Our I's andOther Eyes.

Our I's are fust as strong as they were fifty years ago, when we have cause to use them. But we have less and less cause to praise ourselves, since others do the praising, and we are more than willing for you to see us through other eyes. This is how we look to S. F. Boyce, wholesale and retail druggist, Duluth, Minn, who after a quarter of a century of observation writes:

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than 25 years, both at wholesale and retail, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. I believe Ayer's Sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier, that has been introduced to the general public." This, from a man who has sold thousands of dozens of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is strong testimony. But it only echoes popular sentiment the world over, which has, "Nothing but words of praise for Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

A DINNER PILL.—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment, it becomes a poison to the system. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convert the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

McDonald finally fined Donovan and put him out of the game, Kuhn taking his place. Davis and Killen were also fined. The Pirates took the field, and Killen, in warming up, threw a ball at Davis, which went into the seats. Boyle, of the Phillies, claimed that the Pittsburgers were delaying the game in the hope of rain, and McDonald thereupon gave the game to Philadelphia by the score of 9 to 0. Annual Meeting of the King's Sons and Daughters-Mrs. Tilley Resigns-The Officers Elected.

At the seventh annual meeting of the King's Daughters and Sens last night at the "Y" rooms, Mrs. Evans presided, in the absence of Mrs. Tilley, the Dominion secretary, who is making an official tour of the Maritime Provinces. Mrs. Tilley, in her annual address, which was read, declined re- thence to Scotland to celebrate the election as chairman of the local Queen's Jubilee. union, on account of her onerous du-ties. Much regret was expressed at her retirement from the position, which she has held for seven years.

The annual report, presented by the secretary, Miss Margaret C. Brown, showed that the London union comshowed that the London union comprised fourteen circles, with 434 members. Fifteen hundred visits among the sick and poor were reported, and 890 articles of clothing, 754 bouquets and 864 religious papers and magazines given among them. The total amount expended in charity was $677 66, and $27 46 was raised for the relief of the sufferers in India.

The result of the dangers which threaten, and the jealousy and suspi-cion which surround him, is that in the end he is very far from daring to be the arrogant, purse-proud crea ture he is painted by the popular in agination, So far from being haughty he has seldom even the high spirits and power of enjoyment that ought to go with wealth. Indeed, the millionaire as we know him is generally a quiet, reserved man, who rarely expresses an opinion except about the tires of bicycles, or the weather, or the best places to buy shoes and un-derclothing, and evidently shrinks from advancing views which, however mis may be called upon to support with cash. The very rich American, in short, is apt to be embarrassed. His tastes are still more or less those of a primitive, semi-rural community, founded upon equality, managed under demo-cratic forms, in which rank and title and etiquette do not exist, yet this so cial organization, which was in its ful dower a generation ago, is submerged by a new civilization, of which he i head, which is not arranged for him or prepared to receive him, and of which he is at once the boast and th butt. He is the victim of a social or ier which he represents, but does no nderstand. He knows that he is of the great of the earth, but he do not know how to manage it all. It has to be managed for him by private secretaries, and "major-domos," and above all by his wife and children, who make all by his wife and children, who make him build a house as big as a hospital on a two-acre lot, and entertain "house parties" of young people whom he does not know. Quiet is the role of such a man, and quiet he generally is. In his own set he may find relief and momentary splace in boasting. nd momentary solace in boasting out his liquors and cigars, or stocks out when he goes abroad among those who would give their eyes to change places with him, his one idea is often to escape notice.

A GOOD BARGAIN. [Harper's Bazar.]

