

A SURE RELIEF FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS.

10 Days' Treatment Free.
Orange Lily is a certain relief for all disorders of women. It is applied locally and is absorbed into the suffering tissue. The dead waste matter in the congested region is expelled, giving immediate mental and physical relief; the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, and the circulation is rendered normal. As this treatment is based on strictly scientific principles, and acts on the actual location of the disease, it cannot help but do good in all forms of female troubles, including delayed and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, etc. Price $2.00 per box, which is sufficient for one-months' treatment. A free Trial Treatment, enough for 10 days, worth 75c. will be sent free to any suffering woman who will send me her address.

CHAPTER XXV.
"I am very grateful; it is very good of Mrs. Dalton to think of me, to care," stammered Bobby.

"She does care, I assure you; cares very much," Mr. Morgan Thorpe nodded gravely, almost solemnly. "She takes a great interest in you. As a rule, Laura is very chary of making friends. She has suffered a great deal, poor girl! and suffering hardens us—hardens us, my dear Deane. And I have never known her to come out of her shell, so to speak, as she has done with you. But about the cards, my dear fellow. You are not offended?"

"Not a bit," said Bobby, cheerfully. "The fact is, I ought not to have gone in for play, and—well I'm going to cut it now."

"I can't tell how delighted I am to hear you say so," said Mr. Morgan Thorpe again. "I'm a bad hand at preaching, and I don't set up for a Puritan or a moralist—"

"But I don't mind telling you, Deane, that if I had my time to come over again, I'd never touch a card or put a penny on a horse. They talk of the evils of drink by the Lord Harry! I've seen more young fellows go under through cards and betting than ever were 'downed' by liquor. Why, I could give you instances by the score. And take my own case. In confidence, my dear Deane, I may tell you that Morgan Thorpe would have been in a very different position from the lowly one which he now occupies if he had made the resolution which you have just now so nobly made—and stuck to it."

"Why don't you chuck 'em now?" asked Bobby, with all the verdant innocence of youth.

Mr. Morgan Thorpe did not smile—which proves under what perfect control he held his facial expression.

"Ah, my dear boy, it is too late for me, alas! Some of us are born gamblers. It's in my blood, in my blood, my dear Deane. And poor Trevor's got the taint, too. Take the cards away from him and me, and we should go hang ourselves. It's too late for both of us. That's why I am so glad and relieved to hear that you are going to drop it. And Laura—well, it will be the best news I can take her. You'll come and see her, dine with us soon, Deane?"

"Yes," said Bobby, stifling a sigh as his good resolution went up the chimney with a moan of reproach and farewell.

"That's all right. So long!"

Mr. Morgan Thorpe paused at the door and looked round.

"Delightful rooms, these of yours. Always strike me whenever I come into them. Lord—what is his name—still at that place in the country?"

"No," said Bobby. "He has gone."

Morgan Thorpe stopped, with his hand on the handle of the door.

"Gone, eh? Where? Gone for good?"

Bobby shook his head rather sadly. "I don't know. He left Leafmore suddenly, and no one knows his whereabouts. I'm half inclined to think he has gone to Africa."

"To Africa?" A faint expression of relief shot for a moment into Morgan Thorpe's frank blue eyes. "Really? Well, he might go to a worse place. He'll escape the coming winter."

With another nod and smile he took his departure.

The expression of relief grew more open as he walked away. For Mr. Morgan Thorpe had an anxious time of it while in London. He had bargained with Gaunt to keep his wife out of England; but Morgan Thorpe, while making the bargain, had forgotten that his sister possessed that extremely convenient thing, a will of her own.

And the divine Laura had not only declined to remain at Vevey, or remove to Paris, but had insisted upon going to London.

He had not dared to oppose her, for she would have grown suspicious; and when the divine Laura was suspicious—well, Morgan Thorpe's life was not an easy one.

So he had been obliged to let her come, and had spent some part of his days in fear and trembling lest he should run up against Gaunt, and so, in a moment, lose his annuity.

But chance had favored him hitherto, and Gaunt had not seen Laura.

"Gone to Africa?" he mused, as he walked clubward, with a pleasant smile on his pleasant open face, as he smoked a choice Havana. "Well, he may have done so, and my luck may still be with me, but, on the other hand, he may not, and may turn up at any moment. My dear Laura, you will have to clear out. Yes, I shall have to move you. But how?" He pondered for a time, then he smiled. "If we are going, we may as well make a little coup before we start. A sort of spoiling the Egyptians. I'll talk it over with her. Her brain's better than mine at that kind of thing."

In which Mr. Morgan Thorpe scarcely did himself justice, for it would have been difficult to find a sharper or more astute scoundrel than himself, even in London, where sharp and astute scoundrels abound and flourish.

Three days afterward Bobby received a dainty little note—emitting the peculiar scent—from Mrs. Dalton.

Why did he not come to see her? Had she offended him? If so, why did he not tell her what she had said or done amiss? And would he come to dinner on Monday and give her an opportunity of explaining and begging his pardon?

So ran the note, prettily worded, and written in a thin Italian hand.

There was only one answer possible. Bobby wrote and said that he would come and tell her that in no way had she offended him, that she had always been all that was kind and gracious.

And he went. She was alone when he entered the drawing-room, and she received him with a half-sad, half-reproachful air. She was beautifully dressed, had "made up" a little, her black eyes, which, as she had heard his voice outside, had shone with contempt and boredom, now beamed upon him sullenly, almost tenderly.

"I thought you were never coming, that I—should never see you again," she murmured. "Come and sit beside me and tell me what is the matter." She touched a chair near the fire and beside her own, and Bobby dropped into it, feeling as if he had been the cruelest and most hard-hearted of young men.

"Morgan has told me that you are going to give up cards. I am so glad!" she said, after Bobby had assured her that there was nothing the matter and that he had not been able to come because he had been "busy." "Oh, pray, pray, keep to that! I have seen so much misery through gambling, and I do hate it so! Besides," she added, with an air of innocence which would have done credit to a first-class actress, "you will be able to sit and talk to me while they are playing, for, of course, Morgan and Mr. Trevor will play."

And in this way she talked to him, singing Conscience to rest, and the beautiful, bewitching face blotted out all remembrance of his resolve not to see her again.

Then Trevor came in.

He smiled at Bobby as he nodded to him.

"Thought you'd gone into the country or abroad," he said, sullenly. "duded cold." He gave a little shudder as he drew nearer the fire. His face was pale—it had the pallor of the red-headed man—and his eyelids were swollen and inflamed. It struck Bobby that Trevor had been drinking heavily, and Laura shot a glance at him as he stood gazing moodily at the fire.

Presently Morgan Thorpe came in. "My dear Deane, Trevor, forgive me! I am late," he said, with his charming smile. "Trevor, how well and fit you look!"

Trevor glowered at him sullenly.

"So it? Then my looks belle me, for I feel anything but fit. It's this beastly cold weather coming in so suddenly."

"Your dinner will put you right," said Morgan Thorpe, brightly; "and there's the bell."

As Laura rose, Trevor bent over her.

"Let that cub go first to-night," he said. "I'll stay after him; I want to speak to you."

She made a motion of assent, and smiled up at him, sweetly, confidingly.

Thorpe was in the best and brightest of humors, and once or twice Bobby thought that that resolution would have cost him if he had stuck to it. They were such pleasant people, the Thorpes; and Laura—was an angel.

Trevor drank a great deal—as usual—through his dinner, and Thorpe pleaded him assiduously with the earl's wine; and after a time his face got flushed, and the sombre fire burned in his eyes.

They went into the drawing-room, where—as usual—Laura was playing softly on the piano, and Bobby went and sat down beside her and turned over the music.

Morgan Thorpe opened out the card-table.

"Do you play to-night, Deane?" he asked.

Bobby shook his head.

"Not to-night," he said, reddening. Laura's left hand stole out toward him encouragingly, sympathetically.

"Why not?" demanded Trevor, looking across at him with surprise. "Can't afford it," said Bobby, with a touch of his old spirit.

Trevor sneered.

"That's a reason no one can meet," he said, with a sneer. "Go on, Thorpe."

Bobby flushed still more hotly; but the small hand sought, and found, and pressed him.

The play went on; Bobby remained beside the piano, or sat in a chair close—very close—beside Laura's near the fire. They talked in a low voice, which, low though it was, seemed to annoy and irritate Trevor, and once he turned toward them fiercely, and demanded:

"What on earth are you two whispering and mumbling about?"

Laura laughed slyly.

"Mr. Deane is telling me about his coach, his crammer; he must be such a funny man! Are you winning or losing, Mr. Trevor?" The former, I hope, why don't you give up cards, and come and sit round the fire, like good Mr. Deane and me?"

