REV. G. W. SLATER DEFENDS THE WEST INDIANS

(From the Edmonton Journal)

Editor, the Journal:

Sir:—In your issue of yesterday under the caption, "Varsity News," your reporter reports the address of a speaker to the French Club of the West Indies, which report does not convey a right impression of the natives of that region of the world.

I feel sure that the speaker having lived seven years there while telling the untowardness of the natives, must have also told of the excellencies of that people. From the report one would get the impression that all of the natives were degenerates without aspiration. Such an impression would be an erroneous one for this is a people who, a few generations ago, by most commendable valour, overthrew their masters, won their freedom, and secured the recognition of the same from both England and France. Also some of the brightest minds of the day in every interest of life are men of the West Indies. In their own native land there are many of them standing high in business, education, politics, and religion.

In the United States some of the leaders of the Negro people are West India people. Two of the bishops of our church, one of which is deceased, were West India prelates, besides many of our chief pastors, teachers, and business men, and they seem to excel in medicine.

The report states that the population is much mixed with African, Spanish and American, for which mixture they are deteriorating and losing vigor. This is not true to fact as many of the finest types of citizenship in that land are of mixed blood. While it must be admitted that there are deteriorations there, this is not peculiar only to the West Indies. It can be duplicated in any country in the world, even among the very highest of civilizations. It is not the fact of the mixture of blood that makes for deterioration, but bad environment and educational facilities.

The truth is that the men and women as well as nations that have contributed so largely to the world's great progress have not been products of unmixtures of blood, but

A. J. E. Butler Wins An International Championship

London, March 4th, 1924—At the National Partridge Wyandotte Club, which convened recently at Toronto, Mr. A. J. E. Butler, of this city won the champion male prize in competition with two hundred and fifty other birds. In the contest were eleven breeders from the United States and thirty breeders from all parts of Canada. Mr. Butler's success is especially gratifying to all Canadians as it marks the first time the prize has been won by any Canadian since the inception of the Club in 1903. He also won the bronze medal for the best colored male bird at the Exhibition. That Mr. Butler is held in the highest esteem by the members and officers of the association is shown from a letter which he received from Mr. J. F. Tallanger of Rochester, N.Y., who is general secretary of the club. Mr. Talangr, in his letter, asked Mr. Butler for articles for publication on his methods of mating, breeding, conditioning for poultry shows and so forth. Mr. Butler's strain of Partridge Wyandottes is among the best to be found upon the continent.

people through whose veins course the blood of more than one of the chief race varieties. The susceptibility of men and women of blood mixtures to the highest cultural development has been proven beyond a doubt.

Speaking of the West India people, Prof. Monroe N. Work, of the Research Department of Tuskegee Institute says that 70 per cent. of the population are Negroes, and that there is also a growing demand for educational and economic improvements."

Being aware of the power of the press for creating and maintaining public opinion which means so much to any struggling people, we are somewhat solicitous that any reference to the Negro be correct and fair and just. No white person, except he who has lived much among my people can realize the awfulness of the labyrinth of prejudice that we must work through to make just a bare living, to say nothing of in any way adequately enjoying life.

Seeks Right To Cast Vote

Seeks right to vote. —4

(By The Associated Negro Press)
Birmingham, Ala., March—Considerable interest has been created here by the filing of a suit by Mrs. Cora Trotter against County Registrar J. K. Bowen, who refused to permit her to register for voting. He claimed that she did not know enough about the Constitution of The United States after he had given her a piece of paper and told her to write down what she knew. Mrs. Trotter holds that she is a property owner, has paid her poll tax, a citizen of age, and therefore entitled to vote. She is being represented in court by Attorney J. E. Robinson. She is the first colored woman in Alabama to demand the right to vote.

HERO SAVES JUDGE THEN SLIPS AWAY

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Chicago, Ill., March—Municipal Judge Edgar A. Jones was saved from falling down an elevator shaft in the County Building by an unknown colored man who grabbed him by the coat as he was falling into the shaft. The rescuer slipped away without giving his name.

