THE STORY OF A GREAT SECRET.

Millions of Mischief.

By HEADON HILL.

Author of "By a Hair's Breadth," "The Duke Decides," "A Race with Ruin," Etc., Etc.

(Continued.) Her eyes flashed approval when I took the latter course, and after taking the precaution to glance over the side of the wheel-house along the deck, he laid his smooth hand impressively on my arm. "Now please pay particular attention to me while I fetch out your future course," he went on. "I place no restrictions on you, but I have a number of surprises which I am sure that you will do your best to enjoy. There are reasons, vital to your safety, why, as Herzog, I should not appear in the matter at all. Are you willing to keep me out of it? If you will show me how it can be done, I answered, readily understanding his motive. Had he not been the prime mover in, if not the original instigator of, the plot which had brought me to this point, I should have been bound up."

"I must have read my thoughts. I have no objection to be known in the business under my alias of Doctor Barrabas," he said. "Captain Rivington has commented to repay my services by sending all reference to Herzog, and it was to ascertain from you if Sir Gideon had said or done anything which would make it necessary to drag me into his son's case that I was obliged to stipulate for your confidence before handing you those proofs. What I propose is this. As Roger Marako's supposed representative I shall bid Captain Belcher put you ashore at Totland Bay. You will go straight to Lord Alphonson with the proofs and tell him the whole story exactly as you know it, merely substituting the name of Doctor Barrabas wherever you should say Herzog."

"But Roger Marako is aware of your real identity, and will disclose it when brought to bay," I said. "Not so; as it will not be material to his own defence, there are the best of reasons why he should not disclose it," replied Herzog, with such a meaning smile that light broke in on me, as I believe he intended it should. "Sir Gideon was the instigator. I began in an awe-struck whisper, which he checked with a wave of his hand. "My dear young lady," he purred, "let us draw a veil over all that. I do not even admit that the Prime Minister was ever in any real danger at all. But this I do know—that your lover is, and that unless we can get round to Totland by the afternoon he will probably be re-... when even these proofs which you hold will be too late to save him. And I am afraid we may have difficulty with the captain. He gives me the impression of having an axe of his own to grind—of wishing to keep you on board. "I am terrified by him; the first night I spent on the ship he got drunk, and I heard him talking to the mate," I said. "Well, you heard me talking last night, so you must not be too greatly alarmed," replied Herzog, with a solemn wink. "All the same I agree with you that the man is a hog—" "Who are you calling a hog on my ship?" came the suspicious inquiry from behind. And, turning quickly, I saw that Captain Belcher was casting baleful glances at us round the corner of the wheelhouse.

CHAPTER XXXII. A Fight Against Time. How long had Belcher been standing there, and how much had he overheard? I began to tremble violently, but with characteristic readiness Herzog stepped to the front, and, shielding me with his broad person, turned the awkward question aside with a jest. The individual to whom he had applied such a harsh term, he avowed, was the steward Antonio, who had only given him a teacupful of water to wash in. Belcher scowled and muttered, as though only half believing, but he went on to say that the tide served, and to inquire whether Herzog wanted to be put ashore at that point, or whether he was going on in the steamer. The question did not elicit an immediate reply for Herzog capped it with another, "You are bound, in ballast, for Barcelona, I understand from Mr. Marako—to fetch home a cargo of fruit?" "You've hit it, mister—first time," assented Belcher gruffly. "Very well, then here is your programme," proceeded Herzog, "I have made terms with this young lady on behalf of my principals and yours. You will therefore start immediately, and, shaping your course inside the Isle of Wight at your best speed, you will land Miss Chilmark in one of your own boats at the pier at Totland Bay. I myself shall enjoy the pleasure of your company considerably longer, captain, for I propose to go on with you to Barcelona."

