BECOMING INTERESTING.

The political situation in St. John has become more interesting by the resignation of Dr. Alward and Dr. Stockton, and the indication that Dr. Berryman will resign his seat on his return home on Saturday evening. Dr. Alward's resignation was formally made yesterday, and Dr. Stockton's today. This will make necessary an election in St. John at an early date. It was the intention of the government to postpone the election to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Ritchie till January next, but there now being practically four vacancies in a representation of six seats, it is probable that the government will be forced to call an election at an early date. It is not to be expected that Dr. Alward and Dr. Stockton will be re-elected, but their resignations will be a severe blow to the government. Dr. Alward was a powerful member of the government, and his resignation will be a severe blow to the government. Dr. Stockton was a powerful member of the government, and his resignation will be a severe blow to the government.

We are informed that Messrs. Stockton, Alward, and Berryman will again contest the constituency in positive and staunch opposition to the government, and that they will be joined by Mr. Bourke, of St. Martin, whom the government failed to secure as a candidate in their interests. There is little doubt that the four opposition candidates in St. John will be elected, for a current against the government, hard to stem, had long ago set in in St. John, ready to do its work at the first opportunity. It is no secret that Messrs. Stockton, Alward and Berryman have been out of harmony with the government for the past two years because of many calls which concessions men could not endure. But sent by their constituents to support the government at a time when it was generally thought there was honest administration, they could not seem to expect themselves to the point of going into direct opposition until the voice of their constituents had again been heard. The position taken by the government, however, in regard to Mr. Peters, having precipitated their resignations, they will feel free to re-electing and follow the course which they would have followed at least last session had they felt themselves free to do so.

This will make an important change in the position of affairs in the Assembly, and if other resignations, a hint of which has reached us, take place the early days of next session may witness the defeat of the government, for a large following, long ago disaffected, are not content to continue their support once an organized and representative opposition presents itself.

THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.
It is sincerely to be hoped, for one reason at least, that Mr. Chapsell will not succeed to the vacant portfolio of minister of railways. Mr. Chapsell, it is well known, is anxious to dispose of the Intercolonial Railway to a syndicate, and if he enters the domain cabinet, may be able to carry out his wishes in the matter. While it would scarcely seem possible that Mr. Chapsell would do so during an act so well as the Intercolonial railway, past experience makes us feel that he would do anything that would suit his purposes. Hon. Peter Mitchell, however, in a recent speech in parliament last session, quoted by the Transcript, showed that the building of this road was one of the intentions which led the Maritime Provinces to enter the confederation, and extracted from Sir John, which however may mean nothing, a promise that it would not be sold. Mr. Mitchell said:

"The I. C. R. is part of the original compact under which the Maritime Provinces entered this Confederation. It was a contract formed part of the constitution of this country, that that road was to be built in order to make the Confederation of the British Provinces a fact, as it would not have been if the road had not been built. To me it was most dear, and would always have been so. Had he become a member of the earthy faith, I could never have forgotten what he was to me when my soul pined for sympathy. He was a man who was true to his word, and his own Cabinet had entered into negotiations for the purchase of that road. I took some steps to try to prevent that sale being carried out, and the project was dropped. I look—and I was very glad to see it—now, sir, that the road was built, and has been run in the interest of this country, as a national road, not as a commercial road; and any attempt to close up or hand over to any corporation or company of any kind that great international work for the purpose of commerce as against the national purpose of its construction, would be in my opinion a violation of the compact which drew the maritime provinces into this Dominion."

SHORT LINE.

The Northern & Western Railway have, with characteristic enterprise, determined to put on a fast express between Fredericton and Chatham. Merchants or others who wish to go to any of the northern towns will not need to pass through St. John, but can take the Intercolonial express at Chatham Junction and thus not only travel by a more direct route in which considerable time spent on the train, but also considerable expense, would be saved. It will now be in order for the St. John Board of Trade to hold a meeting to protest against such a decision on the part of the Northern & Western Railway company to "side-track" St. John, and if their protestations are not listened to, to take out an injunction upon the company for such unwarrantable and insupportable interference with the trade of, of course, the only community in this province.

One of the probabilities—A dissolution of the House of Assembly before next session.

While a freight engine was discharging lumber near Union, Ont., the men struck a rich vein of natural gas at a depth of 465 feet, which increased as they dug deeper. A horrible accident occurred last Tuesday. A German laborer, named Treger, was instantly killed in a saw mill by the gas breaking and causing his head off.

The Patients' board had of Rockwood insurrection is an astonishing organization. It played brilliantly following the fall. There was no "any man" given, and it was the equal of any band.

Worthless's Begging.

However one may admire Wordsworth, his epistles occasionally run up very much against one's sensibilities. He told Lamb one day in the course of conversation that he considered Shakespeare greatly overrated.

