr. Lee as an American, probably because of his long connection with the Remingtons of Ilion, N. Y. Yet he remains a Canadian—one who spends his annual vacation in the land of his birth, and is proud to be known as a Canadian.

A New Use for Cats.

The New York Star says:—There is a certain plumber whose domicile is on East 18th street. He is a genius in his way. He was recently called in to locate a supposed leak in the drain-pipes of a fourteen-story apartment house not far from his place of business. After a day's cogitation and sundry profitless soundings and sniffings he finally hit upon a plan to save the owner from selling the building in order to pay his bill. Mr. Snipe went to a druggist and bought ten cents' worth of fluid extract of valerian—commonly called catnip. Then he took the elevator to the top floor and poured the contents of his little bottle of valerian diluted with water down the drain. Half an hour later he took a cat and visited each floor in turn. The cat exhibited no emotion until a room in the seventh storey was reached. Then with a bound it sprang from the plumber's arm and began to paw the wall, mewing loudly. A hole was made in the wall, and there, sure enough, was the leak.

Bills of Fare.

New York Tribune: There is a world-wide insurrection against the use of French on bills of fare. It is not long since it was announced that Emperor William had ordered the bill, so far as his power and influence lay, into solid German, and now the hotel-keepers of various American cities are asserting themselves in favor of English. Perhaps one thing that more than any other will help to drive French out is this declaration of a Philadelphia proprietor—"the cheaper the hotel the more French you have on the bill of fare." There are some terms, however, it is said, which will have to remain in that language, because the meaning cannot be precisely expressed in English, as for example, "supreme of chicken." It would appear that French is the only language in which chicken is supreme.

About the poorest business on earth at present is that of the savage. Sooner or later a "civilized" power is sure to seize the savage's property and set up a king over him. When the poor barbarian tries to get his rights he is shot in his tracks. It is interesting to note that the Samoan Islanders are already in the German newspapers called "rebels."

The Enemy of Nations.

The decision by a judge of the New York State Supreme Court against the sugar trust has caused a great deal of comment, and probably a little alarm, in the camp of the English monopolists. In spite of this, however, the trust evil, which is assuming gigantic proportions in England, is still threatening and planning bigger grabs.

The details of the International Steel-Rail trust will, for instance, be completed this week, according to latest reports. So overwhelming has been the pressure brought to bear by the steel-rail "combine" to force all engaged in that industry into the trust, that the only big firm which has hitherto held out, has at last succumbed and England will now enter with a solid syndicate into the German, Belgian, French ring.

The monopolistic contagion is spreading through other parts of the British realm. The great thread firms of Coates and Clark & Co., Paisley, Scotland, have, it is announced by cable, secured the consent of enough of the smaller thread manufacturers to form a trust, and cotton thread has advanced 10 per cent. at a bound. The infamous work of the salt trust, which controls and forces up prices on a necessity, is being felt, too. The price of raw salt is reported to be now just double what it was before the trust was formed.

Amid much that is discouraging there is a gleam of hope in the decided stand that has just been taken upon the matter by the London Times. In an editorial, full of trenchant criticism in relation to monopolies, that paper says: "The English courts have had plenty to say about the illegality of combinations of labor, but have been silent or obscure as to combinations of capital. Very soon, however, we must come to a clear understanding on this point." In view of the high-handed and defiant position at present assumed by English monopolists, it is a healthful indication of public sentiment to see the Times plant its foot right down squarely in this way.

As monopolists have made the operations of their villainous schemes to rob the people international in scope, the question is one which concerns the great mass of the people in the leading commercial countries of the earth, and a war of extermination on capitalistic robbers must ultimately be waged on this basis.

A Unfortunate Victim.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—The stories of the horrors suffered by unfortunate girls in the dance-house stockades in Northern Wisconsin were recalled by a scene in the Court of Insane Inquiry this morning. A slight and handsome young girl, dressed in black, was led in. Hattie Nathan was her name, so the doctor told Judge Prendergast. He said her ailment was acute mania. As he spoke, the prisoner glanced behind her and cowered in her chair, muttering: "Save me! they are after me. I hear them barking, and the men are right behind them." Hattie Nathan was the daughter of parents who live in Oconto, Wis. She was a wayward girl and got into trouble, which resulted in her entering one of the brothels near Marinette. She soon realized the horrors of her position, and made repeated, but unsuccessful, attempts to escape, with the result that she became demented. Then she was released. She next appeared at the door of a house of ill-repute in this city, and was cared for. She has remained there since, being rational a portion of the time. Of late her dementia has been more acute, and the result was to-day's proceedings. She will be sent back to her home in Oconto.

The Eiffel Tower.

The Paris correspondent of the London "Daily Telegraph" says:—"M. Eiffel's metalic monument in the Champ de Mars is said to have been lately competing with the famous Leaning Tower of Pisa. The rumour was spread diligently yesterday that the Nineteenth Century Babel had been seen to oscillate slightly towards the left or the right, no one being able to specify the particular direction. M. Eiffel and his constructors admit the possibility of a slight deviation of the axis of the tower, but they are firmly convinced that the iron edifice is as perpendicular as the firm stone foundation on which it rests. They contend that even if the tower did deviate the accident would be of no importance, as it rests, not only on a strong basis of masonry, but on a complicated maze of machinery of steel and cast iron, into which hydraulic presses of 800 tons power can be introduced for the purposes of keeping the tower in the perpendicular. The engineers also aver that the ground on which the tower rests is no more overweighed than if it bore an ordinary Parisian building of five storeys, and that the resisting power of the iron of which it is composed is sufficient to ensure its safety. The tower, as it now stands, is a thing of wonder if not of beauty, and will certainly be the marvel of the approaching Universal Exhibition."

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Prince Rudolf's Life Taken by His Own Hand—His Career Closed in Gloom and Disgrace.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Pall Mall Gazette says it is privately informed from Vienna that Rudolf committed suicide because it was optional with him to take his own life or fight a duel with the brother of a princess who is a member of one of the highest Austrian families and whom he had seduced. When concealment was no longer possible the princess confessed her shame to her brother, who gave Rudolf the alternative of committing suicide or fighting a duel. The Pall Mall Gazette further says that the doctors who were summoned refused to sign a certificate to the effect that Rudolf's death was due to apoplexy and that a great scene ensued. One of the doctors told the Neue Freie Presse the real facts, which that paper published.

A Sanguinary Anarchist.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Gott Gratkan, a fiery Anarchist, addressed a large audience in a hall on Twelfth street yesterday. Among other things he said:—"How did the Republic free itself? By blood. How was the slavery question settled? By blood. These victories were not won by holding prayer meetings and singing hymns. I tell you the law must be throttled. We must trample it under our feet until the law of nature fills the world and reigns supreme. We cannot obtain these things by peaceable means. We must resort to force. The capitalists are prepared to meet the people with force, but some day we will go to them and say:—'Your time is up; the time is come.' What happens when two great forces meet?" His remarks were loudly cheered.

A patent medicine vendor in a country village was dilating to a crowd upon the wonderful efficiency of his iron bitters. "Why," said he, "Steve Jinkins had only taken the bitters one week when he was shoved into prison for murder, and what does Steve do but open a vein in his arm and take iron enough out of his blood to make a crowbar, with which he pried the doors open and let himself out. Fact!

Sydney Smith cut the following from a newspaper and preserved it:—When you rise in the morning form a resolution to make the day a happy one to a fellow-creature. It is easily done; a left-off garment to the man who needs it, a kind word to the sorrowful, an encouraging expression to the striving—trifles in themselves light as air, will do it, at least for the twenty-four hours. And if you are young, depend upon it, it will tell when you are old; and if you are old, rest assured it will send you gently and happily down the stream of time to eternity. But the most simple and arithmetical sum, look at the result. If you send one person, only one, happily through each day, that makes three hundred and sixty-five in the course of the year And supposing you live forty years only after you commence that course of medicine, you have made 14,600 beings happy—at all events for a time.

Harpooning Alligators.

Capt. Bill inquired, says an Anclote (Fla.) letter to the St. Louis "Globe-Democrat," if I had ever harpooned alligators from a boat, and, informing him that I had not, he said it was great fun, and that I would enjoy it. Having expressed a desire to see the fun as soon as possible he picked out a rusty pair of grains from among a lot of rubbish in an out-house, fastened a long, strong line to the shank, and seizing a pliant pole 14 feet in length he marched to a large pond about two miles away and entered a leaky skiff, which was concealed in a heavy bunch of marsh grass. I followed his lead and our craft was soon gliding over the shallow waters of the pond to a spot where alligators were said to bury themselves during their periods of hibernation. I had brought my magazine rifle along and had decided to use it on the saurians in case the harpoon did not afford the promised amusement.

Capt. Bill pushed the skiff along slowly and scanned the bottom of the lake in the most careful manner. After going about 500 yards he beckoned me toward him. I went aft and, handing me the pushing pole, he told me to keep the skiff in position until he gave further orders. I followed his instructions and he went to the bow, carefully adjusted his harpoon, fastened the end of the line to a ring and, holding the grains pole high up in both hands, hissed to me to go ahead. I pressed forward for a few yards in a straight line and then saw the captain raise himself on his toes and hurl the harpoon with all his might into the inky water. He then shouted: "I've hit him. Look out and don't be jerked overboard. Sit down. There he goes." While he was indulging in these exclamations I could see nothing and was standing up when it seemed to me as if the skiff were pulled from under my feet and I was hurled on my side, while my head struck the gunwale with such violence as to doze me for a few seconds.

I jumped to my feet as quickly as I could and saw the line going overboard so rapidly as to make the wood smoke. Capt. Bill threw water on the gunwale and placed a piece of rag under the rope to prevent chafing.

"He can now go as fast as he likes; the faster the better," he exclaimed as he knelt forward and looked into the lake.

The boat was going through the water fast enough to produce foamy ridges, and as steadily as if it were driven by a steam engine. The acquatic steed ran a straight course at first, then doubled suddenly, and nearly upset the craft before I could turn her into line. We prevented the capsize by throwing ourselves on the upper side and leaning well overboard, then pushing the stern away from the animal.

"We must be careful or he'll have us overboard," cried the captain. "He is a huge monster. He looks as if he were a thousand years old, and he's mad enough to gulp us down bodatiously if he gets us into the water."

"I'll shoot him at the first opportunity," I replied.

"Don't; wait till he comes aboard of his own free will," the captain answered.

"Won't he drive us out then?"

"I reck'n not, so long as we have a sharp ax and your rifle."

The saurian steed was darting hither and thither, trying to release himself from his load, but finding his efforts futile he commenced rolling round and round in the water like a barrel, and wrapping himself up in the line.

"He's coming aboard now," observed the captain. Don't touch him until I tell you, and you can then kill him if you wish."

"All right," was my reply.

The gigantic reptile was so heavy that he began to bury the craft in the water by the nose as he approached, and so rapidly that I feared he would sink it. I therefore shouted: "Come aft or he'll drag us both under."

"There is no danger of that," exclaimed the captain. "Let him alone and you'll see some fun."

The alligator finally rolled himself up as far as the skiff and seizing the bow actually tore a piece out of it. He then tried to place his forelegs on the gunwale, but the line was so short and he was so completely entangled in it that he could only get them partially up the side. His enormous head, which was covered with moss and barnacles, and green with slime; his cavernous mouth, which would vie with that of a stump orator; and his malignant eyes presented one of the most hideous spectacles a person could imagine. Still, we watched him with more of a feeling of curiosity than of fear, for we knew how impotent were his struggles. He thrust his nose aboard several times and tried to seize us, but we kept on the upper side of the skiff and jeered at his efforts, Capt. Bill going so far as to disparage his beauty. Not being able to reach us, the brute wreaked his vengeance on the boat by biting pieces out of the gunwale, attempting to upset it, and lashing it with his tail, but all to no purpose, for we were still "on deck" and intended to remain there.

The animal had churned the water into foam with its tail for several yards around us and was creating such commotion that we decided to kill him to prevent him from alarming all the other alligators in the lake. I therefore went toward the bow, and, on seeing me, he raised his head on the gunwale and snapped viciously at my arm. I steadied myself as well as I could by extending my feet, and taking aim at one of his eyes I fired two shots into it with such rapid succession that they sounded almost like one.

The reptile made no struggle, but fell back into the water, the bullet having entered his diminutive brain and caused instant death. We towed the carcass ashore, measured it, and found it to be nearly twelve feet long. Most of the tail was gone and to that fact we attributed our immunity from a bath, for could the animal have delivered our craft a sweeping blow with a full-grown caudal appendage I fancy it would have sunk us and perhaps killed us in the bargain. The tail had evidently been bitten off in a desperate struggle with some other saurian, judging from the jagged appearance of the stump.

The scales on this monster's back were the hardest I ever tried to cut, and the skin on its claws was very loose, a positive proof to us that the monster had seen more than a century of life.

The animal actually moved its stump of a tail twenty-four hours after it had been killed, for we did not flay until the following day.

After landing our monster we started out again and harpooned two more, but they could not compare in size, strength, and ferocity with the first one. Both rolled themselves about in the line until they reached the boat, and after allowing them to display all the antics they knew close by, such as trying to get aboard, biting the sides, thrashing the bottom with their tails, and rushing open-mouthed at us whenever we approached them, I killed them by planting a bullet or two in their eyes.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

A Father and Son From Dickinson's Landing Lost.

Dickinson's Landing, Ont., Feb. 4.—While Mike Cline, his son and another man, named O'Neil, were crossing from Sault Island to Dickinson's Landing, in attempting to round a point where the water was very swift by some mismanagement of the sail the boat swung around, striking a stone and filling three parts full of water, then swinging again struck another stone, sinking immediately, bow downwards. At this Mr. O'Neil jumped into the water and swam ashore. Mr. Cline attempted to follow with a paddle in his hand, but was drowned. It is supposed his son clung to the boat and went to the bottom also. Mr. Cline leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn his loss.

A Cruel Husband.

Mrs. Jason—"Jehiel, I've had the awfulest scare. I opened the door and found the worst-looking tramp I ever saw. Why, I couldn't say a word for ten minutes." Mr. Jason—"Do you know which way he went? I would like to get his make-up if it had that effect on you."

THE SERPENT'S BITE.

Thrilling Experience of a Venturesome Naturalist.

Knowing that my search for birds in Southern woods and swamps was ever attended by a possibility of meeting his majesty the "Diamond-back," I had made it a rule to exercise all needful caution in forcing my way through palmetto scrubs and dense-grown thickets, his favorite haunts, and, in addition to the heavy leggings I constantly wore, I never took the field without having with me the antidotes considered by taxidermists as the ones most likely to effect a cure.

Thus my "snake-box," as I called it, and to which I undoubtedly owe my life, contained a lance, an easily adjustable ligature, a hypodermic syringe, and a small vial filled with the prescribed 1 per cent. solution of permanganite of potash. It is, perhaps, unnecessary to add, I was amply provided with the popular remedy known as "snake poison."

Thus armed, for years I had followed my favorite pursuits, meeting occasionally venomous reptiles, and having, it is true, several narrow escapes, but, until the day of which I am about to write arrived, I had never been bitten by them.

It was a delicious afternoon of the Southern spring. A heavy shower at noon had cleared the sultry atmosphere of morning, and the fresh, moist air was laden with the perfume of flowers. Mounted on a favorite pony, I had ridden to the hummock at the border of the lake, and there tied him; dismounting to wander at will in search of the specimens I desired. The path was comparatively open, and in fancied security I gave slight heed to my footsteps; indeed, paying more to the trees overheard.

A probable specimen soon absorbed my attention, and in endeavoring to determine its identity I moved slightly forward in order to obtain a more advantageous position from which to observe it. A fallen tree lay across the path, and I thoughtlessly stepped upon it to past over, when the sound of the warning rattle fell upon my ear, and a single glance showed the dreaded form of the serpent lying coiled at my feet. But the step was half taken; too late did I attempt to draw back; the threatened danger above him rendered rattle and strike almost simultaneous, and with horror I felt

THE BLOW UPON MY ANKLE.

There is a blank here, my mind was in a whirl, and it is difficult for me to tell exactly how I acted; the reptile's fangs became fastened in my leggings, and I have a dim impression of pushing him from his hold and firing as he fell from me, the charge striking his head and blowing it literally into a thousand atoms.

With a sickening sense of fear I hastily tore off my useless leggings; my loose hunting trousers were quickly rolled to the knee. Hope was almost abandoned when I saw the two faint punctures of the serpent's fangs already slightly discolored, burning like heated needles in the flesh and sending fiery darts of pain throughout my system. How many times have I re-lived that moment with all its intense agony! Thought followed thought with lightning-like rapidity. Could I retain possession of my senses, I repeatedly asked myself, long enough to employ the remedies with which I was provided?

Drawing my flask I swallowed half its contents as though it were water, then with trembling hand took from my pocket my "snake box," and extracting a lance, made without flinching a deep incision across the fang marks; the blood gushed forth, but far from causing faintness it produced exactly the opposite result, and I not only experienced no pain, but regarded with satisfaction this loss of blood which, at any other time, would have occasioned alarm. The ready ligature was now placed above the wound and tightened, the syringe filled with the perscribed 10 drops, which were injected into and about the wound, and the flask again resorted to.

My feelings during this period I cannot adequately describe, and I shudder even now when I recall the almost which possessed me. While the application of the antidotes, incision, etc., in reality occupied very few minutes, certainly less than five from the moment I was struck, it seemed to me I lived years, and I experienced in full the sensation of the drowning man, here prolonged to a maddening degree; my life history passing through my mind in a surging wave of thought, long-forgotten incidents returning vividly and following each other with a rapidity which was marvellous.

PARALYSING SENSE OF FEAR

Nerved to action by a hope of life, I had thus treated myself on strength derived from intense excitement. Knowing now I had done all in my power, the mental stimulus of self-preservation deserted me, the reaction came and I sank to the ground. A feeling of numbness, which I tried in vain to overcome, crept over me, almost stilling the severity of my suffering; once, twice, I aroused myself to loosen and readjust the ligature upon my leg, the ankle and foot below were suffused with restricted blood, whose pressure threatened to burst the veins which confined it, and slight relief was afforded by allowing a portion to pursue its natural course and enter my system; the accession, too, of comparatively pure blood into the poisoned part prevented the appearance of gangrene which a too long impression was sure to cause.

A third time I essayed to arrange it, but the execution was more than I could bear, and as it loosened in my grasp, I experienced a frightful sense of suffocation, a mist blurred my vision, I tried to move, but my limbs were set in the rigidity of death, and the

THOUGHT THAT I WAS DYING

was the last I can remember.

When consciousness returned night had fallen and all was dark. I stretched out my hand, and it fell across the slimy body of the serpent beside me, recalling the events of the afternoon; and, as the thought I had survived them slowly took shape and became a reality, a feeling of devout thanksgiving arose in my heart, and, lying there upon my back, the soft Southern moonlight stealing through the trees above upon me, I was possessed of a joy so ecstatic that for a few moments I remained there passively content with the glorious thought—I lived.

The urgency of returning to appease the anxiety of my friends now forced itself upon me. I was very weak, the loss of blood and toxic effect of the serpent's venom had robbed me of every particle of strength, and only after several attempts did I manage to reach my feet. Then, leaning on my gun for support, I walked unsteadily to my faithful little pony, whose whinny of welcome as he saw me was sweet music to my ears.

Painfully mounting I threw the rein across his neck. He seemed almost to be aware of my condition, for he picked his way very carefully, but, notwithstanding his caution, the exertion proved too much for me, and when, after what seemed an endless ride, we reached home, only his low neigh of hunger brought assistance to the door, for I was too weak to call or even think of attempting to enter the house unaided.

Tenderly lifting me from the saddle they carried me within. An examination rendered unnecessary the explanation I could not then make. A physician was at once summoned, whose treatment completed the cure I had commenced, and in a few weeks time there was left of my experience only a scar and an undying recollection of the agonies, mental and physical, I suffered that spring afternoon in the South.—N.Y. Times.

Owls.

The family of birds which include the nocturnal birds of prey commonly know as owls, are scientifically termed the Strigidæ. This family have large heads and great projecting eyes directed forwards, and surrounded with a circle or disc (more or less developed according to the nocturnal or comparatively diurnal habits of the species) formed of loose and delicate feathers; a strong, hooked beak; crooked claws; and a downy plumage, generally spotted, powdered, or barred with different shades of brown and yellow. The senses of sight, hearing, taste, and smell, especially the two former, are acute. The geographical distribution of the family is very wide, species being found in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australia. They feed on birds and quadrupeds, and even fish, according to the size of the species. Hares, partridges, grouse and even the turkey are said to be attacked by the larger horned owls of Europe and America; while mice, shrews, small birds, snakes, and crabs suffice for the smaller members of the family.

The common barn owl, the species with which we in this country are familiar, has beautiful plumage. The upper parts are bright yellowish, varied with grey and brown zig-zag lines and sprinkled with a multitude of small whitish dots; the face and throat are white; and the lower parts in some individuals are rusty white, sprinkled with small brown dots. In the female all the tints are brighter.

This beautiful bird, writes one authority, is spread throughout the temperate and warmer regions of Europe. It is common in England and Ireland, but less so in Scotland. It conceals itself during the day in deep recesses, among ivy-clad ruins, in antique church towers, in the hollows of old trees, in barn lofts, and similar places of seclusion. At night it sallies forth for prey, which consists of mice, rats, moles, and shrews. If, observes another writer, this useful bird caught its food by day, instead of hunting for it by night, mankind would have ocular demonstration of its utility in thinning the country of mice, and it would be protected and encouraged everywhere. When it has young it will bring a mouse to the nest every twelve or fifteen minutes during the night.

The barn owl constructs a rude nest, the eggs are three or four in number, and of a light colour; and strange to say, the female often lays a second time before the young are able to leave the nest. The young are covered with a thick white down, and remain long in the nest.

Everyone is familiar with the great, staring eyes of the owl, which blink so solemnly in the light of day, for they are incapable of bearing a strong light. But when twilight sets in the eyelids become wide open, and the eyes gleam with lustrous effulgence. In the typical owl the eyes are set so completely in front that, in order to see anything at their side or a little behind them, they must turn the head entirely.

As already remarked, the owl is endowed with a keen sense of hearing. Birds have no external ears

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Street, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

DUTTON, FEBRUARY 7, 1889.

REMARKS BY A RAMBLER.

Do not judge a man's Scott Act standing by the color of his nose this weather. Frost bites are apt to impart a deep red to that protuberance.

"The ENTERPRISE has been greatly improved lately, and I believe it is now the best local paper in the Southern Counties," was the remark made by a gentleman a day or two ago. Every one seems well satisfied with the new management, and all join in wishing it every success.

It is said that a Dutton man—the father of a family—is to be prosecuted under the Charlton Act for the leading astray of a young girl. If the report is true the guilty party ought to have a liberal application of the lash. No punishment would be too severe for a man who would deliberately ruin a woman's whole life.

"What is the matter with the police force?" is a question often asked these days. Petty burglaries are going on all the time and householders would do well to keep a good lookout that their doors and windows are well fastened, as no one can tell who will be next. We should have one or two active, wideawake constables who would do their duty without fear, favor or affection. Rambler does not know whether there is such a thing as a constable in Dutton or not, but was told that somebody was looking for somebody else with a lantern, after the manner of Diogenes, one night recently. But "bide a wee and dinna weary," when we have incorporation all these things will follow as a matter of course.

At late meetings of Farmers' Institutes throughout the Province complaints have been made of the mode of conducting rural schools, and a change is wanted. For years our educational system has been the greatest boast of the Province, but the farmers are at last waking up to the fact that the present system of teaching does not fit children for life on the farm, and tends to lead them away from it. They hold that the present system of continually working children up for examinations is detrimental both to mental and physical development. That the present education is more of a literary class than useful and practical More of a forced hot-bed style than a heathful, useful one, for practical every-day requisites. Rural schools are established for and supported mainly by the farmers, and they should be conducted in their interests. To conduct a farm properly it requires as much, if not more, brain work than any other business, and the more knowledge the farmer has the better. It requires a knowledge of chemistry, horticulture, mechanism and domestic animals, the rudiments of which, at least, should be taught them in their school days. It is likely that the matter will be brought before the Minister of Education at an early date and we hope that it will result in a new and practical system of education in the rural schools.

York County Council has decided that the toll gate must not go. They ought to hire out to a dime museum as specimens of living fossils.

Coulter, the Reform candidate in Haldimand, has at last secured his seat in the House of Commons after the fourth trial. Patience and perseverance will overcome all difficulties.

Mysterious murders multiply in Michigan, wa ls the Detroit Free Press, and it calls for the enactment of a death penalty. What effect that would have is not very clear. You cannot very well hang a murderer till you have caught him.

The fool practical joker has at last met his fate near Evansville, Ind. He arrayed himself in a sheet to scare a negro who was believed to be afraid of ghosts. The negro had an axe, and with it he laid open the head of the "joker," instantly killing him.

Says a Comanche Indian clergyman: "What we need is the Bible taught in a plain manner instead of the whiskey flask. We want the Government to educate our children to be good and useful citizens of this country instead of drunkards. Let the Government appropriate more money for teachers of a good moral character and less for scalp-knives and guns."

M. C. R. pay car arrives to-day.

St. Valentine's Day next Thursday.

Mr. W. F. Smith will move to Ingersoll shortly.

Mr. J. Hockin paid a flying trip to Detroit Saturday.

The thermometer registered 8 below zero Tuesday night.

Stock-taking is the order of the day among our merchants

Mr. Alex. Gordon is visiting old friends in town at present.

Read the advertisement of S. G. Sloane, in another column.

Mr. Geo. Smith has been elected reeve of Aylmer by acclamation.

A pair of bob sleighs for sale cheap. Apply to JAS. GRIFFIN, Dutton.

Joseph Marr intends renting his farm and building a dwelling in Dutton.

The son of Robert McMillan, who was injured last week, is rapidly recovering.

Mr. Joseph Miller, of Mayfair, is spending a short time in Dutton on business.

DUTTON AND VICINITY.

The Bell organ and piano still take the lead.

Look for J. M. Jackson's new advertisement in another column.

A new Bell piano arrived at J. M. Jackson's music store this week. Call and see it.

A large stock of sewing machine oil and needles just arrived at J. M. Jackson's music store.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ridley, of Ridgetown, visited at Mr. A. N. C. Black's last week.

Rev. J. W. Mann, of Iona, will preach in the Baptist Chapel Tuesday evening next, 12th inst.

The 25th battalion consists of twenty-three officers and 210 men, according to the military returns.

Hugh C. McLean was robbed of a pocket-book by highway-men on Talbot street, St. Thomas, on Monday evening.

The Middlemiss school arbitration resulted in the original award being sustained, giving a public school to the village.

We have received a communication in reference to municipal matters, but cannot publish the same for lack of space at present.

A small sword fish can kill a big whale. Fish nature is not unlike human nature. The whale blows too much to be a fighter.

The Salvation Army has purchased the little school house at Newbury from the trustees for $200, and on February 7 will have a jubilee.

Jos. Silcox, of Iona, has returned from a visit to his son in the Southern part of Minnesota. He expresses himself well pleased with the country.

An assembly will be held in the Town Hall, Lawrence, to-morrow (Friday) evening. The committee will please accept our thanks for invitation.

We have received the first number of the Musical Monitor, a bright and newsy monthly, devoted to music and drama. It is published at Bommanville, Ont.

As the advertising space for our extra edition is nearly all taken up, merchants wishing to make their announcements should send in their copy as soon as possible.

The regular meeting of the High School Literary Society will be held to-morrow evening. The programme prepared for last Friday's meeting will be carried out.

B. J. Schultz & Co. having purchased the furniture stock of A.C. Graham, are offering the same at cost for the next 30 days. Read their advertisement in another column.

In the Methodist Church next Sabbath Mr. Jackson is expected to preach in the morning at 10.30. The pastor will preach in the evening at 7 o'clock from the subject, "Samuel, the Judge."

A new postcard will shortly be issued by the department which will have a greater advantage in privacy. The card will be similar to the one now in vogue, except that it will have folds of paper on the back, which can be lapped over to cover the writing.

Mr. J. T. Kirkland, of St. Thomas, has passed his examination for barrister, standing third. The first and second men were not candidates at this year's examination for solictors, as Mr. Kirkland was. He is a brother of Mr. R. Kirkland, druggist, of Dutton.

They were discussing early rising and one of them, noted for being late for breakfast, remarked that he liked 9 hours sleep. 'Yes," sang Smith, "I always thought that the rule was, 7 hours for a scholar, 8 hours for a working man and 9 hours for a hog."

J. Lacey hitched up his horse to drive to church last Sunday morning, but the animal preferred going it alone and started off at a lively pace, quietly trotting into the Methodist Church sheds after getting to town. No damage was done except to the cutter.

About 30 young people from the vicinity of Largie spent last Fridry evening at the residence of J. H. Marsh, Dutton. The time was spent in pleasant amusements until a late hour, when, after doing ample justice to the good things provided all returned home merry hearted.

An oyster social, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Socicty, will be held in the Methodist parsonage on Friday evening. Tickets, 25c. each. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Middleton extend a cordial invitation to all. Good music is provided, and a pleasant time expected for all. Come.

A large congregation assembled to hear the Rev. T. Wilson's address to young men in Knox Church last Sunday evening, and were well repaid for attending, as a most practical and impressive sermon was given. Next Sunday evening he will preach a special sermon to young women.

Early Monday morning Mr. Hollingshead was awakened by someone trying to raise one of the windows. After several unsuccessful attempts the scamp was frightened away by a neighbor's dog. Mr. Hollingshead had meanwhile prepared his rifle, and if the marauder had succeeded in entering the house he would have met a very warm reception.

Over 75 couples attended an assembly held in Leitch's Hall, Tuesday evening, and a lively and pleasant time was spent by all present. Dancing commenced at an early hour in the evening and continued until nearly daylight, music being furnished by Waddel's String Band, of St. Thomas. Just before breaking up a young lady was severely cut on the forehead by a chair which some one was swinging around in too close proximity to the dancers.

Following is the programme for the next meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Advance, to be held in Knox Church Tuesday evening, February 12:—Instrumental, Miss Belle Paterson; recitation, Miss L. McIntyre; trio, Misses Rothwell and E. Rothwell; reading, Miss Lugsdin; essay on Milton, Miss F. McIntyre; instrumental, Miss A. Black; debate, "Resolved that the Union of the Protestant Churches would be for the advancement of Christianity," affirmative—J. Saunders and D. McLean, negative—Jno. McNeil and ————; quartette, Misses McIntyre and Hollingshead, and Messrs. Hollingshead and Saunders; critic, Miss K. McPherson.

Mr. Wm. Gow returned on Tuesday from Mulliker, Mich., where he had been to attend the funeral of his brother Alex., who died there on Wednesday last of inflammation of the lungs. Mr. Gow did not hear of his illness until receiving the telegram announcing his death. He was a former resident of Dunwich Township and was highly spoken of by all who knew him. The family have the sympathy of the neighborhood in their affliction.

Good weather, excellent music, a large attendance and good management all combined to make the closing assembly of the Dutton Quadrille Club the best yet held. Everything went off smoothly and not one word of grumbling was heard. Dancing commenced about 9.30 and was kept up until an early hour in the morning, when all dispersed, feeling sorry that this was to be the last for the season. Among those present from other places were noticed—Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ridley, of Ridgetown; Miss Parker, of Toronto; Miss Brown, of Port Talbot; Miss Duncan, of Sarnia; Messrs. F. Bake and Geo. Whitton, of Fingal; Mr. Norman and Miss Case, of Shedden; Messrs. J. Campbell, A. Turner, Dr. Lawrence and Misses Turner, Campbell and Crossen, of Lawrence, besides a host of residents of Dutton.

CHOW-CHOW.

What is home without a night-key.

Black eyes are generally followed by the blues.

It is the late cat that catches the early bootjack.

Beef was high when the cow jumped over the moon.

IN BETTER HUMOR NOW.—"My son, aged eleven, was cured of an eruptive humor that covered his face and hands with sores by two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and Pills," testifies Mrs. Mary Fulford, of Port Hope, Ont.

Is one of the objects of the soldiers' drill to make holes in the enemy?

When trains are telescoped the poor passengers see stars.

Even in dull times the cooper does a staving business.

Pictures of cats should always be drawn in pur-spective.

A GREAT SUFFERER.—That person who is afflicted with rheumatism is a great sufferer and greatly to be pitied if they cannot procure Hagyard's Yellow Oil. This remedy is a certain cure, not only for rheumatism, but for all external aches and all internal pains.

There is one thing that man puts off from day to day, and that is his necktie.

A lover's embrace may be likened unto a tree when it merges into a sigh-press.

Isn't it paradoxical that 1.20 o'clock is past 1, while 1.30 o'clock is only half-past?

MIRACULOUS.—"My miraculous cure was that I suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B.B.B. I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

A cow has died in Michigan from chewing tobacco. Did you heifer hear the like?

Liquor works much evil, which accounts for the dealers wanting to rectify it.

A BOON AND A BLESSING.—A boon and a blessing is Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the great Pain Destroyer and healing remedy for external and internal use. Yellow Oil cures all aches and pains, lame back, sore throat, croup, deafness, cramps contracted cords and lameness. Procure it of your druggist.

It is a mistake to assume that a rose by any other name would smell as wheat.

Pale, weak women need a tonic, strength giving, flesh building medicine like Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

After man came woman and she has been after him ever since.

Worms cause serious sickness. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup destroys and expels all kinds of worms quickly and surely.

Necessity is the mother of invention, but patent rights is the father.

Small sugar-coated Burdock Pills do not gripe or sicken. They are mild and effectual.

"Many men of many mines" are said to be plentiful in the mining region.

Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap is a delightful shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

She—Isn't Mr. Ruthboy generous to a fault? He—Yes, to several of them—if you mean his own.

First leading citizen (in southern lynching party)—The sheriff threatens that if we break in and get those prisoners he will shoot. Second leading citizen—Wall, reckon we'd better lynch the sheriff first.

Croup, whooping cough, sore throat, sudden cold, and the lung troubles peculiar to children, are easily controlled by promptly administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy is safe to take and certain in its action.

Small boy (to his sister)—I think that is very silly. Sister—Well, I guess men are silly, too, sometimes. Brother—Yes, I suppose they are; but they ought not to be as silly as women. They have had more experience. They were born first.

LOOK OUT FOR IT.—If you are troubled with a cold or cough, however light the attack, look out for it, do not allow it to settle on the lungs; break up the cough by loosening up the tough phlegm with Hagyaad's Pectoral Balsam.

An old fellow in a Wisconsin town who has been running a private bank for some years was recently requested to publish some sort of a statement. So he posted the following notice on the door of his bank:—"Notice.—This 'ere bank has got $50,000 behind her. She don't owe nobody a cussed cent. Good paper discounted, as heretofore, and nobody proposes to cut sticks for Mexico or Canada."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the best female physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. 7-2-0

ARCHER.—At the residence of her sister, Mrs. Dr. Mills, Detroit, after a lingering illness, on February 2nd, Mina J. Archer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Archer, of Newbury.

GOW.—At Mulliken, Mich., on Wednesday, January 30, Alex. Gow, formerly of Dunwich, aged 35 years, 6 months.

A man who wanted to learn what profession he would have his son enter, put him in a room with a Bible, an apple and a dollar bill. If he found him when he returned reading the Bible, he would make a clergyman of him; if eating the apple, a farmer; and if interested in the dollar bill, a banker. When he did return he found the boy sitting on the Bible with the dollar in his pocket, and the apple almost devoured. He made a politician of him.—Ex.

GOOD NEWS!

DUTTON'S NEW PUMP.

J. H. MARSH, Manufacturer, is now prepared to furnish his new pump on short notice in 11 sizes, from AA 8x8, 8 ft long, to No. 9 5x5, 6 ft long. All other sizes made to order. All kinds of Farm Implements. Wheelbarrows kept in stock.

PLOWS & REPAIRS A SPECIALTY.

The Best EDUCATION.

Prepares young men and women to support themselves and accumulate wealth. Send for facts to DETROIT BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, Detroit, Mich. This is a College of Business, School of Shorthand, School of Penmanship, and English Training School. Elegant Catalogues free to applicants.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience. Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

FARMERS, MILLERS AND ENGINE OWNERS.

I AM now introducing the newest invention of the day, a Grinder that will grind small grains or corn with the husk on without having to stop the engine to change. The plates are self sharpening and the machine is so constructed that if a piece of iron should get into it it would be pushed down through the safety bottom without danger of breaking. One can be seen running in the grist mill at Essex Centre. Railway fare will be deducted from price of the Grinder to those coming from a distance to see it work, on placing their order. I will be at the Royal Hotel, Essex Centre, every Saturday. Circular sent on application.

J. G. SLOANE, North Ridge, Ont.

TENDERS.

SEALED TENDERS WANTED UP to 12 o'clock, (noon), on Wednesday, Feb. 13th, for the erection of a brick school house in section 16, Dunwich. Lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted. Address School Board, in care of Mr. D. C. Clay, Dutton, where plans and specifications can be seen.

Calvert's Carbolic Cerate.

Try it for Chapped Hands, Cuts, Burns, Bruises. It is a preparation of Vaseline, Carbolic Acid and Cerate. It will cure any sore where all other preparations fail. Call at R. A. Kirkland's Drug Store and get a package. Twenty-five cents is all it costs has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

No Universal Remedy

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1886.
122 E. 27th st.

DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.,

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold nor any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in acute cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, life has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

A Priceless Blessing

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

One hundred acres, being the North half of Lot 7, 2nd Con., Dunwich; 85 acres cleared. Good orchard, frame house, barn and stable. Also the job of clearing and fencing 50 or 100 acres on lot 6, 5th con., north of con. A, Dunwich. For further particulars apply to JOHN C. MCRAE, Dutton. 2-14

For Sale, Cheap.

1 pair Heavy Bob-sleighs for $7.50,
1 pair Light Pleasure Bobs for $12.00,
1 Cutter, only $15 00,
1 Buckboard, $17.00,
2 brood Mares,
1 four-year-old Mare,

A quantity of good Hay for $6.00 per ton.

A. D. URLIN, DUTTON.

NEW SAWMILL —IN— DUTTON.

Having placed a Sawmill south of the railway, between the Currie Road and Humpidge & Graham's Stave Factory, in Dutton, I am now prepared to do all kinds Custom Sawing, and solicit patronage from all who want satisfactory work. Lumber handled with care and not split or otherwise damaged while about the mill.

Sawing done at $3 per 1,000, on shares, or lumber taken in exchange.

A quantity of Ash, Hickory and Oak Logs wanted.

D. McKEE.

Dutton, Jan. 24, 1889—4

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

New Home Sewing Machine

FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to

1-17tf N. PHELPS.

DR. LOW'S WORM SYRUP

DESTROYS AND REMOVES WORMS OF ALL KINDS IN CHILDREN OR ADULTS SWEET AS SYRUP AND CANNOT HARM THE MOST DELICATE CHILD

MICHIGAN CENTRAL

"The Niagara Falls Route."

CANADA SOUTHERN DIVISION.

GOING EAST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
Ridgetown	8 08	9 47	11 02
Rodney	8 38	10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50	.....	12 30
Dutton	9 09	10 29	12 58
Iona	9 25	.....	1 30
Shedden	9 36	.....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05	11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
St. Thomas (dep't)	3 00	12 25	5 25
Shedden	3 24	.....	6 01
Iona	3 32	.....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	.....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	A. M.
Leave St. Thomas	6 30	6 00	10 15
Arrive at London	7 25	6 50	11 05

GOING SOUTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	P. M.
Leave London	8 50	2 10	7 30
Ar. at St. Thomas	9 30	3 50	8 45

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

DEAFNESS CURED.—A very interesting 12 page Illustrated Book on Deafness. Noises in the head. How they may be cured at home. Post free 3d.—Address DR. NELSON, 30, St. John Street, Montreal.

AT COST! AT COST!

Having purchased the entire Stock of Furniture of A.C. Graham, we will sell the same at cost for the NEXT THIRTY DAYS.

Come one and all and secure some of the grandest bargains ever heard of in Dutton.

Don't fail to secure some of the

BARGAINS IN MATTRESSES.

We have a large stock of the best makes in the market to-day.

In Furniture we take the lead. Our stock of

Parlor Suites, Bed-room Suites,

Side-boards, Tables, Chairs, Sofas, &c.

Must be cleared out at once to make room. Call and see us and secure some of the grand bargains we are offering.

UNDERTAKING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

A full stock of Coffins, Caskets, Shrouds, etc., kept constantly on hand. A first-class Hearse furnished at all funerals. Embalming a specialty. Orders filled night or day.

B. J. SCHULTZ & CO., DUTTON.

CUTTERS —AND— SLEIGHS!

If you want to buy the best and cheapest Cutters and Sleighs now in the market call on

SIFTON BROS.

Next door to Hockin & Pool,

MAIN ST., DUTTON.

We are agents for all kinds of Farm Machinery and Implements, representing the most reliable firms.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8—No. 8. DUTTON, ONT, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1889. WHOLE No. 342.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B., BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, ETC.
OFFICES—St. Thomas and Dutton.
☞ Money to Loan.

A. J. LEITCH, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, pb DUTTON.

WILLIAM DRINKWATER, VETERINARY SURGEON, DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON, LICENSED AUCTIONEER, d DUTTON.

HENRY CLAY, BARRISTER AT-LAW, ROCHE BLOCK, DUTTON.
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.

$75,000.00 to loan at 6, 6½ and 7 per cent.
Apply to
ANGUS MACNISH,
Solicitor, Glencoe.

MONEY TO LOAN AT LOWEST RATES.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE,
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office, St. Thomas.

MONEY TO LOAN at 6 per cent. on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS for all classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order. Satisfaction guaranteed.
F. A. HUMPIDGE,
Office—Front Street. Dutton.

DR. G. ADAMS SWANN, Surgeon Dentist. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday.

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon Dentist. Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate R.C.D.S. of Ontario. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered Office closed on Mondays only. Office — Leitch Block, Dutton.

SALESMEN WANTED.

Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.
L. P. Thurston & Co.,

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on
tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to
1-17tf N. PHELPS.

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

The Star Loan Company

181 Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. E. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.
Repairing Promptly Done.
CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our
NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,
which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities
Give Us a Call.
TURNER & PECKHAM
Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds,
etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. COCHRANE.

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in
First-class Style,
BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.
Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.
C. J. WEIR.

DR LOW'S WORM SYRUP
DESTROYS AND REMOVES WORMS OF ALL KINDS IN CHILDREN OR ADULTS SWEET AS SYRUP AND CANNOT HARM THE MOST DELICATE CHILD

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY
IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y
Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

REPEAL OF THE SCOTT ACT.

NOTICE is hereby given that a petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Elgin will be fyled in the Registrar's office of the said county at St. Thomas, on or about the 23rd day of February, A. D. 1889, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A paper is to be started in Windsor to oppose annexation.

The loss by Wednesday's fire at Bracebridge will be $15,000.

Hutson's shingle mill near Feversham was burned Thursday night

Three Port Hope churches were burglarized on Wednesday night.

Several business places in Bracebridge were burned Thursday morning.

Scott Act repeal will be voted on in the County of Peterboro' on April 1.

The store of Preston & Lee, at Bethany, Ont., was burned on Saturday night.

Evangelists Crossly and Hunter are going to conduct services in Peterboro.

Lewis Door, a well-known St. Catharines merchant, dropped dead Thursday.

The Peterboro' school board wants $20,000 for buildings and other purposes.

Harry Jackson was stabbed at Windsor, on Saturday, by Dan Scribner, and may die.

The Niagara Falls brewery at Drummondville was burned Thursday. Loss, $8,000.

Imitators of White Caps in Napanee have given several young men notice to leave town.

The new Liquor License Act of Manitoba closes the saloons at 11 instead of 11.30 o'clock.

The Conservatives of Haldimand Thursday decided to contest the election and raised $1 500.

John Botrell has been sentenced at Stratford to four years in the penitentiary for cattle stealing.

The contract has been signed for the building of the Brantford, Waterloo & Lake Erie Railway.

The Manitoba Government has introduced a measure to radically change the registration system.

Chatham School Board has reduced the salary of its secretary from $375 to $200 and he has resigned.

Thirty-five employes of the G. T. R. car works at London were laid off Monday to cut down expenses.

The dry goods store of Larose & Co., Ottawa, was damaged Thursday to the extent of $7.000, by fire.

The Winnipeg Free Press has bought the Morning Call, and the latter will cease publication at once.

The tenth annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union was held at Guelph Monday.

Mr. John Oliver, collector of the Township of Blenheim, was robbed of $600 by highwaymen on Friday night.

A young man named Johnson cut his throat near Ailsa Craig on Friday night while suffering from depression.

Adam Konkle, hotel keeper of Grimsby, has been jailed at St. Catharines for non-payment of a third Scott Act fine.

Three farmers have entered suits at Kingston to recover notes given for the right to sell a patent washing machine.

Three young men have been arrested at Hamilton, and it is believed a gang of housebreakers will be scattered thereby.

The St. Catharines Council has passed a resolution to memorialize the Ontario Legislature to abolish all tax exemptions.

Commisioner Herchmer, of the Mounted Police, is accused by a Regina merchant with illegally importing liquor into the Territories.

A Strathroy boy named Johnson, whose father has married and abandoned four wives, has been sentenced to five years in the reformatory.

Thomas Whittaker, of London, was successful out of 400 applicants for the position of Chief of Police of Sandwich. The salary is $400.

The roof of the Napanee Opera House collapsed on Thursday night from the weight of snow. Four hundred people had just left the building.

Ernest Hutt, a Stormont farmer, is dead from blood poisoning alleged to have set in from a bite during a fight with another farmer named Bogart.

An attempt is being made to unseat Mayor-elect Walters, of Lindsay, because of insufficient property qualifications. Councillor Joseph Brown's right to sit in Council is also being attacked.

April the 4th has been selected as the day on which to take a repeal vote on the Canada Temperance Act in St. Thomas and the counties of Colchester, N. S.; Kent, Brant and Wellington, Ont.

No other medicine is so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, for the cure of coughs, colds, and all derangements of the respiratory organs. It relieves the asthmatic and consumptive, even in advanced stages of disease.

The meanest man up to date is Snifkins. He sold Jones half an interest in a cow, and then refused to divide the milk, maintaining that Jones owned the front half.

TO THE DEAF.—A person cured of Deafness and noises in the head of 23 years' standing by a simple remedy, will send a description of it FREE to any person who applies to Nicholson, 177 McDougall Street, New York.

Watchman on Incorporation.

I am pleased to see that the question of incorporation is being mooted, and the time is not far away when it should be taken hold of in earnest. The growing population of the village and the many matters that call for attention will soon imperatively demand it. The laying out of the streets, ensuring proper width of the same, the improvement of our sidewalks, a volunteer fire company, &c., &c., are all matters that a village council could give their attention to. Strong representations should be made to the railway company for better station accommodation. The present building may answer for a few years for a freight station and office, but for passengers the accommodation is very meagre indeed, and often we find freight that should be under cover placed out on the platform. We should have a new passenger station right away and a village council could press the matter on the company, and agree for a term of years not to raise the taxation in view of the public improvement and convenience A little while since we saw something about a joint stock company for the manufacture of a valuable new patent buggy gear if inducements were offered. At present we have no one to offer such inducements on our behalf. We hear of considerable building likely to take place next season, and are hoping for quite an addition to our population. A dozen comfortable houses would, we think, be rented inside of a month. WATCHMAN.

Sitting Down on the Reeve.

To the Editor:

The first cabinet meeting of Reeve A. J. Leitch, of the municipality of Dunwich, was held on the 21st day of January, 1889, succeeding the political death of his opponent, when all the members were present and the oath of qualification administered.

Pursuant to an order-in-council the official organ, the Dutton ENTERPRISE, of Jan. 17th stated that applications be received at the next meeting of council on January 21st, 1889, for the offices of assessor and collector for the year 1889. The efficient clerk, Mr. D Clay, opened no less than nine sealed tenders for the coveted office of assessor, (one from an adjoining municipality,) among which was conspicious the application of the ex-reeve, Jno Galbraith, Esq., a member in the county council as reeve of Dunwich during several years, and elected by acclamation time and again; a man of general information and high authority on matters appertaining to municipal affairs, filling the trust imposed on him with credit to himself and honor to the body which he presided over. Suffice it to say, Mr. Editor, that his services were uncalled for. Also another character, Mr. Editor, a short-lived Cabinet Minister during the ex-reeve's administration, which I shall call Strate, setting forth his claim to the most coveted office, being appointed to the office of assessor at an early date, fitting himself in the office of the late T. G Claris, county treasurer. These facts will give you an idea of his efficiency that from 1859 up to 1872, making twelve assesments with but one alteration will go to show as evidence of his ability to do the functions of the office for the sum of $40. No confidence. Lost.

When a learned member of the new council arose and gravely addressed the reeve, saying, Mr. Reeve, I suppose you intend to carry out the ideas and customs of the country: That ability be the qualifications to office, and that this council, inaugurated by your august person, will continue in the same line of policy under which it has been begun. The reeve, much astonished, nodded slightly, wondering what was to come next. And, Mr. Member went on, Mr. Reeve, it is the intention of the municipal code that the chief executive shall preside and advise on all measures whatever relating to the administration of justice using common sense for the common good The reeve was always courteous, but he was also firm, and responding to this adamantine cheek he arose and spoke substantially as follows:—I beg your pardon, gentlemen. I am very glad to have in my council such an able statesman as you have proved yourself to be, and I shall be pleased to avail myself of your counsel and advice, but I can never consent to being dictated to as to what I shall or shall not do. I, as reeve, shall be responsible for my administration. I hope to have your hearty co-operation in carrying out its measures. So long as you see fit to do this I shall be glad to have you with me, when you think otherwise your resignation will be accepted.

As the space allotted us in the preparation of this is very limited, I wish to state that the above is a digest from a confused brain.

As local papers should encourage contributions, in the words of the Jewess, if I have found favor in thy sight, oh King, (Mr. Editor) and if it pleases thee to enter this hasty epistle I promise to do better in my next. MINTO.

"My little son, three years of age, was terribly afflicted with scrofula. His head was entirely covered with scrofulous sores, and his body showed many marks of the disease. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured him.—W. J. Beckett, Hymera, Ind.

St. Peter (sternly)—What good did you ever do in the world? Miss McFlimsy—Why, St. Peter, what a question! I am a Christian martyr. I advanced myself to death at a charity ball.

Dr Low's Sulphur Soap is a delightful shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

LOOK OUT!—If you are troubled with a cold or cough, however light the attack look out for it, do not allow it to settle on the lungs; break up the cough by loosening up the tough phlegm with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

Wallacetown.

Mr. William Stidwell, jr., of this place, left for Detroit, Mich., Tuesday morning. He intends going on the railroad to learn operating.

Mr. L W. McIntyre, who has been away for the past week on business concerning the Windsor and Lake Shore Railroad, has returned.

Mr. and Mrs John Pearce, of the Lake Shore, intend leaving for Calgary, N. W. T., on a six months visit to their son William.

The missionary meeting which was held in the Presbyterian Church of this place on Monday evening last was a decided success. Addresses were given by Revs. Sutherland, of Fingal, and Wilson, of Dutton, on home and foreign missions. Rev. Mr. Keiso occupied the chair. The collections on Sunday and Monday evening amounted to over $24

A number of the young ladies and gentlemen of this place attended the assembly held at Dutton on Tuesday evening of last week

The Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian Church of this place intend holding their annual tea meeting on Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th, in the church. Addresses will be delivered by a number of the ministers of the community. Rev. Geo. Sutherland, of Fingal, will occupy the chair. A good time is expected

Rev. Mr Sutherland, of Fingal, occupied the pulpit in the Wallacetown Presbyterian Church Sunday morning and evening.

The following is the result of the examinations held in Wallacetown Public School during the past week:—4th, arithmetic—T D. McIntyre, W. A. McGill, A. M McGill, W. Sutherland, D. J Bell, M. C. McLaws. 5th, history—Edith Connel, Florence Davis, Edward Stidwell, Mary J. Sutherland, Wm. S Pearce, Thos H McColl, Annie Dewar, Rosa McIntyre, Georginia Blackwood, Ada McKee, Jessie Blackwood.

Iona.

Mrs. Draper, nee Liddell, who has been visiting friends in this place, left for Bismarck on Monday to visit her parents.

Mr. Daniel McWilliam, who recently sold his farm on Clay street, has purchased the well known farm formerly owned by the late Neil McIntyre

Rumor has it that we are to lose another of our fair damsels soon. Iona against the world for weddings.

When such places as Dutton, Campbellton and Coyne's Corners can afford literary societies, why can't we? Brace up, boys, and don't let Iona be behind in the race for literary honors.

Mr. A. Preston left on Monday for his home in Manistee, Mich., after a few weeks' visit with friends in this vicinity.

The thief, who entered J. O. Lumley's store about a week ago and carried off a number of articles, was captured and put in safe keeping for a while.

Coyne's Corners.

The literary society last Friday evening was a grand success The following is the programme for next Friday:—Reading, H. Ripley; essay, D. Crowley; song, Miss B Crowley; recitation, Miss G. Ripley; solo on the violin; recitation, Miss M. Crowley; debate, "Resolved that war creates more misery than intemperance." affirmative—W Patton, Jas. Campbell, Duncan McKillop, negative—J. B McKillop, N. A. Campbell, Peter Cameron; critics, Misses J Campbell and M. Clark and Mr. J. Ripley.

A number of the young people of this neighborhood got up a sleigh load Monday evening and took a pleasure ride to Campbellton and there spent the evening with some friends.

Mrs Wm. Ford is visiting friends in Brantford at present.

A social took place at the residence of Mr Henry Garbutt on Monday evening last in aid of the Methodist Church. A pleasant time was spent. The proceeds amounted to about $10

Is marriage a failure? Well, some people see
It isn't the fun it's cracked up to be,
And others who've tried it for all it is worth,
Proclaim it a little heaven on earth.

Worms cause serious sickness. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup destroys and expels all kinds of worms quickly and surely.

"Uncle John, can you tell what time it is by the thermometer?" "Yes, sah; wintah-time."

Pale, weak women need a tonic, strength giving flesh building medicine like Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

A PROFESSIONAL OPINION.—Rev. F. Gunner, M. D., of Listowel, Ont., says regarding B. B. B., "I have used your excellent Burdock Compound in practice and in my family since 1881, and hold it No. 1 on my list of sanative remedies. Your three busy B's never sting, weaken or worry.

What's the matter with the ritualists? Oh, they're all rite. But you mustn't take this literally.

A BOON AND A BLESSING.—A boon and a blessing is Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the great Pain Destroyer and healing remedy for sores of all descriptions. Yellow Oil cures all aches and pains, sore back, sore throat, croup, diphtheria, cures up contracted cords and lameness. Procure it of your druggist.

Down Into the Dust.

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In the blackness of heart? that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife!

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumph we feel
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on that heather,
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe or for weal.

Were it not well, in this brief, little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in the dust by his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other,
Look at the herds all at peace on the plain—
Man and man only makes war on his brother,
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain,
Shamed by the beast that goes down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow-soldier down into the dust?
God pity us all! Time oft soon will tumble
All of us together like leaves in a gust,
Humbled indeed down into the dust.

JOAQUIN MILLER.

ESTELLE'S INFATUATION:

A NOVEL.

Never had Mrs. Clanricarde "voiced aloud" "with shriller throat" her views on the unimportance of the man and the all-importance of the purse in marriage. Never had her scorn for personal love and physical beauty been hotter, more pungent, more severe. To hear her one would have thought love before marriage the doom of happiness after, and a man's beauty not only a snare but a sin. She dwelt on the superiority of moral graces and intellectual soundness to all else that man could possess, till Estelle's fair face grew wan and white with secret loathing, and Caleb's flamed with thoughts to which he dared give neither form nor voice. He was modest to self-abasement, but even he could not fail to see that Mrs. Clanricarde substantially offered him her daughter, and told him that the way was clear and the running already made for him. But Estelle herself? The verdict in her averted eyes was differently framed and spelt from that in Mrs. Clanricarde's; and Caleb was too sensitive to confound compassion with affection. He knew that he was but the Beast to her—no more desirable than Caliban—as little lovely as the hunchback, within whose hump, however, are folded the wings which will one day carry him to heaven. And as something under the ban of love, he bore himself with the patience, the very dignity, indeed, of self-effacement, and the quiet hopelessness which accepts the doom of fate and yields to the pressure the inevitable.

Near to Les Saules ran the prettiest lane the district. It led to the Close, a wood made by man and nature for love. Love unspoken, estranged, content—for all its phases this wood had special shrines and green-arched temples where to rest and be refreshed. It was the favorite place of meeting for Estelle and Charlie Osborne, and to both every fern and tree and flower was sanctified, and carried its own secret message and reminder. It had also become a favorite hunting-ground with Caleb Stagg, being full of precious creatures not to be found elsewhere.

It was on one of those rare days in England when the house must empty itself and the world must be abroad. No one, not an invalid consents to remain within those stifling four walls of home, and the Clanricardes had been touched by the all-pervading œstrum with the rest.

"Come for a little walk, Estelle," said Mrs. Clanricarde to her daughter.

And Estelle, who really loved her mother, though she feared her—and at this moment hated her line of action—was glad to go. But she knew by that secret "telepathy" which lovers have as a sixth sense, by one of those "messengers which love sends to and fro," and of which the earth is full, that Charlie was waiting for her in the wood—there behind the old beech-tree to the right, which was their place of meeting. "Where shall we go, mother?" she asked, kissing her mother as in the days now grown unhappily a little old.

"Oh, anywhere," answered Mrs. Clanricarde.

"To Grantown?" proposed Estelle.

Grantown was a picturesque little hamlet, about a mile from Les Saules, across the fields and by the river. It was a charming walk, and one of the points of the place.

"No," answered Mrs. Clanricarde.

"Toward the Dower House?"—another pretty leafy way.

"No," she replied again.

"Where, then, mother?" was Estelle's perplexed demand.

"To the Close," said Mrs. Clanricarde.

"Will it not be very stifling there to-day?" asked Estelle, with as much indifference as she could command.

"No; it will be cool," said her mother.

And Estelle had nothing to object. The two went by the little sidewalk into the leafy lane which led to the deep-bosomed wood. But all Estelle's joy had gone, and the cloud between her and her mother lowered more dense than before.

They sauntered down the lane—Estelle, bitten with an insane desire for wild flowers, lingering greatly as she went—till they came to the gate which opened into the paradise of her heart. A hundred yards farther on, round the projection made by an overhanging rock, and they would come in sight of the beech-tree under which she knew that Charlie Osborne was sitting.

The girl's uneasiness was too great to be concealed. Her very efforts to appear indifferent betrayed her anxiety. The way in which she talked—so volubly, so unlike herself—and the sharper ring of her voice, more highly pitched than usual, and thrown out as if for other ears than her mother's, all were eloquent enough for Mrs. Clanricarde, who had missed her vocation and her epoch. She should have been one of Fouche's "souricieres." Had she been one she would have made her fortune, dug out of the graves of those she had overshadowed.

Suspecting, watching, she said never a word—only paid out the rope, which Estelle twisted yet tighter round her slender throat. Then they rounded the rock, and with one rapid look—caught by Mrs. Clanricarde as a sportsman shoots flying—the girl's heart gave one full bound of relief: Charlie Osborne was not there. But in his stead, peering on all sides, now his nose flattened against the bark of a tree, now down on the ground turning over last year's dead leaves and dry twigs, a butterfly net in hand, some creatures in his hat, a green tin case strapped round him, in full pursuit of his fancy, riding his hobby, knees and chin together, they came upon Caleb Stagg searching for creatures in Estelle's sacred grove where her god was hidden. Then Mrs. Clanricarde blessed herself for her insistence, and looked on her decision as providential and inspired.

To Estelle it was the other way; and what to her mother was the benevolent work of the good angels was to her the undoubted mischief-making of the bad.

Caleb blushed when he met them, as of course he would; but the mother caught on the wing a look in his eyes as she had caught that in her daughter's. And it was a look that satisfied her. She had made up her mind. Estelle should marry the omad'haun, failing a better provision. If any one more eligible should come along—then the poor omad'haun would be thrown over, with no more remorse than we have when we drop one peach in favor of another, better flavored to the eyes and softer to the touch.

"A lucky chance!" she said, in her kindest way, as she put out her hand for Caleb's, dust and dirt begrimed as it was.

Instinctively he wiped his hand on his coat before he gave it.

"I'm not fit," he said, bashfully.

"The hand of an honest man is alway fit—fit for a queen," said Mrs. Clanricarde, with royal condescension of air and manner.

Her compliment was really regal. Her appreciation of essential qualities was grandly philosophic—nobly heroic.

Caleb blushed again, as painfully as before; and Estelle lifted her pretty chin and curled her lips with the daintiest little line of disdain—which he saw and writhed under, as if it had been a barbed arrow in his breast.

"Let us go and sit there," said Mrs. Clanricarde, pointing to the seat beneath the beech-tree on the right.

"Oh, mother!" exclaimed Estelle, hurriedly. "We shall be eaten up by midgets!" she added, after a second's pause, to explain and conceal the very pronounced opposition—the opposition that was a prayer and cry—in her voice.

"No more there than elsewhere," returned Mrs. Clanricarde, smoothly, as she turned up the trodden path to the tree. "Come, Mr. Stagg; come with us, and show us your interesting collection," she added, sweetly, to Caleb. "I know that Estelle will be glad to see it."

