'Smash the Old Man's Head in With a Club"---The Alleged Remark of Gerald Sifton.

Rev. W. H. Cooper Tells of Gerald's Statement to Him That Dr. McNeil Had Demanded and Received $1,000 to Refrain From Holding an Inquest---Attendance of Medical Experts Costs $500 a Day.

Each day of the Sifton murder trial | had, she said, gone to Gerald's house | ried or not, but could say that he had continues to furnish its quota of evidence sufficiently sensational to please the most morbid-minded. Yesterday af-also there. Witness told about Joseph Sifton and Mary coming to her the ernoon's feature was the presence in the witness box of James Morden. He Mary seemed determined to be martold the same story that he recited at the preliminary examination last year, including the alleged efforts of Gerald Sifton to induce him to "smash the old | not, he would put them so they would man's head in with a club," or "drop in the house, choke the old man to home from Gerald's, and she told Gerdeath, and hang him to a beam in the ald she meant to take Mary with her.

barn. The witness' memory seemed to have improved in the meantime, for he recalled with ease and positiveness many details of conversation which he omitted in his recital of a year ago. Rev. W. H. Cooper told of Gerald's statement to him that Dr. McNeil had demanded and received $1,000 in notes to refrain from holding an inquest. The other evidence, given by Mrs. Hulda McFarlane, and John McFarlane, was not possessed of any particularly startling character. EXPENSES OF THE TRIAL. Some idea of the expense under which both defense and crown are working may be gathered from the men alone is costing each side from $400 to $500 every day. The Toronto ex-perts will probably receive $50 per day the Sifton family. each, while the local medical men m much. When to this is added the pay of the lay witnesses, and the large fees of the legal men, it will be seen that should the trial last a couple of weeks,

On the evening of Friday, June 29 witness went to Gerald's house, being summoned by Walter Herbert. Mrs. Gerald was there, and some one was working in the cellar. Gerald was not there. Witness was at the house till about midnight. Witness had a conversation with Gerald on Monday, July 2, the day of the funeral. Gerald told witness he had gone to Dr. McNeil's on Sunday morn ing. After some preliminary conversation, Gerald said that Dr. McNell told him that Cooper (meaning witness), and Gerald's uncle were press-ing for an inquest. Witness told Gerald the statement was untrue as far as he was concerned. Gerald then told witness that Dr. McNeil said there was

MONEY IN AN INQUEST for him, and unless Gerald gave him $1,000 he would stop the funeral and have an inquest. Gerald said he was feeling very miserable, that he had suffered loss of sleep from grief over his father's death, and that rather than stop the funeral after all arrangements had been made, and friends had come from a distance, Gerald consented. GLENCOE FAIR

Mosa and Ekfrid Fall Show Draws a Great Crowd.

25c Exhibits Unsurpassed by Those of Any Previous Year---Splendid Display of Live Stock---The Fortunate Exhibitors.

Glencee, Sept. 27.-The Mosa and horse owned by R. R. McKellar was Ekfrid Union Agricultural Association a special feature. held their annual fair in Glencoe yesterday, when the beautiful weather, coupled with the well-known high big crowd that had a most enjoyable outing. It is true, a good deal of disappointment was felt by many who expected to hear an address by Hon. R. L. Borden, leader of the opposition in the Dominion House, who was to open ties, Saturday$1 65 the Dominion House, who was to open the show. That gentleman notified the directors some time since that owing directors some time since that owing directors some time since that owing a, Wm. Webster & Sons; colt or filly, and the show that the show the show that the show that the show that the show that the show t sizes from 32 to 42, for......$1 00 to various circumstances he would be unable to attend, but fortunately this fair does not depend upon the presence of any one man for its success. Early in the afternoon the crowd commenced to arrive, and by 2 p.m. the hustling town of Glencoe was packed with vis-itors, who came for miles around, and all of whom made for the grounds, where a splendid array of exhibits in-terested those bent on examining the merits of the different entries. The judges in some cases caused annoyance n failing to act, as promised the directors, but as there are always capable men, willing to serve on a moment's notice, the work was disposed of with dispatch by those who filled the various

> LIVE STOCK EXHIBITS. The show of cattle was an exceptionally large one, better in fact than has been seen here in years, which is saying a great deal, for Glencoe fair is noted for its shows in this particular direction. Horses also were entered in large numbers, and the ring where the animals were shown always had a big crowd interested in the various classes. which were filled to overflowing in almost every case with exhibits almost impossible to surpass, even in larger places. The display was a record-breaker. The show of pigs and sheep, while not so large as in past years, was of an excellent class, and was admired by those whose tastes ran in that particular direction. The poultry fanciers also maintained their reputation in making a good showing. The exhibits

IN THE MAIN HALL, which was continually filled with an admiring crowd, occupied every inch of space, and the entries were of the usual year owing to the ravages of the Hes-sian fly. There was an unusually big Coulthard, R. Hardy, R. J. Coulthard; display of corn, some samples of which best turnout, driven by lady, Joseph were immense. Fruit was only a fair show, apples in this section not being Walker, James Glasgow. very plentiful, and the sample but indifferent, except in isolated cases where a good crop will be gathered. Taken as a whole, the exhibit in all lasses was splendid, and as the attendance was in advance of the previous year, when good weather also favored the managers, as on the occasion yesterday, the fair seems to hold a prominent place in the people's affecions. The directors are to be commended for excluding the various swindling games too often allowed on other grounds. There was an abund-

LEGITIMATE AMUSEMENT to keep the crowd in good humor, and the Citizens' Band of West Lorne gave continuous performance in the grand stand, which enlivened the proceedings. Secretary Isaac Walker makes a model secretary, to which all will tes-tify who had occasion to consult him yesterday.

In the evening a concert in the opera house attracted the usual big crowd. The performance was an excellent one.

A Royal Reception

The Crowning Event of the Season.

UR Millinery Reception has been a great success—a Royal affair. At no other time, under no conditions, have we made an equal display. This was graciously acknowledged by the throng of interested visitors who were captivated by the beauty of the display, and who showed their appreciation in a tangible way. Many who came as mere sightseers went away as buyers, and all went home with a better idea of what is fashionable and correct. Place your order early—the earlier the better for you and for us.

Corsets for Fall and Winter.

Our Corset Department, the largest in Western Ontario, is now at its best. Anything that you would require for the Fall and Winter Seasons is to be found here modestly priced. TO AVOID BEING A

Some of the Pitfalls That Beset of the most tedious of bores. He sees nothing but disaster, and adds to all Careless Conversationalists.

Unhappy Choice of Topics and Exaggerated Mannerisms Common Sources of Social Distavor.

[New York Sun.]

The old-fashioned bore who used to go about buttonholing people and talking them to death has gone out. Happily, he has not survived the di-creasing rush and bustle of life, and except among life insurance men and book agents the power of a profusion of words is no longer relied upon to accomplish results. But in the place of the old-fashioned variety we have the unconscious bore who goes through life tiring people out with his conversational mannerisms."

So spoke a modern Turveydrop whose knowledge of the world and its people is so great that he pro-poses to reform society and give lessons in etiquette by means of drawing-room talks. He spoke to half a dozen of his feminine apostles who are anxious to model their manners after the latest fashions. His classes are informal, and his book on American customs will not be out until he is safely away from the country.

"You may be a bore, and I may a bore." he went on, "and we may be unaware of it until a thorough introspection reveals it. Then we may set to work to correct the fault. But to be an unconscious bore and to go through the world without knowing it; can anything be more horrible? Fancy!"