He swore under his breath.

"Losing," he said.

She turned to the fire again and the play went on.

Half an hour later Mr. Thorpe said, affectionately:

"Laura, my dear, will you give us a little champagne?"

Jap Students Pugnacious

Want to Clean up the Great United States--Turkish Ultimatum Rejected by Armenians--Hunnish Methods Advocated in Captured Document--Pro-Constantine Demonstrations in Greece.

SITUATION CLARIFYING.

TOKIO, Nov. 18. There is distinct improvement in the situation between Japan and the United States relative to the California controversy, and officials evidently believe real progress is being made in negotiations between the two countries. Hitherto there has been a somewhat pessimistic attitude which has been created by many delicate points involved. Two thousand university students met here last night to discuss the question shall Japan fight the United States. The debate lasted four hours and was marked by vehement oratory, but there was good humor during the evening. The Manager of the meeting, out of deference to the police, decided not to take a vote on the merits of the question as disclosed by speakers, and apparently the audience was equally divided as to the expediency of war between the two.

DRAFTING AGREEMENT WITH RUSSIA.

LONDON, Nov. 18. Premier Lloyd George stated in the House of Commons to-day that the Cabinet had decided to-day that a draft of an agreement to carry out the July arrangements for trade with Russia should be prepared, and he hoped it would be ready for submission to the Russian government in a few days.

ARMENIA REJECTS TURKISH ULTIMATUM.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 18. Armenia has rejected the ultimatum recently presented by the Turkish Nationalists, demanding that Armenian establish Soviet Government under Turkish protection. The Armenians declared that the acceptance of the conditions would be equivalent to loss of Armenia's sovereignty. It is reported that hostilities have been resumed, the Armenians counter attacking and that fighting is going on in the district of Zanzhecur Tartars.

ANOTHER DOCUMENT.

LONDON, Nov. 18. Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated in the House of Commons to-day that during a recent raid in Ireland the troops captured a document by the Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Republican army to his chief of staff, and horrifying statements regarding the spreading of typhoid among troops and glanders among cavalry horses. Sir Hamar read the document, dealing with the possibility of spreading typhoid among the troops by infected milk, the document described the difficulties and risks run by operators and concluded with the statement that the chief of staff would in any case need expert opinion in order to carry out the suggestion in the document.

THE ONE HUNDRED COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. "Only the direst necessity" can justify a resort to arms for the adjustment of disputes in Ireland, Frederick Howe, Chairman of the Commission from the committee of one hundred investigating the Irish question, declared to-day at the opening of the unofficial commission hearing. He added that conditions in Ireland have created and are creating a widening rift in the friendly relations of English speaking people, not only in the United States, but all over the world. Howe told the committee that what he termed the "orgy of destruction" which is now ravishing Ireland is sending its repercussions "to every corner of the world." It could not fail to postpone indefinitely the return of ordered tranquility to civilization, he added. Howe said the Commission had determined to ascertain the facts and to learn as nearly as possible what conditions are in Ireland and the reasons for them.

WORK OF THE LEAGUE.

GENEVA, Nov. 18. It was announced by the League of Nations to-day that Spain and Great Britain, as well as France and Belgium, would send troops to Vilna to maintain order during the plebiscite to be held to determine the political fate of that city as between Lithuania and Poland. Sir George Foster, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, was elected as vice-president of the League of Nations on the first ballot, it was announced by President Hymans, this afternoon. Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, of Norway, took the floor to report to the Assembly the work done in connection with the prisoners of war. He prefaced his remarks with an expression of full accord with, and great admiration for the speech delivered yesterday by Lord Robert Cecil, and he hoped the committee would take up their work in the spirit which animated Lord Robert's remarks. The explorer gave in English a vivid picture of the situation of war prisoners in Russia, their privations and sufferings. Without the aid of the International Red Cross he said, little could have been done towards the repatriation of the prisoners. He said also that he would not be doing his full duty if he did not render thanks to the German Government for co-operation in the task. The Bolshevik Government, likewise he said, did what it could to help. Dr. Nansen appealed to the League to profit by the lessons he had learned in contact with the incalculable sufferings of war prisoners and prevent a recurrence of the great tragedy that had been enacted.

GREEK PREMIER TAKES OATH OF OFFICE.

ATHENS, Nov. 18. George Rallis, the new Premier of Greece, with three members of his Cabinet took oath of office before Admiral Coundouriotis yesterday afternoon. Those who qualified in company with the Premier were M. Gounaris, Minister of War, M. Dalnaris, Minister of Interior, and M. Callomerpoulos, Minister of Finance. M. Rhalis will hold the Portfolio of Minister of Foreign Affairs. Demonstrations took place in the city yesterday, but the number of persons taking part was not large. There were motor cars and carriages carrying large flags, and portraits of former King Constantine were prominently displayed. During the demonstrations shots were often fired, but every attempt was made to maintain order.

PROHIBITION IN SCOTLAND.

LONDON, Nov. 18. Latest returns from Scottish prohibition polls show that in Clydebank, a leading shipbuilding centre, three out of five wards voted wet, but, Radner, residential ward stood for complete dry regime. In Alyth, Dalbeattie, Dysart, Paddington, Rothesay, North Bute and Selkirk the voters decided they did not want a change. A number of other districts will vote early in December.

GIFTS TO CANADA.

LONDON, Nov. 18. On November 30 the cruiser Aurora and the destroyers Patricia and Patrick will sail for Halifax. These ships are gifts of the Admiralty to Canada. Officers and crews are mostly Canadians.

CONFUSION PARALYSIS.

Did you ever have so much to do, so many things that demanded your attention all at once, that when you contemplated them you felt absolutely paralyzed? In the middle of the housecleaning season, this spring, I was attacked with that species of paralysis. The house was in unutterable confusion. A paper hanger had promised to come, permitted me to make all preparations, and then telephoned me the night before that he would not be able to come for two days; the rug cleaner had not kept his promise to send back the dining room rugs in a week, so the dining room was in that half-baked condition attendant on an absent rug; we had started to clean the pantry, the day before, and really ought to finish that day.

Seven Things I Ought to do First. There were, at a conservative estimate, at least seven things I really ought to do first, and every time I made a move towards one of them I felt as if the other six fell upon me and pinioned my arms.

Finally, something in my brain seemed to stop. Instead of working, I sat down on a chair and gazed blankly at the scene of devastation about me.

I gazed at it for five minutes and then I did a queer thing for a paralyzed person: I ran away.

How I Cut the Knot. I simply solved the problem of which of the seven things to do first, by doing none of them! I had long had it in mind to make a visit to a friend who always rests and refreshes me. But I hadn't felt had the time. To-day, I made up my mind to make the time.

Yes, the confusion was still there when I came home. I had to face the same problems the next day. But it was a different person who faced them. The paralysis had gone. Instead of sitting down in a chair and gazing at the tangle, I took hold of one end of it and began to untangle it. I think there are a great many women who can never bring themselves to try to cure this sort of paralysis.

They Suffer to No Purpose. They simply drag themselves about all day and get a few things done, and then face the next day in the same futile state of mind. They think it's cowardly to run away, and with everything to do they think they can't possibly spare the time. And in the end they don't get any further, if as far, as if they had run away. Besides, which, they undergo all the misery of mind inevitably involved.

How do I know? Because, my friend, that is my own history, and this was the first time I ever tried the other way.

But not the last!

Dover Cliffs.

It is the cliffs that make the best beauty of Dover. They are her crown, her support, her defense; they hold her in their arms as she sits, white and long, with her feet in the sea. They are beautiful, at all hours, with their white walls and the bare green and brown of their downs; they are like fortresses, calm, assured, steadfast, and ready to become impregnable. Everywhere towers, walls, the heavy square castle, suggest ancient defenses; and the friendliness of the cliffs to the sea, which it holds against the sea, has a reticence of magnet towards strangers and foreign coasts. At night they rise mysteriously against the sky, with rows and patches of light shining out of dull level walls, turned now into the candelabra for candles of gold fire. The old red, gabled, sordid harbor, seen dimly, its lights striking like red and yellow knives into the stagnant water, becomes a kind of fairy thing, which one vaguely remembers to have seen in foreign lands. Where? Venice has no such eager cliffs above her famed water; and Venice, for a moment, has come into the memory, returning there, as she does at most sights of houses looking down into water. Is it Alicante? The palms on the sand are not here, nothing of what is African in that rare coast-

Spain) but I remember a certain likeness in the hill with its castle rising more abruptly over a long, curved town whiter and stranger than Dover.

