THE CITY COUNCIL.
The Street Railway North-west Route - An Unexpected Move - The Electric Light Transfer Tokens.
The council met at the usual hour last night. Present the Mayor, Aldrs. Hallam, Evans, Lobb, Tress, Stainer, Lora, Fleming, Charlis, Ryan, Bousfield, Kent, Clarke, Irwin, Adamson, Blevins, Taylor, Crocker, Denison, Davies.
The street railway route along York and William streets having again been recommended by the board of works, came up for consideration.
Ald. Davies thought it would be advisable to let the matter stand for a time. From what he had seen on Car Howard street, he did not think there was any room to spare for a street railway. He understood Mr. Clarke Gamble was going to open Renfrew street, which with McCall street would make a fine thoroughfare. He would have the clause be referred back to the committee on streets.

they had from, let us entertain them as well as our neighbors do, and they will think just as much of us as of them.

STATE V. PRIVATE RAILROADS. In Europe the tendency is toward state proprietorship of the railways. A carefully prepared article in Bradstreet's gives some important information on this point.

Germany, in 1877, out of 29,196 kilometers of road-bed, 18,000 belonged to the various states. In Baden, Wurtemberg, Hanover, Saxony, and for the most part, in Bavaria, the railroads are public property and a source of revenue to the public treasury, and it is quite a universally accepted conclusion in Prussia that, sooner or later, the whole railroad system will be national property.

In Belgium the total length of railroad lines amounted to 3848 kilometers; of this amount, 3000 kilometers were worked by companies, 1224 kilometers were managed by the state, although the property of private companies, while 595 kilometers were the property of the state. Although these figures appear to give importance to the principle of private rather than public management, if one examines the text of the charters he will observe that the fundamental idea of the Belgian system is the ultimate ownership by the state of all roads.

In France six great companies own most of the roads, but the control of the state is very complete and provision is made by limited charters for the road passing into the hands of the state at will.

In Holland the proportion of state railway lines to lines owned by companies is 516 kilometers of the former to 833 of the latter. The total length of lines in Austria-Hungary is 17,292 kilometers, of which the state owns but 2274 kilometers.

In England and the United States private corporations control the railways. In Canada we are under both systems.

Now the question of state proprietorship is fast rising into prominence both in the United States and Canada. The idea of the companies being monopolists who combine to bleed the public is spreading, and state control is suggested as the remedy. And there is one proposal in this respect that has much in its favor and seems to overcome the difficulty, namely, that the state should own the railroads and take tolls thereon, like canals, but that individuals and companies should own and operate the rolling stock. The tolls, of course, would be fixed by the legislature, and the evil of combination by railway managers would be prevented. Such a system, carried out on a gigantic scale, would wipe out unnecessary competing lines, would prevent unnecessary roads being built in the future, and might go a long way in solving the cheap transportation problem.

In connection with this question it should be remembered that the railways in the United States are practically controlled by two parties, the Vanderbilt and the Gould combinations, and that the war between these two is so vigorously carried on that in a very short time a compromise will have to be effected; in a word, they will combine and one great monopoly will control the railways, and, as an American paper puts it, practically govern the country.

Is Canada at the moment there will also be but two great combinations. When these consolidations come about, state proprietorship will be a real live issue.

THE CORN AND WHEAT CROP FOR 1881 IN THE UNITED STATES. From over 3000 reports from all the wheat and corn growing counties of the United States the conclusion is drawn that the past season as regards the growth and yield of the principal cereal crops, has been disappointing in a marked degree, owing to the presence of a severe drought of almost unexampled extent. It cannot, however, be said that corn and wheat have been a failure as the word is generally understood, for though the railways have not so much grain to transport to the seaboard, but, on the whole, the farmers will receive quite as much money for their crops.

Here are some of the figures from these returns: In Illinois the yield of wheat has declined from 15.8 bushels per acre in 1879 to 7.5 bushels in 1881. The total yield is twenty-four million bushels compared with fifty-one millions in 1879, and fifty-six millions in 1880. The story of this decline in the yield of Illinois is a severe winter which lags and drouth. The falling off from last year is about 50 per cent.

In Ohio the yield this year is thirty-five million bushels compared with forty-eight millions the year before, a falling off of twenty-five per cent. The average yield in Ohio is estimated at 12.8 bushels, as compared with eighteen bushels in 1879.

Michigan shows a falling off of forty-seven per cent. in 1879, the average yield being 10.5 bushels to the acre. And it runs through the other states, Nebraska only making a good show. The following table, where the amounts are given in millions, shows the real state of the crop in the western states:—

Table with 2 columns: State and Yield (Millions of bushels). Rows include Illinois, Nebraska, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Wisconsin, Kansas, and Total.