His hearers shuddered and looked meaningly at each other. The person who talks too much is a bore, and the person who measures his words and guards his expressions is also a bore. Dumb people are never bores, although deaf people are frightfully so. Doctors are seldom bo. s. because they are always being bored by their patients, but can't afford to show it. The person who is awfully worst of the class. "The unconscious bore is never so through temperament, but has become so through some uncorrected mannerism or conversational habit. Women are worse bores than men because they talk more. The intensely reserved woman whose opinions are so expressed that they might mean anything is, if anything, a worse bore bored and tells you so is one of the

than the gusher. "Carelessness in speech is the most easily acquired of habits and is the hardest to get rid of. Slipshod talk seems to be general. Slang has become fashionable, and it is quite evident to be extremely daring in conversation is the only way to be up to date. Governesses and teachers laugh today at expressions on the lips a medical school, and the probability of boys and girls that they would have reproved some years age. Both tent with a comparatively inexperiin England and in America society enced man. The doctor now engaged has deteriorated in its conversational is satisfied, and he should be. He is customs.

"There are persons who allow small habits to grow upon them until finalthey make their society irritating. have in mind a young woman of an extremely sympathetic nature which undoubtedly causes her bad conversational manner. In her eagerness to appear thoroughly in touch with the person with whom she talking she literally takes the words out of their mouths and repeats the concluding words of their sentences in unison with them. To talk with her for any length of time becomes a positive torture. This is a severe case, but how many persons can you recall who rarely seem to allow you to finish what you are saying without interposing an answer or question?

"Some there are who interpret flagrantly in the middle of a speech. Others wander in their manner and in their replies. Some have a fashion of twitching their eyes or lips when they listen in conversation. Others emphasize the remarks of the person who is talk with confirming nods and grimaces or violent head shakings to indicate agreement. Everyone knows the person whose gaze travels around the room and everywhere but to the face of the one who is talking. Sometimes the gaze is followed by a remark or a question that is miles away from the subject under discussion Then there is a sudden, almost fierce, interruption to reprove a child or a pet dog or give an order to a servant, sometimes to interlard a remark, the remark always being prefixed by an 'I beg your pardon.'

'I' beg your pardon' is a phrase that is being done to death. your waiter in a restaurant to hand you a salt bottle, and although he understands you perfectly he says licitiously, and with a rising inflec-tion, 'I beg your pardon?' He does this presumably to impress you with a sense of his politeness. A proper rebuke was administered to one of these apologetic waiters by a peppery old gentleman who responded: "What

"But many others besides waiters have formed the 'I beg you pardon' habit, and in their conversation it occurs with a sickening frequency. Some years ago, some over-elegant person found that the simple word was crude and substituted the meaningless 'how' instead, as a query 'How' in time became hideously frequent, and waiters on being ordered to bring salt then replied 'how?' as they beg your pardon today. is a blunt-sounding word, but it expresses meaning, and that is what

"Too eager and exuberant a manner of speech, while not one-half so trying as over-elocutionary conversation or the carefully-guarded expressions of the person who hesitates as to consequences before telling you the time of day, is to be avoided. pression must be cultivated. Oversympathy is is sometimes as embar rassing as over-hospitality. You dine with some people and they make you feel as though you never had dinner before. In conversation also, some folks take you into their confidence too much. You are overwhelmed with their trust in you. They want to tell you all their sins and their shortcomings. This sort of thing needs careful pruning. Repose in conversation is one of its charms. "Frankness and naturalness are always commendable traits, but there is no necessity of recounting your symptoms when you are asked how you are. Truth is beautiful, but your cold in the head will be a thing of the past tomorrow and your neighbor may be spared its relation. Some people get to be nothing but symptoms and finally they become a nuisance in their varying grades of illness and wellness. This talking about illness, disease and lapses. Yet it is persisted in, in spite of all that is said and written against Many otherwise admirable persons will insist on discussing their ailments even over their tea tables. And the imaginary invalids are al-ways the worst. Persons with firstclass appetites and apparently in the best of health will hint at their hidden ailments.

"The horror hunter is always one real sorrow by looking forward others. We should cultivate a healthy optimism in our talk at least. Above all utter no evil prophecies; don't go about reading awful happenings in dreams and omens. Croakers are always bores. So are fault finders. Nothing becomes such a fixed and such an unpleasant habit as this constant fault finding. Discontent, they say, is divine and all great things spring from it; but keep it hidden in your soul if you must cherish it and don't bleat it at the cook. grown persons are like spoiled and children pouting over the good things fate has sent them because they are not more plentiful. And others are like petted pug dogs, who snarl and whimper because they wish to be condoled with.

"Above all, do not try to reform the faults of others while conversing with them by covert remarks. If you do this you will become a worse Fore than all the others put together. Don't try to give sly digs in conversation. This is going to stamp you as provincial, and what you think is clever repartee is sometimes only impertinence, and as you get older it will develop into sourness of speech. Don't over-apologize for things that you have made an error in. Remember it and avoid the fault in the future. Don't bemoan anything. Just bear it and look out for the next time. Try to tell the truth in conversation. It is very bad form to lie nowadays, and, besides, one has to have such a good

"Don't talk about yourself at all and as little as possible about your husband, your children and your servants. Don't talk shop of any sort. Don't talk about your illness or your bills. Don't talk about the faults of other people. Don't talk too much about clothes. Avoid personalities and criticisms of your acquaintances. Neither must you go about like a conspirator, working your eyebrows and giving the impression that you are a mine of secret information. Don't over-manicure your hands and let your manners get ragged at the edges. Above all, don't be any of these kind

A COMMUNITY DOCTOR.

Swedish residents of Ludington, Mich., have introduced there a custom of their country, in the employment of a community doctor. local physicians, it is said, were banded together for the maintenance of uniform and high charges. This sug-gested the idea of a health association, which was organized by the heads of 300 families, each of whom pays 50 cents a month towards the salary of a physician whose services are at their command in case of illness. Many doctors earn no more than the $1,800 a year paid to the Luddington contract physician, but for that sum the organization had to be satisfied with a recent graduate from gaining experience, and has a comfortable salary in adition.

SADNESS EXPLAINED.

In Liverpool recently a sentimental young lady was on the Cunard quay when she saw a young girl sitting on trunk in an attitude of utter dejection and despair. "Poor thing!" thought the romantic lady. "She is probably alone and a stranger. Her pale cheeks and great sad eyes tell of a broken heart and a yearning for sympathy." So she went over to the traveler to win her con-"Crossed in love?" she asked sympathetically. "No," replied the girl, with a sigh, 'crossed in the Servia, and an awfully rough passage, too."

That tired feeling is a burden you need not carry. Hood's Sarsaparilla will rid you of it and renew your courage. d The rearing of worms and manufacture of silk were completely broken up in America by the revolution.

A CAREFULLY PREPARED PILL—Much time and attention were expended in the experimenting with the ingredients that enter into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills before they were brought to the state in which they were first offered to the public. Whatever other pills may be, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of much expert study. Pills are the result of much expert study, and all persons sufferings from dyspepsia or disordered liver and kidneys may confidently accept them as being what they are represented to be.

IMPROVEMENT OF SOCIAL CONDITIONS

Socialism Properly Defined Does Not Mean Deprivation.

The Medieval Palace Contrasted With the Modern Home-The Idea Should Be Not to Take Away From the Few, But to Give to the Many.