To see Dover as a whole, you must stand on the stone parapet above the landing-place, where the steamers slide in gently, hardly touching the quay with the wooden roofs over their proppers. You must turn your back on the sea, which is there really the sea, and not an inclosed bay; a harbor made for ships to come back into; and you must look across the black engine-smoke of the trains, to the white cliffs, which with evening turn to a dull grey, over the long curved white-fronted houses, with their dark-green balconies and flat windows set at regular intervals; going on beyond them to the east, with many indentations, white, vast, and delicate, shutting in the sea with its high walls, and seeming to throw out long thin piers to clutch and imprison it; on the west, Shakespeare's Cliff, and then smoke and the long chimney, and the cliffs turn the corner and are beyond your sight. But, for the very heart of Dover, you must look under your where's dock after dock, motionless, its long arms shut about its guests.—From "Cliffs and Sea-Coasts and Islands," by Arthur Symonds.

A MODERN INSTANCE.

My neighbor, Swatton, passing wise, believed in lots of exercise. He took long tramps through dales and dells, and swung huge clubs and iron bells, and all his frame was hard as nails; he was a model for all males. And he would come to me and say, "Why do you loaf the livelong day? You are too fat for any use; for such a waist there's no excuse. Why don't you walk two or three miles or nine, and have a shapely form like mine?" And he is dead and in his grave, while I sit here and sing and rave. He was so blithe three weeks ago! Then came the flu and laid him low. The same disease mixed things with me, and lost its pep and had to flee. The rules of health are tiresome stuff; they make life's sledding doubly rough, and I have always let them slide, and I hang on, where health fans died. I do not sit up, in distress, to count the symptoms I possess. A dozen scots, and more than that, have told me I'm too beastly fat; I ought to follow where they led—and I hang on, and they are dead. I eat too much, and I despise all modern forms of exercise; and still I live and write my verse, while wiser men engage the hearse.

Owner Wanted for Necklace.

"Valuable pearl necklace with diamond clasp. Owner wanted." This notice, issued by the London police, has had an interesting sequel at Hove. Two years ago a woman visitor named Postford reported to the Hove police her loss of a pearl necklace while she was out walking. Nothing more was heard until just recently. The necklace, it appears, was found in a road in 1918 by a man, who gave it to his wife. The couple did not think it was valuable. The wife occasionally wore it. A little while ago the man took it to his employer, who, upon being told by a jeweller its real value, about £500, called in the police. The employee told his story, and the owner of the necklace was traced.

Short Lived Heroes.

The New York Times remarks upon the American habit of turning upon popular heroes. The career of President Wilson is only one of a large number which have soared and crashed in American history.

A classic example in modern times was the fate of Admiral Dewey. Raised to great heights of popular favour after the Spanish-American War, he became the best hated man in the country. At one time it is known he packed up his household goods and was ready to leave America in order to escape the wrath of those who lately had been cheering him.

Roosevelt himself always looked forward to the time when the crowds would turn on him. Had he lived, he might have experienced a reputation as emphatic as any favor he ever received.

The trouble seems to take root in the practise of over-praising their heroes. When General Pershing returned from Europe after the war, the speech of welcome delivered at New York attributed to him the qualities of Julius Caesar, Napoleon, Hannibal and Alexander the Great, rolled into one. It was ridiculous exaggeration. The penalty of the victim of such exaggeration is a readjustment of values in the public mind, turning admiration into scorn.

South Branch Notes.

Reports received in the city from the South Branch coal mines indicate that the working of the mine there is not progressing as rapidly as the government's promises prophesied. Writing to a friend in the city a visitor to the West Coast says that it is easy to find coal up here, lots of it. Living in the eastern end of the country, I never realized that Newfoundland had so much coal, and we having to import it from Sydney paying $21.00 per ton, seems to me disgraceful. The scenery, too, especially at this season, when the leaves have taken their autumn hues, is unrivalled. Continuing he said, I was at the South Branch mines and saw the motor trucks. The roads are not solid enough for them, and consequently very little coal will be hauled until the track is strengthened. Three shafts have been sunk, but one caved in burying a lot of coal that was ready to be hoisted out. The coal in the shaft that is now being worked is very soft and with a touch of a pick it tumbles down. John McDonald, belonging to Searstown, met with an accident and had to be sent to his home. He was conveyed to the railway track on a long cart. The accident was caused by an iron track upsetting and pinning his foot against a stump. The foot was badly crushed and the man suffered much pain. The assistants rendered all possible aid and bandaged the injured member.

Blue Puttee's' Re-Union.

Ninety of those who went overseas in the first draft of the Regiment on Florida on October 4th, 1914, met at night at Smithville in the first "Puttee's" re-union. After partaking of a dinner such as only Smithville can provide, the host list, which consisted of only two toasts, "The Puttee's" and "Absent Comrades," was followed. After the supper had been thoroughly enjoyed an impromptu concert followed. Songs were rendered by Majors March and Butler and Capt. J. Snow and G. G. Byrne. Capt. Irvine, Sergt. Morrissey, P. O. Smyth, Tom Noseworthy and G. McKean; recitations by Capt. H. McKean and Sergt. Major F. P. LeGrow. The evening was brought to a fitting close at 11.30 by the National Anthem. ### To England—From an Unknown Warrior.

In grave unmarked by stone or cross,
Far from my friends and home I lie;
Little of gold and much of dross,
Good and evil—such was I,
A common man of common clay,
Back to the dust I went and then
Rejoiced that, in my little day,
I lived and fought with men.

I strove with Fear on the brink of Hell,
Day after day, as the months went by;
Terror beyond what words can tell,
Reigned in the earth and air and sky.
A simple man, of honors free,
With countless comrades of lowly rank
The Cup of Death was given to me;
I lipped the Cup and deeply drank.

Happy I quaffed the bitter wine,
And drank it as I would a toast;
The dreaded hour became divine
With thought of Her I loved the most.
It was the best that I could do, (Humble and unknown though it be.)
Love, such as Egypt never knew,
ENGLAND! I gave to Thee!

"IN FREEDOM'S CAUSE."

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, - - - Proprietor
C. T. JAMES, - - - - - Editor

Friday, November 19, 1920.

THE TRUTH UNPALATABLE.

With characteristic and unblushing effrontery, Mr. Coaker in last evening's Advocate, or if not that gentleman personally, one of his satellites, described Wednesday night's meeting of Northern Fishermen "a miserable failure." That was expected. Everything not initiated by Mr. Coaker is a failure, though the Fish Regulations so freely condemned by the toilers, themselves, cannot be said to have been the acme of success, notwithstanding that they were the offspring of Mr. Coaker's brain. It was not supposed for a moment that the Advocate would truthfully present the proceedings of a gathering so antagonistic to the brain children of Mr. Coaker, but it might at least have had the manliness to refrain from adding insult to injury, for not only by its contemptible and utterly to be condemned editorial utterance, has it grossly offended non-Union fishermen, but today it has incurred the resentment of all straight-thinking and independent members of the organization itself. Men who have been proud of their connection with the Union, are utterly disgusted with the lying and mendacity of the Advocate's report of their meeting. Men who were loyal to Coaker all through the years have completely recanted, and will no longer have anything to do with a man who allows his own newspaper to vilify and malign them. The President has not been true to his salt. He has not been loyal to the men who placed him in the position he occupies to-day. He has betrayed them grossly and they now see that he is no longer their friend—if he ever was. The stigma of his conduct will forever attach to him in their minds, and their good opinion of him once, has now turned into the bitterest contempt.

If the purpose of the Advocate yesterday was to belittle and ridicule the intelligence of the fishermen—and there is no reason to doubt that such was the object of its editorial utterance—then that paper can for the present rest on its laurels. It certainly accomplished that which it set out to do, and if we do not mistake the present temper of the Northern fishermen, now in St. John's, there will be an early and final settlement of their account against Mr. Coaker. There can be no compromise between the fishermen and the man who has sold them for a mess of government pottage. Desperate diseases require desperate remedies, and it is up to the "underdogs" who have been spurned by Mr. Coaker to prescribe for him in such a way that he will never forget. All the claptrap and flapdoodle of the Advocate concerning the high price of fish and the protection afforded by the Regulations is only as sounding brass. Deeds, Mr. Advocate, not words, and yet more words, are needed now. Fishermen have learned by personal experience how much dependence can be placed in the protestations of the Advocate and its master, and the lesson has been so harsh, that its teaching will not be forgotten for many a long day. All the flare-up about Labrador Fish being worth $8.00 and $7.00 is not corroborated by fishermen to-day. Those men, who related their own difficulties in their attempts to dispose of their catch were not telling untruths. They knew whereof they spoke. They cannot sell their fish because of the restrictions imposed upon exports by the Government. The Regulations have made it impossible for them to reap the reward of their season's labor, but before they leave St. John's they are determined that justice must be done them even to the smashing of the enactments that have been—for them—a delusion and a snare. The unpalatable truth has been forced upon Mr. Coaker. He sees his power over the toilers waning, hence the meretricious sentiments handed out by his paper, sentiments that are as false as the hand that wrote or the brain that directed.