The woman who hunts bargains is a usual subject of criticism and a standing newspaper joke. Much of the ridi-cule is underserved, and much ill-directed. The whole world, not merely women, loves to get a good bargain which means full value or extra value for its money; and this seeking of the bargain-hunter whose stock of money is limited is not only justified, but

Nor is it really impossible, as some ply, to get extra value and good returns for the money, time, and work spent in hunting a good bargain. Good bargains are not common, but they ar to be had, and extra value for > elect should be unseated, and a new election ordered. Mr. Aylesworth dealt with the act of 1888, and the various sections of it, which he said were "narrow," and then said that the act of 1891, passed since the last trial in London, made broader the powers of the court in "saving" the election. The count could now, he said, under the act of 1891, declare the election valid, if, in its opinion, the charges which might be proved were trivial. The corrupt act might be that of an agent, but when all the other charges had been dismissed, the one act, which might be found proved, could be held by the court not sufficient to invalida election. The action of Boyd had not tion, continued Mr. Aylesworth, but that Boyd was an agent. We admit it, respondent's fault. He certainly gave the warnings. I have brought a friend with me, and I want to introduce him to you; I have had to leave him at the library door while I came to fetch you, as you unfortunately did not hear me call you," said Captain Morrison, very coldly, watching her from the door of the room with the same threatening expression.

She followed him obediently into the outer hall, where the stranger was wainting. Her first hasty glance a him, as she tried to escape, had told her nothing; but now that she had me him face to face, she recognized, be fore her husband spoke again, the face she had seen at the window of the carirage as it drove past her and James on the night of her guardian's death. And again, in the midst of the terror, which grew tenfold stronger upon her at sight of him, the vague fancy that she knew the face well occurred to her as it had done then. She felt that she knew the very worst now, that her husband had boidly introduced his tool, the poisoner, under his own roof; if her self-command should fail her for one moment James was lost. The danger called forth all her strength; and she shook hands with Dr. Ledbury with charming grace, and led the way toward the

The Daily Telegraph, on the same subject, says it is the outward and visible sign of a new spirit animating our brethren beyond the seas.

According to the Berlin Kolnische Zeitung, the powers are great deal of attention to the Canadian tariff, and the foreign diplo-mats in London who have repeatedly nothing in the world less likely than that these two men should fall upon the subject, are convinced that Great to have Mr. Reid do this; but they subject, are convinced that Great to have Mr. Reid do this; but they Britain will denounce the trade treaties with Germany and Belgium.

NOTES. M. Rancha, the French minister to Siam, has died of cholera at Bangkok. It is announced at Paris that the date of M. Faure's departure etersburg to pay a return official vi to the czar has been definitely fixed for July 25. He will travel by sea, and will be accompanied by M. Hanotaux, Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Transvaal Exhibition was opened at Berlin yesterday. Among the of the municipal corporations of Scotspectators was President Kirchoff, of Halle, who said: "As formerly the cry went through Germany, "The French shall not have the Rhine!" so now the English shall not have the Transvaal!" Baron Von Luetzow, who was tried at Berlin with Herr Von Tausch, the former being charged in this case with defrauding the Imperial army service fund and of forging a receipt for the of willful imposition, was convicted. The court sentenced Von Luetzow to two months' imprisonment.

THE USEFUL GIRAFFE

Helpful About the Bill Posting in More Ways Than One.

"On the road," said the old circus man, "we always used to pick out, of course, the biggest and smoothest barns to post bills on, paying for the privilege in tickets to the show Son times people were perfectly willing to have the side of a barn adorned with costly and beautiful picture such as we put up, and, again, there were peowith pitchforks and scythes, which amounted to the same thing; and so sometimes, in a difficult country, we used to send the giraffe ahead with billboard brigade, and very useful he proved, too. Many a farmer who has thought of getting down his shotgun when he saw men with buckets of paste and long-handled brushes, and with bags of bills over their shoul ders approaching his best barn, has thought twice about it when he saw them followed by an eighteen-foot giraffe; and has ended up by standing by in sheer amazement while the

When the men had slapped on the last sheet of the poster and had picked up their buckets and the ladde and swung their bags over their shoul-ders, and handed the farmer over some tickets, the giraffe, as they were moving away, would halt for a minute and then turn and run his head into big window in the side of the gable-end of the barn and take a bite hay mow, and then follow along with the hay in its mouth.