[New York Journal.] Many of the feeble-minded believe world is to be made better by depriving certain men of the com-forts which they enjoy.

They would take away this man's yacht, the other man's carriage. They would deprive one of his fine clothing, another of the specious park in which he walks, and a third of the box at the opera. Socialism, properly defined, means improvement of social conditions.

It does not mean depriving a man of anything. It does mean giving the good things to a great many more people. All social improvement and all betterment of human conditions will be based on lifting up the foundations of fort and luxury. Pulling down the lucky, depriving them of what they have, would be stupid.

society, increasing the average com-

pears to be preposterously well off, is simply the ordinary man of a few What was unheard of luxury a few years ago is perfectly commonplace today, and what the many envy now in the few all will enjoy a few years

The utmost privilege of the rich man will be this—that he will enjoy his good things in solitude, but surely since man is gregarious and social in every instinct, the pleasures of solitary enjoyment need not be envied.

Think for yourselves and see how the world has improved, not by taking away from the few that which they have, but by giving the desirable things to the many.

Individual ability, self-indulgence and selfishness put one man above his fellows apparently. The human intellect, working forever on lines of improvement, soon catches up with him. For instance, in Queen Elizabeth's palace there was no running water, no steam, no gas, no electric light, no good kerosene oil even, no bath tub; there were no windows proof against the winter wind-and if there were any knives or forks, they were curiosities from Italy. If any man in those days had had running water, with enough to bathe in, a room uniformly warm, carpets on his floors and electric lights burning, he would have said to himself:

"I am the wonder of the world, and no one will ever enjoy what I enjoy.' The idiots of today, trying to pull down instead of trying to build up, would have advocated cutting his water pipe, destroying his electric plant, taking away all his comforts. But time has done its work. Practically everybody now possesses that ago.

The richest man who crossed the ocean, even in his private boat, in the recollection of many now living, did not begin to enjoy the comfort that any second-class passenger enjoys on any ocean steamer. He was far less comfortable even than the steerage passenger on lines whose steerage is well managed. When the richest owner of the biggest private yacht crosses the ocean in these days, he crosses on a steamer in company with the humble drummer and the humble dressmaker, for, rich as he is, he cannot afford a yacht equal to steamships that carry everybody for a moderate fare.

The foolish men of olden times would have advocated destroying the fine ships, because they could not use

They would have advocated tearing up the beautiful private parks, because they had no private parks. The poorest man in New York possesses and actually owns now in Central Park a park of his own, more beautiful than any monarch ever owned.

The work that was done by the landscape gardeners for a few rich men in the past has helped to make a public park beautiful-and it should not be thought less beautiful because all are allowed to enjoy it, because it contains in addition to its trees and flowers and lakes thousands of happy men and women and children.

When the Queen of Sheba went to see Solomon, with her complimentary messages and her morals none too good, she traveled on a camel, and arrived with pains in her back, or she jolted along in a cart without springs, drawn by humped back oxen, and groaned deeply on her journey to the house built of the cedars of Lebanon.

The thoughtful socialist of her time would have probably taken away her tent on the back of the two-humped camel, would have destroyed her luxurious jolting ox-cart, but he would have been wrong.

For from that ox-cart has sprung the automobile which will carry any man across New York for 10 cents. That mobile, if the Queen of Sheba and Solomon could have seen it, would have kept them talking their queer dialects at the rate of one hundred vords a minute. Incidentally it would have been destroyed, as the work of some devil or magician. Get impressed upon your minds the fact that the world contains and ultimately will provide enough of everything for everybody. Human beings will gradually lose that pig-lke charcteristic which makes them enjoy things only when others haven't them Production and distribution will be organized and limited only by the public demand. Men's material wants will all be satisfied.

be outgrown. Intellectual life will take its place. And this will be brought about, not by the envious, who would tear down, but by the intellectual genius which builds up and which works not to take way from the few, but to give Czolgosz Sentenced.

On Thursday, the trial of Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, came to a conclusion with the formal sentence of the prisoner, who will be put to death by electrocution some time next month. The trial has been eminently dignified and satisfactory, without rest, yet without haste. Two upright and able members of the bar had been appointed to act on the prisoner's behalf, so that no anarchist say that Czolgosz had not been granted the full measure of his legal rights. the calm process of law to "the mob form in this Province. justice" which some would have meted out to the wretched assassin!

It is satisfactory to learn that it is intended to keep the prisoner in completest seclusion until his execution, so as to prevent his obtaining the notoriety, unwholesome for himself and for the public, for which he may have craved. Czolgosz may well spend the few remaining days of his life in preparing himself for his exit from a world in which he has played a part so vile and cowardly. The prisoner, it is said, is losing that bravado which has for the most part marked his demeanor since the assassination; and it is possible that before he dies he may reveal the ramifications of the whole plot of which he was the despicable instrument.

The young limbs of the empire are fresh and healthy, and every effort should be made to keep them so. Nearer to the heart there is greater danger. That question is easily answered, but the problems it suggests are not so to the same cause. It is not sufficienteasily solved. We can only hope that some of the energy that has now to be spent on the Boers may be diverted Buffalo's Friendly Note.

It looks as if the early part of the twentieth century might see a wiping out of the feuds that antagenized the United States, and the British Empire during part of the nineteenth and the latter part of the eighteenth centuries. Canadians have always desired to be on friendly terms with their neighbors, and indications point to a response in kind from the people of the United States. Concerning the attitude of Canadians towards the recent national sorrow which the United States has undergone, the Buffalo News contains the following suggestive paragraph:

"There will be offered an occasion on Friday, the 27th of this month, to show the gratitude we owe Canadians their sympathy freely offered to the people of the United States in the hour of affliction. The 27th has been set down as Teronto day at the Exposition. On that day the mayor of To-ronto, O. A. Howland, and the board aldermen of Toronto will visit the Pan-American as the guests of the directors, and will remain the entire day the grounds. The occasion should be one of hearty greeting to the Can-adians who will be present. Buffalo should show its gratitude by extended should show its gratitude by extended hands and a welcome as courteous as can flow from generous hearts. The time has passed when small differences can estrange those who have awakened to more exalted feelings, who are brothers of right and friends always. The brotherhood of mankind means something to those who can sympathize with each other in affliction. Canadians and Americans affliction. Canadians and Americans know each other better now than ever before, and will avail themselves of the opportunity to greet each other for friendship's sake."

Mr. Tarte's Temporary Disable-

The many friends of Hon. J. Israel Tarte will learn with regret that the accident from which he suffered the other day in Quebec is graver than was at first thought. He is suffering from considerable deafness in the left ear, and his medical attendant strongly recommends that he should take as much rest as possible for some time to come. Mr. Tarte was to have been the guest of honor at a banquet to be given by the Montreal Chamber of Commerce on Oct. 3 next. The banquet has been necessarily postponed to a date to be determined later on. We hope to hear of Mr. Tarte's complete restoration to health. Ontario could hereafter point to this trial and has a friendly hand for the energetic and plucky Minister, as is testified by the cordial reception always extended How infinitely superior this method of him whenever he appears on the plat-

But there are many elevators which do not come under the jurisdiction of the Factories Act, and which consequently are not under inspection; those, for instance, in offices, stores, warehouses, and public buildings, should be placed under the same or similar inspection as those in factories. Liability to accident would be appreciably lessened were each municipality to assign the duty of inspection to one of its officers, or appoint a special officer for that purpose. Let all elevators be inspected at regular intervals.