In the Pacific states the returns show a falling off. Dakota has quadrupled her yield owing to increased acreage. The middle states show a falling of twelve per cent., and New England a decline of one million bushels. The total yield is put at 368 millions of bushels.

The returns of the corn crop are even more unfavorable. The story is uniformly of the effects of the terrible drouth. The total yield for the western states, in 1879, was 1,283,361,000 bushels; in 1880, 1,130,022,000 bushels, and in 1881, 869,241,000. When the other states are added, in the figures show that the corn crop of the United States for 1881 is short about one third of the yield which it was reasonable to expect.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.

It is the object of the Toronto Field, St. George's Society, to do good service in the past, and will no doubt continue its good work in the future; but as a society for upholding British connection and British institutions, it has long since outgrown its usefulness, and in the actions of some of its members in opposing the motion to elect Mr. Goldwin Smith as honorary member of that society, there is something amounting to the infamous, especially when we take into consideration the special position enjoyed by that gentleman in the old land.

There is hardly a club or society of any note in England, that does not have its doors open to admit the learned professor. What think you of this? The gentlemen of St. George's society who have been reading the Globe until your minds are become imbued with the erroneous teachings of that journal! Is there not considerable stretch of the imagination required to find in the professor's work anything traitorous? I think so. The far-sighted British statesman would surely not have written the words of the man who but outlines what he believes to be the destiny of his adopted country.

And now, of course, we shall have a word in disparagement of the professor's views. But it seems that a small clique of Englishmen in our midst have become suddenly wiser than the rest of the world, and are now endeavoring to do good by super-laying white hands to be soiled by the money of one whom they look upon as a traitor. According to the logic of these gentlemen every British statesman who is a patriot and a lover of his country is a traitor. And now, of course, we shall have a word in disparagement of the professor's views. According to the logic of these gentlemen every British statesman who is a patriot and a lover of his country is a traitor. And now, of course, we shall have a word in disparagement of the professor's views. But it seems that a small clique of Englishmen in our midst have become suddenly wiser than the rest of the world, and are now endeavoring to do good by super-laying white hands to be soiled by the money of one whom they look upon as a traitor.

THE DISCOVERY OF THE TIBETAN ANTIQUITIES.

It was remarked by the authorities of Upper Egypt that the earlier part of the year that an unusual number of antiquities, papyri, statues, pieces of mummy cases, etc., were offered for sale by the natives. Suspicion was caused by this fact, and the matter reported to the vice-roy, who sent Herr Z. Brugsch to Upper Egypt, for the purpose of endeavoring to find out the reason. His investigation soon proved to his satisfaction the fact that more was known of the value of these things than was known by the natives, whose only reverence for the antiquities is in exact proportion to the amount of money or treasure they can acquire in exchange. More careful and systematic investigation very soon enabled Herr Brugsch to discover the native who was in possession of the desired secret, and he was called to give an account of all he knew. To those knowing the country it is needless to remark the native who was in possession of the desired secret, and he was called to give an account of all he knew.

A BLOOD-STAINED SHAWL.

Barleigh Chambers is one of those great, rambling piles of masonry in the neighborhood of Lincoln's inn, dedicated to the uses of the legal brotherhood of London.

In 1871 one of the legal demizens of the chambers was young Frederick Kent, named Clement Barkdale.

His neighbor in the adjoining chambers was one of those Bohemians who are found in London.

At the end of November, 1871, Kent celebrated the receipt that day of several hundred pounds for a flash novel with a grand title.

There are certain funny springs from which the never-failing funny man on an American newspaper draws inspiration.

It is needless to say that the function of this animal in the opinion of the humorist is to kick—suddenly and effectually.

It is a foregone conclusion that this lady shall quarrel with her son-in-law or daughter-in-law, as the case may be.

It is a person to whom the humorist owes a debt of gratitude that can never be repaid.

It is another favorite subject. Of course the stove-pipe won't fit, and the man gets his head jabbed, and both he and his wife get mad.

As will be seen by our report of the city council meeting, the terms of the new railway route along William and other streets will now be the St. Lawrence market instead of the Union station.

The Credit Valley railway company announce that they will run trains to Chicago daily, connecting here with trains from the east. This will be the first time that trains will be started from this city on a Sunday.

The sessions corresponding to the old county court term was opened yesterday, but only one motion was heard—an order nisi being granted in the case Boyd v. Pearce, on the application of E. Douglas Armour, defendant's attorney.

An old lady came into No. 2 station last night and said she had lost her watch. She was passing down to her old night. She was passed down to her old night. She was passed down to her old night.

THE FIRST ARRIVAL.

He came in last night with the cold weather, in fact the two were closely connected. When he reached the corner of Queen and Yonge streets he said to the policeman:

"So the old stone fountain is gone. We all go and are forgotten. The policeman looked at him. "Seen any would give flying south?" he queried in an expectant way.