"We taught him to do that: but to this day—and that was forty years ago—I don't suppose there's a farmer along that route, still living, but what stood on the ground and ate hay out

Mr. Blackwell-Can a healty child study sufficiently to impair his health?

Dr. Hutchinson-Oh, yes, he certainly can.
Mr. Bowman cited one or two cases where, as the effect of this most unsatisfactory system, some very clever children had become nervous wrecks. One lady, in particular, had had two of her daughters down with nervous prostration as the effect of studying in family, which includes the widowed mother, two sisters in Toronto, and last entrance examination. With a swift bound we were transported from gloomy, November-like weather into the sunniest, most gracious of June days that ever gladdened the heart of mother earth. It seemed as if a magician's wand had been waved across our planet, and she, responsive to the gently influence, budded and blossomed forth into a "thing of beauty." Deep-dyed, too, in the richest of emerald tints, outrivalling laid exclusive claim to this distinction. How we rejoice in the gifts of life and freedom, and of opportunities for enjoying all that life brings. Even if one has to drudge day after day at office desk, racking one's brain for the evolution of an idea worthy of a monetary consideration of sufficient importance as to keep the gaunt-eyed wolf of poverty from preying upon one's vitals, it is still a gladsome, a blesed thing to merely live and to b able to enjoy natural life as revealed in the springtime

One morning, not so long ago, the thought came to us with almost the force of a revelation that right here in the most restricted glimpses of this largess of beauty with which our land is crowned.  There was no time for further spec-ulation if we would fulfill an appointment, and soon we were inside the building. An obliging official conducted us to Governor Boston, who in turn spared no pains to show us everything of interest, from the kitchens to the sunny little apartments of the Womanlike, we noted first of cleanliness everywhere apparent. The floors and tables bore traces of the persistent and continu ous use of the scrubbing brush. As was natural, this feature was more observable in the women's ward than in the men's. In the opposite ward were six men. To one, whose face told of sin and remorse, we gave a rose with soft, creamy petals, and the lips that we leared were sin-stained were pressed close against it. We told this man a story of the mission of another He listened respectfully, earnestly, and once or twice we noted the muscles of his face twitch as if he were trying to stem back some ten-der emotion. We learned later from the governor that sentence has already been passed upon this unformate-five years in the penitentiary wards where men for crimes of greater or lesser magnitude were confin-will try so hard after-after I get Some Remarkable Discoveries Made and Conclusions Arrived At.

> A candid and serious study of the legislative aspect of the liquor problem ought to be very welcome to those who still have open minds. Temperance has been made a political question, a church question, a social, an ethical, a physiological, an educational question, and men have been sharply divided upon each of these aspects, their convictions making them parti sans of one side or the other. The sounds of the conflict have so filled the know not what to think, what to advocate or what to condemn. It has been manifest for some time that what we need for a calm and rational discussion is to have the facts of the problem re-examined and restated from an independent and impartial point of view. What are the results of prohibition, of local option, of the ore restrictive examples of the license system, of the tax law and state dis ensary methods? We know that the testimony as to prohibition has been of a most contradictory character. The partisans of each side eally, and marshal their facts like hostile armies. Over and over again out of the babel of contending voices has facts? Cannot some competent, trustworthy person or committee give us the plain, unvarnished facts?'