Like any other art, it is only to be learned by long and patient practice.

Does Not Come by Nature.

[New York Observer.] Part of the difficulty in writing probably lies in the tendency to take it for granted that the writing of one's own language comes by nature. Hence, even teachers of experience find it hard to realize that the high school pupil often needs drill upon sentence structure before he is prepared to write themes. Presumably he has been taught in the lower grades to pose short sentences on easy subjects: out as his ideas become more complex, the old means of expression is too limited and he has not acquired skill for more elaborate linguistic efforts, so he flounders helplessly in a ried tenight.' I told him I would do maze of long involved sentences without logical beginning or end.

"Our Canadian Brothers." [Louisville Courier-Journal.] There was something more than mere formality in the expression which came to us from other lands on the assassination of President Mc-Kinley. There was also more than the sympathy which springs spontaneously from the shock of a blow that strikes at all humankind in the stroke dealt to one branch of it. Behind all this were, in many instances, evidences of sterling good will and good feeling to the American people, which should be, and are, highly prized by them. It was natural, no doubt, that these should be most notable among those of our blood and language in the British Empire, and it was as natural that they should be most pronounced among our close neighbors across the Can-adian border. Where is the Poet? [Chicago Tribune.]

The tragedy at Buffalo sounded the whole gamut of human emotions. Love, hate, fear, anger, sympathy, compassion-all the primal passions were aroused. Nothing could have been more dramatic than the spectacle of a single, cowardly, skulking wretch throwing a nation into tears. Nothing could have been more pathetic than the deep, yet hopeful, silence in which the people waited for the news from Buffalo. Nothing could be more inspiring than the way in which they rallied from the shock and faced the future with the confidence that "God reigns and the government at Washington still lives." Nowhere was ever given a more beautiful example of devotion than that which bound together the president and his wife. Never was a deathbed illumined more brightly by the light of a Christian hope and faith. There was every-thing to inspire the poet. Yet though yards upon yards of verses have been written, the first poem has yet to appear. Do we lack the poet? Or is the event yet too near for poetic treatment? It may be that the canadian border. Gerthen described to witness the accident ald made no objection to loaning the rifle. Witness did not return it until Andrew Rogers came for it some months

The following week witness went down to Gerald's to "square it" with Gerald, as Edgar Morden had told witness that Gerald INTENDED TO SHOOT HIM.

Witness did not see Gerald that time. A few days later witness went to Gerald's again on the same errand. Witness did not see Gerald, but was speaking to Walter Herbert.

Witness next went to Gerald's on the day on which he came into the city to give High Constable McLoud the information. Witness signed no paper when he gave McLoud the information On this occasion, in conversation with Berald, witness did not speak of Gerald's suspected intention of shooting him. Witness did not mean to ask Gerald direct, but meant to judge of his ntentions from his manner of speaking. Gerald asked witness if he had iny early potatoes, and witness replied that he would have some in a week and a half. Witness did not know at this time that he was going to give the information that day.

Witness was picking cherries at his own place that day, when Gerald passed. There was no conversation between Witness went to borrow the rifle on

A Winter Excursion. [Winnipeg Free Press.]

The Western Press Association, including in its membership most of the editors of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, have mapped out an unique excursion for the winter months. They propose to go to California taking in, either going or com ing, all the centers of population i the Western States; and if arrangements to that end can be made they intend to take with them a complete exhibit of agricultural products and resources of Manitoba and the Northwest, with which it is intended to enlighten the understandings of the dwellers in those parts. The association intends to ask aid from the various governments, local and federal. in securing a thoroughly good exhibit and in making the trip a success as an advertisement for the Canadian West. A gathering of representative editors from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories would be a body of men admirably well-fitted to give first-hand information about this great country of ours: the scheme is worthy of systematic consideration by the governments interested.

AT THE ASYLUM

Patients and Staff Enjoy Themselves in Out-of-Door Games.

The annual sports at the asylum were held yesterday afternoon. For fourteen years this day of sports has been the great day of the summer season, a holiday for patients and staff, and a time of capital fun all round. It has a good reputation both in the surrounding country and the city, and each year many visitors have gone to the beautiful grounds at the asylum to witness the contests. Yesterday they were present in large numbers, and had a solid afternoon of en-joyment. Among the crowd were many of the best known men of the city, all of whom assisted merrily in making the day the great success it was. Races of all kinds and various other tests of skill and muscular vigor were entered in by the patients and others who were eligible, and contested vigorously. The asylum authorities had worked very hard to make the day successful in all respects, and, with the aid of delightful weather, achieved a gratifying success.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

The Annual Meeting of the London Branch,

The annual meeting of the London branch of the Lord's Day Alliance was held last night in the First Presbyterian Church. The attendance was not large, but what was lacking in the attendance was made up in the attention accorded the speakers and the zeal on the part of the speakers which called forth that attention. The principal speakers were Rev. G. J. Bishop, paster of the First Methodist Church and Mr. John Patterson, K.C., of Levento. Both speakers dwelt upon the necessity of co-operation with labor unions in the matter of enforcing Sabbath observance.

forcing Sabbath observance.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Rev. J. G. Stuart; vice-president, Rev. C. T. Scott; treasurer, Mr. George W. Armstrong; auditors, Ald. Greenlees and J. G. Wright. The executive committee consists of the following persons: J. G. Wright, W. B. Saunders, Alexander Fraser, George Robinson, Thomas McCormick and the pastors of the city churches.

Had Rough Passage. Brigus, Nfld., Sept. 26.-The Peary Arctic Club steamer Windward arrived here this morning after a stormy passage of 28 days from Cape Parry, North Greenland, where she parted company with the chartered steamer Erik, which arrived at Sydney, C.B., on Sept. 13. The Windward left Sydney July 20, 1900, and wintered at Tayer Harbor, Grinnell Land, with Mrs. Peary and Miss Peary on board. The Windward brings as passengers Robert Stein, of Washington, and Samuel Warmbath, of Boston, who were taken north by the Peary steamer Diana and landed near Cape Sabine in August, 1899. The Windward will remain at Brigus during the winter, and return in the summer of 1902, with Mrs. Peary and Miss Peary, to Cape Sabine, whence she is expected to bring home Mr. Peary, returning from the pole. land, where she parted company with the

"A BRACE OF PARTRIDGES." "A BRACE OF PARTRIDGES."

The value of having a theater on a first-class circuit is appreciated when such plays as "A Brace of Partridges" are presented. No cleaner-cut farce-comedy has ever been put on in London. Mr. H. Reeves-Smith made good the declaration of Mr. Richard Golden that "he is without doubt the finest comedian on the English or American stage today." His impersonation of the dual role of the His impersonation of the dual role of the His impersonation of the dual role of the two Partridges was a delightful piece of work, and the large audience that was at the Grand recalled him repeatedly in enthusiastic appreciation. Mr. Reeves-Smith has not depended upon his own acting alone to make the play, but has selected a company of capable actors and actresses to assist him. Miss Margaret Robinson won the audience at the first by her natural charm of manner. The other members of the company took their her members of the company took their parts with much skill. As for the play itself, it is simply a modernized "Comedy of Errors," with nicely conceived situations and cleverly written dialogue.

'McCarthy's Mishaps" Tomorrow "McCarthy's Mishaps," with Ferguson and Mack in the cast, will be the bill at the New Grand tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon and evening. The piece is afternoon and evening. The piece is merely a vehicle for introducing a num-ber of interesting specialties, and is said to be most amusing. The prices will be popular—50, 35 and 25 cents, with a special 25 cent matinee, the first of the season.

