London Shareholders In Home Bank May Lose $29,400 by Failure

DEATH LIST NOW TEN IN WAWA HOTEL FIRE

Identify Bodies of Seven Persons—Others Still in the Ruins.

CLAIM DOORS LOCKED

Fire Marshal Investigates Mysterious Blaze Which Destroys Muskoka Summer Resort.

Canadian Press Despatch. Huntsville, Aug. 20.—This afternoon, it is thought that the list of dead in the fire which in less than half an hour reduced the Wawa Hotel at the Lake of Bays summer resort to ashes on Sunday morning will amount to ten.

The bodies of seven persons have been identified, and it is thought there are others in the ruins. With the hotel register and all the books with the records of the hotel help destroyed, it is impossible to definitely establish the number of casualties. Some of the servants came from outlying settlements and farm houses, and their homes have not yet been checked up to see whether they escaped from the flames.

One authority this morning gives as "missing, and presumed dead," Mrs. Emily McNally, wife of James McNally of Chicago. Most of the United States guests left on the special train for Toronto, but Mrs. McNally's name is not given as among those who arrived safely in that city. It is also stated that Miss Elizabeth Kroger, of Cleveland, who was earlier mentioned as missing, is now known to be dead, also Miss Annie Carroll, a Toronto girl.

Blames Cigarette.

In an interview, J. D. Warde, secretary-treasurer of the Canada Railway News Company, owners of the hotel, gave it as his opinion that the fire was caused by somebody throwing a lighted cigar or cigarette down the elevator shaft. Mr. Warde occupied a cottage near the hotel, and this morning, on the site of the once beautiful hotel, there is a heap of ruins. On the rusted spring of one battered elevator, the charred remains of a cigarette were found. The bed dropped through the two burning floors below, carrying the body with it. Near this grim evidence he found more charred masses of bones, the remains of other help who lost their lives in the tower.

Dr. McDonald formally opened the inquest today and adjourned it until Wednesday.

mystery. Some of the survivors arriving here last night attribute it to a carelessly thrown cigarette, but other persons say it was friction in the elevator shaft, where it apparently started.

A vivid account of the outbreak of the fire is furnished by Bryan Doherty, son of Hon. Manning Doherty of Chatham. Young Doherty, with his brother and his chums, were sitting in the rotunda of the hotel, where a bridge game was in progress, when they learned of the fire. He had probably been burning five minutes, said Bryan Doherty, when they became aware of it.

The elevator shaft runs up through the rotunda, it acted as a chimney through which flames spread to all parts of the building. There was a fire beam chandelier with 30 points of pressure, supposedly. We found it would not work and seized fire extinguishers about the building. We worked there rather in the nature of a long as we could, and then left with the other people, who were driven out in their night garments. The big hose which the building was working all night.

PESSIMISTIC OVER FRANCE'S REPLY ON REPARATIONS

British Foreign Office Discouraged Due to Forecasts On Document.

HAVE LITTLE HOPE

Associated Press Despatch. London, Aug. 20.—Downing street was in an expectant but pessimistic mood today while awaiting France's latest note on the reparation question due shortly. The inflexible tone of Premier Poincare's speech yesterday, together with prospects that the forthcoming note would show no alteration in his attitude, struck a chord of discouragement among those identified with the foreign office. The officials there feel that if the document is as contentious and uncompromising as the press forecasts say there is little hope of bringing the interminable reparation problem any nearer a solution, and a further exchange of ponderous and discouraging notes is foreseen.

One official expressed the hope that the French premier's note would at least indicate France's willingness to reduce the occupation of the Ruhr to "invisible" reparations in return for abandonment of passive resistance by Germany, and also that the document might pave the way for a meeting between Premier Poincare and Premier Baldwin when the latter passes through Paris on his way to his vacation stay at Aix Les Bains. It was admitted, however, that these hopes were rather in the nature of the wish being father to the thought, and most British officials make no attempt to conceal the fact that they expect a French note which will be likely to take.

The expectation was that the French note would be handed to the British embassy in Paris today and be despatched to London by courier arriving tomorrow. If the forecasts prove accurate the document seems likely to be as lengthy as the note sent by Lord Curzon.

Home Bank Shareholders In London May Lose $29,400

Double Liability On 147 Shares Owned Here Will Reach That Sum.