Belcher had been staring at him open-mouthed, but now his jaw closed with an ugly snap, and he seemed on the point of an angry outbreak. I had been thinking of Arthur and Arthur's safety hitherto, but now I was free to rejoice at the near prospect of escape from this wild animal's domain. His visible disappointment at that moment brought home to me how doubly grateful I ought to be for Herzog's intervention. Had I been the passenger to make the voyage I could see that the waves would have been my best friends before we were out of the Channel. So I told myself in the exaltation of the moment, without reflecting that as long as I was on board the Nightshade such congratulations might be premature. Belcher, for the present, restrained his wrath, and muttering that he would go and get the anchor up, turned on his heel and went forward to the bridge. Shortly the steamer began to move, and as she crept slowly from creek to creek out to the open sea, Herzog filled in the blanks of his narrative. He told me how Roger Marako had attempted to murder Arthur; how, fearing that, as he had failed to silence my lover by that direct method, Marako would take measures to have him recaptured, he, Herzog, had hidden him in a vacant house and had started to try and trace me and procure evidence against Marako. He had intended to see Arthur again before leaving Totland, to take food to him, but finding that Marako was leaving for London, by the first boat he had had to alter his plans in a hurry. Instead of going in person he had been compelled to trust a local fisherman named Croal with the duty of conveying provisions to Arthur's retreat. The limited confidence he had had to place in this man was disquieting, but he hoped and believed that the men was both stupid and trustworthy, and would not betray the trust. He had enlisted Croal's sympathies by telling him that Arthur was a runaway debtor, and it was hardly likely that the fisherman would connect the case with the fugitive convict, who was supposed to be on his way to America. At any rate, it was imperative not to lose sight of Roger Marako. Only by sticking to him could he learn my whereabouts. With persistent cleverness he had carried out that self-imposed task, travelling up to London in Roger Marako's company. Marako, of course, had heard from him already that Arthur's escape had been arranged by Sir Gideon, and doubtless, his father, on the memorable night at Marako Hall, had supplied the information, so that Herzog had no difficulty in approaching the matter. He had therefore informed Roger Marako, what he knew already, that the affair which had caused Arthur's release was at an end, and had gained the villain's confidence by warning him of the charge which I was working to bring against him. Falling into the trap, but without admitting his guilt, Roger Marako had thereupon disclosed to Herzog what had befallen me—how I had come to Marako Hall, of all places in the world, to lay an information against him, and how advantage had been taken of this to inveigle me on board the Nightshade, over whose brutal skipper Sir Gideon had a firm hold. Roger Marako had also fully stated his plans regarding me. He was going down late in the evening to board the ship in Chichester Harbour, when, unless I signed a document withdrawing all aspersions on him, especially as to what had happened at the Mill House, I was to be left on board at Belcher's disposal.

Herzog was of opinion that the Nightshade's rendezvous at that lonely spot unknown even to the captain till after he had sailed, had been chosen against the contingency of Roger Marako having to fly after the desperate effort he meant to make to silence Arthur by violence. The attempt having failed, and Arthur being unable to accuse him of it, he had no reason for flight, and would not have remained on board. "Then came my masterpiece," added Herzog, with a touch of vanity that was natural to him. "I induced him to consent to take me down with him, so that I might avail myself of the opportunity of keeping out of the way in Spain for a time. I also persuaded him to allow me to wait in his rooms while he went out to give secret information at the Home Office as to the fugitive's whereabouts. The result you know, I successfully ransacked his rooms with the aid of my bunch of skeleton keys, and later on prevented his designs on you with a kick on the head."

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL. Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose. Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug as all, but simply absorbs the poisons and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system. Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminent safe cathartic. It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and throat from the poison of catarrh. All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better blood, and the beauty of it. It is no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit. A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

REPAID WITH INTEREST. (New York Sun.) Like Sir Thomas Lipton, Andrew Carnegie seldom carries much money about with him. Not long ago he boarded a Madison avenue car. When the conductor called for fares Mr. Carnegie was without even a nickel. A passenger offered him the necessary coin. "I have to return this way. Would you extend that loan to a dime?" asked the ironmaster. The man gave Mr. Carnegie his card. A few days later a case of champagne was sent to his club, with Mr. Carnegie's compliments. "Kate—And you are really going to marry Fred Spangler? They say he never does anything. "Corinthia—That's where they do him a great wrong. Why, he is one of the most active of men. It was only yesterday morning that I heard he had painted the town the night before. Just think of that!"

