The priest at Prince Albert is Pero Andre, a native of fold France, a man well-up in years. He is credited with having considerable to do with the halfbreed rising. Be that as it may, the following story is told of him: He was in Winnipeg not so long ago; some young bloods thought they would try and get the reverend father full: they invited him to the Manitoba club; the priest went with them; they becan on champagne; it had no effect on his reverence; they went to whisky cocktails and the only ones to go down were some of the Winnipeggers; then brandy cocktails were ordered in profusion; the good man took one every time; at last the last Winnipegger was laid out; the priest then politely took his hat in his hand, made a gracious bow and said: Good day, gentlemen. I must go and see my bishop; and he crossed the river to St. Boniface as steady as a rock. Pere Andre's Capacity.

thus reports our visitor from Holland:

Mr. Boissevain speaks in most encouraging terms as to the confidence felt in Holland in the great success that awaits the Canadian Pacific railway as a money earning enterprise and says that but for the extraordinary efforts made by the enemies of the company to discredit the enterprise, the stock instead of selling at 40, the price of to-day, would now be 80. Mr. Boissevain says as an evidence of the efforts to discredit the company, the Globe newspaper an similar pripts, whenever they contain an article hostile to the company or the country, are disseminated in large numbers all through Holland without the parties and newspapers receiving them knowing for what source they come. The absurd pamphlat by "Philo-Veritas," written in hostilit to the C. P. R., has also been distributed broadcast through the same country. This is the kind of warfare that Canada's greatest enterprise has had to contend with. We may well ask who is interested in doing this, and we need not go far to find the source. The war Against Canada.

There is a good deal in the papers these nwar actual in the Soudan, and ed in Afghanistan and else what we have now to speak against the Canadian Pacific which is virtually war against The hostile powers in this case are the Grand Trunk and the Northern acific. What the Grand Trunk has done to defeat Canada's project of a great tional railway is pretty well known; but the part that the Northern Pacific has ayed in the game has not received half attention which the importance of the subject demands," to quote a well-

Beyond all doubt the Northern Pacific had a heavy hand in the various movements which led to the defeat of Sir Hugh Allan's Canadian railway scheme of twelve or fourteen years ago. That scheme may have been a good one for Canada, or it may been a bad one, but, no Jay Cooke, who was then rol of the Northern Pacific, ound to defeat it if he could. It is safe to say, in fact, that the bette the scheme was believed to be, the greater would be the interest of the Northern Pacific in having it defeated. Much has been said of Sir Hugh's advances of money for the public have never yet been permitted to know-and that is, the extent to which the anti-Canadian side of that day was aided by the Northern Pacific. The history of the Pacific scandal will never be complete until the half which is still lacking

One need not be a witch at guessing to anderstand that "Riel's second rebellion," called, is practically the North ra rival enterprise north of the boundary line. Catholic clergy and religious orders in Canada had abundant reason to be thankful that the breaking out of the great olu iou found them safe under the Itish flag, Had Canada been really "New France" then, a commission sent by Robe pierre andt. Just would have made shore work of the saims to certain properties, in Montreal, for instance, which have since become so valuable. The terrible scenes o Lyons and Marseilles would have been repeated, though on a smaller scale, in Quebec and Montreal, and the page of history would have told a different tale from that which is now recorded. It might do our French fellow citiz ns good to observe well what is now going on n their own mother-country, for the purose of realizing how happy their log actually is, as far as their religious privileges are concerned. In the London Times of March 7 its Paris correspondent thus speaks of the war against the church which is carried on by the "Jacobin" majority in the chamber of deputies: the chamber of deputies;

"The chamber, with its narrow adherence to a policy of which the only end seems to be the resecution of the clergy, has struck out 9 000 france for emonies the honorable retreats of priests worn out by parochial work. It has struck out the sem nary schol rships, indispenable to the supply of priests in a country where the clergy spring from the peasantry. It has cut off 30,000 f. from the 4,000 f received by the Archbishop of Paris, in short it has cut off 30,000 f. from the continued that netty campaign against the church which disgusts all who respect freedom of conscience. The senate has releserted these votes, thus doing the republic the service of preventing it from becoming into crable."

respect freedom of conscience. The senate has reinserted these votes, thus doing the fear that here votes, thus doing the fear that here votes of preventing it from becoming intocrable."

That seems bad enough, but in all likelihood there is worse to come. For a Paris despatch says that on the 24th inst, the chamber of deputies adopted the scrutin de liste bill in its entirety. A very brief announcement, but it means a great deal. It means no less than this—that the republicans in the chamber, or the "Jacobins," as the Times correspondent calls them, will shortly have such an overwhelming majority there that they will be able to sweep all before them.

Since the beginning of the present republic, the deputies have been elected under the system of scrutin d' arrondissement, which corresponds very nearly with our ewn. We divide our country into considering, and elect one member for each, with some such exceptional cases as that of Hamilton, where the members are elected jointly. But the plan of scrutin de liste means the election of a number of members collectively for one large district, just as presidential electors are chosen in the United States. In the very close struggle of last fall, for instance, the total vote of the State of New York was so evenly balanced that, had each side returned presidential electors of its own chosing, the majority could not have been more than one for the successful candidate. But the law is that the vote of the state must be east in the vote of the state must be east in the condition of the present reports of the state of the was as evenly balanced that, had each side returned presidential electors of its own chosing, the majority could not have been more than one for the successful candidate. But the law is that the vote of the state must be east in the condition of the state of the state must be east in the condition of the state of the state must be east in the condition. The law is the condition of the state of the state must be east in the condition of the state of the sta for the successful candidate. But the law

Mound Builders. One of the most interesting and bewildering questions in archæological science is that of the mound builders. All along the Ohio and Mississippi river vallevs are scattered these mounds, the only and partially civilized people, who once inhabited these fertile valleys in greater numbers than now dwell there. In the state of Onio there are 30,000 of these mounds alone. But puzzling as these mounds are to the scientific world, there is one fact upon which the whole scientific and musical world agree with perfect uranimity, namely:—thet the dominion make of pianos and organs excel those of all other manufacture.