SHEA'S ON MONDAY.

Tomorrow's papers will contain a full list of the artists to be offered vaudeville lovers, as numbers of the first bill presented in this city by Mr. Shea's own show, direct from his Toronto and Buffalo theaters. Mr. Shea is very anxious to place high-class vaudeville on a permanent basis in London, and promises as early headliners such noted stars as Jessie Bartlett Davis, Edna Waliace Hopper, Eugene Cowles, James J. Cor-Hopper, Eugene Cowles, James J. Corbett, etc. The Shea attractions will appear in London at exactly the same prices as in Toronto and Buffalo, the best seat in the house being offered at 50 cents. The scale of prices will be 50, 35 and 25 cents with matiness at 25 cents and 25 cents.

An engagement that will find many patrons has been made in the re-engagement of the Burrill Comedy Company, ment of the Burrill Comedy Company, supporting Laura Hulbert in a repertoire of popular plays, at the London Opera House for two weeks, commencing Monday next. The opening bill will be the strong society drama, "Felectia," a play which Miss Hulbert has had in preparation this past summer. The company is greatly strengthened by the addition of several new artists, and doubtless at their opening engagement next Monday they will be greeted by a packed house. Among the repertoire to be given for the first time in London will be "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." Seats now on sale.

Brother of Preceding Witness Gives Evidence Against Gerald Sifton.

Tells of the Prisoner Calling at His Boarding House on the Night of June 29 and What Transpired --- The Mysterious Vial.

At the Sifton murder trial this morning, court resumed promptly at 9:30. The crowd in attendance was smaller than usual, several benches at the back being unoccupied.

On opening of court, James Morden again took the stand. To Mr. Riddell he said he because Edgar told him Gerald intended to do so. Witness never had any "great dealings" with Edgar Morden, and said that he knew him only casually.

The judge would not allow witness to answer a question as to whether he thought Martin Morden would undertake the job of killing the old man. This concluded James Morden's evi-

Martin Morden.

Martin Morden, brother of James Morden, is a carpenter, residing in London during the summer and in London township in the winter. Witness knew Gerald Sifton, having worked for him. Witness saw Gerald Sifton at I a.m. Saturday, June 30, at his own boarding house, $12 Dundas street. Witness was in bed when Gerald came. Witness was called to the door and found Gerald there. The latter said he wished some confidential conservation with witness. "He put his hand in his pocket and DREW OUT A VIAL.

It was crystal like. He said 'If one thing would not work another would.' The vial was about three inches in length and three-quarters of an inch around the bottle, white or very light in color. It was a liquid. Gerald said if I would not go with him, he would have to go alone, though it was a risky thing for a person to tackle alone." Witness went out next afternoon and saw Gerald, who gavee him an account of the accident.

"He said he was knocking boards off and he split one. The old man FLEW IN A PASSION and he went up and fell out. Gerald said if the old man had not been in a passion when it occurred, he would not have felt so bad about it. Gerald said he had talked with his father and he had persuaded him to postpone the marriage for some time. Edgar was with me, and Edgar told him he had better be careful as to how he told about knocking the boards off with the axe, as there were only hammer marks on the board.' On Saturday, July 7, witness saw Gerald again and had a conversation "Gerald asked me if I had seen the boys lately and how they were feeling, meaning my brother and Edgar. I said I hadn't seen them. He said Edgar had told him we were all of the same opinion and BELIEVED HIM IN FAULT.

He asked if we were not paid were we going to squeal on him. He said He said Edgar had told him it would take the price of a fifty-acre farm to do so. I said as far as I was concerned I would not accept a soiltary cent if I was bordering on starvation. I said I thought my brother was of the same opinion as myself, but I would see him and let Gerald know. I saw my brother and then saw Gerald and told him my brother said

WOULD NOT ACCEPT ANYTHING and had no intention whatever of not keeping quiet. This was on the Sun-day following Joseph Sifton's death." Edgar and Martin went to Gerald's on Sunday. Before going they had been at Joseph Sifton's barn, looking around, and were interrupted in their conversation by Ephraim Bathurst. Witness told Bathurst afterwards that they were seeing how the murder might have occurred. Witness and Edgar met at James' house, and wheeled over to the Sifton barn. They went there to see the remains, but they had been removed to Gerald's house. Edgar suggested that they go to the barn and make an examination. Witness supposed Edgar

This finished Martin Morden's ex-P. C. ROBERTSON.

Robert Robertson, a member of the London police force, heard of Joseph Sifton's death about 10 p.m. on Saturday, June 30. Witness identified prisoner as the man he met on Dundas street, near Ontario street, London East, at about 12:45 o'clock on Saturday morning. Prisoner was looking for a boarding house kept by a Mr. Henderson. Prisoner wanted to find a man who used to work for Prisoner mentioned the name, which witness could not remember, but thought it was Martin. Prisoner said he came about seven miles, from St. Johns. After casual conversation witness asked prisoner his name and he said it was Gerald Sifton. Witness tried to find the house for Gerald, but could not. Gerald went away, came back, and told witness that a lady said the house was next to Kilgour's. Witness found later that Martin Morden lived in the house. Gerald said he wanted to find Morden because he had a message for him. Witness offered to deliver a message before 9 a.m., but prisoner said it would not do, as he wanted to take Morden out with him. Gerald went to the house and rang the bell. A man came, went back, and sent another man out. Gerald went into the house with him and came out at 1:30. ANDREW GARDINER, living on lot 17, con. 6, of London township, last saw Joseph Sifton alive on Saturday morning, June 30, about 6:05 Sifton was driving east on con. 6, and turned south on the Proof Line road. Sifton had a lady with him but witness did not know who she was. Witness was about 40 yards away when they pass

Mr. Johnston did not cross-examine, and witness left the stand, but was recalled by Mr. Riddell to answer some further questions.

Witness went to Joseph Sifton's barn about 3 p.m. the same afternoon. Witness saw John Sifton pick up the axe and three bricks, and carry them away. There were other bricks around, some near and some farther away. Witness saw the place from which Sifton was said to have fallen. Witness WOULD NOT HAVE GOT UP THERE stood on the tie-beam, he said. From the tie-beam a man could not fall through the opening. To Mr. Johnston, witness said that after one board was off, a man might stand on the collar-beam and knock boards off, or he might get on the outside, holding by the collar-beam, and fall from there. Witness knew Joseph Sifton and knew he was a ventureso and an active man, who had met with a number of accidents in his life. Jos eph Sifton's windmill extended high above the barn, and a man who would climb up there after night would climb almost anywhere. High Constable Wm. McLoud was in the witness stand when the court ad-

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was this afternoon tenced to be electrocuted in Auburn state prison in the week beginning

Before sentence was pronounced the assassin evinced a desire to speak, but he could not get his voice above a whisper, and his counsel repeated his words to the court. "There was no one else but me," said Czolgosz. "No one else told me to do it; and no one paid me to do it. I was not told anything about the crime, and I never thought anything about that until a couple of days before the crime." "Czolgosz sat down. He was calm, to knock the boards off; he would have but his temples glistened with perspiration. His weakness and vanishing strength were well indicated by his difficulty of speech.

The detectives touched the prisoner on the shoulder and told him to stand up, that they might place the handcuffs on his wrists. He looked at them with an expression of the profoundest fear and helplessness in his eyes. He glanced at the crowd who were anxious to get a glimpse at his face. It was evident that he feared violence.