"Do you care for creatures, Miss Clanricarde?" asked Caleb, awkwardly.

"She is devoted to them," put in Mrs. Clanricarde, before Estelle could answer.

"I did not know that I was, mother," said Estelle, her face white, as it was wont to grow when her mother flung her too openly at the omad'haun's head. Besides, she knew that Charlie Osborne was within ear-shot somewhere, spying at them through the smoke-colored glasses of jealousy.

"Indeed I should be glad if you would give her some instruction, Mr. Stagg," said Mrs. Clanricarde, ignoring Estelle's disclaimer. "It is so much better to work under the guidance of a master—and such a good master as you would be."

She smiled benignly. The present need at home was great. She saw ruin on every side, and nothing but a rich marriage, with a margin for herself and that fatal husband of hers, would save them. It was a pity—surely a pity—that she had no better salvation in view than Caleb Stagg; but in the storm who cares for the name, the look, the beauty of the port?

"I should be sorry to take up Mr. Stagg's time," said Estelle, in a clear renunciatory voice.

"It would be a pleasure, Miss Clanricarde," said Caleb in a low voice.

"I should like it," said Mrs. Clanricarde, a little shrilly. "We will begin our first lesson now, if you please, Mr. Stagg," she added, with a laugh yet more shrill than her spoken words had been.

And Caleb, opening his case, began his roll-call of names and characteristics, of which neither mother nor daughter understood one word, nor from which they gained one rational idea. Mrs. Clanricarde thanked him with the most enthusiastic and becoming effusiveness. But Estelle said little that was pleasant, nothing that was encouraging.

"It is far too difficult for me, and I hate those long learned names," she said, coldly.

Charlie hated all science too, and looked on scientific nomenclature as a kind of spiritual deformity—next thing to a crime. She knew that her confession of faith, which she felt sure was heard somehow by him, would please him.

"We must have them, you see, Miss Clanricarde," said Caleb, humbly apologizing for the necessities of science. "They make a kind of general language for all nations. A Russian"—he pronounced it "Rooshian"—"or a Frenchman, or an Englishman, they all know what Papilio vanessa means, but the peacock 'butterfly' would not carry far."

"Still, science is horrid. Art and poetry are the only things worth living for," said Estelle, in the same rather unnaturally high-pitched voice she had had throughout.

"I know nothing of either," said Caleb, sadly.

"You are none the worse for that, Mr. Stagg," said Mrs. Clanricarde, with her ambiguous smile. "Poets and artists generally are wretchedly poor creatures, not worth their salt. I so much prefer honest merit and more solid acquirements."

"Mother! as if the greatest gifts God has to give should be spoken of so slightingly!" cried Estelle, in hot haste and hotter anger. "Why, what should we be without poetry and art? Mere earth-worms, knowing nothing of the diviner things of life, seeing nothing but ourselves, and shut out from heaven!" This was Charlie's latest phrase, and Mrs Clanricarde knew it. "Science is soul-destroying," continued Estelle still hot and eager. "Scientific people are atheists."

"Not necessarily, my dear child," said Mrs. Clanricarde, blandly.

"I think not all, Miss Clanricarde," said Caleb, humbly.

"I hate science and all that is scientific," said Estelle, almost in tears; "and nothing should ever make me learn it."

"Come to dinner to-morrow, Mr. Stagg," said Mrs. Clanricarde. "I give you this foolish child of mine to convert from her dreams to your better and sounder ways."

"Mother, this is too bad!" flamed out Estelle. "I will not take lessons from Mr. Stagg."

"Come to dinner, Mr. Stagg," repeated Mrs. Clanricarde; and the unhappy pendulum, swung thus between mother and daughter, had no excuse ready. Yet he would have liked to refuse, only he could not see where the loophole was.

"She will have none of me," he said to himself as he trudged through the wood, no longer a place of enchantment for him. "Her mother will, for they are in but a poor way, and father's means would set them bravely up; but that dainty blossom is not for the like of me, and she will not were it ever so. I feel her tremble with disgust and shame when I touch her hand. God help me! but the smart is sore."

All this time Charlie had been lying hidden within the bracken which grew in a miniature forest among the underwood. He had heard every word, and through the crossing stems, which gave one clear passage not larger than his eye, he had seen every gesture, every look, He understood the whole play. She was to be sacrificed to that cad, that ruffian, that low-lived beast, sitting in his own especial place beneath their holy trysting-tree. There was no term of obloquy, however unfitting, that Charlie did not shower on Caleb Stagg—he whose own humility rated him low enough as things were; he would willingly give his life for Estelle's good, and whose sacrifice would be as his crowning if it insured her gain. But it was only after the rule and line of men's judgments on each other. The glass through which we read hearts and motives is indeed dark, and few of us have love or unselfishness enough to clear it.

CHAPTER VIII.

LOVERS' VOWS.

A change had come into Estelle's sweet face. It had lost its normal shyness for what was a look of fear; and something of that watching, suspicious, hunted sharpness which belongs to those who have a dangerous secret to hide had taken the former clearness out of her candid eyes. Between her lover and her mother she had come to moral grief. Devoted to each, but adding to her love for Charlie fear to hurt him and determination to be faithful; to her love for her mother that piety of obedience natural to a gently nurtured girl, she had fallen into deceit and intrigue. Of course the knowledge that it was "for Charlie" justified a great deal, as it always does in love: but the fact remained the same—she was deceiving her mother, and thereby committing a sin which covered her soul with spiritual shame.

For herself she could have been strong enough to give up this sweet secret fault, but when she spoke of it to Charlie her tears of self-accusation, her gentle prayers to be rendered back to the ways of truth and uprightness, failed against the overmastering need of his egotism—the passionate demands of his love. He softened her moral fibre by the softness of his own, and his tears of supplication dried hers of remonstrance. Then things would go on as before. The meetings, which played with Estelle's very life, were planned and executed with almost double zest for the break which had seemed too likely to come. As yet no harm had come to them. But Mrs. Clanricarde's suspicions were aroused. She was not a nature-born "souriciere" for nothing; and by the very fact that she suspected some kind of underhand association between Estelle and that fascinating detrimental, Charlie Osborne, she determined to push on this matter with Caleb Stagg, and to force her daughter into the lifelong misery and financial redemption of a marriage which would be eminently a gilded horror and legalized slavery to a name and a myth.

She would get over it, the mother argued. Other women have had to suppress their own feelings in favor of their family need, and marry where they did not love, leaving behind them the dearest and adored. So must she. No one is absolutely sui generis in this life, and the rod with which souls are ruled by society is heavy and impartial. We have all to submit to it; so must Estelle. With such a father her fate was predicted. If any one was to blame it was George—that luckless pilot of the financial ship.

So she glozed over her countenance, and added to her reasoning a thick layer of whitewash for poor Caleb, whereby she got rid of a great many of his defects, and made him out at last to be really quite personal and presentable. His "good heart" stood for so much! Shakespeare and Burns were both quoted in his behalf, and the skimmings of his science and his classics stood for thick, rich, soul-sustaining cream.

When she let fly these arrows Estelle generally put up the buckler of silence, and always edged away from the subject. She knew that her mother wanted to be more explicit, and to "have it out" with her; and she dreaded only one thing more—the discovery of her secret trysts with Charlie.

Of late, since that encounter with Caleb Stagg in the wood, those trysts had been considerably fewer. In some subtle way she never could quite define how, nor yet could she deny nor circumvent, Mrs. Clanricarde kept Estelle closer than ever by her side. Poor Estelle's heart was torn into still more painful bits, and she scarce knew where to turn or what to do. Charlie eating out his heart in the wood, she feeling hers lacerated in the house, the lover's yearning and the mother's pleasant command. Poor Estelle! And then, to crown all, the frequent presence of the snub-nosed omad'haun, and the mother's extraordinary craze in his favor

For himself, poor fellow, this time was a time of torture to Caleb. He saw the whole play, and suffered from it as such a man naturally would. Not to gain the kingdom of Heaven for himself would he have forced Estelle's inclination—taking her on her mother's invitation against her own desire. And yet would he have been human not to have desired? Lady Elizabeth alone knew what he felt, and to her alone he showed the hidden wound that was destroying the value of his life—to her, always his goddess, his Madonna, to worship and to serve, to love and adore, but the hem of whose very garment was as sacred as the vest of Isis, and not to be carried to his lips nor touched by his hands.

In this way things were not much advanced, nor did they seem likely to advance. Mrs. Clanricarde offered Estelle to the rich miner as evidently as if she had made the proposal in so many words; Caleb ever more and more distraught by the mother's patent desire, let the sweet poison of that proffered and yet self-forbidden presence creep nearer and nearer to his soul. Estelle's revulsion against him grew stronger with her mother's increased advocacy; Charlie Osborne's feverish despair grew greater as the sacrilege, which now all Kingshouse was discussing, seemed almost possible. Those stolen meetings were becoming rarer and more perilous, and everything seemed slipping down the decline. Like that village on the slopes of Etna which is kept from sliding down into the valley solely by that huge buttressing rock in front, so, in Caleb's steadfast delicacy and the very unselfishness of his resolve, was the only salvation of the lovers. When the day should come, if it ever should, when passion would be stronger than this unselfishness, then would the sun see the last of the poor young lovers' happiness—Charlie's death-knell and Estelle's enduring martyrdom.

"Nothing could tempt you to such a sacrilege, Estelle?" Charlie asked, as he had asked a dozen times before. Lovers' assurances are never enough.

"Nothing," she answered, with fervor. "I am very sorry we are so poor, very sorry that mother is so anxious, but I would no more marry Caleb Stagg than I would jump into the river. I would rather jump into the river, indeed!"

"I do not want to speak harshly of your mother, but I must say she astonishes me!" said Charlie, tossing back his hair. "The only excuse I can make for her is to suppose she is a little off her head, The idea of her thinking of your marrying that cad, still less wishing it! Good heavens, I wonner she is not struck dead for such a crime!" he said, excitedly. "It makes my blood curdle, Estelle, and would, even if I did not love you!"

"It is too dreadful to think of!" said Estelle, shuddering. "But, Charlie dear, do not distress yourself. I would rather die than do it."

"Or come with me, which would be better than dying," he said, looking up into her face.

She stole her hand gently in his, her shy little hand with the pointed fingers and rose-pink nails like transparent shells.

"A great deal," she said, softly, and for a moment caressed the idea as possible.

That empty purse dangling between them both, as powerful a line of separation as was ever Sigurk's sword, was forgotten, and only the sweet vision of life and love together remained as fair as Geraldine's pale face seen by Surrey in the magic mirror, as delusive as Rose Mary's picture in the beryl stone.

"And you will not, Estelle?" Charlie sank his voice to the softest tones of which spoken music is capable. "With you by my side," he continued, "I could work as I have never worked before, and do great things. It is all this miserable suspense that kills me! The wretched associations to which I am doomed! If I had but you! Ah, Estelle! it is more than one man's life and love that is sacrificed to these criminal arrangements of society. It is the world's great work! Think! I could do something to make my life splendid and my name famous, and you say you will not have it! Estelle, will you not brave everything and come with me? Would you rather see me die of this fever and yourself the wife of Caleb Stagg?"

"Oh, Charlie, how cruel you are!" was all that Estelle could say. Tears were in her voice as well as in her eyes, and Charlie was in the mood when to make the beloved suffer is some kind of balm to one's own pains.

"It seems like it," he returned, again tossing back his hair. "That cad lives in your pocket. All Kingshouse is talking of it, and your mother is offering you to him as if you were a bunch of flowers or a basket of fruit for sale. It is disgusting, it is maddening; and you expect me to stand it! I wonder at myself that I do not put a bullet through the fellow's head. That is what he deserves!"

"But he does not make love to me, Charlie!" said Estelle, earnestly, less moved to this advocacy for care for the truth, or even for the sake of poor Caleb himself, and to defend him against a false imputation, than to give peace to her lover's tortured mind. "He is always most distant and respectful— almost hideously so. He does not make love in any way, by word or look."

"And your mother offers you, as she does, to a fellow who has not even the grace to acknowledge the prize you are!" cried Charlie, his sails filling on the other tack.

"That is better than presumption," said Estelle, softly, and "less disagreeable to me."

"And you can live in such an atmosphere!" cried Charlie. "You know what I suffer, and yet you can support it."

"What can I do, dear?" she asked, in her sweet, gentle way. "I cannot forbid my mother to ask him to the house. It would only make her angry, and do no good! I must just trust to myself, as I have done all along. I will never be false to you, Charlie—never!"

"You swear that!" said Charlie, holding her hands as in a vice.

"Yes, I swear it," she returned.

"By your hopes of salvation you will be true to me, and me only?"

"I will!" she said, her cheeks pale with the very fervor of her vow.

"No one shall ever take you from me?"

"No one! no one!" she repeated.

"Kiss me, Estelle, on this," he said. "You have solemnly vowed yourself to me, remember! You are mine in the sight of God and heaven, and if you deceive me you will commit a great and shameful crime. No man can now call you wife but me, without your perjury—your infidelity too gross to give it a name. Now I hold you mine forever! forever."

"You always have," said Estelle, simply. "Ever since we were boy and girl together I have loved you, Charlie, and you know it. I could not love any one else!"

"Nor I, than you," he answered. "Women think they have all the constancy, but they have not. Men are far more constant than the mass of them, and just as constant as the rest. And it counts far more with us than with you, for we have more temptation."

"Yes," said Estelle, dutifully, and her lover caught the word on his lip, and kept it there with his own.

Talks such as these were the very wine of life to Charlie. He drooped and flagged without them, and felt as if all the forces of God and nature were arrayed against him. When he had had this spell of refreshment he was another man. He knew how much she loved him. For all their lives this love had been the main fact of feeling. It had grown with their growth from childhood up to now, full youth. He had no fear of any one, indeed, but himself. Should he ever be able to keep a wife? Times were bad for art. They always are to the mediocre artist, and he had not yet got his foot securely placed on one of all the rungs of the great ladder of success that he had tried to mount. Should he ever? With a heart that failed him on a climb; with cheeks which flushed a hectic red on small exertion; with that cough which so often tormented him; that fever which so often consumed him? Nevertheless, he loved, and he had the lover's unconscious and imperative selfishness. As now, when he held Estelle to his heart at the parting of the ways, and made her swear again and again, by all her hopes of salvation, that she would be true to him, for time and eternity—true to him as he to her, and that she would never marry any one else, so help her God!—so might God do to her as she to him if ever she forsook him, her own true love!

CHAPTER IX.

IN DOUBT AND DREAD.

Allured by Mrs. Clanricarde, spurred on by his father—who, however, was in a wrong latitude altogether—conscious of the "res angusta" in the home of her he loved, and without present means of his own to help her secretly, as else he would, personally loathed by Estelle, and knowing that he was, while he himself loved her as such a man naturally would love a girl raised above him by origin, and placed within his power to protect by fortune, poor Caleb's sense of general haze and confusion, perplexity and indecision rendered his life at this moment a real tragedy—if we allow that feelings are so tragic as events.

Yet often the flattering thought passed through his brain, like a shooting-star cleaving the dark heavens before his eyes, "I would make her so good a husband; I would so tenderly care for her; so guard her from all pain and trouble. I would worship her and reverence her so deeply that in time she would learn to care for me. And if she could never love me as I love her, she would at least come to peace with herself and forbearance with me. I would love her so that she must in time love me!"

Man ever makes the same mistake, and the loving think that the very gift of love—its very passion and intensity—perforce must win return. Oh, fools and blind! who water the barren rock with your heart's blood, and look for the rare red rose as your reward! As if reluctant love ever was bought, even by love! as if the heart was not its own free gift, and gratitude for an unshared affection but so much snow new-fallen on the ice! Love may burn at the stake and die a beggar for the beloved; it may stand on the pillory and be pelted by the world for consorting with the base-minded and disfavored; it may give its all—faith, home and fame—as freely as our dying hero gave that cup of water to the wounded soldier. But by the force of its own strength only will it gain nothing in return. Can the sun compel the dew, save by the free gift of the generous earth? Does it rise at his bidding from the shores of the Dead Sea, from the sand of the desert, from the marble rocks of Pentelicus? Yet the same glory pours down on these as on that flowerful meadow—that fragrant garden, where the dew lies thick like living jewels—that lavish boon of beauty given out by the earth in voluntary response. So with love. If not spontaneous, it is not to be compelled, and the heart sheds its blood in vain.

(To be continued.)

Use of the Beaver's Tail.

It is a common belief that the beaver uses its tail as a trowel to plaster the mud on the walls of its house and dam. Captain Hardy studied the habits of the animal in Nova Scotia some time ago, and came to the conclusion that this opinion was not well founded.

The vulgar opinion that the broad tail of the beaver was used to plaster down the mud in its work has long since been pronounced erroneous. Its real use is evidently to counterpoise, by an action against the water in an upward direction, the tendency to sink, headforemost, when propelling itself through the water by its powerful and webbed hind feet, and at the same time supporting the load of mud or stones in its forepaws under the chin.

Our Indians laughed at the idea of the trowel story. That, and the assertion that the tail is likewise used as a vehicle for materials, may be considered as exploded notions.—Youth's Companion.

Stone Fruits.

It is the seed that exhausts in fruit production, says American Cultivator. This is especially true of large seeds enclosed in stones. The proportion of seed to the fruit is proportionately greater in the cherry, plum and peach than in the apple or pear. In the development of seeds potash is very essential. Trees that overbear have the growth of their fruit checked at just the point where such development ought to begin. In the grape vine the exhaustion from overbearing causes the vine to mildew and refuse to ripen either fruit or wood. Thinning the bunches early and applying a liberal dose of potash salts are the best preventives of this diseased condition of the vine.

Toronto Free Library.

The expenditure last year on the Toronto Free Library was $32,000. The patronage by readers has immensely increased, and over 275,000 volumes were taken out last year. There are now 53,000 volumes in the library. The Board of Management intend to solicit the corporation of Montreal and other free libraries to join in a petition to the Dominion Government for the removal of the duty on books for free libraries.

Things One Would Rather Have Left Unsaid.

Jones—"Say, old fellah! last night you slapped me on the bwack when you were dwunk and said I was a gwentleman."

De Smith—"Did I, me deah bhoy? Vewy sorry, 'pon me honah. Didn't mean to. What foolish things a dwunken man does say!"

Not Responsible.

Mother—To think that my little Ethel should have spoken so impertinently to papa to-day at dinner! She never hears me talk in that way to him.

Ethel (stoutly)—Well, but you choosed him, and I didn't.

Mr. James Ross, who built some of the most difficult sections of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has taken several contracts with the Chilian Government for the construction of about 700 miles of railway.

The Sleighing Season.

When a little cold would please us,
When we sigh for bracing breezes,
There is nothing more depressing than a January thaw.
When for days and days together
We have miserable weather.
And the rain is dripping, dripping, and the air is damp and raw.

How it makes the pulses tingle
Just to hear the sleigh-bells jingle,
And to see the horses prancing o'er the ice-incrusted snow,
Their finest paces showing,
The drivers' noses glowing,
To hear the merry laughter and the shouts g'lang! and ho!

How it makes the heart to flutter
To be seated in a cutter
With a young and charming damsel—who'd object to be so placed?—
Behind a pair of pacers,
Leading all the other racers,
With one arm the horses guiding and the other round her waist!

Most delicious situation!
Most delightful occupation
There nothing does with greater joy the lover's bosom fill.
But in it there alloy is,
Short-lived indeed the joy is,
For after it is over must be paid the livery bill.

Renovating Run-Out Orchards.

We often meet with an orchard of apparently healthy trees, which is practically fruitless. The owner may tell us that it formerly bore abundant crops, but of late years the trees have "run out." Why have they "run out?" They formerly gave good crops of apples. All the other land on the farm was expected to give but one good crop, but this of the orchard was made to give a crop of grain, or a crop of grass or clover, to be taken off as hay. The soil soon became tired of doing this double duty. The trees "gave out" because they were robbed of food; the first thing they need is feeding. Of course if the soil needs draining, lay the needed tiles at once, or as soon as the soil will allow. Such orchards are usually in grass; draw on a heavy dressing of manure and spread it, and, as soon as the soil is in proper condition, turn over the sod and the manure with the plough; with the hot weather the sod will decay rapidly. When this is found to be well rotted, give another ploughing, and a deep one. If ashes can be had, spread a heavy coating and harrow; in the absence of ashes, harrow in a good dressing of lime. If the trunk and larger branches are covered with loose scales of old bark upon which lichens and mosses have a foot-hold, scrape off the loose bark, using a blunt, short-handled hoe as a scraper. Then in a damp time or thaw wash the trees with soft soap, made thin enough to apply with a brush. Use home-made soft soap, made with lye or potash. That sold at the stores is usually merely hard soap mixed with water and very deficient in strength and quite inferior to home-made. Mix the soap with enough water to work readily, go over the scraped portions with it, and leave the spring rain to finish the work. In due time the bark will be found beautifully smooth and deprived of all foreign growth. The soap that has been washed into the soil will act as a useful fertilizer. Long neglected trees usually require pruning, and this must depend upon the condition of the tree. Never cut out a branch without good reason for it. If the top has become crowded, cut out enough branches to let light and air into the centre; if grown one side, remove the branches needed to restore the balance. If large wounds are made, smooth the surface and paint them over with some dark-colored paint.—American Agriculturist for January.

How Lincoln Signed the Pledge.

We have a pleasant account of Lincoln signing the pledge. A personal friend of Mr. Lincoln told Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer, President of the Chicago Missionary Training School, that Old Uncle John, as he was called, an itinerant temperance lecturer in southern Illinois nearly two generations ago, on one occasion, speaking in an isolated country district, probably in the schoolhouse, offered the temperance pledge, as was his custom, at the close of the meeting; whereupon a tall, lank, awkward youth came forward and affixed his name. Years after, when he had come to great renown, Abraham Lincoln, meeting Uncle John, said to him: "I owe more to you than to almost any one else of whom I can think, for if I had not signed the pledge with you in my years of youthful temptation, I might have gone the way that the majority of my old comrades have gone, which ends in a drunkard's life and a drunkard's grave."

His conduct when receiving notification of his nomination to the presidency is a part of history. A friend, knowing that he never kept wine in his house, and, thinking it an absolute necessity on so great an occasion, had some in readiness to present to the committee who formally notified Lincoln of his nomination. But Mr. Lincoln quietly set it aside and, ordering a pitcher of water and glasses, filled them and passed them to his guests, saying: "We will drink to the fortunes of our party in the best beverage ever brewed for man."—Exchange.

A Coasting Party's Sad Mishap.

A Lawrence, Mass., despatch says: About 8 o'clock last evening William F. Fuller, his wife and three friends, while coasting, ran into a stone wall. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller were severely injured. Mrs. Fuller was taken to the Lawrence Hospital. She is suffering from a compound fracture of the knee and hip, and physicians do not think she will live. Mr. Fuller is in a very critical condition.

A Near Kinship.

Yeast—"Where's your overcoat?" Crimsonbeak—"At my uncle's." "By your uncle's do you mean the pawnbroker's?" "Precisely." "Why do you call him your uncle?" "Because he's a clothes relation of mine."

In his sermon in St. Andrew's Church, Ottawa, yesterday, Principal Grant used the following phrase, which is worth remembering: "The curse of Christ's Church is the sectarian; the curse of the world in general is the partisan."

Sir Fred Middleton deplores the frequent desertions from "A" Battery, and attributes them to low wages, easiness of access to the United States, and the wearying work done in barracks.

Rev. James Macdonald, of Guelph, is searching for his wayward 18-year-old daughter Nellie. She has been heard of in disreputable houses in Detroit, Port Huron nd Flint.

SIR RODERICK'S GIRL.

Amusing Case in which a Former Hamiltonian Figured.

THE BARONET CALLS IT BLACKMAIL.

A New York despatch says: Sir Roderick Cameron, a tall, dignified, austere looking representative of Her Majesty's Dominions, a former well-known resident of Hamilton, Ont., who is now a leading New Yorker, appeared in the Court of Sessions to-day as complainant against Joseph I. Clarke, the manager of a morning newspaper, and Miss Emma Meredith, a former servant of his. He charged them with criminal libel.

The civil suit of Miss Meredith against Sir Roderick for wages, which she claimed, he would not pay her, has already been fully told. The paper complained of in reporting the case said: "The only advances Sir Roderick was ready to make to her, the lady asserts, were advances of a nature she could not mention without a blush."

Assistant District Attorney Gunning S. Bedford and Peter B. Olney were there to lay down the law in the interest of Sir Roderick, while Counsellor Wm. F. Howe and Lawyer Dennis Corcoran were there to protect the defendants.

Mr. Howe held forth long and learnedly regarding what did and did not constitute libel in the meaning of the statute, and closed by stating that for Sir Roderick's sake he wished the case dismissed. He said he did not want to subject the venerable gentleman to a "most painful" and "excruciating" cross-examination.

Sir Roderick smiled grimly at Mr. Howe's excessive concern for him, and Justice Kilbreth denied the motion to dismiss.

The complainant then took the witness chair, and Counsellor Howe began to bombard him with questions that soon made him exhibit signs of wrath and perturbation.

"You brought Miss Meredith to this country from England on the steamer Republic in November last to act as schoolroom companion to your youngest daughters, did you not, Mr. Cameron?" inquired Mr. Howe. The witness replied that he did. In answer to further questions he denied that he had ever treated her except with respect, and any assertions to the contrary were absolutely false.

Miss Meredith, who is tall, finely formed and was becomingly dressed, took Sir Roderick's place in the witness chair. She has large gray eyes, full red lips and cheeks and very regular features. Her eyebrows are beautifully curved and her hair is cropped close and inclined to curl.

SIR RODERICK IN TROUSERS AND SHIRT.

In answer to questions she said that on the night of Jan. 3rd, about 8 o'clock, she finished dressing Sir Roderick's daughter Isabella in the dressing-room. It was adjoing his bedroom, and had a door leading from it into Sir Roderick's place of rest. Shortly after the daughter had left the room Sir Roderick came in clad in his trousers and shirt, caught her by the arm and attempted to force her into his apartment. She broke away from him, after telling him "never to dare speak to her again," and ascended to her own room.

Mr. Bedford cross-examined Miss Meredith. She said that after she went to her room Miss Thomas, a maid in the house, came in and to her she "made light" of Sir Roderick's action. She acknowledged that she told the maid Sir Roderick had "flattered her" that evening. He had said she had "very pretty hair."

"When was the first time he (Sir Roderick) made advances toward you?"

"On the steamer Republic, on the way over, when we were about three days at sea. He put his arm around me and expressed sorrow that I was sick."

"The weather was very boisterous, was it not?"

"Yes, it was boisterous all the way over. (Much laughter.) Miss Meredith was asked to describe in detail the alleged gallantries, and after a wrangle between the lawyers and the refusal of Judge Kilbreth to hear them in private, did so in a low voice and with blushing cheeks.

Miss Thomas, a tall, spare woman, took the stand and related how Miss Meredith had laughingly told her on the night of Jan. 3rd how Sir Roderick had complimented her on the appearance of her hair. She was with the family abroad and came home with them on the Republic.

"Did you not," asked Mr. Howe, "tell Miss Meredith shortly after she was hired in London that if Sir Roderick made any advances toward her to be firm?"

"No-o-o, no, sir," stammered the witness. "I made no such remark in regard to Sir Roderick. I might have cautioned her in that way against the male sex in general."

MISS MEREDITH COMPLIMENTED.

Roderick McLeod Cameron, a son of Sir Roderick, swore that on the night of January 3rd, just about the time Miss Meredith says his father appeared before her in trousers and shirt, he came into the drawing room dressed as usual, and said to his daughters: "I have just complimented Miss Meredith on the way she does her hair up. You girls should take lessons from her."

James Lenon next recounted how he and another man met Miss Meredith with Sir Roderick's butler, Mr. Milton, in Patrick D. Eagan's saloon, on Clinton place, where she recited her grievances at great length.

The case was adjourned until Tuesday afternoon next.

Sir Roderick came over to the reporter's table and said he would like publication of the case held over until Butler Milton had testified. He claimed there was an organized attempt to extort money from him.

"I deny everything Miss Meredith has said," said he.

A New York despatch of to-day's date says: The jury in the case of Mary Meridith against Sir Roderick Cameron, the millionaire Australian merchant, living in this city, for three months' wages as children's maid, found a verdict yesterday in favor of Miss Meridith. Sir Roderick had refused the payment on the ground that Miss Meridith had broken a contract to remain a year in his service. During the trial the plaintiff charged defendant with attempting to treat her improperly.

"Mark Twain" lost his hat and coat at a recent ball in Connecticut, and was obliged to drive home with no protection from the cold save that afforded by his luxurious locks. He kept himself warm by cracking jokes.

AT A VANDERBILT BALL.

Where Affluence and Extravagance Met Hand-in-Hand.

A New York despatch, referring to the great ball at the residence of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Fifth avenue, on Monday night, says: As the great oaken doors incessantly swing on their hinges warm draughts of air sweetly perfumed with flowers floated out to revive the waifs and strays assembled to peer from darkness into light. The wild melody of the Hungarian Band and the more measured strains of Lander alternately set the tramps' cold feet in motion. Footmen in livery directed the initiated to the various dressing rooms. The men turned to the left, entered a small room with walls and ceiling of carved ebony, passed down a staircase of the same lustrous wood and entered the big billiard room, with the basement library adjoining, where they stowed away their coats and hats and settled their ties and back hair. The ladies mounted six steps with palms on either side, passed under a portiere that suggested the palace of Alladin and entered the large hall. The caryatides on either side of the carved mantel supported orchids in white tipped with pink, and a row of what seemed to be illuminated roses, but were lily shaped electric globes of pink, each one encased in a bit of pale pink silk. In the great fireplace were masses of brilliant red poinsetta, geranium and African orchids, as though a perfumed fire without heat, with a bank of primroses for a back log. Mrs. Vanderbilt, looking thoroughly radiant and beautiful in a French gown of tulle over satin, received the guests in Lovis XVI. drawing-room, where the flowers were entirely lilies of the valley, in keeping with the white and gold walls and furnishings. In the red drawing-room adjoining was a stand of smilax, cedar and ferns, covered with rare cabataya, orchids, and here Lander and fifteen musicians played all evening, and scattered about were great vases filled with rare pink buds, American beauties and magna chartas. Across the hall, in the big picture gallery, the conservatory, music room and Turkish room were set small tables, each lit by crimson shaded candles, and in these apartments at 1 o'clock a delicious supper was served. It was half-past 11 before Johnston had opened a half dozen carriage doors, but at midnight three hundred guests were dancing in the hall and two drawing-rooms. All the women wore new gowns, and diamonds were as plentiful as dewdrops on May grass. The young married women were radiant in Directoire gowns of brocade and fine lace, and the maidens in tulles and gauzes shot with gold or silver tinsel and girdled by silken sashes on many colors.

IRISHMEN IN JAIL.

O'Brien's Rough Treatment by Warders—Other M. P.s Sentenced.

A Dublin cable says: Mr. Wm. O'Brien was yesterday lodged in Clonmel jail, to undergo the sentence of four months' imprisonment imposed on him. When ordered to remove his clothing and don the prison garb he refused, whereupon he was seized by the warders and his clothing was forcibly removed. His beard was then shaved off. He made a desperate resistance, and was exhausted by the struggle. His prostration was so severe that a priest was summoned.

The Nationalists are greatly agitated over the treatment of Mr. William O'Brien. It is stated that he was severely injured in the body during the struggle with the jail warders, and that he is still much prostrated. He wears only a shirt, refusing to put on the prison garb.

Messrs. John O'Connor and Thos. Condon, members of Parliament for Tipperary, were yesterday sentenced to imprisoment for four months without hard labor, for inciting tenants not to pay rent. They appealed.

Ontario Spring Assizes, 1889.

ARMOUR, C. J.

Stratford	Tuesday, 12th March
Guelph	Tuesday, 19th March
Berlin	Tuesday, 26th March
Brantford	Wednesday, 3rd April
Simcoe	Monday, 8th April
Cayuga	Thursday, 11th April
Welland	Monday, 15th April
Hamilton	Tuesday, 23rd April

ROSE, J.

Milton	Monday, 11th March
Brampton	Thursday, 14th March
Orangeville	Monday, 29th April
St. Catharines	Monday, 6th May

ROSE, J.

Toronto, Criminal Court	Monday, 18th March
Toronto, Civil Court	Monday, 15th April

FALCONBRIDGE, J.

Cornwall	Tuesday, 12th March
Whitby	Monday, 18th March
Napanee	Monday, 25th March
Kingston	Monday, 1st April
Brockville	Tuesday, 9th April
Picton	Tuesday, 16th April
Belleville	Monday, 22nd April
Cobourg	Monday, 6th May

STREET, J.

Walkerton	Tuesday, 12th March
Goderich	Tuesday, 19th March
Sarnia	Tuesday, 26th March
St. Thomas	Monday, 1st April
Chatham	Monday, 8th April
Sandwich	Wednesday, 17th April
Woodstock	Wednesday, 24th April
London	Monday, 6th May

MACMAHON, J.

Ottawa	Tuesday, 12th March
L'Orignal	Monday, 25th March
Perth	Thursday, 28th March
Pembroke	Tuesday, 2nd April
Barrie	Monday, 8th April
Peterboro'	Monday, 22nd April
Lindsay	Monday, 29th April
Owen Sound	Monday, 6th May

Chancery Spring Sittings, 1889.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE ROBERTSON

Toronto, Monday, 8th April.

THE CHANCELLOR.

Chatham, Wednesday, 6th March.
Sandwich, Tuesday, 12th March.
London, Monday, 18th March.
Walkerton, Thursday, 11th April.
Goderich, Wednesday, 17th April.
Sarnia, Thursday, 25th April.
St. Thomas, Wednesday, 1st May.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE PROUDFOOT.

Brantford, Wednesday, 6th March.
Simcoe, Wednesday, 13th March.
Owen Sound, Monday, 1st April.
Hamilton, Monday, 20th May.
Guelph, Thursday, 30th May.
St. Catharines, Thursday, 6th June.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE FERGUSON.

Belleville, Thursday, 21st March.
Cornwall, Monday, 15th April.
Ottawa, Monday, 22nd April.
Kingston, Wednesday, 22nd May.
Brockville, Tuesday, 24th May.
Cobourg, Thursday, 6th June.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE ROBERTSON.

Lindsay, Monday, 11th March.
Peterboro', Friday, 15th March.
Woodstock, Wednesday, 20th March.
Stratford, Wednesday, 3rd April.
Whitby, Tuesday, 7th May.
Barrie, Monday, 13th May.

GOSSIP CRAZED HER.

Sad Sequel to a Beautiful Hungarian Girl's Wedding in Philadelphia.

A Philadelphia despatch says: Maria Behr, a beautiful Hungarian girl, was found wandering about the streets here on Saturday night, insane and scantily clad. On Sunday, January 27th, a young couple visited the parsonage of the Rev. J. N. Gerlach, of the German Lutheran Church, at Trenton, N.J. They were John Sabol, 22 years old, and Maria Behr, who came to be married. Witnesses were present, and after they had answered the necessary questions the ceremony was performed. As the story runs, no sooner was Miss Behr the wife of Sabol than the tongues of the gossips began to wag, and the young bride was the object of their talk. It was stated when she embarked from Europe to this country she kissed a faithful husband good-bye, and that husband number one is still alive. The stories told reached the young woman's ears and well-nigh prostrated her. Some say Sabol heard the rumors first, and that when he asked for an explanation she confessed her guilt, begging him to forgive her. In burning and passionate words she declared her love for him, but he lent no ear to her pleadings and it was then, these people say, she threw a white shawl over her head, and, seeking the streets, fled like an apparition through them. Another version of the affair is that the story of her marriage in the old country is a cruel falsehood. In this version it is stated that she made no confession, but unable to bear the reports circulated, decided to leave the city. The girl is now in the hospital here, suffering from marked dementia. She imagines she hears her mother calling her back to the old homestead in Germany, while at night she runs screaming about, believing she is pursued by the evil one. At other times she sits for hours and sings sweet home-songs, while holding the photograph of her mother to her breast.

MADE RICH IN 30 MINUTES.

Two Brothers Strike a $100,000 Mine by Digging Down Two Feet.

S. R. Roger and his brother left their homes near Hastings, Mich., about four years ago and went to Breckinridge, Col., where they worked in a stamp mill. They got possession of two claims, the "Iron Mask" and the "Kewanee," and worked them during spare hours, putting considerable time and money into them. The claims had been worked previously for six years by an old miner, who failed to find paying ore. Roger recently put a man in the lower one and went to work himself. In less than half an hour, after digging about two feet, he struck gold and silver bearing carbonate of silver, said to be the most valuable and easily worked in the State. The vein was followed to the surface, when it was found that all the previous year's work had been within eighteen inches of the vein. The Roger Brothers have been offered $100,000 for two mines, but want $200,000. Within a week after this find 5,000 men were on the spot, establishing claims, but the Rogers have secured many of the most desirable. The mine is on the east side of the mountain, and the snow necessitates keeping it roofed over.—Chicago Tribune.

Warning to Gum Chewers.

A special despatch to the Boston Herald from Harrisburg, Pa., says: The most remarkable case that has come under the observation of the medical fraternity in this city for a long time is that of Mary Yountz, aged 12 years, who is suffering from facial paralysis. This affliction is due to chewing gum, she having employed the use of her jaws so constantly during the last three months that the muscles of her face are powerless, and her nerves are in a dilapidated condition. When she laughs her face presents an amusing sight, and yet there is much sympathy felt for the little miss here, as her condition is regarded as a serious one by the physicians who have been called upon to treat her. In whatever position she is able to twist her mouth the muscles remain, and the face is thus in a distorted shape until one of the members of her family assist her to place it in proper condition with their hands. Her chin drops, and it frequently becomes necessary to tie a bandage over her head to keep the lower jaw in its proper place. Mary is now under the care of Dr. Hiles, who is applying plasters to her face, and under this treatment she seems to be improving, but very slowly. This is the first case of the kind that has been heard of by many of the prominent physicians in this city, and their treatment is much in the order of an experiment. The physicians have been attending her since Tuesday.

Domestic Animals in Ireland.

It appears from the official statistics that last year there were 557,405 horses in Ireland, which was an increase of 8,201 as compared with 1886. There were 199,512 asses, being an increase of 3,267, and 29,829 mules, as against 29,195. There was a decrease of 26,520 in the number of cattle, but the increase in pigs and sheep was 145,314 and 11,783 respectively. There were 27,172 goats, being an increase of 5,553, and there was an increase of upward of 550,000 in the number of poultry.—London Truth.

Lack of Confidence.

"Well, Dr. Goodman," said the happy bridegroom, after he had paid the minister for his services, "this sort of thing is a good deal of a lottery. What is your idea of the question, is marriage a success?"

"Well," replied Dr. Goodman, fingering a two-dollar bill, "I haven't given the question very much thought; but you don't seem to have very much confidence in it yourself."

Marriage a Failure.

Mrs. Gabb—"Do you consider marriage a failure?"

Mrs. Gadd—"Indeed, it is. I married a man who always pays cash and hasn't a cent of credit anywhere."

The warehouse owned by Gunn & Co., of Ailsa Craig, was entered some time during Wednesday night and six of the smallest and finest dressed hogs stored therein were stolen. There is no clue to the thieves, excepting the track of a light waggon, the marks of which can be seen for quite a distance, leading in an easterly direction. This is the second time this firm has had hogs stolen from its warehouse.

THE FASCINATION OF AFRICA.

Explorers Have Been Loth to Leave the Strangely Attractive Country.

Now that Stanley has been heard from, the question that has before been agitated again presents itself. Is there some peculiar fascination about Africa which attracts travellers to remain there? All data would seem to corroborate the assertion. The Portuguese who settled in Africa nearly all remained. Speke, Grant and other explorers found great attractions in the way of climate and scenery, especially in Equatorial Africa. Stanley has always been ready to make additional explorations and has no fear of the deadly influences of climate, about which so much was written in former times. The more the interior of Africa is made known to the outside world the better it appears. It cannot be an undesirable country as to those parts where white men have spent many years, and to which they are so much attached that they have no desire to leave, even when their friends send costly expeditions to bring them home. Emin Bey never wanted to leave Africa. His province was watered by the White Nile and by the Albert Nyanza Lake, and the territory over which he appears to have undisputed sway is larger than Great Britain. Africa has a fascination to those who are not killed by the climate, and on all the table lands of the equatorial regions the climate is described as favorable to life and health. Livingstone never wanted to leave Africa. He refused to go when Stanley found him, and in fact, never did leave the country until his body was borne out, packed like a bale of merchandise. He contracted the disease that carried him off in the lowland country. In fact, many of his explorations were conducted with little regard to climatic influences. According to Stanley's latest letter he is in good health and these climatic influences seem to have had no deleterious effect upon him and his companions. It may be, after all, that the fascination of Africa has grown upon him.

Mild Winters in the Past.

1838-1839—A very mild winter; only three or four cold days, and no sleighing.

1840—Dec. 14th, 15th and 16th very mild days; flowers starting.

1849-1850—A mild winter; robins remained all winter.

1857-1858—Mild winter. Dec. 24th, 1857, a dandelion in bloom was picked at Weir village, Jan 28th, 1858, buds on the cherry trees swelling.

1860—Dec. 27th, mercury is 61° above to-day.

1866—Dec. 8th, a full blown rose was picked in Connecticut to-day.

1868-1869—A very mild winter.

1869-1870—A remarkably mild winter. Dec. 8th, tree and shrubbery in bud and grass green as in May. All through the month of January dustmen swept the streets of Boston and New York; on the 10th, in Olympia, Washington territory, twenty-two varieties of flowers were picked in the open air; farmers ploughed in Massachusetts, violets bloomed in New England and peas were two inches above ground on Long Island. In this city buds of the arbutus and pansies in bloom were picked on Jan. 28th. The month was 8° warmer than for forty-six years. On Feb. 5th, the pussy-willow blossomed in Connecticut, and in Norwich the same day the buds of the magnolia were an inch long, and Japan quinces were opening their buds. On the 16th a rose bush full of buds was seen at Easton, Pa.; a dahlia in full bloom at Scranton; dandelions at Easton and grasshoppers at Bethlehem. On the 20th at Providence the chickweed, snowdrop and violets were in bud or blossom. March 1st brought early radishes to the market at Alton, Ill.

1875-1876—Mild winter. On January 1st the thermometer was 76° above in the city, and on Feb. 8th buds were swelling.

1877-1878—Very mild winter. December 28th, 1878, trees and shrubs budded, and dandelions were in bloom in many places. January 16th, ground unfrozen, bluebirds and robins singing, and grass green as in April. February 28th, crocuses in bloom. December 26th, 1877, ten dandelions picked on Boston Common. On the 27th trailing arbutus in bloom found at Portsmouth, and dandelions in blossom; apple and cherry trees, rose and lilac bushes budded at Fitchburg. On the 29th, dandelions and pansies in bloom; 13 full blown pansies were picked at Wilkinsonville, and January 1st, four more. On December 31st, a rose bush in New Bedford was in full bloom. On January 12th a full blown pansy was picked at New Bedford, and at New London, Conn., a man picked a quart of ripe strawberries from his vines.

1879-1880—A mild winter. December 18th, 1879, dandelions in full bloom found at Westerly, R. I. On January 5th, 1880, bluebirds were singing in Stratford and grasshoppers were seen in New Haven; 12th, grasshoppers seen, buds swelling, farmers ploughing at Ashaway, R. I.; 16th, arbutus in bloom picked in Falmouth, Mass., and bluebirds, robins, larks and woodpeckers seen in Windham, Me., and leaf buds of the honeysuckle grew half an inch; 26th, violets and dandelions in bloom at Newport, and on the 28th grass growing, farmers ploughing in Warren, R. I., and grasshoppers seen in Westport, Mass. February 17th, snowdrops in bloom in Boston Highlands, and on the 26th crocuses in bloom at Salem, Mass.—Taunton Gazette.

The Princess Louise as a Sculptor.

The statue which the Princess Louise is at work on, and which is to be erected in Kensington Gardens, between the Palace and the Round Pond, as a Jubilee memorial, will represent Her Majesty as she appeared on that morning in June, 1837, when it was announced to her that she was Queen of England. The Princess Victoria on this occasion appeared in her night garment, with a shawl loosely thrown over her shoulders, and in this costume she appears in Sir George Hayter's well-known picture.

Two hours after Edward Horner, of Chicago, had married Nellie Spencer, he asked her if she liked lobsters. She said she didn't, and they had a discussion which resulted in blows and a separation.

A true bill has been found by the Grand Jury against Roland G. I. Barnett, charged with fraudulent transactions in connection with the Central Bank.

The contract for the building of the new Upper Canada College has been let.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Street, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

ARE YOU IN DEBT?

We ask the question seriously. On our books are a large number of small accounts that aggregate a good many dollars. If you owe the ENTERPRISE $1 or more we invite a prompt settlement. If you have not received your account, ask for it, if you have received it, we ask an early response. During the last few weeks a number of accounts have been sent out, and during the next few weeks we will send out many more. We dislike dunning, but accounts that have remained open some time must be setttled.

The Dutton Enterprise.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1889.

The Conservatives of Haldimand have met, decided that Mr. Colter's election was irregular, and have put up the stuff to contest it. Mr. Colter, however, will have his innings in the seat for this session at least, allowing Montague to have his fun next session.

Germany can afford to spend sixty millions of marks in a few military experiments, but cannot afford to pay for the release of the German missionaries who are held by the African savages for ransom. In the eyes of Bismarck the cannon is mightier than the sword of the Spirit.

One of the New York strikers—or a sympathiser with the strike—has been shot dead. He attacked a car in which were several passengers, and a policeman, in self-defence. killed him. It was an extreme measure, but the lesson that law and order are supreme must be enforced at all hazards.

The New York World put the Cornell School of Journalism to a test a few days ago, and, as was expected, it was an utter failure. Journalists are born, not made, and no amount of theoretical learning will fit persons to occupy any position in newspaper life without a good, sound, practical education.

The projectors of a bridge over the Detroit River are meeting with success, and it is altogether probable that before many years elapse it will be an accomplished fact. The principal objectors—in fact, the only ones—are the ship owners and rival cities, and it is not believed they can prevail in the end.

The brainless individual who circulated the report that there was a case of smallpox in Dutton should hang himself up until he sobers off. It is said that a commercial traveller who failed te make a sale here was the originator of the rumor, and there is no doubt it was done with the intention of injuring the town. The fact that there is no sickness in town at present makes the report all the more nonsensical.

Mr. Clarke Wallace has introduced a bill into Parliament for the suppression of combines, but the wealthy men who form rings for raising the prices of the necessaries of life will, no doubt, bring such heavy pressure upon the members as to prevent its passing. It is about time that the poor man had some show, for what with low wages, scarcity of work, and high prices for clothing, provisions, fuel, etc., his lot is a hard one indeed, and those who form combines to force up the prices of articles of every day need are doing their best to make it harder for him.

RAMBLER WANTS TO KNOW.

Who will be the first to call a public meeting to discuss incorporation?

Why boys are allowed to run hand sleighs on the sidewalks?

When the sidewalks will be kept entirely free from obstructions?

Who got left at the rink Saturday night?

Why the High School Literary Society has decided to discontinue its meetings.?

Who it was that claimed to be Rambler, but does not know anything about it?

Who ate the most oysters Friday night?

Where all the gossip comes from, and who comes in for the biggest share of it?

How many unlucky pedestrians tumbled on the sidewalks during the past week?

What time the boys got home from Lawrence Friday night?

Who sat down the heaviest Thursday night?

Who will find out who Rambler is first?

How many freshies got salted Friday night?

TWA AULD CRONIES.

Weel, Tonald, and hoo are ye the nicht. As I was passing by I thocht I wad drop in an' see hoo ye were keepin' yoursel' these cauld nichts, an' besides I wad speir ye hoo ye likit the new meenister we hae gotten in our kirk.

Noo, Sandy, fill up your pipe an' sit ye doon by the hearthstane an' we will hae a quiet crack aboot kirk affairs. Ye ken we hae had an unco' hard time o' it to get a meenister at all, but ye ken a' things wark thegither for the best, an' the ane we hae noo, though he is no vera auld yet, I dinna think can be beaten by ony in these pairts.

Richt ye are, Tonald, he is a fine mon, and na doubt will build up a grand congregation here. Ye ken the kirk will scarce hauld a' the folk that come to hear him noo. But what think ye o' the idea o' takin' sic unco' queer subjects for his Sabbath evening sermons, Tonald? I maun confess I no like the notion mysel'.

Weel, Sandy, I micht say I no likit it at first, but ye ken he preaches good, commonsense gospel sermons, and ye canna tell hoo much good may be done by them. But do ye no think it is a grand way he has o' getting the folk to stand up when singing and sitting them doon after the benediction is pronounced?

Aye that it is, Sandy, an' though I canna say I like a' the new ways I trust he may please a' the kirk folk as weel as me. But I maun gang awa hame noo, as it is vera late, and Janet will no like it should I stay ony later.

Weel, Sandy, if ye maun leave I will no keep ye, but I wanted ta speir ye on mony ither subjects, amang them the state o' oor Methody an' Baptist friens, an' the new editor o' the ENTERPRISE, but ca' again next Saturday e'en an' hae anither crack by oor ingleside.

Richt gladly will I come, Tonald, but dinna let a word o' all this slip oot, for I diuna think oor meenister wad like it o'er weel did he ken we talkit aboot him in sic a manner.

Weel, Mr. Editor, I thought I wad like ta see oor bit talk in print, so I e'en wrote it doon, thinking ye micht find a corner for it in your paper, but diuna breathe a word ta Sandy aboot it.

TONALD.

Minds.

Your mind is your world.

Noble minds are humble in prosperity.

"Great minds grow haughty in distress." The haughtiness may be a manifestation of their greatness and the soul's protest against subjection.

Be polite to mean people and they'll think that you are afraid of them.

Bullets and bayonets are the arguments which convince the vulgar.

Never try to conciliate a mean person or he'll put his foot on you.

Small men seek notoriety and public applause.

"Vox populi, vox dei" on political questions, but on moral subjects the voice of the people is not "God's voice."

Self-poised moralists are few.

The world crucifies its saviours and worships its destroyers.

A truth may be converted into a lie by the way it is accepted.

Blessings become curses if not rightly used.

A fallen angel is the worst devil.

It is folly to lament an evil done, but it is wisdom to resolve to do better.

"Sins" forgotten are blotted out. "Let the dead bury their dead."

If you want to be suspected be suspicious.

When I "feel good" my friends shake hands with me, but when I don't they are looking the other way.

A bright view of the future makes the dark present bearable.

CHOW-CHOW.

IN BETTER HUMOR NOW.—"My son, aged eleven, was cured of an eruptive humor that covered his face and hands with sores by two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and Pills," testifies Mrs. Mary Fulford, of Port Hope, Ont.

Mrs. De Temper—What does this quotation from Victor Hugo in this book mean? "Woman is a perfected devil." Mr. De Temper—Oh, I suppose the word "perfected" is a mis-print for "perfect."

A GREAT SUFFERER.—That person who is afflicted with rheumatism is a great sufferer and greatly to be pitied if they cannot procure Hagyard's Yellow Oil. This remedy is a certain cure, not only for rheumatism, but for all external aches and all internal pains.

MIRACULOUS.—"My miraculous cure was that I suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off workall that time. A friend told me of B.B.B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

"There, my daughter," said the old man, as he took a torn-looking check from his pocketbook, "there is my wedding present—a check for $20,000. God bless you!" "Oh, thank you, papa, you are very kind and generous (examining the check); but isn't this the same check you gave sister Ella when she was married.

Small sugar-coated Burdock Pills do not gripe or sicken. They are mild and effectual.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of cutting teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the best female physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. 7-26

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR

Keeps constantly on hand a well assorted stock of

ENGLISH, IRISH, SCOTCH AND CANADIAN TWEEDS

Which we make to order in the latest style.

Special Bargains in Suitings and Overcoatings for the next 30 days to make room for Spring Importations. Prices moderate.

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR, DUTTON.

GOOD NEWS!

DUTTON'S NEW PUMP.

J. H. MARSH, Manufacturer, is now prepared to furnish his new pump on short notice in 11 sizes, from AA 8x8. 8 ft long, to No. 9 5x5, 6 ft long. All other sizes made to order. All kinds of Farm Implements. Wheelbarrows kept in stock.

PLOWS & REPAIRS A SPECIALTY.

FARMERS, MILLERS AND ENGINE OWNERS.

I AM now introducing the newest invention of the day, a Grinder that will grind small grains or corn with the husk on without having to stop the engine to change. The plates are self-sharpening and the machine is so constructed that if a piece of iron should get into it it would be pushed down through the safety bottom without danger of breaking. One can be seen running in the grist mill at Essex Centre. Railway fare will be deducted from price of the Grinder to those coming from a distance to see it work, on placing their order. I will be at the Royal Hotel, Essex Centre, every Saturday. Circular sent on application.

J. G. SLOANE, North Ridge, Ont.

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

One hundred acres, being the North half of Lot 7, 2nd Con., Dunwich; 85 acres cleared. Good orchard, frame house, barn and stable. Also the job of clearing and fencing 50 or 100 acres on lot 6, 5th con., north of con. A, Dunwich. For further particulars apply to JOHN C. MCRAE, Dutton. 2-14

NEW SAWMILL

—IN—

DUTTON.

Having placed a Sawmill south of the railway, between the Currie Road and Humpidge & Graham's Stave Factory, in Dutton, I am now prepared to do all kinds Custom Sawing, and solicit patronage from all who want satisfactory work. Lumber handled with care and not split or otherwise damaged while about the mill.

Sawing done at $3 per 1,000, on shares, or lumber taken in exchange.

A quantity of Ash, Hickory and Oak Logs wanted.

D. McKEE.

Dutton, Jan. 24, 1889—4

NOTICE TO THE CREDITORS OF ROBERT McBLAIN, DECEASED.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, IN Pursuance of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, Chap. 110, Sec. 36, that all creditors having claims against the estate of Robert McBlain, deceased, late of the city of London, in Ontario, life insurance agent, who died on or about the 18th day of January, A. D., 1889, are required to send by post, prepaid, or to deliver to George Van Tuyl, of the said city of London—one of the executors of the said Robert McBlain, deceased—on or before the 28th day of February, 1889, their names and addresses and description of their claims duly verified and the securities (if any) held by them. And that after the said date the executors of the said Robert McBlain will proceed to distribute the assets of the said Robert McBlain, deceased, among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which notice has been given as above required. And the said executors will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any person or persons of whose claims notice shall not have been received duly verified by said executor at the time of such distribution.

Dated this 31st day of January, A. D., 1889.

ALBERT O. JEFFERY,
2-21-ph Solicitor for the Executors.

FOR SALE.

THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.

Apply to

D. McINTYRE, Dutton,

or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.

March 21, 1889, tf

THE BEST IS

THE CHEAPEST

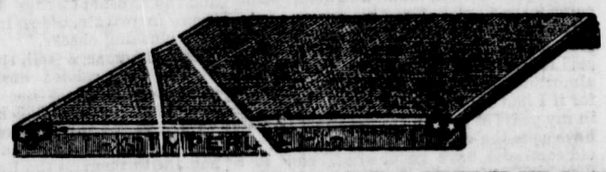
DUTTON HARNESS SHOP.

The undersigned would call the attention of the public to his superior stock of TEAM, CARRIAGE AND SINGLE HARNESS, manufactured out of the best stock of Hemlock and genuine American Oak Tanned Leather. Our specialties are

CARRIAGE AND SINGLE HARNESS

Which for quality, finish, and general workmanship cannot be excelled. A large stock of hair-faced Collars always on hand, and everything pertaining to the trade usually kept in a first-class Harness Shop. Collars and all other work guaranteed to be as represented.

D. McMILLAN.



AT COST! AT COST!

Having purchased the entire Stock of Furniture of A.C. Graham, we will sell the same at cost for the NEXT THIRTY DAYS.

Come one and all and secure some of the grandest bargains ever heard of in Dutton.

Don't fail to secure some of the

BARGAINS IN MATTRESSES.

We have a large stock of the best makes in the market to-day.

In Furniture we take the lead. Our stock of

Parlor Suites, Bed-room Suites,

Side-boards, Tables, Chairs, Sofas, &c.

Must be cleared out at once to make room. Call and see us and secure some of the grand bargains we are offering.

UNDERTAKING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

A full stock of Coffins, Caskets, Shrouds, etc., kept constantly on hand A first-class Hearse furnished at all funerals. Embalming a specialty. Orders filled night or day.

B. J. SCHULTZ & CO., DUTTON.

West Elgin Farmer's Institute.

A meeting of the above organization was held in the hall at Shedden, on Friday, 8th February. The members were rather slow in coming, and when the President, Mr. Jas. Beaty, called the meeting to order at 1.40 p. m. there were only a few present. Before the close, however, the hall was comfortably filled.

The Secretary, Mr. D. Black, being absent, J. D. Blue was appointed to fill his place, after which the minutes of the last meeting, held at Rodney, were read and approved.

The first subject taken up was "The advisability of doing away with Township Shows and Statute Labor." Mr. Jabel Robinson, in opening the discussion on township shows, stated that a great deal of good had been done by them in the past in the way of distributing thoroughbred stock among the farmers, bringing their stock up to a better standard, and that part of their work suited admirably, but the showing of articles for prizes he thought was not just the thing, as a man would do his best to raise the biggest pumpkin in the county and then take it to a township show, losing a day thereby, and perhaps get a small prize. He was favorable to agricultural fairs, but thought that township shows were not necessary, and advocated county or riding shows instead, as they did the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people. In regard to statute labor, he said that it would be well to do away with it in places where the principal work consisted in sitting on the fence and cutting up their neighbors' reputations, but that was not the case in his neighborhood. He thought we are not prepared to do away with statute labor, but he recommended that it be better looked after than at present, especially in the matter of drawing gravel, and have pathmasters who would see to it that gravel boxes were the proper size, and do their duty without partiality. He also thought that the time of year given for statute labor at present was the worst possible time, and advocated the changing of it. While talking on the subject of commissioners a lively discussion took place by different ones present, during which their working was pretty well ventilated. In conclusion, Mr. Robinson said he was in favor of abolishing township shows and retaining statute labor as at present.

Mr. Galbraith was next called upon, and said a few words in support of Mr. Robinson's speech. His remarks were necessarily brief, not having had time to give much thought to the question.

Dr. Cascaden said that in regard to township shows he agreed with the previous speakers, especially in regard to the improvement of stock. He thought that the appropriations could be better applied to county shows, and that they were sufficient for all purposes. He differed with them on the question of statute labor, however, remarking that the present system was a waste of money, as every one would do the work in front of his own property instead of where it was most needed. He believed that the commutation statute labor money, together with the appropriations, could be used to far better advantage than the present system. Gravel could be hauled in the winter and any man with his his team could easily make up the amount paid in commuitation money. He was in favor of the total abolition of statute labor on the grounds of economy, efficiency, and of having an able and good man to handle the work. A voice—"What would be the cost of a good man." The Dr. replied that it would be about $200 for the season, or about one-third the present amount of commissioners' fees in the township.

Mr. Patterson wanted to know what all the crying against statute labor was about anyway, when really no grievence could be shown. He thought that the office of commissioner would be as great a bone of contention as government offices and that it would be a fat place for some one who did not understand his business. He was in favor of doing away with spring shows.

Mr. D. Turner, reeve of Southwold, said that the council wanted to hear the subject discussed before doing away with statute labor. He believed the system should be abolished, giving older countries as examples. He would have road divisions the same as at present, but twice as large, and have the commutation money and appropriations go back to each road division, leaving it to the judgment of the pathmasters to have it properly expended. He held that it statute labor was commuted at 75c. per day more work could be done with the money than by the present system of statute labor. While Mr. Turner was speaking considerable discussion took on the question of the best means of securing the statute labor to be done by young men in the villages. The opinion seemed to be that it should be placed on the collector's roll to make it sure.

Mr. McNabb said in favor of township shows that they should be kept until the breeds of horses, cattle and sheep were perfect, and they were a long way from that at present. County shows would not take the place of township shows, for the reason that all animals shown at large fairs are fed from one year's end to the other for the special purpose of competing for the stock prizes, and small farmers could not stand any chance against such stock. If the appropriations were all given to the county fairs it would be putting it into the hands of professional breeders, to the exclusion of farmers. He was in favor of retaining the present system of statute labor.

The President asked that the discussion be now closed, as the time was short and other subjects were to be brought up, and it was moved by Dr. Cascaden, seconded J. Robinson, that in the opinion of this meeting township shows should be abolished. Lost.

Moved by Jabel Robinson, seconded by Walter Travis, that the present system of statute labor should be retained. Carried.