A VETERAN DEAD. James Stretten Had Served His Country in Many Climes—An Honorable Career. James Stretten a resident of Lake wood, St. John County, who died on January 3rd last of pneumonia, in the 64th year of his age, was well known and much respected citizen. He was a man who had seen considerable of the world, and had served his country faithfully. He was born in the Manor House, Chatham, Kent county, England. At the age of 18 he joined the 3rd battalion, 6th Royal Rifles, afterwards transferring to the 1st battalion. In 1868 he formed part of the guard of honor to Queen Alexandra on her arrival in London, and later formed part of the guard of honor at the marriage of King Edward and Queen Alexandra. Among the many other places at which his regiment was stationed were the Tower of London, Kensington barracks, Dublin, Malta, Gibraltar, Aldershot, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Halifax, getting his discharge at the latter place. When the 60th was stationed at Ottawa the riot broke out in the northwest, and the battalion was one of the first ordered out and took part in the 3rd River campaign. As a member of this campaign the deceased brought home with him a live bear. After severing his connection with the Royal Rifles the deceased entered the employ of the James Robertson saw works at Montreal, afterwards going to Toronto and then to this city. He held the position of saw grinder with the company here for many years, and about two years ago gave up the works to take up farming. The deceased leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn their loss, as well as many friends and acquaintances, who always found him to be a ready and willing friend when required.

ST. JOHN PENNYPACKERS.

It appears that none of the St. John newspapers except the Globe are conducted to the satisfaction of the citizens and Macrae. This is a source of profound regret. And it is not clear that those gentlemen are blameless in the matter. They have not proved a brilliant success as civic legislators. They have been members of the council many years. They did not make a great success of the Spruce Lake affair. The Council, contrast, the water supply, and many other matters that might be mentioned.

WONDERFUL JAPAN.

United States' Minister Griscom sent from Tokio to Washington an interesting report on the trade and the financial condition of Japan. The trade of that country has increased, despite the war. It covers more ships, is in a strong financial position, and has had a year of great success. Domestic loans have been readily taken up and savings bank deposits have increased. We quote the year just closed shows an increase in exports of $6,421,159 and a decrease in imports of $10,068,507. During the same period, the increase of exports in specie and bullion amounted to $41,469,394, and the increase in imports to $1,842,370.

IS THIS SPEECH A FEELER?

Hon. L. O. David, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Most Intimate Friend, Hints at a Readjustment of Provincial Subsidies as a Condition of Territorial Autonomy.

Ottawa, Jan. 18.—The most important event in the Senate was the significant speech made by Senator David in opening the debate on the address. Sir Wilfrid Laurier attended the Senate and sat below the bar to hear the speech of his old friend. Senator David spoke in French, appending a summary in English. He promoted the moral and material development of the Provinces, and placed them in position to meet the pressing needs of colonization and education. The Dominion Government should increase them. There is no doubt that these subsidies were based on erroneous hypotheses and inaccurate calculations, and that as years roll on, the disproportion between the Customs and excise duties exacted by the Provinces and what they receive as compensation becomes more evident and striking. Notwithstanding the fact that the Customs and excise duties are being tripled and quadrupled, and that the population is constantly increasing, the compensation is accumulating in the Federal treasury. The Provinces are unable to carry out their material advancement.

Must Guard Against Friction.