The policeman eyed him again. "They ought to give you this time. They always do. You look to the refrain they give forth as they go south. Besides this is the time when the farmer begins to have his pair of hunky shoes, and the red and black squirrels fill their holes with nuts of this year's growth."

The policeman was grieved to the sidewalk and stared at his man. "But the farmer is not friendly at this time of the year, and he keeps an inoperative leg and is given to economy of chat."

The policeman could not contain himself; he swallowed his helmet strap in trying to do so. "They were pretty hard on Goldwin Smith—the prof. is not a bad meaning fellow at all. I suppose your name is Boyd?"

"You're a tramp," said the officer, finding his tongue at last. "Beg pardon, I am a student of human nature, and I would like to see Goldwin's experiment tried. It is going to be a winter. The owls are all white-feathered and the chipmunks wear their winter coats with the fur outside."

"And did you hear the wind whistle last night? It always whistles at this time of the year." The unfortunate policeman was picked out of the gutter some ten minutes after by his sergeant. The gall of the traveller had upset his equilibrium.

BE WOULD. The "Star dramatic company" gave a grand concert last evening in Albert hall. That is, it would have been a grand concert if the audience had come, and if those who were there had stayed. As it was, however, it was not exactly a grand concert, but there being about forty persons in the hall, including dead heads. This was discouraging, but, however, the performance went on without any unnecessary or boisterous behaviour—in fact it was like one of the political meetings in Prince Edward island, where, to quote the Globe, "the people sat as quietly as if in a church."

HOW GIRLS ARE RUINED.

The Jennie Cramer's numerous class—American girls' love of flashy and extravagant dress—the Knotty Problem. From the New York Tribune.

We are not talking now of the class of women who have made vice a trade. As we understand the evidence, this girl Cramer did not belong to them. She had the reputation of being a "decent, respectable girl" among her neighbors, in spite of the fact that she went to variety shows and saloons with young men, remaining out nearly all night. The standard of manners is low in Jennie Cramer's class. There is

THE SECRET OF THE CRIME. and degradation of its women. The mother of such girls, hard worked at home, some poor display and bit of finery, are satisfied "that the young people should have their rights. When they send their children to the public school, observe the lawless flounces and dirty ribbons on their dirty clothes. This secret vice, but every wise woman knows that there is

NO SUBSTITUTION OF MORAL CORRUPTION than filth and finery. As the girls grow their own dresses, they are in factories, side by side with coarse, licentious men, or in retail shops at wages of from three to six dollars per week. How are they to get their own dresses? and the fine clothes which have been taught are the one desideratum in life? The same

VICE. Then come, as in this girl Cramer's case, the secret vice, the combination, the fine dress, the imitation pearls, and—the means to buy them. The ranks of prostitution are recruited from this source. The girl who comes from domestic servitude. Let any Christian reformer drop for an hour his pet scheme for elevating the world, while it is the conversation of the masses, the Polyanthes, and follow any day a group of

THESE GIRLS COME FROM THEIR WORK. If they are Americans they have not sensual faces. There is none of that hopeless predominance of the animal nature in mouth and eye which puts a wrong trade on a hard-earned woman of the lower orders in some European races. As a rule, their features are clear and fine, their physical character is NERVOUS, DELICATE AND REFINED. With proper training, these would be the England by their endurance and piety, and who are conquering the west, now in many of their most successful enterprises. The education is different. But note the vulgar insolence of the vulgar trade of the girl who comes from domestic servitude, and the vulgar efforts to attract the notice of men passing by; the vacuity, the incipient depravity, the hopelessness of their nature, the utter want of any sense than that of one of these women, meant by God to be a pure wife and mother.

FRANKLY JAUZILLY DOWNER WAY TORON. The temptation to ruin does not come to the native American girl through any of these means. Her intense desire to be noticed, her nervous craving for excitement. She is not born with any sense of the value of her own efforts to attract the notice of men passing by; the vacuity, the incipient depravity, the hopelessness of their nature, the utter want of any sense than that of one of these women, meant by God to be a pure wife and mother.

EDWARD McKEOWN, 182 Yonge-st., Third Door north of Queen. INSURANCE. NON-FORFEITABLE LIFE INSURANCE.

THE AETNA LIFE INS. CO. first introduced its Non-forfeitable policy in 1866. Previously known as the "non-forfeitable" policy, it has since been adopted by other companies, but it is the only one that has not been so.

IN A PREVIOUS ADVERTISEMENT we have shown how mistaken was the representation of "greater results," when compared with the Aetna's Non-forfeitable Endowment Bonds, and the following figures will afford proof that the other claim made—that it induces people to hold on to their policies—is equally groundless.