Mr. R. R. Cranston then read an excellent essay on "Does Dairying Pay," of which the following is a summary:

Among the various branches of Canadian agricultural there are none that have been so fully developed during the past few years as those of dairying and cattle raising. That the raising and feeding of beef cattle during the past few years has been a profitable branch of Canadian farming, and in some instances largely so, is universally admitted. But the number of those who have made a direct profit in beef production, after allowing market value for all feed consumed from birth of animal until ready for consumer, I am bound to state is limited to a very few instances indeed. On the other hand, taking the returns to the dairymen during the past ten or fifteen years, or even longer, in these localities where the dairying industry has been a specialty in farming operations we as confidently assert that there are very few dairymen who have not realized a direct profit over and above the value of feed consumed. Yes, even more actual profit than what has been realized from any other branch of their farming operations, and the strongest possible evidence of this is that where the dairy interest was first cradled it is not only followed as the leading agricultural industry to-day, but is obtaining a firmer foothold from year to year. My experience has been that cheese, for periods of ten years, fluctuates less in price than any other farm produce. Now to accomplish this, you must not have only good cows, but they must be well fed and properly cared for. That is one of the difficulties of managing a cheese factory. Those who do not feed or care for their cows expect just as good results as those who feed and take proper care of them. A good common cow will, with good food and care, produce from 3,000 to 4,000 pounds of milk in season. The average given per season, according to the Bureau of Statistics for the Province, is nearly 2,800 pounds, so that, with a little extra care, you increase from 2,800 to nearly 4,000 pounds, you have a much larger profit. The same cow, with no care and not half fed, will not produce one-half that amount. Now, it requires a certain amount of food for susteinence and all you can induce a cow to eat over that amount of good, nutritious food the more your profit will be. I would advise those who intend to patronize cheese factories as a branch of their farming industry to make a good selection of cows, weed out all poor ones until you have a herd of first-class milkers. Keep them in a good warm stable in the winter, plenty of good food and pure water. During the summer plenty of pure water is one of the essentials in producing good milk, with free access to salt as well, and I would have no fears as to the financial results of any such herd of cows. The proper care of milk is just as essential to the profits of the dairy as the care and feed of cows Milk is very susceptible to taints and smells, and will become tainted from from slight causes, dead animals lying in the locality of the pasture field will produce bad milk. Impure water is one of the worst features we have to contend with in the production of tainted milk. I also notice a tendency among some patrons to have their milk stands arranged very convenient for feeding hogs. They have the trough so conveniently situated that they can pour the whey from the can on the stand into the trough, and the stand so arranged that the hogs make their bed under it at night, thereby subjecting the milk to all the odors of a hog pen. It is utterly impossible to keep milk pure under such circumstances. I have, on more than one occasion, been able to tell when some of my patrons were drawing out their manure, in taking in their milk at the factory. Should the milk be placed close the barnyard during the removal of the manure in warm weather and the wind blowing in the direction of the milk, you are sure to have tainted milk. I had another case in my personal experience, that in which the patron had removed some decayed turnips from his celler and placed them around his trees The milk can sat close to the orchard, and the milk was unfit for use for two days before the cause was ascertained. You will therefore see that the utmost care and cleanliness is required, even after milk is producedf to make the dairy business a success. But with proper feed and care, and care of milk, I am satisfied that the dairy business has no rival.

A discussion then took place on the paper by the meeting in general, the members taking up the subject of armament, pastures and silos, among the speakers being Messrs. Stevenson, McNabb, Robinson, Galbraith and Dr. Cascaden.

Mr. Stevenson, of Fingal, read an excellent essay on the subject of agricultural advancement, which was evidently the result of much thought and research. He traced the progress of agriculture from the earliest age, reciting the utterances of Homer, Xenophen, Hesoid, Cato, Virgil and others on the subject. He also referred to the state of agriculture in England in the days succeeding the Norman conquest, and in conclusion spoke of the necessity of a good education for farmers' sons. Lack of space prevents our giving the essay in full, which we would like to do.

After Mr. Stevenson's essay had been discussed, the President and Secretary had to leave to catch the train for the west. Mr. Stevenson, 2nd Vice-President, took the chair and Mr. Cranston acted as secretary during the rest of the meeting.

A discussion was opened by D. Ferguson on the subject of feeding beef cattle. He was followed by Messrs. Galbraith, Jones, Stevenson, Yeandal, Robinson and Dr. Cascaden.

1889 1889

HOCKIN & POOL.

Between Seasons!

For the early Spring Trade we have secured TEN BALES of COTTON and 100 PIECES of SHIRTING which we are offering at the old prices. We were fortunate in purchasing before the advance, and are therefore in a position to give our Customers the above goods at present Mill prices, fully 20 per cent. cheaper than they can be bought for later in the season. It is therefore in your interest to buy now.

We have a lot of BARGAINS in Winter Goods and Choice Remnants in Dress Goods that we do not wish to carry over, and they have got to go. We have cut the price of these goods away down---and the price sells them.

It is a favorable time to buy your Spring Suit and Overcoat. As a Cutter our Mr. Dagan is unsurpassed, and as we are headquarters for Fine Suits at low prices and guarantee satisfaction in every particular, it will pay you to inspect our Stock.

WE ARE SELLING the best quality Young Hyson and Black Teas away down.
WE ARE SELLING 3 lines of Ladies' Shoes at a great reduction.
WE ARE SELLING a few nice sets of Dishes very cheap, and
WE ARE PAYING the highest market price for Produce.

HOCKIN & POOL.

LEADING BUSINESS HOUSES OF DUTTON.

THE DUTTON HARNESS SHOP.
GEO. McGILL,
—DEALER IN—
Light and Heavy Harness, Saddles, Trunks, Valises, Whips, Combs, Brushes, &c.

W. H. VOGT, THE JEWELER.
REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.

RED STAR HOUSE.
M. C. LEITCH
DEALER IN
GROCERIES, CROCKERY, BOOTS & SHOES, ETC.

—BUY YOUR—SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, FANCY GOODS, SPORTING GOODS AND WALL PAPER
—AT—
PRICE'S BOOK STORE
PRICE SELLS CHEAP.

Read the advertisement of
SIFTON BROS.
In another column.

JUDICIOUS ADVERTISING IS THE KEYSTONE OF BUSINESS SUCCESS.
ADVERTISE IN THE ENTERPRISE.

W. H. NELSON,
WATCHMAKER :- AND JEWELER.
REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.
FULL LINE OF SILVERWARE.

HOCKIN & POOL,
GENERAL MERCHANTS.

M. C. LEITCH
AGENT FOR ALL KINDS OF Agricultural Implements
SOLE AGENT FOR NOXON BROS., INGERSOLL

FOR A FINE SUIT
—GO TO—
J. C. HERTEL, - MERCHANT TAILOR.

Subscribe Now!
—FOR—
THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.
THE BEST LOCAL PAPER IN THE COUNTY.

PARLIAMENT OPENS.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

The city is full of visitors. Hundreds of applications for tickets to the galleries of the Senate to witness the opening ceremony had to be refused. All the tickets were given out last evening, and in number they were far beyond the seating capacity of the galleries. Many who had tickets were consequently crowded out. The floor of the Senate Chamber was filled with Senators, their wives, daughters and lady friends in low-necked dress. Around His Excellency, who was seated on the throne, were Ministers of the Crown n their bright Windsor uniforms, Justices of the Supreme Court in their brilliant red robes, and the "aides" of Government House. Though a little blizzard was blowing at the time, it did not deter the people turning out in large numbers to see the procession from Government House to the Parliament Buildings and giving a hearty cheer to Their Excellencies as they passed. An escort was supplied by the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, and the guard of honor was from the Governor-General's Foot Guards. Everything passed off very successfully. The Speech from the Throne, delivered by His Excellency, was as follows

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In addressing the Parliament of Canada for the first time, in fulfilment of the important trust which has been committed to me as Her Majesty's representative, I desire to express the satisfaction with which I resort to your advice and assistance. I am conscious of the honor which attends my association with your labors for the welfare of the Dominion, and it will be my earnest endeavor to co-operate with you to the utmost of my power in all that may promote the prosperity of the people of this country, the development of her material resources and the maintenance of the constitutional ties which unite her Provinces.

THE FISHERIES TREATY FAILURE.

It is to be regretted that the treaty concluded between Her Majesty and the President of the United States for the adjustment of the questions which have arisen with reference to the fisheries has not been sanctioned by the United States Senate, in whom the power of ratification is vested, and that our legislation of last year on the subject is therefore in a great measure inoperative. It now only remains for Canada to continue to maintain her rights as prescribed by the convention of 1818 until some satisfactory readjustment is arranged by treaty between the two nations.

THE BUNGLED FRANCHISE LAW.

A measure will again be submitted to you to amend the Acts respecting the electoral franchise, for the purpose of simplifying the law and lessening the cost of its operation.

FINANCIAL LAWS.

It is expedient in the interests of commerce to assimilate and in some particulars to amend the laws which now obtain in the several Provinces of the Dominion relating to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes, and a Bill with this object will be laid before you. A Bill will also be provided for making uniform throughout the Dominion the laws relating to bills of lading.

THE OCEAN STEAMSHIPS.

During the recess my Government has carefully considered the subject of ocean steam service, and you will be asked to provide subsidies for the improvement of the Atlantic mail service, and for the establishment in concert with Her Majesty's Government of a line of fast steamers between British Columbia and China and Japan. Your attention will also be invited to the best mode of developing our trade and securing direct communication by steam with Australasia, the West Indies and South America.

MORE LAW DOCTORING.

A Bill will be submitted for your consideration for the prevention of certain offences in connection with municipal councils and to give greater facilities for making inquiries as to such matters. Several measures will also be presented to you for improving the law of procedure in criminal cases. Among those will be a Bill to permit the release on probation of persons convicted of first offences. A Bill authorizing regulation to be made for the practice in cases partaking of the nature of criminal proceedings, and a Bill to make the Speedy Trials Act applicable throughout Canada.

Bills relating to the inspection of timber and lumber, for the improvement of the postal system, and for increasing the efficiency of the Northwest Mounted Police will also be submitted for your consideration.

"THE ROYAL LABORERS."

The Royal Commissioners of Labor having concluded their inquiries, I hope to be able to lay before you at an early day their report, with the important evidence collected by them in various parts of Canada.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts for the past and the estimates for the ensuing year will be laid before you. These estimates have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the efficiency of the public service.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I now commend these several subjects and the others which may be brought before you to your earnest consideration, and I trust that the result of your deliberations may, under the divine blessing, tend to promote the well-being and prosperity of Canada.

OTTAWA, Feb. —The Speaker took the chair at 3 p. m.

Mr. Denison presented petitions from the Knights of Labor, Toronto, praying for the establishment of a national holiday for wage earners and for legislation to compel vessel owners to carry competent crews, and for the proper inspection of engines and harbors.

Mr. R. S. White, on rising to move the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, was received with cheers. After an allusion to the death of his father, the late Minister of the Interior, and the circumstances under which he came to occupy a seat in the House, he proceeded to discuss the topics of the Speech. Referring at some length to the fishery question, he expressed regret that the work of the joint High Commission had been made abortive by the action of the American Senate in its rejection of the treaty last August. The incident of the retaliatory message was, he said, the only new event of importance in connection with this question during recess. The course of President Cleveland in relation thereto he characterized as most inconsistent and illogical, and manifestly dictated by party expediency. The threatened retaliation was received by the Canadian press with admirable spirit, who, without distinction of party, expressed the universal opinion that Canada must not allow herself to be browbeaten and coerced by her big neighbor. Taking up the reference in the speech to franchise, he said that the Dominion measure had undoubtedly enlarged the electorate by broadening the basis of suffrage, and had secured the advantage of practical uniformity the country over. The subject had been debated more or less in the House, in the press and on the public platform since 1885, and it was a fair interpretation of that discussion to say that the current of opinion favored the principle of the Dominion law. The objections advanced to the measure had relation wholly to the expense of revision and preparation of the lists, and to the somewhat complex character of the law, and he was sure the House had learned with pleasure of the intention of the Government to introduce a measure for the purpose of simplifying the law and lessening the cost of its operation—a law whose character is already so liberal as virtually to confer the suffrage upon every citizen of the country who is not a confirmed pauper, and who, in a word, is interested in its progress and prosperity, and in the maintenance of law and order. He referred to the financial condition of Canada as evidence of her ability to undertake subsidies to the Atlantic and Pacific steam services, and showed that while in the first twelve years of Confederation only six million dollars of the increase in public debt had been contributed from within the country, during the last nine years no less than forty-three millions of the increase had been contributed by the Canadian people. These figures, he held, should sustain the view that the wealth and prosperity of the people had enormously increased of late years and that we are from day to day becoming better able from within ourselves to contribute the necessary means for expenditures for the provision of works of general public utility. The large outlay upon the C.P.R. when first proposed had excited a good deal of alarm in many quarters, and doleful predictions of the evils that were to befall the country therefrom were freely indulged in, yet the completion of that work had immensely increased the reputation of Canada abroad, and had so enhanced her credit in the great money market of the world that during the past summer we were able to place a 3 per cent. loan at 95, and to-day her credit stood on a par with that of India and not very far behind that of the Mother Country herself.

Mr. Lepine, in French, seconded the address. He intimated that, as he had been elected as a representative of the workingmen, he would be bound primarily to protect the interests of the class he represented irrespective of party, but he believed the Conservative party had always been friendly to the workingman, and he was disposed to give the Government a fair trial on its general policy. He would, however, resist to the utmost every attempt to encroach upon the autonomy of the Provincial Legislatures, and he believed the Government had been prevented to a great extent from legislating for the working classes by the fact that under the constitution the Provinces claimed to have control of this question.

Mr. Laurier, after complimenting the mover and seconder of the address on the manner in which they had acquitted themselves, concurred in the complimentary references to Lord Stanley, and congratulated the country on the uniform good fortune which had attended the selection of its Governor-General. The Speech was more meagre than usual. A number of needed reforms were omitted mention of, none of which was more urgent than the question of securing better trade with the United States. Though the Government had not seen fit to mention this subject in the Speech, he believed it would not be long before they would be forced by public feeling to take up the question, and to adopt the views which he and his friends had been advocating in regard to it. He expected also that the long promised legislation in regard to the workingman would have been foreshadowed in the Speech. It was to be regretted also that no amendment to the Customs Act was promised. Many of the provisions of this Act were repugnant to the commercial community. During the past year the sum of $98,000 had been levied upon the commerce of the country in the way of fines and seizures, nearly all of which had been disbursed to officers of the Customs Department. Many of these men were in this way receiving princely incomes at the expense of the mercantile community. The Franchise Act, however, was more privileged in having been mentioned in the Speech. The career of this Act had not been a glorious one. It would seem as if the Administration were ashamed of their progeny. Year after year the Act had been altered and amended, and still the Government clung to the measure, notwithstanding the repeated calls of the Conservative press for manhood suffrage. The reason for refusing to go the length of manhood suffrage was plain. In regard to the promised measure to encourage trade with Australasia, he said the policy of the Opposition was to favor the extension of trade with all parts of the world. He was, however, sorry that the party opposite, instead of looking to the Antipodes for an extended market, did not seek for it in the great republic to the south of us. The Speech differed from all former ones delivered in recent years in that it contained not the slightest congratulation on the prosperous condition of the country, owing primarily to the operation of the National Policy and secondly to Providence. (Laughter.) He believed that every act friendly to the United States was to the advantage of England and Canada—(hear, hear)—and that anything which would increase the friendship of all the members of the great Anglo-Saxon family, scattered over the world, was a step forward in the civilization of the world. The Opposition would exercise their right to criticize the measures of the Government, but they were desirous of entering at once into the business of the session, and would do everything to hasten its progress.

Sir John Macdonald congratulated the leader of the Opposition on the kindly manner in which he had addressed the House. That, however, was his usual manner. If the bill of fare was a meagre one, it was calculated to suit the weak digestion of hon. gentlemen opposite. Milk for babes and strong meat for men—(cheers)—and his hon. friends opposite were still in the weakness of political juvenility. The hon. gentleman had asked why we did not extend our trade to the South? The reason was that the South would not allow us. We had been desirous and ready from 1854 to the present moment and had shown our readiness to enter into the most friendly commercial and social relations with the United States, but we could not secure the desired end unless perhaps at a price that we did not choose to give. The hon. gentleman would not, he thought, give that price himself. It had been announced by the leading men of the United States, by the men who, in the near future, would direct the political course of that country, that there was to be no extension of trade with that country unless it would be by selling our heritage for a mess of pottage, by giving up our allegiance to our sovereign and becoming a subservient outskirt of the neighboring republic. Unless we were willing to pay that price all hopes of an extension of our trade with the South could not be realized, and the project of Commercial Union would have to be abandoned. Referring to the complaint that no alteration was announced in the Customs Act, and that the mercantile community would suffer thereby, he believed the mercantile community could take care of themselves. If the law relating to the Customs or to the administration of the Customs Act pressed unduly on the commercial body, they would let the House and the country know it. Where were the petitions from the commercial community complaining of the working of the Customs law? That law was necessarily stringent. It would have no value if it were not so. The ways and wiles of the smuggler and trader were dark and needed to be closely watched, or the operations of the Act would be nugatory. In conclusion, he expressed the hope and belief that due progress would be made in the business of the session with the assistance and candid criticism of hon. gentlemen opposite, and that a number of useful measures would be passed which would tend to develop the country.

The address was then carried and ordered to be presented to His Excellency by such members of the House as are of Her Majesty's Privy Council.

The House adjourned at 5.30.

Queer Methods of Real Estate Agents.

A novel method of making a house appear to be valuable, and thus securing a sale at a good price, was exposed by Architect Renwick the other day in his testimony before the Elevated Railway Damage Commission. He proposed to buy two tenement houses in Third avenue. He was assured that the property was paying a handsome interest; that it was full of tenants, and he could go and see for himself. He sent an agent, who reported that the buildings were full of tenants. So he bought the buildings on the calculation that the rentals were 10 per cent. of the value of the property. As soon as he got possession he found that the tenants began to move out. Then he learned that they had occupied the place rent free. The building had been salted with tenants in much the same way that naughty men have been known to salt mining property with rich specimens. —New York Sun.

Odd Courtship and Marriage.

The Lewiston (N. Y.), Review says that for some time past Miss Minnie Ralston, a pretty little lady living not far from that place, has been corresponding with a Mr. Rupert, of Pompeii, Mich., whom she had never seen. He arrived there one day last week and called on Miss Ralston and introduced himself. Mr. Rupert said: "My clothes look rough, and they are, but I have a big heart and good bank account." He showed his prospective bride his bank book, and said: "Will you marry me?" Miss Ralston replied "I will." Mr. Rupert then reached for his hip pocket and pulled therefrom a large roll of money and counted out five one hundred dollar bills, which he handed to Miss Ralston, saying, "Here's a small wedding present for you." Mr. Patterson, the lady's brother-in-law, who was present, then went for the license and the Rev. Mr. Turner, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony. The groom is about 45 years old and the bride about 25.

Curiosities of Suicide.

A Roman lady swallowed red-hot coals.

A Frenchman built a small guillotine and beheaded himself.

An English iron-worker literally jumped into a fiery furnace.

Domestic trouble is the principal cause of suicide; alcoholism comes next.

In America June is the favorite month for committing suicide; in France August.

At Plymouth, England, a man tied his hands and feet together (?) and then jumped into the water.

France is the banner suicide country. In that country 216 persons in 1,000,000 take their own lives; in England 74.

Janos Meryessi, an Austrian 84 years old, killed himself because he could no longer support his parents, aged 115 and 110 respectively.

Social Debts Promptly Paid.

Mrs. Westend—"Who was it called?"

Marie—"Mrs. Grubbs, I told her you were out."

"Mrs. Grubbs is out making calls, then Order my carriage quickly. I will retur the call before she gets home."

Messrs. W. D. Mathews, grain merchant, and D. R. Wilkie, of the Imperial Bank of Canada, were nominated yesterday for the Presidency of the Toronto Board of Trade.

A citizen of Brooklyn heard his poultry making a fuss the other night and went out to ascertain the cause. A chicken thief hit him with an old hen which he had just "lifted," and the blow was so violent that the man may die. Old hens are dangerous no matter how you take 'em.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

TUESDAY,—The Speaker took the chair at 3 o'clock.

The following among other petitions were presented:

Mr. Balfour—From the Municipal Corporation of Amherstburg, for the passing of an Act to consolidate the debt of said town; also from residents of Pelee Island against the proposed amendments to the Incorporation Act.

Mr. John Leys—From the Trades and Labor Council, for an amendment to the Factory Act, so as to include all workshops and dwellings in its operations.

Mr. Gilmour—To incorporate the Toronto Belt Line Railway Company.

Mr. Gibson (Huron)—From the County Council of Huron, asking for power for townships and villages to conduct the sale of lands for non-resident taxes.

Mr. Balfour—For amendments to the game law so as to allow spring shooting of ducks in Southwestern Ontario.

Petitions were presented for amendments to the Assessment Act from the Municipal Councils of Galt (Mr. Master); Port Elgin (Mr. Biggar); Alvinston (Mr. P. Graham); Cobourg (Mr. Field); Huron (Mr. Gibson, Huron); Chatham (Mr. J. Clancy); Kent (Mr. Clancy); Bruce (Mr. O'Connor); Waterloo (Mr. Snider); and Victoria (Mr. Fell); Port Erie and Welland (Mr. Morin); Southampton (Mr. Biggar); Halton (Mr. Kearns); Chippawa (Mr. Morin); Chesley (Mr. Dack); Thorold (Mr. Morin).

Mr. Fraser moved that a select committee of eleven members be appointed to act with the Speaker in the control and management of the Library, to be composed as follows: The Attorney-General, and Messrs. Clancy, Clarke (Wellington), French, Gibson (Huron), Harcourt, Meredith, O'Connor, Ross (Middlesex), and Wood (Hastings).

The motion was carried.

Mr. Fraser moved that a special committee of twelve members be appointed to prepare and report lists of members to compose the Select Standing Committees to be composed as follows: Messrs. Awrey, Clarke (Wellington), H. E. Clarke (Toronto), Creighton, Dryden, Fraser, Gibson (Huron), Hardy, Meredith, Monk, Ross (Huron), and Wood (Hastings).

The motion passed.

The following Bills were introduced and read the first time:

To amend the Act to impose a tax on dogs and for the protection of sheep.—Mr. French.

To amend the Ditches and Water Courses Act.—Mr. J. Waters.

An Act entitled the Homestead Exemption Act.—Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Fraser submitted a message from the Lieutenant-Governor forwarding Provincial estimates to the amount of $300,000.

The estimates were passed through "Supply" and "Ways and Means" in the usual way.

Mr. Hardy brought down the report of the Minister of Public Works for 1888.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Mr. Sprague—Bill to amend the Municipal Amendment Act.

Mr. O'Connor—Bill to amend the Assessment Act; also Bill to amend the Act Respecting Assignments and Preferences by Insolvent Persons.

Mr. Miller—Friday next—Bill to amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Dack—Thursday next—Bill to amend the Act Respecting Snow Fences.

Mr. Ingram—Thursday next—Bill to amend the Assessment Act.

Mr. Harcourt—Thursday next—Bill to amend the University Act.

The following petitions were presented:

For the abolition of tax exemptions from the following: Lambton (Mr. P. Graham), Wiarton (Mr. Biggar), Simcoe (Mr. John B. Freeman), Millbrook (Mr. T. Dixon Craig), Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry (Mr. William Mack), New Hamburg (Mr. Master), Milverton (Mr. George Hess).

Mr. Garson—From the Plumbers' Assembly, K. of L., of St. Catharines, praying for free school books and other amendments to the school laws; they also desired legislation for the regulation of stationary engineers, engines and boilers; the compulsory publication of assessment rolls, and certain amendments to the Factory Act. The Seamen's Assembly of the same organization, of St. Catharines, also petitioned for similar legislation.

Mr. Lees introduced a Bill to amend the General Road Companies Act, which was read the first time.

Mr. Fraser called attention to the fact that the Globe, in endeavoring to give the items of expenditure on the Parliament buildings as shown in the appendix to the report on Public Works, had fallen into the serious error of adding the items to the totals, a process by which they made out the total expenditure to be double what it really was. For the information of the House and the country he might state that the total expenditure on the new Parliament buildings to the 31st December, 1888, was $308,646. Of this sum Mr. Yorke, the contractor, had taken $244,313 for masonry, $80,531 for carpentering, etc., $12,031 for bricks. The St. Lawrence foundry had taken under their contract $10,019 for iron, and Mr. Waite, the architect, had been paid $12,500. With miscellaneous expenses, these items made up the total of $308,000 in round numbers.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Mr. Morin—On Friday next—Order of the House showing the number of persons who have visited the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park during the year 1888; also showing the number who have paid for admission to the islands in said park, giving the amount of revenue derived from that source; also showing the amount of revenue derived from all other sources during the year; also showing the amount paid as expenses for the management of said park, giving the names of the officials and the amount paid to each; also giving a statement of the money still on hand derived from the sale of bonds; also showing the amount of interest paid, and from what source paid.

Mr. French—On Friday next—Inquiry of Ministry—Has the attention of the Attorney-General been drawn to the recent decision of Anderson vs. Glass, confirming the power of practically evading the provisions of the Act respecting assignments and preferences by insolvent persons, which, under sec. 6, requires an assignment to be made to the sheriff or to a person resident in the county? Is any remedy proposed?

Messrs. Fraser and Evanturel presented to the House Mr. Caldwell, the recently elected member for North Lanark, who, having subscribed to the usual oath and signed the roll, took his seat.

The following petitions were presented:

Mr. Chisholm—From the village of Streetsville, asking that exemptions from taxation be abolished.

Mr. Harcourt—From the Council of the corporation of the county of Haldmand, with the same prayer.

Mr. Awrey—From the county of Wentworth, asking for amendments to the law regarding hawkers and peddlers; also for amendments to the General Road Companies Act.

Mr. Hardy, Commissioner of Crown Lands, presented to the House a tabulated return of the number of inmates of the public institutions of Ontario, showing the sex, nationality, parentage, religious denomination, etc., of each inmate, to the 30th Sept., 1888. The total number of inmates in all the institutions of the Province was shown to be 4,459, there being 2,443 males and 2,016 females.

The analysis of reports of the County, Township and Horticultural Societies of Ontario for the year 1887, and the report of the Council of the Agriculture and Arts Association of the Province for 1888, were also laid on the table.

The following bills were introduced and read the first time:

Mr. French—An Act to amend the Law of Slander.

Mr. Waters—An Act to enable widows and unmarried women to vote for members of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Balfour—An Act to amend the Assessment Act.

Mr. Ingram—An Act to amend the Assessment Act.

Mr. Fraser moved the second reading of the Bill respecting voters' lists. He explained that the Bill retained all the present machinery making provision relative to the preparation and revision of the voters' list. The present machinery was simply adapted to the Manhood Suffrage Bill of last session. He had thought that instead of bringing in an amended Act it would be better to incorporate all the laws on the subject in one Act. It was desirable to have the voters' lists ready as soon as possible, and in order to expedite matters the Government intended to ask the House to consent to the printing of a larger number than usual of the Bill, so that the members could send copies to each officer in each riding.

Mr. Meredith said that ordinarily the practice of not taking the second reading of Bills till they were distributed would be adhered to, but in the circumstance he waived his objection, as he understood from his hon. friend that the Bill was a consolidation of existing laws with an adaptation of the existing machinery so as to carry out the manhood suffrage system.

The Bill was read the second time.

Messrs. Mowat and Awrey presented Mr. J. M. Gibson, the newly elected member for Hamilton, who, having taken the oath and signed the roll, took his seat immediately next to that of the Minister of Agriculture.

The following Bills were introduced and read a first time:

Mr. O'Connor—To amend the Assessment Act.

Mr. Clarke (Wellington)—For the better protection of insectivorous and other birds.

Mr. Balfour—To amend the Act respecting the federation of the University of Toronto and University College, and other universities and colleges; also to amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Waters—To amend the Assessment Act.

Mr. Fraser moved that the name of Mr. Gibson be added to the Library, Private Bills, Privileges and Elections and Railway Committees. Carried.

The House adjourned at 3.20 p. m.

Trees with Large Leaves.

Trees of the palm family have larger leaves than any others. The Inaja palm, which grows on the banks of the Amazon, has leaves which reach a length of from thirty to fifty feet and are ten or twelv feet in breadth. Specimens of the leaves of the Talipot palm, a native of Ceylon, have been met with that were twenty feet long and eighteen feet broad. These leaves are used by the natives to make tents and form very efficient shelters from the rain. The leaves of the double cocoanut palm are often thirty feet long and several feet wide. When the wind is strong they clash together with a noise that may be heard at great distance. Only one leaf is produced each year, and they are so firmly attached to the stem of the tree and so strong in themselves that a man may sit on the end of one and rock to and fro in perfect safety.—New York Telegram.

No Respect for Bogeys.

The bogey and the bad man have passed finally out of the lives of children. You cannot scare the small boy any more with any such imaginative terrors. An anxious mother has just lost her last bit of control over her child by a "bluff" which did not work. She did not know her boy. She quite undervalued his experience in human nature. The boy was naughty.

She had exhausted all appeals to his imagination, and finally she had recourse to practical terrors. She threatened to call the policeman, and she painted the prison cell and all sorts of things.

"Yah!" said the boy. "Mamma, you can't play the policeman on me. He gave me a lot of candy yesterday. He wouldn't run me in for anything."

A Campaign Echo.

"Ah, my darling," murmured J. Court Plasser, as they sat on a sofa in the softly lighted parlor, "you must forgive your ducky for what he said to little brother at the supper table, but little brother was naughty, you know. What's the matter with Johnny lately, birdie, anyway?" Johnny (from behind the sofa)—"He's all right!"

Ancient vs. Modern Tortures.

Miss Travis—Oh, what dreadful torture they used to practise in the middle ages! Think of breaking a man on the wheel

De Smith—No worse than nowadays you never saw me out on my bicycle, did you?

The New York Commercial Advertiser states that Gen. Harrison offered Senator Evarts the Attorney-Generalship, but the Senator declined it.

CURRENT TOPICS.

THE crowned heads of Europe are becoming so literary that a magazine is proposed to which only those of royal blood shall be allowed to contribute. No advertisements will be taken, and criticisms of each number will be furnished to the papers by the librarian of each court.

THE New York Graphic knows of an Italian family in New York who are rapidly becoming rich in the organ-grinding business. There are several daughters, and, dressed in picturesque costumes of the Roman peasantry, they wander in pairs all over the metropolis dispensing music. They don't use the ordinary organs, but superior instruments of the "piano" type. The instruments are carried around on light-moving hand-carts, and bring in to each girl on an average $10 per day. Those girls won't be long in getting married.

ACCORDING to Mr. H V. Knaggs (Archives of Pediatrics,) a few threads of Berlin wool placed round the neck and worn continuously are an efficient preventive against these uncommoding complaints, which many persons are so prone to catch on exposure to cold. From ten to twenty threads are enough for the purpose. They should only be removed for making ablutions, and should be left off gradually by discarding daily one thread at a time. The remedy probably acts by keeping up a belt of skin action, thus acting mildly and continuously as a slight counter-irritant.

THE theory of Dr. Henry B. Baker is that whenever a person has breathed unusually cold dry air until that fluid which naturally moistens the throat and air-passages because of its evaporation contains much salts, the albuminous part of the blood comes out in the throat or lungs wherever the salty fluid is. Whenever this exudation occurs there is then a chance for the bacillus tuberculosis to lodge and multiply, because it is there kept in a nutritive solution at the temperature of the body. A similar explanation applies to smallpox. Dr. Baker claims that he has shown by statistics, etc., that these diseases are controlled by the temperature and dryness of the atmosphere, and that he has pointed out the reasons why.

THE London correspondent of the Birmingham Gazette says: Rumors upon which I can place reliance reach me simultaneously from two sources that Sir Charles Dilke is making great headway in the task of clearing his character. The lost "Fanny" has been found. She is in England, and she states that she did not come forward at the trial, not because there had been anything wrong in her relations with Sir Charles, but because, independently of him, there were passages in her life which she did not wish to be dragged into light. She totally denies that there is any truth on the part of Mrs. Crawford's evidence implicating her, but I am not able to say that she has promised to come forward and repeat the denial upon oath.

ONE of the most remarkable things of which Pittsburg boasts is the combination well that has been struck at a cracker factory. It produces at one and the same time cold water, pure and sweet; salt water, and a flow of gas that, when ignited, illuminates the entire surroundings. The well was drilled some time ago, the owner's idea being to get a supply of pure cold water for use in his bakery in the summer and during flood times when city water is not desirable. At 100 feet the fresh water was struck, and at 200 feet the salt water and gas were found. Two castings were inserted, one for salt water and gas, the other for the fresh water, and now, when the engine is started and the gas lighted, spectators behold the wonderful sight of fresh water, salt water and fire all coming out of one well at the same time.

A BRIDEGROOM is generally supposed to be in a generous mood upon his wedding day, and there are a few charitable benefactions up and down our land which date their foundation from the "happiest day" in the founder's life. The great hotel-keeper Frohler, of Buda-Pesth, who has just been divorced from his wife, is of the quite contrary opinion. It was not upon his wedding day, but upon his divorce day, that he was inspired with an enthusiasm of humanity. In gratitude for his divorce and as a perpetual memory of that "happiest day of his life," he has founded three charitable institutions—first, a pension fund for decayed Hungarian journalists; secondly, an exhibition for school boys of Austrian birth who can pass the best examination in the Magyar language and literature; and, thirdly, a village hospital in his own native place, Inzersdorf. Future generations are to be glad and rejoice because a wealthy landlord obtained a divorce, but they will hardly be able to say they owe the endowment to "the pious ancestor."

PROF. CLEVELAND ABBE, of the Meteorological Building at Washington, who is the real founder of the weather service, takes up in the February number of the Forum the popular idea that our climate is changing. After showing in an interesting way how changes, if any occur, are calculated from meteorological tables, he shows that rational climatology gives no basis for the much-talked-of influence upon the climate of a country produced by the growth or destruction of forests, the building of railroads or telegraphs, and the cultivation of crops over a wide extent of prairie. "Any opinion as to the meteorological effects of man's activity," he says "must be based either upon the records of observations or on a priori theoretical reasoning. Now the records of experience are exceedingly diverse in various parts of the world, and lead to no uniform conclusion. The palæontological evidences of the former existence of animals and plants where they cannot now thrive show clearly that great changes have taken place during geological ages, perhaps 50,000 years distant; but no important climatic change has yet been demonstrated since human history began."

A RECENT issue of the Liverpool Daily Post contains the following description of the burning of a hay store at Birkenhead, Eng. which is interesting, as showing the working of the police fire brigade system of that town, and recently commended by a certain Hamilton alderman. The paragraph is headed, "A Birkenhead hay store on fire; a smart fire brigade": At an early hour yesterday morning a fire broke out in the hay and corn stores of W. Mason, New Chester road, Birkenhead. The flames were first perceived by two passengers from the midnight train to Green Lane, Mersey Railway, and they raised the alarm by shouting and whistling for the police. After doing so they climbed over the gate and into the yard, where, with the assistance of a workman, they got several loads of hay and straw out of the way. A large crowd soon gathered, and the flames, fanned by the wind, increased at a terrible rate, and it was soon evident that the entire stock stored in the buildings would be destoyed. The horses were got out and all carts from the leeward side of the fire were removed to a place of safety. It was feared that the glue works and Lampard offices, which are contiguous to the buildings, would be endangered, and the inmates of the adjacent houses were warned to take precautions for their own safety. After everything that could be done was done, with the exception of getting a hose into play, the police arrived with a reel, twenty-five minutes after the outbreak of the fire. Some minutes were lost in finding the hydrant, and then the police took the wrong end of the hose into the yard, thus causing another delay. By this time the buildings were entirely gutted, several walls having collapsed and the iron roof of the largest storehouse had fallen in. Several reels were got to work and a fifth set of hose arrived forty-five minutes after the alarm was given, its arrival being greeted with ironical cheers by the crowd. That a town like Birkenhead should not have a permanent staff of trained firemen and a hose reel is simply a disgrace to civilization.

Facts About Famous Poems.

Gray's "Elegy" occupied him for seven years.

Bryant wrote "Thanatopsis" in the shade of a grand old forest—a fitting spot for such a theme.

Cowper wrote one of the drollest and quaintest English ballads, "John Gilpin's Ride," when he was under those fits of depression so common to him.

General Lyle wrote his beautiful composition, "Antony and Cleopatra," which begins, "I am dying, Egypt, dying," on the night before his death. He had a premonition that he was going to die the next day.

The noted poem, "The Falls of Niagara," was written by its author, J. G. C. Brainard, the editor of a small paper in Connecticut, in fifteen minutes. He wrote it under pressure in response to a call for "more copy."

"After the Ball," the little poem which has made the name of Nora Perry known in the world of letters, was jotted down on the back of an old letter, with no idea of the popularity it was to achieve in the pages of a noted magazine.

Poe first thought of "The Bells" when walking the streets of Baltimore on a winter night. He rang the bell of a lawyer's house—a stranger to him—walked into the gentleman's library, shut himself up, and the next morning presented the lawyer with a copy of his celebrated poem.

Thomas Moore, while writing "Lalla Rookh," spent so many months in reading up Greek and Persian works that he became an accomplished Oriental scholar, and people found it difficult to believe that its scenes were not penned on the spot instead of in a retired dwelling in Devonshire.

The "Old Oaken Bucket" was first suggested to the author, Samuel Woodworth, in a bar-room. A friend with whom he was drinking said that when they were boys the old oaken bucket that hung in his father's well was good enough for them to drink from. Woodworth immediately went home and wrote the famous poem.

How to Get Square Shoulders.

A young woman whose employment made it necessary that she should stoop while at work said to herself one day, "I discover that I am growing round shouldered. Now that never must be. But what shall I do about it? I know. I have read that Oriental women have a beautiful carriage, and so have Mexicans and negresses; they are erect and hold their heads high, and it is because they carry water jars and great bundles on their heads, balancing them without any help from the hands. What they do, I can with practice; I will begin with a heavy book and see if I can walk across the room without steadying it with my hand."

She had struck a right idea. Dr. Dio Lewis says of the "crook" of the shoulders:

"There is one good way to cure it. Shoulder braces will not help. * * I know of but one bull's eye shot. It is to carry a weight on the head. A sheep skin or other strong bag filled with twenty or more pounds of sand is a good weight. * * * When engaged in your morning studies * * put this bag of sand on your head, hold your head erect, draw your chin close to your neck and walk slowly about the room. * * The muscles, whose duty it is to hold head and shoulders erect are hit, not with scattering shot, but with a rifle ball. The bones of the spine * * will soon accommodate themselves to the new attidude. One year of daily practice half an hour morning and evening will give you a noble carriage."

Overdoing the Matter.

Wife (quietly to husband)—I see, John, that fur boas are to be much worn this winter!

Husband—But you have a fur boa, my dear.

Wife—Yes, but that is too much worn already!

Extra Hazardous.

"What do you mean by canceling my policy?" angrily cried an excited young man. "We were very sorry to be compelled to pursue such a course," replied the insurance superintendent, "but we have just learned you are going to join a football team."

Many prominent citizens of Kingston have joined together to build a club house, and stock to the amount of $15,000 is asked. It will have skating and curling rinks, gymnasium and reading rooms and will be the headquarters for all outdoor and indoor amusement associations.

There are thirteen archbishops and seventy-three Roman Catholic bishops in the United States.

SLEEP, AND HOW TO GET IT.

Billy O'Day Gives the Readers of this Paper Some Practical Hints.

It is my honest belief that we should have evangelists going up and down the land teaching people the art of sleep. Few, yes, comparatively few, are the number in this present age who retire and wake up finding they have slept right through to their destination, the rising hour. No, most people must, if not awake already, wake up and find out where they are. Then again there are others who, like the man on the train fast asleep and without a ticket, can't be awakened. To such a class an alarm clock is a useless article, possibly they may just hear it the first time they use it, but they will never hear it the second time. Unless they do, as our Irish friend did, sit up all night and set it off. I have a friend whose employment requires him to spin at night instead of day; I might term him one of the seven sleepers, as he is ever ready for sleep. I have known him to sleep standing up, and upon one occasion, when asleep in bed in the day time, a colored artist frescoed the room he was sleeping in without his knowledge. Such cases are rare, yes, very rare, as ninety-nine out of every one hundred persons are not sound sleepers. The chief cause is physical, mental and social dissipation. In the first place, some overwork the body, which is injurious, and causes restlessness. Then there are those who have much mental work, perhaps sitting in an office all day, then riding home at night and strangely possessing an appetite that outs clear through all the way from ox tail soup to almond nuts. Then they sit around all evening and before retiring partake of what they term a light lunch, consisting of lobster salad, cheese, pickles, mince pie, and go to bed wondering why they can't sleep. They are giving the mill more than it can grind. Then there are men who put five dollars into a bucket shop and lie awake all night wondering whether they will lose five dollars or make five hundred. Then there are men who worry. These don't get any sleep and don't need any; if they take these bitter pills let them chew them. Now, we have the social dissipation. There are hundreds of young men and women in this city who never see their beds ere the morning hours. It's germans, levees, kirmesse, receptions, calls or banquets. These folks are on the lightning express for Smashuptown, and unless they are wise, and jump off, nothing can stop them save the marble headstones in the cemetery. Many a young wife has caused trouble of this kind. For instance, a gentleman not long since wrote the following letter to Dr. Talmage, saying: "What shall I do? We have many friends and are invited out perpetually. I am on a salary in a large New York business establishment. To meet my engagements I am obliged to rise in the morning at 7 o'clock, but I cannot get home from these parties until 1 in the morning. Then the excitements of the evening keep me awake for an hour or two after I retire, and then late taking of food disturbs my sleep all night long. I must give up either social life or my business, which is my livelihood. My wife is not willing I should give up social life, for she is very popular, and I have not health to stand it and attend to my business. What shall I do?" Dr. Talmage said, if he had answered this letter, he would have begun by saying: "Dear Sir,—If what you say is true, your wife is a fool. If she is willing to sacrifice your health, and with it the support of the family, for the greeting and applause of the midnight saturnalia, I pity you. Use your own judgment, my afflicted correspondent. Once lose your health, and then your business position, and then your income, and see how many levees you will be invited to. All the diamond-backed terrapins at $50 a dozen which you are invited to partake of after your money is gone will not do you any damage. Society will let you drop so suddenly it will knock the breath out of you. Yours truly, (signed) Pastor of Brooklyn Tabernacle." This is sound advice, and I hope it was followed out. Then, there are a class of people who won't allow themselves, or any one else in the house, to sleep. Soon as they touch the pillow they sink into dreamland. But, lo, they snore. If you have not already, just listen once to a man that snores. See how beautifully he works up a grand crescendo. By the time he gets as loud as the tuba on a $40,000 organ he wakes himself up, and he wonders why he can't sleep. Still another kind of sleeper—not the railroad sleeper, but the sleeper who sleeps with his mouth open. It's bad enough to have one's mouth open in the day-time. It's worse at night. Silence is golden. The mouth is not to be used for breathing. Breathe through your nose. If you awake and find your mouth open get up and shut it, instead of breathing through your teeth, thereby emitting a shrill whistle, as if calling a dog. I don't wonder so many dogs bark at nights, when there are so many people calling them Last of all, we have the man who sleeps so soundly that he rises without even awakening—not even waiting to attire himself with a paper collar or a straw hat. These people have taken long constitutionals and have returned greatly refreshed thereby. These folks don't need any advice and won't get any.—Yours forever, BILLY O'DAY.

Statistics Explained.

Mr. Bliffers—"See here, Jane, the paper says that French statistics show that there are ever so many more lunatics among unmarried men than among the married."

Mrs. Bliffers—"Well, you see, my dear, when a married man acts crazy people don't call him insane. They just say to themselves: Poor fellow, what a life he must lead with that wife of his and think no more about it."—Philadelphia Record.

The National Flower.

Foreign Visitor—"What is your national flower?"

Minneapolis Belle—"Wheat."

The police have a case against a Montreal saloon-keeper for selling liquor to a minor. When told that the purchaser was only 18 he expressed great surprise, as he has been twice a widower, and is now living with his third wife.

The length of the Mississippi river has always been placed at 4,100 miles, but civil engineers familiar with the stream say that it has shortened itself over four hunded miles in twenty years, and will do as well in the twenty to come.

NICARAGUA'S PUBLIC LAUNDRY.

A Volcanic Lake Where Native Beauties Are Seen Unadorned on Wash Days.

(Nicaraguan Correspondence of Philadelphia Record.)

The horses were again urged forward and upward towards the point where the distant peak of Santa Clar towers above the clouds till at last the crest of an extinct crater was reached. Within this hollow, 100 feet below the surrounding ridge, which forms a circular basin with a diameter of about six hundred yards, as perfect as if laid out by accurate measurement, lies a lake of unknown depth. A little way from the bank sounding leads have been run down 300 feet without touching bottom. We are told that at times the water becomes warm and that sulphurous fumes arise from its surface, and again the volume of the lake will rise five or six feet so suddenly that the women washing along the shore have to swim for their lives, leaving the clothes to float away. Though called extinct, this would indicate that the temper of the volcano is still too uncertain to make its immediate neighborhood a desirable place of residence.

This lake—called Tiscapa—is the public laundry of Nicaragua's capital, and here the lavendarns (washwomen) come to cleanse the city's soiled linen. A rugged roadway leads down to the water, where at all hours of every day a novel scene is presented. Standing knee-deep or waist-deep in the water, dressed (or, rather, undressed) accordingly, the native women pound the clothes on flat stones and afterwards dry them on the surrounding bushes. The industrious workers are themselves the most striking pictures, clad in but a single short, sleeveless and extremely "low-necked" garment, and even this slight trammeling they discard in the ardor of business if compelled to seek deeper rinsing places. Honi soit qui mal y pense. And these creatures seem to be the perfection of innocence, for they remain entirely undisturbed if, perchance, a company of passing muleteers descend the mountain path and proceed to water their beasts and bathe themselves as unconcernedly and unnoticed by the women as though each were alone in the wilderness.

Among these workers, ranging in age from maidens of 12 to matrons of 50, one may see some surprising beauties, whose advent in New York in civilized attire would turn the heads and capture the hearts of all the dudes of that beauty-adorning metropolis. Though the Phœnician blood, which Nicaraguans are so proud to claim, is probably lost in the now more clearly defined Spanish and Indian, yet these mild-eyed, sweet-faced and graceful children of Central America have retained in their characters many of the traits that distinguished their earlier ancestors, including simple contentment and a passionate enjoyment of nature and love of home.

Late Church Notes.

In a lecture in Dundee, giving an account of a missionary journey across Africa, Mr. F. S. Arnot said he met two old Africans who repeated portions of Scripture, read to them by Livingstone thirty years ago.

On a recent Sunday Rev. Evan Maclean, minister of the United Presbyterian Mission Church in the island of Lismore, had to conduct his services in the open air, he having been locked out of his church by his elders.

Melbourne, the capital of Victoria, Australia, has during its comparatively brief history made wonderful progress. Its institutions are numerous and its public buildings are on a scale of great magnificence. Its latest triumph is a grand Episcopal cathedral, soon to be opened. It has cost £180,000 ($900,000). The site, a gift from the Government, is said to be worth £800,000 ($4,000,000).

The Jubilee services in connection with the Baptist churches at Melbourne, Victoria, have been attended with wonderful success. A General Conference was held, and at the close of the same there was a floral and choral festival. Such was the enthusiasm created by this festival that it was repeated by request at the Melbourne Town Hall. About one thousand children were grouped on the platform, and excitement was intensified by the waving of bouquets of flowers and small bannerets.

There are in Servia a small body of Christians called Nazarines. They have an ancient history, being descendants of a very early body of Christian disciples. They are, as they have always been, opposed to war, and therefore to military service, considering such unlawful from a Christian standpoint. According to a letter which has just found its way to some friends in England, for avowing these opinions, and for certain resistance offered to the law of the land, twelve men and seven women have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from three to sixteen months.

A Canine Oliver Twist.

Dogs have been trained to do many useful and many amusing things, but the most degrading instructions ever given to a noble animal of its species came to light early in the week. A great Newfoundland dog entered a noted store near the Bastile, wandered about for some time among the customers and finally seized a bundle containing some shooting jackets, with which he made off as fast as he could. Some of the clerks saw him and about a hundred of them ran out after him. The cry was taken up in the street and the "dog thief" was soon being pursued by half a dozen policemen and hundreds of boys besides the clerks. The animal was finally run down and marched off to the police station, and eventually to the pound, where he has probably been smothered before this. Several shopmen complained that they had been visited by the dog and had suffered from his depredations, so that there is no doubt that he had been taught to steal by some Fagin of the neighborhood, which is not a particularly respectable one.—New Orleans Picayune.

Lafayette Frederick shot his wife dead at Quincy, Ill., yesterday, and then committed suicide. He travelled for a St. Louis medicine house. His wife went to Quincy to visit a sister. Five minutes before the crime the couple were laughing and talking with each other. No cause is shown for the murder.

The stage running between Fort McLeod and Calgary has been confiscated for carrying contraband whisky.

MR. AND MRS.

An Interesting Account of the Origin of These Titles.

In earlier times the ordinary man was simply William or John; that is to say, he had merely a Christian name without any kind of "handle" before it or surname after it. Some means of distinguishing one John or one William from another John or another William became necessary.

Nicknames derived from a man's trade or his dwelling place, or from some personal peculiarity, were tacked on to their Christian names, and plain John became John Smith.

As yet there were no "misters" in the land. Some John Smith accumulated more wealth than the bulk of his fellows—became, perhaps, a landed proprietor or an employer of hired labor. Then he began to be called in the Norman French of the day the "maistre" of this place or that, of these workmen or of those.

In time the "maistre" or "maister," as it soon became, got tacked on before his name, and he became Maister Smith, and his wife was Maistress Smith. But gradually the sense of possession was lost sight of, and the title was conferred upon any kind, by mere possession of wealth or by holding some position of more or less consideration and importance.

Two of Sims Reeves' Anecdotes.

One night after dutifully escorting an aunt of his home on an "outside" car, he tendered the driver the legal fare, viz., sixpence. The Jehu regarded the coin with disgust, then said: "Sure, the drive ye've had's worth more than this now." "It's your legal fare," said the practical doctor. "But the lady, sir," said Pat, with a sly wink, "wouldn't ye give more on her account now?" "Oh, she's my aunt." "Well," responded the carman with lofty contempt, "if that's all you'll give for your aunt, I pity your uncle."

On another occasion, being late for a dinner engagement, Fraser rushed into the street and hailing a car said to the carman, "Drive fast, I am late for dinner." He was brought to his destination so rapidly that he felt as though, like Mahomet's coffin, he was between earth and air. The inevitable sixpence was tendered.

"Why, sir," said the carman in an aggrieved tone, "the mare would go home tail foremost if she saw this coin. Thank God she's blind." "Well, it's your legal fare, my man." "Yes," muttered the carman, mounting the box seat, "it's the legal fare, bad luck to yur larnin;" then raising his voice as he drove off, "May be it's a good thing for ye that ye'se going where you'll get a dinner for nothing."

Motes in Sunbeams.

Counting the dancing motes in a bar of sunlight sounds like one of those hopeless, never-ending tasks with which malignant fairies delight to break the spirits of little heroines in the German folk stories. Something more than this, however, has been achieved by modern science, which is now able to count the particles floating in any given portion of the atmosphere, and determine what proportion of these are dangerous germs and what are mere dust. Dr. Franklin's curious experiments have shown us how to count the micro-organisms, and now John Aitken, of Falkirk, by a totally different method, has been able to take stock of the more harmless but hardly less interesting dust motes. Thirty thousand such particles have been detected by him in the thousandth of a cubic inch of the air of a room. In the outside atmosphere in dry weather the same measurement of air yielded 2,119, whereas, after a heavy rainfall, the number was only 521. That this power of prying into atmospheric secrets will eventually yield very important results must be obvious to all. Among the most curious discoveries already made is the direct relation between dust particles and fogs, mist and rain.—New York Telegram.

He Might Have Known Better.

Two newspaper men met in their official capacity at a swell reception on the South Side the other evening. They had been directed to a private apartment on the second floor of the house, and after a time the hostess tore herself away from her guests in the drawing-room below to give the reporters the information they sought. She took her list of acceptances and allowed them to copy it as a list of those present. Just as the scribes were about to depart a messenger boy came with a note for the hostess. She read it and said to the reporters: "Here is a note from a gentleman who sent me an acceptance; he writes that he deeply regrets his inability to be present, but that he is too ill and tired after a day of hard work. Too bad. I think, gentlemen, you had better cross his name from your lists." One of the scribes asked who he was. "Col. ——," answered the hostess. "Why," blurted out the second reporter, "I just saw him over to Mrs. ——'s reception, on the North Side." He probably did not mean to do it, but he had certainly, in the eyes of the hostess, pushed the Colonel over the edge of the tureen into the pottage.—Chicago Herald.

Easily Accounted For.

Lady (in physician's office)—Doctor, I wish to consult you about my husband. I fear that his mind is affected. Physician—In what way have you noticed anything singular about him? Lady—Chiefly in regard to the passage of time. He dates his letters a month ahead; last week, in a driving snowstorm, he wanted to have the fly screens put up, and only yesterday he came down stairs in an alpaca coat and Mackinaw hat, as if it were a day in July. Physician—H'm, that's very strange. What's your husband's profession? Lady—He is an editor of a monthly magazine.

—The following facts about the tongue may interest some people. A white tongue is said to denote febrile disturbance; a brown, moist tongue, indigestion; a brown, dry tongue, depression, blood poisoning, typhoid fever; a red, moist tongue, inflammatory fever; a red, glazed tongue, general fever, loss of digestion; a tremulous, moist and flappy tongue, feebleness, nervousness.

In the Pennsylvania House yesterday a Bill was introduced making it an offence punishable by a fine of not less than $50 or over $100 for any one to treat another to intoxicating liquor.

DON'T FORGET

To call at URLIN BROS'. and try their Teas and Coffees.

We have the best and most complete stock of groceries in the West.

Our stock of China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Glassware, Lamps and Fancy China Ware will be found very cheap.

A large and well-assorted stock of Hardware always kept on hand. We offer big bargains in Axes, Cross-cut Saws, Cow Ties, Table Cutlery and Tinware.

We are offering the best value in all kinds of Boots and Shoes ever shown. Call and see for yourselves.

We pay the highest price for produce of all kinds.

URLIN BROS., DUTTON.

The Dutton Enterprise.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1889.

DUTTON AND VICINITY.

St. Valentine's Day.

How do you like the ENTERPRISE this week?

Capt. Hazlitt led the S. A. services on Thursday night.

Shedden correspondence received too late for this week's issue.

D. McKee is enclosing his sawmill in a frame building this week.

Rev. J. W. Mann preached in the Baptist Chapel on Tuesday evening.

D. J. McArthur has purchased the farm of J. B. Johnson, containing 75 acres.

FOUND—An axe. Owner can have same at this office, by paying for this notice.

The next meeting of the West Elgin Farmers' Institute will be held at West Lorne.

There are now 136 names on the membership roll of the West Elgin Farmers' Institute.

A sleigh-load of Salvationists left for Highgate to attend a banquet yesterday afternoon.

Lost—Saturday night, on Shackleton Street, a new glove. Finder will please leave at this office.

Rev. A. T. Fowler, of London, preached two eloquent sermons in the Baptist Chapel last Sunday.

Daniel Royal had the misfortune to lose another child on Monday, making the second in a year.

D. D. McArthur is the proud possessor of a team of horses for agricultural purposes weighing 3,350 lbs.

Miss Annie McIntyre, formerly assistant in the postoffice here, has left for her home in Crosswell, Mich.

J. B. Johnston left rather suddenly on Monday for Uncle Sam's domains. It is said that he will not return.

The Glencoe Transcript appeared in a new dress last week, and its appearance is much improved in consequence.

Mr. J. A. Shannon, dentist, has made arrangements to remain in his Dutton office every day except Monday in each week.

NOTICE.—N. Phelps wishes to announce to all those indebted to him in any way that he wants a prompt settlement of the same.

Don't forget the Presbyterian tea meeting at Wallacetown Tuesday evening, Feb. 19. A good programme will be presented.

Mrs. Love, of Blenheim, purposes removing to Dutton in the spring. Two or three loads of her furniture have already arrived.

Rev. Mr. Middleton will preach in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening next. Subject, "Samuel and Saul." All welcome.

Thomas Gibson, of Goderich, aged 60, was married in St. Thomas on Thursday to Mrs. Kate Jane McLeod, aged 70, of the latter place.

L. J. Wilson has purchased two lots adjoining J. E. Crane's and is getting brick on the ground for building a dwelling in the spring.

We have received the Carnival Number of the Montreal Star for this year. It is one of the handsomest publications we have yet seen from that office.

Mrs. J. Marsh and Miss Jane Leslie, of West Lorne, are visiting their sister, Mrs. T. Wright, at Westmeath. They took in the sights at Montreal last week.

Rev. T. Wilson will preach in Knox Church next Sunday evening on the subject, "Burglars, and how they should be dealt with," and in the evening on "Lame in both feet."

Through a mistake made in copying the bill for the Wallacetown Presbyterian tea meeting, the church choir was not mentioned as taking part in the entertainment, as it should have been.

The Glencoe Public School Board has engaged the services of Mr. E. W. Hinde, son of the Rev. Wm. Hinde, of Adelaide, as principal of the schools, Mr. Raymond having resigned the position.

America, published in Chicago, this week contains an interesting sketch of the "Home and Burial Place of Abraham Lincoln." America is now one of the leading magazines of the United States and is well worth the low subscription price.

Ten members of the Ridgetown Gun Club will try to out-shoot the same number of our local club to-day, on the polo grounds. Our boys are determined to win and an exciting match is looked for.

A number of our young people drove to an assembly at Lawrence last Friday evening, and report having had a first-class time, speaking highly of the treatment they received from the committee.

A tramp robbed the till of J. O. Lumley's store at Iona, and secured a large number of coppers. They weighted him down so that when the Rodney constables got after him he could not escape and fell an easy prey.

Mr. G. A. Swann, D. D. S., L. D. S., Glencoe, has been appointed Examiner in Theory and Practice of Presthetic Dentistry at the annual dental examinations which commence at Toronto University on March 25th.

Miss E. H. Brodlique, for several years connected with the London Advertiser staff, and who has latterly been correspondent for several American magazines, left last week for Chicago to accept a position on a society paper in that city.

A report was in circulation last week that small-pox had broken out in Dutton. Such is not the case, and no healthier place can be found in Ontario to-day than Dutton, for as far as we can learn there is not one case in the doctors' hands at present.

MARKETS.—Wheat 90c. to 95c., oats 28c. to 30c., pease 50c. to 55c., barley 40c., butter 20c., eggs 13c., dried apples 75c. per bushel, potatoes 26c. per bush., green apples 40c. to 50c. per bush., lard 12½c., tallow 5c., pork $5 to $5.75, light pork in great demand at highest price.

Such good sleighing as we have had the past week has seldom been seen. Large quantities of logs and wood are being brought in, and some big loads are seen. D. J. McArthur on Friday came into town with a load of cordwood 9 feet in height from the rack, containing 3½ cords of wood.

It will pay you to read the advertisements in this week's issue of the ENTERPRISE. No advertisements of a doubtful character are admitted to its columns, and you can depend upon all being first-class business houses and places where you will get the best value for your money.

The petition for the repeal of the Canada Temperance Act for the county of Middlesex was filed at the registry office, West Middlesex, Glencoe, on Thursday afternoon. It is a formidable looking document, and contains over 6,000 signatures. It lies at the registry office for ten days and will then be sent to Ottawa.

Messrs. A. D. McGugan, of Aldborough, and D. Black, of Iona Station, returned Friday from attendance on the meeting of the Central Farmers' Institute in Toronto. A large number of subjects having an important bearing on the material interests of farmers were discussed, many valuable suggestions were made, and an organization was effected that may result in crystalizing into law many of these suggestions. Only twelve electoral districts were not represented at the meeting.

On Friday evening last the Methodists held an oyster social at the parsonage, which, judging from the number present and the satisfied look each wore, was as successful as any one could desire. The tables were well loaded with all manner of good things and the supply of oysters was large enough to more than satisfy everybody. The ladies did their part well, and to their efforts much of the credit is due. Mr. and Mrs. Middleton made everybody welcome and one could not help feeling at home with them. The time was spent in music, games, etc., until a late hour, when all dispersed to their homes.

This week we send out a large number of sample copies to those who are not now subscribers. Since the control of the ENTERPRISE passed entirely into our hands many improvements have been made in its general appearance, and more will be made from time to time as business warrants. We are glad to know that our efforts to please the public have been successful so far, as the fast increasing circulation shows. From those who are not at present subscribers, we ask a trial, and feel satisfied that they will continue. The job department has been thoroughly refitted and all orders will be promptly filled. The whole is under the charge of a practical job printer, of long experience, and all work is guaranteed to give satisfaction.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Young People's Christian Advance Society on Tuesday night and a good programme was carried out. No debate took place however, several of those who were to take part being unable to be present. Following is the programme:—Opening hymn; recitation, Miss Lena McIntyre; reading, Miss Nellie Lugsdin; instrumental music, Miss Ada Black; essay on Milton, Miss Flo. McIntyre; short addresses by C. St. Clair Leitch, Rev. T. Wilson, M. McArthur and H. O'Malley; quartette, Misses Hollingshead and McIntyre, Messrs. Hollingshead and Saunders; critic's report, Miss K. McPherson. The Society will give its first social to-morrow (Friday) evening at the residence of Mr. Neil McArthur, when a good time is expected. Sleighs will be in readiness to convey [illegible] wishing to go and everybody will [illegible] welcome.

[illegible] angrily, "John Smith," said his wife, "your conduct toward me for the past six months has been so outrageous and unbearable that I shall apply for a divorce. I shall see a lawyer to-morrow." "Just as you like, my dear," replied John Smith, "only, for heaven's sake, get a good lawyer who understands the divorce business and who can get one as soon as possible."