The Fishermen and the "Advocate."

The following communication which was received at this office last evening needs no comment:

Dear Sir:—
We have read the report in the Advocate of Thursday, concerning the meeting held in the C.C.C. Hall, and wish to say that it is grossly false in every particular, and an insult to the fishermen who called the meeting, and were present, which we deeply resent.

Advocate Office Invaded

BY INDIGNANT FISHERMEN.
Yesterday's Advocate contained an entirely false account of the very successful public meeting held by the fishermen on Wednesday night. The fishermen naturally resented these despicable methods of trying to cover up a defeat, and during the afternoon several of them called at the office of what purports to be the "fishermen's organ," and demanded that the report be contradicted in today's issue. The editor, luckily for himself, was not in at the time, and the business manager promised to have things rectified, placing the blame on the reporter. The fishermen promised him another visit to-day, provided the correction is not made. They indignantly resent the Advocate's false story and will take steps to put that journal in its place if it does not comply with their demands. The fishermen now know how well they can trust Coaker and his mouthpiece.

Deputation Waits on Mr. Coaker.

The deputation appointed at Wednesday night's meeting to wait on Mr. Coaker and demand the fulfilment of his promise, to buy all their Labrador fish at $8 and $7, called on him at 11 o'clock yesterday. The fishermen were closeted with Mr. Coaker for over three hours and they are reported to have given him a straight talk, a thing which this new autocrat has not had for a long time, and needs badly. The only satisfaction he would give was that if the merchants would not buy for nine dollars, he would try and sell all the fish in port for eight dollars. The fishermen are not yet sure if Mr. Coaker's word can be relied on, and are therefore, not so confident of being able to get rid of their fish, as he would like them to be. Incidentally, after last night's fiasco, Coaker must realize that he is at last up against it, for there is hardly a fisherman on the schooners now in port who is not disgusted with the minister's conduct.

Being Inquired Into.

Messrs. Job Bros. & Co. Ltd. deny issuing any trade circular saying that "the Regulations (Export) permit the placing of a value of $11 per qtl. on No. 1 Fish," as alleged by X.Y.Z. in a letter to the Telegram. We are making inquiries to ascertain the truth or error of the assertion.

Call Another Meeting.

We would suggest to the fishermen now in port that they organize another meeting to-morrow night, and invite Sir John Crosbie, Hon. W. B. Grieve and Mr. A. E. Hickman to address them on the aspects of the foreign fish markets and the actual cause of the present inability of the toilers to dispose of their catches at remunerative rates. Messrs. Coaker and Co. have had their say—and little light they threw upon the matter. It is only fair now that the other side should be heard. Think it over fishermen, and don't fail to closely study the Advocate to-day, for a contradiction of their false report of Wednesday's meeting, and no less for the elaborate but untruthful description of last night's frost for Coaker.

Heard on the Street.

There are a good many long faces in the offices of the Star and Advocate to-day, and that the blinds of the editorial sanctums have been drawn closely.

The mournful look on the face of Mr. Coaker when he arrived at his office this morning, reminded those who saw him of the expression of an undertaker's mute at a funeral. When that deputation gets through with him, he'll look more than blue.

It is so long since the Hon. the Prime Minister—in name only—last saw the shores of his native land, that he won't know them when he does return. As Newfoundland's Rip Van Winkle, R.A.S. holds the palm.

The four blinks which recently arrived here are being sent across to meet the Premier and convey him on his return journey, and it has been suggested that when the blimps hover over the Premier's ship, a yaffle of white napies be dropped as a gift from the people of Newfoundland.

No Employment at Grand Falls.

MEN WALKING AROUND.
Grand Falls, Nov. 18.—Unnecessary misery, hardship and expense may be avoided if men seeking employment will make sure of a job before coming here. There is a large number of men walking around Grand Falls who cannot get work. Some of them are here for weeks. I interviewed the management to-day and learned that over three hundred men had been paid off during the past few weeks, and another hundred may be laid off before the end of the year. The lumber camps at Badger and Millertown are also about filled up. The A.N.D. Co. is doing all possible to assist men, but the supply greatly exceeds the demand.

Will Serve Tea at Dominion Sports.
The public who will be present in their thousands at the Dominion Sports in the Prince's Park on Monday next are kindly asked to patronize the dainty teas which will be served by the lady members of the Knights of Columbus Association, the proceeds of which go towards the defraying of expenses on the new Presentation Convent Memorial School. As it has been in the past each lady member of this association pledged to do of their might in connection with this new building, and success on many an occasion crowned them in their efforts when handsome sums were realized. It is hoped that Mrs. Charles Bulley who is to undertake the responsibility on Monday night, will be equally as successful as her co-workers. The public are reminded that soft drinks, cigars, cigarettes and delicacies of all kinds will be saleable at the cafe situated in the north east corner of the building, while the tea will be served in the Ladies' Room at the south end (not in the upstairs room as formerly).

Police Methods Justified War Memorial for St. Bon's.

As we gave publicity to the recent prohibitions cases in which the police came in for a great deal of adverse criticism, in Justice to Head Byrne and his associates we now print their side of the story. At the police station to-day a Telegram representative conversed with a woman who had just come in to make a complaint against her husband for cruelty. She informed us that she had a family of seven children who are practically destitute as the result of her husband's indulgence in moonshine, on which he spends practically every cent of his salary. He came home at 3 o'clock in the morning, crazed with some poisonous concoction, and attacked his wife and eldest son, beating them unmercifully. The unfortunate woman showed marks on her body and great swellings on her wrists where her crazed husband had beaten her. She said that he frequently pays as much as $2.50 for a very small bottle of moonshine.
Head Constable Byrne also gave us instances of a similar character. One man, whose family of nine lives at the Goulds, has spent over $800.00 on moonshine, and as a consequence his home has been broken up and his family left destitute. The Head Constable cited other cases all of the same kind. He then told of the difficulties with which the police are faced in their attempts to verify their suspicions of breakers of the Prohibition Law. Most of those on whom the police have a habit of dropping in unexpectedly have now put Yale locks on their doors. As the police cannot go so far as to break these doors down, they can only have recourse to the methods they have already employed to trap suspects. "Mothers are constantly coming to me with tears in their eyes," said the Head Constable, "imploping me to prevent their children from spending their money on liquor." A large number of the crimes which within the past few months have come up before the Magistrate were done under the influence of moonshine, and the police are forced to act in the way they have done to put a stop to its sale. The whole fault seems to be in the Prohibition Act, which should either be modified or abolished, rather than that it should be allowed to exist in its original state. Up to the present, whilst doing good in some cases, it has on the whole done a great deal of harm, a fact realised by all except a few faddists.

A Fallen Idol.

Fishermen Spurn Mr. Coaker--His Meeting Last Night a Failure--The "Underdogs" Not Given a Hearing.

The meeting held last night by Hon. Mr. Coaker to explain his Fish Regulations was fairly well attended but not by one half did as many turn up as on the previous night at the Fishermen's meeting. Mr. Coaker's meeting was held in the C.C.C. Hall and opened at 7:30 Hon. W. W. Halfyard acting as Chairman. The principal speaker was Mr. Coaker and he received a fair hearing though at time he was heckled. The majority of fishermen present were anxious to know what he was going to do about their unsold fish, so they listened attentively, but with disappointment, as was later shown when the meeting had to close down. Mr. Halfyard proved himself an able Chairman and on many occasions used his eloquence and diplomacy to quell the unrest which was all too evident. His prudent judgment in closing the meeting abruptly probably averted serious trouble. No attempt was made or invitation given the fishermen to express their views and this they resented. After the meeting was abruptly closed a number of fishermen jumped to the platform and began speaking. One of the men challenged Mr. Coaker and the other Government members present (they had just stepped off the platform) to get up and answer their questions. Dr. Campbell, seeing trouble brewing took Mr. Coaker by the arm, and with Mr. Penney following, they made a hurried exit, and immediately drove from the place. Special police guards were stationed at the Hall during the night and these had to be called on many times to keep order. Only for their protection it is doubtful if Mr. Coaker and the other three Government men would have escaped without injury.