After a reference to the position of Canada with the problems caused by its mixture of races, he adverted to the coming greatness of the West and to the pending grant of autonomy. Canada had made, and did not regret having made great sacrifices from being lost certain conditions were necessary, and he enumerated them as follows: 1st. "The government will, no doubt, in the organization of the new provinces, remove all causes of friction, of religious and national disputes. The winds that blew from the northwest have already shaken the foundations of Confederation. Experience is a great lesson and a source of wisdom for statesmen. 2nd. "All the sections or provinces of confederation must be united by the cement of mutual help and protection; they must always be prepared to take such measures as may be necessary for their individual development. Therefore, if we give to the Northwest Territories the means of becoming the granary of the whole world, if we construct for them railways which will enable them to transport their products to all the markets of the world, they must, in return, be generous enough to place the other provinces in a position to supply them with the manufactured products which they require. 3rd. I may add that, in order to

Many were the queries last evening during the progress of the hockey sale to the manner in which the great number wishing to see the Dawson City vs. all St. John game Feb. 1st were to be accommodated, the capacity of the rink was tested last evening at the provincial league games. Manager Spencer has arranged to put out only a limited number of tickets, and these will be placed on sale Monday morning in Gray's bookstore, King street. As doubtless the entire number will be sold before the day of the great match it would be hoove all who wish to see the gold diggers from the far north play hockey to purchase their tickets immediately.

POLICE COURT.

John Callahan's Slumbers Disturbed by a Rude Policeman.

John Callahan was the only prisoner at the police court this morning. He was charged with lying and lurking in a door-way at No. 9 Coburg street, and was remanded. Callahan stated that he came here from Picton recently, and had $38 which he said was taken from him on Mill street near the Union depot, when asked by the magistrate why he had not complained, Callahan said that he had been drinking to drown sorrow.

"Well," said his honor, "instead of doing that, it has had the opposite effect, and has brought you here. What were you doing in that doorway last night?"

"I thought it was the house I stayed at the night before."

"What house was that?"

"Mr. Roop's, I don't remember the street."

Sergt. Campbell, who made the arrest testified that he had been summoned by a young lady between one and two o'clock this morning saying that there was somebody kicking at the door. He went to the door and found the prisoner lying in the entry with his feet against the door. He was pretty drunk when picked up, but he had a stimulating effect, as he was almost sober when he reached the police station.

Callahan is on his way to Boston to seek employment.

THEY LIKE CANADA.

Have Made a Few Dollars in the Western Country.

Sam Salamoki and Wilhelm Hykkin are registered at the Grand Union. They are on their return from the West where they have been located for the past four years.

Salamoki, in conversation with a Times reporter said: "Well, I have no objection to Canada. I have made a few dollars and more so has my friend. He has been more prosperous in this country than I. Good money is paid. Workingmen are recognized and the remuneration they receive is away above that comparatively speaking, in any place in which I have lived. And those who have, or who will if they decide to emigrate, make at least a good living."

Secretary Wetmore of the S. P. C. A. reports that arrangements are being made to care for the children of Thomas Dunlop, who was arrested yesterday. Her S. A. Prosser being asked as to where they would be placed, said that they were being looked after, but beyond that he declined to discuss the matter.

Advices from Dallas, Texas, announce the death of Mr. John Thawellier, aged 103. Mr. Thawellier, who was scoldingly buried to death, was scoldingly buried to death as a drummer boy at the battle of Waterloo.

"Talkin' 'bout property," said Uncle Eben, "dar ain't no kind dat beats a clear conscience 'n' a good opinion."

The derrick isn't handsome but it has a splitting influence.

A WHISTLER MEMORIAL.

King Edward Will Send 150 Etchings—A Great Exhibition.

London, Jan. 21.—A Whistler memorial exhibition which will open in London, Feb. 22nd. will be the most unique, and representative of the artist's work ever assembled.

Many splendid examples which never before have been exhibited publicly have been promised, including a fine portrait of Whistler's patron, Lord. King Edward will send 150 etchings. Besides the portrait of Thomas Carlyle, which belongs to the Glasgow Corporation, Whistlers' "Portrait of Sarasate" from Pittsburgh, and the "Portrait of My Mother" from the Luxembourg at Paris, which was only secured after great difficulty and through the interposition of the British Foreign office several contributions are promised from Chicago and Boston.