At the meeting of the High School Literary Society held last Friday evening, it was decided to discontinue the meetings for the season after Saturday evening next. The programme prepared for the next meeting is an excellent one and a good attendance is expected. Following is the programme:— Reading, M. McArthur; solo, G. D. Ruthven; essay, J. R. Wilson; debate, "Resolved that intemperance has caused more suffering and ruin than war", affirmative, Jno. Paton and J. D. Blue, negative, N. Campbell and H. O'Malley; instrumental, Miss Bella Paterson; paper, A. G. Graham; trio, Messrs. Hollingshead, Saunders and Wilson; critics, Miss McIntyre and C. E. Knight.

Teacher—Tommy, what is the half of eight? Pupil—Sideways or top? Teacher—What do you mean? Pupil—Why, half from the top of 8 is 0, and half sideways is 3.

The Reason Why

Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.

In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baine, New Berne, N. C., writes:

"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."

Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia

and Constipation are almost universal. Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:

"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say, that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."

The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began takirg Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

COME

In and see the bargains we are offering in Plows from $12 to $65, complete; in Pumps from $6.50 to $17, complete; in Cutters from $12 to $65, complete.

AND

Examine our stock of Plow, Harrow, Rake, Drill, Cultivator, and other repairs which are kept constantly on hand

SEE

The bargains we offer in Buggies, Democrats and Sleighs.

US

And be convinced that we sell nothing but the best of Binders, Mowers, Harrows, Cultivators, Hay Forks, Slings and Load Lifters.

OUR SPECIALTIES

Are Binding Twine, Garden Seeds, [illegible]ements and Machine Oils.

Imp[illegible]

SIFTON BROS., [illegible]

DUTTON.

HE FROZE TO DEATH

Because he failed to take advantage of the bargains in

PARLOR, BOX AND COOKING STOVES

NOW OFFERED AT

WHITE'S -:- HARDWARE -:- STORE,

HEADQUARTERS FOR

Hardware, Stoves, Tinware, Paints, Oils, Glass, &c.

Eavetroughing in Iron and Tin. Picture Framing a speciality.

A. E. WHITE, DUTTON.

1889 -:- SPRING! -:- 1889

F. W. DRAKE, Corner Store, Leitch Block.

THE CHEAPEST SPOT IN DUTTON!

1st. We enter upon this season's trade with a stock of New Goods complete in every respect.

2nd. As to the premises, there is no brighter or more attractive store in West Elgin.

3rd. We make the requirements of the trade a study as well as a business.

4th. Our prices are close, challenging the most minute comparison.

5th. The stock consists of Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, Crockery and Glassware, Wall Paper, &c.

6th. Special values in bleached and factory Cottons.

7th. Great variety of Shirtings and Cottonades—A1 fast colors.

8th. Be sure and see our 10c. line of Prints, latest styles, fast colors, equal to the regular 12½c line.

9th. Dress Goods, the most fashionable, 10c. per yard and up.

10th. Tweeds, all kinds; Worsteds, black and colored. Suits made to order on the premises by F. Millard, (formerly with E. McDiarmid & Son), and satisfaction guaranteed. Mr. Millard needs no especial praise as a workman, suits made by him are walking advertisements.

American Timothy and Clover Seed for Sale. Also the best barrel Salt.

F. W. DRAKE.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE BELL ORGANS AND PIANOS.

W. BELL & CO., GUELPH, ONT.

CALL AND SEE OUR STOCK OF INSTRUMENTS BEFORE BUYING.

THE BEST VALUE GUARANTEED.

A large stock of small instruments, viz:

VIOLINS, ACCORDEONS, HARMONICAS, &C., ALSO SHEET MUSIC.

We also keep in stock the best American Sewing Machine Oil, Needles and Repairs, at

I. M. JACKSON'S MUSIC EMPORIUM,

Opposite the Commercial Hotel, Main Street, Dutton.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8—No. 9. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1889. WHOLE No. 343.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B., BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, ETC. OFFICES—St. Thomas and Dutton. ☞Money to Loan.

A. J. LEITCH, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, pb DUTTON.

WILLIAM DRINKWATER, VETERINARY SURGEON, DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON, LICENSED AUCTIONEER, d DUTTON.

HENRY CLAY, BARRISTER-AT-LAW, ROCHE BLOCK, DUTTON. Commissioner in the High Court. ☞ Money Loaned.

MONEY TO LOAN AT LOWEST RATES. First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented. Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc. S. JOHN SCHULTE, OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office, St. Thomas.

MONEY TO LOAN at 6 per cent. on the most favorable terms for repayment. ERMATINGER & ROBINSON, Barristers, St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST. D. D. S.—Pennsylvania. L. D. S.—Ontario. 351 TALBOT STREET, · OPP. ELGIN STREET ST. THOMAS.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS for all classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order. Satisfaction guaranteed. F. A. HUMPIDGE, Office—Front Street. Dutton.

DR. G. ADAMS SWANN, Surgeon Dentist. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown every Wednesday.

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon Dentist. Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate R.C.D.S. of Ontario. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Office closed on Mondays only. Office — Leitch Block, Dutton.

SALESMEN WANTED.

Salary and expenses paid, or liberal commissions to local men. Outfit free—no collecting. Permanent positions guaranteed Experience unnecessary. Choice of territory if apply at once.

L. P. Thurston & Co.,

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20. W. A. BRUSH, Photographer, Dutton, Ont.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on

tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.

BANKERS—British North America.

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to

1-17tf N. PHELPS.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

The Star Loan Company

181 Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.

G. E. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.

C. W. ALLEN, Proprietor.

Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do

Lumber Dressing of all Kinds

with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate ☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.

M. COCHRANE.

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a

General Line of Blacksmithing.

IN HORSESHOEING.

☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.

M. L. MILLAR.

Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

MICHIGAN CENTRAL

"The Niagara Falls Route."

CANADA SOUTHERN DIVISION.

GOING EAST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
Ridgetown	8 08	9 47	11 02
Rodney	8 38	10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50	.....	12 30
Dutton	9 09	10 29	12 58
Iona	9 25	.....	1 30
Shedden	9 36	.....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05	11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
St. Thomas (dep't)	3 00	12 25	5 25
Shedden	3 24	.....	6 01
Iona	3 32	.....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	.....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	A. M.
Leave St. Thomas	6 30	6 00	10 15
Arrive at London	7 25	6 50	11 00

GOING SOUTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	P. M.
Leave London	8 50	2 10	7 40
Ar. at St. Thomas	9 30	3 50	8 45

JNO. G. LAVEN, Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto.

DR LOW'S WORM SYRUP
DESTROYS AND REMOVES WORMS OF ALL KINDS IN CHILDREN OR ADULTS SWEET AS SYRUP AND CANNOT HARM THE MOST DELICATE CHILD

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Flour has moved up another ten cents in Winnipeg.

The loss by the fire in Montreal on Saturday was $150,000.

B. Miller was fined $100 at Chatham on Saturday for perjury.

Ald. Grenier was Friday elected mayor of Montreal by acclamation.

Two small fires in Guelph on Saturday night did $300 worth of damage.

Moses Watt was killed near Chatham on Wednesday by a falling tree.

April 4 is the date set for Scott Act repeal in Lennox and Addington.

Two boys were captured near Brockville Friday while smuggling coal oil.

Winnipeg street cars had to be put on runners Wednesday for the first time.

John Neil had his hand cut off by a circular saw at Ailsa Craig Wednesday.

Benjamin McMahon was arraigned Friday at Chatham in the Holton murder case.

M. C. Cameron, ex-M. P. for West Huron, is very ill with internal hemorrhage.

Wisner's factory, at Brantford, was damaged by fire last week to the extent of $800.

The village of Leamington has now a population of 2,268 and wants to become a town.

The public school building at Campbellford was burned Thursday. Loss $8,000.

A Cleveland iron company is to work an iron mine at Belmont, Peterboro' County.

At Tilsonburg the other day Mrs. Higgins was fined $50 and costs for violation of the Scott Act.

It is said that $20,000 worth of smelts were taken in the vicinity of Buctouche, N. B., last week.

The wife of a Winnipeg auctioneer sent her husband on a visit, and then eloped with a young man.

Chandler, who attempted to murder Mr. J. A. Sheffield in Montreal, has been committed for trial.

Two Ingersoll servant girls had a fight last week, when one nearly brained the other with a saucepan.

Hamilton had 23 fires last year. Loss, $38,072,000, or $60,000 below the average loss for ten years past.

Eighty more employes of the G. T. R. at London were furloughed on Saturday to cut down expenses.

Armstrong's boot and shoe store at Kingston was damaged by fire yesterday to the extent of $2,400.

A white baby was left on the doorstep of a colored woman's residence at Brantford on Tuesday night.

A burglar ran out of the carpet factory at Guelph on Saturday into the arms of a policeman, but got away.

An Elizabethtown man has acknowledged that he forged several names to a Scott Act repeal petition.

A fire at Brandon last week did nearly $50,000 damage. Several stores and the Masonic block were burned.

Two Italians were stabbed in a quarrel near Lachine on Friday night, one of them being fatally wounded.

A soldier of "B" battery at Quebec was caught in the act of stealing two pairs of trousers on Saturday night.

The Kingston Commissioners will issue only the number of licences allowed by law, thus cutting off seven.

Tuesday night John James, who lives about half a mile from Sarnia, was burned to death in his own house.

Mr. C. J. Brydges, land commissioner of the Hudson Bay Company, died suddenly at Winnipeg on Saturday.

The Provincial Treasurer of Quebec made his annual statement Friday announcing a surplus of $373,000.

John Durochais, a farmer living near Petite Cote, Essex County, was fatally kicked by a horse on Thursday.

The 265 weavers in the Stormont cotton mill at Cornwall are on strike because the length of cuts was increased.

Another coasting accident occurred at Hamilton on Thursday night in which E. T. Wright had his face laid open.

Thirty-three Indian boys have been left destitute of clothing through the fire at the Muncey school on Tuesday.

Another car load of cotton left Kingston, Wednesday for China, making the third car of 150 bales shipped this year.

Two suits for damages against Monreal were decided in favor of the plaintiffs Saturday, the sums being $450 and $100.

A dispatch says that a few days ago the house of a Rimouski settler was burned and three children perished in the flames.

Robert Jacobs was buried under a load of wood that he was taking into Hamilton when the sleigh upset. He may not recover.

T. Maurhen, seed-wheat dealer, arrested at Renfrew, has taken action against Police Magistrate Daly, of Kingston, for $10,000.

The Manitoba and Northwest Boards of Trade are taking steps to have a change made in the method of selecting Manitoba grain standards.

A Winnipeg dispatch says the western system of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company has been taken over by the Northern Pacific.

McGrath, the murderer of Holden in Montreal, has been committed for trial. His wife has been removed from the jail to the hospital, being ill.

A public meeting at Cornwall last night refused to sanction the granting of $25,000 to aid the Prescott railway to build a line to Hawkesbury.

The Provincial Secretary of Quebec Friday created a sensation by announcing that a bill had been tampered with after leaving the Government's hands.

A Montreal paper publishes a story alleging that Miss Bedard, of Tuigwick, has not tasted food since the beginning of 1882, and has lived entirely on water.

H. R. Emerson, Liberal, and Peter Duffy and Sheriff Steadman, Conservatives, were nominated for the Local House for Albert County, N. B., on Saturday.

The Northwest Boards of Trade want the Government to deepen all canals between Port Arthur and Montreal to allow vessels carrying 67,000 bushels to pass through.

D. M. Brown's book store, Strathroy, was discovered to be on fire the other morning. The stock was almost ruined. Loss on stock $2,000, no insurance. The building was fully covered by insurance.

In the Manitoba Legislature Thursday the Attorney-General submitted the modified agreement between the Government and the Northern Pacific, under which the Government's liability is greatly reduced.

Presentation.

On Monday evening members and adherents of Knox Church to the number of 75 gathered at the church, where teams were in readiness to convey them to the residence of Rev. Mr. Urquhart, who has been so long moderator of the congregation, at New Montreal. After a few slight mishaps the party started and soon reached its destination, only one load being upset, and no one injured. Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart, although taken completely by surprise, soon made all feel at home. After warming up Rev. Mr. Wilson was called to the chair and introduced Mr. W. Rothwell, who read the following address to Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart :—

To Rev. Alexander Urquhart :

Respected Friend and Brother,—We, the members and adherents of Knox Church, Dutton, take this opportunity of conveying to you our thanks for the many acts of kindness shown us during our vacancy as a congregation. Knowing as we do that the field over which in the providence of God you have been called upon to labor is a large and widely scattered one, one requiring all the efforts of a faithful pastor, and knowing at the same time that the roads over which you had to travel were sometimes almost impassable, we value all the more highly the patience you have exercised with us. During our vacancy we had many disappointments, yet in you we had one who was not easily discouraged, but rather ready to urge us on "to try again," and the united state of the congregation at the term of our induction was largely due to your untiring efforts on our behalf. Knowing now on the other hand as you do our circumstances financially, we do not feel able in any measure to adequately reward you for your labors, nor do we attempt to do so, but simply ask as a favor that you and your esteemed partner, will accept from us these chairs as a slight token of our appreciation of your labors on our behalf, and our prayer is that she and you may long be spared to enjoy together the comfort which they may give.

Signed, on behalf of the congregation,
R. S. McMILLAN,
JAMES MCARTHUR,
WILLIAM ROTHWELL.

Mr. Urquhart made a suitable reply, thanking the donors for their kindness, after which a short programme of music was given and lunch served, the gathering breaking up about 11 o'clock. The presents consisted of a handsome arm chair for Rev. Mr. Urquhart, an equally nice rocking chair for Mrs. Urquhart, and a library lamp.

Shedden.

Verner Clare, James Balsden and Dan. McLachlin are attending St. Thomas Business College.

Neil McLachlin intends opening out a stock of ready-made boots and shoes about March 1.

Large quantities of brick are being teamed away from here at present.

Jacob Heidt will build a large house on his farm in the spring.

Wilson Stafford will supply villagers with milk after March 1.

The Rev. R. Thompson is conducting revival service meetings in the Methodist church at present.

Mrs. Talbot Sterme had the misfortune to fall and break her arm a few days ago. Dr. Howell reduced the fracture.

Jud. Barwell reports business brisk in the livery since sleighing came.

Our popular teacher, Mr. Jonas Black, will have an entertainment in the school house shortly. Proceeds to be applied towards purchasing a bell for the school.

Wallacetown.

Mr. D. McGugan, of Coyne's Corners, met with a severe accident while working in the woods last Friday. An axe he was working with slipped inflicting a cut on his knee joint, requiring nine stitches.

Wm. Crehan, while chopping in the woods of Mr. Alfred Bobier, on Tuesday, met with an accident that will lay him up for the remainder of the winter. He had experienced some difficulty in falling a tree which had become lodged and before he could get out of the way was caught and knocked to the ground insensible. Mr. Bobier, being with him, ran to his assistance, and when consciousness returned it was discovered that he had received a compound fracture of the forearm, the two bones being broken in a number of places, and also a severe scalp wound. Dr. Ruthven was speedily summoned and attended his injuries.

Mrs. John Blackwood, of Qu'Appelle Valley, N. W. T., with her children, who has been visiting her parents for the past three months, returned home on Friday last. She was accompanied by Mrs. Patterson, of Iona Station, who has a son living in the Northwest.

The annual tea meeting in connection with the Presbyterian Church was held as announced on Tuesday evening. It was largely attended, and a pleasant time was spent. Interesting addresses were delivered by Revs. Middleton and Wilson, of Dutton, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Kelso, Drs. Ling and Ruthven, and Mr. Alex. Clarke. Excellent music was given by the German Choral Band, conducted by Prof. Wright, Mr. Draper, of Aylmer, and the church choir, all fully maintaining their reputations for fine music. Too much praise cannot be given to the ladies for the way in which they fulfilled their part and the evident satisfaction of all who partook of the good things showed full appreciation of their labors. Rev. Geo. Sutherland, of Fingal, occupied the chair in his usual able and pleasant style. After the usual votes of thanks Mr. Wilson dismissed the meeting with the benediction. Proceeds, $70.

The following is the result of the 5th and senior 4th history examination held in the Wallacetown public school on Friday, Feb. 15th. Class I getting over 50 per cent., class II over 33 per cent., class III under 33 per cent. History, maximum 80 :—

Class I—Florence Davis 66, E. T. Stidwell 60, Thos. H. McColl 57, Mary J. Sutherland 53, Minnie Bowlby 48, Geo. Blackwood 48, Alma Cusack 45, M. C. McLaws 42, Maggie McCallum 42.

Class II—Daniel Black 38, Duncan Bell 39, Mary McCallum 37, Leslie Pearce, 35, Ada MacKee 32.

Class III—Annie Dewar 21, Maggie McIntyre, 19, Wm. A. McGill 19, Rosa McIntyre 18, Wm. A. Sutherland 16, Harry Drumgould 14, Mattie Gerow —.

J. R. PATTON, Teacher.

Tyrconnel.

The good sleighing has made times lively here.

The wood yards are again being replenished with a good quantity of wood and bolts.

Mr. M. Conn is having a great quantity of wood and bolts delivered at the upper dock.

Parties seem to be the rage of the night here. There were three and one social last week. The sodial was held at the residence of Mrs. Walters in aid of the Methodist Church. Proceeds $16.

We expected to hear the merry ring of wedding bells here soon as no less than three couples are contemplating union. We presume this would happen if marriage licences could be procured on credit. Another was expected at the townline of Aldborough, but for the last three weeks proceedings have been dull in that direction. Liven up, Texas John, what's the matter.

Shooting.

Following is the score of the return match between the Ridgetown and Dutton Gun Clubs, shot here on Thursday, Feb. 14 :—

DUTTON.

Jas. Bake	10
W. Eustice	8
Jos. Sifton	8
C. E. Doyle	6
W. James	6
Dan. McPherson	7
A. E. White	4
C. E. Humpidge	4
W. Hollingshead	8
Total	61

RIDGETOWN.

H. Catton	10
D. Leitch	8
C. Thorold	9
C. Scane	8
H. Scane	10
H. Ruth	9
J. Carr	5
W. Thorold	11
C. Watson	8
Total	78

The Dutton Club will visit Ridgetown again shortly.

Si Jeunesse Savait !

I stand upon my balcony,
My tea gown softly flutters;
Perhaps it might be wise to stand
Inside the oaken shutters.
And yet, though I can see her face,
I hear no word she utters.

Her white hand rests upon the gate,
Her smooth cheek flushes brightly
His breath a cloud of little bangs
Is swaying very slightly;
And he? Well, he's the favored one
For whom her gas burns nightly.

Amusing love of early youth,
So fresh, so bright, so vernal!
Such faith in all, such love and truth,
To me it seems supernal.
For I have lived to learn that naught
On earth is quite eternal.

My dears, some day you'll know with me
That love flames just in flashes;
That time has glowing sandalled feet,
That burns all things to ashes.
That faith and truth are lights that shine
Only beneath youth's lashes.

Yet standing here, just out of sight,
(Duenna and adviser);
I watch you silly two to-night
As gold the envious miser,
And find myself (oh! breathe it light)
In tears that I am wiser

ESTELLE'S INFATUATION:

A NOVEL.

And all this Caleb knew, as well as he knew that the chrysalis must develop according to its own laws, and that folding it in rose leaves or cushioning it on satin will be of no avail if the hour of its butterfly birth has not come. Yet he suffered himself to be at times deceived by hope and desire, and the mirage which looked as if it might be real!

Caleb's father wanted him to take Lady Elizabeth for a wife, but the young man knew that any lady whatever of the Kingshouse would be welcome; and Estelle in her pearly grace and beauty more welcome than another.

"Thou shalt have it all, lad," Miles used to say, as his biggest bribe. "If thou'st shamed of thy own, thou shalt have it all to thyself and my lady yonder. Grapes and peaches, furniture and land, nags and coaches, I'll not keep the value of a brass farthing from thee, more nor I and thy mother'll want for our old age. A clean shirt o' Sundays, lad, and a good glass for a friend, that's all I ask out of the many thousands as we have. Only let me see thee mated with the best in the land, and I'll die content."

But when Caleb said, as he did once, "Give me something of my own now, father; out of so much you could well spare me a few hundreds in my pocket," Miles answered him back by such a turbid stream of abuse and objurgation that he never ventured to repeat the experiment.

"All, if thou'lt give me a lady for my daughter," he said. "All, dost hear, jackass? but by the Lord not so much as 'll buy thee a crust of bread while thou bides here as my son in my house. I'll be my own ganger and captain of my own ship as long as I'm at the head. I'll give way to thee the day thou hast thy wife, but not an hour sooner. So now you know."

Which declaration only increased the poor omad'haun's general perplexity when matched with Mrs. Clanricarde's hints—as broad as cart-wheels, according to Caleb's unspoken simile—and only his own consciousness of unworthiness to keep him steady to his self-imposed negation.

CHAPTER X.

THE CROSSING OF THE RUBICON.

Things financial at Les Saules had gone from bad to worse. Mr. Clanricarde's last investments, made in faith, had fructified in failure. One turn more of that Stock Exchange screw, and the bailiffs would take possession; and then where would Estelle's matrimonial market be? For beauty, although such a splendid jewel in itself, wants a certain amount of material setting to give it stability; a man with intrinsic advantages looks for some kind of equivalent besides that which, great as it is, can be destroyed forever by an infected laundry or a runaway horse. The value of birth, for instance, is a constant quantity, and the multiplication of riches is potentially infinite; but beauty is as a radiant mass, subject to perpetual shrinkage—a floating capital, slowly but surely diminishing. Hence it needs some kind of background—something beside itself—else would all the fair-faced Cicelys of the milking-pail and handsome Jennies of the spinning-mill find as many King Cophetuas as there were moneyed men in the district, and no nut-brown maid would go without her lover who was an earl's son and not "a banished man." And a man in possession, with a father squeezed flat under the Stock Exchange screw, is not exactly the best kind of buttress to be imagined, even for such a monument of loveliness as was Estelle Clanricarde.

All these thoughts, in other forms of words, possessed Mrs. Clanricarde night and day. The peril of the moment, the fear of still further decline, the fact that no one else was at hand—all made her resolve to bring about this hideous marriage, whereof, however, the present prominent obstacle was Caleb's own unconquerable shyness. Shyness—not disinclination. Mrs. Clanricarde was too astute not to see the difference. The latter would perhaps have daunted even her. The former was no more to be regarded than a child's fear of the dark, to which it was analogous. Of Estelle herself the mother had no grave doubts. For all her suspicions of that underground rivulet of love still flowing between her and Charlie, she did not mistrust the weight of her own influence when the time for using it should have come. It was Caleb, not Estelle, that had to be conquered, the man to be encouraged not the woman to be coerced, which made the whole position more embarrassing, and the tactics to be pursued more difficult. But time and need pressed, and something must be done.

Accordingly an invitation to dinner was sent to the heir of Redhill.

The long summer evening was favorable to confidential talk, as well as redolent of love. Mrs. Clanricarde left Estelle in the drawing-room, and proposed a little stroll in the garden with Mr. Stagg. Like the pimpernel before a shower, like birds and beasts before a storm, Caleb, sensitive and double sensed, knew that a crisis was at hand. Everything showed it. Mrs. Clanricarde's almost oppressive kindness; her husband's evidently forced attempt to follow suit; Estelle's unconcealed depression—the fear, the scorn, the prayers, the loathing, that passed in changing waves of feeling over her face—whence all pity was banished in the passion of her own pain; yes, they stood on the brink of the great Rubicon, and Caleb knew that it would be passed to-night. And how should he bear himself? What should he do? The girl would be offered to him by her mother, and passionately denied by herself, and he would have to choose between saving her position and sacrificing her person, or respecting her feelings and letting her fortunes be destroyed. He did not think of himself. His sole perplexity was, what was best for her.

The handsome, brisk, and hard-pressed lady shut her eyes to all that stood against her. She would not let herself be troubled. Her future son-in-law, when he forgot himself—and he was so preoccupied that he forgot himself very often—ate with his knife, then helped himself to salt on the tip, picked his teeth with his fingers, bit his bread without breaking it, drank with his unwiped lips and a full mouth, tossed off his custard like wine, and spooned his cherry tart like so much porridge; then remembering his offence, he blushed till his sandy hair looked washed with red, and became so confused and humiliated he did not understand what was said to him, nor could he have answered if he had understood.

"Trifles light as gossamer webs!" thought Mrs. Clanricarde. "But those solid thousands are facts."

"I cannot tell you how glad I am that we have come to know you better," she said, when she had him alone and safe in the garden, bending her vivacious black eyes with as much maternal tenderness as she could command on the miserable creature at her side.

"You are very kind, Mrs. Clanricarde," said Caleb, feeling that he must say something.

"We have the highest possible esteem and affection for you," she continued, still maternal and tender.

"I'm not worth it," stammered Caleb.

She shook his hand with a fine impulsiveness.

"Don't say that!" she cried, and her voice was both flattering and deprecatory. "You are one of the best and dearest young men I have ever known—a man to trust with one's greatest treasures, and to be sure of in every relation of life. I do not know a fault that you have—but one." Here Caleb opened his round eyes and stared. "And that is your modesty," continued Mrs. Clanricarde. "You are a great deal too modest, my dear Mr. Stagg—but let me call you Caleb; such a fine suggestive name it is!—you do not hold yourself in as high esteem as you should. You are fit to marry a princess."

"Oh, Mrs. Clanricarde!" put in poor Caleb, his modesty bleeding at every pore.

"I can read you, you see," she continued, her smile as soft as swan's-down, and her voice as sweet as honey can make even vinegar. "You do not think yourself worthy of a grand lady, do you?"

"No," said Caleb, in a low voice, "I don't, Mrs. Clanricarde."

"And I do," she replied, her vivacious black eyes levelled again full on his face.

"I am not fit to be the husband of a real lady, Mrs. Clanricarde," returned Caleb, with a pause, speaking with desperate steadiness. "I am naught but a miner's son, and I was naught but a miner myself till I was a grown lad of seventeen. And what's bred in the bone will out in the flesh, Mrs. Clanricarde, and not all father's money can make gentlefolks of us, or fit to go shares with the quality."

Intentionally Caleb went back on the old habit of speech, which was more purely provincial than he had taught himself of late to be.

"You are better than a gentleman," said Mrs. Clanricarde, with desperate steadiness on her own part. "You are a good man, my dear Mr. Caleb."

"I'm a fool, that's what I am, Mrs. Clanricarde," said Caleb.

"Why do you say that?" asked Estelle's mother, doing battle for him against himself.

"I ought never to have let myself be persuaded," said Caleb. "Me and mine are not fit for gentlefolks, and I should have known that, and stuck to the old shop and not come out of it."

"You dear, foolish, modest fellow!" cried Mrs. Clanricarde. "Why, we all love you. You are the delight of the place, for every one in it knows what a good honest creature you are. Look at Lady Elizabeth. Any one would say she was in love with you, for the fuss she makes with you—the affection she has for you," she added, correcting herself.

"Lady Elizabeth is an angel and pities me," said Caleb. "She knows me better than any one, and she is sorry for my false position."

"False! Where is the falseness? Young, rich, clever, good—what does it signify that your father made his own fortune, and that you have not a long line of ancestry behind you? How many of our best men are self-made?"

"Not quite so near the ground as we," said Caleb, still maintaining the self-humiliation, which was but another name for desperation.

"They that humble themselves shall be exalted," said Mrs. Clanricarde; "and so shall you be, my dear young friend."

"Mrs. Clanricarde, ma'am, don't!" cried Caleb, feeling like a drowning man, with the waters closing over his head.

"To show you how highly I esteem and, I may say, love you," Mrs. Clanricarde went on to say; "and to show you, too, how clearly I have read your secret heart, I am going to be your interpreter to yourself. You love Estelle, and are too bashful to say so. Is it not so? Have I not read your secret as I say?"

Caleb's face changed to a very piteousness of embarrassment.

Mrs. Clanricarde laid her hand on his arm, and her slight slim fingers pressed like slender rods of iron into his flesh.

"Is it not so?" she repeated.

"I admire your daughter, Mrs. Clanricarde," stammered Caleb, in a trange voice.

"You love her," insisted Estelle's mother.

The poor fellow put up his hands before his face.

"Yes; God help me, I do!" he sobbed.

His guard was beaten down. He was at his adversary's mercy.

"Then you shall marry her," said Mrs. Clanricarde, in tones the cold determination of which no affected tremor could hide.

"How can I, Mrs. Clanricarde!" said Caleb, still behind the mask of his freckled hands. "She doesn't value me. She never could love me. How can I wed her against her will, as it would be?"

"She will learn to love you," said Mrs. Clanricarde. "You are too good a man not to be loved. She respects you already. That is one step gained. The rest will follow."

Caleb slowly shook his head. He was just master enough of himself to disbelieve this flattering promise, sweet as it was—responsive to his own desires as it also was.

"My dear young man, you do not know a woman," said Mrs. Clanricarde, a pitying smile borne like the breath of flowers on her words. "We are such creatures of the heart! We are so easily gained by men! Give such a girl as my Estelle, so sweet and gentle as she is, such a husband as yourself, and in a very short time she will learn to prize and adore you. Your goodness, your patience, your cleverness and knowledge, will all fascinate and win her. I know what I am saying."

Still Caleb held his hands before his face, and slowly shook his sandy-colored head from side to side. Mrs. Clanricarde was beginning to feel doubtful whether her Waterloo would be won or not.

Then she said, fervently, "Believe me, my dear, I speak as a woman, avec connaissance de cause. Once married to you, Estelle will learn to love you, because you will treat her well and because you love her so fondly. Why, my dear Mr. Caleb, what else makes women love but because the man loves them! They do not give their hearts unsought—unwooed. Your love for my daughter is the guarantee that she will love you."

At this Caleb took down his hands and showed his tear-stained face in yet more pitiable plight than before. But into its disorder had flashed a ray of hope and happiness and exaltation so supreme as almost to beautify its homely outlines. It was the soul of an angel looking through the eyes of an animal.

"Do you really think so, Mrs. Clanricarde?" he said, clasping his hands as in prayer. "If you thought I could make her happy, and get out so much as a sparrow's meal of love from her, I would let her walk over my body if she'd a mind. I would lie down and die at her feet."

"What a drivelling idiot!" thought Mrs. Clanricarde, contemptuously.

Nothing in her nature answered to this fervid enthusiasm. Had Caleb made a business-like bargain with her, offering his money as an equivalent for Estelle's beauty, she would have discussed the terms on the basis of their needs as coolly as she would have bargained for a carriage-horse or a wheelbarrow.

"What a drivelling idiot!" she thought.

"Trust me, my dear, she said aloud. "I pledge you my word as a woman who knows her own sex, and her daughter best of all, Estelle will love you as much as you can desire. It will be your own fault if she does not. And I think we are sure of your part."

"God bless you for these comforting words!" said Caleb, now carried away from his former moorings as completely as a skiff in a tidal wave. "If she will have me she shall never have cause to repent it, so help me God in heaven!"

"Thank you, my son," said Mrs. Clanricarde. With again an outburst of fine impulsiveness she kissed the poor omad'haun on his cheek, and slightly shuddered as she did so. Then hastily rising from the seat where they had placed themselves—that seat under the shade of the spreading cedar where Estelle so often sat and dreamed of Charlie and their unlucky love—she said, with well-acted emotion, "Stay where you are, dear boy, and Estelle shall come to you."

With this she swept away, and Caleb was left to his own reflections.

Was it all true? Would she indeed be now brought to love him as her mother promised? After long years of patient waiting, of loving, serving and faithful apprenticeship, would she some day come to him, and of her own free-will hold out her hand to him, give him her sweet lips to kiss as one who had the right, offer him the treasures of her love, and say to him, "I love you?" Could it be true? How loyally he would shape his life to earn this great reward! She should be his queen, not his wife; and to her alone should belong the crown of sovereignty and the sceptre of dominion.

So he dreamed and thought, wrapt in his love like that sleeping babe in his robe of fire, while Mrs. Clanricarde in the drawing-room undertook the subjugation of her daughter, and drew the cords of her maternal authority to the utmost they would bear.

Her task was harder than she had anticipated. Fortified by her love for the one, which gave increased poignancy of disgust for the other, Estelle rebelled and refused, till her mother's patience—of what was in the beginning more diplomatic hardness than real wrath—gave way, and violent words were spoken which terrified the girl to hear, while they lashed to increased fury by their very echo the mother who had said them. Dark threats of public disgrace and eternal separation; of life-long banishment from home and country, and consignment to those French relations who would know how to treat an undutiful daughter as she deserved, passionate reminders of the curse lying on the head of a discarded child, like a crown of thorns ever pressing into the flesh, like a shadow on the path blotting out all sunshine; a sudden return to the pathos of appeal; the picture of father and mother turned into the streets to starve, reduced to beggary which the sacrifice of her own impossible fancy could avert—all that could most terrify a young girl's imagination and touch a daughter's heart, Mrs. Clanricarde poured forth into Estelle's ears like a boiling flood of mingled blood and tears—a fiery cloud of mingled wrath and sorrow.

For some time it was all in vain. Estelle held the image of her love before her eyes, and clung to the pedestal whereon she stood. Then at last, like something that gives way with a sudden snap, she, as Caleb had done before her, threw down her arms, and yielded herself prisoner to the force she could no longer resist.

"I will do as you wish, mother," she said, abruptly, standing stiff and rigid as if made of marble. "I will go out to Mr. Stagg."

"And God will bless you!" said Mrs. Clanricarde, putting her arms round the slender form that felt as if stricken to stone. "God will bless you as your mother does," she repeated, trying to draw down the averted head so that she might kiss that clay-cold face.

But Estelle tore herself away.

"Don't!" she said, harshly; "I cannot bear that, mother! and leave God's name out of a sacrilege and a sin."

"As you will, my poor dear darling!" said her mother, with a sigh admirably executed, drooping her own head with tender resignation.

So long as she had the main thing secure she cared little for the accessories, and whether Estelle counted her self-sacrifice as virtue or as sin made no change in her mother's mind.

Then Estelle, her face as pale as the face of a corpse, and the feeling of living death in her soul, went slowly over the lawn to the seat under that now desecrated cedar where Caleb Stagg sat dreaming of the time when he should call her his wife and make her his queen.

CHAPTER XI.

ON THE OTHER SIDE.

"My mother tells me you want to speak to me, Mr. Stagg," said Estelle, as she came up to where Caleb sat.

Like a sleeper suddenly awakened from a dream of treasure to the knowledge of loss, her dead white face and stiffened figure, the coldness of her voice, and the way in which she stood—her head turned away and her eyes looking into space—all brought Caleb back from hope to fact, from dream to reality, and made him conscious of his true position. He saw it all—as he had seen it before he had suffered himself to be flattered into folly by Mrs. Clanricarde's false words.

As she stood there, so sad and cold and lovely and reluctant—her natural shyness hardened to disdain, and dread of what was to come turning her ordinary fear to wound into the very cruelty of self-defence—a new spirit suddenly seemed to possess Caleb. His painful nervousness passed, his bashful awkwardness disappeared. In his very love for her—his profound pity and perplexity—he forgot himself, and the consciousness of his personal short-comings ceased to trouble him.

"Nay, never look like that, Miss Clanricarde. You must decide the matter for yourself," he said, gently. "I doubt you know what it all means."

Estelle was silent.

"Mrs. Clanricarde has told me that you are willing to marry me," he continued, his eyes fixed with grave tenderness on the girl's pallid face.

Estelle shivered through all her body, and her red, full lips drew themselves into a close line, like one who prevents a cry of pain.

"I understand it all," then said Caleb, still watching her. "Your affairs are in but a poor way, from all I hear, and not likely to get better. Father, he has more money than he can count or knows what to do with, and, as his only child, I shall have it all when he and mother go. I should have most of it now if I were to marry, and Mrs. Clanricarde thinks it would be a good thing for the family to get you well settled for gear. And I'm the only big purse holder hereaway. So she wants me for you, and you are not willing. That's just the long and short of it all."

He spoke in a quiet, firm, level tone, very unlike his usual interrupted manner, which left on his hearer the impression of physical writhing.

"How can I be willing when I do not love you?' said Estelle, hastily. "What girl wants to marry a man she does not love?"

"And you do not love me, Miss Clanricarde—and never could?" asked Caleb. "It is idle to ask if you love me now," he added, with the profoundest sadness in his voice. "God help me! how could you? But do you think that after years and years of kindness from me—of worship and devotion, and treating you as a queen, and never asking you for naught, you would not give of your own free-will—do you think that years after now you could come to have some kind of patience with me—some little kindness for me?"

Even Estelle was touched by the humility and unselfishness of her ungainly lover. Great as was her peril—and Charlie's—she could not be so inhuman as not to recognize the intrinsic goodness of her assigned executioner, who handled the knife so delicately, and was so gentle and tender.

"I should respect you, Mr. Stagg, and I respect you know," she answered, in a low voice, "but I could never love you—never! never! never!" she repeated, with sudden passion. "How could I?" she added, her eyebrows arched, and her under lip, which "a bee had newly stung," just a line thrust forward.

"Nay, indeed, how could you, Miss Clanricarde?" sighed Caleb. "I'm not of the kind for a dainty lady like you to love. I know it only too well, Miss Clanricarde; and small blame to you, I say."

"It is not that," said soft-hearted Estelle, shamed to compassion of a kind by this complete self-surrender. "Many girls would love you, Mr. Stagg, so kind and good as you are; many would, I am sure of that."

"But not you, Miss Clanricarde?"

"How can I?" she replied, with the desperate calmness of a gambler throwing his last chance. "I love Mr. Osborne, and only him, and I could never care for any other man in the world. How could I say that I should ever love you?—or any one, indeed?" she added.

"Ay! is it so?" said Caleb, with a little start. "I had heard there was a something between you and Mr. Osborne, but I didn't know it had gone that length."

"We have been engaged since we were boy and girl," said Estelle, "and I will never desert him. I will wait for him all my life. If I cannot marry him I will never marry any one else, and if I were dragged into the church I would say 'No' before the altar."

"And your mother, Mrs. Clanricarde, knows this?" he asked.

"Yes," said Estelle.

"Then how could she offer me to marry you, and say that you would consent?" asked Caleb again, with the honest clown's amaze at refined double-dealing.

"She spoke as she wished," said Mrs. Clanricarde's daughter, with the finest edge of scorn in her flexible voice. "My father has lost a quantity of money lately—all our fortune, indeed. Charlie is poor, and you are rich, and that is the whole story. You know that yourself. The thing is plain and simple enough."

"Yes, that is just as I put it," said Caleb, as quietly as if he were speaking of the most indifferent matter possible, and not of a thing which went with his very life and touched the innermost recesses of his being. But he was anxious to spare her both pain and embarrassment. "And that brings us round to our starting-point, Miss Clanricarde," he went on to say, after a moment's pause. "What is to be done for you, if you will not take me for my money's sake? You are just where you were."

"They must go into a smaller house, and I must go out as a governess or something till Charlie can afford to marry," said Estelle, bravely. "There are worse things in the world than either work or poverty," she added.

"Ay, that are there," said Caleb, a little dreamily. "An unloved man is worse."

"Yes, a great deal," she replied, quite simply—to repent of her candor when she saw those poor round fishy eyes grow red with sudden tears.

"If I could help you in your strait I would, Miss Clanricarde," then said Caleb, turning away from the thoughts of his own sorrow to lose himself in her difficulties. "But I have no means of my own. Father, he's a tight-hander, and does not make me so much as an allowance. He gives me all I want, and pays all I buy without a word, that I will say for him; but he never lets me have more than a couple of pounds in my pocket, and won't, he says, till I bring home a wife. And then all will be mine, and he'll keep back only what'll do for him and mother. So that, you see, Miss Clanricarde, I can do nothing out of myself. I'm like the Irish boggle," he added, simply, and yet with a little dash of bitterness in his voice, "that leprechaun who went with the estate."

(To be Continued).

A Toast to the Queen.

The following is a verbatim report of a speech in giving a toast of "The Queen" at a recent agricultural show dinner in Scotland. The Chairman said:

"Noo, gentlemen, will ye a' fill your glasses, for I'm aboot to bring forward 'The Queen.' (Applause.) Oor Queen, gentlemen, is really a wonderfu' woman, if I may say it; she's ane o' the guid auld sort, nae whigmaleeries or laiderals aboot her, but a douce daecent body. She's respectable beyond a doot. She has brocht up her grand family o' weelfaur'd lads and lassies—her auldest son being a credit to ony mither—and the're a' weel married. Ae daughter is nae less than married to the Duke o' Argyll's son and heir. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, ye'll maybe no believe it, but I ance saw the Queen. (Sensation.) I did. It was when I took my auld brown coo tae Perth show. I remember her weel—such color, such hair! (Interruption and cries of "Is it the coo or the Queen ye are proposing?") The Queen, gentlemen. I beg your pardon, but I was talking aboot the coo. However, as tae the Queen, somebody pointed her oot tae me at Perth station, and there she was, smart and tidy like, and says I tae myself: Gin my auld woman at hame slips awa' ye needna remain a widow anither hour langer.' (Cheers.) Noo, gentlemen, the whusky's guid, the nicht is lang, the weather is wet and the roads is saft and will harm naebody that comes to grief. So aff wi ye's; drink tae the bottom. 'The Queen!'" (Cheers)—Sheffield (Eng.) Telegraph.

A Monkey With a Peculiar Tale.

A murder was recently committed near Lucknow. It was detected, it is said, by a monkey. It appears that a juggler, with his wife, a goat and two monkeys, were attacked by two Moplahs, who killed all except the male monkey, which escaped, and buried the bodies in the jungle. The male monkey took its station upon a big tree, watched everything, and when a constable passed by the animal made after him, laid hold of the man's leg and dragged him to the place where the bodies were buried. The bodies were exhumed, after which the monkey showed the way to a hut which the murderers had entered. Not finding them the animal took the constable in another direction, and suddenly ran at full speed and seized a Moplah, who was going to bathe near a tank, by the neck, and waited till the constable arrived. This led to the detection of the murderers. —London Court Journal.

Husband vs. Baby.

Wife (evening)—"My dear, don't think of going out to-night. Remember what a cold you have and how deadly the night air is. Stay here close to the fire, and I will send the girl for that medicine for you. You must not go yourself. There, that's right. Now just toast yourself and drink this hot ginger tea. As soon as the water is ready I'll bring it in so you can soak your feet. Then wrap yourself in my fur circular while going to your room. The least draught may be your death."

Same Wife (time midnight, to husband in a copious perspiration)—"Husband! Husband! Jump up quick and run for the doctor. Baby has coughed twice."

Matrimony in Chicago.

A good many Chicago people are getting married nowadays. Among the happy couples who procured licenses last Wednesday may be mentioned Michael Wawzyniak and Anna Cichanska, Ignatius Clybowski and Annie Wyschenewska, and Jane Strzyzynska and Antonia Oksinska. All these names are regular tooth-pullers, but marriage will wipe out half of them. Marriage is not a failure.—Chicago News.

A Plausible Theory.

Mrs. De Sweet—"I can't understand why so many cultured men are willing to leave all the happiness of home, all the blessings of civilization, and spend a life-time in explorations in such countries as Africa."

Colonel Warmheart (gallantly)—"All men, madam, are not blessed with such wives as Mr. De Sweet."

"My wife is a perfect pattern of order and tidiness!" a gentleman once remarked to a group of his friends. "If I were to get up at midnight I should find in the dark every article of my linen." After this effort he felt for his pocket handkerchief and drew forth instead—a baby's shirt.

Consignments of green corn were received in San Francisco last week.

A letter from Manchester, England bearing the simple address: "P. T. Barnum America," was recently delivered to the veteran showman at his home in Bridgeport, Conn., without an hour's delay beyond the time which it would have taken to reach him if fully directed. Another example of the value of advertising

The Little Ones.

The little ones are pests, we sigh
And lots of trouble make us;
Ere golden morning opes her eye
They from our slumbers wake us.

Nay, oft ere half the night is o'er,
They start us from our dreaming,
And we must rise and walk the floor
Until they cease their screaming.

Perhaps our rashness we deplore
Indulge in wishing, maybe,
We had remained a bachelor
While singing "Sleep, my baby."

We wonder why we took a wife,
While wrath within us nursed is,
And think of all the ills of life
A squaling babe the worst is.

But when grim death is hovering nigh
(Far distant may that day be!)
"Take all we own, O, Lord! 'we cry,
"But spare to us the baby."

A Funny World.

This world is very funny,
For no matter how much money
Man is earning he will spend it, and be hard up all the time;
To his utmost he is straining
To catch up, without attaining,
Till he makes his life a burden when it should be bliss sublime.

He who earns a thousand merely
Thinks two thousand yearly
Would be just the figure to make happiness complete.
But his income when it doubles
Only multiplies his troubles,
For his outgo then increasing makes his both ends worse to meet.

It is run in debt and borrow,
Flush to-day and broke to-morrow,
Financeering every way to postpone the day of doom;
Spending money ere he makes it,
And then wondering what takes it,
Till he, giving up the riddle, looks for rest within the tomb.

Oh, this world is very funny
To the average man whose money
Doesn't quite pay for the dancing that he does before he should.
And he kills himself by trying
Just a little higher flying
Than is suited to his pocket and his own eternal good.

AN EXPENSIVE LUXURY.

What it Costs to Raise an Ordinary Boy to Man's Estate.

"My father never did anything for me," recently remarked a young man who a few weeks ago finished his school life and is now seeking a good business opening. Judging by the words and the complaining tone in which they were uttered, the member of the firm who heard them is prone to the belief that the young man's idea of "doing something" is an outright gift of $1,000 in a lump, or the purchase of a partnership in an established concern. The young man, to the knowledge of the writer, has never done one month's actual work for others in his entire life. His life has been passed in the pleasant pastimes of the home circle, in reading, hunting, fishing, ball-playing, yachting and other employments not particularly beneficial to others. He is a type of that class of boys whose parents are sufficiently well-to-do to keep servants to attend to the household drudgery, and whose fathers follow vocations in which no use can be made of the boy's spare time. Like most boys of his class, he looks upon his board and clothes for twenty years, together with his pony, jewellery, bicycle, etc., as matters of course. The writer, while the complaining remark was still ringing in his ear, had the curiosity to make a conservative compilation of what it costs to raise an ordinary boy for the first twenty years of his life, and here it is: $100 per year for the first five years, $500; $150 per year for the second five years, $750; $200 per year for the third five years, $1,000; $300 per year for the next three years $900; $500 per year for the next two years, $1,000. Total, $4,150. This is a moderate estimate of the financial balance against the boy who complains that his father has never done anything for him.—Exchange.

Indicted for Selling His Soul.

The following curious indictment for making an impious bargain with an evil spirit is copied from the new volume of "Middlesex County Records," edited by John Cordy Jeafferson:

"20 April, 19 Charles I—True Bill that at St. Giles Without Tripplegate, co. Midd., on the said day, Thomas Browne, late of said parish, yeoman, by a certain writing, dated on the said day of the said year, wickedly, diabolically, and feloniously made an agreement with an evil and impious spirit, that he, the said Thomas Browne, would within ten days after the death of him, Thomas Browne, give his soul to the said evil and impious spirit, to the intention (ad intencionem—in consideration) that the said evil and impious spirit yearly, at the Feasts of Pentecost and the Purification of the Blessed Virgin Mary, should pay, or cause to be paid to the same Thomas Browne the sum of £1,000 of current English money on each of the said feasts for and during the term of the natural life of the said Thomas Browne and to the intention (ad intencionem—in consideration) that the said evil and impious spirit should defend the same Thomas from all perils of body and goods for and during the full term of 41 years, and that the same Thomas should have and marry a woman who should be pleasing to the same Thomas, and that the same Thomas should have and enjoy all health, riches and worldly pleasures for and during the natural life of the same Thomas. And for the performance thereof the same Thomas then and there, impiously and blasphemously as an impious apostate, promised and vowed to renounce the Lord and Saviour Christ, against the Catholic Christian faith, and to the grave scandal of the Christian religion and of all pious Christians, and to the great displeasure of God Almighty, and to the evil and pernicious example of all others in a case of this kind failing in duty (omnium aliorum hujusmodi casu delinquent em) and against the peace of the said Lord, now King, his crown and dignity, and also against the form of the statute for a case of this kind published and provided. Putting himself 'not guilty' on the contrary Thomas Browne was found 'not guilty' by a jury who did not retract.—G. D. R., 19 Charles I."

"G. D. R." means the Gaol Delivery Roll.—Notes and Queries.

John W. Young, the eldest son of the late head of the Mormon Church, is a wealthy and energetic business man, who has made a fortune in railroads, banks and cattle ranching. He is 43 years old and in the full vigor of manhood.

REMARKABLE SLEEP.

A Woman in a Trance for Over Thirty-Five Days.

NO SOLID FOOD FOR EIGHTEEN MONTHS.

Mrs. Althouse, of Attica, N. Y., has awakened from her trance, which lasted a few hours over 35 days. She is excessively weak.

For a year and a half she has partaken of no solid food, and has remained in a series of trances throughout that period. The other day, a futile effort was made to arouse the sleeper. Dr. Retel sent a strong current from a galvanic battery through her frame, threw cold water on her face, and resorted to every means of which he could think to awaken her. The only result was that a slight glow was noticed on the body, and the cold, clammy feeling disappeared. Her head turned almost imperceptibly but there was no awakening. The electric current was turned on until it was strong enough to raise the dead, but that was all the good it did.

To a reporter the other day her sister said: "Emma's first sleep was in August, 1887, and she hasn't been off that bed since, nor has she taken any solid food."

"Just before that she was attacked with dysentery, and this was followed by inflammation of the stomach. When these were relieved she fell asleep, generally sleeping for three days and then awakening for a day and a night. Then she would gradually re-enter the trance state and remain in it for another three days.

"During her conscious moments she partook of nourishment in the shape of milk, which was fed to her by the spoonful, and the quantity given in that way seldom exceeded half a gill."

The trance periods increased in duration and lasted seven and ten days frequently. Her sisters judge that she knows what is going on while in them, and cite instances to prove that this knowledge is not limited to local events by any means.

A local Spiritualist believes that she is a misdirected medium, and that her spirit travels all over the country during the trances. He bases his opinion on what the sisters say.

Her grandfather died last summer while she was in a trance. When she awakened Dr. Huber, who was then attending her, inquired:

"What did you see or hear while you were asleep?"

Her lips moved, but no audible sound could be heard. She seemed too weak to talk.

"How is grandpa?" she finally whispered.

"He is worse," said the doctor.

"No; he is dead," she whispered; "I know he is dead." She looked surprised as she said this. Miss Toms says that the death was never mentioned or alluded to in the sick room. Similar instances are vouched for by the family.

"What was her longest sleep?" I asked.

"It began on March 11th, 1888," was the reply, "and lasted thirty-five days, just as this one has now. She was awake for eight days before this sleep, and partook of more nourishment during that time than she had in the whole preceding time of her illness."

When she awakened that time it was only after persistent efforts on the part of the doctor, and when she opened her eyes she whispered to the doctor: "For heaven's sake don't let me go to sleep again or I shall never wake up." She then could not see with her eyes open nor could she distinguish anything, but these senses soon returned to her.

When coming out of a trance the symptoms exhibited are bleeding at the nose, high temperature, strong pulse and mutterings. She stays awake for a while and then takes a short nap, from which she easily awakens, feeling much refreshed.

On occasions, the family say, Mrs. Althouse has predicted the duration of her trances. She has usually slept for the periods indicated.

Moody and Sankey's Angels.

"An incident which I can never forget happened when we were singing in London," said Mr. W. B. Thomas, the first basso of the Fisk Jubilee Singers, last Saturday. "It was at the time Mr. Moody was preaching there, and he asked us to come and sing for him. According to instruction we were to enter at the rear door of the tabernacle, climb the back stairs and occupy a rear gallery, where we would not be seen by the congregation. There was an immense audience, over 7,000 persons being prsent. Mr. Moody preached his sermon, and at the close said to the people: "We will now bow our heads a few moments in silent prayer."

"That was our time. We softly sang, 'Steal Away to Jesus,' and everybody except Mr. Moody was astonished. They looked at the choir, but the choir was as much surprised as themselves. They could see no one on the platform but Mr. and Mrs. Sankey, and they were not singing. No words can describe the effect it had on them, many actually believing it was the singing of angels. We had sung in France, Germany, Austria and in Scotland, and before seven of the crowned heads of Europe, but had never created such a sensation as we did then, and," concluded Mr. Thomas, good humoredly, "we have never been taken for angels since."—Detroit Free Press.

A Christian Scientist's Advice.

Miss Whitlock, a Christian scientist of Fredericton, N. B., attended a lady who had a sore on her leg and persuaded her not to send for a doctor, as the matter was not serious. The case grew worse, and finally medical help was called in. The disease was found to be cancer. The lady has had her leg amputated, but it is feared the remedy was applied too late to save her life.

Pride of Station.

Prima Donna (proudly)—If that is the Prince of Wales at the door, tell him that the queen of the operatic stage has no desire to associate with mere princes.

Maid—It is not the Prince, madam; it is a soap manufacturer.

"Oh! Admit him."—New York Weekly.

Lifts will shoot up and down the 1,000 foot Eiffel tower in Paris, and 750 persons an hour may thus be conveyed to the edge of cloudland.

WAS ST. PAUL MARRIED?

Female Debaters Wrestle with the Unique Topic in Victoria, B.C.—Remarkable Sequel to the Inquiry.

(Victoria Correspondence Vancouver Courier.)

Towards the close of last week Victoria—or at least that portion of Victoria that goes to church—has enjoyed the delightful sensation of a full-fledged church scandal, smothered, or very nearly so, by the local papers, "out of consideration," etc. On Tuesday evening the energetic ladies of the Pandora Street Methodist Church filled the school-room to overflowing by announcing a debate, with three well-known ladies of the church on either side, upon the question, "Was St. Paul a Married Man?" The subject was unique and the audience expected the argument to be ditto and were in no way disappointed. Cold Biblical facts, pro and con., were interspersed with humorous anecdotes and witticisms, useful in the debate, but considered by some to be decidedly irreverent and casting a slur upon the sanctity surrounding the character of the greatest apostle of the Christian Church. The debate was reported in extenso by the city papers, and proved abundant food for conversation for the remainder of the week. Sunday following the discussion of St. Paul's domestic relations was the occasion of the anniversary of the Sunday school, and Rev. P. McF. Macleod, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, had promised to occupy the pulpit. The debate, however, had met with his strongest disapproval, and two days before he was to have preached he despatched the Rev. Mr. Starr, the shepherd of the Methodist flock, an "awful letter," censuring pastor and people for allowing the discussion, and making, he averred, the church the scene of a debate, some of the arguments adduced in which would have disgraced a brothel. The letter was a lengthy one and was couched in language—to borrow a chestnutty expression—that "gave forth no uncertain sound." It must have caused the ears of the reverend recipient to tingle a little, no matter how secure he felt in the right of the position he and his church had taken. The document was shown to but few. One who saw it was, however, the husband of one of the fair debaters, or debatees whichever it is; and his choler rose instanter. He demanded an immediate explanation of Rev. Mr. Macleod, and it is stated that his wife received in reply a letter from the pastor of St. Andrew's informing her that the only one which the letter to Mr. Starr had intended to censure was that gentleman's wife. The Presbyterian clergyman's opinion of herself, of course, reached Mrs. Starr's ears, and, not strange to say, she failed to appreciate it. She is of the opinion, and so are some others, that the trouble and strong words used are the outcome of personal jealousy, which Mrs. Macleod is said to entertain for Mrs. Starr's popularity. Mr. Macleod and Mr. Starr are willing to let the matter drop in order to avoid a scandal, but both are firm in supporting the positions they have taken. The clergy of the Episcopal Church supported Rev. Mr. Macleod from their pulpits on Sunday, which some people, of course, disapproved, and the whole matter is gradually cooling, although the two churches henceforth "will never speak as they pass by."

The Verdict of the World.

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay, and he can't afford, to advertise, sets up his judgment in opposition to that of all the best business men in the world. With a few years' experience in conducting a small business on a few thousand dollars of capital, he assumes to know more than thousands of men whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesn't pay. If advertising doesn't pay, why is it that the most successful merchants in every town, large and small, are the heaviest advertisers? If advertising doesn't pay, who does the most business? If it doesn't pay to advertise, why do the heaviest business firms in the world spend millions of dollars in that way? Is it because they want to donate those millions of dollars to the newspaper and magazine publishers, or because they don't know as much about business as the six-for-a-dollar "storekeeper" in a country town, who says money spent in advertising is thrown away, or donated to the man to whom it is paid? Such talk is simply ridiculous, and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man. His complacent self-conceit in assuming that he knows more than the entire business world is laughable, and reminds us of the man who proved that the world doesn't revolve by placing a pumpkin on a stump and watching it all night.—Burlington Republican.

THE SHORTEST GRAMMAR EVER WRITTEN.

Three little words you often see
Are articles, a, an and the.
A noun's the name of anything,
As school or garden, hoop or swing.
Adjectives tell the kind of noun,
As great, small, pretty, white or brown.
Instead of nouns the pronouns stand—
His head, her face, your arm, my hand.
Verbs tell something to be done—
To read, count, laugh, sing, jump or run.
How things are done the adverbs tell,
As slowly, quickly, ill or well.
Conjunctions join the words together—
As men and women, wind or weather.
The preposition stands before
The noun, as in, or through, the door.
The interjection shows surprise,
As Oh! how pretty, Ah! how wise.
The whole are called nine parts of speech,
Which reading, writing, speaking, teach.

—Marriage is usually a failure when a man thinks he is marrying an angel and the woman a man like to a novelist's hero.

—Rider Haggard has become a vegetarian upon the idea that he can work longer and better without meat.

Oh, merchant, in thine hour of e e e,
If on this paper you should c c c,
And look for something to a p p p p
Your yearning for greenback v v v,
Take our advice and now be y y y,
Go straight ahead and advert i i i,
You'll find the project of some u u u;
Neglect can offer no ex q q q,
Be wise at once, prolong your d a a a,
A silent business soon de k k k.

A writ has been served on Mr. Herchmer, Commissioner of the Northwest Mounted Police, charging him with importing into the Northwest Territories and having in his barracks, near Regina, a thousand gallons of beer without permission of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Four London gentlemen met with a runaway accident yesterday, one of them, Mr. Screaton, being very seriously injured.

GREW WEALTHY WITHOUT EFFORT.

The Remarkable Luck of Mr. Valancey Fuller's Late Partner.

When the late Lieut.-Gov. McDonald reached Escanaba he was still a laborer, although he had the confidence of railroad contractors, and they made him superintendent of some railway construction. Little by little he had accumulated means—perhaps $1,000—and time came for an investment. He paid $750 for a tract of land near Escanaba. There were no expectations built on the purchase further than that it was a safe place in which to keep his money. But gradually the mining investigations spread, and one day an expert came to him with an offer of $100,000 for the $750 tract of land. One of the best mineral veins of the Upper Peninsula had been discovered running across the land. McDonald finally declined the offer. Then $200,000 was offered. Still he shook his head. Then $300,000; still "no;" $400,000. "I think I'll run that myself," said he. He declined $500,000 for his land. He was a rich man. It had dropped into his hands.—Detroit Special to Chicago Herald.

Sir John Lawes on Fertility, Wheat, etc.

A newspaper reporter has been interviewing this noted agriculturist, and we find one of the most important experiments made at Rothamstead has been growing wheat continuously on one section for forty-five years—in one case without manure. The average of the first recorded eighteen years gave 14⅞ bushels per acre, and last year the same quantity was produced, showing that in the soil there is a large reserve amount of fertility. "Of course," continued Sir John, "you will know that this is a low average, for in the same field with some forms of manure we have had nearly thirty-five bushels per acre. Still, this low average is greater than that of America or India, and equal to that of all the world. So that our English soil can produce wheat as well as any other, even if unmanured."

"Then our allowing wheat to be grown by others for us is not because the soil is exhausted?"

"Not at all. It is merely a question of price. Wheat can be grown as well as ever, but not profitably under present rates."

"In case of war would it be possible to grow all the corn we need?"

"Yes, if the first year could be got over. All would depend upon that. Given the supply of seed, and we could grow all the corn needed in this country. But the feeding for that first year would determine the whole matter, and I do not see how it could be done, unless we can defend our commerce."

"Here," he continued, "I wish to show you a most important experiment. Five years ago we left the upper end of this wheat field uncropped, allowing the corn to fall when ripe. In three years there was scarcely a single ear of corn left; those which I could find were short in the stalk, and with perhaps a single grain. Now there is not one. This shows that food products are almost entirely artificial, and that in a few years the land would be a perfect wilderness if uncultivated. But I myself was surprised at the rapidity with which the wheat disappeared."

"How do you explain this?"

"The weeds were stronger and killed out the artificial grain. Weeds are hardy, and it is really 'the survival of the fittest,' or the hardiest. The same thing I can show you in the turnip field, where the unmanured plot is almost barren, the plants having scarcely in any case formed a bulb. It is the starch we want as food. Cultivation and fertilization give that starch."

"How have you found the crops this year, Sir John?"

"Grass and roots very heavy indeed, but grain bad. Not so serious as 1879, but still below the average. Here, for instance," picking up a bundle of wheat, "I always test by holding the straw midway. If the ears weigh it down I know all is right. If not, as in the case now, it is poor. I do not know yet how much the yield will go below the average, but it is seriously so."

"Then I suppose all-round farmers will not suffer greatly—that is, taking one crop with the other?"

"Stock farmers will be better off, for beef is rising, and they have abundance of food, but wheat farmers must suffer."

"I believe you have written against the system of silage. Is that so?"