Mr. Halfyard Opens.
Mr. Halfyard in his opening remarks said, that conditions here, are similar the wide world over. High prices for everything we have to buy and low prices for everything we have to sell. As we all here are interested in fishing matters, I won't detain you but will call on the Hon. Mr. Coaker, who is Minister of Marine and Fisheries and for the past few months acting Prime Minister. He is a big man politically and is here to explain conditions as they exist.

Hon. W. F. Coaker Explains.
Hon. W. F. Coaker--Following the remarks made by the Chairman, I am glad to see so many fishermen present at this meeting and I hope you will listen to every word I say and try to carry away the facts I give you. Living in a time when every man should do his best, he should keep cool. Conditions in Newfoundland are very bad. I am in touch with the markets and I am in the secrets of the Government and I say this is no time for making light of matters. Last year we had a game of politics and the people decided, and I hope it will be 3 years before they will decide again. In my opinion there is no possibility of another General Election till the term of the present Government expires. The beginning of our troubles in Italy was the establishment of the Consorzio. This is run by one Ragnoli, we must sell through him and him only. (Voice in audience--"What about Hawes?") Norway and Iceland have combined against this Consorzio as we have done. The exporters of fish seeing that they could not do business with the Consorzio, asked us to send Mr. Hawes. We sent him but he did not succeed in making sales. He is there now and when he and Hon. Mr. Squires attended a five hours session of the Consorzio, Mr. Ragnoli showed them a copy of the Daily News dated Sept. 23rd and said we won't buy now. Ragnoli's idea is to get fish at his price, but we want enough for our fish to give the fisherman a living wage. (Fishermen--"We are not getting it now.")

(Mr. Coaker--"Don't interrupt me I am here to give you information.") Fishermen--Will you buy our fish? After restoring order Mr. Coaker continued. Mr. Hawes, I am told, is not liked in Italy. Well the reason is because Mr. Hawes is a hard man. If any man could come and say to me I can sell 100,000 qts. of fish to Italy, I would be only too glad. If you men think the regulations should be given up, let the Italians give up the Consorzio. When we put our regulations in force in Greece the Greeks bought our fish readily and we would be selling more if people would stop saying the price is going down. They want lots of fish in Greece, but they are waiting for the price to drop. They had a big crop of olives, and with plenty of oil they use lots of fish. Mr. Coaker then explained to the audience the workings of a large board with pegs, which represented fish carriers. (A voice was here heard saying "It's your move next, Mr. Coaker.") All the owners of which would break if the regulations were lifted. The same conditions as these exist every year regarding the export of our fish. Anyhow why has cod oil gone down? It is because there is no regulations or artificial props to keep it up. If the regulations are removed an awful condition will exist, and I don't know where they will end. Many firms here now have to be nursed. There is no man prevented from shipping fish in St. John's. We only advised shippers not to charter vessels until the congestion, I have shown you on the board, is relieved. All this stuff you are told about people not being allowed to ship is nonsense. (Shouts--"Put him out!" and "let him stay!")

The meeting became disorderly at this point and the speaker became angry and changed his measured words to a mad rush, during which he said something about preaching blue ruin, and his own enemies. Dr. Campbell, who was on the platform, began to get uneasy and thought something serious was up, but Mr. Halfyard reassured him that all would be well. Cooling somewhat Mr. Coaker referred to the delegation of fishermen which waited on him in the morning with a set of resolutions. He told them that he would give them $8 for their fish, but if they removed the regulations they would only get $5. Twelve months ago, said the speaker, I saw this cloud coming and there would be hard times for Newfoundland. My experience is that the men who handle the business of the country will one day make a promise and the next day break it. (Applause.) I know a merchant who last year lost $120,000 on a cargo of fish to Brazil, but this year since the regulations the shippers have not lost one cent. (Shouts--"No, but the fishermen did.") My opponents say I have a better chance to make money in the fish business than they. This is not true. The smallest man can start in the fish business if he chooses. The Spaniards were not stopped from exporting fish if they pay their license. They have as much right to do so as I have. Do you think that with my knowledge I should give into a few men who have a political card to play. With all my knowledge do you think I should beg? If I did you would curse me. It is impossible for Editors to know this business. They would not understand what is on this board. I have the facts, I have the knowledge, and I am not going to give in.

Here another spasm came on and something incoherent was said about plots hatched 30 years ago, and getting $9 for fish, and the regulations. Becoming calmer the speaker continued, get a petition with 1,500 names from Bonavista Bay signed to it saying they don't want me and I won't stay in the Government. Morine can have my job. I am slaving from Monday to Sunday and is that worth living for? Anyone can have my job if they can do it better. Give me the petition with 1,500 names and I will give up the job, but I will give you a warning, men, do a lot of thinking. I am going to attend the Convention next week and then let these men judge me. I you have any trouble about your fish come to me and I will get you $8.00, not $9.

This ended Mr. Coaker's explanation of the regulations and what the fishermen were going to do with their ship Labrador.

The Man from Norway.
Mr. Penney, who was the next speaker, thought get funny at the opening of his speech but he quickly realized that the fishermen were in no mood to joke with. They had heard the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, but he told them nothing concerning their fish which they could not dispose of. The talk of getting $9 for Labrador fish was not what was wanted. The fishermen had white nape Labrador and heavy salted shore cured Newfoundland fish made according to the regulations, but Mr. Coaker did not refer to this at all, so Mr. Penney was told to give them something of more vital interest. In his opening remarks Mr. Penney said: Men, you may say, you Penney, had a jolly time at our expense (hear! hear!) I stayed at the best hotels, and all through my travels I had the best that could be had. It was the first time a fisherman had a good picnic at the Government expense. (The audience here began to clamor, and shout, "You were spending our blood and sweat.") Mr. Coaker got uneasy and the chairman had to call order a dozen times. He threatened to close the meeting and the police had to be called in. Continuing, Mr. Penney described his trip abroad. Some one asked "What did you bring back? Was it Sugar?" Another voice: "Did you see Mr. Coaker's dog Muttie on your travels?" A member of the Daily Star staff began shouting, and his voice was heard amongst the din saying, "Never mind, Mr. Penney, go on." He continued, but in another strain, saying, a friend of mine belonging to my native town, backgarded me while I was away; I am prepared to meet that man any day. Men, we must have regulations as regards cure of fish. In Norway it is treated as an article of food. Everyone in the House of Assembly voted for the regulations. Now, while cheap Norwegian fish was being sold in the markets, what would have happened if fish had to go on as before? (Voice in the audience: "I was promised $10 for fish; did I get it? Not yet.") The chairman: "We must have order, or I will have to close the meeting." Mr. Penney, continuing: When I read articles in the local papers I thought there must be a crisis on here, but now when I remember what I saw on the other side, I think we are living in a Paradise. (Various voices: You, perhaps are, we are not, we can't get sale for our fish.") After order was again restored, Mr. Penney went on to say, that we are now up against something and we must make up our minds to overcome it; we must pull together with a long pull and a strong pull. (Voice in the audience: You can't pull us.") One fisherman, becoming impatient, rose to his feet and said, "I have 800 qts. of fish here; what am I going to do with it?" Other voices, "give us order, like we had last night." Again the shouting continued: "We are the poor beggars that paid for your picnic." Mr. Penney, yes, I was over to Norway, but I won't tell you much about it. While I was in Grimby I saw more fish handled in a day than is handled on the whole Labrador in a year. Talk about white napes, all the fish in Norway is made white nape, everything is washed off the fish.

A fisherman: "How much fish did you catch over there?"
Mr. Penney: "Probably more than you ever did."
Fisherman: "Get out; I caught fish while you were sleeping."
Mr. Penney could stand the strain no longer and sat down.

The "Model Farmer."
Dr. Campbell next took the floor, and in a very loud voice told the men present how good Mr. Coaker was, that if he liked he could sit down in his office smoking cigars and fanning himself. He told the men that Mr. Coaker had to work hard to keep up the product of their toll, and that he had the advice of advisory boards, business men, and the Government to guide him. What are the organs of the Opposition doing to-day, said the Doctor. They are trying to ruin the country, talking blue ruin. He was sorry to say that there were men in the city to-day who would ruin it and the country and even they would ask the help of the devil himself if they could ruin us. See if our enemies will buy your fish at $9. (Voice in the audience: "You and Coaker and the bunch promised us $10 and more.") Dr. Campbell: This pouring out tales of blue ruin is killing us. These people are not patriotic; we are not asking for quarter. (Voice (Continued on page 11.)

A Fallen Idol.