BISHOP LOSES MOST

Rt. Rev. Dr. Fallon the Largest Local Shareholder, Owning 51 Shares.

While Home Bank depositors are confident their deposits will be redeemed dollar for dollar, London shareholders stand waiting and ready to lose not only their stock, but also the double liability to which they are susceptible under the provisions of the bank act.

This clause provides that stockholders are liable to forfeit double the amount of their investments. Thus, if a man holds one $100 share he will lose that plus an additional $100, a provision made for the purpose of giving depositors and other creditors the utmost protection.

Fifteen Londoners hold stock in the defunct institution. Their losses total $14,700, and if, as they anticipate, they must assume a double liability, they will be out exactly $29,400. This is the largest loss suffered by any one group of individuals in Western Ontario.

Right Rev. Bishop Michael F. Fallon is the largest shareholder in the city, having purchased 51 shares. His loss is likely to be $10,200. W. A. Stevenson and M. H. Moorhouse hold 34 and 22 shares respectively. Other Londoners are involved with smaller holdings, varying from one to ten shares.

Port Stanley Losses.

The biggest loss in these parts will be experienced by the banking community of Port Stanley. William Jackson, having 38, Miss A. H. Jackson 10, and Miss E. K. Jackson 10 shares each.

A number of citizens had no knowledge of the double liability provision when they purchased stock, and when informed they were likely to lose twice the par value of their holdings were highly indignant. In at least two instances the extra liability condition under which shares were supposed to have been purchased will work great hardship. Mrs. Francis Seel, 796 William street, owner of ten shares, will be compelled to forfeit virtually her entire savings if the double liability clause is enforced.

The Jackson family of Port Stanley, according to Miss Martha Lloyd, sister-in-law to William Jackson, who holds 38 shares, will simply be unable to assume the unexpected burden.

"It's a terrible situation," she said. "What if we cannot pay?"

RADIO CONCERTS INSTEAD OF BAND IN VICTORIA PARK

Suggestions of Victor Blackwell To Give Londoners a Chance To Hear Best Music.

MAYOR IN FAVOR

The want of a band stand in Victoria Park has long been felt by many Londoners and but for lack of funds the park commission would have built one at the beginning of the summer. Victor Blackwell, of Watt & Blackwell, architects, at the beginning of the year offered to supply drawings for a band stand free of charge to the city, and is still willing to do this, but believes that it would be better and cheaper to install a first-class radio set in the park.

"If we had a really good radio outfit in the park we would have the benefit of the best bands and orchestras in the American continent, and at a very much lower cost than with the band stand idea," Mr. Blackwell told The Advertiser. "While a proper band stand would cost in the neighborhood of $10,000, the radio installation could be erected for $1,000 at the outside, and that sum would give the city a wide range of musical centers and the power of listening to the very best music that is being played in the country."

The mayor is enthusiastic over the scheme, but thinks that the $1,000 should come from the works board as part of the expenses of the parks. He thinks the idea of radio concerts in Victoria Park a very fine one, and he said today, "The only question is to where the money is to come from. One thousand dollars seems to be a very reasonable price for the service that we would obtain, and I am sure Londoners would appreciate the benefits of the music and other forms of interest that they would get from the instrument."

MOTORISTS FAIL TO HELP VICTIMS INJURED IN CRASH

Miss Christina Wilson Declares Several Ignored Call For Aid.

GIRL IN HOSPITAL

Miss Christina Wilson, 421 Hill street, who was with Miss Teresa Dalton when she was seriously injured in a car accident near Union village Saturday night, declared to The Advertiser this morning that the motorists who were passing their escape from death was little short of miraculous.

"As we approached Union village, we could see the car which struck us and which was occupied by four young London men, bearing down on us at a great speed, and it was swaying from one side of the road to the other. Mr. Wilkinson of St. Thomas, who was driving us, apparently realizing that we would be struck, steered his car as close to the ditch as possible and told us to remain seated. Miss Dalton, however, evidently became excited and attempted to jump just as the car struck. The force of the impact threw her heavily to the ground."

Men Drive Away.

Although badly shocked and in a nervous state, both Mr. Wilkinson and Miss Dalton, who was lying unconscious, did not realize that she had been injured until she was covered a flow of blood from her forehead. Mr. Wilson was badly bruised. All three were left to the mercy of passersby.