"Yes. I do not believe in making silage for its own sake. In a bad year like the present, when hay could scarcely be made, the system may be employed, but not when the crops can be gathered in a good condition. The process destroys the finest qualities of the food and cannot make poor stuff into good food."

Not Beyond Hope.

"My friend," said the solemn-looking man who was distributing slips of paper on the street corner, "do you ever go to church?"

"Every Sunday," replied the young man addressed. "I am an usher."

"There is hope even for you, my young friend," said the solemn-looking man, with deep feeling, as he handed him a tract.

All Credit to the Doctors.

Dr. Spouter (who is rather inclined to talk shop)—"Did you know that mankind was subject to two thousand different diseases, Miss Debut?"

Miss Debut—"Indeed! And to think that there were only three or four when the doctors first began!"

Very Guarded in His Remarks.

"Our dear sister," said the Nebraska pastor, "has gone to a better land—that is, if there be any better land than can be found here in the Missouri bottoms."—Terre Haute Express.

A Stormy Prospect for 1889.

"No, I can't marry you, Mr. Trotters but I'll be a sister to you."

"Well, I dare say there's room down home, but I don't know how you'll get along with my other sisters."

The girl blacksmith, Miss Anna Bole, who recently exhibited a dozen horseshoes in the Mechanics' Institute in San Francisco, is described as being "about five feet three inches high and rather fragile than strong." She is 15 years old.

CURRENT TOPICS.

It is said that the case of the cartridges for the Lebel rifle, about which the French Government maintain such a mystery, is solid drawn copper, and the bullet of type metal with a thin coating of steel.

By the improper use of the single word "thereof" in the will of Mrs. Anne McCullough, who died in Pittsburg recently, the sum of $130,000 will be diverted from the object for which she intended it.

The gold and silver plate which belongs to the Duke of Cumberland weighs some twelve tons, and the jewels are valued at £400,000. The duke's hereditary casket includes the famous pearls of Queen Charlotte (worth £150,000), which caused nearly twenty years' litigation between the Queen and the King of Hanover.

According to the Leeds Mercury there are in England and Wales 250 religious denominations, with 47,000 places of worship. There are 38,000 ministers and the church and chapel officials number about 170,000. Communicants number about 3,000,000. The annual cost of all this is about £16,000,000 ($80,000,000).

Texas has an area of 274,356 square miles; California an area of 156,591 miles. There are only four States with more than 100,000 square miles. When we come to the United States Territories, Alaska shoots far ahead with its area of 577,390 square miles, or nearly four times that of any other territory in the Republic.

The New York Mail and Express says: "Cotillon figures are becoming more and more eccentric and peculiar. Supposed-to-be modest and respectable women lifting up their gowns and jumping through paper hoops held by men is a most edifying spectacle in fashionable houses!" How would ballet-skirts serve as an improvement?

London is to have "luncheon cars." Each car is to carry about with it a cook, together with a cooking apparatus and a good supply of the necessary raw material; and to prevent the charge of obstruction or anything of the kind, the public will be invited to enter the vehicles and to take their cheap luncheon en route so to speak.

A brother of Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, British Minister to Persia, is said to be working as a porter in a grocery store at Jacksonville, Fla. Although an Oxford man, he has at various times filled the post of dry goods clerk, bill collector and bartender. His mother was a daughter of the second Earl of Oxford. Perhaps he sleeps just as sound as his greater brother.

Water impregnated with nitrates and nitrites furnished by adjacent graves is often peculiarly tempting from its brilliant appearance and mineral quality. The London Lancet says: "The surest carrier and most deadly fruitful nidus of zymotic contagion is the brilliant, enticing looking water charged with the nitrates which result from decomposition of animal matter."

Dr. George Dutton, Dean of the Vermont Medical College, recently addressed a gathering of workingmen in Boston, and spoke thus of Malthus: "The doctrine that the tendency to increase of population outruns the means of subsistence is false, and the doctrine of Malthus that overproduction is the cause of industrial depression is without foundation, since all the people on the globe could be allotted each one-eighth of an acre of land in the State of Texas alone.

The expulsion of French cooks from his household by the present Emperor of Germany recalls the fact that his Imperia grandfather long employed M. Urbain Dubois as chef. When the Franco-Prussian war broke out M. Dubois resigned his post, but Emperor William would not permit him to depart. When the fortunes of war had placed the chef's native village in the Emperor's power the latter issued an order that the people of that vicinity should not be compelled to pay an indemnity.

A correspondent of the North British Agriculturist states that dandelions in pasture form valuable food for cattle, and especially for dairy cows. Some years ago he had two fields, one with few and the other with a great many dandelions. It was found when the cows were put on the field with many of these plants their yield of milk was improved both in quality and quantity. Since then he had planted dandelions in fields laid down in grass in order to improve the pasture, and the effect has been beneficial.

Heroism of a Servant Girl.

An annual "mother's dinner" was held at Dorking last night. An interesting incident was the presentation by Mrs. Cubitt, wife of Mr. Cubitt, M.P., to Minnie Matilda Mirrell, aged 15, of an illuminated address and £5 awarded to her by the Society for the Protection of Life from Fire. She was a servant at the house of Mr. Inglis in High street, which a short time ago was burnt out. There were three children in the bed-room. She first rescued one from the first floor, then rushing up again she took the others, one under each arm, brought them down through the blinding smoke and heat, dropping one on the stairs, but afterwards groping up and recovering it. Finally she lowered the two children from the front window to the people in the street. The girl received an enthusiastic reception.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Beyond Argument.

Waldron—And so you have decided to remain a bachelor because you think marriage a failure?

McGill (who has just dropped in)—Think! Why, hang it, Jack, in my case I know it! The girl said she'd be a sister to me.

Sarcasm on Ice.

She—Don't you like to skate?

He—Yes, I do, but my feet don't.

She—Well, they are certainly big enough to know their own mind.

The town of Mills City, Va., has recently had its name changed and now rejoices in the title of "New York, jun."

During the recent fogs in London, plants are said to have suffered not only from the absence of light but from the pores of their leaves becoming filled up with the sulphurous, sooty matters contained in the fogs.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Street, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

The Dutton Enterprise.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1889.

Many are the complaints heard against the M. C. R. trainmen for blocking the Main Street crossing with cars every morning. Tuesday morning especially they had good cause for it, as the crossing was blocked for fully half an hour. They do not seem to care for the comfort of any one except themselves and it is about time they were taught that there is a law prohibiting the standing of trains on a crossing for more than three minutes at a time.

A report from Boston tells of a little "snap" in that city between a dude and a young lady whom he insulted on the street. The lady, it seems, was skilled in the use of her fists, and she gave it to the dude in one-two-three order, sending him sprawling on the street. A little medicine of that kind is not the worst in the world for the "mashers" who make a practice of speaking to unknown ladies on the street, and it is perhaps to be regretted that all women are not possessed of the skill of the Boston one.

The Ontario Government has decided not to abolish township shows, and they will continue to be one of the fall attractions. The township show has not outlived its usefulness yet, but there is no doubt that a good many of them are degenerating. Fakirs, gamblers, and like vultures make more money preying upon the fools who bite at every game of chance and every opportunity of buying cheap goods—instead of patronizing solid local merchants—just for the sake of getting something for nothing, than the good done to the farmers amounts to. By all means keep up the township shows; but let them be managed more in the interests of the farmers and less for the sports and fakirs.

Across the border one whole year in every four is occupied in the process of president-making; and the other three years are occupied in preparing for the process.

A fair reputation is a delicate plant in its nature, and by no means rapid in its growth. It will not shoot up in a night like the gourd of the prophet, but like that gourd it may perish in a night.

A railroad to Jerusalem, an American shortstop plugging the sphinx in the eye with a league ball, the Mikado of Japan in a plug hat, and baseball in the Colosseum! What is the irreverent world coming to?

A Long Island temperance lecturer pledges his converts to buy their beer by the case and drink it only at home, and in four weeks has ruined the business of fourteen saloons. It is a new idea and one that has hit the saloon-keepers below the belt.

In the division court at Goderich, Ont., at a recent sitting a publisher sued for payment of a paper. The defendant objected to paying on the grounds that he had ordered a former proprietor of the paper to discontinue it. The judge held that it was not a valid defence. The plaintiff, the present proprietor, had no notice to discontinue and consequently could collect, although it was not denied that defendant had notified former proprietor to discontinue. In any event defendant was bound to pay for the time he had received the paper and until he had paid all arrears for subscription.

The Ridgetown Standard has the following melancholy, though true tale: "Last week a man stepped up to us and said he would pay us every cent he owes us if he lived until Saturday night. We presume the man died. Another one said he would pay us in a day or two as sure as he was born. Query—did the man lie or was he never born? Another said he would settle as sure as shooting. We are led to the conclusion that shooting is uncertain. Another hoped to go to the devil if he did not pay us in three days. Haven't seen him since; suppose he has gone but trust he has not hoped in vain. Quite a number said they would see us to-morrow. These people have been stricken blind, or else to-morrow hasn't come. One man told us three months ago that he would pay us as soon as he got any money. The man would not lie, so of course he has not had a cent since."

Wife (petulantly)—Such a lump of selfishness! The house was full of strauge noises last night, and I didn't dare close my eyes once; and there you were snoring like a log. Burglars might have carried us both off and you wouldn't have known it. Husband (wearily)—Don't fret, dear. If they ever carry you off they'll bring you back.

TONALD AN' SANDY.

Weel, friend, ye are back on time, an' hoo ha ye spent the past week, Sandy?

Weel, Tonald, I canna say I am althegither weel. Ye ken the rheumatics hae troubled me sair sin' the day I fell intil that wee burn crossin' Shackleton street, an' na wonner I did fa' when there's na railin' on the walk to keep a body frae walkin' richt off. But we maun bide a wee, a' things will be pit richt when we hae our bit toon incorporated. But, Tonald, I canna say I likit at a' that ye gied oor bit talk ta the ENTERPRISE. Ye ken some folk are unco' easily tiffed an' I doot not that ane or twa will pu' your lug for your pains.

Hech, mon, nane waud care for a' we micht say, and some are weel pleased wi' it. But, tell me noo, dinna ye think the new editor hae been makin' a grand change in the appearance o' the ENTERPRISE o' late?

That I do Tonald, and last week pit the cap sheaf on it. It a' seems changed, an' ilka pairt seems better, but I maun say I was sair at a loss to see what yon chiel was drivin' at that wrote the piece aboot "Sittin' doon on the Reeve." I read it forwards, backwards, sideways an' in ilka ither manner, but deil the sense could I make o' it at a'. The puir body maun be crackit.

Weel, Sandy, I could na mak' muckle o' it mysel', but I understand the chiel wanted the assessorship himsel', and was a wee bit tiffed because the council gied it ta Archie Paterson, a mon who ye ken is weel fitted for the position. But the body did na harm, an' we maun let him pass. We hae a decent set o' bodies in oor council, and tho' na mon can please a' the people there is na doot they will do the best they can for oor township.

Richt ye are Tonald, an' ye may be sure that sa lang as they keep doin' their part the folk will keep the bodies there. Was ye at the sociable at Mr. McArthur's yesterday e'en, Tonald, ye look as tho' ye did na hae eneuch sleep last nicht?

I was, Sandy, an' I maun say it was a sight guid for sair een ta see sa mony honest men an' bonnie lasses thegither, an' sic a time as they did hae. Eh. mon, but it made me feel young ance mair ta see the lads and lassies carryin' on. They washed each ither's faces wi' snow, an' apples an' ither things, an' a' was done in the best o' good humor, but I maun say I think they suffered for it the next morn. But, mon, I canna tell ye a' the capers there was goin' on. Ye maun gang till the next yoursel' and hae as guid a time.

Weel, Tonald, I am sorry indeed that I missed it, and will be sure ta see the next, but its noo growin' late, Tonald, an' I maun be goin'. We will hae anither talk in a fortnight as I maunna be awa fra hame ilka Saturday een, or Janet will pu' my lug for me.

Weel, Sandy, dinna forget it, an' ye maun stay longer, for we hae na mair than started to talk. Gie my respects ta Janet an' the children, an' bring them wi' ye when ye come again. Good night.

TONALD.

CHOW-CHOW.

Worms cause serious sickness. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup destroys and expels all kinds of worms quickly and surely.

The goose sometimes lays down while it is walking.

Pale, weak women need a tonic, strength giving, flesh building medicine like Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

The man of whom society makes a lion is never inclined to growl.

Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap is a delightful shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

A pain centrally located may double a man and naturally increase his sighs.

TO THE DEAF.—A person cured of Deafness and noises in the head of 23 years' standing by a simple remedy, will send a description of it FREE to any person who applies to Nicholson, 177 McDougall Street, New York.

As a toilet article, Ayer's Hair Vigor stands unrivaled. It cleanses the scalp and removes dandruff, cures itching humors restores the originac color to gray hair and promotes its growth.

Adult son—Mother, does a girl mean to encourage or discourage a man when she—— Mother—My son, there is no need of going into details. When a girl starts out to either encourage or discourage a man, the man never has any doubt about what she means.

No other spring medicine has won for itself such universal confidence as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the most powerful combination of vegetable alteratives ever offered to the public, and is acknowledged by the medical profession to be the best blood purifier.

A Boston boy was telling his father one day of a schoolmate's attempt to sing. "And time," said the ten-year-old in deep disgust, "why, he didn't keep any better time than a cow when a dog's running after her.

A USEFUL ARTICLE.—"I can certify to the great usefulness of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. We use it for burns, bruises, cuts, sores, rheumatism, sore throat, croup, etc., and recommend it to all as an excellent remedy." T. W. Appleby, Wingham, Ont. All medicine dealers sell Yellow Oil.

Tenant—That chandelier in the parlor is so shaky I'm afraid some time, when the children are romping under it, the whole thing will fall. Landlord—Well, that chandelier ain't worth more than its price for old brass anyhow. It don't matter whether it gets broken or not.

A FORCIBLE FACT.—Constipation is the most frequent cause of headaches, bad blood, humors, dizziness, vertigo, etc., and because of this should never be allowed to exist. It may be readily cured by using Burdock Blood Bitters, which never fails to cure even the most obstinate and chronic cases."

The upper ten—the fingers. The lower ten—the toes.

THE FIELD OF CHATEAUGUAY.—From this historic ground Mr. Frank Curotte writes that he was greatly afflicted with constipation, together with pain and swelling of his body. "I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, and it gave me immediate relief. I can now sleep well, and can eat heartily without any ill effects.

POISON IVY ERUPTION.—For poison ivy eruption and for all burns, sore throat, rheumatism, etc., Mr. C. W. Wood, of Hall's Bridge, Ont., advises the use of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which has been in use in his family for years. He regards it as a perfect cure.

A party of drummers were seated in the corridor of a leading American hotel the other day discussing the characteristics of the different towns they visit. The Kansas City Star declares that many curious stories were told but at last one of the company was unanimously allowed to have earned the cake by the following yarn: "The meanest town in the west is in Northern Kansas. While I was there last month they found the dead body of an unknown man in the streets. In his pockets were $100 and a revolver. Instead of taking the money and giving him a decent burial, they arraigned him under the name of Richard Roe, fined him the $100 for carrying concealed weapons, and buried him in the potter's field in an old pine box.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, and take no other kind.

AN APT QUOTATION.—From a letter by Mrs. Sullivan, 124 West Ave., Hamilton, Ont.: "After trying a number of medicines for liver complaint, from which I suffered for years, I bought two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and found it a complete cure. My house is never without it.

GOOD NEWS!

DUTTON'S NEW PUMP.

J. H. MARSH, Manufacturer, is now prepared to furnish his new pump on short notice in 11 sizes, from AA 8x8. 8 ft long, to No. 9 5x5, 6 ft long. All other sizes made to order. All kinds of Farm Implements. Wheelbarrows kept in stock.

PLOWS & REPAIRS A SPECIALTY.

FARMERS, MILLERS AND ENGINE OWNERS.

I AM now introducing the newest invention of the day, a Grinder that will grind small grains or corn with the husk on without having to stop the engine to change. The plates are self-sharpening and the machine is so constructed that if a piece of iron should get into it it would be pushed down through the safety bottom without danger of breaking. One can be seen running in the grist mill at Essex Centre. Railway fare will be deducted from price of the Grinder to those coming from a distance to see it work, on placing their order. I will be at the Royal Hotel, Essex Centre, every Saturday. Circular sent on application.

J. G. SLOANE, North Ridge, Ont.

NOTICE TO THE CREDITORS OF ROBERT McBLAIN, DECEASED.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, IN Pursuance of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, Chap. 110, Sec. 36, that all creditors having claims against the estate of Robert McBlain, deceased, late of the city of London, in Ontario, life insurance agent, who died on or about the 18th day of January, A. D., 1889, are required to send by post, prepaid, or to deliver to George Van Tuyl, of the said city of London—one of the executors of the said Robert McBlain, deceased—on or before the 28th day of February, 1889, their names and addresses and description of their claims duly verified and the securities (if any) held by them. And that after the said date the executors of the said Robert McBlain will proceed to distribute the assets of the said Robert McBlain, deceased, among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which notice has been given as above required. And the said executors will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any person or persons of whose claims notice shall not have been received duly verified by said executor at the time of such distribution.

Dated this 31st day of January, A. D., 1889.

ALBERT O. JEFFERY,
2-21-ph Solicitor for the Executors.

FOR SALE.

THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.

Apply to
D. McINTYRE, Dutton,
or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.
March, 22, 1888. tf

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR

Keeps constantly on hand a well assorted stock of

English, Irish, Scotch and Canadian Tweeds,

Which we make to order in the latest style.

Special Bargains in Suitings and Overcoatings for the next 30 days to make room for Spring Importations. Prices moderate.

J. C. HERTEL, DUTTON.

IMPROVED FARM FOR SALE

—IN THE—

TOWNSHIP OF PELHAM, WELLAND CO.

On account of the ill-health of the proprietor the valuable farm of Samuel Beckett, containing 150 acres of the finest fruit growing land in Ontario, is offered for sale at a bargain. 130 acres are cleared and free from stumps and stones, the balance timbered with chestnut and pine. The soil is a rich sandy loam and the farm is well watered by two wells and three springs. Twelve acres of orchard, consisting of apple, peach, pear and pium trees, and quantity of small fruits. Buildings all first-class and cost about $5,000. Only six miles from Welland and half a mile from postoffice, school and church. Apply at once to

J. T. SIFTON, DUTTON.

AT COST! AT COST!

Having purchased the entire Stock of Furniture of A.C. Graham, we will sell the same at cost for the NEXT THIRTY DAYS.

Come one and all and secure some of the grandest bargains ever heard of in Dutton.

Don't fail to secure some of the

BARGAINS IN MATTRESSES.

We have a large stock of the best makes in the market to-day.

In Furniture we take the lead. Our stock of

Parlor Suites, Bed-room Suites,

Side-boards, Tables, Chairs, Sofas, &c.

Must be cleared out at once to make room. Call and see us and secure some of the grand bargains we are offering.

UNDERTAKING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

A full stock of Coffins, Caskets, Shrouds, etc., kept constantly on hand. A first-class Hearse furnished at all funerals. Embalming a specialty. Orders filled night or day.

B. J. SCHULTZ & CO., DUTTON.

Half Across a Continent.

Its not without a little excitement that one attempts a journey of 2,125 miles, be it by land or by water, or as in the present case through a but recently explored continent. In 1874 it took a small army a whole summer to accomplish the feat. Now the C. P. R. and the big end of a week are sufficient.

Leaving Toronto within a few minutes of the close of one Saturday your correspondent arrived at Calgary a few minutes after the beginning of the next, including 48 hours lay off on the way. The modus operandi is very simple. "You pays your money and takes your choice" of two fares. First-class costs $68, second $38; meals extra. For those who wish there is a dining-car attached with meals 75c. each. As for sleeping accommodation there's the rub. With first-class fare you have two choices: the purse and the sleeper, or inventing a humane position across a seat. Even with a double seat, and the aid of two valises to bridge the gulf, one night's experience put an almost ineradicable crook into the writer's back. Turn as you will the car seat always presents a bulge for your short rib. It has a perfect genius for fitting into the unnatural points of support. The second-class coach, on the other hand, like fair play is a jewel. The "colonist sleeper," as it is called, is manufactured by James Crossen, Esq., of Cobourg, who supplies the whole line of the C. P. R. It is a credit to its native town. Within it is bright and clean, with uncushioned, but very comfortable seats. The latter are all double, and so formed that sliding panels may be drawn out, connecting both seats and making a very comfortable bed for two, while a folding wooden berth above affords accommodation, if necessary, for two more. A mattress, pillow and blanket suitable for the berth may be procured at Toronto, North Bay or other convenient starting points, all for $1.75. A fur overcoat makes a good substitute. Another useful weapon is a well-stored bread-box, to be supplemented at the lunch-rooms on the way by a cup of coffee. Thus accoutered a traveler can, at a very reasonable rate, make a very comfortable journey from ocean to ocean, and both ladies and gentlemen are not slow to take advantage of the fact.

Early on Sunday morning, 29th ult., then, I found myself passing through the stones and rocks of Muskoka. At various points where the hemlock and pine were thicker or more accessible than usual the lumberman's shanty could be seen. The country seemed little else but a succession of swamps and hills till we neared the C. P. R. junction at North Bay. The C. P. R. has a round house there and the Romish church an elegant two-storey brick mission school, accommodating about one hundred pupils.

By noon we reached Sudbury. From North Bay to Sudbury is a grand lumbering district, and we deposited as we sped along many a hardy "habitant" ready to spend a winter with his skilful axe hewing the 'forest primeval.'

As we left Sudbury gradually the woods became thinner, spindly hemlock, tamarac and birch taking the place of the full grown. Soon, however, the rocks and boulders begin to displace even these. Such rocks! Great hills seemingly one huge freckled red stone, covered with a swarming brood of smaller ones. Such a knoll as that within a mile of Dutton would be a mine of wealth. Here it takes the wealth to mine them. Every nook and interstice has a tenant of birch. Many places where the fire has passed over the long thin trunks have fallen like a lattice-work over the bare faced rocks.

Half a day of this scenery made us relish a sight of society again, and Chapleau was just the city to satisfy us. The number and the beauty of the ladies that came down, even at 9 p. m., to see us in would rival even Dutton's escort to 5 o'clock "mail."

Next morning I awoke just as we reached Heron Bay and Lake Superior. How often I had longed for the privilege of a sight of Superior? Here it was at last. But I had to take my chances with interloping rocks and trees. This is the wildest and most romantic part of the C.P.R. west of the rockies; and perhaps too the richest in mineral wealth. Little lakes alternating with compact hills of stone, bridges, tunnels through solid rock, then at intervals the great Superior is seen

"As one who walking in a forest sees
A lovely landscape through the parted trees,
Then sees it not for boughs that intervene;
Or as we see the moon sometimes revealed
Through drifting clouds, and then again concealed."

Indians and French hunters seem to be the only inhabitants outside of the railroad colonies planted around each station. Leaning against the side of one station-house I saw the longitudinal side of a bear. It looked like an ox, only for the shiny black claws.

What a commotion as we steamed into Pt. Arthur. A few moments later the train from the west pulled in too. This is the event of the day during the winter season with this home-locked people. They have no trade, no business, no occupation after the close of navigation, hence the daily trains are as much depended on as sun rise. As the people have little to do and must live, they make mutually rich by selling their goods to each other at two prices.

But what a beautiful site, and what a beautiful town! It may well feel proud as it looks eastward over the blue Superior. At Fort William, almost adjoining, are two huge elevators, one larger than any in Toronto or Montreal, showing what is expected from this western country. Again 'tis westward. Another clear frosty night. From rocks we pass to muskegs, with occasional sketches of woods or farm land, of which the settler is already taking advantage. The only considerable place, however, is Ignace, with its round-house, water-tanks, coal-sheds, and handsome painted frame dwellings. It is even a better town than Rat Portage, thanks to the railroad patronage it enjoys. The latter, however, claims to have richer mineral deposits.

At Whitemouth, west of the Lake of the Woods, on the platform were two enormous moose heads, still warm from the hands of the hunter. One was immediately ticketed to a gentleman in Winnipeg. We were nearing that city then. Soon we emerged from the woods and swamps into the open prairie. A few clumps of poplar, and a hut and a stack of hay, and then the great flat stretches "on and on before the sight till the long vista endless seems." "Selkirk," shouts the brakeman. Only twenty miles more. Twenty miles south along the east bank of the Red river, over the iron bridge and we are in Winnipeg. On alighting, and making your way through a small army of people come to do honor to the eastern train, the first thing that arrests your eye is the handsome commodious station. Its waiting-rooms could accommodate a host. Main St. presents a striking appearance. Its very levelness is a novelty in towns to an easterner. From the tall buildings and its great breadth, it always reminds one of a flat field enclosed on two sides by a lofty forest. If Winnipeg were only as dull as it is flat, it would be more contemptible than Cleveland's retaliation bluster. The streets and cross-streets seem to run on and on forever. The town seems endless. Certainly its public buildings are a credit; the number and excellence of the private residences are marvelous. A beautiful monument is erected in the centre of the city to Winnipeg's brave, fallen at Batoche. To the south-east, on the point between the Red and Assiniboine, is the remnant of old Fort Garry; an isolated battled gateway of solid stone. There, just over the steep mud bank, where once glided the birch canoe of the dusky warrior now glides its joyous successor—the whizzing toboggan.

Again westward, ho! This time the "Colonist" was jammed, and after securing a berth, a convenient distance from the baby, I took up my quarters in the cushioned coaches of the rear. The first twenty miles west of Winnipeg on the C. P. R. is still unsettled. The land belongs to boomsters, speculators, "et hoc genus omne;" and really I think they should be allowed to hold it till their arms are tired It may be rich, but it is pretty well flattened out. It has a watery, malarial look. And westward the land keeps ever improving, till after passing various cities, whose whereabouts are so clearly set forth on the map or railway guide, is inferred by the passerby from the superscription on some telegraph pole, or from some lamented siding, we come in sight of Portage La Prairie. Just on the outside of the town is to be seen the grading of the Northern Pacific, and here will be another crossing of the "grand mogul track." The Portage is a fine town and is the centre of one of the most flourishing and thickly populated settlements on the prairies. West of Portage the country becomes thickly wooded with poplar and occasional balsam, and a grand succession of hills are passed through. It was a perfect jubilee to see a hill again. The hills ascended and we are landed on the second level of the great plain. The third, which extends to the Rockies, commences in the neighborhood of Moosejaw.

Brandon is reached at 19.05 o'clock and left at 18.15, a paradox effected by reversing our time-piece one hour. It was at Port Arthur we first had occasion to perform a like office. Four elevators, two grist mills, five or six two-dollar-a-day hotels and 3,500 inhabitants are not a bad showing for so young a town as Brandon. A fine bridge, spanning the Assiniboine, here one hundred yards wide, gives communication with the north, and on the long slope of the southern bank sits the fair town. It has a combined public and high school, employing seven teachers, with plenty of raw material for the eighth. There was enough snow for sleighing and the elevators were kept busy all day. As yet fences are only a luxury, or else for the accommodation of cattle; so there may be a trail through your front and another through your back yard. There then comes unmolested the "noble red man" of boyhood's thrilling stories—the noble scavenger—and divides the honors and the bones with the dogs.

But westward rolls the railway's din, and we enter the fair district of Assiniboia. About the third watch we pass the capital of the N. W. Territories, Regina. The whole town was wrapped in slumbers deep, and we did not think it worth while to disturb it. Moosejaw, forty miles west, is, saving Regina's official rank, a much finer town.

These two towns though only so slight a distance apart differ remarkably in climate. Regina is frozen, Moosejaw is sunny. Moosejaw seems to be the happy mean between the extremes of Manitoba and the high winds or sudden changes of the east Rocky district. As yet it has escaped the summer frosts, and its wheat is much sought after by millers. Spring opens rather earlier than in Ontario.

At Swift Current we stopped to have our morning cup of coffee. We got it, and a tea cake thrown in too, for the modest sum of twenty-five cents. By night we had reached Medicine Hat. The town lies in a meadow through which flows the South Saskatchewan. The meadow is enclosed by steep, almost perpendicular banks from fifty to one hundred feet high, and thus lies completely hid from the surrounding prairie. In the summer the sun beating down on the hot coulee is sufficiently warm to breed the deadly rattle.

Now for the home-stretch. A little after midnight the brakeman as he passes on his rounds utters the magic word. We fold up our tent, and as the train slows up, step down and out into the clear crisp air of—Calgary. J. S.

TICKLING TORTURE.—Mrs. Henry M. Kitchen, St. George, Ont., says: "I had a bad cold which settled in my throat, causing a continual tickling, and I just coughed all the time. I got Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam and in 3 days was getting better, and in 10 days I went to church. Our neighbors know this to be true.

1889 1889

HOCKIN & POOL.

Between Seasons!

For the early Spring Trade we have secured TEN BALES of COTTON and 100 PIECES of SHIRTING which we are offering at the old prices. We were fortunate in purchasing before the advance, and are therefore in a position to give our Customers the above goods at present Mill prices, fully 20 per cent. cheaper than they can be bought for later in the season. It is therefore in your interest to buy now.

We have a lot of BARGAINS in Winter Goods and Choice Remnants in Dress Goods that we do not wish to carry over, and they have got to go. We have cut the price of these goods away down---and the price sells them.

It is a favorable time to buy your Spring Suit and Overcoat. As a Cutter our Mr. Dagan is unsurpassed, and as we are headquarters for Fine Suits at low prices and guarantee satisfaction in every particular, it will pay you to inspect our Stock.

WE ARE SELLING the best quality Young Hyson and Black Teas away down.
WE ARE SELLING 3 lines of Ladies' Shoes at a great reduction.
WE ARE SELLING a few nice sets of Dishes very cheap, and
WE ARE PAYING the highest market price for Produce.

HOCKIN & POOL.

REPEAL OF THE SCOTT ACT.

NOTICE is hereby given that a petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Elgin will be fyled in the Registrar's office of the said county at St. Thomas, on or about the 23rd day of February, A. D. 1889, of which all persons are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.

Soothes and Heals

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with

Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

AGENTS WANTED

IN EVERY PART OF

Dunwich, Southwold and Aldborough,

FOR

THE -:- DUTTON -:- ENTERPRISE

The Best Local Paper in Elgin County.

In addition to the usual commission a prize of

AN $18.00 SILVER WATCH

Will be given to the person bringing in the largest number of names, accompanied by the money, before May 1st, 1889.

We have the best facilities for doing all kinds of

FINE COMMERCIAL AND POSTER PRINTING

In the best style of the art.

Orders by Mail receive prompt and careful attention.

EXTRAORDINARY MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

Grief Wasted Over the Corpse of a Mother's Double.

When James Waters, who lives at No. 2,033 Orkney street, returned from his work last night, he saw a stout, middle-aged woman sitting on the stoop whose face bore a deadly pallor. The woman told Mr. Waters that she was ill, and he asked her to rest herself inside. She accepted his invitation, and was escorted to a couch, upon which she reclined. Suddenly she jumped up, and saying that she must have fresh air, opened a door and went into the yard. She gave several gasps and dropped dead.

The body was taken into Mr. Waters' house and the neighbors were called in for the purpose of having the dead woman identified. One little girl glanced at the features and exclaimed: "That's Mrs. Dierolf." She brought her mother, who also said the body was that of Mrs. Rosanna Dierolf, of No. 928 Somerset street.

The report that Mrs. Dierolf had dropped dead spread from one end of little Orkney street to the other. It reached the ears of two of that woman's daughters, who hastened to the house. They were conducted to the room where the remains were. Amid sobs and violent outbursts of grief the young women said the body was that of their mother. One of the girls threw herself over the body and was with difficulty taken away.

Coroner's-Messenger Matthews, who lives in the vicinity, was notified to remove the body to No. 928 Somerset street. The heart-broken daughters slowly followed the waggon to their home. Messenger Matthews jumped off his waggon and rang the door-bell. A woman answered the summons who bore a striking resemblance to the corpse. Matthews thought it was her sister. He said:

"The body of Mrs. Rosanna Dierolf is in that waggon. She died suddenly down the street. Where do you want it to be—"

"What!" shrieked the woman. "I am Mrs. Rosanna Dierolf. You don't mean me, surely?"

The messenger thought there must be a mistake somewhere. He saw the two girls half a block away, and he hurried towards them and asked if they were sure the body was that of their mother.

The two sobbed hysterically and nodded their heads affirmatively. When they came up to the house the front door was closed. One of them opened it with a key and called to members of the household, whom she informed of the death of Mrs. Dierolf. "Do I look like a dead woman?" came from the dining-room, in tones that betokened anger.

The voice was familiar. It was that of the girls' mother. Thither they went, and when they beheld their mother whom they had recognized as dead they cried for joy and asked forgiveness.

Messenger Matthews was a silent witness. "In all my experience handling the dead," he said, "I never saw anything the like of this." Turning to Mrs. Dierolf he said: "Madam, your children aren't to be blamed for thinking the dead woman was you. She s your double, she is."

The woman who was supposed to be Mrs. Dierolf was about 50 years old and weighed about 200 pounds. She wore a brown skirt, a blue polka dot body, a gray plaid shawl and a dark poke bonnet.—Philadelphia Times.

KILLED BY A BURGLAR.

A Hotel Landlord at Swansea, Wales, Murdered by a Negro.

A London cable says: Mr. Kent, landlord of the Gloucester Hotel, at Swansea, was killed by a burglar Sunday morning. He retired with his wife late on Saturday night, after locking all the doors, including those of his bedroom. Early next morning the wife heard a match struck in the room and saw a negro lighting a candle. She awoke her husband and he grappled with the intruder, while his wife took a pistol from under the pillow. As it was too dark to take aim she lighted a candle. She then fired and the negro fell, wounded in the thigh. Cursing the woman, he crept under the bed, but as she was unlocking the door emerged and threw a mirror at her. It missed her, but extinguished the light and the negro escaped. When she relighted the candle she discovered that her husband's throat was cut with a razor. Kent lived long enough to describe the murderer. An alarm was raised and about noon the negro was discovered at a dry-dock badly wounded and covered with blood. He is a seaman named Sam Allan. He said his motive was robbery. He concealed himself in the room before the house was closed on Saturday night.

VICE-REGAL FASHIONS.

Costumes Worn by Lady Stanley and Her Friends at the Carnival Fancy Ball.

Writing on the fancy dress ball, given in Montreal, a correspondent says: Lady Stanley was dressed in a rich velvet dress of a lovely sage green, which shimmered as she walked along the beautifully lit ball-room. Pink brocade helped to relieve the eye. Her Ladyship's ornaments were diamonds of the first water. Lady Alice Stanley looked very handsome in a faultlessly made dress of black tulle, with a moire satin sash. His Excellency's daughter-in-law wore some fine diamonds in her hair, while her neck was circled with similar ornaments. The Hon. Mrs. Colville wore white tulle, with brocade body and sash, her arms being set off with bracelets of dead gold, studded with brilliants, which were also conspicuous in her hair.

Fortunate for the "Smiths."

A New Zealand paper is responsible for one of those stories which are almost too good to be true. The mutiny of the Bounty occurred in 1789, and the descendants of the mutineers are now living on Pitcairn Island and on Norfolk Island. One of the most noted of the ringleaders was John Adams, whose real name is said to have been Alexander Smith. A midshipman, who owed his rescue from drowning to Smith, was desirous of rewarding him properly, and placed £100 to his credit in a bank to await his call. The interest was to accumulate, and as the right Smith could never be found, principal and interest now amount to £96,000. This is a tolerably large nest-egg for three grandsons of the mutineer, one of whom is said to have established his title.

A CHICAGO TRAGEDY.

A Reporter Murders his Wife and then Suicides—A Friend's Strange Conduct.

A Chicago despatch says: W. T. Bradley yesterday shot his wife dead and then committed suicide at the Hotel Cortland. Both were employed by the Chicago Globe, the husband as a reporter and the wife as literary editor. This is the third tragedy of the kind that has taken place here within a week. After the bodies were taken to an undertakers, Frederick Mann, a linen importer, entered the hotel, and being told of the shooting was overcome with grief and raved around exclaiming, "It was a life thrown away!" and "Oh! the brute." He then started on a run for the undertaker's, where he threw himself upon the woman's body, kissing her hands and face, unmindful of the blood which stained her clothing and face. It was some minutes before he could be dragged away from the body. He then glared for a moment at Bradley's body, and, with an oath, said, "Oh, the thief, villain, brute, let me get at him!" Mann then made a rush at Bradley's body, and would doubtless have thrown it upon the floor had not the officers dragged him from the room. Mann stated that he had known Mrs. Bradley since childhood, and knew all about her troubles. He was very fond of her, and had repeatedly warned her against Bradley. He said Mrs. Bradley had decided to part from her husband and that was the direct cause of the shooting. While Bradley was in prison Mann escorted Mrs. Bradley to and from her night assignment. This made Bradley insanely jealous, and with Bradley's dissipated habits led to frequent quarrels and culminated in yesterday's tragedy. Mrs. Bradley was formerly connected with the stage.

RITUALISM ON TRIAL.

Great Excitement Over the Charges Against the Bishop of Lincoln—The Investigation Begins To-Morrow.

A special cablegram from London says: England is to have its own theological excitement next week, reflections of which will extend all over the English-speaking globe. Dr. King, the Bishop of Lincoln, is to appear at the ancient ecclesiastical palace of Lambeth, whose brown turrets face the Thames over against the Houses of Parliament, next Tuesday, to be tried by the Primate for ritualistic practices. It is understood that the Bishop will come in his cope and mitre, attended by the whole body of his canons, and will take the a priori objection that he has the right to be tried by a synod of bishops. If this plea is sustained there will be an adjournment until an episcopal convocation can be summoned.

The charges against Dr. King are six in number—the use of candles on the communion table, the mixing of water with the communion wine, having the "Agnus Dei" sung after the prayer of consecration, holding his hands in the shape of the cross while pronouncing the benediction, facing towards the east while breaking bread, and performing the rite of ablution, which means himself drinking out of the chalice. The action of the Church Association in insisting on the trial has created very bitter feeling among the more liberal clergy, and even the Tory papers denounce it as a regrettable relic of mediæval bigotry. No such trial of a bishop has occurred before since the Reformation.

THE AUSTRIAN THRONE.

The Late Tragedy Again Revived—The Succession.

A Berlin cable says: The National Zeitung says advices from St. Petersburg, which may be regarded as absolutely authentic, assert that Count Hoyes and all the domestics at the Meyerling chateau saw Baroness Vetsera, who had been shot, lying under the counterpane on Crown Prince Rudolph's bed, and the Crown Prince lying outside the bed clothes, and that they confirm the report of family disputes arising owing to the intimacy of the Crown Prince with the Baroness.

In discussing the Austrian succession, the general press expresses the opinion that Emperor Francis Joseph will recognize the validity of the provisions of the pragmatic sanction, that only in case of the total extinction of the male line shall the succession devolve upon a female. Vienna court advices assert that Emperor Francis Joseph avoids facing the succession difficulty. Archduke Francis, the presumptive Crown Prince, who is highly esteemed by the Emperor, suffers severely from epilepsy. He himself desires to live in quietness and obscurity. The Emperor detests the next brother, Archduke Otto, the scamp who so brutally treated his wife, Princess Marie, of Saxony, that he recently entreated her relatives to give her shelter and procure for her a separation.

A Jury of Women May Be Needed

A Pittsburg despatch says: A curious case, which may result in a request for a jury composed of women will come up in the Orphans' Court shortly. A Miss Mitchell claims the estate of Thomas Sheehan, late of this city. Sheehan had a daughter who was placed in a convent when a child, and who, it was afterwards reported, had died. Sheehan died some time ago, leaving an estate worth $50,000, and Miss Mitchell laid claim to it as his daughter. A number of other women put in claims, but all except Miss Mitchell were rejected as spurious claimants. She is identified by her mother through a birth-mark, and at the trial it is probable a jury of women will be demanded to decide the case. This is something which the old common law permitted in certain cases, but which is not known in the profession as a matter of practice for over two centuries.

Gertie Won't Do It Again.

A Halifax despatch says: Miss Gertie Smith, who eloped with Rev. Mr. Hutchinson some months ago, has been deserted by her whilom lover, and is now residing in England.

Seven white and four black convicts were disciplined at Newcastle, Del., on Saturday. Two Philadelphia burglars, "Broken nose George" and "Curley" Harris, stood one hour in the pillory and took twenty lashes each for their attempt to rob Hart & Brothers' safe in that city a few weeks ago. Three negroes, for petty burglaries, took the same punishment, and six other convicts five lashes each for petty larcenies. There was a large crowd present.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Mr. Laurier presented a number of petitions from the Knights of Labor assemblies praying for various amendments to the law in the interest of the working classes.

Mr. Foster presented the report of the Auditor-General for the past fiscal year; also a preliminary abstract of the business of life insurance companies, and a return of Governor-General's warrants issued since the last sitting of Parliament.

Sir Adolphe Caron presented the annual report of the department of Militia and Defence.

Mr. Brown introduced a Bill to make further provision as to the prevention of cruelty to animals. He explained that the object of the Bill was to prevent those forms of cruelty to animals not already prohibited by law, such as trap-shooting of pigeons, cock and dog fighting, and other sports in which live animals are employed.

The Bill was read a first time.

Sir John Thompson introduced a Bill to amend the Electoral Franchise Act. This Bill was substantially the same as that of last session, which, for want of time at the disposal of the House, did not become law. The scheme proposed was, that immediately after the 1st of June, the revising officer, as directed by the present statute, shall proceed with his revision, and shall make supplementary lists of voters, which shall be sent to the Queen's printer and returned to the revising officer to be posted up for public inspection. On a fixed day objections will be heard and corrections, if necessary, made and inserted in the list by the Government printing officer. The list, as so corrected and printed, shall be final, and shall be struck off and distributed in the manner provided by the present Act. The list, as thus established, is to be final as to the qualification of the voter. The polling districts shall be subdivided from time to time so that they shall not exceed 250 voters instead of 300 as at present. Other changes were proposed with the view of simplifying and reducing the cost of revision.

The Bill was read a first time.

Sir John Thompson introduced a Bill relating to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes. The Bill was to a large extent declaratory of the common law and the usages of the mercantile community, and it was not proposed to bring it into force till the 1st of September next.

Mr. Taylor, for Mr. Kirkpatrick, introduced a Bill to permit foreign vessels to aid vessels wrecked or disabled in Canadian waters.

Mr. Patterson (Essex) introduced a Bill to admit United States vessels to wrecking, towing and coasting privileges in Canadian waters. He explained that the Bill made provision for American vessels enjoying the privileges enumerated in the title, so soon as the Government of the United States shall pass a law giving these title privileges to Canadian vessels.

Mr. Boyle introduced a Bill to prevent the practice of fraud by tree peddlers and commission men in the sale of nursery stock.

Messrs. Waldie and LaRiviere, members-elect for Halton and Provencher respectively, were introduced and took their seats.

Mr. Bowell, in answer to inquiries from Mr. Edgar, said that the electoral lists, as revised in 1886, had been prepared and had been furnished to certain parties in the case of bye elections for the House of Commons, and for elections under the Canada Temperance Act, and only in such cases.

Mr. Foster, in reply to an inquiry from Mr. Perry, as to whether or not the Government intended to place in the estimates a sum sufficient to build a subway connecting Prince Edward Island with the mainland, said the intention of the Government would be shown in the estimates shortly to be brought down.

Mr. Brown moved for a committee to inquire into the frauds practised on farmers and others. He thought a good work had been done by this committee last session, though organized very late in the session, and he believed there was room for further profitable investigation.

Mr. Armstrong said he thought there was no necessity for re-appointing this committee. It had fulfilled its missien and the expense of further inquiry would hardly be justified.

Mr. McMullen favored further inquiry by the committee and believed that it could yet render good service.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Costigan rose to refer to a statement in the annual report of the Inland Revenue Department which had been interpreted to mean that the consumption of liquors had increased in the country, and had been construed in some quarters to be an attack on the Canada Temperance Act. The statement in question was an error on the part of a clerk in the department and would be made right in a corrected issue of the report. The correct percentage of the consumption of liquors was about three-fourths of a gallon per head.

Messrs. Denison, Cockburn and others presented a number of petitions praying for changes in the law in the interest of the working classes.

Mr. Brown presented a petition from the Hamilton Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, praying that the Bill now before Parliament, having the objects of the society in view, may pass.

Mr. Haggart presented the annual report of the Post-office Department.

Mr. Foster presented the report of Mr. Simeon Jones, Commissioner to the Argentine Republic.

Mr. Cook introduced a Bill further to amend the Railway Act. He explained that the Bill proposed to require greater care on the part of railway companies in the matter of landing passengers and handling baggage.

Mr. Cook introduced a Bill to provide for the examination and licensing of all persons employed as stationary engineers, and all persons having charge of steam boilers and other devices under pressure.

Mr. Laurier intimated that to-morrow he would ask the Government for the usual explanation as to the changes that had taken place in the Cabinet during recess.

Mr. Landry introduced a Bill to amend the Act respecting interest. He explained that the Bill proposed to fix the amount of interest payable on all contracts at a certain rate which it would be usurious to exceed. As to what the limit should be, he wished to have the opinion of the House.

The Bill was read a first time.

Mr. Wallace introduced a Bill for the prevention and suppression of combinations formed in restraint of trade. The object of the Bill was to prevent any persons, corporations or companies from granting exclusive privileges to any persons, as well as from denying privileges to one person when granted to other persons under similar conditions. It is also proposed to prevent parties from combining to restrict the manufacture and production of articles of merchandise that are either produced in this country or are imported. Penalties by fine or imprisonment, or both, were provided for infraction of the Act. The Bill did not interfere with section 121 of the Revised Statutes respecting trades unions.

The Bill was read a first time.

Mr. Laurier moved for copies of all Orders-in-Council, etc., relating to the dismissal of the Hon. William Ross from the collectorship of Customs at the port of Halifax.

Sir John Macdonald, in reply to an inquiry of Mr. Laurier's as to the recent Cabinet changes, said that at the close of last session it was thought well that Sir Charles Tupper, Minister of Finance, should resume his position as Commissioner in London, and he therefore resigned his position, and Mr. Foster, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was appointed in his stead, Mr. Charles H. Tupper taking the vacant portfolio of Marine. In the place of Mr. McLelan, late Postmaster-General, who was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of his native Province, Nova Scotia, Mr. Haggart, the member for Lanark, was appointed to the Post-office Department, and in place of the late lamented Mr. White, Minister of the Interior, Mr. Dewdney, member for East Assiniboia, was appointed.

Major-General Laurie, member-elect for Shelburne, N. S., was introduced and took his seat.

Mr. Edgar moved for copies of the resolutions passed at the conference held in 1887 at the city of Quebec of delegates from the several Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba. He said he understood that these resolutions had been forwarded to the Dominion Government, and regarded it of importance that the House should be placed in possession of them without delay.

The motion was carried.

The following Bills were introduced and read a first time:

Act to provide for a regular ferry between the city of Quebec and the town of Levis. Mr. Choquette.

Act to require the owners of elevators and hoists to guard against accidents. Mr. Madill.

Mr. Wood (Brockville), in accordance with the recommendation of the Committee on Standing Orders, moved that the time for receiving petitions for Private Bills be extended to the 22nd inst., and the time for presenting the same to the 28th inst. The motion was carried.

The following Bills were introduced and read a first time:

To incorporate the Algoma Railway & Coal Company—Mr. Shanly.

Respecting the Kootenay & Athabasca Railway Company—Mr. Mara.

To provide against frauds in supplying milk to cheese and butter factories—Mr. Burdett.

Mr. Davies inquired if it was the intention of the Government to treat the temporary offer made by the British plenipotentiaries to those of the United States at the time of the signing of the Fishery Treaty in Washington in November, 1888, the budget speech?

Mr. Foster said that was the intention, and known as the Modus Vivendi, as still in force, and to issue licenses as therein provided to American fishermen for the fishing season of 1889.

Mr. Tupper—That subject is now under consideration.

Mr. Foster laid on the table the estimates of the sums required for the service of the Dominion for the year ending 30th June, 1890.

Sir Richard Cartwright inquired if it was the intention of the Government to pursue the practice introduced last session, of proceeding forthwith with the consideration of the estimates before the delivery of He hoped there would be no objection to going into the estimates on Tuesday next.

Sir Richard Cartwright said he had no objection. The new practice was similar to that followed in England, and he had always approved of it.

Mr. Perry, in moving for a return of the number of lobster canneries round the coast of Prince Edward Island, complained that the fishing regulations in force there did not properly protect the lobster industry, and were not properly enforced by the inspectors.

Mr. Tupper said the regulations in question were experimental, and were only adopted for the season of last year. It was proposed to issue new regulations for the coming season.

A number of orders for papers were passed and the House adjourned at 4 05 o'clock.

Once in a Hundred Years.

The Magazine of American History points out the present winter had its counterpart a hundred years ago and also two hundred years ago. In 1789 the farmers on Long Island were ploughing their fields in January, and in 1688-9 the Baron La Hontan made a canoe expedition in Minnesota waters, from November to March, without detention by ice.

He Wanted to Want.

Little Brown-stone Boy (sighing)—Oh dear.

Fond Mother—What is it, my darling What d you want?

Little Brown-stone Boy—I want to want something.

A Flowery Sermon.

"Well, my dear, what did you think of Dr. Verbose's sermon this morning?"

"Why, I was very much surprised. I never knew before that the apparently simple text he chose was so hard to explain.'

Benjamin Franklin's watch is owned by a Lancaster (Pa.) gentleman, who still carries it and says that it keeps good time. It is of silver, shaped like a biscuit, and has engraved on its back: "Ben Franklin, 1776, Philadelphia."

Education, says a contemporary, begins the gentleman, but reading, good company and reflection must finish him. Where does the doctor come in?—Rochester Post-Express.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

Prince Bismarck is indisposed.

Mr. Gladstone has gone to Amalfi.

The health of Emperor William is again threatened.

King Humbert is certain to visit Berlin in the spring.

Thirteen counterfeiters have been captured in Butler county, Pa.

Mayor Langelier, of Quebec, was banquetted on Saturday evening.

It is reported that another attack will be soon made upon Suakim by the Soudanese.

The lecturing tour contemplated by Henry George will begin in London on March 13th.

A company has been formed at Windsor for the purpose of boring for gas within the corporation limits.

The annual dinner of the Montreal Snowshoe Club, held on Saturday night, was attended by the Governor-General.

The Winnipeg Morning Call has been bought up by the Free Press Company and the Call will cease publication with to-day's issue.

The Montreal carnival is over, and special trains on Saturday took away nearly all the visitors who visited the city of the ice palace.

The ostensoire, or monstrance, recently given by the Pope to Cardinal Taschereau, has arrived in Quebec from Rome and will be placed in the Basilica.

Col. Herchmer explains that the beer which he is charged with introducing into the Northwest Territories without a permit was for the use of the canteen.

No successor has yet been appointed to Lord Sackville at the Washington Legation, and the opinion prevails that England is in no particular hurry in the matter.

The extensive establishment of James Wyeth & Bro., manufacturing chemists, at Philadelphia, was burned yesterday. One fireman was killed. Loss about $575,000.

Lord Charles Beresford had an interview recently with Emperor William and Prince Bismarck, both of whom pointed out the advantage of a defensive alliance between England and Germany.

A temperance revival has been inaugurated in London under the auspices of the Royal Templars. Messrs. Stafford and Dunnett, of Hamilton, are addressing meetings in Victoria Hall and creating a very favorable impression.

An agent of the United States Treasury Department is at Niagara Falls, N. Y., notifying Canadians who work on the American side and reside in Canada of the provisions of the contract labor law and probability of it being enforced.

The Royal Templars of Manitoba, in annual session at Winnipeg, elected Rev. J. W. Bell Grand Past Councillor and Dr. McDiarmid Grand Councillor. An invitation was extended to the Dominion Council to hold their meeting for 1890 in the City of Winnipeg.

Late rumors nominate John R. Thomas, of Illinois, to the Navy portfolio, and John C. New, of New York, to the Treasury in President Harrison's Cabinet. It is also said that General Alger, of Michigan, has been offred the War Secretaryship.

Queen Victoria's horses and carriages have already been shipped to Biarritz, preparatory to Her Majesty's arrival there. Her favorite donkey, which always accompanies her on her excursions, will follow shortly. The Queen will leave for Biarritz on March 5th.

Mr. Charles Spurgeon has sent a letter to his congregation saying that he will soon see them again and that his limb is improving, though he cannot use it yet. His long absence, he says, shows the vitality of the church, which he declares will remain a power for good when he has departed.

It is generally believed in Berlin that the recall of the English Consul at Samoa will hasten the settlement of the difficulties in the Navigator Islands. The Berlin Post expresses the belief that the English representative has been very much influenced in his course by the British and Colonial authorities in New Zealand.

The barque Theodore Behrend has been wrecked at Texel, England. Ten persons were drowned, including the captain and family. Heavy gales are again raging on the English and Irish coasts. A building fell near Bolton on Saturday, crushing several cottages and killing six persons. At Pembroke a ferry-boat capsized and nine persons were drowned.

The Sydenham Street Church, Kingston, rebuilt, remodelled and now one of the finest edifices in the Montreal Conference, was reopened yesterday. Rev. Dr. Douglass, pastor of the old church in 1854, preached in the morning, and Rev. Principal Grant in the evening. F. W. Wodell, of Rochester, conducted the music. The recent expenditure on the church was $25,000.

Yesterday morning a great crowd of unemployed workingmen marched through the Via Condotta and other streets in Rome, blackening the shop fronts as they went, and in some cases entering and plundering stores. Street lamps and windows were smashed by the mob, and on the Via Frattina a number of buildings were badly wrecked. Several collisions occurred between the police and the workingmen and a number of persons were wounded. Several ringleaders among the rioters were arrested. Troops are forming a cordon around the disturbed district.

Admiration (?)

Artist (with pride)—"Yes, that is my picture, Dorothy." Cousin Dorothy (hoping to please)—"Really! What an exquisitely lovely frame!"—Judy.

At every railroad in Holland there is a watchwoman at the crossing.

A Chicago dressmaker announces herself as "a gowning and frocking artist."

The county of Carleton Orangemen have passed a resolution deploring the action of the Dominion Government in allowing the Jesuits' Estates Act.

Secretary Bayard has notified the German Minister that his Government accept the proposition for a resumption at Berlin of the Conference in regard to Samoa.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Several petitions were presented praying for the amendment of the Assessment, Municipal and School Acts.

The following Bills were introduced and read the first time:

Mr. McMahon—To facilitate the purchase of toll roads by municipalities.

Mr. Waters—To amend the Act respecting mortgages and the conveyance of personal property.

Mr. Monk asked whether it is the intention of the Government to afford to the city of Ottawa and the county of Carleton the advantages of the Torrens Land Transfer Act on the same terms as was afforded to the city of Toronto and the county of York when first introduced.

Mr. Mowat said it was impossible to make Ottawa and the vicinity of Carleton an exception to a rule obtaining all over the Province, and Toronto had been made exceptional in the first instance because the Government desired to give the whole Province an example of the operations of the Act. In the last three years the fees received by the Master had been quite sufficient to pay all expenses, in fact more than sufficient. It was only during the first year before the Act was in good working order that there was any charge on the public reasury.

Mr. Clarke (Wellington) moved for an order of the House for a return showing the location of any Houses of Industry, Poor Houses, or similar institutions, for the care and maintenance of indigent persons, now established in any of the cities, towns and counties in the Province of Ontario, at the total or partial cost of any municipality. In speaking to the motion, he said the information asked for would be of great value to some of the municipalities who had under consideration the propriety of establishing these institutions. He hoped the return when it came down would completely satisfy other municipalities of the benefits to be derived from such institutions. There were more indigent persons at the present time in the Province than in any previous year, and the care of these people was a matter well worthy of the consideration of law givers. In regard to the amelioration of the condition of the blind, insane, etc., Ontario had done its duty, and was proud of her institutions. But little had been done on the co-operative plan for the maintenance of our indigent. The warm-hearted people of Waterloo were the first to move in the matter. The County of Norfolk followed the example, then Elgin, Wellington, Middlesex and York. He found that the law required that annual returns should be sent in from the Houses of Refuge, but no such returns had yet been made. He had, however, obtained figures privately from some of them. In Waterloo the annual cost per inmate of the House of Refuge was $51.87, Elgin $49.95, Wellington $59.52, Middlesex $58.85, York $57.93; or an average of $56.25 At the Provincial Institutions the cost per inmate per year was: Asylums, $135; hospitals, $229; Central Prison, $169; Reformatory, $198; Mercer, $211; jail, $65.90. He thought the Government might devise some plan to utilize the Houses of Industry throughout the country for the accommodation of the insane, instead of sending them to the jails. A Government inspection of these institutions would then, of course, be necessary. Some of the Houses of Refuge had inmates whose maintenance properly belonged to the Province, and he thought the Government might consider the advisability of extending some aid to them.

Mr. Meredith said that the House was indebted to his hon. friend for bringing up the matter. He was sorry, however, his hon. friend had indulged in one of the usual pessimistic utterances peculiar to gentlemen opposite. It was somewhat singular, however, that the poor-houses were established in what they called the banner counties. One thing they had to consider was that there was gradually springing up a class of professional poor, especially in the large cities. Where the test of actual work had been applied in Toronto this class had decreased. Care should be taken that they did not provide conditions under which the professional poor would be supported at the public expense. With regard to many of the insane in the poor-houses, they were not insane within the meaning of the Asylum Act. The Blind Institution, again, was only for those for whom there was hope of being benefitted by the treatment pursued there. He went on to refer to the evil of outside municipalities sending their poor and feeble to the large cities for support, and said some legislation should be devised to check this.

Mr. Hardy said that some years ago a law was passed making it compulsory upon counties to establish poor houses, but so much opposition to it was aroused that it was repealed. Public opinion was divided as to the advisability of erecting these poor houses. Whenever one had been established, and there had been a fair opportunity of its being worked, the general opinion was that it had done good in the public interest. If any plan could be devised, just falling short of making the establishment of these institutions compulsory, a good end would be served. A good many persons thought that by establishing these institutions a chronic class of paupers would be encouraged, or a number of men and women would be brought up to look at the poor houses as the ultimate aim of their life. He doubted that such a result would follow a system like our own.

Mr. Gibson (Hamilton) brought down the following returns ordered by the House: Respecting the fees payable to Judge Lacourse, judge of the County Court of the county of Waterloo; also regarding the fees payable to Mr. W. A. McLean, local Master of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario at Walkerton.

The report of the Minister of Education on the subject of technical education was also presented to the House.

Several petitions were presented praying for amendments to the municipal law in the direction of abolishing tax exemptions; from the city of Toronto, praying for an Act for the re-arrangement of the city debt; from the city of Hamilton, praying that the Assessment Act be amended so as to exempt $600 dwellings, and for the extension of the Factory Act to workshops and dwellings, also that the grants made to universities and colleges be transferred to the Public Schools.

The following Bills were introduced and read for the first time:

Mr. Drury—To confirm a conveyance made by the town of Barrie to the Queen.

Mr. Garson—Respecting the examination of engineers for stationary engines.

Mr. Kerns—Respecting the town of Oakville.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on Mr. Fraser's Bill respecting voters' lists. The Bill consolidates the law, and applies its provisions to voters within the meaning of the Manhood Suffrage Act.

Mr. Clancy called attention to the fact that the names of aliens had appeared on the lists, and they could not be scrutinized, the lists being final.

Mr. Fraser said the reason the lists were made final was because a scrutiny would involve enormous expense. If an alien took the oath and voted, the remedy would be to prosecute him for perjury.

When the clause relating to appeals to the County Judge to have names struck off the list came up Mr. Meredith drew attention to the apparent injustice in subpœnaing men to attend the court on the ground that they were not entitled to vote, and because they failed to attend through carelessness, although entitled to vote, their names were struck off.

Mr. Fraser said he could see no reason why a judge should strike a man's name off the list simply for non-attendance. It was a question that required some consideration, because appeals might be made on frivolous grounds, and sometimes might be done to empower the judge to order the appellant, if it was shown that he appealed on frivolous grounds with the expectation that the voter would not attend and consequently be struck off, to pay the costs. He would give the question his consideration, and perhaps something might be done to do away with what might really become an undoubted evil.

The committee rose and reported the Bill, with certain verbal amendments.

In reply to Mr. Clancy, Mr. Fraser said the reports of the Factories Inspectors were in the hands of the printers.

The following Bills were introduced and read the first time:

Mr. Balfour—To amend the Ontario Election Act.

Mr. Bishop—To amend the Act respecting insurance companies.

Mr. Fraser, in moving the second reading of the Bill to amend the Ontario Factories Act, explained the principal alterations which it is proposed to make in the existing law. At present any place or premises which would be otherwise a factory, where there were employed a number of persons exceeding twenty, came under the operations of the law. His Bill provided that where the number of employees exceeded five, in such cases the Act would be operative. A schedule was supplied in the Bill giving a list of the factories affected, so as to prevent misunderstanding. Another clause of the Bill provided that factories should not escape the operations of the law in cases where the work was sub-let. The word "child" in section five was changed to "boy," so as to prevent its being construed to include girls. The change would prevent girls under 14 being employed. The Bill provided that canning factories and fruit and vegetable-drying factories should be given the additional month of October wherein employees might work over ten hours a day, but in all factories where women and girls are employed 45 minutes additional will have to be allowed for an evening meal. No children would be, however, allowed to work after 9 p. m. in such canning factories. Persons charged with violation of the Act would be allowed to testify in their own behalf.