[New York Observer.] The prevalent custom of allowing pupils to write upon themes beyond and Quebec. their grasp is responsible for many of their faults. A boy has an essay to prepare for a public occasion. With the assent of his teacher he selects a subject which sounds well to him, such as The Future of the Republic, Great Britain's Colonial Policy, or perhaps omething more vague and high-flown like True Greatness. Having absolutely nothing original to say on these matters, he proceeds with great elaboration to say it. He carefully constructs an introduction, a body of his discourse, and a conclusion. The ef-fusion finally produced by the com-bined labor of the boy and his teacher is usually of a kind which is not merely absurd in itself, but hurtful to its author. His taste has been vitiated by having a false standard of composition implanted in his mind.

One year ago the millinery department of Runians, Gray, Carrie Company was thrown open to the ladies of London in all it brilliance and splendor. At that time it was considered undoubtedly the best in the city, and a display that in its excellence and completeness would be difficult to surpass. Since then, however, Messrs. Carson & McKee, both practical business men, have been identified with the firm, and together with Mr. Runians, have placed the Runians, Carson, McKee Company foremost among the depart-

"Well, I have heard that last night there was a grand game of hide-and-seek after I had gone to my room. A friend of mine went with others to look for you, of mine went with others to look for you, and happened to go quite to the other side of the house in search of you; and this friend went up a private staircase into a room we call the red drawing-room, through a private door leading from the picture gallery, and having opened this door quite softly, this person heard voices in the dark—yours and Lord Hammond's. This friend heard him say, 'Give me a kiss, my Elsie,' and then you laughed and answered, 'Twenty if you like, Lord Hammond.' Then he kissed you, and you laughed and said, 'Suppose the old dame knew this, who thinks I am such a good little schoolgir!?' and he then said, 'You were the prettiest girl in Surrey, and that if he could choose a wife he would choose you.' You answered, 'Lord Hammond, you are a coward, and I shall have a fortune larger than yours. My father's partisans are going to give me a splendid estate as a wedding gift.' At that moment little Miss Ferrers came to the outer door of the room and turned the handle and found it locked, and she called out ment little Miss Ferrers came to the outer door of the room and turned the handle and found it locked, and she called out, thinking that you were there alone. 'Open open, it's not fair for one who hides to lock the door.' Then this friend of mine—I will not say if it is a gentleman or a lady—went quickly away and hid behind a statue in the picture gallery. This person saw Lord Hammond pass; two minutes after that you came by. Anderson, my maid, saw you only; but was was in the great hall close to the fire when you came in shivering and looking wild, and you told her you had been hiding and they could not find you. She told you that it was absurd to remain so long in that it was absurd to remain so long in the cold when the others could not find you. Do you recollect that? you. Do you recollect that?"
Indigation and horror of this cruel falsehood held Elsie dumb for a space. It was Pauline Bracegirdle who had poisoned the mind of the countess against her; Pauline, who did not know that Elsie had overheard every word of her own dialogue with Lord Hammond.
"No, no, I had no right to hear! I must not reveal what I overheard; even if I not reveal what I overheard; even if I did perhaps Lady Chase would not be-lieve me. She has known Miss Brace-

"Lady Chase," said Elsie, quietly, "there is not a word of truth in what you have

"Indeed!" said Lady Chase. "That is very strange!"

You do not believe me," Elsie went on "And you say I am not to ask him; but I wish you would ask him, now at once. Lock me up somewhere where you are sure that I can't tell him anything, for I sure that I can't tell him anything, for I see that you think me a degraded, wretched girl; then tell him that his talk with me was overheard in the red room, and he may tell you who it was that he was speaking to."

"No," said the countess; "I never pain my son by mentioning these little follies to him. He will learn wisdom in time. Whoever it was that he was speaking to was sadly wanting in modesty, and delicacy, and womanly dignity."

"And you believe that I was that girl? Oh! Lady Chase, some day you will find your mistake!" "And you believe that I was that girl? Oh! Lady Chase, some day you will find your mistake!"

"I find as I grow older," said the countess, coldly, "that I make many mistakes. I trust those who do not deserve to be trusted; but I will tell you all that I have heard now, Miss Carew, and then you will understand that, for the remainder of your visit, it will be better and wiser to avoid all flirtation with Lord Hammond. I have heard that you and Arthur laid a plot to get you locked up in the Gower, and then he was to drive back to look for you?"

"And this person who tells you all this—you believe in this person thoroughly—do you, Lady Chase."

Elsie asked the question in all the audacity of youth, honesty and innocence. For the moment she forgot that she was only a school girl, and that the personage for the moment she forgot that she was only a school girl, and that the personage she was questioning was the countess of Chase. At another moment Lady Chase would have been even pleased at Elsie's hardihood, but now she considered that this same hardihood was coupled with deceit and falsehood, immodesty and ingratitude. I do not admit your right to question me in that tone, Miss Carew.'

The countess looked severe now, and Elsie felt cut to the heart. She could not

Elsie feit cut to the heart. She could not resent unkindness from this noble woman, because she knew that Lady Chase would as soon have cut of her right hand as have acted knowingly with the injustice she was now acting with, but, all the same, Elsie was cut to the heart.

"Lady Chase," said Elsie, gently, "seme day you will find out that you have been deceived, and that I have done nothing wrong. I wish new," she went on, speaking with a little more fervor, "that I had not returned in the trap with Lord Hammond, but had accepted Miss Stanly's invitation, but I thought it would be giving more trouble."

"Well," said the countess, "you had "Well," said the countess, "you had better go to bed and sleep well now, and as a favor I request that you will act exactly as if I had not given you this warning, except that I hope all firtation with Lord Hammond will cease; but continue here at Charteris for the remainder of your holidays exactly as I mainder of your holidays exactly as mainder of your holidays exactly as I have invited you to do-enjoy yourself, be as happy as you can, only remember that Lord Hammond is a flirt; that if you encourage him you will be acting in bad taste and paining me, and lowering the high standard of a young lady's character. Believe me—I say it without bitterness as without prejudice—Lord Hammond has no more idea of marrying you than he has of marrying—anyone else in this world. Good night, Miss Carew."

The countess made a movement with The countess made a movement with her white hand, but Eisle would not see it. She looked down and bowed.

reverently, then she glided from the room.
Locked into her own, Elsie gave way to a passionate burst of weeping; her whole soul seemed on fire. Injustice wielded the sword which had pierced her soul, and, as she wept on, the consciousness of this gave her strength. Some day—some day things weuld come right, and she would stand spetiess and white in her rectitude before the good woman who had misjudged her.

"I will do what is right," said Elsie, as she undressed and prepared for bed, "and then everything must come right at the last."

Taken broadly this was a safe hype-thesis, but there lay between poor Elsle and that day of righting a complete chaos of disaster, cruelty and danger. Tragedy was there also, and wiekedness whetting his sword, and a skeleton still more hideous lay hidden under the spring flowrets in this girl's life-path. Still, a good angel watched over her slumbers that night, and her dreams were bright and peaceful as the broad, smooth flowing of some clear and placid river shining in the beams of the morning summer sun.

CHAPTER XIV. CHAPTER XIV.

Pauline Bracegirdle was not a good sleeper. Sometimes it happens in fiction, and in real life, that the utterly unscrupulous and self-seeking are gifted with splendid physical health; they eat, they sleep, they walk, they ride, they undergo manifold fatigues of mind and body, but they ever return with a smiling face to the front. like the prize-fighter who has received a blow that would make an ordinary man wince and reel, but who presents to lookers-on the jovial countenance of a man who has suffered nothing.