The occupants of the other car made their getaway in the darkness, and did nothing to aid the victims.

So enraged was he in looking after the injured girl, Wilkinson forgot to take the number of the London car, and Miss Dalton's condition is so serious, she is suffering from numerous cuts and bruises about the head and body, as well as a dislocated hip. Doctors Tillman and W. J. Stevenson are attending to her. Late reports, however, state that her condition is somewhat improved.

Suffers Injuries.

Miss Wilson is confined to her home with a deep cut in her forehead, which is bleeding, and a bruise on her face and neck, and she is suffering from shock.

The unfortunate girls had gone to Port Stanley on the train, and were accompanied by Miss Dalton's sister, Miss Teresa Dalton, who is suffering from a dislocated hip, and Miss Dalton's sister, Miss Teresa Dalton, who is suffering from a dislocated hip, and Miss Dalton's sister, Miss Teresa Dalton, who is suffering from a dislocated hip.

LOVE NOTES BRING SIXTY DAYS' JAIL FOR HOME-BREAKER

Charles Webster, Found With Another Man's Wife, Is Sentenced to Prison.

BABE SAVES WOMAN

Sixty days in jail was the sentence imposed on Charles Webster in police court this morning when he was found guilty of indulging in immorality in the presence of a child under 16 years of age to the detriment of the child's morals.

Flossie Reynolds, mother of the 7-month-old infant in question, was allowed to go on suspended sentence on a similar charge, laid under the criminal code.

Evidence for the crown, given by a boarding-house keeper, showed that Webster had gone to her and engaged a room for his sister, asking her to hold it till Monday last, when he took Mrs. Reynolds there. Webster and the woman stayed there until Friday night, when they were arrested by the police on the complaint of Children's Aid Inspector Kelly. There was only one bed in the room.

Her Husband's Story.

Elmer Reynolds, the next witness, stated that he had married Flossie Reynolds at Bay City, Michigan, on July 2, 1917. They had lived together until last Monday, when the woman told him she was going away with Webster. He gave her a chance to think it over, but she had decided. He then took their two boys over to his mother's house. He next saw his wife and Webster on Wednesday, walking along the street, but they jumped into a taxi and got away. He had complained to the police about them.

Sergeant Midgland testified that on Thursday night or early Friday morning he had been walking past the house when the light in one room was turned on. He saw Mrs. Reynolds and Webster in bed. Both were in night attire.

Dropped Love Notes.

Mrs. Jean Gunn, a neighbor, stated that Webster and the woman had carried on a clandestine correspondence for some time, he dropping notes in front of the house, passing in the hands of the children. She had been at Reynolds' home for two hours on the day the woman left with him.

No defense was offered by the accused, although they pleaded not guilty. A. M. Judd basing his defense on the wording of the section under which the information had been laid.

"I have no hesitation in finding you guilty," declared Deputy Magistrate Gladman or Webster, a man who will deliberately interfere between husband and wife deserves no consideration. I do not feel that justice would be served by imposing a fine. It would not be adequate punishment. I therefore sentence you to 60 days in jail."

"As to you," he continued, turning to the woman, "I must also find you guilty. But in your case I will suspend sentence, owing to the fact that I am loath to send a woman with a small baby to jail. By sending him I have separated you. Perhaps some good will come of it now."

FAIR WEEK MARDI GRAS PLAN FINDS SUPPORT

Mayor's Suggestion Warmly Indorsed by Western Fair Directors.

The suggestion which the mayor put before J. H. Saunders, president of the Western Fair Association, that there should be a Mardi Gras celebration on the night of Friday in fair week, was received with pleasure by Mr. Saunders. The mayor said today that all the officials of the Western Fair Association with whom he had spoken of the idea had met the suggestion very gladly, and were of the opinion that it would not detract from the fair but rather help it.

"A Mardi Gras celebration during fair week would be the very thing I would, I am sure, bring extra people into the city, and would not in any way detract from the attraction of the fair itself," declared the mayor. "Dancing on the streets is always an unusual feature of any gathering in the city, and can be conducted here without any rowdiness or disorderly."