This is what the volume now before us* attempts to do, within reasonable limitations, not only for prohibitory but for license, state dispensary and other methods. It is the first of a series of studies of the liquor problem taken up under the auspices of a committee of fifty gentlemen who have become associated for the purpose of investigating various sociological top-It embraces college presidents, ishcps, clergymen, lawyers, physiians, merchants, reformers-men of the highest character and competency. On the other side, prohibition has not absolutely excluded intoxicants from districts where the sentiment was most favorable; in other districts it has harassed or repressed, but not suppressed the traffic; whole counties and municipalities have been in rebellion against it in Iowa; it has failed to subdue the drinking passion; amits concomitant evils are public efiance of law, lawbreakers schooled in evasion and shamelessness, perjuries, double-faced and mercenary officers of the law, hypocritical legisla-tors, bribery and blackmail, corruption of courts. As to whether prohibition has or has not reduced the consumption of intoxicants and diminished drunkenness, no opinion is express The balance appears to be rather against prohibition; but there are sevral considerations which the commit tee do not present. They say prohibidued the drinking passion. True; but has it not prevented it from being excited? There are evasions by "moonshiners," and by the keepers of "blind tigers" in Charleston; but it has banished the open barroom.

The Pennsylvania high license law s said to work well in Philadelphia. The courts are careful in renewing censes and grant few new ones. T character of the saloon is improved Sunday selling has ceased, and min ors are not served. But there are many "speak-easies" whose business s generally confined to Sunday sell-ov clubs and druggists. It is easy to see that in view of the committee the value of any temperance legislation depends on the senti-ment which is behind it. You cannot have successful prohibition or restriction unless there is a strong demand for it. "That law is best," they say "which is best administered," and "i cannot be positively affirmed that any one kind of liquor legislation has been more successful than another kind in promoting real temperance." This last statement will come with the force of a shock to many persons who believe that there is a wide moral diff-erence between prohibitory and license laws: but it is only fair to say legislative, one on the economic, and ethical considerations at all in the present volume. The History of the World Is Simply One Grand Accumulating Demonstration of the Material Progress of Man -Great in Exact Proportion as the Use of Labor Saving Machinery Has Spread.

A correspondent of the Chicago fribune questions the truth of the assertion that labor-saving machinery has contributed largely to the happihess of mankind and seems inclined to the belief that the problem as to whether such machinery is a curse or a blessing is one that is extremely difficult to solve. In answer, that paper proceeds to a discussion of some Man, in order to live, must produce something. If he doesn't produce anything then he must live on roots and perbs, the fruits of trees, the spon-aneous offerings of Nature, and, in short, pretty nearly as the monkeys live. But since the supply of roots and herbs and the like, where there is no cultivation, is limited, only a small number of people can subsist In this way, only a small population eing able to live on the supply large acreage. It would hardly be de nied, therefore, that some degree of labor-saving machinery was essentia condition. And if there is any prob saving machinery it must be as t

What point in the raising of mankind in a material sense this labor-saving achinery became a curse. The moment that a man takes the Arst steps towards production and to wards increasing by artificial means the food yield of the earth, then he has taken the first step in progress It doesn't matter how simple or ho crude that first step may be, it is a mark of progress. It may be simpl digging holes in the ground with a btick and putting grain in the holes and then enjoying the fruits this lathat can be imagined. Then comes another step when he subjugates the horse to his own purposes. This was one of the first labor-saving machines which man thought of to supplement his own labor, for by the aid of this powerful animal he was able to substitute a plow for a stick and use the horse to drag the plow. Thus he cultivated more ground, raised more crops, had more food to live on, and more food to exchange with other more food to exchange with other men for their food products of a different kind, for instance, the game lithey killed. It could bould be a constant of the constance of the could bould be a constance of the could be a constance of the they killed. They Had Not a Resolute Leader or There Might Have Been Much Bloodshed.