Pauline Bracegirdle was not a strong woman; her appetite was small, her sleep was crowded with unpreasant dreams. Circumstances and training, a misguided childhood, manifold temptations, many privations—these had been the fostering influences of a soul distorted from its infancy, and needing the guiding of loving hands, the luminous shining of bright examples. Neither of these had fallen to her share, and Pauline remained what examples. Neither of these had fallen to her share, and Pauline remained what she had grown into—a woman with a bitter heart, an unsatisfied ambitton, a cruel nature. Physically she was weak; she was tall and slim and graceful, but her back ached if she climbed a steep hill; her appetite failed unless her food were of the daintiest, and her sleep was often a succession of hideous nightmare visions.

well, Miss Bracegirdle tossed and turned, turned and tossed, and could find no rest. The dark December hours seemed endless. Memory held a scroll before her eyes in letters of fire. Sleep would not come. She arose from her luxurious hed come. She arose from her luxurious bed and built up her fire anew, and she turned on the streaming light of the lamp still more brightly. She took down a French novel, wrapped herself in a fine cloth dressing-gown and tried to read, but the deeds and successes, the triumphs and pleasures of those unheroine-like heroines failed to interest her that night.

and pleasures of those unheroine-like heroines failed to interest her that night. She flung the book down.

Shakespeare! Where was Shakespeare that long sad night? Imagine that the countess could have guessed that her talented and beautiful protege never gave one single thought to the great master of poesy and philosophy—the inspired reader of human nature—during all those restless, desolate hours. Concealment, the necessity of wearing a mask, the perpetual weaving of the tangled web of deception—these were the rules of this young woman's life, and already these chains and fetters galled her.

She had vowed to herself that she would be nothing less than a rich English countess, and she was obliged to make the world believe that she desired to become a magnificent renderer of Shakespeare. Then there was Lafonte—Paul Lafonte—"the fool" as she called him in her heart; yet how useful the young Frenchman was to her! How completely his devotion to her, and her apparent devotion to him, disarmed the suspection of the world! A few there were who looked on at her with incredulous wonder and vague surmisings—Basil Byrne, among these; but at Charteris Court the lady visitors this Christmas season were all too much bent on their own schemes to bestow much attention on a delicate girl who was supposed to possess on art soul—to be Shakespeare mad—to care nothing for any mortal save Paul Lafonte, the secretary.

Women who have been cured of womanly diseases by the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, frequently refer with pleasure to the gain in appearance as well as in feelings, which has come with their cure.
"Favorite Prescription" cures irregularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. Sick women are invited to consult Dr.

Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence treated as sacredly private and confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Your medicines have done me so much good I feel like a different woman," writes Mrs. Mary Murphy, of Milhon, Trimble Co., Kentucky. "Six months ago I began to think I would not see another well day, but had made up my mind to follow your advice and give Dr. Pierce's medicines a thorough trial. I have taken six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' six of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' four vials of Dr. Pierce's Peilets, two bottles of 'Shart-Weed.' Also some 'Lotion Tablets.' Mave gained five pounds since last August. I will tell the good news to all suffering invalids, for it was a 'Heavenly message' to me when I found out what to do for relief."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

A DIFFERENT MAN

From What He Was a Few Weeks Ago, Says Mark Hanna of President Roosevelt.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 27 .- "President Roosevelt is a different man than he was a few weeks ago," said Senator Hanna in an interview with a Leader reporter. "He has always been honest in purpose, strong in action, and true to his own and to Republican principles. The new and great responsibilities that have been so suddenly thrust upon his shoulders have given him equipoise and conservatism. These responsibilities have rounded out his character. I believe that he will live death so suddenly and cruelly took our beloved president, Wm. McKinley, from our midst. "It is not often that men come so suddenly and unexpectedly face to face with the great responsibilities resting on the president of the United States. and few men could have met these responsibilities with so much dignity, good judgment and common sense as did President Roosevelt. He merits not only the confidence of this country, but he deserves the confidence of the entire nation, and I believe that he has

GOOD MANNERS IN THE HOME. Too many people have the impression that almost any kind of temper—odds and ends of manners as it were—will do for home use. A certain servant in answer to a mother's question as to whether her boy had come home from school yet, declared that the boy had come. The servant admitted that she had not seen the boy, but was sure that he had come, because the cat was "a-hidin' under the dresser." A very wee boy, on being shown a picture of a group of people, remarked with unconscious sarcasm of one of the male members of the group: "I guess that must be a papa, because he looks so cross." There is in real life altogether too much foundation for these stories If religion is worth anything at all it ought to be of the kind that is sweet and winsome at home.-New York Observer.

COMMUNION CUPS

New Revolution in the Method of Administering the Lord's Supper.

[From the Church Economist.] We have received over 60 additional replies to our inquiries in reference to the individual communion cups. Of these all are warmly in favor of the new method, with a single exception, and he only says: "We see no improvement."

From the Plymouth Congregational of Seattle, Wash., the Rev. W. H. G. Temple reports: "Our peo-ple have been delighted with it from the beginning I look upon the individual cup as the solution of some very unpleasant questions connected with the old method.'

where there are so many consumptives, and so much fear of infection, it is a sense of relief to be able to partake of the sacrament without fear of the results. I find many who say they had not communed for a long time now doing so, as all the former objections are removed."

The Rev. John Q. Adams, of the First Presbyterian Church, of Canandaigua, N. Y., reports: "We do not it decent to ask all who sit at our tables to drink from the same cup; why should we think that it is at the Lord's table?"

The Rev. Robert Q. Taylor, of the Presbyterian Church of San Bernardino, Cal., says: "I think all recognize that in a place like this, where there are so many consumptives, the individual service is a necessity. It has come here to stay.

The Rev. W. Hayes Moore, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Santa Fe, N. M., says: "The sanitary value of the change alone is a sufficient rea-son for the adoption of the individual I think our people never enjoyed the sacramental season as they do

The Rev. O. J. Hogan, of the Dutch Reformed Church, of St. Johnsville, N. Y., says: "I find the old system repulsive to me. At our synod com-munion I turned the one cup round so that I might use it where some one else had not. Wendered why that stylish, up-to-date church had not made the change. I have kept account of communicants at four services and noted that they gradually increased in number."

The First Baptist Church, of Denver, Col., the Rev. C. H. Emmons, pastor, reports: Many of the members who formerly remained away the communion have returned and the increased attendance has been nearly 50 per cent. The preventing of contagion from tubercucatarrh and other diseases influence every reasonable person to work for the adeption of the individual cup. It does not detract from the sacred memorial service."

HAPPILY WEDDED AT "CEDARDALE FARM"

Miss Annie Martin Becomes the Bride of Mr. Thomas Walker.

Belmont, Sept. 26.-A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of son of Sarah Anna Fear, relict Mr. Wm. Martin, "Cedardale Farm," of the late Edwin Wilcox Fear, aged on Tuesday evening, when his only 90 years. Deceased, who passed away daughter, Miss Annie, was united in at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr.