The Bill was read the second time.

Several petitions were presented praying for the abolition of exemptions.

On motion of Mr. A. M. Ross, an order-in-council was ratified placing the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Brockville, on Schedule A of the Charity Aid Act and granting aid to it from Nov. 28th, 1877, and also placing the sum of $277.80 in the estimates on account of work done by the hospital.

In reply to Mr. Meredith, Mr. Hardy said the Government could not refuse aid to a hospital merely because there were two hospitals in a town or city. The line had not yet been drawn in this respect.

Mr. Meredith said that some settled policy should be adopted, as the expenditure on charities was increasing to an alarming rate, and was now about $80,000 a year.

At the request of Mr. H. E. Clark (Toronto), Mr. Fraser allowed the order for the House going into committee on the Bill to amend the Factories Act to stand for a day or two, in the expectation that the report of the inspectors would be printed then.

Mr. Fraser said that the printing department appeared to be in a congested state.

Mr. Meredith said the Government should take steps to prevent the congestion taking place. The House ought not to be inconvenienced in this way every session.

Mr. Fraser moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act. He explained that the Bill extended the Act to cases of injury caused by defects in either the machinery, premises, etc., or their arrangement. The Bill removed the restriction which defined superintendents to be men not engaged in manual labor. Another section corrected the mistake in the Act which made the words "signal" "points," a compound word "signal-points." Section 6 of the Bill prevented an employer escaping liability under the Act by sub-letting the work to a sub-contractor. The sub-contractor was, however, not relieved from liability, but a workman was barred from getting double compensation. Section 9 permitted a workman to give evidence that there was reasonable cause for his neglecting to give notice of any defect he may have observed in the plant or machinery. The Bill provided that compensation awarded men be not exceeding either three years wages or a sum not exceeding $1,500, whichever award is found to be the larger. Other clauses of the Bill made good defective provisions in the Act relating to "want of notice," "distribution of compensation."

Mr. Meredith said he was glad the hon. gentleman had decided to adopt a more liberal view of the compensation recoverable—a view almost as liberal as that advocated by the Opposition a year ago, and which the hon. gentleman had then resisted.

The Bill was read the second time.

Mr. French moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the law of slander. He explained the difference between libel and slander, the former referring to written or printed utterances and the latter to spoken, and pointed out that under the present law a person might by words impute unchastity to a woman, and cause her much misery and suffering, and yet no action could be taken against that person unless some special damage could be proved. The passage of the Bill would help to preserve the peace, as male relatives of women slandered had now to take the law into their own hands. The Bill provided in brief that in actions for imputing unchaste conduct to a woman special damage need not be proved, and that a person using defamatory language regarding a woman could be punishable by fine or imprisonment to the extent of $50 and costs or six months in jail.

Mr. Meredith thought the Bill objectionable because it gave slandered women a remedy and not men. It ought to be an offence to impute unchastity to a man just as much as to a woman. Another difficulty was that the utterers of slanders against women were principally women-gossips. In nine cases out of ten, where actions were brought under this Bill, sympathetic juries would find for the woman plaintiff, although the man might be innocent.

Mr. Mowat said he liked the sentiment which prompted the introduction of the Bill, and he was glad it had been brought before the consideration of the House.

Mr. Harcourt supported the principle of the Bill.

Mr. O'Connor said he sympathized with the measure.

Mr. Waters supported the Bill.

Mr. Hardy thought the Bill would prove fruitful of litigation. It would open the gates wide to frivolous litigation and might cause more harm than good to women.

The debate was then adjourned.

Mr. Miller's Bill to amend the Municipal Act was read the second time.

Mr. Meredith asked whether the attention of the Government had been called to the recent decision of the High Court of Justice holding that certain provisions of the Act of last session intituled "An Act to provide against frauds in the supplying of milk to cheese or butter manufacteries" are beyond the powers of the Legislature to enact—whether it is intended to acquiesce in that decision or to appeal therefrom.

Mr. Mowat answered in the affirmative to the first query, and said he did not intend to acquiesce in the decision.

Mr. O'Connor—To amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Murray—To amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Hudson—To amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Balfour—To amend the Mechanics' Lien Act.

Mr. Gilmour—To incorporate the town of West Toronto Junction.

Mr. Waters—To amend the Municipal Act respecting the appointment of jailers.

Mr. French's Bill to amend the law of slander was read the second time, and referred to a special committee.

The following Bills were read the second time:

To amend the Snow Fences Act—Mr Dack.

To amend the Assessment Act—Mr. Balfour.

To amend the Municipal Act—Mr. Graham.

To amend the Municipal Act—Mr. Balfour.

To amend the Assessment Amendment Act, 1889—Mr. Fraser.

Don'ts for Nurses.

Don't let stale flowers remain in a sick chamber.

Don't be unmindful of yourself if you are in the responsible position of nurse. To do faithful work you must have proper food and stated hours of rest.

Don't appear anxious, however great your anxiety.

Don't forget that kindness and tenderness are needful to successful nursing. Human nature longs to be soothed and comforted on all occasions when it is out of tune.

Things One Would Rather Not Have Said.

Mrs. Jobson—Why, my dear Mrs. Hobson, I am surprised to see you in this sombre dress. I had not heard of any affliction in your family.

Mrs. Hobson—Oh, yes, indeed, Mr. Hobson died six weeks ago.

Mrs. Jobson—Why, how shocked I am I never knew of it at all. I would have been o glad to attend his funeral, if I had known.

Dear Sympathetic Heart.

Emily—What are you crying over, dear?

Julia—Longfellow's Evangeline! It makes me sad that women don't appreciate love and constancy as they should.

(Servant enters with cards.)

Julia (after reading them)—Chollie Jones and Freddie de Browne. Oh, how lovely! Come down with me and help in the fun. I am engaged to both of them.

Ready to Graduate.

Old Lady—"Do you think, my dear, that you are mistress of all the housewifely accomplishments which a woman should have before she marries?"

Sweet Girl (engaged)—"Yes, indeed. I have learned how to knit smoking caps, and yesterday a married friend of mine took me to an intelligence office to teach me the difficult art of selecting servants."

Astronomy Made Easy.

Hostess—And so you really believe the moon to be inhabited, Professor?

Prof. Einzumachen—Ah, vell, I do not say zat. But zere is vun moon in which zere mus' be vun man.

Hostess—And which might that be pray?

Prof. E. (putting on his party manners)—Vy, ze—vat you call it?—ze honeymoon

Ingratitude.

"Just think, here I have been paying for my nephew's lessons in singing, and what do you suppose he does in return? He always sings his songs to me!"—Fliegende Blatter

The Spanish Senate yesterday, by a vote of 66 to 53, rejected the motion of Senator Cuesta, a protectionist, to raise the import duties on cereals.

THE LITTLE HIGH CHAIR.

A Scene That Brought Tears to the Old Auctioneer's Eyes.

There was an auction at one of the down town auction houses recently. A pale, sad faced woman, in a plain calico gown, stood in a crowd. The loud voiced auctioneer finally came to a lot of plain and somewhat worn furniture. It had belonged to the plain woman, and was being sold to satisfy the mortgage on it. One by one the articles were sold, the old bureau to one, the easy rocker to another and a bedstead to a third. Finally the auctioneer hauled out a child's high chair. It was old and rickety, and as the auctioneer held it up everybody laughed—everybody except the pale faced woman. A tear trickled down her cheek. The auctioneer saw it, and somehow a lump seemed to come up his throat, and his gruff voice grew soft. He remembered a little high chair at home, and how it had once filled his life with sunshine. It was empty now. The baby laugh, the two little hands that were once held out to greet "papa" from that high chair were gone forever. He saw the pale faced woman's piteous looks and knew what it meant; knew that in her eye the little rickety high chair was more precious than if it had been made of gold and studded with diamonds. In imagination he could see the little dimpled cherub which it once held; could see the chubby little fist grasping the tin rattle box and pounding the chair full of nicks; could see the little feet which had rubbed the paint off the legs; could hear the crowing and laughing in glee—and now, the little high chair was empty. He knew there was an aching void in the pale faced woman's heart; there was in his own. Somehow the day may come and go, but you never get over it. There is no one to dress in the morning, no one to put to bed at night. "Don't laugh!" said the auctioneer, softly, as somebody facetiously offered ten cents; "many of you have little empty high chairs at home which money would not tempt you to part with." Then he handed the clerk a bill out of his own pocket and remarked, "Sold to the lady right there," and as the pale faced woman walked out with the little high chair clasped in her arms, and tears streaming down her cheeks, the crowd stood back respectfully, and there was a suspicious moisture in the eyes of the man who had bid ten cents.—Detroit Free Press.

The Horses were Spared.

When Mr. Cole, a well-known circus proprietor in the South, sold his stock in New Orleans, three dun ring horses that he had owned for years went with the others by mistake. Mr. Cole at once bought them back, saying that he would never consent to have the horses become the property of any one who would make them work, and he had decided to put them to a painless death. He proposed bleeding them to death, but W. B. Leonard, a liveryman, suggested that the use of chloroform would be a better and less painful mode. This was finally decided upon, and a reliable man procured, who was to have performed the operation. They were all collected in the circus tent. There was Cole, Leonard, the riders and the clowns, the ringmaster, the tumblers and the leapers, and the three pet duns. Calling the little mare by name, he told her to kiss them all good-bye. The intelligent animal, stretching forward her head, kissed each one. This was more than they could stand, and the sacrifice was put off. Cole had no place to take them to, so Mr. Leonard promised to find some one who would assume charge of them, under a guarantee never to work them, but to keep them in good order until death should claim them for the grave.—St. Louis Republican.

Blind Boys on Bicycles.

A very novel feature is to be introduced into the Asylum for the Blind to be established in this city. Dr. Campbell, of the Royal Institute for the Blind, in London, who is expected to be in charge of the asylum here, aroused the greatest interest in the world's metropolis when in last September he selected a class of blind pupils, whom he taught to ride on the bicycle, and they, with him in the lead, rode from London to Derby. The distance between the two places is 126 miles, and a remarkable fact in connection with the feat was that no accidents occurred on the way. Dr. Campbell will follow out his ideas on this subject when he takes charge of the asylum here. Besides teaching his blind pupils how to ride on bicycles, Dr. Campbell believes in putting them through other courses of athletic training. He teaches his pupils how to box, swim, pull an oar, run races, etc. The speed and proficiency acquired by some of the pupils in these athletic sports are regarded as phenomenal, and it is said to be one of the most interesting sights imaginable to see two blind pupils put the gloves on and have a regular scientific set-to.—Pittsburg Times

A Self-Made Man.

New Chicago pastor—"Of what State i your husband a native, Mrs. Veneer?"

Mrs. Veneer, of Chicago—"Connecticut I believe, sir."

"Do you know in what part of the State he was born?"

"I don't think he was ever born, sir. I so often hear him speak of himself to other as a self-made man."

The Butterfly Girl is Coming Back.

The tailor-made gown was English. Its strong points were chest and shoulders. But the tailor-made gown is going. Womankind is French these days. Look at the Directoire maiden in her clinging robe.

She Misunderstands.

Miss Canada (blushingly)—I am sorry, sir, but I can never be anything more to you than a sis——.

Uncle Sam (aghast)—Christopher Columbus, young woman! You misunderstand me. I'm not courting you. I am only offering to be a father to you.

A Game Old Millionaire.

In Cocamonga, Cal., a pretty servant girl has captured a millionaire aged 79, and named Daniel Hamilton. He has four children, thirteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild, and all objected to the marriage, but could not stop it.

The United States House of Representatives has adopted the conference report on the Nicaraguan Canal Bill. Yeas, 177; nays, 60.

THE PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH.

A Strange People Who Have a Language Made Up of Many Others.

It is not generally known, even by people who have visited America, that there is in Pennsylvania, very near the cities of Philadelphia and New York, a population of more than two million inhabitants which is in many respects strangely like what its rural ancestors were in Germany more than two centuries ago. Some years since there were to be seen in a shop in Philadelphia several large books of Lutheran devotion, in the type and spelling of 1540, bound in deeply stamped white vellum, with heavy brass clasps. They did not look like imitations of old books, says the Boston Transcript, they seemed to be "the thiag itself;" but the date was recent. "They are for the Pennsylvania Dutch," said the bookseller. "They would not believe that the Lord would hear them if they prayed to Him out of a modern-looking book. And those books, as you see them, have been printed and bound in that style for nearly 200 years for the Pennsylvania Dutch market, just as they were printed for their ancestors during the Reformation."

There is probably no more striking instance of conservatism to be found anywhere in Europe than this; but the spirit manifested by the worthy "Dutchmen" is carried out by them consistently in everything else. "Follow thy father, good son, and like as thy father before thee has done," is their golden rule of life. Firstly, they always speak among themselves a singular patois called Pennsylvania Dutch, from the word Deutsch. "It belongs," says Dr. H. Harbaugh, "to the South German dialects," and, while partaking of all, "it is most closely allied to the Pfalzisch"—that is, to the Rhine German of the Palatinate. In the valley of the Susquehanna and beyond the Alleghany it is much mingled with English. Further in the west we find in it traces of Scottish, Irish, Swedish and French. It is specially remarkable in its having retained great numbers of old and curious German words, such as are now to be heard only in the remotest places of the fatherland. We find the influence of the unchangeable English article the in der. Thus a man will say: "Hen—scherr der blind Gaul uf, mer welle up der markt fahr" i.e; "Henry, harness the blind horse; we will go to market."

Old King Cole
Was a merry old soul,
And a merry old soul was he.

But His Royal Majesty would never have been so merry had he suffered from constipation, or deranged liver, or dyspepsia, or piles, or any other complaint that comes from a system out of sorts and causes impurities of the blood. If you suffer from any of these things you will feel morose, melancholy, mournful, aye, mad or anything else but merry. To be merry you must be well. To be well take Dr. Pierce's world-famed Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Easy to take, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, prompt and pleasant in their action; only one for a dose.

A Clear Conscience.

Editor Cheap Monthly—I tell you it makes a man feel good to do a noble action. I'll sleep well to-night.

Admiring Wife—Have you rescued some children from cruelty or saved a life, my dear?

"Well, no, not exactly; but to-day a young woman who has been furnishing us with beautiful poetry for three years without charge, came into the office and I gave her fifty cents."

Jewels and Laces.

Oh, girl with the jewelled fingers!
Oh, maid with the laces rare!

What are your jewels and what are your laces worth to you? You would give them all if you could get back your health. Well, you can and you can keep your jewels and your laces too. Thousands of women know by happy experience that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores the health. It is a positive remedy for those derangements, irregularities and weaknesses so common to woman. In fact, it is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle wrapper and faithfully carried out for many years.

Just Human Nature.

When the cash of a bank goes away to Canada it is perfectly natural that some of the bank officials should go with it.—New Orleans Picayune.

If all so-called remedies have failed, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures.

Babu Asutosh Mookerjee, M. A., F. R. A. S., F. R. S. E., of Bengal, has been made a foreign member of the Mathematical Society of Edinburgh, Scotland. Judging from his name the Indian is a man of letters.

VASELINE PREPARATIONS.

On receipt of postage stamps we will send free by mail the following splendid articles:
One Box of Pure Vaseline - - - 10 cents.
One Box of Vaseline Camphor Ice 15 cents.
One Box of Vaseline Cold Cream 15 cents.
No Vaseline is genuine unless our name is on the label. CHESEBROUGH MANUF'G CO., 24 State St., NEW YORK.

SEEDS GIVEN AWAY. P'k'ge Mixed Flower Seeds, 500 kinds, GUIDE, and 10c. Certificate for Seeds, your choice, all for 2 stamps (4 cents.) Every flower lover delighted. Tell all your friends. G. W. PARK, FANNETTSBURG, PA.

Be Prompt. This offer will appear but twice.

DUNL. 8 89.

SALESMEN We wish a few men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. Largest manufacturers in our line. Enclose 2-cent stamp Wages $3 per day. Permanent position. No postals answered. Money advanced for wages advertising, etc. Centennial Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

DON'T FORGET

To call at URLIN BROS'. and try their Teas and Coffees.

We have the best and most complete stock of groceries in the West.

Our stock of China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Glassware, Lamps and Fancy China Ware will be found very cheap.

A large and well-assorted stock of Hardware always kept on hand. We offer big bargains in Axes, Cross-cut Saws, Cow Ties, Table Cutlery and Tinware.

We are offering the best value in all kinds of Boots and Shoes ever shown. Call and see for yourselves.

We pay the highest price for produce of all kinds.

URLIN BROS., DUTTON.

The Dutton Enterprise.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1889.

DUTTON AND VICINITY.

300 tame pigeons wanted at once.—B. J. SCHULTZ.

St. Thomas will have a hospital built next summer.

J. E. Crane will move into his new house shortly.

Middlemiss correspondence received too late for this week.

Attention is called to the advertisement of a farm for sale in another column.

Mrs. Minard died at Sparta Saturday morning, aged 100 years and 6 months.

Valuable improved farm for sale. For particulars apply to J. T. Sifton, Dutton.

Mrs. S. J. Draper, of London, paid a visit to her sister, Mrs. Phelps, this week.

Tenders are wanted for the construction of a bridge across the creek at Tyrconnel.

The Dutton Gun Club came off second best in the match with Ridgetown last Thursday.

J. Shannon, L. D. S., will be in his office every day except Monday in each week in the future.

Mr. J. G. Bayne, of Newbury, and Miss Mary Cameron, of Glencoe, paid a flying visit to Dutton yesterday.

Rev. T. Wilson will preach in Knox Church next Sunday evening on the subject, "Was Adam the first man."

A meeting of the Dutton Gun Club will be held to-night at Eustice's hotel at nine o'clock. All the members are requested to attend.

The Fingal small-pox scare has been pronounced entirely without foundation by medical men, the disease being chicken-pox of a malignant type.

Large quantities of wood and logs are being brought in now. Buyers are offering $1.50 to $1.75 per cord for four-foot wood and 80c. to $1 for stove wood.

Dr. Drinkwater, of the Eclectic Medical Institute, Cincinnati, who is on his way to Maryland, is spending a few days here with his brother, Wm. Drinkmater, V. S.

The Dutton Roller Mills are now running night and day to supply orders. Six cars of flour and two of middlings were shipped to the lower Provinces this week.

Mr. Conn will conduct service in the Methodist Church next Sunday morning at 10.30. Rev. J. J. Rice, agent for the Bible Society, will preach in the evening at 7 o'clock.

Mitchel & Graham, of Rodney, have the contract for building the new school house in S. S. No. 16 Dunwich. The building will be brick with a slate roof and will cost $1,150.

MARKETS.—Wheat $1, oats 28 to 30c., peas 50 to 55c., barley 40c., butter 20c., eggs 13c., lard 12½c., tallow 5c., dried apples scarce at 75c. per bush., dressed turkey 8c. to 10c. per lb., green apples, 40c. to 50c., per bush., potatoes 25c., per bush.

Arch. Clark, of Fingal, has the contract of erecting a handsome brick dwelling on the farm of Dan McKay next spring. The contract price is $1,000.

Mr. Colin McGregor, of Wallacetown, has purchased a house and lot on Nancy street and purposes moving here shortly. He will build stables next to Glance's carriage shop in the spring.

Daniel McGugan, of Coyne's Corners, was climbing on a large log on Friday last, using an axe to assist him, when the axe slipped. He fell to the ground, receiving an ugly wound on the knee joint.

Five hundred thousand feet more Elm logs wanted at the Dutton Stave Factory, as many as possible 13 feet long, to be measured and settled for the last week in March.—HUMPIDGE & GRAHAM. 2

The West Elgin Farmers' Institute will meet at West Lorne on Saturday, March 2nd. Papers will be read on "Horses," by R. Jordan and "Care and feed of Cows" by R. R. Cranston. Other important subjects will also be brought up for discussion.

Residents of Fingal are greatly excited over a disease which has caused the death of three persons in a short time. Rumor has it that smallpox is the cause, while the medical men say that it is a malignant type of chickenpox. Precautions are being taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

Good, live, correspondents for the ENTERPRISE are wanted at Rodney, West Lorne, Campbellton, Iona Station, Port Talbot and Crinan. No better practice can be had for a young man than writing for a local newspaper. Paper and envelopes furnished on application.

A fire on Tuesday night at the Mount Elgin Industrial Institute destroyed the playhouse, laboratory, clothing-room and junior schoolroom. Thus 33 Indian boys ing left almost destitute of clothing, having lost all their personal clothing as well as a great part of the institution clothing. Contributions in clothing or money addressed to the principal, Rev. W. W. Shepherd, Muncey P. O., will be thankfully received.

Following is the programme for the next meeting of the Young People's Christian Advance Society, to be held in Knox Church on Tuesday evening, Feb. 26:—Opening hymn; reading, Miss S. McLean; instrumental, Miss Bella Paterson; reading, Miss K. Campbell; solo, Mrs. T. Wilson; debate, "Resolved that the Constitution of the United States is better than that of Great Britain," affirmative—H. O'Malley and J. McNeil, negative—J. Saunders and R. Sutherland; instrumental, Miss Ida Leitch; essay on Thompson, Miss K. McCallum; critic, M. McArthur.

At the St. Thomas Division Court on Thursday last Messrs. Campbell, Stevens & Co., millers, brought action against Mr. A. J. Leitch, of Dutton, to recover some $43, the value of a ton of flour to one Evans, a baker at Dutton, for payment of which Mr. Leitch had given a verbal guarantee. Mr. Leitch admitted guaranteeing to become responsible, but showed that he had paid the bill, having sent a postoffice order for the amount in Mr. Evans' name. This was received by plaintiff, but credited to another account owed by Evans. Verdict was given for the defendant.

We have received a copy of the Carnival number of the Montreal Star. It is a superb number, a grand souvenir to send to distant friends and well worth preserving in private libraries as a memento of the most extraordinary winter in the history of Canada. We cannot describe the number as it is so elaborate. An order has been booked from London, England, for five thousand copies, while in Toronto and New York it has created a tremendous furore. The last edition is now being run off. The publishers send it to any address for the small sum of thirty-five cents.

A large crowd attended the first social of the Young People's Society of Christian Advance held at the residence of Mr. McArthur last Friday evening. Teams were in readiness at the church at an early hour and soon conveyed the crowd to Mr. McArthur's roomy residence, where a few hours were spent in solid enjoyment by young and old. Tea, coffee and sandwiches were served about 11 o'clock after which all departed, and we doubt not that they all had a pleasant evening. A collection was taken up, amounting to $11 which will be applied to church work. The thinks of the Society are due the genial host and hostess for kindly placing their home at their disposal for the evening. It is the intention of the Society to give a series of like entertainments during the winter, and their success is already assured.

Iona, Feb. 14th, 1889.

To the Provincial Provident Institution,
St. Thomas, Ont.:

Dear Sirs,—We have to acknowledge herewith receipt of cheque for the sum of two thousand dollars, being amount in full of claim under certificate held by the late George H. Brown. We also desire to thank you for your exceeding promptness in settling amount of above claim, we having received the money immediately on completion of proof papers. The cost of carrying this insurance has been exceedingly light and within the reach of all. We shall always have a good word for the P. P. I. and will heartily recommend it to any one wanting insurance.

Yours truly,

(Sgd) ROSETTA ANNE BROWN, Beneficiary.
(Sgd) T. A. SILCOX, Executor.

Little Laughs.

A desirable thing in gloves—A warm lining.

When colored barbers quarrel they are liable to razor row.

Can a man be said to pay as he goes if he sleeps on "tick?"

When a man snores in his sleep, is the sound vocal or "instrumental?"

If a dog can be placed on a scent, how many dogs can be placed on a dollar.

Celery is said to sooth nervousness. This applies, with an S, to nervous employes.

The ties that connect most business men with the public—advertise.

The apple Eve longed for and ate at last must have been the pine-apple.

A Detroit lady was recently admitted to the bar. It was her father's. She got a glass of beer and left.

A Michigan grocer is willing to admit that honest tea is the best policy, but when it comes to coffee, he doesn't believe in running the thing in the ground.

The minister who divides his discourse into many heads will find it difficult to procure attentive ears for all of them.

Cowper says that "the tear that is wiped with address may be followed perhaps by a smile." If it is woman's tear the perhaps is unnecessary—you can always dry it with a dress.

While reading a few chapters of Noah Webster's entertaining novel, we learned that when they embalm a man they fill him up with aromatic spices. Now we know why a man shows cloves—he's embalming himself.

Cowal.

The annual missionary meeting was held in the Presbyterian Church on Monday evening of last week. Rev. Mr. Henderson, of Hyde Park, was present and addressed the meeting on the subject of Home and Foreign Missions. Sixty-five dollars was subscribed for the cause.

Miss Maggie Urquhart, of Chatham, is visiting her brother, Rev. A. Urquhart.

Mrs. Tueltz, of Bear Lake, Mich., who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Turner, has returned to her home.

A Girly Girl.

The girly girl is the truest girl. She is what she seems, and not a sham and a pretense. The slangy girl has a hard job of it not to forget her character. The boy girl and the rapid girl are also wearers of masks. The girly girl never bothers about woman's rights and woman's wrongs. She is a girl and is glad of it. She would not be a boy and grow up into a man and vote and go to war and puzzle her brains about stocks for a kingdom. She knows nothing about business and does not want to know anything about it. Her aim is to marry some good fellow and make him a good wife, and she generally succeeds in both. She delights in dress and everything that is pretty, and is not ashamed to own up that she does. She is pleased when she is admired and lets you see that she is. She is feminine from the top of her head to the ends of her toes, and if you try to draw her into the discussion of dry themes she tells you squarely that the conversation does not suit her. She is the personification of frankness. There is not a particle of humbug in her composition. Here is health to the girly girl. May her number never grow less.

AN ADMIRER OF THE GIRLY GIRL.

Small sugar-coated Burdock Pills do not gripe or sicken. They are mild and effectual.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVean, 282 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. Martyrs to headache should try

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience.

Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

DR. FOWLER'S
•EXT: OF• •WILD• STRAWBERRY
CURES
CHOLERA
Cholera Morbus
COLIC and CRAMPS
DIARRHŒA
DYSENTERY
AND ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS AND FLUXES OF THE BOWELS IT IS SAFE AND RELIABLE FOR CHILDREN OR ADULTS.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

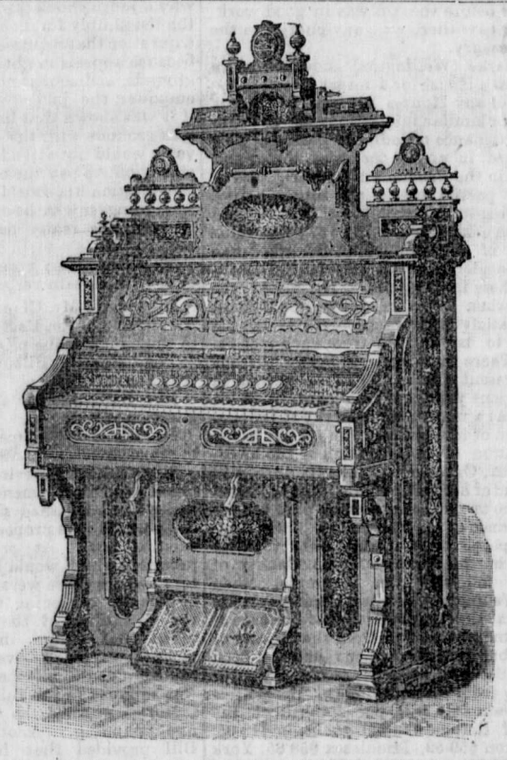
A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line



AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE BELL ORGANS AND PIANOS.

W. BELL & CO., GUELPH, ONT.

CALL AND SEE OUR STOCK OF INSTRUMENTS BEFORE BUYING.

THE BEST VALUE GUARANTEED.

A large stock of small instruments, viz:

VIOLINS, ACCORDEONS, HARMONICAS, &C., ALSO SHEET MUSIC.

We also keep in stock the best American Sewing Machine Oil, Needles and Repairs, at

J. M. JACKSON'S MUSIC EMPORIUM,

Opposite the Commercial Hotel, Main Street, Dutton.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness, and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

NEW BAKERY

THE undersigned, having purchased the Bakery Business from W. Evans, wishes to state that he will conduct the business in

First-class Style,

BREAD & PASTRY OF ALL KINDS.

Christmas and Wedding Cakes a Specialty.

C. J. WEIR.

BURDOCK PILLS
SUGAR COATED
A SURE CURE
FOR BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION, DIZZINESS, SICK HEADACHE, AND DISEASES OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY ARE MILD, THOROUGH AND PROMPT IN ACTION, AND FORM A VALUABLE AID TO BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS IN THE TREATMENT AND CURE OF CHRONIC AND OBSTINATE DISEASES.

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

COME

In and see the bargains we are offering in Plows from $12 to $65, complete; in Pumps from $6.50 to $17, complete; in Cutters from $12 to $65, complete.

AND

Examine our stock of Plow, Harrow, Rake, Drill, Cultivator, and other repairs which are kept constantly on hand

SEE

The bargains we offer in Buggies, Democrats and Sleighs.

US

And be convinced that we sell nothing but the best of Binders, Mowers, Harrows, Cultivators, Hay Forks, Slings and Load Lifters.

OUR SPECIALTIES

Are Binding Twine, Garden Seeds, Implements and Machine Oils.

SIFTON BROS.,
DUTTON.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8—No. 10. DUTTON, ONT., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1889. WHOLE No. 344.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B., BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, ETC. OFFICES—St. Thomas and Dutton. ☞Money to Loan.

A. J. LEITCH, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, pb DUTTON.

WILLIAM DRINKWATER, VETERINARY SURGEON, DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON, LICENSED AUCTIONEER, d DUTTON.

HENRY CLAY, BARRISTER-AT-LAW, ROCHE BLOCK, DUTTON. Commissioner in the High Court. ☞ Money Loaned.

MONEY TO LOAN AT LOWEST RATES. First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented. Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc. S. JOHN SCHULTE, OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office, St. Thomas.

MONEY TO LOAN at 6 per cent. on the most favorable terms for repayment. ERMATINGER & ROBINSON, Barristers, St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST. D. D. S.—Pennsylvania. L. D. S.—Ontario. 351 TALBOT STREET, - OFF. ELGIN STREET ST. THOMAS.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS for all classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order. Satisfaction guaranteed. F. A. HUMPIDGE, Office—Front Street. Dutton.

DR. G. ADAMS SWANN, Surgeon Dentist. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown the first and third Wednesday in each month.

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon Dentist. Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate R.C.D.S. of Ontario. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Office closed on Mondays only. Office — Leitch Block, Dutton.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20. W. A. BRUSH, Photographer, Dutton, Ont.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on

tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, J P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London; G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; D M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W W Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley, General Agents.

BANKERS—British North America.

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to

1-17tf N. PHELPS.

PAGYARDS
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

The Star Loan Company
181 Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in

SAVINGS BANK!

from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.

G. E. Casey, M. P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.

C. W. ALLEN, Proprietor.

Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.

Repairing Promptly Done.

CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS MADE TO ORDER.

A Specialty made of our

NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,

which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities

Give Us a Call.

TURNER & PECKHAM.

Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do

Lumber Dressing of all Kinds

with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds, etc., kept on hand.

Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate ☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.

M. COCHRANE.

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a

General Line of Blacksmithing.

IN HORSESHOEING.

☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.

M. L. MILLAR.

Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

MICHIGAN CENTRAL
"The Niagara Falls Route."
CANADA SOUTHERN DIVISION.

GOING EAST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
Ridgetown	8 08	9 47	11 02
Rodney	8 38	10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50	.....	12 30
Dutton	9 09	10 29	12 58
Iona	9 25	.....	1 30
Shedden	9 36	.....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05	11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
St. Thomas (dep't)	3 00	12 25	5 25
Shedden	3 24	.....	6 01
Iona	3 32	.....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	.....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	A. M.
Leave St. Thomas	6 30	6 00	10 15
Arrive at London	7 25	6 50	11 00

GOING SOUTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	P. M.
Leave London	8 50	2 10	7 40
Ar. at St. Thomas	9 30	3 50	8 45

JNO. G. LAVEN, Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

THE SMALL-POX.

The disease from which three persons died in Fingal has been proven beyond a doubt to be small-pox and in consequence each municipality in the county is taking precautions to prevent the spread of the disease. Lemuel Young, of Fingal, died Monday morning from the effects of the disease, making the third death. Other cases in that place are progressing favorably.

The Boards of Health in St. Thomas, Yarmouth, Aldborough and Southwold were called together as soon as the fact of the disease being small-pox became known and steps were at once taken to prevent its spread. Compulsory vaccination was ordered and schools, churches, literary societies and skating rinks have been ordered closed at Lawrence Station, Iona, Shedden, Fingal and many other places.

Dr. McKay, of Woodstock, a member of the Provincial Board of Health, visited Fingal Monday, pronounced the disease small-pox, and expressed the opinion that the Board of Health were taking all precautions possible. He instructed Ald. Lee, chairman of the Board of Health, to arrest any one quarantined who attempts to leave the house in which they are isolated. It was understood by Dr. McKay that Dr. McLauchlin was to attend to all cases of the pest, while Dr. Marlatt would attend to other practice.

Cases have been reported to exist at Coyne's Corners and Rodney, but the rumors proved untrue. Mrs. Hamilton and two others of Fingal are down with the disease. So far the cases appear to be confined to Fingal and West Lorne.

The Board of Health for the Township of Dunwich met in Brown's Hall yesterday afternoon, all members being present. A. J. Leitch was appointed chairman. Messrs. Pool, Black Nelson, Dr. Leitch, Price, Drinkwater, the members of the board and others all took part in a discussion regarding the best means of preventing small-pox reaching the Township, all being of the opinion that precautions should at once be taken, and many valuable suggestions were brought forward. Space will not permit us to give a full report of these as we would like.

The medical health officer was ordered to ascertain the nature of the illness of Mrs. Hooley, on the 10th concession, who is said to be afflicted with small-pox.

The secretary was instructed to notify the public through the ENTERPRISE that all persons knowing of a case of small-pox or other contagious disease existing in their houses or in any part of the municipality must notify the chairman of the local board of health to that effect within twenty-four hours or suffer the penalty provided by statute.

A resolution was also passed ordering the secretary to notify all headmasters of schools throughout the township to prohibit all pupils from leaving the township until further notice, or if any have left to prohibit their returning until given permission by the medical health officer.

This action was taken pending further action of the board in regard to the closing of schools, which action will be taken if any case of small-pox is found to exist in the township. Messrs. J. W. McIntyre and D. McPherson were in favor of immediately ordering the closing of all schools for a few weeks; but the other members thought it advisable to wait a day or two.

The sanitary inspectors were instructed to be on the alert and promptly isolate or remove all persons coming from any place where the disease is known to exist or suspected of having coming into contract with any case of small-pox.

The board ordered the closing of all churches until further notice. This order will apply to literary societies, prayer meetings and any public meetings, including the Salvation Army.

Considerable discussion was had on the subject of compulsory vaccination, and it will probably be enforced in a few days.

The board adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

A red-cheeked, rusty-looking old gentleman bought a bag of shorts in a store in Bangor, Maine, not long ago, and the clerk refused to let him take them till he had paid. He afterwards found out that his customer was the venerable ex-Vice-President Hannibal Hamlin.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Councillor Donnelly, of Sarnia, has been unseated.

The Nova Scotia Legislature was opened Friday.

Campbellford has been made a customs port of entry.

Two poachers were fined $20 and costs at Simcoe Friday.

The exempted property in St. Thomas is valued at $700,000.

Gabriel Dumont is at Gretna, and will shortly visit Winnipeg.

Montreal millers are agitating for an increase in the duty on flour.

The Badger silver mines near Port Arthur are turning out very rich.

George Sleemin has erected a factory for the manufacture of ice at Guelph.

Hamilton foundrymen want to reduce wages of moulders but the men object.

Twenty-five ratepayers were fined at Brantford for not cleaning off their snow.

The residence of Peter Meek at Ingersoll was burned Friday with a loss of $5,000.

N. B. McConnel, of Carleton, was killed Friday by the bursting of a saw in his mill.

Serious charges have been preferred against License Inspector Stafford, of Lanark.

The Hamilton moulders will accept ten per cent. reduction on piece work, but not on day work.

The Stormont cotton mill at Cornwall shut down last week. There is a strike of weavers.

A Kingston man got drunk on Monday and tore up a roll of bank bills amounting to $365.

Dr. Bogart, ex-Mayor of Whitby, has been fined $50 and costs for violation of the Scott Act.

Two cubs and a large bear were a few days ago killed by James Mc. L. Wheeler in North Hastings.

In a row at Hamilton Monday night, two men were badly stabbed and cut in the head and face.

The Leamington & St. Clair railway, owned by James Ross, of Sherbroke, is about to change hands.

Jos. Harris, of Granby, has been arrested for abducting a fourteen-year-old girl, whom he married.

The flooring of a bridge at Cowansville, Que., gave way last week and a workman named Tipney was killed.

A warrant is out for the arrest of Edward Warren, of Woodstock, on a charge of rape on a four-year-old girl.

Methodist laymen in London are agitating for equal representation with the clergymen at the annual conference.

A thirteen-year-old Belleville girl has been caught defrauding merchants. She says her parents forced her to do so.

A Belmont farmer sold his farm and is said to have eloped with a disreputable woman, leaving his wife and family destitute.

Fred. Bleeker, a Belleville boot and shoe dealer, has sold his stock and departed, leaving his creditors in the lurch.

The infant daughter of W. B. Bourgoyne, of St. Catharines, ate some chloride of potash lozenges and died in a few hours.

Brakeman R. Davis caught his foot in a wing rail on the G. T. R. at Lindsay last week and was frightfully mangled by a train.

J. G. Spain, of Port Dover, has offered to stock and run a free museum at St. Thomas, provided the city furnishes the building.

Two Kingston men charged with trotting mules on the streets were discharged by the magistrate because the law refers only to horses.

The Manitoba Grand Orange Lodge passed a resolution condemning the two political parties in connection with the Jesuit Estates Bill.

The secretary of the Kingston Grocers' Guild complains that farmers sell stale eggs and decayed fruit concealed among fresh and sound products.

Murray, who was shot in the cheese factory row near Ingersoll, is still alive. The parties charged with the shooting have given themselves up.

Montreal officers are looking for a young man named Van Reynolds, who has disappeared after disposing of a consignment of jewelry shipped by a Toronto house.

In the township of West Zorra on Monday, a riotous demonstration took place over the possession of a cheese factory. A man named Murray was shot, it is feared fatally.

Thieves dragged James Wishart, a machinist, who lives on a lonely street near the hill at Hamilton, from his house on Saturday night, assaulted him cruelly and robbed the house.

A young man named Richard Holmes was employed at Brockville recently to secure a number of names to a petition for the repeal of the Scott Act. It has transpired that several of its signatures were forged, and the young man has fled.

The Commercial Hotel Burned.

About 11 o'clock Saturday night the Commercial Hotel was discovered to be on fire, and an alarm was quickly raised. Although the fire made but slow progress on account of the frame of the building being of hardwood, and green shingles on the roof, nothing could be done to save it, an account of the absence of any fire apparatus. Willing hands were soon at work, however, and nearly all of the furniture was carried out, though badly damaged by removal. Two woodpiles near the building were pitched out of the way in short order, and then everybody stood by and watched the building burn, being powerless to stop the progress of the flames. It was fully two hours after the fire started before the building was leveled to the ground. Luckily there was little or no wind at the time and the sparks were all extinguished before travelling very far, though burnt shingles were found next morning a mile from the scene of the fire. The surrounding buildings were not damaged by the heat to any extent. The building was owned and occupied by Wm. Eustice, and was valued at $2,000 and insured for $1,000, the furniture was insured for $500, which will cover the damage. Nearly all the rooms in the hotel were occupied by residents of the town, but not much of their property was destroyed. Mr. Eustice purchased the property two years ago, and had made many improvements on it since that time. He has not yet decided whether to rebuild or not. Several of those engaged in removing furniture from the burning building were cut by pieces of broken glass but fortunately none seriously. The fire originated from the tin ventilator through the ceiling above the bar becoming overheated and communicating with the flooring, then running along the joists from side to side, making it impossible to get at the flames.

Fire at Wallacetown.

The sawmill and hoop factory of Schleihauf Bros. at Wallacetown was burned to the ground on Tuesday night. The fire was first discovered about 10 o'clock, and before anything could be done to check the progress of the flames the whole interior of the mill was burning so rapidly that it was impossible to save anything. A new saw, valued at about $300, had just been placed in the mill, and steam had been raised in the morning to test the machinery, but the fire was allowed to go out before noon. Everything was seemingly all right when the men quit work at six o'clock. Mr. C. Schleihauf went through the premises some time after dark and felt satisfied that all was safe, and is at a loss to account for the cause of the fire. The destruction of the mill will prove a great loss not only to the proprietors, but also to the community, as there is an immense stock of logs in the yard. Loss, about $3,500; insurance, $1,800. It is the intention of the energetic proprietors to rebuild immediately.

Bold Robbery.

A Wallacetown correspondent sends us the following:—About 7 o'clock Sunday evening a man came into the yard of Mrs. Whyte, she having gone to church a few minutes before with a friend. The person, presuming that it was Mrs. Whyte's sister, Miss Macbeth, who went with her, started for the house. Miss Macbeth, however, was in the house, not having lighted the lamp. She, seeing the man going to the back door went through and opened it to see what the party wanted, but when she opened the door the man went around to the front of the house. He went down towards the road, and it is supposed, went to the house of Mrs. Bell, they all being in church, got in the side window and took eight dollars in cash, a gold chain, some clothing and the keys of A. D. Urlin's store. The house of John Hannigan was entered the same night and a suit of clothes stolen. No clue to the thief has yet been found but suspicion points strongly to a certain party.

The British Columbia Legislature has reaffirmed its resolution of last year in favor of the admission of machinery free of duty.

So long as it is the policy of the churches to sell their pews, just so long the stranger will not feel entirely welcome to the church.—Detroit Journal.

While chopping in the bush, Reuben Stinchcombe, a prominent farmer of London township, was caught by a falling tree and his back was broken and three ribs fractured.

Ross, Cameron & Robinette is the name of a new legal firm in Toronto, the members of which are Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, M. G. Cameron and T. C. Robinett, LL. B.

Peterboro' voted Friday to charge $300 for shop, $400 for tavern and $600 for saloon licenses. Scott Act supporters voted with the hotel-keepers to defeat the by-law.

Five hundred thousand feet more Elm logs wanted at the Dutton Stave Factory, as many as possible 13 feet long, to be measured and settled for the last week in March.—HUMPIDGE & GRAHAM. 2

Little Violet.

There is mischief in your eye, little Vi! little Vi
There is danger in your bearing, I am sure.
Though your looks be even saintly, yet language can but faintly
Tell the difference twixt your acts and looks demure;
For instance, there's the baby; you kiss him and —it may be
That you never thought to do that youngster any harm,
But oft his yells and flinching tell of surreptitious pinching,
And the impress of your fingers on his tender little arm.

And I think you often try, little Vi! little Vi!
To be a mother, in your own peculiar way,
To dirty little Mollie, that fractured one eyed dollie,
Whom dearest Annie sent you on your natal day;
Oh! how you whack and spank her, and then politely thank her,
As the humor takes betimes your little ladyship.
No wonder that, to Mary, the milkman said he'd "nary
Seed the hequal of 'er for a reg'lar little clip."

But I know of actions sly—little Vi! little Vi!
Towards the humble author of thy presence on this earth,
Who, in his peaceful study, oft ponders whether shou d he
Be stern or laughter loving in thy fascinating mirth.
How well does he remember that night in calm September,
When you saw your active parent spring high into the air,
And you knew such worldly rising, and the poet's agonizing,
Was the bent pin you had left within his study chair.

Yet, when thou wert like to die—little Vi! little Vi!
He knows the weight of grief that lay upon each heart,
And turned the coming morrow into utter woe and sorrow
For those who strove to stay the grim destroyer's dart.
And when death's bolt miscarried, and the angel's coming tarried,
What joy within our walls when thy plaintive little cry
Told us the God of gladness had pity on our sadness—
Had touched, in peace, thy garment, little Vi! little Vi!

—H. K. Cockin, in the Week.

ESTELLE'S INFATUATION:

A NOVEL.

"Some one will like to have you with or without your money," said Estelle, by way of consolation. She thought of the gardener's daughter, and of their own pretty, well-mannered parlor-maid.

"And I should have the same answer to give that you have just given to me," returned Caleb, with a quietness that was in itself a reproach. "A man's heart, Miss Clanricarde, can no more be played battledore and shuttlecock with than a woman's. It stays where it has once been given."

Estelle gave another shiver.

"Don't say that!" she exclaimed.

"Well, no, you are right, Miss Clanricarde; that was out of the way," he returned; "and it's not me, but you, as we have to think of, and I cannot see my way for you. What will your mother, Mrs. Clanricarde, say to it?" he asked. "She knew that I was proud to have her promise, and that I was not wanting in my part. What will she say when nothing comes of it?"

Estelle looked scared.

"She will be very angry," she said, realizing the scene that would have to follow on this consultation.

"With you, Miss Clanricarde?"

"Yes, with me."

"And how will that be for you?" he asked, anxiously.

"I shall be very sorry," answered the girl, still with that shadow of fear over her sweet face. "But what else can I do, Mr Stagg? There is Charlie to think of as well as my father and mother. And then there is my promise. How could I ever look at myself in the glass were I to perjure myself, as I should do if I were to marry any one else? I cannot do other than I have done. It would be too sinful and shameful if I did."

"But it hurts me to think of your being troubled—of your mother, Mrs. Clanricarde, being vexed with you," said Caleb, his honest heart in his eyes.

"I must bear it as patiently as I can," answered Estelle, "unless——"

She stopped short, then looked at Caleb with a strange, suggestive, half-beseeching appeal in her beautiful eyes and quivering lips, which he read, but did not understand. She wanted something of him. What was it? The prayer was patent—the words inaudible. How could he come by their sense?

"Unless what, Miss Clanricarde?" he asked. "Is it aught I can do for you? Oh, but I would, even to die for you!" he added, not with a burst of tenderness so much as a solemn kind of declaration—a proffer of service wherein sacrifice would be for healing.

"It is mean of me to ask it," said Estelle, hesitatingly. "But mother will be so angry with me, and to be angry with you will not matter. But it is so mean and cowardly of me," she repeated. "Only you are so good!"

"If I can serve you I will. I can say no more, Miss Clanricarde," said Caleb, his lips, too, twitching nervously. She called him good! she whose favor he would have given his life to gain! What, indeed, would he not do to deserve her praise! She could not love him, but he could serve her. He could not rescue her from poverty by the devotion of his whole life, but she said that he could be of use to her. Would he not, then? Ay, gladly, even to the sacrifice of his life, if need be!

"You can, indeed, help me with my mother," said Estelle, a deep blush on her face—a blush of shame for her own cowardice and selfishness. "Tell her that it is you who will not marry me, not I who will not marry you. That I am willing, but that you of your own free-will will not."

Something passed through Caleb as if he had been struck about the heart. For a moment thought and life and clear perception of things, and even feeling, seemed to fail him, and he was conscious of only a sharp pain and a choking at his throat, so that he could not speak, and could scarcely breathe. This, then, was to be his crowning martyrdom. Of his own free will he was to renounce her—this exquisite treasure of loveliness, whom a king might well give his crown to gain. Ah, it was hard!

"You will, will you not, Mr. Stagg?" said Estelle's soft voice, pleading, enticing.

Still Caleb could not speak. His heart was too big, his throat too constricted, his anguish too great.

"It will be the greatest kindness you can do me," he heard her say. "Take it on yourself. Tell my mother you will not marry me, though I said I would marry you. I do not know what will become of me if you do not. Perhaps she will turn me out of the house and curse me. She said she would before I came out to you. I dare not tell her. But it will all come right if you give me up of your own accord, because I love Charlie. Do this, Mr. Stagg. I shall be so grateful to you, and so will Charlie," she added, with a girl's unconsciousness of cruelty to the man who loves her and whom she does not love—the woman's fidelity to the man she does love.

On that Caleb found his voice.

"Never mind him," he said, hurriedly. "I will do for you what will be a shame to me as a man; but I'll do it for you," he repeated huskily.

"How good you are!" said Estelle, beginning to realize the full meaning of the moment. "I can never thank you enough, nor repay you."

"If thou'rt happy, my bonny lass, that'll be my meed," said Caleb, with infinite tenderness, lapsing into his old forms of speech and accent, the intensity of his feelings causing him to forget his late manners. "If I can spare thee pain, what matters what such as I suffer? Thou shalt walk over the body of me if thou'st a mind."

He raised his hand—hers still lying on it—till his lips just touched the long white fingers athwart his. With the trembling reverence of a worshipper at a shrine, with the holy tenderness of a mother with her first-born, he just touched, he did not kiss, those precious fingers, white and fragrant as the petals of a lily.

"God bless thee!" he then said, with a sob that was as the sob of death—that was in very truth the sob of death for him—"God bless thee, my queenly lass, and may the Lord abide with thee always, to thy joy and gladness for ever and ever!"

Don't, Mr. Stagg," said Estelle, beginning to weep.

He was no longer the distasteful omad'haun fit only for the laughter of the well-conditioned—the ungainly Beast whom no maiden born of woman could love. He was the hunchback whose wings had unfolded, the prince whose gross disguise was rent and cast away. She could not love him nor marry him, but she could respect and pity him—and she did.

"Now let us go, Miss Clanricarde," said Caleb, with the same kind of sad firmness he had shown at the first. "We know what we have to do, both one and t'other, and I think we understand each other. But, oh!" he added, with one last return to the old loving, yearning spirit, "whenever you think of them as loved you best, remember poor Caleb Stagg, the miner lad, who broke his heart to save yours a pang. Ay, my bonny queen, who would have died for you if so be as you would have lived. And greater love hath no man than that he should give his life for a friend. Now let us get this job over. I shall sleep lighter if I know that I have done your bidding and pleasured you, no matter how."

CHAPTER XII.

THE POWER OF LOVE.

Mrs. Clanricarde was ill in bed. That was but natural. Breakfast in bed and a bad headache when things go cross are to a woman what a sulky dinner at his club and a bottle of that claret with the yellow seal is to a man. And to weep unavailing tears with one's head buried in a pillow and one's mind possessed by spiteful thoughts is perhaps a better way, on the whole, of overcoming a trouble than to blot it out with wine stains, which obliterate everything save the memory of color, savor and fragrance.

Last night's scene with Caleb Stagg, or rather the disappointment and despair included in it, had temporarily disabled Estelle's mother.

Mrs. Clanricarde thought herself justified in her displeasure that Estelle had not conquered her rebellious heart, and thrown that intruding love once for all into space and the limbo of the past. It was her duty so to do, she argued; and a mother does well to be angry with a daughter who fails in her duty—loves where she ought not, and refuses money when she has the offer.

By all of which it came about that Estelle had a morning of full liberty, with Charlie Osborne waiting on chance in the wood hard by.

What is that we love in each other? Who can tell? It is not only beauty. "There is no such thing as that we beauty call, but fancy makes all as it lists," and to many unbeautiful creatures is given the most entire and heart-whole devotion. Nor is it necessarily youth; the old thank God for that when dear eyes shine with the light of love on their faded faces, and those who, had time ruled their ages straight, would have clasped them in their arms as lovers now lie on their hearts as children. Nor is it even intellect, else would those stupid amiabilities, of which we know so many, go wearily through life wanting that of which they have so great abundance now. Nor yet again is it goodness; for many whose souls stand shivering and naked, without so much as a rag of virtue to cover them—many cruel, vain, selfish, false—receive such passionate incense of love-worship so that no temple of the gods is more fragrant than theirs, and no car of Juggernaut drives over more faithful hearts than those which break at the feet of these smiling demons. We love because we love; and our love is no less strong because its genesis is obscured, and we cannot trace the flood to its source. All we know is the fact of that flood, on the margin of which bloom roses and forget-me-nots, or hemlock and the deadly nightshade.

Tried by certain tests, there was no question of comparative merit between Charlie Osborne and Caleb Stagg. Tried by others, the scale gave another measurement. In person, bearing, charm of manner, delightfulness of acquirements, flexibility of intellect, the penniless young artist, the unemployed Eudemon, stood supreme. For the mere human creature that he was, Venus might have taken him to replace Adonis—and she would not have found him so reluctant; and Libussa might have well exchanged her sceptre for his love. Had he and Hylas bathed together, the water-nymphs who drown men for their beauty would have chosen him as the fairest; and no Norseman would have mourned Baldur dead while Charlie Osborne had been alive. Everything was in harmony.

Like a bird running to her nest, Estelle stole quickly up the lane and into the leafy temple, where she knew she should find her shrine already tenanted. And, sure enough, there was Charlie, diligently sketching the forms and leafage of the trees, as a kind of excuse to himself, as well as to others who might see him sitting there in that holy place, waiting on chance and Estelle Clanricarde. When he saw her turn that corner and come swiftly up the narrow path, his heart leaped within him, and he sprang forward to meet her with a young lover's fervor and delight.

"This is a joy!" he said, ecstatically, holding her hands in his, and looking into her face with those insatiable eyes which no amount of looking satisfies. "My dearest! my darling! how dear of you to come! How have you been able to get away so early?"

"Mother has a headache, and is in bed; so I thought I would not be missed, and that we should be safe," said Estelle, laughing for very happiness. She did not realize her mother's headache. She thought only of being with Charlie.

"That is jolly," said Charlie, realizing the occasion no more than Estelle. "But, my stars! what has happened?" he asked, suddenly. "You have something to tell me; I can see you have."

"Yes, indeed, I have something very great to tell you," answered Estelle; "but not just at this moment, Charlie. Let us forget everything but each other for just a minute. Tell me of yourself—how you are; what you have been doing; where you have been; whom you have seen; everything that has happened to you since the day before yesterday—and then I will tell you my news."

But Charlie had no great events to tell. He had seen Lady Elizabeth, and finished the sketch of the water-mill in the lane leading down to Hindfleet; and he had not slept very well last night; and he had not eaten much breakfast to-day; and he had had a pain in his side and in his right temple; and now he was quite well and as jolly as a sand-boy, seeing that she was here. To which catalogue of insignificant ailments, magnified by love into dangerous symptoms, Estelle listened with a face that seemed really sad enough threatened death, while her eyes grew brighter and larger and more tender than ever with the tears that lay benind them and crept slowly within the lids.

"Poor darling!" she said, "you want some one to take care of you."

"Yes—you," said Charlie. "I shall never be quite well till I have you as my sweet little wife. That is the only thing I am living for, Estelle. I believe I should die if I lost you."

"You shall not do that," she answered. "Do not be afraid, Charlie. I am yours now and forever, in life and to death. No one and nothing could part us!"

"Not even Mr. Caleb Stagg?" asked Charlie, with a fine disdain, that, as things were, looked almost like divination.

"No; that is all at an end," she said, simply. "That is what I have to tell you, darling. We have had such a scene at home! Such a dreadful time! Mother made that poor fellow propose to me! Just fancy! And I had to refuse him. That is why she has a headache to-day. Poor mother!"

"Why do you call him poor fellow, Estelle?" said Charlie, suddenly stiffened and chilled into a very human icicle.

"Because he behaved so well," said Estelle. "He was so generous and kind, and did all I wanted him to do so nicely, and bore mother's anger so bravely for my sake. He did behave well, Charlie!"

"Don't, Estelle!" cried Charlie, rising in wrathful agitation. "I cannot bear this. By heavens! I will go and insult the fellow. That he should presume—that he should have the insolence to lift his eyes to your face! He deserves a horse-whipping, and I have the best mind in the world to give him one."

"Charlie dear—" began Estelle.

"Don't!" he said, again interrupting her; "if you say a word in his favor you will send me mad!"

"Charlie dear!" she remonstrated again. "Do you think it very pleasant for a man to hear the girl he loves praise and defend another fellow who has had the insolence to make love to her?" cried the angry upholder of love's exclusive privilegs. "I tell you, Estelle, he deserves horsewhipping, and for the turn of a hair I will give him one!"

"Well, I will not say anything if it vexes you," said Estelle, meekly. "You see, I was bound to tell you the truth, dear, else I would not have spoken of it at all."

"And you would have kept secrets from me?" he said, in an aggrieved voice.

"No. It is because I could not do this that I told you," was her patient answer.

"The scoundrel! How dare he!" fumed Charlie.

She did not speak. She only slid her hand within his arm, and gave it a little squeeze with her fingers.

"Now you are sulky," said Charlie, with the injustice of his kind.

"Indeed, darling, I am not," she answered, her sweet eyes full of love and tears.

"What a brute I am?" cried her handsome tyrant, suddenly penitent and submissive. "Now I have made you cry. What a vile temper I must have! I am not worthy of your love, Estelle."

"You are worthy of ten times more, if I could possibly feel it. But I cannot," said Estelle.

On which he kissed her, and the little skirmish ended in the way in which their little skirmishes—which, by-the-way, were all on his side—always did end.

Then, having come to his rational and natural senses again, Charlie condescended to note particulars of the affair; and when Estelle had told him all, even he was constrained to admit that the omad'haun had behaved like a gentleman and a man of honor, and that he was not half a bad fellow after all; and really he, Mr. Osborne, might almost forgive him this involuntary trespass on his own property, so handsomely repented of and atoned for.

Meanwhile a princely patron was in course of moulding for Charlie Osborne's benefit; and Anthony Harford was steaming across the Atlantic in the Greyhound. The gods were creeping on with their feet of wood, and in a short time would be up with those on whom they were minded to lay their hands of iron. Old Herrick's advice was never more timely than now, and to gather rose-buds while they might was the young lover's highest wisdom.

CHAPTER XIII.

ANTICIPATIONS.

In the lane down the hill, where the worn old water-mill was the picturesque point much affected by artists, lived the Asplines, at their pretty place called Hindfleet.

Mrs. Aspline's story was not unique, nor yet was it disgraceful. A buxom cook to a rich old bachelor, she had filled with credit all the offices connected with the tradesmen's books and the kitchen range. Her master married her, as her spotless discretion demanded and deserved, and dying when their little daughter was but 5 years old, left her as buxom a widow as she had been a cook and a wife, and the assured possessor for her life of his handsome fortune. At her death it passed on to Anne, who was thus an heiress worth any man's looking after.

Besides being a woman of means, Mrs. Aspline was also a woman of strong good sense and of more than average ability.

Being rubicund and stout, she dressed in the austere dignity of black, which somewhat concealed the exuberance of her lines and toned down the warmth of her carnations. She never committed the mistake of wearing color, not even in her cap or bonnets, nor in the warmest months of summer allowed herself the betraying "liquefaction" or vapory expansion of flimsiness in material. She had the softest velvets, the richest satins, the thickest silks, to be had for love or money; and she broke up the dead surfaces with lavish powderings of jet, which still further concealed her outlines, and made her inches yet more delusive. As hospitable as an Arab whose gourd hangs on the outside of his tent, no mouth came to her amiss; and from wayside beggars to Lord Eustace himself no meal was withheld from those who cared to take their share. Thus, thanks to her tact, good sense, discernment of social motives, and strict observance of certain unwritten laws touching the implied subserviency of relative inferiority, Mrs. Aspline, of Hindfleet, had conquered a position in Kingshouse which else might have held out against her to the end; and some of the people of the place made it a point of Christian charity to forget the cook they had never known, and to recognize only the widow of a gentleman—the possessor of a handsome fortune, and the mother of a desirable heiress.

Others, however, did not; notably Mrs. Clanricarde, who had a daughter to marry, and no son for whom to find a wife. Had the sex of her child been reversed, her action would have been reversed too. As things were, Anne Aspline was in her way, not on her side; and the spit was held up as an unconquerable barrier between their houses. The miner's pick did not count.

For herself, Anne was pretty enough to have floated safely on the social wave had there been no such shining sails of gold to carry her forward. She was a fair-haired, gentle-mannered girl, who bore no salient marks of her maternal ancestry, save that she had square-topped fingers, with broad, flat, opaque white nails, and that her ears stood out from her head like jug-handles. They were not large, nor fleshy, nor badly shaped, but they were distressingly prominent, and seen from behind made her pretty small head more animal than human. Save these two sign-manuals, stamped by nature on the living parchment, she had a clear pedigree enough, and her inheritance contained more than the mere money which had to come to her on her mother's death. In temperament she was languid, in constitution anæmic. She had an unappeasable appetite for day-dreaming, and she was great in the art of doing nothing. Indolent and unpractical, she never did a hand's turn for herself that she could get any one else to do for her, and she quite understood the Eastern's contempt for unnecessary physical exertion. She never worked and rarely played, though she had been taught embroidery by a mistress and the piano by a master. By which it may be seen that, nice dear girl as she was, our Anne was decidedly a goose, and entirely wanting in that kind of commonsense grip of which her mother had so much, and of which she made such good use.