In the audience: "No! you fellows want all!" This was too much for the Doctor, and he gave a nod to Mr. Halfyard, who in a few words, during which he referred to a West Coast merchant who told him that if he could buy all the fish caught in Newfoundland for $5 per qtl. he would not touch a cod's tail this year. The audience was then informed that the meeting would close with singing the National Anthem. No cheers were called for the speakers and none were given, excepting at the start when there was some clapping from a part of the audience. When the National Anthem was finished the fishermen began to realize how they had been duped; they thought they were going to get British fair play, and he asked to express their views. This Mr. Coaker had no intention of permitting. However, the men did not intend to miss the opportunity and Mr. Frank Green and several others took the platform and challenged Mr. Coaker to listen to their side of the story. The Hon. gentleman and his friends did not relish the meeting and quickly made their exit, escaping in a motor car. Mr. Green continued his address, the audience remaining in the hall. He spoke for a square deal in connection with their fish and his remarks were greeted with loud applause. After addressing the meeting for nearly ten minutes and amidst much excitement the police entered the hall turned out the lights and ordered those in the hall to clear out. So ended that much talked of meeting of the Hon. W. F. Coaker, Acting Prime Minister, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, etc. etc. On the street for hours afterwards angry crowds of fishermen gathered and spoke of the dirty trick that had been played on them.

NOTES.

Was it a "dud"?
 Doesn't the "Big Man" feel sick today?
 Mr. Coaker now knows how the fishermen feel towards him.

Mr. Halfyard said that "Coaker is a big man "physically and mentally." He should have added the word "deficient" to the tail of the sentence.

The only thing that seemed to worry the audience last night was the whereabouts of Coaker's dog "Mutty." Unfortunately, Mr. Penney could not impart the necessary information.

Talking of Mr. Penney, he hardly knew whether he had been sent away to bring back a description of the countries he visited or to find out the best means of curing "sculpins."

When the fishermen showed their righteous indignation "Doc" Campbell became so frightened and perspired so much that he became a mere shadow of his former corpulent self.

The Prince Edward Island "doc" raised the red flag last night and raved about the Opposition press. Ragnoff, "daggoes" and "wops" until he became so bewildered that he ended up by calling himself a "wop."

Of course Coaker's meeting was not political, oh! no!

Three members of the executive and His Honour the Speaker were on the platform.

Doc Campbell did not go into details over these vouchers for his trip, which, it is said, Coaker refused to pass.

His Honour the Speaker, Mr. W. F. Penney, M.H.A., for Carbonara, made the speech of the evening, though he lied badly when he stated that a fellow townsman had abused him during his absence. Why not be truthful as always Mr. Penney? What did one of the audience say to you last night?

Who was it caught fish when Mr. Penney was asleep?

The circulation of the Advocate has fallen off so much that the few thousand surplus copies were distributed free last night, but the fishermen were so disgusted at the despicable falsehoods which the Coaker organ contained that one and all destroyed their copies.

Buy a Bag of Basic Slag $3.50

A bag of Basic Slag contains about 200 lbs. of Fertilizer, which if put on your ground before the snow comes will work for you throughout the Winter and have your ground ready for seeding in the Spring, thereby making unnecessary the purchase of high priced Fertilizers.

About this time every year we sell large quantities of Basic Slag, if you are not using it, now is the time to begin.

Use about 5 bags to the Acre: it is suitable for Potatoes, Turnips, etc., also for meadow and hay lands.

Harbor Grace Notes.

We note by the Telegram of the 16th inst., that Miss Gwen Holmes, daughter of Rev. A. A. Holmes, pastor of Pouch Cove, Methodist Church, left by the "Digby" on Monday for Halifax, from whence she will go to Toronto to take up nursing. Rev. Holmes was stationed here about three years ago; during which time both him and his family made very many friends, who will all join in wishing Miss Gwen abundant success in her chosen profession.

Capt. Moses Pelley and Mr. George Guilford were passengers to the city by yesterday afternoon's train.

Mrs. Z. Simmons left town by yesterday afternoon's train for St. John's, to spend the winter months, and perhaps make her home, with her daughter, Mrs. E. J. Cole.

The schooner "Flower of Home," Richard Noseworthy owner and captain, arrived in port yesterday from the Labrador, via LaSalle, which place he was forced to put into, owing to the loss of the foremast, and when made seaworthy again she proceeded on her voyage to this port.

The schooner Nevis, Capt. Barbour, came off dock yesterday morning, all repairs having been effected, and after reloading her part cargo of fish, which had to be removed before her being docked she will get away again first opportunity.

The many friends of Miss Lillian Cron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cron, and teacher of the junior department of the Presbyterian School here, will be pleased to know that she is able to get out again, after an attack of diphtheria, which, we believe, was not of a very bad type, and will all join in wishing her a speedy return to her former good health again.

The schooner James O'Neill, Capt.

W. Ivany, got away this morning; she is bound for Malaga, Spain. We wish the young captain bon voyage.

Mr. George Davis, who has been working for the past summer at St. John's, is in town spending a few days. Mr. Davis made many friends when in the cab business here, who will be pleased to see him visiting the old spot once in a while.

The schooner Olga G. F., is on dock having the necessary repairs effected. This schooner is owned by Mr. James Blunden, of Bay de Verde.

Mr. Walter Wells, of Englee, French Shore, was in town on Tuesday and left again for the city by Wednesday morning's train to connect with the Prospero en route for his home again.

Mr. E. Simmons' schooner Dorothy, Capt. John Shagave, left port yesterday for St. John's with a load of fish from her owner.

Capt. M. H. Randall, of the schr. Innovation, went to the city by this morning's train for a short visit on business.

The Sale of Work given by the Women's Association and St. Catherine Girls' Guild of St. Paul's Church, at St. Paul's Hall last night, was highly successful. The proceeds amounted to something over $340 so we learn. It will be on again tonight (Thursday), and we wish the ladies another bumper night. At the present moment there is rain storm on here, but we hope it will clear as the night advances.

DR. JONES LECTURES.

Last night Rev. Dr. Jones lectured to the members of the Llewellyn Club at the Canon Wood Hall. His subject was "Some things I saw in London." The lecture lasted for one hour and a half and was listened to with much interest. It began with a view of London and then went on to show its principal buildings and sections. Centres of financial and economic interests were discussed. Churches of ancient foundation and associated with historic facts were pointed out, portions of Old London with its venerable monuments, were also dwelt upon. In showing the old Temple Church, a little time was taken to discuss the Crusades because of its connection with that memorable movement. At the close a vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. A. Carnell and seconded by Mr. Wm. Savin. The lecturer made a brief acknowledgement, after which it was announced that next week the lecture would be on "Some Things I saw in Edinburgh." Several new members joined the Club, which accentuated the success of the meeting.

Midwives' Club.

On Monday evening, Nov. 1, a meeting of the above club was held, at which the following officers were elected:

Mrs. Hiscock (trained nurse), President.

Mrs. Thorburn, Secretary.
Mrs. McKay, Treasurer.
Nurses Cunningham, Edgar, Scott and Benedict, Advisory Committee.

As no lecturer was present the meeting was of a social nature. However, on the following Monday, the services of Dr. Carnell were secured, and his talk was much appreciated. The good Doctor has kindly consented to give a series of lectures on the 1st and 3rd Monday's of each month. Miss Southcott also gave a very enjoyable short address. Miss Taylor will address the club next Monday evening.

Lady Harris has kindly consented to become Honorary President, for which the members are deeply grateful.

We hope the Doctors of the city will also assist our beginners in the practical work. The club will meet every Monday at 8 p.m.

Supervisor.

A Sailor's View.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me space to make a few remarks on the article which appeared in your issue of the 17th inst. under the heading "New Schedule of Wages," which shows a decrease of fifteen dollars per month in seamen's pay.

Well, sir, are we underdogs going to be banished from the country altogether, or what? Just fancy a sailor with a wife and two or three children, or a mother and two or three little sisters or brothers, getting sixty dollars per month and making half pay of an allotment, that's $30.00 per month coming in to their dependents. How in the name of goodness is a woman and two or three children going to live, pay rent and buy coal on $30.00 per month when, as stated, it costs $35.00 to support one seaman on board ship with everything at wholesale prices? Perhaps those ship owners will say, "Oh, a seaman has no right to get married." Well, perhaps he hasn't, but he has a right to have a mother and perhaps other dependents.

The article under the aforesaid heading also states that crews of Danish, Norwegian and even Canadian vessels are paid smaller wages than the crews of Newfoundland vessels. As to the Danish vessels, I do not know, but I know for a fact that both Canadian and Norwegian, and I will have to mention American, shipowners pay better wages than our Nfld. shipowners. For instances on an American foreign going vessel the wages is $80.00, and the crew are divided into three watches, working eight hours per day, getting paid extra for overtime—I don't mean for reefing or taking in sail, but if the vessel has got to be shifted in dock before 7 a.m. or after 5 p.m. the crew are paid extra for doing so.