Judge Jones was descending in one of the elevators when the fuse blew out and the car was forced to stop between the sixth and seventh floors. To allow the Judge to alight the operator reached down and opened the sixth floor door. He then placed his stool on the sixth floor and Judge Jones climbed out. As he stepped on the stool, the top broke off and the stool fell into the shaft. Judge Jones crashed to the floor. The man who was standing by the door, grabbed Judge Jones and prevented him from falling into the shaft.

ELECTROCUTED BY DROP LIGHT

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Newberry, S.C., March—Will Gary and Wesley Adams, truck drivers for the Newberry Cotton Mill, were electrocuted in the company's garage on Thursday as they were about to take a truck out. Gary pulled a drop light down to see if the truck had oil enough and was instantly electrocuted. Adams met a similar fate when he went to the aid of Gary. Several white men who came into the place later were more or less seriously shocked in their efforts to help. It is believed that the wire of the drop light became overcharged and that the damp cement floor of the garage contributed to the tragedy. Both men were married and known as good workers.

The white clerks outnumber the colored clerks, and the colored carriers outnumber the white carriers, but in each instance the margin of numerical superiority is scant.

ON NEGRO LEADERSHIP

(By S. Brewster, Sydney, N.S.)

What about our Negro leaders? In this age of enlightenment, of graft, of selfishness, of that spirit which dominates the human mind: "I want to be up caring not who I knock down," it is interesting to watch the downfalls and the upward strides of the various leaders of the Negro race. It causes the Negro youth of intelligence to get busy assorting these leaders as though they were sifting the tares from the wheat.

The Pittsburgh American, in an article on why Race Leaders have so few followers says:—"The race of life requires pace makers as well as pace followers. We are pace-followers from habit and environment. Motion is possible without progress in any one direction. The general progress of the Negro in America in proportion to opportunities is a negligible quantity. This is due to poor leadership that fails to see and think clearly. It leads in a zig-zag way without shooting ahead at any particular goal. Present day Negro leadership is engaged in experimentation, which in actual practice is only completing another chapter of racial disappointment and hopelessness."

The American Negro is surfeited with individuals attempting to lead in the wrong direction. These leaders are trying to adjust the race to the white man's programme for the Negro. In such an adjustment they expect to find a soft spot for themselves. They want to escape the suffering and self-denial that accompany true leadership. Personal advancement is their paramount thought—their big urge. Racial advancement is a secondary consideration. Their method prevents the accomplishment of the thing these leaders are pretending to do. It explains why the masses of American Negroes will not follow present day leadership.

The Negro who for the sake of a political job—for the sake of getting a tidy sum from the other fellow (the thirty pieces of silver) or the Negro who is sitting with his arms folded depending on the philanthropy of the other fellow, become dangerous agitators among the race. They are wholesale agents in the trade of race-betrayal and should be watched with magnified glasses; every inch of support should be taken from under the heels of these cringing, prideless, Uncle Tom Negroes and let them fall and fall hard, and they should not be helped or moved until they have developed the spirit of race-pride—the spirit of my race first, then humanity.

What about our Negro leaders? In answer to this question I would suggest the course taken aboard a ship in assorting apples—dump the bad ones overboard and preserve the good ones. Assort our leaders and those who are bringing the race to destruction through graft, selfishness or lack of vision, dump them overboard and let them be devoured by the competitive whales of this twentieth century, then preserve the broad-minded of the race to carry on the work of race advancement.

Again! What about our Negro leaders? Those who seek eladership for self aggrandisement shall perish; those who seek leadership to give service to the race and humanity as a whole, help them, lift them up, push them forward, encourage them, and at the end of their career we shall shout with thundering voices "Well done thou good and faithful servants enter into the joy of thy Lord."

WISDOM GUIDES

(By S. E. G. Allen)

Myriads of suns and planets lie
Beyond the sphere of this round ball.
Myriads and myriads stud the sky
Unerring wisdom guides them all.

For space is endless, endless these,
That only wisdom's power has wrought,
Wisdom supreme, unbounded sees,
No human mind can grasp the thought.

Millions of years and millions more,
Will soon be ours, for what is man,
But he whom wisdom made to soar
Amid this throng their beauty scan.

Wisdom and love that nought can bar
Stupendous is the thought that we,
With millions more, His loved ones are,
And this Power cares for you and me.