Mr. Aspline had had full belief in his wife's integrity and prudence. All the same she was only a woman, and whether you say, with the gallant Francis, "Souvent femme varie, bien fol qui s'y fie," or, in the dalesman's vernacular, "Women are kittle cattle to shoe ahint," it comes to much the same thing. Hence, although he had left the interest of all he possessed to his widow for her life, he had strictly entailed it on his daughter and her children; so that the one should not be able to enrich a second husband beyond her own natural term, and if the other grew up plain or weak-minded it would not be to the advantage of any scoundrel to marry her for her money one week and poison her for full possession the next. If she did not marry and bear children the money was disposed of in other ways; and to neither women was left the power of making a will—not even of her savings. For trustees he had left two old friends of his—one a Major Campbell, and the other Jack Harford, of Thrift. Major Campbell had renounced the trust from the beginning, and just now Jack Harford had died; but his son Anthony, who had been travelling in America—who had, indeed, been living in America for some years—was on his way home to take up his father's affairs, and among other things to see about the trusteeship to the Asplines, whom he had known when a lad, and remembered with pleasure now as a man. "Cookey," as the irreverent young scamp used to call Mrs. Aspline, had always been kind and generous and good to him and his; and little Anne had been the prettiest and softest and whitest sort of plaything possible—as much like a powder-puff or a poodle puppy as a little girl in white frocks and multitudinous frills—good to toss up into the air and catch as she came down, or to carry on his shoulder, while she clutched his short curled hair and screamed with delight when he kicked like a donkey or pranced like a horse. Perhaps she had been too much of a cry-baby for a vigorous young scamp thirteen years her senior to be always quite patient with; but, on the whole, he had managed pretty well, and had been able to curb his natural ferocity to a quite commendable extent when the wee waterspout cried for a mere nothing and squeaked for less than nothing. So that, mingled with regrets for the father whom he had not seen for so many years, and regrets for the friends and intimates he was leaving behind, were pleasanter speculations as to how he should find his old friends "Cookey" and pretty wee Anne—now, of course, grown up and come to the stateliness of Miss Asplinshood.

They on their side speculated on the change time must have worked on him, and came to the conclusion that, having been so long in America, he must needs be a perfect barbarian by now—and what a pity it was that an English gentleman should so spoil and lower himself!

"I hope he will not think it necessary to come here," said Mrs. Aspline, looking round her pretty drawing-room with its ship-load of furniture and ornaments. "I would so much rather transact all my business with him by letter or at the lawyer's; for of course he will have that horrid habit of chewing tobacco and spitting all over the place, and that will be too disgusting, you know."

"Detestable!" said Anne.

"I wonder if he has been living much with the Indians?" then said Mrs. Aspline. "Perhaps he is married to a squaw in beads and a blanket. One never knows what these wild young men are up to when they are once out of one's sight."

"No," said Anne, visions of Lara and the Corsair making a hotch-potch of ideas with Prince Florizel and the Reverend John Creedy. "It is dreadful to think of," she added, with a little shudder.

"And if he brings his wife home with him, and she carries her babies in a basket at her back, how very painful it will all be!" continued Mrs. Aspline, who was fond of reading books of travel.

"I wonder Mr. Harford let him stay away so long," said Anne, who was the freest if the most indolent she alive. "If the first Mrs. Harford had lived, it would have been different. She would have brought him home long ago," she added.

"Yes," said Mrs. Aspline; "a mother has more power in a family than any father can have. Better lose a dozen fathers than one mother; for even the best men are but poor creatures in a house compared to women."

"She spoke with that curious conviction of superiority by the grace of sex characteristic of the women of to-day. She had been made by her husband, but she believed that she had been the sole architect of her fortunes, while her master and his thousands had been but the hodman with his bricks.

(To be Continued).

A Woman's Warm Heart.

In a cabin on a sunny hillside overlooking the Bay of Dublin was a helpless cripple, entirely dependent upon his sister's exertions, and on her death a car was sent from the poorhouse to bring him thither for shelter. The poor wretch clung to the only home he had ever known, and utterly refused to leave it, crying that he would die if deprived of his "say air and shut up in prison wall." His loud lamentations had brought the priest and some of the neighbors by his side, and one of the latter, Maggie O'Flynn, felt a deep impulse of pity toward the unfortunate man. She was a single woman of about 55, of weather beaten and certainly not attractive appearance. She acted as head on the estate of a gentleman close by, to whom her services were invaluable. "Hould hard," she said to the workhouse officials; "it's not Maggie O'Flynn that 'uil see a poor craythur taken to the poorhouse when she can give him a shelter. It's a corner and a welcome in me own cabin Mick Castillo shall have." But here his reverence interposed and vowed he would allow no such scandal in the parish as an unmarried man and woman sharing the same dwelling, cripples or no cripples. "Shure, Maggie, you won't go back on your word?" implored poor Mick. Maggie hesitated a moment, then turning to the priest said: "If there's no other way to save him from 'the house,' your reverence, I'll marry him, an' sorra a haporth will any one be able to say agin it thin." It was in vain his reverence pointed out the terrible burden Maggie was taking upon herself. "It's for the love of God I'm marryin' him an' not to plase meself," was the answer she returned; "an' sure the blessed Virgin will niver let me want for the bite an' the sup when she sees me sharin' it with the craythur that has naythur." The marriage took place, and until his death, several years later, the kind-hearted Maggie O'Flynn carefully tended and supported the poor helpless cripple in her own cabin.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

Odd Transatlantic Notes.

A Milan newspaper, the Secolo, is publishing the Bible in 210 half-penny parts of eight pages each and 900 wood cuts.

In Rome there are 30 cardinals, 35 bishops, 1,469 priests, 2,215 nuns and 3,000 monks, friars, candidates, etc.

The Bank of England is the most extensive banking institution in the world. It employs over 1,000 clerks, and its buildings cover more than eight acres.

The French Minister of Education has offered a gold medal for the best French scholar to be found in English schools. His offer is intended to encourage the study of French.

A banker in Lille, France had the misfortune to wet eighteen bills of the Bank of France, and in order to dry them he placed them on a board at an open window where the sun shone upon them. They dried more rapidly than was anticipated. A gust of wind carried them into the street, where, unfortunately, a goat picking up odds and ends at once captured the bank bills and swallowed them. The goat was purchased and the bills secured in a very dilapidated condition, but the Bank of France recognized its obligations and redeemed them.

Living on a Penny a Day.

The Englishman, Dr. T. R. Allinson, has been trying the experiment of living on meal and water for a month. His daily allowance is one pound of whole meal made into a cake, with distilled water, and one quart of water. His account of his condition after a week is cheering. In the first days he felt hungry, but about the fourth day this disappeared, and he had no longer any craving for other food. His brain was clear, his lung capacity had increased five inches, and both his sight and his hearing had improved. He had lost seven pounds weight, but seemed to regard this as rather an advantage. Altogether he feels thoroughly satisfied with his experiment. It is a very economical one, the wheat for seven days having cost only eight pence. "This," he says, "is living on almost one penny a day and enjoying it."

He Chewed.

"I never smoke," said a theological student to his best girl, 'but atchoo!"

It was only a sneeze, but the maiden said she would never marry a man who chewed.

TAKING THE OATH.

Various Ways of Swearing in Various Parts of the World.

HOW PRESENT PRACTICES WERE STARTED.

The primary idea of taking an oath is that we call upon the Deity to bear witness to the sincerity or truth of what we assert, and so, as it were, register our oath in heaven. When Abraham, for example, raised his hands to heaven while swearing an oath to the King of Sodom, he pointed to the supposed residence of the Creator. Afterward, when men set up inferior deities of their own, they appealed to the material images or symbols that represented them, whenever an oath was administered. The most usual form of swearing among the ancients was, however, by touching the altar of the gods. Other rites, such as libations, the burning of incense and sacrifices accompanied the touching of the altar. Demosthenes swore by the souls of those who fell at Marathon. Anciently, too, mariners swore by their ships, fishermen by their nets, soldiers by their spears, and kings by their sceptres. The ancient Persians swore by the sun, which was the common object of their adoration, while the Scythians pledged themselves by the air they breathed and by their scimitars. Descending to more modern times, the Saxons pledged themselves to support their homes and privileges by their arms; and the punishment for perjury or non-fulfilment of an oath was the loss of the hand that had held the weapon at the compact. The Spartans were wont to assemble around a brazier of fire, and, pointing their short swords to the sky, call upon the gods to bear witness to the compact. Swearing by the sword, in fact, retained its significance down to comparatively modern times, though in a slightly modified form. Thus, while the pagans extended the point of the weapon toward the supposed residence of the gods, the warriors of Christianity, after kissing it, directed the hilt—the true emblem of their faith—to heaven. A later form of oath was the pressing of the thumb upon the blade. Gradually, however, the practice became obsolete; and the kissing of the hilt, accompanying the words "By this good sword!" was handed down almost to the time when the wearing of a sword by gentlemen was abolished, as one of the strictest codes of civil honor. During the Grecian dynasty, whenever an Athenian householder made an oath, he caused his children to stand before him, and, laying his hand upon their heads, prayed that a curse might fall upon them if he swore falsely. If he had no children he pronounced destruction upon himself and his whole race, while he touched the altar of the gods or the victims upon it. Going back to Biblical times we find this curious rite in connection with the lives of Abraham and Jacob. The former says to his servant Eliezer: "Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and I will make thee swear by the Lord, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell. But thou shalt go unto my country and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac." The like ceremony is performed by Joseph when Jacob makes him promise to carry him out of Egypt and bury him in the tomb of his forefathers. The explanation of this is, that placing the hand upon the thigh was equivalent to swearing by the Messiah, who was to spring from the loins of Abraham. Afterward the Jews confirmed their oaths by touching the book of law, or their phylacteries, upon which extracts of the law are inscribed. The Mohammedans laid their hands upon the Koran. When, therefore, Christians kiss the Bible or lay their hands upon the tomb of a martyr, or any other sacred relic, the source whence the practice has been derived is at once recognized; yet it must be admitted that kissing the book is a distinctly Christian institution, founded upon the kiss upon the sword hilt by the Crusaders. —London Standard.

Discovery of Children.

In a school district in London there were many parents who reported no children in their families. In order to find just how many children were thus being kept from school, the school authorities got two monkeys, dressed them gayly, put them in a wagon in which was a brass band, and started through the district. At once crowds of children appeared and followed the wagon, which drove to a neighboring park, when the school officers went among the children distributing candies and getting their names and addresses. They thus found that over sixty parents kept their children from school; and as a result of the monkeys, the brass band and the candy about 200 little boys and girls have been set at study.

She Had Done Her Best.

A woman in the waiting-room of the Third street depot the other day had a great deal of trouble with one of her two children—a boy of seven or eight—and a man who sat near her stood it as long as possible, and then observed:

"Madam, that boy of yours needs the strong hand of a father."

"Yes, I know it," she replied, "but he can't have it. His father died when he was six years of age, and I've done my best to get another man and failed. He can't have what I can't get."—Detroit Free Press.

Effect of the Weather.

Plumber's Wife—"I should like to countermand the order for those five-karat earrings, if it is not too late."

Jeweller—"Certainly, madam. Something finer, I suppose."

Plumber's Wife—'Well, hardly. My husband thinks that this winter has been a little too warm for diamonds. I'll take a pair of these plated cuff buttons."—Jeweller's Weekly.

Hereditary Rascality.

"What business is young Peterson engaged in?"

"He is with his father in the sugar refining business."

"Ah, yes, I suppose it's sanded down from father to son."

There are over seventy applicants for the vacant bridge tendership at Lock No. 1, Port Dalhousie.

THE LADIES' COLUMN.

Fashionable Dresses That May be Worn on Easter Sunday.

SOME USEFUL RECIPES FOR ALL.

Taste in Personal Decoration, and How it Should be Cultivated.

(Cousin Kate's Weekly Budget.)

"Would ye know what's to be the thing for the springtime—what my fine lady will wear on Easter Sunday?" writes a New York lady correspondent. "Listen then. It will be a fine wool costume, in a faded tone of color, woven with a mottled effect, like Scotch mixed wool. It will have a woven border, consisting of graduated bands of a darker shade, which will encircle the petticoat. The draperies will be made up without seams, in sash effects, for the goods are forty-six inches wide; and the border follows all one side of it. On some pieces a diminutive border is woven along the outer edge for sleeve and waist trimmings. Should this not be fine enough for madame, there is a novelty much more costly. The same kind of wool material, yet even finer and softer, with a conventional pattern border embroidered in black embroidery silk, a la Chinnoise, for the embroidery is alike on both sides. In all these colors does it come—black on old rose, black on serpent green, black on electric blue, black on copper, black on red, etc. By the way, speaking of reds, it is evident there are expectations that "the ladies" will fall down before the new reds, the flashy, dashy, striking reds! France was one blaze of bright color last year. It is our turn next. Perhaps the most effective thing in red was a fine wool, woven in stripes three inches wide, divided by a hair line of black, white or blue. These would look smart enough up among the mountains or on the deck of a yacht. Let us hope the salesmen will keep them in nice, smooth, even folds until wanted for such purposes. But what did they have for tailor-made suits? Soft wool, even checks, of white and faded tones of color; big gay Scotch plaids; fine smooth Henrietta cloths. Oh! Those Henrietta cloths in such soft pleasing colors were there. Those all wool are to be preferred to the silk warp for they do not grow stringy nor shiny as quickly."

Low-Crowned Hats and Chignons.

The new Paris hats are to have crowns so low as to be hardly perceptible from the front view. It is thought also that since the bustle has disappeared from the body the chignon of some years ago will again fasten itself to the head. Already great rolls of hair are to be seen at the back.

Lord Salisbury's Third Son's Marriage.

The bridesmaids at the wedding of Lord Salisbury's third son were dressed in white Irish poplin, having vests, collars and cuffs of red velvet, with full undervests of mousseline de soie.

A Matrimonial Pointer.

An exchange volunteers the information that if white clothing, say a dress, is put away in a drawer or closet it will become yellow, but if placed in a box lined with blue paper or wrapped in a dark blue cloth it will come out as white as ever, no matter how long it lies.

Did She Want to Trade?

This advertisement lately appeared in a London paper: "A young married lady, who dresses well and often tires of her things when quite new and fresh, would like to hear from a lady who takes the same measurements; height, five feet seven inches, bust 36 inches, waist 24 inches; court dressmaker."

Keep Warm.

Rose Terry Cooke says: "If you want to be happy keep warm. Women are eaten up with neuralgia, say the doctors. No wonder. They sit all the morning by a hot register, and then tie the five or six-inch strip of bonnet over their back hair, a bit of lace film over their bangs, put on kid boots, with silk or thread stockings underneath, and dawdle along the pave with bitter winds of winter smiting their temples, their delicate ears, their throats and the bases of what should be their brain. Their outward nerves shrink and quiver under this barbarous exposure. But no matter; their cheats are well covered with fur cloaks and sacques, but cold feet, the numb ears, the reddened temples, the exposed neck will have their own story to tell. Then you won't wear flannel next the skin. Why? Because your waists will look too large, and it is the style to be as near in shapeliness to that delightful and lovely insect, the wasp, as humanity can be forced. Do you really like to ache and groan and to be laid aside every few days with agonizing headaches or panting, laboring hearts? Strange, if true!"

Fixings.

"When are you the happiest?" I asked a pretty young girl I know.

"When I can go to a big ball and be the best-dressed girl there," she replied promptly.

"But how about partners?" I suggested.

"Oh, they do not bother me. I always have enough, but it's the fixings for my ball dress that trouble me. You see, it does not cost very much for a dress, but all the fixings to it are what cost."

"Fixings," I was told, meant a pretty pair of slippers, silken stockings, long Suede gloves, a big fan and a ribbon to fasten it, an embroidered handkerchief, lace for the neck and sleeves, and flowers and hairpins. All these trifles cost money, and they must all be of the nicest, or even the effect of the most costly toilet would be spoiled.

Taste in Dress.

Dress an average woman in close-fitting serge or quiet neutral-tinted tweed; give her a spotless linen collar and cuffs to match; take away chains and gewgaws, and say if she ever looked better unless it was in a pink cotton cambric on a summer's morning with a rose at her throat instead of a brooch. Well-built women will do well to remember this when they seek to cover themselves with ribbons, braids and gimps, that serve only to fritter away the figure and are absolute death to the clear, fine outlines that should be followed with the greatest exactitude. After simplicity—a costly simplicity, if you will, or rather as a consequence of it—comes freshness, that most desirable quality which to a woman's dress is much the same as a fair, healthy skin to her face. To be simple, then, to be fresh at every point, are two long steps gained toward being well dressed. The third is a little longer and harder to take; it is to dress suitably, not only to your station and age, but to your house. Take your complexion first. If you are fair, with blue eyes, ha you can wear every shade of blue from azure down to viol but if you have green, grey or brown eyes you will only create a discordancy if you suffer a morsel of blue near you. On the other hand, a perfectly fair, green-eyed woman adds weirdness and charm to her fairness when she arrays herself in all the paler shades of green. For brunettes scarlet and amber, white and orange, though if there be the smallest tint of amber in the skin, orange may only be ventured on at night. Some women who might come under the heading of blondes stand vivid yellows and oranges well, but they must have some color and a skin transparently fair. But up to the age of 40, and sometimes beyond it, the typical healthy, fresh-looking woman is at her best in white, and at her very worst in black.

Recipes.

Griddled Oysters.—Wash quart of oysters and dry them by spreading on a towel. Have the griddle hot and put a bit of butter on it. Put the oysters on till the griddle is full. Turn each oyster over as it browns and serve hot on buttered toast.

Boiled or Steamed Pudding.—One cupful of beef suet chopped fine, or one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of molasses, two cupfuls of sweet milk, some baking powder in the flour; make it just a little thicker than pound cake; one cupful of raisins, one cupful of currants or one cupful of blackberry jam, one teaspoonful of allspice, cloves, cinnamon, one nutmeg; tie in a cloth and boil two or three hours, or put in a pan and steam three hours.

Vinegar improves by keeping, therefore it is best to lay in a large supply.

Tea, coffee or cocoa are three admissible drinks, but not in excess. For the voice the American Druggist recommends cocoa as the best. A cup of thin cocoa, just warm, is more to be recommended between the exertions of singing than any alcoholic beverage. Tea must not be taken too strong, nor when it has been drawn too long, for it then becomes acid and has a bad influence upon the mucous membranes of the throat. There is always a sensation of dryness after taking a cup of tea that has been allowed to draw too long.

To arrest hiccough Dresch directs that both ears be closed with the fingers, with pressure, while a few swallows of liquid are taken.

Chocolate Merimgue Pudding.—Boil one pint of rich milk, add half a teacupful of butter, one teacupful of sugar and three ounces of grated chocolate; let it boil, and when cool add the whites of four eggs; pour this in a pudding dish lined with slices of sponge cake and bake; cover with meringue and let it brown. Eat with lemon sauce.

Berkshire Cookies.—One cupful of molasses, a teaspoonful of soda; dissolve in a half cupful of cold water, a dessertspoonful of salt; a tablespoonful of melted butter, one dessertspoonful of ginger, flour enough to roll out to the thickness of an inch. Bake in a quick oven for about ten minutes.

For and About Women.

Dr. Mary Walker has settled down to hard work. She is now the telegraph editor of a Washington newspaper.

Gray hair for women is becoming such a rage in Paris that locks which until lately would have been dyed a golden brown are now bleached white.

Mrs. Kendal, the actress, has invented an "omnibus" fan. Packed away here and there in its small compass are a pair of scissors, a glove-buttoner, a little mirror, hair-pins and quite a number of accessories to the toilet.

Says Ouida: "The uneasiness of women to imitate men, politically, personally and socially, is a distressing note of modern civilization. It is artistically a mistake; it is probably also one morally. . . To those who are still of opinion that the finest flower of womanhood is a sensitive plant best cultured in shade and silence this indication will not be welcome."

A walking costume is of myrtle green Amazon cloth, trimmed with moleskin. The skirt is plain and edged with the moleskin. It is covered by a drapery nearly forming a second skirt, caught up slightly here and there with a box pleat at the back. It is also edged with the moleskin. The bodice, in the soldat Francais style, is double breasted, with one row of Norwegian buttons down the left side; moleskin collar and cuffs and a band of moleskin down the centre.

One of the fashions of the year, which has reached a craze both here and abroad, is passementerie. From plain cords simply tied in large knots like a friar's girdle, to elaborate placques as intricately wrought as the richest laces, all sorts and kinds are represented, Greek, Roman, geometric, fanciful, floral and classical patterns being brought out in most wonderful and attractive combinations. Passementerie appears upon nearly every portion of dress, even at the throat as brooch or pendant, at the waist as buckle or belt, and on the fancy shoe, imitating a clasp.

Style in the Antipodes.

A writer in the London Standard says I see it noticed that a judge of the Supreme Court in Australia goes circuit on a bicycle. In Australia there is a pleasing informality on the part of eminent functionaries, the occupants of the Government bench sitting in Parliament sometimes in their shirt sleeves. A Queensland bishop has been seen carrying his trunk down from an hotel to the steamer, he taking one handle and a black porter, very imperfectly clad, taking the other.

An Obliging Defaulter.

We are reaching a very high state of civilization. The defaulting cashier doesn't even take the trouble to run away now. Cashier Gookin, we are told, visits the office of the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company every day to help them find out how much he really did take.—New York Herald.

Evolution of the Sermon.

Modern Yankee Minister's Wife—"You look worried, dear. Can't you find subjects that will interest the congregation?"

Modern Minister (gloomily)—"It's easy enough to find subjects that will interest the congregation, the trouble is to find subjects that will interest the newspapers."

A GIANT'S BURIAL.

Funeral of the Late Colonel Goschen, Professional Anak.

The funeral of Col. Ruth Goshen, Barnum's biggest giant, who died last Tuesday on his farm near Clyde Station, N.J., took place yesterday morning. There was talk of a big display, but Rev. James LeFevre, into whose church Col. Goshen had been received since his illness, declared that he would not officiate unless the preparations were of a simple nature Besides, Col. Goshen himself had wished the ceremony to be unostentatious. His only other wish was to be buried deep. So it was arranged to hold a quiet service in the farm house. Col. Goshen weighed 588 pounds, as attested yesterday by a merchant who had weighed him recently, and it was found no easy task to clothe the body. After half an hour's unavailing efforts Undertaker VanDuyn finally succeeded in bringing the clothing together in front of him by splitting it down the back. The dress selected was one familiar to museum-goers—a long blue coat with imitation astrakhan collar and cuffs, black satin waistcoat with brass buttons, and black broadcloth trousers with red striped seams. By the time the clothing had been arranged a crowd had gathered and an undertaker from New Brunswick had come to offer advice. The cloth-covered chestnut coffin was placed outside on the brick wall leading to the gate. Its top measurement was three feet by eight feet four inches, and it wouldn't go through the door. The body lay indoors on a stage of planks nine feet long. Four men, after much labor, raised the body a little and slipped a broad carpet sling under the waist, fitted at the ends with stout rods, each large enough to be grasped by two men. The arms were tied down and the legs were firmly strapped together with a horse's girth in such a way as to offer handles to two men, one on each side. The nine foot stage, with the body on it, was then carried outside and placed on the porch at right angles to the coffin. Here an interesting discussion arose. The New Brunswick undertaker wanted to place the stage over the coffin, lift up the body, withdraw the planking, and let the body down into the coffin. Mr. Van Duyn had arranged for eight men to carry the body by the straps and the iron rods to the coffin and lower it. Each presented his argument, and the pall-bearers and guests who had arrived gathered round and took part in the discussion. Mr. Van Duyn finally had his way, and the body was carried to the coffin and laid in it without mishap. The colonel's chestnut wig was then carefully adjusted over his kinky hair. An attempt to remove the sling from under him failed, so the rods were cut off and the carpet was left in the coffin. Then the coffin was hoisted upon boxes and left exposed until after the services. The great coffin was put in the undertaker's waggon as the hearse was too small. It was pushed up to the dashboard and the driver sat on one end of it. The other extended about a foot out at the back of the waggon. It was a bitterly cold morning, but a good many people went in carriages and on foot to Cedar Grove Cemetery and watched with expectant interest the lowering of the coffin into the biggest grave any of them had ever seen. But no accident happened.—From the New York Sun.

Who Said It.

Dean Swift is credited with "Bread is the staff of life."

It was Keats said: "A thing of beauty is a joy forever.'

"Man proposes, but God disposes," remarked Thomas A'Kempis.

Franklin is authority for "God helps those who help themselves."

It was an observation of Thomas Southern that "Pity's akin to love."

"All cry and no wool" is an expression found in Butler's "Hudibras."

We are indebted to Colley Cibber, not to Shakspeare, for "Richard is himself again."

Edward Coke, the English jurist, was of the opinion that "A man's house is his castle."

"When Greek joins Greek then was the tug of war" was written by Nathaniel Lee in 1602.

Edward Young tells us "Death loves a shining mark" and "A fool at 40 is a fool indeed."

"Variety is the spice of life" and "Not much the worse for wear" were coined by Cowper.

Charles Pinckney gave the patriotic sentiment, "Millions for defence, but not one cent for tribute."

"Of the two evils I have chosen the least" and "The end must justify the means" are from Matthew Prior.

To Milton we owe "The paradise of fools," "A wilderness of sweets" and "Moping melancholy and moonstruck madness."

The poet Campbell found that "Coming events cast their shadows before" and "'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view."

Christopher Marlowe gave forth the invitation so often repeated by his brothers in a less public way: "Love me little, love me long.'

To Dr. Johnson belongs "A good hater," and to MacIntosh, in 1701, the phrase, often attributed to Randolph: "Wise and masterly inactivity."

Thomas Tasser, a writer of the 16th century, says: "It's an ill wind turns no good," "Better late than never," "Look ere thou leap," and "The stone that is rolling can gather no moss."

"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his fellow-citizens" (not his countrymen), appeared in the resolutions presented to the House of Representatives in December, 1799, by Gen. Henry Lee.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Parental Admonition.

Stern Parent—"Johnnie, I am informed that you use a great deal of slang. Is it true?" "Yes, sir." "And I have cautioned you against the vulgar habit scores of times. I once more warn you that if you persist in using slang, I'll take that strap from the wall and you'll find yourself in the soup."

It must be a curious event, the proposal of a stuttering lover. He would have some difficulty in telling his fair one that she was the pup-pup-pearl of his life, and the dud-dud-darling of his heart.—Denver News.

THE ALUMINUM AGE.

What it Will be Like—Houses, Boats, Cars, Bridges, Flying Ships.

The world has had its ages of stone and bronze. We are now passing through the iron age. Will this be succeeded by an age of aluminum? We believe that it will. It taxes one's imagination a little, we confess, but not one's credulity, to see, in the mind's eye, the bright and beautiful aluminum replacing black and ugly iron in most of the latter's present uses. Fancy houses built of aluminum instead of iron. The weight of the new metal is only a third as much as iron, with equal or greater tensile strength. The girders and the plates could be cast and readily handled in sizes far larger than those to which architectural iron is now confined. Perhaps whole fronts of moderate-sized houses could be made of the new metal. Railroad cars of such material would not be readily crumbled up or smashed into splinters by collisions. The perils of railroad travelling in the age of aluminum will be much less than now. The ductility of aluminum will render it the best of all possible materials for bridges. The weight of the wire ropes, as also of the bridge itself, for a given span, being but one third that of iron, engineers will perform feats of bridge building now wholly beyond their powers. The age of aluminum will be the age of bridges. They will probably be thrown over the East and North Rivers at intervals of every few blocks. With the sufficient cheapening of aluminum may come the realization of the flying machine. One great obstacle to the success of aerial navigation is the difficulty of supplying a practical motor either to propel or steer the balloon. The want is still more seriously felt if the design is to dispense with gas and imitate merely the movement of a bird's wings or a fish's tail in cleaving the air. The small weight of an aluminum engine, driven by compressed air, gas or electricity, compared with its iron equivalent, undoubtedly makes the ultimate success of air ships more probable than before. The sources of supply are inexhaustible. Iron, copper, silver, gold are found only in localities geographically small. But one of the most universally distributed materials of the earth beneath our feet is clay, the metallic base of which is aluminum. Having boundless faith in the ingenuity of man to overcome difficulties, we confidently expect him to wrest this now stubborn metal from its superabundant combinations, and enable the world soon to enter on the age of aluminum! —New York Journal of Commerce.

Orange-Ribbon Reflections.

The devil speaks for a man in a passion.

Love may live an age if you do not marry it.

Every woman is Eve in some hours of her life.

The fire of jealousy burns with very little fuel.

On what strange solitudes every separate soul dwells.

Many roads lead to happiness besides the one we take.

It takes two to tell a lie—one to speak and one to listen.

A husband's name is a far bigger shield than a father's.

Truth can be outraged by silence quite as cruelly as by speech.

To the spider the web is as large as to the whale the whole wide sea.

Woman is never too angry to be without a mouthful of sweet words.

When girls are old enough for a lover they are a match for any gray head.

A man that gets the woman he wants very seldom gets any other good thing.

A daughter is a little white lamb in the household to teach men to be gentlemen.

A woman is not to be counted your own until you have her inside a wedding-ring.

Eventful days are the results which months, years, perchance centuries, have made possible.

Who is free? The man who masters his own self. Who is powerful? He who can control his passions.

The future does not come from before to meet us, but comes streaming up from behind, over our heads.

All these inconveniences are incident to love: reproaches, jealousies, quarrels, reconcilements, war, and then peace.

All pleasure must be bought at the price of pain. The true pay the price before they enjoy it; the false after they enjoy it.

As there are in creation invisible bonds that do not break like mortal bonds, so also there are correspondence subsisting between souls, despite the separation of distance.—Collated by Kansas City Star.

Barbarians and Books.

Canadian Indians, Brazilians and Peruvians thought books and letters were spirits of live beings.

Tribes in Africa, South America and Oceanica thought the reader was conversing with the book, and Weddell said a Fuegian put the book to his ear in order to hear the sound of the voice that spoke to the reader.

A Long-Standing Error.

The Universities Press edition of the English bible contains a typographical error, which has remained uncorrected for fifty years. It is in the seventeenth verse of the eleventh chapter of Zachariah which reads: "Woe to the idol shepherd." The word "idol' should be "idle."—New York Tribune.

Love's Young Dream.

Little girl (at school)—"What did the teacher send you here for?"

Little boy—"She said I was bad, and must come over and sit with the girls."

"I like you. Can you stay long?"

"Guess not. I wasn't very bad,"

"Well, you be badder next time."

No Uncertainty About It.

Adult Son—"Mother, does a girl mean to encourage or discourage a man when she——" Mother—"My son, there is no need of going into details. When a girl starts out to either encourage or discourage a man, the man never has any doubt about what she means."

Strategy.

Vera Wiley—I'm afraid it would be better not to speak to papa just yet, Jack. Wait until next week.

Jack Door—But why?

Vera Wiley—My milliner's bill will be in then, and he may look upon your suit with more favor.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE is published every Thursday morning at the office in Brown's Block, Main Street, by R. SUTHERLAND, to whom all communications should be addressed. Subscription $1 per year in advance. Transient advertisements, 8c. per line for the first insertion and 4c. per line each subsequent insertion. Quarterly, half-yearly and yearly contracts may be made at lower rates. Local notices charged 5c. per line each insertion. The Job Department will be kept supplied with the newest and best facilities for the prompt execution of every description of plain and ornate job printing at low prices.

The Dutton Enterprise.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1889.

FIRE PROTECTION.

The question of having proper fire protection was again brought forcibly to the minds of our citizens on Saturday evening. Had we an ordinary well-equipped fire department, costing about $3,000, it would have saved to one of our citizens, exclusive of the loss to his busines, two-thirds of its total cost. Here is a lesson for our citizens to think over. Just think of it. Two such fires would pay for a first-class hand fire engine, 600 feet of hose, a hose reel, a hook and ladder truck with fittings, and would go a long way towards putting down good water tanks at convenient places throughout the village, and one more would build an engine house and town hall combined. These are solid, practical, incontrovertible facts!

Another important consideration is the saving in insurance which would be effected by having proper fire protection. This subject was dealt with in the columns of the ENTERPRISE a few weeks ago, but a few words would not now be amiss. Fully one-half per cent. would be saved to nearly every person carrying insurance, and no one would need to carry more than three-quarters as much insurance on stock and buildings as at present, because the risk would be materially lessened.

Too much importance cannot be attached to the fact that persons wishing to start manufactories of any kind do not care to come to a place where there is no chance in the world to save their buildings from fire, should it once get a start. The first question a man asks when about to start in a new place, is "What fire protection have you got?" And when he gets no better answer than "Two tin pails and a water trough," nine times out of ten he will go to a more enterprising town.

The question arises "How are we to secure this fire protection." We answer, the best, and in fact the only way, is to first get incorporated as a village. There would then be a chance to issue debentures for all kinds of local improvements. It would be an easy matter to get incorporated once more if all would work together to that end, and none can dispute the fact that immense benefit would be derived from it.

We would again call the attention of the M. C. R. authorities to the poor train service given Dutton. It is miserable, in fact not much better than that accorded unimportant sidings, and the fact that Dutton, already one of the most important stations on the line between Detroit and St. Thomas, is rapidly growing and has every prospect of continuing to push forward, demands a change. It would cost the company little or nothing to stop all the express trains daily at this station and a large increase in passenger traffic would be the result. Our citizens should urge this matter strongly upon the company and would, no doubt, secure the stopping of nearly every train, and there would then be a chance of securing another mail from the east daily.

The disease which caused the death of three persons within a few days, and which so-called learned physicians declared was nothing more than malignant chicken-pox, has turned out to be pure and simple small-pox, and precautions are at last being taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Those physicians who declared the disease to be chicken-pox, and stuck to that declaration, either wanted to keep the matter quiet for fear of injuring the trade of the place, or did not understand the disease at all. If the first, they are a disgrace to their profession, and if the latter there is not much excuse for them, for after the first death they should have called in a physician of experience to consult with them, and not have allowed the disease to spread.

The collapse of that ten-story building in Chicago would seem to indicate that the fate of Buddenseck in New York has not had the full effect it should have. The constructors of such buildings are to all intents and purposes murderers and should be treated as such.

The Montreal Witness is eccentric. It approves of the revolt of the prisoners in the Toronto jail against the rule compelling them to do hard labor, and the reason it gives for its approval is that it is degrading to be compelled to labor against one's will. That is a very strange reason. Most of us have often to work against our will; but hunger and cold are more imperative taskmasters than the governor of the Toronto jail, and nobody (except a few foolish persons of both sexes) considers it degrading to obey when they compel. There are two things more degrading to a prisoner than to be compelled to work. The first is, the fact of his being in prison at all; and the second is, remaining in idleness while he is there.

Growler Holds Forth.

Why did the Council hold their meeting on Tuesday in such an out of the way place? is a question I hear a good many ask. For my part I hunted for half an hour before I could find them and then they were nearly through. A good many citizens were disappointed at not being able to be present.

Now that small-pox is raging on all sides of us what is the matter that people have been allowed to come into the village from places where the disease was known to exist? The Board of Health is now taking proper precautions, but a good deal of trouble might have been saved by beginning sooner. Move a little faster, gentlemen.

The burned sidewalk in front of the Commercial Hotel should at once be replaced, or some forgetful mortal will put his foot in one of the holes and find a resting place in a bed of ashes.

Why is it that so many people throw slops, etc., on the street? Another point for the Board of Health to take up.

GROWLER.

Watchman on Small-pox.

Sir,—What steps are being taken in our village to guard against the terrible pest, the small-pox, that is raging in Fingal? A little more earnestness and some well defined plan to prevent its outbreak among us is absolutely necessary. It will be cheaper, easier and better far to take all needful steps to prevent than it will be to stamp it out if it should unfortunately break out amongst us. Are the people being vaccinated? What about the scholars in the High School from Bismarck or Fingal? Should they not for the time being at least board altogether in the village and not go home at all for a while? While we are free from it let us take all needful steps to keep so. The proper authorities should see to the matter at once. Too much time has already been wasted.

Yours, &c.,
WATCHMAN.

CHOW-CHOW.

Worms cause serious sickness. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup destroys and expels all kinds of worms quickly and surely.

The man who has the weaker side of an argument always makes the most noise. If you want to hear a pig squeal get him penned into a corner.

Pale, weak women need a tonic, strength giving, flesh building medicine like Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap is a delightful shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

A stranger called at forty-eight different houses in Cleveland and asked, "Is the boss home?" There was no man home in any instance, and yet forty-seven of the women promptly replied, "Yes sir. What do you want?"

Small sugar-coated Burdock Pills do not gripe or sicken. They are mild and effectual.

TO THE DEAF.—A person cured of Deafness and noises in the head of 23 years' standing by a simple remedy, will send a description of it FREE to any person who applies to Nicholson, 177 McDougall Street, New York.

"What a pity it is," says a city clergyman, that there are so many sweet sinners and sour saints.

A USEFUL ARTICLE.—"I can certify to the great usefulness of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. We use it for burns, bruises, cuts, sores, rheumatism, sore throat, croup, etc., and recommend it to all as an excellent remedy." T. W. Appleby, Wingham, Ont. All medicine dealers sell Yellow Oil.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia discarded all gew-gaws and circus traps in the opening of the Legislature. We dare say the laws passed will be just as binding.—Advertiser.

A FORCIBLE FACT.—Constipation is the most frequent cause of headaches, bad blood, humors, dizziness, vertigo, etc., and because of this should never be allowed to exist. It may be readily cured by using Burdock Blood Bitters, which never fails to cure even the most obstinate and chronic cases."

Mrs. Sally Jump, now living at Coldwater, Mich., was 100 years old on Jan. 24. This is a Jump that bids fair to break the record, as she is in perfect health.

POISON IVY ERUPTION.—For poison ivy eruption and for all burns, sore throat, rheumatism, etc., Mr. C. W. Wood, of Hall's Bridge, Ont., advises the use of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which has been in use in his family for years. He regards it as a perfect cure.

THE FIELD OF CHATEAUGUAY.—From this historic ground Mr. Frank Curotte writes that he was greatly afflicted with constipation, together with pain and swelling of his body. "I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, and it gave me immediate relief. I can now sleep well, and can eat heartily without any ill effects.

It is a good rule to accept only such medicines as are known to be worthy of confidence. It has been the experience of thousands that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best medicine ever used for throat and lung diseases.

This winter has been without parallel in more respects than one. There comes from the peach sections news not only that the crop is not destroyed by frost, but that the buds never looked better and the growers regard the prospects as bright. This is the first time in history that such an admission has been made.

AN APT QUOTATION.—From a letter by Mrs. Sullivan, 124 West Ave., Hamilton, Ont.: "After trying a number of medicines for liver complaint, from which I suffered for years, I bought two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and found it a complete cure. My house is never without it.

A Texas steer lifted a carriage and baby off a street and over a high fence in Denver without the least damage. Indeed, the baby cackled with delight over the performance, and the nurse did not have to stop her flirtation with a soldier.

Everybody needs a spring medicine. By using Ayer's Sarsaparilla the blood is thoroughly cleansed and invigorated, the appetite stimulated, and the system prepared to resist the diseases peculiar to the summer months. Ask for Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Take no other.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, and take no other kind.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

NOTICE TO THE CREDITORS OF ROBERT McBLAIN, DECEASED.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, IN Pursuance of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, Chap. 110, Sec. 36, that all creditors having claims against the estate of Robert McBlain, deceased, late of the city of London, in Ontario, life insurance agent, who died on or about the 18th day of January, A. D., 1889, are required to send by post, prepaid, or to deliver to George Van Tuyl, of the said city of London—one of the executors of the said Robert McBlain, deceased—on or before the 28th day of February, 1889, their names and addresses and description of their claims duly verified and the securities (if any) held by them. And that after the said date the executors of the said Robert McBlain will proceed to distribute the assets of the said Robert McBlain, deceased, among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which notice has been given as above required. And the said executors will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any person or persons of whose claims notice shall not have been received duly verified by said executor at the time of such distribution.

Dated this 31st day of January, A. D., 1889.

ALBERT O. JEFFERY,
2-21-ph Solicitor for the Executors.

J. C. HERTEL, MERCHANT TAILOR

Keeps constantly on hand a well assorted stock of

English, Irish, Scotch and Canadian Tweeds,

Which we make to order in the latest style.

Special Bargains in Suitings and Overcoatings for the next 30 days to make room for Spring Importations. Prices moderate.

J. C. HERTEL, DUTTON.

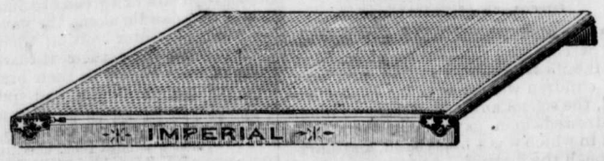
IMPROVED FARM FOR SALE

IN THE

TOWNSHIP OF PELHAM, WELLAND CO.

On account of the ill-health of the proprietor the valuable farm of Samuel Beckett, containing 150 acres of the finest fruit growing land in Ontario, is offered for sale at a bargain. 130 acres are cleared and free from stumps and stones, the balance timbered with chestnut and pine. The soil is a rich sandy loam and the farm is well watered by two wells and three springs. Twelve acres of orchard, consisting of apple, peach, pear and pium trees, and quantity of small fruits. Buildings all first class and cost about $5,000. Only six miles from Welland and half a mile from postoffice, school and church. Apply at once to

J. T. SIFTON, DUTTON.



AT COST! AT COST!

Having purchased the entire Stock of Furniture of A. C. Graham, we will sell the same at cost for the NEXT THIRTY DAYS.

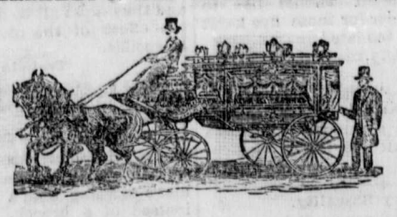
Come one and all and secure some of the grandest bargains ever heard of in Dutton.

Don't fail to secure some of the

BARGAINS IN MATTRESSES.

We have a large stock of the best makes in the market to-day.

In Furniture we take the lead. Our stock of



Parlor Suites, Bed-room Suites,

Side-boards, Tables, Chairs, Sofas, &c.

Must be cleared out at once to make room. Call and see us and secure some of the grand bargains we are offering.

UNDERTAKING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

A full stock of Coffins, Caskets, Shrouds, etc., kept constantly on hand A first-class Hearse furnished at all funerals. Embalming a specialty. Orders filled night or day.

B. J. SCHULTZ & CO., DUTTON.

DISTRICT DASHES.

FROM SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS OF THE ENTERPRISE.

Cowal.

About 40 of the relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McCallum assembled at their residence on Wednesday evening last, to do honor to the fifth anniversary of their marriage. Although Mr. and Mrs. McCallum were quite taken by surprise, it was not long before everyone was made to feel at home. After justice was done to the many good things prepared by the ladies the remainder of the evening was spent in music, games, etc. Mr. and Mrs. McCallum were the recipients of many useful presents.

A number of Rev. Mr. Urquhart's congregation assembled in Mr. Crossen's bush, west of the village, on Wednesday, and cut, split and hauled to the manse sufficient wood to last him a year.

Mrs. Webster, an aged lady, died at Mr. A. Murray's on Friday, and was buried on Sunday.

Iona Station.

Messrs. J. T. and Alex. Kerr have their yard nearly filled with logs at present. A large number of teams are working for them.

Mr. McNeil intends calling the annual cheese meeting shortly to make the necessary arrangements for another year's business. Mr. McNeil secured the highest price for cheese last year of any factory in this neighborhood. It is reported that he intends removing to the Station in the spring.

Mr. W. McLandress is busy loading wood at the station here. Mac. intends selling machinery for the Aurora firm again this year, having already secured a goodly number of orders.

Mr. Jos. Brown has purchased a fine roadster, for which he paid a handsome price. Look out for him and his best girl these fine nights.

The churches here were closed on Sunday on account of the small-pox.

Mrs. Mann is visiting at her home in Niagara Falls this week.

Our enterprising merchant, Mr. Campbell, reports business rushing. He intends opening out a large stock of spring goods shortly.

Iona.

Wm. Stidwill, jr., of Wallacetown, has been granted permission to learn telegraphy at Iona Station.

Mrs. Wm. Lumley, of Tilbury, is at present visiting relatives here.

The revival services which have been in progress here the past two weeks, under the management of Messrs. George and Trueman, were closed on Friday evening last.

Our school is getting on nicely with Mr. Piper at the helm.

A pleasant event occured at the residence of Mr. Ben. McIntyre, one day last week, being the marriage of his daughter, Minnie, to Mr. Arthur Silcox, of this place. Mr. Sidney Silcox, brother of the groom, officiated as best man and Miss Lizzie McIntyre, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Mann, pastor of the R. B. Church, in the presence of the relatives of the contracting parties and a number of invited guests. They then left for London to spend their honeymoon. May success follow them through life.

Our esteemed friend Mr. John Lowther, is slowly recovering from a serious attack of inflammation of the lungs, under the careful treatment of Dr. Cascaden.

Small-pox in Fingal has created considerable excitement in our quiet village. The dance that was to have taken place last Friday night was postponed on account of the scare. The churches were also closed on Sunday.

The Southwold Board of Health is enforcing the law. Every person residing in the township is to be vaccinated this week.

Mrs. G. H. Brown returned on Saturday from a visit to her brother in London.

Mr. John Harris, of the Back street, has taken to himself a wife in the person of one Mrs. Fraser. One by one the bachelors for which the Back street is noted are becoming domesticated. John is advising friends, who are shivering in the cold of bachelordom, to go and do likewise.

Harry Brown is now working at his trade in London.

Tyrconnel.

Good sleighing still continues.

A small party of young people assembled at the residence of Mr. T. Wilson Friday evening and spent a few hours in enjoyment, excellent music being furnished by Messrs. Mitchell and McCallum, complete masters of the violin.

Miss Julia Parks is here on a visit to the old homestead.

Mr. J. Thomas is harvesting a large amount of ice this winter. He intends fishing six nets this season.

Messrs. Page & Balsdon have replenished their ice house. They intend fishing three nets one and a half miles west of here.

A young gent here boasts that he is the owner of the fastest animal in this section, "White Stockins," and claims to have driven her from six miles east of Sparta to home, distance 32 miles, in two hours and ten minutes. We regret to hear that she is deaf, which makes her hard to handle, but by the aid of the overdraw check and double bits he holds her under complete control. She is claimed to have a record of 2.40—we presume that this calls for two miles in forty minutes.

Wallacetown.

Miss Cattinach, of Fingal, is visiting her brothers, Messrs. John and Charles. She purposes remaining till the small-pox is over in that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Desmond, of Morpeth, who have been visiting friends in this place, have returned home.

Miss Fullerton, of Montreal, Quebec, lately out from Scotland, is visiting Mrs. D. Kelso.

A meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held in the Methodist Church, Tyrconnel, on Wednesday evening, Feb. 27th. Addresses were delivered by Revs. J. J. Rice, J. Chance, of St. Peter's Church; D. Kelso, Wallacetown; and E. Middleton, Dutton.

Mrs. Dr. Ruthven, who has been confined to her room for the past week, is able to be around again,

Messrs. E. W. McIntyre and Geo. Carter, of St. Thomas, spent Sunday in the village.

The missionary collections in the Presbyterian Church of this place for the last two Sundays amounted to $40.

Misses McLarty & McIntyre have opened a shop on Rose street, in the house owned by Mr. Samuel Stidwell.

Mr. Stidwell has secured the contract for the wood-work of Mr. Donald McKillop's house. Mr. Small has the contract for the brick-work.

Times are quite lively here just now; everybody is getting vaccinated to prevent small-pox spreading.

MiddlemIss.

The olio held in connection with the school here was a decided success. The night was all that could be desired and a large crowd was in attendance. Although the programme was rather lengthy the audience kept the very best of order. D. A. McNabb, of Cowal, occupied the chair and in a few but very well chosen remarks introduced those who took part. Among the speakers were Messrs. A. P. McDougald, Dr. McAlister, C. A. Anderson, Jno. McVicar and others. The meeting broke up about 11 o'clock after having spent one of the most profitable evening's of the season.

Quite an interesting time was had in the village on Thursday last over the election of a trustee to represent the village. Louis Beach and John Burdon were proposed for the honorable position. Each man worked as hard as possible, but when the poll closed it was found that Mr. Burdon came out victorious by a majority of 1.

Coyne's Corners.

The literary society, which was started about three weeks ago, is increasing very fast. The programme rendered last Friday evening was excellent. The programme for next Friday evening will consist of readings, recitations, singing, music on the violin and debate—"Resolved that Fire has done more damage than Water." Thos. Garbutt will occupy the chair.

A number of young ladies and gentlemen of this place and Wallacetown attended a surprise party at Mr. D. Clarke's, Clearville, Thursday. A pleasant time was had and all came away well pleased. They arrived home in time to sit down to breakfast on Friday morning.

Mr. D. McKillop is getting the material drawn on his premises for the erection of a brick house.

Messrs. D. McGugan and Wm. Crehan, who were injured about a week ago in the woods, are improving slowly.

The Session of the Wallacetown Presbyterian Church met at the residence of Mr. Alex. Clark, Tuesday evening.

Dunwich Council.

A special meeting of Dunwich Council was held in the office of D. C. Clay on Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of forming a Board of Health and considering the small-pox question, with Reeve A. J. Leitch in the chair.

After a short discussion it was moved by D. McLean, seconded by Peter J. McCallum, that this Council do hereby appoint a Board of Health composed of the following persons;—The Reeve, Clerk, Daniel McPherson, L. W. McIntyre and R. S. McMillan, that D. C. Leitch, M. D., be appointed medical health officer, and that Alex. McRae and Wm. Thomas be appointed sanitary inspectors, for the year 1889. Carried.

Moved by H. Garbutt, seconded by D. McLean, that this Council recommend the vaccination or re-vaccination of all persons resident in this municipality who have not been vaccinated within seven years, and that the Council order that such vaccination or re-vaccination be enforced immediately should the Board of Health deem such measure necessary, and the Reeve is hereby authorized to issue a proclamation and give requisite notice on recommendation of the Board of Health. Carried.

A somewhat lengthy discussion took place on the Murray-McCallum road dispute, and securing concrete tile for culverts, but both matters were left over until the next meeting, and the Council adjourned to meet on March 18th, at 10 o'clock a. m, sharp.

Dutton Cheese Factory.

At the annual meeting of the patrons of the Dutton cheese factory, held at the Nelson House, on Saturday, 23rd inst., the auditors' report showed that 983,000 lbs. of milk had been received at the factory last season, from which 91,197 lbs. of cheese had been manufactured, taking an average of 10-77 lbs. of milk to a lb. of cheese. The cheese was sold for $8.659.01 or an average of 9½c. per lb. For the coming season the same terms as last year were adopted, unless 60 tons of cheese could be obtained, in which case the making will be lowered ¼c. per lb. W. A. Ostrander was appointed secretary, James McDougall, treasurer, R. S. McMillan, salesman, Jas. E. Granam and Andrew Goldie, auditors. The meeting was well attended, and everything passed off quietly and satisfactorily.

A church organ is making trouble among the Presbyterians at Arkona.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

GOOD NEWS!

DUTTON'S NEW PUMP.

J. H. MARSH, Manufacturer, is now prepared to furnish his new pump on short notice in 11 sizes, from AA 8x8. 8 ft long, to No. 9 5x5, 6 ft long. All other sizes made to order. All kinds of Farm Implements. Wheelbarrows kept in stock.

PLOWS & REPAIRS A SPECIALTY.

Burdock Blood Bitters

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

FARMERS, MILLERS AND ENGINE OWNERS.

I AM now introducing the newest invention of the day, a Grinder that will grind small grains or corn with the husk on without having to stop the engine to change. The plates are self-sharpening and the machine is so constructed that if a piece of iron should get into it it would be pushed down through the safety bottom without danger of breaking. One can be seen running in the grist mill at Essex Centre. Railway fare will be deducted from price of the Grinder to those coming from a distance to see it work, on placing their order. I will be at the Royal Hotel, Essex Centre, every Saturday. Circular sent on application.

J. G. SLOANE, North Ridge, Ont.

FOR SALE.

THE N. W. QUARTER OF LOT 24 IN the 11th Concession, Aldborough, 50 acres. A good frame house and barn and good orchard on the place. The soil is a sandy loam; 40 acres cleared. A good chance to buy a farm at a bargain.

Apply to

D. McINTYRE, Dutton,

or to H. CLAY, Barrister, Dutton.

March, 22, 1888. tf

1889 | SPRING! | 1889

HOCKIN & POOL.

We have on hand and in transit

THE NEW NOVELTIES IN DRESS GOODS

and Trimmings

Together with the most approved styles of

-: LADIES' HATS AND BONNETS :-

FOR THE SPRING TRADE.

We intend to fully sustain our established reputation as headquarters for the above goods, and no efforts will be spared to increase the very large volume of business done last year.

Our special purchases from the Mills of

Cottons, Cottonades, Ducks and Denims

Enable us to give our customers the

VERY BEST VALUE IN THE TRADE.

Our constant aim in purchases is to buy goods so that we are in a position to give our customers the very closest prices and

THE | BEST | SATISFACTION

Our Special Importations

—OF—

-: SCOTCH -:- TWEEDS :-

Together with our immense range of Canadian, will enable us to satisfy you in selecting

YOUR SPRING SUIT!

We guarantee satisfaction in every particular.

Our Grocery Department

Under the management of MR. D. CAMPBELL, is kept full of the CHOICEST GOODS and

OUR - NEW - SEASON'S - TEAS

Are unsurpassed for their excellence of flavor.

As we pay the Highest Market Price for your Produce, and as we have a magnificent variety of Goods to select from, it is decidedly in your interest to trade with us the coming year.

Respectfully yours,

HOCKIN | & | POOL.

ICE CREAM AND HEAVEN.

A Trance Prodigy Eats the One and Thinks She is in the Other.

A Harrisburg, Pa., despatch says: Hundreds of people are still flocking to the residence of John Parthemore, at Steelton, where little Lillie Bodmer is lying in what is denominated a religious trance. Her form is rigid. She constantly stares upward and claims to be in communication with God. Lillie is said to have been converted on the 1st inst. at a revival at Steelton. Her religious fervor was followed by a calm, which was succeeded by the trance. The physicians are unable to prescribe any treatment, and the only things she has eaten since her confinement are oranges and ice cream. She seems to believe herself in heaven and almost constantly speaks of Christ. She recognizes no one by name. While talking of objects which she claims to see in the spirit world she will stop suddenly, her form will become rigid, her eyeballs roll upward and remain fixed, and her hands and her arms continue stiff in whatever position they happen to be when she sinks into the trance. She was asked by Rev. Mr. Keefer where she had been, and she replied:

"Oh! I have been flying around with Jesus. We have been to High Spire, Highland, Harrisburg and Steelton. Oh! we have been all around."

She never received any education, a fact to be noticed in her formation of sentences. Upon returning to consciousness from one of her trances, during which she had wept, she was asked what made her cry. Her answer was, "Oh! I was praying for my relatives."

When any one speaks to her she does not look at them, but feels for their hands and takes them in hers. She has never read the Bible; yet whenever she is asked by any one who holds her hands about certain Biblical doctrines she will answer in an intelligent manner. When asked a question she cannot answer she says, "Wait, I'll ask Jesus."

Then she turns her head to the wall, her lips move, and a little later she gives the correct answer. She speaks of the Lord with perfect freedom and assurance, and is extremely affectionate with those who talk to her. The girl never gets any spasms, is not hysterical and does not grow weak. She is wholly without pain.

Said the Rev. Mr. Keefer, her pastor—"It is a wonderful case, but it is no mental aberration. I am not a Spiritualist in any sense of the word, but I do believe that this girl has direct communication with the spirit world. She is with them; she speaks to them; she is a direct manifestation of the divine power. I could give you columns of strange things that she has told about people whom she never knew. She has described heaven, and she does not believe she is on earth. It is a great mystery, indeed."

Other doctors speak from a purely medical point of view, and say that the girl's mind is unbalanced.

IN A BAD BOX.

A Railway Car Takes Fire and the Passengers have an Exciting Time.

A Paris cable says: A very startling accident occurred at daybreak yesterday to the express train Le Rapids coming from Nice to Paris. As the train reached a point about five miles south of Dijon, passengers in the new carriage, in which the compartments communicate with each other, noticed a strong smell of something burning. The carriage was heated, not with the usual hot water foot-warmers, but with a system of hot-air currents that permeated under the floor of the compartments. One passenger, at ten minutes past 6, noticed that flames were darting up from the floor. The night had been terribly cold, and the wind had blown the gas out. The passengers pulled at the knob of the alarm signal, but the signal did not work, it being jammed or frozen. There were twelve persons in the carriage. The flames were increasing with frightful rapidity. The floor of the train was one mass of glowing embers. The passengers jumped upon the seats and shrieked for the guard. The train began to slow up for the station of Dijon. The guard noticed the smoke and at once stopped the train. The flames were already curling about the seats and cushions. The passengers at once jumped out of the carriage, some of them leaving their luggage behind them. The rest of the train went on to Dijon for assistance, leaving the passengers and a few employees in a shed near the track, where the carriage soon became a bonfire and was completely destroyed, together with a portion of the passengers' hand-bags.

Her Longest Sleep Approaching.

An Attica, N. Y., telegram says: Mrs. Emma Althouse, who awoke on February 6th from a 35 days' trance, is in a precarious condition and can live only a few days longer, according to the opinion of local physicians. On coming out of her long trance she partook of some nourishment and then went to sleep again, remaining unconscious for a day. She seemed very sleepy and artificial means were tried to keep her awake when she was aroused from this nap, but she had several short sleeps. She is now awake and has been so for four days, but her condition is extremely pitiful. She is unable to move and her efforts to whisper to her sisters are unavailing. Efforts to feed her even liquid food must now be given up, for a drop of water or warm milk sets her to coughing in a feeble, painful way that seems likely to result fatally at any moment. These attempts at nourishing the sleeping woman have been followed by fainting fits, lasting 10 or 15 minutes.

Civil Service Reform.

Lady (to applicant for coachman)—Are you an Englishman?

Applicant—No, mum; I was born in Ireland, but I've lived so long in Ameriky that I s'pose I do seem quite English, you know.—Harper's Bazar

Thanks; We're Busy.

Perhaps those who are fond of tongue-twisting sentences may like to repeat the following correctly and rapidly:

The swan swam over the river; swim, swan, swim;
The swan swam back again; well swam, swan!

His full name is George Ernest John Maria Boulanger.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

The following Bills were introduced and read the first time:

Mr. French—Respecting actions at law.

Mr. Fraser—To amend the Ontario Shop Regulation Act.

Mr. McAndrews—To amend the Act respecting mortgages and sales of personal property.

Mr. Conmee—Respecting the town of Port Arthur.

The Bill respecting voters' lists (Mr. Fraser) was again considered in Committee of the Whole, for the purpose of receiving some verbal amendments.

Mr. Meredith wished the Bill amended so that voters who were challenged and summoned to attend before the County Court should not be struck off the lists unless the Judge had reasonable ground for thinking that their votes were open to question. Under the present law voters were summoned by wholesale, and often advised not to attend, so that their names might be struck off.

Mr. Gibson (Huron) said the persons who did not attend had, as a rule, no right to vote.

Mr. Fraser said that it was almost invariable that in cases where persons could not attend the gentlemen on their side were always ready to show that their names should not be struck off. He proposed as an amendment that, if objections to voters' names appeared vexatious or frivolous to the judge, he might order appellant to pay the costs before proceeding.

This amendment was carried.

Mr. Meredith asked the hon. member for North Middlesex when his Bill respecting the women's franchise would be brought up for a second reading.

Mr. Waters—The week after next.

Mr. Ingram's Bill to amend the Assessment Act by making it clear that the Legislature intended to exempt incomes to the amount of $700 was read the second time.

The following Bills were introduced and read a first time:

Mr. Bronson—To enable the city of Ottawa to issue debentures for the building of waterworks.

Mr. Smith—To confirm the title of the County of York to the York toll roads.

Mr. Whitney—To amend the Ditches and Water Courses Act; also to amend the Election Act; also to amend the Act respecting seduction.

Mr. Gibson (Hamilton)—Respecting the Pharmacy Act.

Mr. Meredith—Respecting the London Street Railway Company; also, to authorize the Synod of the Diocese of Huron to sell certain lands; also, to amend the Ontario Insurance Act; also, to amend the Ontario Judicature Act; also, to amend the Act respecting building societies; also, to amend the Act respecting arbitrations.

Mr. Marter—Respecting a by-law of the town of Gravenhurst.

Mr. Gibson (Hamilton) brought down the report of the Minister of Education for 1888 and the public accounts for 1888; also the report of the Niagara Falls Park Commissioners.

Mr. Ross (Huron) said the Estimates would be ready by Wednesday, and he hoped to make his financial statement on Thursday.

On the order for the third reading of the Bill respecting voters' lists (Mr. Fraser),

Mr. Meredith moved an amendment in the line of his amendment which was proposed in Committee of the Whole and defeated, to the effect that the judge is not to strike off the name of a person from the voters' lists unless there is reasonable ground for the belief that the right of such person to vote is fairly open to question.

Mr. Fraser said the law as it stood had been found to work well both in Ontario and the Dominion. The county judge would not strike off a name merely for non-attendance if it were shown that such name ought to be on the voters' lists. The amendment would lead to numerous evils.

Mr. French favored the amendment.

Mr. Hudson said that in the township of Hungerford 63 names were attested against in one polling division and subpœnaed. Some of the men denounced were old residents. Nothing was lost, however, in these cases, as they were defended.

The House divided and the amendment was lost.

YEAS—Messrs. Biggar, Blyth, Clancey, Clarke, E. F. (Toronto), Clarke, H. E. (Toronto), Craig, Creighton, Cruess, Fell, French, Hammell Hess, Hudson, Ingram, Kerns, Lees, Marter, Meacham, Meredith, Metcalf, Miller, Monk, Morgan, Ostrom, Preston, Rorke, Smith (Frontenac), Stewart, Tooley, Whitney, Wil loughby, Wood (Hastings), Wylie—33.