Now, on some of our Nfld. vessels the crew in some cases have to work 24 hours per, but nobody hears tell of overtime. I wish to inform my readers that this is not for my own benefit alone, as I do not expect to sail before the mast again, but as Capt. Kean said last night at the fishermen's meeting in the C. C. C. Hall, "I like to be with my countrymen when fighting for their rights."

I have sailed before the mast as mate and master, and back to mate again, and what I find on Nfld. vessels is, the only man on board worth mentioning is the master. All the others are underdogs. For myself, I don't care what position I hold on board ship I consider myself equal to any man and any man equal to me. In fact I have seen cases where the vessel may—no, not may but would—be on the bottom to-day if it was not for some member of the ship's crew. But still as the head "Gazabo" gets all the credit, none is coming to the man who really did the work. Of course I know it is necessary to have a certain amount of discipline on board, but in many cases there is too much used on our local vessels. Trusting I have not encroached too much on your valuable space, and thanking you, Mr. Editor,

I am, sir, yours truly,
SAILOR CHAP.

Spanish Schr. "Alonzo" Had Long Voyage.

The Spanish schr. Alonzo, 65 days from Seville, arrived in port yesterday evening. The vessel experienced very heavy weather all through the voyage and considerable damage was done. The main and mizen topmasts were carried away, the rudder is badly damaged, making it difficult to navigate the vessel, whilst some of the ship's canvas was also carried away. The Alonzo was the vessel which was reported from Cape Race nine days ago in a disabled condition. The Cabot was sent to her assistance but did not succeed in locating the vessel. The schooner was unable to hold the land, and was driven off, and when the gale subsided she was over 200 miles at sea. Much difficulty was experienced in getting back to the land, but by careful seamanship the vessel was successfully brought to port. The captain and crew are all well and none the worse for their trying voyage.

Bloomfield and McTigue Draw.

THE IRISHMAN FOUGHT EIGHT ROUNDS WITH AN INJURED ARM.

MONTREAL, Nov. 11.—(By Canadian Press)—The ten round bout between the two middleweights, Mike McTigue, of Halifax, and Jack Bloomfield, of London, England, here tonight at the Mount Royal Arena, resulted in a draw in the opinion of both sporting editors of the two Montreal morning papers.

Louis Larivee, of LeCanada, says that Bloomfield was floored in the first round, and was only saved by the gong, but after that he came back and had the edge on McTigue in the second round. Thereafter, the rounds were pretty even. McTigue scored the best blows, but Bloomfield was much the cleverer boxer and made McTigue miss him on many occasions. The latter was relying on a left hook which he could never put over. At the end of the tenth round Bloomfield showed no signs of having been knocked down in the first round. Both finished strong.

William Morrison, of Gazette says: "Fighting eight rounds with an injured arm, Mike McTigue who outpointed Jack Bloomfield in a previous meeting, fought a draw with Bloomfield in the feature bout of the National Sporting Club's entertainment at Mount Royal Arena to-night. The accident occurred in the closing moments of the second round when McTigue swung a right hand blow at Bloomfield's head. The blow was stopped by Bloomfield's left and the sudden contact shattered McTigue's elbow."

"McTigue fought out the remaining rounds, using his left arm punches the greater part of the time, only attempting to cross with the right occasionally. Previous to the accident McTigue had much the better of the bout. In the first round he set too fast a pace for Bloomfield and knocked him down for the count of five. Bloomfield being saved by the gong."

"Bloomfield earned the honors of the second round and as the fight progressed became more confident and forced the fighting although unable to land any telling punches on McTigue. In the remaining rounds there was little advantage to Bloomfield even with McTigue fighting with an injured arm. Bloomfield was unaware of the injury to McTigue's arm and continued to be cautious all through."

In the ten-round bout between Roddie McDonald, of Glace Bay, and J. McLaughlin, of Halifax, middleweights, the referee stopped the bout in the fourth round, regarding the decision to McDonald. The crowd were of opinion that these fighters were not putting up their best efforts at first, and there was considerable booing. At this McDonald waded in to McLaughlin and cut him to pieces. The fight was easily McDonald's, who completely outpointed the Halifax man.

Too Literal.

Lady Helen Munro-Ferguson, wife of the ex-Governor General of the Australian Commonwealth, who is shortly returning to England with her husband, is, of course, a daughter of the late Lord Dufferin, and spent a good part of her early life in India when her father was Viceroy.

Amongst other stories of her experience out there that she tells is one concerning a certain native who kept a florist's shop in Simla.

One day (says Lady Munro-Ferguson) it chanced that a young soldier died near there, and as is usual in such cases his comrades subscribed for a wreath.

A telephone message was sent to the florist in question instructing him as to the size and form of the floral emblem, and he was told to put the inscription, "Rest in Peace," on both sides, and if there was room, "We shall meet in Heaven."

The native carefully repeated the instructions word for word, but when the wreath was delivered on the day of the funeral the comrades of the deceased were horrified to find that the inscription on it read as follows: "Rest in peace on both sides, and if there is room we shall meet in heaven."

What Tino Likes.

When laying linoleum or oilcloth, the boards or flags should have a good covering of sawdust sprinkled evenly over them to prevent them wearing through the lime. Do not cover the whole of the floor with sawdust at once, but gradually, as you unroll the oilcloth, so that it does not get uneven as the covering is laid. This sawdust absorbs any damp in the room, and gives a springy feeling to the feet; moreover, the pattern will not get worn off in patches, as it very often does when only newspapers are used underneath.

Moistened sawdust is very good to sprinkle over linoleums, oilcloths or carpet, before sweeping. It will collect all the dust, and make the patterns show up wonderfully. It must not be left long on the floor covering, but swept up a few minutes before it has time to dry.

When Mother's Advice is Most Needed

A GIRL'S future health and happiness depends to a large extent on conditions during the adolescent period.

At about fourteen years of age important mental and physical changes are taking place, which every girl should understand. Then it is that she needs the care and advice of her mother.

Unfortunately this is about the time when school work and examinations are likely to prove an excessive strain on the nervous system.

Anemia, chlorosis or nervous breakdown in the form of St. Vitus' dance are not uncommon at this age.

There is a failure of the blood to supply the nourishment required by the nervous system. Excessive mental effort consumes the nervous energy required to insure good digestion and the proper functioning of the vital organs.

It is surprising to find how quickly the nervous system responds to the restorative influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. There is no longer any question that this treatment is admirably suited to help girls through this most critical period of their lives.

In almost every community are many cases to prove the exceptional restorative influence of this well-known treatment.

The use of the nerve food stimulates the appetite, improves digestion, and builds up the system in every way.

Miss Rena B. Crossland, Kempt, Queen's Ca., N.S., writes: "I feel it a duty, as well as a privilege, to tell of the wonderful benefit I derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. In March, 1917, I had anaemia of the brain, and the mental and physical suffering I endured is indescribable. I had treatment from three doctors, and for twelve days was unconscious; while for three months I was fed and cared for like an infant. My mother was so anxious for me to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that she crushed it and baked it in my food. After using two boxes I could feed myself, and after using it for two months, my health improved so rapidly that doctors and friends said my recovery was a miracle.

"I cannot recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food too highly, even to those who seem to be facing death. We keep it in the house now, and I use it occasionally to 'keep fit.' I shall always regret that I did not follow my mother's advice and use it while I was away teaching, whenever I felt nervous or tired. But as I had no serious illness and did not realize the value of it, I neglected heeding mother's advice until it was too late and I had a complete breakdown. But, thanks to Providence and Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I have been enjoying my former health and strength for the past two years."

A Visit to the Royal Mint.

A visit to the Royal Mint is interesting if only to see the Royal Minters, who are a fine set of men with a greater proportion of handsome heads among them than in any other assembly that I remember.

Not so long since I was led through the Royal Mint by the Deputy Master himself, who did what was possible, above the din of minting, to instruct me in its mysteries, but I recollect little save two crystal facts. One was that the men had not only fine heads, but the most part fine hair and mustaches, but a fine frank bearing; and the others, that there are machines in this place which are practically human. The linotype had hitherto seemed to me, who have seen little in this way, the most drastically capable of all metal intelligences; but I don't know that it is really in advance of the gently reasonable creatures here that turn out hundreds of threepenny pieces a minute, and are equally willing to turn out shillings, half-crowns and sovereigns; while there is a strange sprawling monster also here whose life is spent in counting pennies into bags, and who can safely be left to do this with perfect accuracy all day long which is more than any accountant, however chartered, could be.