LOOK FOR LIVELY COUNCIL SESSION OVER MINOR ITEMS

Personalities Likely To Enter Into This Evening's Meeting of City Fathers.

THE ISON REWARD

Though only routine business is before the council at tonight's meeting it is possible that personalities may enter into their deliberations, owing to a number of little things over which there is a difference of opinion between the mayor and some of the aldermen. No. 1 committee, in particular, seems to have it in for his worship, judging by their last meeting a few days ago, when they removed the mayor from a committee on which he was to serve, and substituted Alderman Greer.

This was in connection with the question of the payment of the Ison reward. Certain members of the committee felt they had been slighted by the action of the mayor in settling the question with the police commission and making a public statement to the effect that the money would be paid to Sergeant O'Connor, without reporting to them.

Will Report Tonight.
The mayor, who stated that the action of the committee was unreasonable and that it was a case of "when the cat's away the mice will play," claims that his statement at the time of the interview with the police commission was in order, and that no further action was necessary. Alderman Judd and Greer, however, carried out the work of the original committee, and will bring in their report to the council tonight, just as if the mayor had not already completed the arrangement.

As regards the presentation of colors to the 18th Battalion, which the mayor sponsored some days ago, his worship said today that this was a proper time to place before the finance committee, for whose decision all questions involving the spending of money are referred.

The Salary Question.
On still another count, the same committee are on the warpath for the mayor, and that is on the supreme question of the hour in the city hall, the salary question. It was agreed at the last council meeting that the whole question should be shelved until the Citizens' Research Institute, who are making a survey of the city hall and of other civic departments, would bring in its report.

Since that time, Alderman Judd and Greer, whom the mayor designates as "those two obstructionists," have been busy in their efforts to have absolutely nothing to say on the question, and in view of this, will ask the mayor tonight for a statement as to the increase of city hall salaries, and if he is not able to supply them with what they term a satisfactory one, they promise to call a special meeting of the council to deal with the question alone.

Both Alderman Greer and Judd claim that Mayor Wenigke is purposely delaying the question so that he may use it later as election propaganda, a declaration which the mayor indignantly denies. These are the outstanding points over which there is some little friction. There is also the fact that the finance committee feel aggrieved over what they call the slowness of the mayor in attending to a suggestion of theirs that a comparative statement be obtained from the city treasurer as to the committee of the council, which the mayor promised to get for them and which at the last meeting the finance committee decided to go after them.

Tonight's report.

Special to The Advertiser.
Woodstock, Aug. 19.—A former resident of North Oxford Township, Mrs. Thomas Henderson, one of Canada's women pioneers, with a life marked by adventures and hardships, has passed away in Edmonton in her 83rd year. Mrs. Henderson was born in Scarborough County, and came to Oxford with her parents when a young girl. After her marriage she went West. They traveled by the Union Pacific Railway to Vancouver, when that city was a small village. Later on they made their way to Edmonton on hearing of gold discoveries, traveling by steamer, wagon and pack horses.

OIL FIRE AT SAN PEDRO ENDANGERS DISTRICT

Special to The Advertiser.
Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 18.—A boiling lake of burning oil bubbled and seethed within 300 feet of Fort McArthur's magazines at San Pedro during the night.
Trenches were dug between the oil and the magazine to divert the fiery flood. Two hundred men toiled with picks and shovels in the intense heat. Meanwhile, residents of houses near the burning oil abandoned their homes and fled, carrying furniture and baggage.
The fire started when an explosion occurred in a 150,000-barrel tank of the General Petroleum Company early Friday. It burned all day and at night because a menace to all the surrounding countryside when the tank began leaking. Dykes were thrown up to hold back the oil, but in a few hours the liquid flames were lapping almost at the brink of the earthworks.

CHURCHES OF SPARTA AND DEXTER HOLD PICNIC

Special to The Advertiser.
Sparta, Aug. 19.—Sparta and Dexter Methodist Churches held a union picnic Wednesday at Port Stanley, which was attended by about 200 people. The day was ideal. After luncheon, served by the ladies, various sports were put on by the sports committee. A series of races were staged for the younger members of the churches and were concluded by a walking race, in which the pastor won second place.
A softball game between the young ladies of Sparta and Dexter elicited much interest, resulting in a score of 21 to 13 in favor of Sparta. A softball game followed by a hardball game was put on between the two congregations, resulting in favor of Sparta in each instance. On behalf of Dexter it is fair to say that they have done no practicing this season. After the games supper was served. All returned home feeling that they had enjoyed a delightful outing and that much had been done to develop the good-will between the congregations.