NAYS—Messrs. Allan, Armstrong, Balfour, Ballantyne, Blezard, Bronson, Caldwell, Chisholm, Clarke (Wellington), Conmee, Dack, Dance, Davis, Drury, Ferguson, Field, Fraser, Freeman, Garson, Gibson (Hamilton), Gibson (Huron), Gilmour, Gould, Graham, Harcourt, Hardy, Lees, Lyon, McKay, McMahon, Mack, Master, Morin, Mowat, Murray, O'Connor, Pacaud, Phelps, Rayside, Ross (Huron), Ross (Middlesex), Smith (York), Snider, Sprague, Stratton, Waters, Wood (Brant)—47.

The Bill then passed its third reading.

Mr. Fraser moved that 3,000 copies of the list be printed and distributed among the members.—Carried.

The House went into committee of the whole on Mr. Fraser's Bill to amend the Workman's Compensation for Injuries Act, Mr. Harcourt in the chair.

Mr. Meredith opposed clause 13 on the ground that it would be better to have the clause relating to notice thrown out altogether.

Mr. Fraser explained that although the Act was for the purpose of protecting the workingmen, yet it would be as well to protect the employer to a certain extent also.

Mr. Hudson wanted to know if the Act applied to threshing machines, sawing machines and cheese factories.

Mr. Fraser said it did, and added that although a number of actions had been tried under the English Act, in most cases the compensation recovered was not excessive.

The committee rose and reported the Bill.

The Bill to amend the Ontario Factories Act was passed through Committee of the Whole without amendment.

Mr. Wood (Brant) asked if it is the intention of the Government during the present session to take any steps towards granting the prayer of the petition of certain chiefs of the Six Nation Indians respecting the practice of medicine.

Mr. Mowat said he did not quite understand how far the petition asked for relief, but would be glad to confer with his hon. friend on the subject.

The following Bills were introduced and read the first time:

Mr. Bronson—To amend the Act respecting assignments, etc., by insolvent persons; also to amend the Municipal Act; also to amend the Act for the protection of game and fur-bearing animals.

Mr. Whitney—To amend the Act respecting mortgages and sale of personal property.

Mr. Dryden—To amend the Act imposing taxes on dogs for the protection of sheep.

A message was received from His Honor the Lieut.-Governor transmitting the estimates for the year.

The following is the summary of the estimated expenditure of the Province for the current year:

Civil Government	$ 212,145 00
Legislation	120,050 00
Administration of Justice	365,316 51
Education	588,872 00
Public Institutions, Maintenance	736,084 16
Immigration	6,850 00
Agricu ture	142,287 00
Hospitals and Charities	120,528 66
Maintenance and Repairs of Government and Departmental Buildings.	64,140 66
Public Buildings—
(1) Repairs	31,100 00
(2) Capital Account	440,536 67
Public Works—
(1) Repairs	11,600 00
(2) Capital Account	19,159 00
Colonization Roads	98,150 00
Charges on Crown Lands	101,900 00
Refund Account	25,557 66
Statute Consolidation	1,000 00
Miscellaneous Expenditure	76,641 23
Unforeseen and Unprovided	50,000 00
Total Current Expenditure, 1889	$2,628,515 22
On Capital Account	557,845 67
Other purposes	25,557 66
Amount of Estimates	$3,211,918 55
Amount of Estimates, 1888	3 125,804 12
Total Expenditure, 1888	3,536,248 46

Mr. Ross (Huron), on moving that the House go into Committee of Supply on the estimates, said he would follow his usual custom of giving a plain statement of the transactions of the previous year.

The receipts for the year 1888 were as follows:

Subsidy	$1,116 872 80
Specific grant	80,000 00
	$1,196,872 80
Interest on capital held and debts due by the Dominion to Ontario.	$ 279,111 10
Interest on investments	55,331 95
	$ 334,443 05
Crown Lands Department—
Crown lands	$ 77,071 40
Clergy lands	8,347 49
Common school lands	11,395 15
Grammar school lands	2,445 20
Rent re lands	10 00
In suspense re lands	18,771 42
Woods and forests	1,316,139 09
Casual fees	1,763 74
Refunds re destitute settlers	396 79
Refunds re settlers' homesteads	114 80
	$1,436,454 58
Algoma taxes	$ 2,282 26
Law stamps	81,044 50
Licenses	233,886 19
Education department	33,173 74
Public Institutions' revenue—
Toronto Lunatic Asylum	$ 38,667 23
London " "	19,792 96
Hamilton " "	6,463 34
Kingston " "	3,748 58
Orillia " "	1,477 47
Reformatory for females	4,354 80
" " boys	515 50
Central Prison	27,727 29
Deaf and Dumb Institute	150 00
	$ 102,897 17
Casual revenue—
Provincial Secretary's department.	$ 9,336 28
Fines, etc	3,370 79
Insurance Company's fees	665 00
Surrogate Court fees	1,335 50
Division " "	2,040 99
Official Gazette	8,473 18
Private bills	2,355 50
Statutes	6,968 95
" Index	54 00
Incidentals	124 80
	$ 34,714 90
Insurance Company's assessments.	$ 3,020 53
Removal of patients	9,083 57
	$ 12,104 10
London L. A., insurance	1,279 94
Deaf and Dumb Institute, insurance	336 42
Agricultural College, sale of furniture	113 25
Lake Nipissing Works, sale of scow	400 00
Drainage works assessments	15,041 52
Municipal loan fund	4,000 00
	$3,489,044 42
Drainage debentures	31,758 44
Drainage debentures, tile	3,398 56
Orillia L. A., mortgage	1,500 00
Mimico farm, mortgage	2,386 84
Toronto L. A., sale of lands	30,471 81
New Parliament Buildings fund	28,861 71
	$3,587,421 78

The expenditure for 1888 had been:

Civil Government	$ 200,685 24
Legislation	127,030 77
Administration of Justice	373,898 80
Education	573,465 30
Public Institutes Maintenance	721,602 69
Immigration	7,952 39
Agriculture	137,054 46
Hospitals and Charities	113,686 14
Repairs and Maintenance P. B.	69,229 54
Public Buildings	291,423 56
Public Works	42,870 71
Colonization Roads	112,273 56
Charges on Crown Lands	96,734 47
Consolidation of Statutes	31,394 99
Miscellaneous	74,030 67
Refunds	27,703 73
Ordinary Expenditure under Supply Bill	$ 3,007,037 02
Drainage Debentures	47,684 92
Tile Debentures	11,100 00
Railway Aid Certificates	247,962 14
Annuity Certificates	52,200 00
Widows' Pensions	11,041 15
New Parliament Buildings	159,203 23
	$3,536,248 46
1. Direct Investment—
Dominion 6 per cent. bonds	$ 200,000 00
Market value over par value	14,000 00
	$ 214,000 00
Drainage 5 per cent. Debentures, invested 31st December, 1888	$ 205,381 17
Tile Drainage 5 per cent. Debentures, invested 31st December, 1888	72,948 61
Drainage Works—Municipal Assessment	242,228 77
	$ 520,558 55
	$ 734,558 55
2. Capital held and debts due by the Dominion to Ontario, bearing interest—
U. C. Grammar School Fund (2 Vict., Cap. 10)	$ 312,769 04
U. C. Building Fund (18 Sect., Act. 1854)	1,472,391 41
Land Improvement Fund (see award)	124,685 18
Common School Fund (Consol. Stats., Cap. 26)—proceeds realized to 1st July, 1867, $1,520,959.24—after deducting Land Improvement Fund portion belonging to Ontario	891,201 74
Capital declared owing to the late Province of Canada by the Dominion Act (47 Vict., Cap. 4)—$5,397,503.13, bearing interest at 5 per cent. Ontario's proportion on basis of award as advised by Finance Department	2,848,289 52
Ontario's share of library (see award)	105,541 00
	$5,754,877 89
3. Other debts due to the Province—
Balance re Municipal Loan Fund debts	850 00
Balance re Mimico lots	3,225 00
	$ 4,075 00
4. Bank balances—
Current accounts	$ 57,364 39
Special deposits	571,579 75
	$ 628,944 14
Total	$7,122,455 58
LIABILITIES PRESENTLY PAYABLE.
1. Balance due to municipalities re surplus distribution	$ 1,291 34
2. Balance due to municipalities re Land Improvement Fund—Interest	3,256 57
3. Quebec's share of Common School Fund, made up as follows—
Collections to 31st December, 1888, on account of lands sold between 14th June, 1853, and 6th March, 861	$ 889,485 03
Less 6 per cent., cost of management	53,369 10
	$ 836,115 93
Less one-quarter for Land Improvement Fund	209,028 98
	$ 627,086 95
Collections to 31st December, 1888, on sales made since 6th March, 1861	$ 317,594 09
Less 6 per cent., cost of management	19,055 64
	$ 298,538 45
	$ 925,625 40
Quebec's proportion, according to population of 1881	$ 383,257 82
Total	$ 387,805 73
Surplus of assets after deducting liabilities presently payable	$6,734,649 85
Subsidy	$1,196,872 80
Interest on capital held and debts due by the Dominion to Ontario	279,111 10
Interest on investments	50,000 00
	$ 329,111 10
Crown Lands Department—
Crown Lands	$ 83 000 00
Clergy Lands	5,000 00
Common School Lands	10,000 00
Grammar School Lands	2,000 00
Woods and Forests	1,000,000 00
	$ 1,100,000 00
Public Institutions—
Toronto Lunatic Asylum	$ 38,500 00
London " "	10,000 00
Kingston " "	3,500 00
Hamilton " "	7,000 00
Orillia " "	1,400 00
Reformatory for Females	4,000 00
Reformatory for Boys	700 00
Central Prison	32,000 00
Deaf and Dumb Institute	150 00
	$ 97,250 00
Education Department	22,000 00
Casual revenue	34,000 00
Licenses	260,000 00
Law stamps	75,000 00
Algoma taxes	3,000 00
Drainage assessment	20,000 00
Municipal Loan Fund	850 00
Toronto Asylum lands	185,000 00
Insurance Companies' assessments.	3,000 00
Assessment of counties re removal of lunatics	6,000 00
Total	$3,332,083 90

The following Bills were introduced and read the first time:

Mr. Mowat—Respecting the limited liabilities of incorporated companies; also respecting oaths under the Manhood Suffrage Act; also respecting certain matters under the Land Titles Act; also respecting registry offices.

Mr. Gibson (Huron), in moving for a return of copies of all correspondence relating to the Land Improvement Fund between the Governments of Ontario and Quebec, said many townships in his constituency were waiting the payment of these moneys from the fund, and as they had waited thirty years for a settlement, he suggested that a suit be brought against the Dominion Government so as to expedite affairs.

Mr. Mowat said it was a debateable question whether these moneys belonged to the Province. There had been no authoritative decision on this point. A suit would be a good way to bring about a decision, and one could be instituted against the Dominion, which would in that case represent Quebec. Until the right of the Province to the fund was established, the Government could not make any advances to the municipalities.

Mr. Meredith said the delay was a very serious one, and if the Government had paid as much attention to this matter as they had to the dry husks of the Inter-Provincial resolutions, more practical benefit would have been derived. Had the compact then entered into between the two Provinces already been broken? The twain had then been locked in each other's arms in unity, yet, although so much money had been expended in bringing about such cordial relations, Ontario still could not get her rights from Quebec.

Mr. O'Connor thought the Government should bring this matter to an issue. The matter was one of vital importance to the people of Western Ontario.

Mr. Ross (Huron) said the Government had been very urgent in pressing the claims of the municipalities. So far as Ontario was concerned the Government had always carried out the agreement with the settlers.

Mr. Creighton also expressed the hope that the matter would be pressed by the Government.

Mr. Blyth complained bitterly of the delay in settling with the municipalities.

The motion was adopted.

On the order for the second reading of the Bill to amend the Assessment Act (Mr. O'Connor),

Mr. Meredith pointed out that the objection to the Bill, which gave the smaller municipalities power to conduct their own sale of land for taxes, was that they had no means for preserving the evidences of title like the county towns.

Mr. Ross (Huron) thought that many evils would result from the practice recommended by the Bill. Under the present system there was more competition in the sales of lands held by the County Treasurer.

Mr. Balfour said that the present system enabled speculators to get rich at the expense of the people. The lands were often advertised in some obscure paper; the people from the locality concerned often knew nothing about it, and did not attend. The speculators attended, clubbed together, and bought it at their own prices.

Mr. Wood supported the Act. He agreed with Mr. Balfour that the sales should be held in the townships. In his township it would be almost impossible for people living in the outlying municipalities to attend these sales owing to the expense of travel.

Mr. Dack supported the Bill.

Mr. Phelps said he represented a county where there was more land sold in this way than in any other county in Ontario. Many hardships were entailed under the present Act.

The Bill was read a second time and referred to the Municipal Committee.

Mr. Waters moved the second reading of the Bill for the abolition of assessment on personal property.

Mr. Fraser suggested that all the Bills dealing with the vital question of assessment be taken up together one day, and passed upon by the House before being referred to the Municipal Committee.

Mr. Meredith agreed with the hon. gentleman.

Mr. Waters agreed to withdraw the motion for the second reading.

Mr. Bishop moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Act respecting insurance companies. The Bill proposed to permit fire insurance companies to contract for any term not exceeding five years.

Mr. Gibson (Huron) supported the Bill, but suggested that the terms should be three and five years, so as not to confuse the inspector.

Mr. Gibson (Hamilton) said that the Bill was opposed by insurance companies and associations. It was desirable that there should be uniformity in the term of insurance.

The Bill was read the second time.

The following Bills were read the second time:

To amend the Act respecting the establishment of municipal institutions in the Districts of Algoma, Muskoka, Parry Sound, Manitoulin, Nipissing, Thunder Bay and Rainy River—Mr. Lyon.

To amend the Municipal Act—Mr. Ferguson.

To amend the Municipal Act—Mr. O'Connor.

Causes for Divorce in the States.

"Attempt on life," in Illinois.

"Fugitive from justice," in Virginia.

"Ungovernable temper," in Kentucky.

"Parties can not live in peace and union," in Utah.

"Any gross neglect of duty," in Kansas and Ohio.

"Mental incapacity at time of marriage," in Georgia.

Wilful desertion for five years is a cause in two States.

"Gross misbehavior or wickedness," in Rhode Island.

Fraud and fraudulent contract is a cause in nine States.

Imprisonment for felony is a cause in all States except ten.

"Refusal of wife to remove into the State," in Tennessee.

Absence without being heard from is a cause in several States.

Wilful desertion for three years is a cause in fourteen States.

Physical inability is a cause in all States and Territories except ten.

Wilful desertion for one year is a cause in fifteen States and Territories.

"Habitual indulgence in violent and ungovernable temper," in Florida.

Habitual drunkenness is a cause in all States and Territories except ten.

Settled aversion, which tends to destroy all peace and happiness, in Kentucky.

"Husband notoriously immoral before marriage, unknown to wife," in West Virginia.

"Three years with any religious society that believes the marriage relation unlawful," in Massachusetts.

"Joining any religious sect that believes marriage unlawful, and refusing to cohabit six months," in Hampshire.

"Such indignities as render life burdensome," in Missouri, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Washington Territory and Wyoming.

The violation of the marriage vow a cause for absolute divorce excepting in South Carolina and New Mexico, which have no divorce laws.

"Cruel treatment, outrages or excesses such as to render their living together insupportable," in Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, Tennessee and Texas.

Cruel and abusive treatment is a cause in all States and Territories except New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

Failure of the husband to provide, no time specified, is a cause in nine States, for one year it is a cause in five States, and for two years it is all that is necessary in two States.

Templar Union.

Bro. Thomas Lawless, Grand Secretary of the Independent Order of Good Templars, has returned from London. In conversation he stated that the executives of the Royal Templars and the Independent Order devoted several hours to a discussion of the question of Union, for a long time almost hopeless of results. Finally the following basis of union, moved by Bro. Thos. Lawless and seconded by Dr. Oronhyatekha was adopted by a vote of 8 to 4:

First—That the first or Templar degree of the I.O.G.T. and the first or Royal degree of the R. T. of T. be united for the prosecution of temperance missionary work, adopting the name, ritual and organic form of the Good Templars.

Second—That the benefit department of the I. O. G. T. be united with the Select degree of the Royal Templars, adopting the name, ritual and methods of that body as far as practicable.

Third—That the Knight Templars of Temperance be a part of the united body, and preserve so far as possible the present name, form and ceremonies.

Fourth—That membership in the I. O. G. T. be essential to admission to and continuance of membership in the second and third bodies.

Fifth—That each of the organizations retain its own officers and continue to be governed by its own laws.

Sixth—That the Dominion Council of the R. T. of T. shall be the supreme governing body of the benefit and knight degrees and occupy the position of a Worthy Grand Lodge.

All the I. O. G. T. representatives and three of the eight R. T. of T. voted for the motion. W. W. Buchanan presided.

Letting Bad Enough Alone.

Exceedingly Long Patient—"I say, doctor, are you going to put that mustard plaster on my feet to draw the pain from my head?"

Doctor—"Yes. Why?"

Exceedingly Long Patient—"Well, I bject. I'd rather have it where it is than rawn down through six feet and five inches of new territory."

Mr. Cameron, train-master at Rat Portage, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Moosejaw division of the Canadian Pacific.

The Devil.

Men don't believe in the devil now as their fathers used to do
They've forced the door of the broadest creed to let his majesty through;
There isn't a print of his cloven foot or a fiery dart from his brow
To be found in earth or air to-day, for the world has voted so.
But who is mixing the fatal draught that palsies heart and brain,
And loads the earth of each passing year with ten hundred thousand slain?
Who blights the bloom of the land to-day with the fiery breath of hell,
If the devil isn't and never was? Won't somebody rise and tell?
Who dogs the steps of the toiling saint, and digs the pits for his feet?
Who sows the tares in the field of time whenever God sows His wheat?
The devil is voted not to be, and of course the thing is true;
But who is doing the kind of work the devil alone should do?
We are told he is not going about as a roaring lion now;
But whom shall we hold responsible for the everlasting row
To be heard in home, in church, in state, to the earth's remotest bound,
If the devil, by a unanimous vote, is nowhere to be found?
Won't somebody step to the front forthwith and make his bow and show
How the fraud and the crimes of the day spring up, for surely we want to know?
The devil was fairly voted out, and of course the devil is gone,
But simple people would like to know who carries his business on.

—Atlanta Journal.

The Conqueror Conquered.

In southern archipelagoes he'd fought the bloody cannibal;
He'd skinned and tanned the crocodile and found him very tanable;
Not a word of fear he'd uttered, not a word and not a syllable,
When he killed the Bengal tiger, and he found him very killable.

He claimed his strength was very great, for bears and lions suitable;
He used to boot the grizzly bear, and found him very bootable;
He claimed in killing monstrous snakes that he was very capable,
No boa-constrictor could escape, for he was unescapable.

In fighting hippopotami he said he was invincible,
No jaguar could make him wince, because he wasn't wincable;
He made the ramping elephant no longer recognizable,
And pulverized the roaring bull, and found him pulverizable.

Just then his wife came in and said, "I'd think it quite commendable,
If you'd come and 'tend the baby; and you'll find him very tendable."
The way she took him by the ear will make this poem readable;
She pulled him out and led him home, and found him very leadable.

THE TYPEWRITER GIRL.

She May Be Slow, But She Generally Comprehends the Situation.

The typewriter girl may sometimes be a little slow, but generally comprehends the situation with neatness and despatch. The Chicago News tells this story:

"Darling Bessie," said Mr. Hoover to his lady typewriter, "will you marry me? Since you have come like a gleam of sunshine to gladden my existence I have lived in a radiant light of your ethereal presence and passionately—"

"Please speak a little slower, Mr. Hoover," said the fair typewriter, interrupting him, while her fingers continued to fly over the keys of her machine. "'Ethereal—presence—passionately.' Now I am ready to proceed."

"Great Scott! Miss Caramel," exclaimed her employer, "you are not taking down my offer of marriage on that infernal typewriter, are you?"

"A proposal," shrieked Miss Caramel. "Why, so it is. I didn't notice. I thought you were dictating. Forgive me, dear William. I am yours. And now, since I have made this foolish blunder, please sign this paper and I will keep it as a memento."

The marriage took place according to contract.

Huxley is a Medium.

Prof. Huxley tells the world, through the Pall Mall Gazette, what he knows about spiritism. He visited a talented American woman who was a medium, and at first was much impressed with the facility with which she rapped out messages. Summoning his proverbial skepticism to his aid, he redoubled his vigilance, and soon made up his mind that the rapping was done by means of the toe. By patient cultivation of the second toe of each foot, he soon had two light fantastic toes of his own, and soon became a sort of bright rapper himself, and while standing with a group of persons in a parlor had no difficulty in making them believe that the sounds proceeded from all parts of the room. His experience is curiously in line with the revelations made by Miss Fox and Mr. Bishop.

A Horrifying Blunder.

Mrs. De Pink—"Oh! Oh! Oh! I shall go distracted."

Mr. De Pink (springing to her side)—"Merciful heavens! What has happened?"

"The washerwoman has made a mistake and sent me one of Mrs. Westend's lace handkerchiefs."

"Well, what of it?"

"What of it? What of it? Oh you—you——Why, Mrs. Westend must have received my miserably cheap, imitation lace handkerchief, and it has my name on it."

No Painful Contrasts.

Rosalie—"Did you have a nice time at Mrs. Ferguson's the other evening?"

Mabel—"Oh, delightful! But such awfully homely girls as there were there."

Rosalie—"So Mr. Summerly was telling me; he said there wasn't a decent-looking one in the room."

He Had Been.

They were talking about confidence men and relating their experiences, when one of the group turned to the major and asked

"Major, were you ever confidenced?"

"I was," he promptly replied.

"Where?"

"In Chicago."

"When?"

"When I married my second wife."

He Wanted No Credit.

Clerk (calling boy)—Cash!

Countryman—Great turnips, can't you give me time to get my pocketbook out? I don't want no credit? I don't! I am going to pay you cash as soon as I can get at it!

In Furrin' Parts.

Lady—I want a lined cloak, if you please.

Furrier—Yes, Madam. What fur?

Lady—How stupid! Why, to keep me warm, of course.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Mr. Bernard, the newly-elected member for Cariboo, was introduced and took his seat.

Sir Hector Langevin presented the annual report of the Department of State.

Mr. Ellis introduced a Bill to authorize the assessment of the salaries on incomes of persons in the service of Canada. He explained that the object of the Bill was to provide that in places where assessments were levied upon salaries or incomes for municipal or school purposes, the law shall include civil servants.

The Bill was read a first time.

Mr. Bowell, in answer to an inquiry from Mr. Choquette, said that the cost of the preparation of the electoral lists up to the time when the Government Printing Bureau assumed control was $414,574; and the cost since that time had been $21,502. The value of the plant acquired in the bureau was $63,849.

Sir Adolphe Caron, in answer to an inquiry from Mr. Platt, said the Government had agreed to purchase a house in Kingston for the use of the Commandant of the Royal Military College. The price to be paid was $12,500. The house was distant about 2,000 yards from the college.

Mr. Haggart, in answer to an inquiry from Mr. Therien, said it was not the intention of the Government to reduce the rate of postage on letters.

Mr. Bain (Wentworth), in moving for returns respecting the condition and ownership of the Dundas & Waterloo road, called attention to the injury which is being done to traffic in his constituency through the road not being kept in a proper condition, owing to the Government not giving the owner authority to put in checkgates.

Sir Hector Langevin replied that the Government were at present having the ownership investigated, and when that point was settled there would be no more cause for complaint.

Mr. Mulock moved that the House do resolve itself into a committee of the whole to consider the following resolution: That it is expedient to remove the duty on artificial fertilizers and to place them on the free list. He said that under the present duty of 20 per cent. the farmers of Canada were prevented from using artificial fertilizers. When in 1887 it was proposed by the Government to change the duty to a specific one, it was proposed that fertilizers should be placed on the free list. The result was that the Minister of Finance withdrew his motion, and the duty remained the same. The time had now arrived when it was the duty of the House to consider whether it was not in the interests of the Canadian farmer that this tax should be removed. It was a direct burden upon the farmer, and was wholly indefensible as a matter of political economy.

The following Bills were introduced:

A Bill to incorporate the Assets & Debenture Company of Canada—Mr. Edgar.

A Bill to incorporate the Ottawa & Montreal Boom Company—Mr. Girouard.

A Bill to incorporate the Dominion Life Assurance Company—Mr. Trow.

A Bill to incorporate the Assiniboine & Edmonton Railway—Mr. Dawson.

A Bill amending the Act incorporating the Boiler Inspection Insurance Companies of Canada—Mr. Brown.

On motion by Mr. Foster that the House go into Committee of Supply,

Mr. Mills (Bothwell) drew attention to the fact that the Minister of Finance, in laying the estimates before the House, had not moved that they be referred to the Committee of Supply.

The Speaker said the motion had been entered in the votes and proceedings by the Clerk, pro forma, and hoped the House would adhere to the rules more strictly in future.

The House then resolved itself into a Committee of Supply.

On the item for Customs,

Mr. Charlton referred to the large number of Customs officials who receive large sums from fines from seizures in addition to their salaries. The system of allowing officers of the department to participate in the profits from seizures was, he believed, a vicious one, and one calculated to disturb trade and inflict great hardship on importers.

Mr. Ferguson (Welland) concurred entirely in the remarks of the last speaker. In his own county Customs officers had pocketed as high as $1,100 in a year from seizures, and subjected in many cases merchants to the inconvenience of a search where there was not the slightest ground for suspicion.

On the items for the Post-office Department,

Mr. Mitchell inquired whether or not the Government intended to reduce the rate of postage to two cents for the half ounce?

Mr. Haggart said such a change was not at present contemplated.

Mr. Bain inquired if the Government had considered the feasibility of increasing the weight of letters to be carried for three cents from half an ounce to one ounce?

Mr. Haggart said he intended bringing in a Bill during the present session, involving a number of changes in Post-office regulations, of which that mentioned by the hon. gentleman would be one.

Mr. Burdett suggested that insufficiently prepaid letters, where the name of the sender appears on the envelope, should be returned for full postage instead of being sent to the dead letter office.

Mr. Haggart said instructions to this effect had already been issued to most of the city postmasters.

The item passed.

Sir John Thompson, in answer to inquiries from Mr. Barron, said the Jesuits' Estates Bill had been before the Government for consideration, and the Minister of Justice had on the 16th ult. reported to His Excellency recommending that this Act, along with 112 others passed by the Quebec Legislature at the same session, should go into operation. The report was approved on the 19th ult., and the result was at once communicated to the Government of Quebec. The Acts passed by the Legislature of Quebec were received by the Secretary of State on August 8th last.

Sir Hector Langevin, in answer to an inquiry from Mr. Burdett, said he would have to wait until the supplementary estimates came down, when he would learn whether or not the Government intended granting any sum to aid in the construction of a drill shed at Belleville.

Mr. Denison, in moving for a select committee to inquire into the desirability of the Government acquiring all electric telegraph lines in Canada, said he had laid the matter fully before the House last session, and would briefly renew his argument in favor of it. He had pointed out on that occasion that nearly every country in the world except Canada and the United States had acquired the telegraph lines. In France, Austria, Germany, Switzerland and nearly all over Europe the telegraph lines were assumed by the respective Governments more than twenty years ago. A young country like Canada should not be behind the world, and it was time we were taking some steps to control the lines in our country. No doubt it would involve a large outlay of money, but he did not see why the telegraph lines should not be managed as well by the Government as by private companies. Already the Government owned lines in the Northwest Territory and Eastern Provinces. These lines were built in sparsely settled districts, where there were no private lines. If it was a good thing for the Government to own such unproductive lines, it would be a much better investment to control those which pass through thickly populated districts. The Government could borrow money at a lower rate of interest than could a private company, and would no doubt receive sufficient revenue to repay the investment. It was a strange thing that the leading lines of the Dominion should be controlled by a person living outside of Canada, who was thus able to form, or apparently form, public opinion in this country. In support of this he instanced Mr. Wiman's despatch to the Canadian press. This showed that a dangerous power was placed in the hands of a foreign company. He thought the time was drawing near when the Government should be in a position to assume the control of the telegraph lines.

Sir Hector Langevin replied that the time had not yet come for the Government to purchase the telegraph lines. Besides the telegraph companies there were railways possessing lines, and he hardly thought they could be taken over. The assumption of lines would require a very large sum, much larger than people were at present willing to invest in that direction. The hon. gentleman had said these lines would return a good revenue, but it was well known that large undertakings in the hands of a private corporation always gave a better revenue than when in the hands of the Government. Besides, it was well known that at that time politics ran high in this country. He feared that if the Government worked the lines the Opposition would have very little confidence in the secrecy of their election despatches. He asked the member for West Toronto to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Denison withdrew his motion.

Mr. Jamieson moved that, in the opinion of this House, it is expedient to prohibit the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors, except for sacramental, medicinal, scientific and mechanical purposes. That the enforcement of such prohibition and such manufacture, importation and sale as may be allowed shall be by the Dominion Government through specially appointed officers. He quoted statistics to prove that there had been a decrease of crime under the Canada Temperance Act. If local option had had a salutary effect, he contended that general prohibition would be equally, if not more, satisfactory. The morals of the people and the happiness of the people would both be promoted by prohibition. As he was exceedingly anxious to reach a division, he curtailed his remarks and trusted the resolution would receive a much larger support than formerly.

Mr. Wood (Brockville) moved in amendment that all the words after the word "purposes" be omitted, and the following substituted: "When the public sentiment of the country is ripe for the reception and enforcement of such a measure of prohibition."

Mr. Taylor moved in amendment to the amendment that all the words after the word "purposes" be struck out, and the following substituted: "If it be found on the vote of the qualified electors of the Dominion having first been taken that the majority thereof are in favor of a prohibitory law, which shall also make full provision for compensating those engaged in the manufacture of such liquor."

Mr. Fisher said there might be good grounds for asking that prohibition be submitted to the people apart from every other question. He could not accept the amendment to the amendment, however, because it asserted the principle of compensation. He did not think the adoption of the amendment would be any aid to the temperance cause. He thought that the true friends of prohibition would support the original resolution.

Mr. Mitchell moved the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Landerkin moved, That whereas distillers are allowed a rebate of duty upon corn imported for use in the manufacture of spirits for export, it is, in the opinion of this House, but just and right that farmers and stock raisers, who import corn to feed cattle or other stock for export, should also receive a similar rebate. He held this was a matter of justice to the farmers, who were suffering from the present discrimination against them.

Accidents Will Happen.

Miss Gushington—I admit, Arthur, that this is not the first time I have been engaged but I'm sure your noble, generous heart—

Little Brother—Sis, the baby's got your bag of engagement rings.

Sauce for the Goose.

He—I am going out, dear, to see a friend

She—Well, I'll go with you. I'm thirsty too.

A Pekin weekly newspaper has just finished a serial story which contained 2,040 chapters. You get the worth of your money in China.

An Atchison woman with a family girls raised them up with the fixed determination that not one of them should ever marry a Missourian, a Democrat or a man named John, and the very first one to married all three.—Kansas City Times.

A French physician claims to give an antidote which will forever prevent people from catching cold, but the law is going to investigate him.

Of 26,000 criminals arrested in Paris 16,000 had not attained the age of 20.

BEARDS LONG AGO.

A Point Made to Favor the Wearer Who Encountered an Enemy.

Our Saxon ancestors delighted in wearing long, forked beards; the Normans, on the contrary, at the period of the conquest, not only shaved their chins but also the back of their heads. They had not, however, been long established in England before they permitted their beards to grow to extravagant dimensions. Long beards were also in fashion in the reign of Richard I., and continued so until the time of Henry IV., after whose reign they grew fine by degrees and beautifully less, until a beard was as rare as the dodo. But the reformation came to the rescue of the beard and in this way: After the separation of the Greek and Latin churches the practice of shaving became a religious duty among the Roman ecclesiastics, by way of opposition to the Greeks, who to this day have continued to pay reverence to a well clad chin and are greatly shocked by the beardless images of saints in the Latin churches. The shaving of the chin by the clergy was imperatively commanded by various statutes in the Romish church. By the monastic laws the lay monks were commanded to let their beards grow and only the priests to shave; and a writer previous to the reformation complains that the manners of the clergy had become so corrupt that they could not be distinguished from the laity by their actions, but only by their lack of beards. Consequently the early reformers suffered their beards to grow to distinguish them from the adherents to Rome; and the reformation becoming general in England, the beard by this means came into fashion.

As to the shapes of the beard worn by our forefathers, they seem to have been of infinite variety. At a period when almost all men wore swords and those weapons were frequently drawn to decide very trifling quarrels, a beard cut to look terrible to an enemy was probably no small advantage to the wearer.—London Standard.

Temperance Notes.

From the Philadelphia Times we learn that in all the lithographic establishments of the country where the work is mainly done by German workingmen, a stipulation requires the proprietors to furnish beer as a part of the employees' wages. In the mammoth lithographic department of Judge in New York city, where 600 men are employed, each one receives under the terms of contract with his employer three pints of beer a day, more than seven barrels being consumed in the department daily.

"I dread the white man's drink more than all the arrows of the Matabele," is the sentiment of a South African Chief; and the Emir of Bokhara, in his treaty with the Russians, has set us a notable example, for whilst he accords free introduction of all other Russian commerce, he strictly prohibits intoxicating liquors. Some painful figures have just been published about the ravages of drink in Belgium, and these are very much traced to the absence of proper licensing laws, and to the facility with which public-houses can in that kingdom be kept open until 2 o'clock in the morning, or, for the matter of that, all the night through. The condition of affairs is such that neither political party dare touch it—it would lose them an election. The remedy will have to be sought in a patriotic union of all parties.—The Rock.

'The Economic Argument" for prohibition is forcibly presented by the Rev. J. C. Fernald in last week's Voice. We make the following quotation: "Three-fourths of the 8,000 saloons in New York city are kept by foreigners. The saloons of the United States average a yearly income of $4,500 each. At this rate the foreigners' three-fourths of New York's saloons take in $27,000,000 every year. It ought not to be a very hard matter to convince the level-headed merchants of the metropolis that it does not pay to let 6 000 foreigners levy an annual tribute of $27,000,000 upon the city. They will see it quickly enough if they can be got to think about it. As yet very little has been done to lead them to consider the temperance question upon the commercial side. They have looked upon it as a 'moral issue' which 'practical men' were too busy to attend to." * * "The temperance battle of the near future must be fought on the commercial and economic ground."

The Light of Home.

A cheerful, healthy woman is the light of home, but through over-exertion in her efforts to minister to the happiness of the household, her health is often impaired or weakness, or displacement brought on, making life miserable, and clouding an otherwise happy home with gloom. The thoughtful and tender husband, in such cases, should be intelligent enough to perceive the cause of such gloom and suffering, relieve the faithful wife from drudgery, and furnish her with that best of friends to women, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, now recognized and used in thousands of homes as a certain cure for all those delicate afflictions peculiar to the female sex. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggist, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Something of Real Interest.

Bride of a day (to her husband, who is doing his best to entertain her on the train)—Do stop talking a little while, John.

John (tenderly)—What is the matter, dear; are you nervous?

Bride—No, but I want to hear what the women are saying in the seat behind us.

The Marriage is Off.

Raker (to Miss Brown, who is aged thirty-seven and as rich as she is not lovely)—Miss Eva, I love you, I adore you! Will you be mine?

Miss Eva (blushing)—Yes.

Raker—Oh, you dear old girl!

To Cure Frost Bites.

A splendid cure for frost bites is a solution of alum and water, strong as can be made. Hold the frosted flesh in the solution till the frost is drawn out. This you will know easily, as the flesh will look wrinkled as one's hands do on wash days. You will feel no more inconvenience from that frost bite.

GOLD FOR EVERYBODY.

The Latest Swindle Was in Boston and Is Here Described.

The city of Boston is just now being treated to a return to the days of alchemy more wonderful than when Dr. Faustus, surrounded by test tubes and crucibles, was visited by his satanic majesty. There are H. E. Butler and Charles Henry Washburne and others who propose to make all the precious metals out of dirt, and as for jewels, there will hereafter, according to these wizards, be no reason why every woman in the world shouldn't have diamond earrings and other ornaments composed of precious stones. They propose to build a college which shall be a temple to the new science and where experiments can be carried on. They issued a circular or "call to the awakened" to send in their contributions to Butler in order that the gentleman may proceed to build an "esoteric college" on the Pacific coast. This college is to be devoted to soul culture. There will be a colony of esoterics who will be endowed with miraculous powers. Those who invest are to be the possessors of untold millions. The call is issued in pamphlet form and occupies 200 pages. The reader is informed of the existence of a wonderful society called the G. N. K. R., or the "Genii of Nations, Knowledge and Religions." The secrets committed to this society are all to be revealed in Boston, and Butler to be the medium. The principal theosophs of Boston first got the circular and copies were sent through the country to those who were in favor of theosophy. Then Professor Butler quietly waited for contributions. Now the newspapers have got hold of the matter, and the great scheme seems doomed.

Prof. Huxley on the Morals of Health.

Prof. Huxley has predicted that the time will come when it will be a reproach to be sick. When one friend meets another he will as soon ask "Are you honest?" as "Are you well?" for a man will be considered foolish, not to say criminal, who gets sick. Such a state of public feeling will some time be brought about. Certainly it is true that the morals of health are receiving more and more attention. A greatly increasing number of people every year prevent the develpment of all blood, pulmonary and liver diseases. This is proved by the enormously increased use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which nips all such ailments in the bud.

A Reasonable Request,

Emily—Dear Charles, I saw a diamond ring yesterday. It is perfectly heavenly. Can't you buy it for me?

Charles—Perfectly heavenly, is it? Say, Emily, why don't you wish for something earthly?

"Man wants but little here below." This is particularly true of medicine, and he really needs a very small amount, provided it be of the right kind. Dr. Pierce's Pellets fill the bill in respect of size, and are stupendous in point of effectiveness. If you desire immediate relief from headache, "liver complaint," indigestion, and constipation, they will not fail you.

Fasting Extraordinary.

An interesting story is published in the French papers, which, if true, certainly reveals a most extraordinary case. A young lady named Josephine Bedard, belonging to Tingwich, in the Eastern Townships of Quebec, was taken sick in 1881 with an attack of diphtheria, from which she was dangerously ill for some time. She finally recovered, but since then is reported not to have eaten a bite of food, but has lived for 2,550 days entirely on water, having no desire for food of any kind. She is said to be in perfect health.

LAST year, notwithstanding the duty, the United States took 99,858 bushels of potatoes from Manitoba alone. Reciprocal trade would be a great boon to the Manitobans, as well as to the people of Ontario and the Lower Provinces.

VASELINE PREPARATIONS.

On receipt of postage stamps we will send free by mail the following splendid articles:
One Box of Pure Vaseline - - - 10 cents.
One Box of Vaseline Camphor Ice 15 cents.
One Box of Vaseline Cold Cream 15 cents.
No Vaseline is genuine unless our name is on the label. CHESEBROUGH MANUF'G CO., 24 State St. NEW YORK.

MERCHANTS, BUTCHERS AND TRADERS generally

We want a GOOD MAN in your locality to pick up

CALF SKINS

for us. Cash Furnished on satisfactory guaranty Address, C. S. PAGE, Hyde Park, Vermont, U. S

The Shoe & Leather Reporter, N. Y., and Shoe & Leather Review, Chicago, the leading trade papers of the U.S. in the Hide line, have sent their representatives to investigate Mr. Page's business, and after a thorough examination and comparison the Reporter gives him this endorsement

"We believe that in extent of light-weight raw material collected and carried, Mr. Page holds the lead of any competitor and that his present stock is the largest held by any house in this country."

And the Review says:

"After a most thorough investigation of Mr Page's business as compared with others in same line, we have become fully satisfied that in its specialty, light-weight stock, he is unquestionably the largest dealer in this country, while in superiority of quality he is confessedly at the head."

QUERY: If Mr. Page's business is the largest in its line in the United States, is it not the best possible proof of his ability to pay highest prices? If he did not do so, would he naturally get more Skins than any of his competitors in the same line?

DON t, 9 89.

SALESMEN

We wish a few men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale and retail trade. Largest manufacturers in our line. Enclose 2-cent stamp Wages $3 per day. Permanent position. No postals answered. Money advanced for wages advertising, etc. Centennial Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER

THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

DON'T FORGET

To call at URLIN BROS'. and try their Teas and Coffees.

We have the best and most complete stock of groceries in the West.

Our stock of China Tea Sets, Dinner Sets, Bedroom Sets, Glassware, Lamps and Fancy China Ware will be found very cheap.

A large and well-assorted stock of Hardware always kept on hand. We offer big bargains in Axes, Cross-cut Saws, Cow Ties, Table Cutlery and Tinware.

We are offering the best value in all kinds of Boots and Shoes ever shown. Call and see for yourselves.

We pay the highest price for produce of all kinds.

URLIN BROS., DUTTON.

The Dutton Enterprise.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1889.

DUTTON AND VICINITY.

W. Rothwell, jr., of Rochester, is home on a visit.

John Forsyth paid in $51.10 to the Scott Act fund on Monday.

Purest vaccine points for sale at R. A. Kirkland's drug store, Dutton.

Hockin & Pool have purchased the Oscar Ecker property south of the railway.

There is no truth in the report that there was a case of small-pox at Coyne's Corners.

Mrs. Mills and child, of St. Thomas, are the guests of Mrs. A. N. C. Black this week.

Saturday night was the coldest this winter, the thermometer registering 21° below zero.

Samuel Anderson, of Cowal, left on Tuesday for an extended trip to Port Huron and other points west.

Wheat is scarce at present, the mills being unable to secure enough to fill orders. $1 per bushel is the ruling price.

A letter from "Vortex" on the High School, and other interesting matter was crowded out of this issue, but will appear next week.

The Dutton ENTERPISE has been enlarged, and otherwise shows signs of improvement under the new management.—Tilsonburg Liberal.

The rumor that there was a case of small-pox in Mr. J. McIntyre's hotel is without foundation, as there is not a case in the village.

The Alvinston Free Press has invested in a new power press. We are glad to hear of your prosperity brother Mott, and hope it may continue.

D. Turner, chairman of the Southwold Board of Health, has issued orders that all residents of the township must be vaccinated by Saturday next.

The Southwold Board of Health has cut off communication between Fingal and surrounding districts, fences being erected across the thoroughfares.

A large Imperial Federation meeting in St. Thomas Friday night was addressed by Mr. Parkin, of New Brunswick, and Mr. E. E. Sheppard, of Toronto.

Dutton has only one hotel left now, three having been burned down within the last three years. Two large brick hotels will probably be erected next year.

Service in the Methodist Church next Sabbath morning by Mr. Litchfield, and in the eveing Mr. Middleton's subject will be "The King, the Witch and the Ghost."

The county selectors of jurors met at St. Thomas, Saturday, to select grand and petit jurors for the spring assizes, which open Monday, April 1st, before Justice Street.

The markets reports given in the ENTERPRISE from week to week can be relied upon as being truthful, as they are corrected up to the hour of going to press from reliable sources.

The meeting of the West Elgin Farmers' Institute, which was to have been held at West Lorne on Saturday, has been cancelled by order of the President on account of the small-pox.

A tramp went around Dresden the other day collecting all the clothes wringers he could for the purpose of repairing them. That was the last seen of either tramp or clothes wringers.

At the meeting of Court Nelson, I. O. F., on Tueday evening, a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks was tendered Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Middleton for the handsome banner presented by them to the Court.

The Dutton Gun Club held its annual meeting on Friday evening last, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, A. N. C. Black; captain, Wm. Eustice; secretary-treasurer, Wm. Hollingshead.

The body of Richard Trevethick, of London East, was found on the L. & P. S. railway track near Glanworth, on Tuesday morning. The young man was insane, and it is supposed that he had wandered from his home during the night and was frozen to death. When found the body had no clothing on whatever, except pants and socks. An inquest will be held.

On every side we hear congratulations on the handsome appearance of the ENTERPRISE in its new form. The change has been made necessary on account of the large increase in advertising patronage and will be permanent.

MARKETS.—Wheat 95c. to $1, oats 28c. to 30c., pease 50c. to 52c., barley 40c., pork $5.75 to $6, butter scarce at 20c., eggs 13c., lard 12½c., tallow 5c., dried apples 75c. per bushel, potatoes 25c. per bushel, turnips 25c. per bushel.

Last Tuesday representatives from the Presbyterian congregation of Mosa made Rev. D. Currie, of Glencoe, the recipient of a handsome study lounge in recognition of his services as Moderator of Session during their recent vacancy.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Middleton, of the Methodist Church here, have presented Court Nelson, I. O. F., with a handsome banner. The banner is a fine work of art, and may be seen in the window of W. H. Nelson's jewelry store.

Prof. Brush, who was billed to give a lecture on training horses) at the Nelson House, Tuesday night, and who came from Fingal, was peremptorily forbidden to stay in town on his arrival, and was told to dust immediately. He accordingly dusted.

Dan. DeCew, of Middlemiss, was on Friday committed for trial at St. Thomas on a charge of having added the words 'with interest at 8 per cent.' to a note for $120, made by Emerson Walker and Larflett Walker. He was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,200.

A strong protest against the Anti-Scott Act petition has been prepared by the Middlesex branch of the Canada Temperance Alliance to be forwarded to Ottawa. It seems that 275 names are in one man's handwriting and that dead men and absentees figure largely on the lists.

Considerable talk has been indulged in about persons coming into town from the neighborhood of Fingal, who were known to have visited the houses of persons who died from small-pox. Persons should be careful about such matters, if not for their own sakes, for the sake of others.

Mr. T. Hockin, of Hockin & Pool, is in Toronto this week purchasing goods for the spring trade. This firm intends to fully maintain its reputation this year for giving the best goods at the lowest prices and it will well repay you to call. Read their announcement in another column.

On an order from the Court, Mr. A. N. C. Black has removed the Division Court office from West Lorne to Dutton, where it will be located until the small-pox dies out of the former place. The Division Court set to be held at West Lorne on April 4 has been cancelled by order of the Judge.

Messrs. Hockin & Pool have re-engaged Miss Johnston, of Dresden, to manage their millinery department this season. She is at present on a trip east to secure the latest styles and novelties in spring headgear. The universal satisfaction which she gave last season ensures a return of all her old customers.

Miss Carrie Parker, who was working at the Commercial Hotel for some time past, had her feet badly frozen the night of the fire. She had retired for the night when the fire broke out and did not dress sufficiently to protect her from the bitter cold to which she was exposed for fully two hours. She is now recovering.

Mr. A. N. Paterson is busy completing the assessment of the township and requests that all persons not property holders who wish to vote will send in their names to him at once. Under the new act any male over 21 years of age and a British subject is entitled to vote at elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, by taking a declaration to that effect.

A large congregation assembled in Knox Church Sunday evening to hear Rev. T. Wilson's address on the subject, "Was Adam the first man." The rev. gentleman dealt with the subject in an able manner, and his hearers could not fail to understand his arguments in favor of the belief that Adam was the first man. His subject for next Sunday evening will be "Was the flood local or universal."

A man at Allegheny sawed a slit two inches wide and five feet long in his parlor floor, rigged an iron grating so that it would shoot up through the slit on a spring being touched, and then invited Alice Bliss, a medium from Boston, to give a seance in his house. When he supposed the spirit of the "Little Daisy" had crossed the line, he touched the spring. But it turned out that the spirit was only half-way across and she received a tremendous thump. Miss Bliss is now nursing her injuries.

A meeting of the friends of the Methodist Church was called at the parsonage last Friday evening with a view to improve as much as possible the social life of the church, especially of the young people, and it was decided to hold such meetings once in two weeks in order to provide a place where the friends may meet for social intercourse and spend an evening pleasantly and profitably. Some time was spent in conversation, music, vocal and instrumental, was furnished by several who were present, readings and recitations were also given, and it was decided that another meeting should be held at Mr. Tremeer's in two weeks, when a debate will take place. A pleasant time was spent together, and the meeting broke up about ten o'clock.

TICKLING TORTURE.—Mrs. Henry M[illar], Kitchen, St. George, Ont., says: "I had a bad cold which settled in my throat, causing a continual tickling, and I just coughed all the time. I got Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam and in 3 days was getting better, and in 10 days I went to church. Our neighbors know this to be true.

The Dutton ENTERPRISE, which has been constantly improving under its new management, came out last week in a new dress and enlarged to eight pages, making it just such a local paper as the people of Dutton should take pride in supporting. Nothing tends so much to the up-building of a village as a newspaper which keeps local interests well before the outer world, and Dutton, now looked upon as the most progressive village in West Elgin, will no doubt acknowledge the claims of its newspaper by rendering it every aid possible.—Glencoe Transcript.

The Campbellton school house was crowded to the doors last Friday evening, the occasion being the closing entertainment of the Campbellton Literary and Debating Club. The best of order was maintained throughout, and a more successful entertainment could not be desired. The programme was excellent, all taking their parts well, and it would almost be unjust to give more praise to one than another, but the dialogue "Thompson & Co.," deserves special mention. The debate was lively and well argued on both sides and was decided in favor of the negative. Following we give the programme in full, as introduced by Jas. Pool, Esq., of Dutton, in his usual able and fluent manner:—Chairman's address; song and chorus, "Marching thro' Georgia;" a play, "Mechanical Statuary," by the juveniles; solo, W. W. Gordon, of Glencoe; recitation and reply, "Betsy and I are out," Peter McPherson and Miss B. Searle; music by the choir; debate, "Resolved that a Republican form of Government is preferable to a Monarchial," affirmative—D. K. McPherson and D. P. McPherson, negative—Ronald Walker and Alex. Thompson; music by the choir; recitation, Jas. McIntyre; solo, Miss Eva Searle; dialogue, Messrs. McPherson and Shaw; song and chorus, "The poor old tramp," James Kerr; solo, W. W. Gordon; recitation, Colin Johnston, of Ekfrid; music by the choir; dialogue, "Thompson & Co.;" solo, Miss Eva Searle; solo, W. W. Gordon.

Born.

On Feb. 11, the wife of A. J. Leitch, of a son.

Married.

PAGE—WILKIE.—On the 13th inst., at the Methodist Parsonage, West Lorne, by the Rev C. T. Scott, Mary Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. Frederick Page, of Dunwich, to Mr. Geo. Wilkie, of Dutton.

The CANADA PRESBYTERIAN marks the commencement of its eighteenth volume by an enlargement that must make this old established journal more than ever welcome to thousands of readers. The large addition to its size, and the high character of its correspondence, editorials and contributed articles cannot fail to add to the Presbyterian's already wide circulation and greatly extend its influence for good. "Knoxonian's" racy and able article, published every week, is alone worth the yearly subscription, which, notwithstanding the increase in size, remains at its old price, $2.00 per annum. The offer of a "Peerless" Bible as a premium to the getters up of a club, should be the means of enlisting a host of willing workers all over the country. Send to THE PRESBYTERIAN PRINTING AND PUBLISHING Co., 5 Jordan St., Toronto, for free specimen copy and circular.

NOTICE

Is hereby given to medical men and the public generally that all cases of contagious diseases in this Municipality are to be promptly reported to Mr. A. J. Leitch, Chairman of the Board of Health.

By order of the Board,

D. C. CLAY, Secretary.

COME

In and see the bargains we are offering in Plows from $12 to $65, complete; in Pumps from $6.50 to $17, complete; in Cutters from $12 to $65. complete.

AND

Examine our stock of Plow, Harrow, Rake, Drill, Cultivator, and other repairs which are kept constantly on hand

SEE

The bargains we offer in Buggies, Democrats and Sleighs.

US

And be convinced that we sell nothing but the best of Binders, Mowers, Harrows, Cultivators, Hay Forks, Slings and Load Lifters.

OUR SPECIALTIES

Are Binding Twine, Garden Seeds, Implements and Machine Oils.

SIFTON BROS.,

DUTTON.

DUNWICH PLANING FACTORY.

A. McWilliam, - Proprietor.

Having purchased the above factory from Mr. A. Gordon, I wish to state to those contemplating building that I am prepared to furnish

ROUGH & DRESSED LUMBER

(HARD AND SOFT WOOD)

Sash, Doors, Mouldings, and Everything pertaining to my line

AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES.

LIME, LATH AND SHINGLES KEPT ON HAND.

PLANING, MATCHING AND RE-SAWING DONE TO ORDER.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED

ANGUS McWILLIAM

THE BELL ORGANS AND PIANOS.

W. BELL & CO., GUELPH, ONT.

CALL AND SEE OUR STOCK OF INSTRUMENTS BEFORE BUYING.

THE BEST VALUE GUARANTEED.

A large stock of small instruments, viz:

VIOLINS, ACCORDEONS, HARMONICAS, &C., ALSO SHEET MUSIC.

We also keep in stock the best American Sewing Machine Oil, Needles and Repairs, at

J. M. JACKSON'S MUSIC EMPORIUM,

Opposite the Commercial Hotel, Main Street, Dutton.

AGENTS WANTED

IN EVERY PART OF

Dunwich, Southwold and Aldborough,

FOR

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE

The Best Local Paper in Elgin County.

We have the best facilities for doing all kinds of

FINE COMMERCIAL AND POSTER PRINTING

In the best style of the art.

Orders by Mail receive prompt and careful attention.

THE DUTTON ENTERPRISE.

VOL. 8—No. 11. DUTTON, ONT, THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1889. WHOLE No. 345.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JAMES M. GLENN, LL.B., BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, ETC
OFFICES—St. Thomas and Dutton.
☞ Money to Loan.

A. J. LEITCH, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES,
pb DUTTON.

WILLIAM DRINKWATER, VETERINARY SURGEON, DUTTON.

PETER DUNCANSON, LICENSED AUCTIONEER,
d DUTTON.

HENRY CLAY, BARRISTER-AT-LAW, ROCHE BLOCK, DUTTON.
Commissioner in the High Court.
☞ Money Loaned.

MONEY TO LOAN AT LOWEST RATES.
First-class Fire Insurance Companies represented.
Life Insurance at Lowest Rates and in an old Established Company. Accident Insurance, etc.
S. JOHN SCHULTE,
OFFICE—Opp. Journal Office, St. Thomas.

MONEY TO LOAN at 6 per cent. on the most favorable terms for repayment.
ERMATINGER & ROBINSON,
Barristers, St. Thomas.

H. H. WAY, DENTIST.
D. D. S.—Pennsylvania.
L. D. S.—Ontario.
351 TALBOT STREET, - OPP. ELGIN STREET
ST. THOMAS.

ALEX. McKILLOP, M. D., M. D. C. M. Trinity University; L. R. C. P. Edinburg; L. M. Edinburg and London; F. T. M. S. Trinity Medical School; M. C. P. & S., Ont.
☞ OFFICE—Main Street, Dutton.

PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS for all classes of buildings made, and all kinds of buildings erected and furnished to order. Satisfaction guaranteed.
F. A. HUMPIDGE,
Office—Front Street. Dutton.

DR. G. ADAMS SWANN, Surgeon Dentist. First place graduate of Pennsylvania College Dental Surgery; Honor Graduate of Royal College Dental Surgery of Ontario; Faculty Gold and College Silver Medalist of Session 1886-87; will visit Wallacetown the first and third Wednesday in each month.

J. A. SHANNON, L.D.S., Surgeon Dentist. Faculty Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate R.C.D.S. of Ontario. Nitrous Oxide Gas administered. Office closed on Mondays only. Office — Leitch Block, Dutton.

PRESENTS. Any person getting $12 worth of photographs during the year, commencing with May 1, 1888, and ending May 1, 1889, shall receive $2 worth of photos. for every $12 paid out for same at my gallery during the year. I also intend giving five prizes to the five that give me the largest patronage during the year. First Prize, a portrait 16x20.
W. A. BRUSH, Photographer,
Dutton, Ont.

DESIRABLE VILLAGE PROPERTY for sale.

If you want to buy or sell a house or lot, insure your buildings or borrow money call on
tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

Huron & Middlesex
Mutual Fire Insurance Company,
LONDON, ONT.

Number of Policies in Force, Dec. 31st, 1887 - - - 2,782
Am't Insured, Dec. 31, 1887, $2,044,242
ASSETS, - - 72,269,24

DIRECTORS.

L C Leonard, R S Murray, Henry Johnson London West; D. Cameron, ex-M.P, Strathroy; James McKenzie, Union; R Shoults, P., Parkhill; G. Samwell, J P, Exeter; Thos Jones, J P, Forest; R. Southam, London G. I. Walker, Aylmer.

OFFICERS.

L. C Leonard, PRESIDENT and Treasurer; M. Cameron, ex-M.P., vice-President; John Stephenson, Manager and Secretary; W V Fitzgerald, Solicitor; Wm. Spittal, Accountant; W. S. Jackson and F. Harley General Agents.
BANKERS—British North America.

New Home Sewing Machine
FOR SALE CHEAP.

New or second-hand. Apply to
1-17tf N. PHELPS.

Horse For Sale.

BROWN MARE, 4 years old, in foal to Nobleman, stands 16 hands high, weighs 1,100 to 1,200 pounds, sound and good mover. Enquire at WHITE'S HARDWARE, Dutton. 7-3

The Star Loan Company
181 Talbot St., St. Thomas.

Money loaned on Real Estate security at lowest rate of interest. Mortgages bought and money received in
SAVINGS BANK!
from One Dollar upwards. Current rate of interest paid half-yearly.
G. E. Casey, M.P., President. D. M. Tait, Manager

Dutton Iron Works.

MILLMEN and Farmers of West Elgin wanting new machinery can be supplied at the Dutton Iron Works.

The Essex Centre Plow,
The Eclipse Wheelbarrow
-FOR SALE.-

Repairing promptly and satisfactorily done.
C. W. ALLEN,
Proprietor.
Dutton, Nov. 1, 1888.

Cowal Carriage Works.

THE undersigned do a General Blacksmithing and Jobbing Business.
Repairing Promptly Done.
CARRIAGES OF ALL KINDS
MADE TO ORDER.
A Specialty made of our
NEW PATENT BUGGY GEAR,
which causes the rear axle to move. It has but to be seen to convince the most fastidious of its superior working qualities
Give Us a Call.
TURNER & PECKHAM.
Cowal, Nov. 1, 1888.

To Farmers and Builders.

Having leased the Planing and Sash and Door Factory of F. A. Humpidge, Dutton, Ont., I am prepared to do
Lumber Dressing of all Kinds
with neatness. Also to furnish Building Material throughout, from Mouldings up.
Sash, Doors, Mouldings, Blinds,
etc., kept on hand.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate
☞ Factory on Main Street, south of track.
M. COCHRANE.

BLACKSMITHING.

The undersigned does a
General Line of Blacksmithing.
IN HORSESHOEING.
☞ Special attention paid to Contracted Feet.
M. L. MILLAR.
Wilkie's Old Stand, next to Dutton Iron Works. Dec. 1 tf

MICHIGAN CENTRAL
"The Niagara Falls Route."
CANADA SOUTHERN DIVISION.

GOING EAST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
Ridgetown	8 08	9 47	11 02
Rodney	8 38	10 11	12 15
Bismarck	8 50	.....	12 30
Dutton	9 09	10 29	12 58
Iona	9 25	.....	1 30
Shedden	9 36	.....	2 00
St. Thomas (arrive)	10 05	11 05	2 50

GOING WEST.

	Mail P. M.	Exp's P. M.	Local A. M.
St. Thomas (dep't)	3 00	12 25	5 25
Shedden	3 24	.....	6 01
Iona	3 32	.....	6 14
Dutton	3 45	12 58	6 34
Bismarck	4 00	.....	7 10
Rodney	4 11	1 15	7 30
Ridgetown	4 44	1 35	9 15
Windsor	7 25	3 45	4 30

LONDON AND ST. THOMAS.

GOING NORTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	A. M.
Leave St. Thomas	6 30	6 00	10 15
Arrive at London	7 25	6 50	11 00

GOING SOUTH.

	A. M.	P. M.	P. M.
Leave London	8 50	2 10	7 40
Ar. at St. Thomas	9 30	3 50	8 45

JNO. G. LAVEN,
Canadian Passenger Agent, Toronto

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY
IN THE
WATERLOO MUTUAL
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y

Risks taken on the Cash or Mutual System. Losses promptly and satisfactorily settled. tf N. PHELPS, Dutton.

THE SMALL-POX.

NO CASES IN DUNWICH.

The Board of Health of Dunwich met on Saturday evening and decided to order compulsory vaccination and the closing of all schools in the township for the present. Dr. Leitch, of Dutton, and Dr. Ruthven, of Wallacetown, were appointed public vaccinators and the dates of their visits to the different parts of the township will be announced by posters to-day.

There are as yet no cases in the township and, owing to the prompt and vigorous action of the board, no danger is apprehended.

Complaint was made on Monday morning to the board that the Port Talbot postmaster, John Brown, was carrying mail from Fingal to his post-office, and the board was asked to make better arrangements. The chairman, Mr. A. J. Leitch, at once wrote to the inspector at London, asking to have the Port Talbot office served from Wallacetown, and in less than 14 hours after the letter left this office word was received from the inspector that arrangements had been made to serve Port Talbot from Wallacetown during the continuance of the epidemic. This speaks well for the promptness of the authorities, and shows that they are always ready for business.

Owing to the reassuring reports from Fingal and other places the schools in Dunwich will probably be re-opened next week.