"There is," said he, "an immensity of truth in all Shakespeare wrote, and people are taken by it. Now, if I had a mind I could write exactly like Shakespeare."

"You uttered Lamb in reply: 'It is only the mind that is wanting!'" He once asked Mrs. Alaric Watts what she thought the finest English composition in the English language, and when she timidly suggested "Paradise Lost," he replied: "You are not far wrong. I may, I think, be affirmed that Milton's Paradise Lost is a masterpiece of English literature."

How very different was Lamb's expressed estimate of himself! Calling on Wordsworth one day, he said: "Mr. Wordsworth, allow me to introduce to you my only admirer."

It was also a great pity that Wordsworth was so very full of "shop" on all occasions. If he had been a little more negatively in pouring out his productions before his visitors it would have been better for his reputation.

Through his good nature, and although such a charming story teller, when he drew the pen, it was evening at a party his hostess was wearying him with requests to exhibit his powers in this direction that at last, he endured it longer, he quickly said: "Every one has heard of me as a distinguished literary officer. Let him who doubts my worth to find it in my own little story."

The Brakeman's Part.
When they carried a man out of the Union depot and put him in an ambulance recently, there was not much excitement or interest shown, as it was, through a tremendous rain. Why, railroads carry their lives in their hands—until their arms are ground off between freight cars, they do as well as they can without arms until they happen to be squeezed between the rails.

Take a ride or a walk through any of the railroad yards in Pittsburg, Allegheny, and note the number of mangled and crushed men who are employed. It is safe to say that they have all been freight brakemen at some time or other, and having become partly disabled in the service of the railway, have been given positions that they can fill as well as men perfectly equipped in the matter of arms and legs.

It is a standing joke that every other man with the least pretensions to mechanical knowledge has invented a new time or other, and having become partly disabled in the service of the railway, have been given positions that they can fill as well as men perfectly equipped in the matter of arms and legs.

A help for the kitchen maid.
We have made the discovery lately, which it seems now we ought to have made sooner, that the top of a kitchen stove is too little elevated above the floor, and that there is consequently a good deal of backache and other discomfort inflicted upon the cook, because so much of her work has to be done in a stooping posture.

The natural position of a cook, when she is standing in an erect position, is such that her arms are raised above her head, and she is obliged to stoop over her work, which is a very unhealthy position for her to maintain.

STEALING EXAMINATION PAPERS.

How Two Yankee Incompetents Went About It.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Pass a Successful Examination.

The Unfortunate Arrested and Awaiting Trial.

Boston, May 13. L. E. Clark, superintendent of the money order department in the Boston post office, and E. B. Palmer, a clerk in the same department, were arrested Saturday by Inspector T. J. Boynton of the United States secret service department, charged with unlawfully opening a package addressed to William J. Vickery, one of the board of civil service examiners now holding examinations in this city.

From information received from sources which cannot for prudential reasons be given, it is learned that the two men, after then entering a room used by the local civil service examiners for the purpose of opening the packages and examining the contents. At this critical moment a signal was given by Inspector Boynton, who stood ready at the door of the examination room.

He was followed by his two assistants, and the men were placed under arrest. The packages and the papers that had been abstracted were taken possession of. They were found to have been addressed, to consist of interrogatories to be put to applicants before the board of civil service examiners for inspection, positions, for which both Clark and Palmer were applicants, and expected to take their examination to-day.

Their arrest was a severe blow to them, but it has been following the board of place to place where the men have been confined, and the men have been taken possession of. They were found to have been addressed, to consist of interrogatories to be put to applicants before the board of civil service examiners for inspection, positions, for which both Clark and Palmer were applicants, and expected to take their examination to-day.

It is about 10x12 inches in size, quite bulky, inclosed in brown paper, and was sealed with wax, and tied with string. It is addressed to Mr. William J. Vickery, Esq., civil service examiner, Boston, Mass., care of Mr. Safford, secretary of the board of examiners. The work of opening it was very ingeniously executed, without breaking a seal or untying a cord. In the course of numerous attempts the edges of the cover and have been worn to such an extent as to be completely destroyed.

A heavy piece of paper over it. This paper was able to be torn away, but the contents were not taken out. It is the theory of the government that the accused persons had been tampered with by the board of examiners to-day, and by preparing answers in advance, to be able to pass a successful examination for inspectors. They were suspended from duty in the post office this morning.

Attorney General James A. Garfield, for the government, and H. Burr Cranston, for the defense, Mr. Hall was put on trial, but Mr. Cranston asked for a continuance on the ground that his clients were in communication with the civil service bureau at Washington, and it was expected to slow, by information that would come from the bureau, to be fully authorized to open the package. The grand jury for positions in the Boston postoffice, such as letter carriers, clerks, etc., and it was their duty to overlook those papers.