Canada and Australia.

Canadian observers now in England have expressed the fear that the good relations at present existing between Canada and Australia are in danger of rupture in consequence of the growing competition between these integral parts of the British Empire in the race for more population. Despite the rapid advances made by Canada in the affections and attention of the people of Great Britain, Australia still holds the premier place. The antipodean continent was a center for English emigration long before Canada existed as a confederation, and the states now making up the Australian Commonwealth were more popular with the Englishman than the isolated Canadian provinces. Australia in those days was regarded as a land of gold rather than milk and honey. England had many object lessons of the success to be won in the mine or on the sheep range, while this country was chiefly noted as a land of Indians, snow, ice, wolves and long winters.

Of recent years this condition has changed, but still Canada is not nearly so well known to the bulk of the people of Great Britain and Ireland as her place in the empire warrants. The real conditions in this country should be told of so that every man, woman and child in Britain should know that districts exist where the winter and climate is comparable to that of the south of France, as well as others where the pure invigorating air of the Swiss Alps has a worthy competitor; that wolves do not range the country and eat their meals off the farmers' backdoor step, that one can travel for days from one end of Canada to the other and the only Indian he is likely to encounter will be found in front of a cigar store—and that species by now is almost as extinct as the dodo.

Canada requires population, strong, sturdy men and women of the British breed, but there is no need for any difficulty with Australia over the matter. The British Isles can supply the population needs of both countries with no necessity of either falling short. Britain's problem now is to find room for her people; that of Canada and Australia is to find people for the land. There is no reason why the two dominions and the Motherland should not work in complete harmony to satisfy the needs of all. Canada and Australia are not rivals in this respect, save as competing steamship lines may seek to secure passenger traffic for their respective vessels—and that is the sort of business rivalry to be encouraged rather than frowned upon, so long as the inducements held out to intending emigrants are such as can be borne out by the country of their choice. It is quite within the mark to say that Canada can provide an assured future for the average settler who comes here from the British Isles, but it is equally true that fortunes do not grow on trees here nor is gold to be found in the streets. To obtain one's share of either requires the same sort of hard, faithful and intelligent effort that is necessary in the land from which they come.

Concerning Disarmament.

Already in the chancelleries of the 52 nation members of the League of Nations thoughts are focussed on the approaching league meeting in Geneva, when the question of disarmament will be again discussed and the representative diplomats in conference assembled will endeavour to solve the troublesome problem of reducing national armaments without making any one nation weaker than others in its class and yet holding all to an equal place in the race for the balance of power.

This is indeed a problem which will require all the collective wisdom of the wise men to solve if the conference is not to be a failure, and the clause permitting nations to make defensive alliances does not tend to help, for when was an alliance of any sort regarded as other than defensive by its sponsors or offensive by its opponents. On this there is certain to be division of opinion. It matters little whether the pacts entered into are called defensive or otherwise—they allow ample scope for armament building and preparation for another conflict. One group of nations will naturally consider the plans of a rival group to be offensive and acquire sufficient armament to be just a little ahead—and so it travels all around the circle.

Just now this phase of the question is of especial interest in view of the situation between Great Britain, France and Germany. French military authorities have stated openly that they do not intend to bring their military estimates to the League of Nations for control as it is essential that success of their operations depends upon their proposals remaining known only to themselves. No doubt some other nations will sympathize with this view and will act accordingly. In this connection it is worthy of note that since the Washington conference on disarmament was held and agreements reached there for the destruction of battleships, most of the nations concerned have kept strictly to the letter of their promises. They have scrapped their battleships—and built aeroplanes and submarines instead.

A Modern Don Quixote.

With the resignation of Clarence Saunders from the presidency of the Piggly Wiggly Stores Company, Inc., one of the most interesting chapters of Wall street history comes to a close. Persons acquainted with financial matters will remember the sensational episode of some months past when Piggly Wiggly stock soared to heights undreamed of. In view of the publicity given that incident, Mr. Saunders' parting statement, in which he recites reasons for his recent dramatic attempt to corner the market on Piggly Wiggly and so drive the shorts to cover, holds especial interest.