R. S. Holmes, 22 Victor street, was prosperous young farmer of Westminsa strong liking for flesh meat, and can detect this kind of food from vegeter. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. D. Moyer, pastor of the Methodist Church, of which the bride was an esteemed member. While Miss Ethel Walker, of Dorchester, played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, the bridal party took their places beneath a beautiful floral arch. The bride entered the room on the arm of her father, who gave her away. She was charmingly costumed in a gown of white silk en train. The walst was made entirely of insertion and tucks, with fancy collar richly embroidered in silk and trimmings of mousseline de soie. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Annie Walker, was becomingly attired in white silk organdie over pink, trimmed with Valenciennes insertion, and carried pink carnations. The groom was supported by Mr. D. Martin, brother of the bride. Only the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends witnessed the event. After the customary congratulations a dainty lunch was nature, was solemnized last night, served. The bride's going-away gown when Miss Nellie Cayanarh sister of with cream broadcloth facings, and Mrs. Charles Doe, 317 Hyman street, was trimmed with black silk applique and Mr. George Trudell, foreman at and blouse of old rose silk. She wore Stevens & Burns', were made one. The happy pair were married by Rev. Dr. falo, followed by the congratulations also a large black Gainsboro hat. Mr.

Letters to the Editor

Across the Atlantic Coming West.

[By George W. Armstrong.] It is said that the scum of Europe finds its way to America. No doubt this is true to some extent, as some prove. But this is not so to any great extent as regards Canada. Whether our laws are too exacting and too evil doers or not, I will not say; but true it is, that with few exceptions, great criminals do not find our Dominion a desirable place for their machinations. Canada loves liberty, but detests libertines, and gives a hearty welcome to good citizens, no matter from what clime they may come. From external appearance the "emigrants" on board our westbound twin screw steamer were desirable citizens for our fair Dominion, but what diverse destinations they had. Some remained on our eastern coast— New Brunswick and the lower provinces; others were bound for our western boundary, the salubrious shores of British Columbia. A few went to our golden city in the gold regions of the Yukon, and others were scattered about in verifications. scattered about in various parts of Ontario, Manitoba, and even the is-lands of our lakes. The chief objection to a sea yoyage is sea sickness; or, to put it in perhaps less objectionable phraseology, mal de One could perhaps even tolerate this if it could be enjoyed in some quiet, secluded, out-of-the-way place. But the malady is no respecter of persons, has no consideration for times, circumstances or places, gives little or no notice of sinister designs, and takes advantage of the peculiar rolling of the ship to get in its most effective work.

Sea sickness is indulged in in the open manner possible; and those, who on shore are very fastid-lous about appearances, are frequently seen within measurable distance the ship's sides, with the expression "Oh, my!" continually on their lips, and ready at short notice to take impromptu lessons on the instincts and habits of the finny tribes who ceive is to be told. "That's right, it lief without weakening effects which will do you good; it will remove the usually attend the medibile; you'll be all the better for it cines." 25 cents.

when it's over." Job's comforters! It is said that bile is a great disturber of peace—both personal and domestic—and makes the best-tempered man somewhat cross; if this is so, then some of my fellow-passengers would be good tempered for the rest of their days, for they did not fail to deal out this commodity most lavishly. It is somewhat singular TO AID 7TH BAND that when sea sickness is most preva-lent, those who seem able to resist its attractions should make it the subject of their conversation and jests, until they, having tempted Providence in this way, prepare themselves to become its victims. Considering the vast mercantile fleets that are constantly afloat—the thousands of ships of all nations that plow the vasty deep-it will be thought incredible that in crossing the Atlantic only about five or six ships were sighted; and though the good old Book, which rink will be found to be well ventilated and quite comfortable. It has been tastefully decorated, and there will be plenty of seating accommodation for things are and wide sea, wherein are things are and wide sea, wherein are things are anning in the sook, which our late revered Queen is credited with saying is the secret of England's tastefully decorated, and there will be greatened and wide sea, wherein are things are anning in the sook. things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts; there go the ships; there is that leviathan, whom thou hast made to play therein," yet in the nearly 3,000 miles of continuous briney water only four or five fishes (dolphins) made themselves visible, and two or three whales (scriptural leviathans) displayed themselves to show what excellent temperance spouters they were.

We also passed several icebergs, which was a great relief. Icebergs are very beautiful to look at, but are very dangerous if you come in too close contact with them. We saw them in the distance—two or three miles away—but brought them near with our powerful glasses.

The perils of the deep are multiplied on the Banks of Newfoundland. Icebergs and fogs of dense darkness are an unholy alliance. One night we had to stop the ship for several hours, until the "fog raised," and few of the passengers prepared themselves for their berths until safety was assured. We came within a few yards of dispatching a couple of fishing smacks into futurity. A fisherman's life is full of The faithful companions of our voyage were sea gulls—feathery friends. Eight or ten of these birds followed us incessantly until we reached the Newfoundland Banks, and then we lost sight of them owing to the fogs, but in course of time they turned up again and remained with us until nearly the end of our journey. Sea gulls have a wonderful instinct for meal times; quite as powerful as the fat boy in Pickwick. If they were not visible an hour before, they were sure detect this kind of food from vege-tables, with their keen eye, at a fairly long distance. Several days we kept them near the vessel for hours throwing pieces of meat into the water: the rapidity of their motion and sureness of their aim was truly marvelous. Our ocean greyhounds travel with almost the exactness of locomotives on land. The ship's officers could tell us at almost what hour of the day we would sight land and at what hour certain points would be reached and Night or day seemed to be both alike to them. Ocean travel is now reduced to an almost "exact science." The gulf, then the mouth, then the River St. Lawrence; familiar names which indicated that we were nearing our much-loved Canada. A trip to the old country is somewhat exciting and inspiring to those particularily who have never crossed the ocean, but the prospect of planting our feet again on the shores of the Dominion produces a thrill of joy that noth ing short of loving loyalty can surpass. Such a "thrill" many experienced as they were nearing home, thankful that the perils of the deep were passed and that after temporary pleasure came the feeling of a permanent resting place. But what about the strangers who were reaching our shores for the first time? Their future was an enigma; their home a figment of the imaginations; their friends largely unknown; their experiences would develop as the days passed by; and time would make his records of success or failure. we could do was to give them welcome and load them with good wishes and trust they would be as good to Canada as Canada desires to be to them.

Demand for Hour Glasses.

[New York Sun.] "Most people think that hour glasses went out of style years ago," said a clerk in a Twenty-third street store, along with perukes and breeches, but as a matter of fact we have more calls for them today than we have had at any time within the last ten years. That this renewed popularity of the hour glass augurs its universal acceptance as a time-piece by the coming generation, I am not prepared to say, but if such a renaissance were to become assured it would be no more surprising than some of the other recent fads based on a re vival of lost customs. Anyway a brief study of the hour glass will do nobody any harm. There are thousands in this generation who have not the slightest idea, what an hour glass looks like, and it won't hurt them to broaden their education along these lines. "Of the hour glasses sold at present the three-minute glass is in the lead. This glass is used almost exclusively to measure time in boiling eggs, and its usefulness naturally places its sale a little in advance of the more sentimental varieties. Next comes the five, ten and fifteen minute and full hour glasses, which are bought chiefly by musicians for piano practice and by lodges and secret societies.

"The sand used in an hour glass is the very finest that the world affords. The western coast of Italy furnishes most of it, as it has done for ages past. The cost of hour glasses is regulated by the ornamentation of the frames. A glass set in a plain rosewood case can be bought for $1, while a mahogany frame comes to $1 50 or $2. Of course the price can be brought up still higher by fancy carving and decoration. Swell lodges sometimes go to this extra expense, but most people are satisfied with the cheaper grades.