NATIONAL RELIC AND MUSEUM.

The Montreal Antiquarian Society has decided to get after the Quebec Government for thousands of dollars in order to provide an endowment for the old Chateau Ramezay and provide for its use as a national relic and museum.

This money is the balance of the price secured from the sale of the Ramezay land some years ago. The government promised the money but was prevented paying it over as some vandals on the city council wanted the ancient edifice, which was the official residence in the old French days, torn down.

The city council is now co-operating with the Society to secure the grant.

NEW USE FOR MOTOR.

Cassier's Magazine calls attention to the fact that half a dozen or more British towns have motor-driven fire engines and even electrically operated fire-pump equipments.

Improvements which apparently not yet made their appearance in America. Animal traction for fire engines has disappeared with the horse car. It would certainly be difficult to imagine a more suitable application of the motor principle than to fire engines.

The horses themselves are more or less a source of embarrassment as well as an embarrassment. Here is an opportunity for some of our enterprising Canadian citizens to remove the Canadian fire engine is a real need.

CANADA STANDS PAT.

(Philadelphia Record.) The rejection by the Canadian government of the Canadian government's offer on the part of the United States for the resumption of the Joint High Commission with view to the discussion of reciprocity and other matters of common interest between the two countries will be subject of regret in one part of a large portion of the people of both countries who are well acquainted with the history of the ultra protectionist policy of a renewal of negotiation.

The Canadian soreness over the settlement of the Alaska boundary is not particularly indicative of a continuing menace and an aggravation. In our own interest we should offer instant inducement to a renewal of better trade relations with Canada if instead of asking a renewal of the subject of regret in one part of a large portion of the people of both countries who are well acquainted with the history of the ultra protectionist policy of a renewal of negotiation.

When Lord Augustus Paget was the English ambassador at Rome, a soiree was held at the embassy, and Lady Paget was showing the art treasures to an English lady who was not particularly gifted with wit, and who was anxious to ingratiate herself with her hostess. As she was walking with her, she stopped before a copy of the bust of the first Roman Emperor, and said:

"That is the young Augustus," replied Lady Paget.

"Ah," said the lady, "now you mention it I do see a likeness to the ambassador."

THE STOCK MARKET.

(Received by E. E. Beck & Co., Bankers and Brokers over their private wires.) Some heaviness at the opening of the market is expected to result from the depression of the market, but the market is expected to be more active and the price differences on Pennsylvania are likely to be settled at the close of the day.

Prices are now up to the high level of last year, but there are no stocks present for sale and holdings are better than in the past. The trend of the market is upward and we believe that the advance which is taking place is a reaction to buy U. S. Steel pfd. S. P. The Erie is a town topic.

THE RIBBON'S REPORT. The situation remains unchanged. The public have bought some stocks in the last couple of weeks, but they are still suspicious, and have not bought enough to make a serious decline probable. The outside comes into Wall street and part of the market is not so active as it was. The public are so choked off that they persist in their refusal to buy. However, the distribution is going on slowly now. The advance which is taking place is a reaction to buy U. S. Steel pfd. S. P. The Erie is a town topic.

Does Not Seem Truthful

When anyone merely a dealer advertises that he can give a larger discount on Pianos than can be given by any other firm in the Piano line.

I am the Provincial representative of The House of Nordheimer makers of Canada's Standard Piano, and sell the same direct to the consumer, thus saving the middleman's profit.

I also represent the Steinway & Sons' Piano the world's leading instrument today which for the past 50 years has been controlled in Canada by my firm of Nordheimer & Co. Their St. John show Rooms are in JOHN WHITE'S Furniture Store, 93 to 97 Charlotte Street.

It will give me great pleasure to give any further information regarding these Pianos. Special discounts for the balance of this month. Catalogues mailed on application.