But how the Royal Mint managed to supply England with sufficient coins before machinery came in, I cannot imagine. There are astonishing contrasts in the machines, too! For while one of them will brutally and noisily bite thick strips of bronze as though they were biscuits, another in almost complete silence is weighing coins with the utmost delicacy, some score to the minute, and discarding into separate compartments any that are the faintest trifle too light or too heavy, and not a soul near it to interfere.

A visit to the Royal Mint is so like a dip into the Arabian Nights that anyone may be pardoned for bringing away only hazy impressions. You see the whole thing exactly as in the stories, not only the Eastern "Aladdin," but the European "Tinder Box," where the soldier passed from the room filled with coppers to the room filled with silver, and from the room filled with silver, to the room filled with gold. The only thing that you do not see at the Mint is the room filled with paper notes; but that is no loss. Who wants paper? Metal is the stuff.

So far as my memory serves me, we entered first a room packed with ingots. Have you ever seen an ingot? There is something in the very word that brings romance about you. Ingots and doubloons and pieces of eight. Well, here are ingots; great lumps of silver and bronze piled on trestles to be wheeled into the furnace room. And then the furnace room, with its glowing fires and its cauldrons of boiling metal and its handsome, brassy fire-fishers. Here everything is hot and liable to splutter, and the men must protect not only their eyes but their hands, so that every one has vest gloves. To anybody thinking of taking up minting as a home pastime I would say that the first thing to do with metal from which coins are to be made is to turn it into bars. These bars begin at, say two feet six long and barely one inch thick, and a series of machines then take them into their maws and so deal with them that by the time they are finished with they are some yards long and of the thickness of whatever coin they propose to be. It is then that they are fed into the machine which stamps out the discs corresponding to the circumference of the desired coin; and then these discs are gently but firmly crushed between the two discs appertaining to those coins. Nothing could be simpler—now. Yet only by immense thought and engineering in the past has this simplicity come about. But I suppose that in a century's time minting will be simpler still.—From "London Revisited," by E. V. Lucas.

Permanent Pink Cheeks.

The latest craze of society is for pink cheeks that are permanent. These are now possible by means of an electric tattooing machine which pricks artistic pigments into the skin. The old form of tattooing was indeed a painful and dangerous operation. With the electric needle, however, it is almost painless, being just a prickly sensation akin to that felt when one's foot has gone to sleep.

The possibility of blood poisoning setting in is carefully guarded against by sterilisation and the use of non-poisonous pigments. A pair of pink cheeks, or even rosy lips, can be tattooed with this electric needle, working at 5,000 pricks a minute, in about an hour. The result is a work of art defying any but an expert to detect it. The new tattooer must be an artist to achieve the best effect. He must carefully blend his colors to tone with the natural coloring of the patient. After the operator has carefully mixed his pigments to the shade he requires, the area of skin over which the electric needle is to work is first thoroughly treated with a mild antiseptic. The operator then pencils the outline of the spot in which the pigments are to be punctured to obtain the required effect. The colors are next put on with little camel-hair brushes. Everything is now ready for the electric needle which is first carefully sterilized and the current switched on. The needle is driven a uniform distance into the skin with lightning-like speed. Each puncture embeds a certain amount of the coloring beneath the surface of the skin, where it remains permanently unless a special operation is carried out afterwards to remove it.

Where Does Khaki Go ?

Where do khaki uniforms go in peace time? Some people may keep them for proudly patriotic reasons, others from motives of sheer economy in these profligate days, but by far the greater proportion of left-overs go to other lands. The semi-barbaric races of the African forests and the natives of Eastern deserts are no longer content with a minimum of adornment. They are adopting Western ideas, and are always prepared to pay for the privilege of being clothed in khaki, by sending us rubber and ivory, ostrich feathers and the like in exchange.

In pre-war days certain exporters of cast-off clothing were often able to send to dusky gentlemen tall hats, frock coats, fancy waistcoats of the brightest hues and patent leather, cloth-topped boots. The knuts of the desert would gladly murder anyone if by doing so they would become possessed of a gaudy vest or a pair of puce socks.

The Knuts of the Desert.
Some of the more fortunate ones would put a terrific "side" on by wearing half a dozen fancy waistcoats at one time. Others were looked upon as princes if they could adorn themselves with a red tunic and a Scotch bonnet.

But the War has altered all this. We no longer set the fashion in frock coats, and red coats are scarce. It is only the aristocrats of the tribes who can afford to "swank" with them. So the ordinary common or garden native contents himself with the less colourful but more serviceable khaki.

This is now being shipped abroad in enormous quantities. In White-chapel High Street you will find the largest exporter of Army uniforms. It may be said of Mr. Landau that he has clothed hundreds of thousands of people and created more fashions in the tropics—than the most world-renowned dressmakers.

Letters—some of them in quaintly expressed pidgin English—received by Mr. Landau give an interesting insight into human psychology, which seems to be the same the world over. The young natives are "all out" to impress their lady friends. Scottish ladies will be interested to know that what these natives covet, above all things sartorial, is the coloured kilt. The possession of, say, a Stewart tartan entitles the natives to all the privileges of a prince among his people, and he can choose where and whom he likes from among his lady friends.

The kilt is king in the clothes department in West, South and East Africa. Nothing could be more

Mrs. John Dale Says She Could Hardly Climb the Stairs

Says Tanlac Overcame Her Rheumatism And Other Troubles.

"If others hadn't allowed their statements published in the papers I wouldn't have known about Tanlac and would still be suffering, so now I want to tell what the medicine has done for me, for the benefit of others," said Mrs. John Dale, of 65 Catherine St., South, Hamilton, Ontario, a few days ago.

"About three years ago I began to suffer from rheumatism, which kept getting worse until something over a year ago, when I found myself in almost constant pain. At times my arms up to my elbows became so swollen and painful I couldn't raise my hands above my head, and my fingers were so stiff I could scarcely hold the coffee pot to pour out the coffee.

"I could hardly go up a flight of stairs, on account of the stiffness in my muscles. I became so nervous the noises made by my children playing about almost made me frantic. No medicine did me any good, and I just seemed to be constantly growing worse.

"Seeing so many fine statements in the papers about Tanlac I decided to get a bottle and see if it would do me any good. Well, I declare, my rheumatism got better with the first few doses, and now that I have finished the second bottle, the last trace of it is gone. My nervousness is gone too, and I am so happy over being free from pain I can't fully express it, and I am only too glad to tell what Tanlac has done for me.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gillies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gush. In Miramichi by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake—adv.

"showy" than a multi-coloured kilt, worn by a swarthy native in a barbaric dance—and as colour is everything to the native eye, the kilt is a veritable "lady-killer."

One savage warrior appeared in part of the costume of a burly Beef-eater. Whether he ever realized the analogy, history saith not. The various Royal Air Force uniforms, particularly the light blue, are in favour with the tribesmen. The Air Force authorities will be pleased to know that their taste is appreciated in some quarters at least.

Many uniforms have been remade and are being sent to the distressed districts of Europe, but this is only temporary and will not deprive for long the natives in Africa and India. Another useful purpose is served in reducing old uniforms to rags from which cloth and blankets are manufactured.—Pearson's Weekly.

Don't Whistle at Sea.

Nearly all ships carry a horseshoe. Usually it is nailed somewhere in the stern. The horseshoe has been a fetish with sailors ever since Nelson nailed one to the mast of the Victory.

Sailors have many superstitions. A sailor who wears a baby's caul feels himself immune from death by drowning. And after a long trip the sailor who first sights land will have a good voyage home.

Jack becomes decidedly uneasy if he hears "landlubber lingo" on the ocean. Therefore, if ever you are a passenger, don't let him hear you refer to the deck of a cabin as the "floor," the companion as the "stairs," or the alleyway as the "lobby or passage." It is bad form, and unlucky.

Whistling at sea stirs up evil winds. A cutthroat swimming on top of the waves also betokens a storm. A bad omen is expected when an albatross alights on the deck, or when a seagull flies between the foremast and the mainmast. But if the seagull flies between the mainmast and the mizenmast fair winds will prevail.

Cats are considered unlucky to have on board ship.

Up to the last twenty years most sailors wore earrings for luck.

No sailor will shoot at birds for fear of destruction to his ship. It is unlucky to kill a petrel. These birds, called by the sailors "Mother Carey's chickens"—a corruption of "Mater Cara" (Blessed Virgin)—are the sailors' friends. They give warning of an approaching storm.

Legend has it that each of these birds bears the soul of a dead seaman.