In the Contemporary Review for May there is a brilliant and eloquent Formidable?" His reply is "Yes, formidable enough to threaten England with the most serious rebellion she had ever faced in Ireland." Mr. O'Brien was of course heart and soul in the movement himself, although he was but a boy, and his share in it seems to have been confined to atbroke his deep repose. Just as the de- tendance at one illegal drill-meeting, and a solitary excursion in an open boat with his brother and others who were engaged in running half a dozen rifles from a steamer which brought

"It was in 1865, and not in 1867, that Fenianism had the capacity to strike a formidable military blow at England; and it is from its inner history, rather than from its performances in the field, that a prudent statesman to all intents and purposes, the en- gists and grocers to buy their dyes rolment of three-fourths of the ablebodied population of the country (and Munster, at least, I can say with cerwho was not a sworn or unsworn item! ashamed of himself as a young Engishman who should refuse to moment 100,000 men at least would have responded to the signal of any capable military leader who could put arms in their hands.

and regulars as well as rebels would have been armed with the old muzzleloaders. Mr. O'Brien maintains that neither the army, the militia, nor the police could be depended upon:

"A far grimmer danger than the Fenianism which learned the goosestep by the light of the moon was the Fenianism which did not so much onspire as all but openly flaunt itself in every barrack-room and on every -ground in the island. As for the militia regiments, it is not too much to say that, with the ception of the officers and staff-sergeants, they were so many Fenian circles, with the very thinnest sprinkling of 'old reliables,' or spies."

As for the police, Mr. O'Brien says:
"The only illegal drill-meeting I ever had the opportunity of witnessing was put through its facings by a head remembered in Cork and Tipperary.

THE IRISH-AMERICANS. The peril in Ireland was aggravated by the fact that popular feeling against England in the United States was then at its height. The war of secession was over, the Northern armies had been disbanded, the Alabama claims were still unsettled: "At least 200,000 of the disbanded veterans were Irishmen, fresh from campaigns which probably made the the best-seasoned soldiers in the world, nourishing a quarrel of their own with England, compared with which and Mason surrender were as moonlight unto sunlight." WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

Hence Mr. O'Brien thinks he is justified in saying: "It seems as certain as any enter-prise in its nature desperate can be, that within 24 hours any resolute lead-er would have established the nucleus of the most formidable insurrection that has broken out in Ireland since His face shone with pride, and he the Confederation of Kilkenny. The success of the Government coup was as startling as that of an equally bold Fenian coup might have been."

WHAT MAY HAPPEN. Mr. O'Brien admits that all hop of secret conspiracy or military ris-ing is at present out of the question; but he mutters uneasily concerning the growth of anti-English feeling in May there is a brilliant and eloquent article written by Wm. O'Brien, under the title "Was Fenianism Ever for that of Mr. Gladstone, and then "We read the other day that two

For Bcys And Girls

A Woods Family.

Perhaps you think that little baby and child bears living with their mohave to obey, are left free to do as 'hey choose. In Harper's Magazine, Mr. Charles Dudley Warner recently told a story, which is a true one, of a bear and her children who lived in the Yellowstone Park. There is at one place in the park a house or nut where ravelers can get food. Last year a he-bear came to the house and clearly indicated that she wished broken ed; that her spirit was most friendly, that she would violate no privileges axtended to her. The man who kept this lunch station understood the bear perfectly, and, after feeding her allowed her to carry off the food she did not eat. He knew she had a family, but he respected her prejudices for privacy, and did not attempt to find out where she lived and how large a fam-dy he was at least partially supporting. One day the mother bear went out of the house as usual with food for her family, and when she had got very angry. She put the food down, rushed at her two children, punished them severely, and drove them back into the woods. At a certain place, evidently the place she told them to wait for her, she left them, and went back to the house, where she stayed two hours. The disobedient children must have grown very hungry. Doubt-less mothers bringing up children in the woods have a great deal of anxiety. They have to hide their babies from hunters, and from other not kill, them; and then it must be a most difficult thing to find babies who get lost in the woods; there are no policemen there, no people to guide them back home when they get lost. Poor mothers of the woods, how much they have to do, and how good the wood babies should be!