"I thought of the working people who had invested their dollars, and I wanted to whip Wall street to keep those dollars safe," Saunders is reported to have said. Here he reveals himself as a modern Don Quixote, leveling his lance at the wicked financial windmill and rushing on to the unequal combat. But, like the Knight of the Rueful Countenance, he too finds the powers of darkness stronger than those of right, and he now lies in the dust, defeated though defiant.

The conception of the stock market as a malignant personality is deep-rooted in the minds of millions of otherwise intelligent persons, especially in the west. They regard it as an infernal organization, in which financial sharks are banded together for the purpose of removing dollars from the pockets of honest citizens, an organization which it is a duty to denounce and a virtue to combat.

They lose sight of the fact that there must be some places for the purchase and sale of cows and farm tractors and butter and eggs. The stock market finds its antecedents in the first exchange of goods far back in early days of human existence, when one savage parted with his fur covering for a stone weapon, or traded a polished shell for a bit of food. It is a useful and necessary accessory of civilization, whose transactions are in no way mysterious.

That a certain proportion of the purchases and sales are made for speculative rather than investment purposes is unquestionably true. Many persons, persons of all classes, rich and poor, merchants, professional men, workers, buy with the hope that they may later sell at a profit. But the same thing is true of the farmer, who goes to the country fair to swap horses, or the man who puts his dollars in a bit of real estate.

It is absurd, then, to talk of fighting Wall Street. At the time Mr. Saunders made his dramatic coup Piggly Wiggly may or may not have been selling below its true value. Stock market values, particularly, are subject to ever-varying and often remote influences, and no man can logically impute pernicious and insidious motives of so-called "sharks" for every downward movement, which on the surface appears inexplicable.

The Hills of Tomorrow.

When Columbus set sail across the wide Atlantic it was because of the insistent vision of another shore, so firmly planted in his mind that he was willing to risk perils almost insurmountable in an effort to prove the reality of his dream. What but the vision of the future kept James Watt working at his steam engine in spite of all harsh criticism so that in time he gave the world steam power and turned over another page of human progress?

"I think, therefore I am," a hackneyed phrase and a careless bon mot in the mouth of numbers of people today; yet the truth of the thought expressed is obvious. Nothing has ever been accomplished in this world that has not first been seen by someone in the glorious independence of an unrestrained but carefully directed imagination.

It is natural that we should pay more attention to the visible achievements of great men than to the thought processes which were the inception of the things we see. We touch all the wonderful machines that Edison and Steinmetz and Maxim and Marconi have given us; how often do we think of what is even more wonderful than the finished article, the divine insight that presented to these men the vision of what might some day be done with the knowledge at their disposal?

It is indeed a greater gift that enables men and women to see the invisible and non-existent than that which is able later to give their dream children birth.

We do indeed live in a world of solid fact. Life deals with the most practical things, and the dreamer who is nothing more soon passes into the discard. But if there were no thinkers with the power of making their dreams come true where would be all the substantial signs of our progress that we benefit by today?

An actual fact in the case of a dream being the forerunner of its physical form is seen in the origin of the needles used in the modern sewing machine. The machine itself had been completed by Hunt, and the only difficulty was the fact that the needle, made as needles usually were, had the hole at the head and thus prevented successful operation. One night after long months of thinking of his puzzle sleep brought the solution.

In a dream he saw a mob of savages with spears in their hands, and in the head of each spear was a hole. The suggestion was enough, and Hunt saw the way to make the machine practicable. This is the case of an actual sleep dream, but day dreams are most prolific in pointing the way of progress, when the mind has not yielded full direction to Morpheus, and when the latent thought of its owner still influences its pictures.

Lord Fisher, who more than any other British naval officer prepared the fleet for the supreme test of the war, saw the coming attack by Germany, and even prophesied that 1914 would see it become an actuality. In 1905, when the Kiel Canal was just about to be opened, Fisher produced the first of the Dreadnought-ships, which, by being so far in advance of the German ships in size and gunpower, rendered the fleet of Tirpitz powerless. Fisher worked out the time that it would take to widen the Kiel Canal so that larger ships built to rival the Dreadnought could pass through. He found that it would take nine years, and accordingly foretold the war as taking place in 1914. A letter of the famous first lord is in existence in England to this effect.