the meantime, however, there was no lack of excitement on board ship, where Capt. Hawley had remained. Just as the men were slowing up the ats, and the harpooners were making ready for the throw, the "Sea King" had hoisted a challenge signal and lowered its boats. Knowing that the nearness of his own men to the whale at the time the challenge was the necessity of accepting it and the consequent division of the prize, he ignored it, and calmly waited for Capt. This invitation was accepted, and the strife was forgotten in the breaking of bread. Scarcely had Capt. Dow re turned to his own ship when the whale was brought alongside the "Laetitia" and the chains and tackle adjusted preparatory to the cutting. Before this process was begun, however, the men were ordered below to their noon mess. When the last of them had disappeared down the hatch, the captain said

> An electric trolley railway without overhead wires is the latest idea in the matter of street railway propulsion. It the invention of a French engineer, and if it proves practicable the system is to be introduced into Paris in time for the International Exhibition of 1900. The invention does away entirely with overhead conductors, and appears to be simple enough to be practical. The inventor, Bochet, establishes overhead contact from the elec-tric lamp posts belonging to the city, the distance between posts being some-what smaller than the length of the cleetric train, consisting of two or three cars, so that contact is always assured at one point at least. Through flexible points of contact, suspended from each electric light post along the proposed line, the current will be taken up by means of a copper rail, fastened along the edge of the roof or the car. not less than fourteen or fifteen feet from the ground. The contact point slide along that copper rail, and there is not the slightest difficulty in establishing a continuous current if the points of contact are made sufficiently The current is allowed to return to the power station through the system, it is claimed, offers all the penefits of the overhead and underground systems without any of their objectionable features.

Her organ was pumped by a somewhat self-willed old sexton, who had his own ideas as to how long an organ voluntary should last, and would shut off the wind when he thought there had been enough. On this particular Sunday the organist thought she would forestall any such accident by writing an appeal in the early part of the service and giving it to the The old man received note, and supposed it was for the minister. of the nineteenth century will there be in existence in the year 6000? Very few, we fear, and still los those that will continue in that far-off age to serve a useful purpose. Yet there is at least one great undertaking con-ceived and executed by an engineer which during the space of 4,000 years has never ceased its office, on which the life of a fertile province absolutely depends today. We refer to the Bahr Joussuf—the canal of Joseph—built, according to tradition, by the son of Jacob, and which constitutes not the least of the many blessings he conferred on Egypt during the years of his prosperous rule. This canal took its rise from th Nile at Asiut, and ran almost parallel with it for nearly 250 miles, creeping along under the western cliffs of the Nile Valley, with many a bend and winding, until at length it gained an eminence, as compared with the river bed, which enabled it to turn westward through a narrow pass and enter a district which was otherwise shut off from the fertilizing floods on which all vegetation in Egypt depends The northern end stood seventeen feet above low Nile, while at the southern end it was at an equal elevation with the river. Through this cut ran a perennial stream, which watered a province named the Fayoum, endowing it with fertility and supporting large population. In the time of the annual flood a great part of the canal current would rush in a more direct course into the pass, carrying with it the rich silt which takes the place of manure and keeps the soil in a con-stant state of productiveness. All this, with the exception of the tradi-tion that Joseph built it, can be verifled today, and it is not mere supposi-tion or rumor.

Until eight years ago it was firm! believed that the design has alway been limited to an irrigation scheme been limited to an irrigation scheme, larger, no doubt, than that now in operation, as shown by the traces of abandoned canals, and by the slow aggregation of waste water which had aggregation of the Birket el Querum, accumulated in the Birket el Querum but still essentially the same in character. Many accounts have been written by Greek and Roman historians, such as Herodotus, Strabo, Mutianus and Pliny, and repeated in monkish legends, or portrayed in the maps of the middle ages, which agreed with the folklore of the district. These tales explained that the canal dug by the ancient Israelites served to carry the surplus waters of the Nile into extensive lake lying south of the Fay arid winds of the desert and convert ing them into the balmy airs which nourished the vines and the olives into a fullness and known in any part of the country, but also added to the food supply of the land such immense quantities of fish ed at £250,000 annually. be navigated by a fleet of vessels and and the egress.