The steady gaze on the hills of tomorrow will show the easiest trail to the summit, and to translate today in terms of tomorrow is to use imagination to its fullest extent. In most of the affairs of life it is either the possession or the lack of imagination which makes for mastery or mediocrity.

One question the League of Nations may have to decide is the home town of Dr. Fred G. Banting, insulin genius. Toronto papers who speak of him complacently as "the Toronto man" overlook the fact that Dr. Banting was practicing here in London when he conceived the idea which has made him famous. Did someone whisper "hogtown" again?

The announcement from Building Inspector Piper that 1923 is likely to be the biggest building year in London's history is another snicker at Montreal's "Whisper of Death." A city of 60,000 population which puts up well over two and a half millions in new buildings each year doesn't provide much encouragement for the apostles of blue ruin.

THE WISH FOR HAPPINESS.

If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.—St. John xiii., 17. Let me talk of happiness for six days—only one minute a day. The wish for happiness is natural; all men share it.

It is the law of life itself that every being strives toward the perfection of its kind. Every drop of sap in the tree flows toward foliage and fruit. Every drop of blood in the bird beats toward flight and song.

In a conscious being this movement toward perfection must take a conscious form. This conscious form is happiness, the rhythm of the inward life, the melody of a heart that has found its keynote.

To say that all men long for this is simply to confess that all men are human, and that their thoughts and feelings are an essential part of their life.

Virtue means a completed manhood. The joyful welfare of the soul belongs to the fullness of that ideal. Holiness is wholeness. In striving to realize the true aim of our being, we find the wish for happiness implanted in the very heart of our effort.

Christ alone can teach us how to attain it. (Copyright, 1923, by The Republic Syndicate.)

Your Home and You

A BOOK VACATION.

"How would you like to take a trip up to the Thousand Islands this summer?" asked the man of the house casually.

His young wife dropped her sewing and gazed at him wide-eyed. For a moment she looked as if a thousand paradises had opened before her.

"Why, George Frederick Miller, what on earth do you mean? You said you couldn't go anywhere this summer, on account of the senior partner's illness—anywhere out of town, that is."

"Well, I can't, Betsy, but I've found something to hinder our taking a printed trip up there. I've brought home a magazine with an article so vividly written and so beautifully illustrated that you'll think you've gone with me. I'll read it aloud to you some book trips, too—out through California and down through Mexico (though that's pretty hot for August), and perhaps motor through Normandy."

"You see, I must stay here so that I can be in daily touch with the office, and go down if anything big comes up. But I'm going to stay home with you for three weeks; and while you make those new sport shirts for me, I'll read aloud to you. Instead of reading light summer novels, let's get some really interesting books of travel, and try to imagine ourselves living all the things the writer tells of. We'll read cool, nautical things—tales of fishing smacks off the Newfoundland coast, descriptions of the Canadian Northwest. We can go anywhere, do anything, if only we determine to forget ourselves and our surroundings before we start."

And so these two voyagers sat in their quiet trellised garden and drove away in an imaginary motor to an imaginary train or boat. They tramped through cool forests, and went surf bathing in turquoise seas; they stood silent on great mountain tops, and gazed into unfathomable canyons. They met amusing natives and chatted with them, and slept in log cabins or whitewashed huts. These book journeys were varied with tranquil saunters in their own neighborhood. The spirit of vacation-time was theirs.

Milking Time

Your Health: What You Should Know About Your Blood System

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

Everybody is afraid of blood. Its very sight turns the stomach and produces faintness. Instinctively we all realize that the blood is life. If enough of what we see flowing away is lost, we know that death is certain. Naturally, therefore, serious bleeding is a terrifying thing.

A few weeks ago a schoolboy was working in the chemical laboratory. An unfortunate explosion tore a metal dish to pieces. One of these bits, only about an eighth of an inch square, was shot into the groin of the poor lad. By chance it penetrated the wall of a large blood-vessel and hardly showing a sign on the surface, the boy bled to death, the blood escaping into the tissues of the body.

To understand something about the blood, the blood-vessels, let us consider a man-made model:

In the great west yard of rain has been compensated for by the heart which is the reservoir and the construction of elaborate irrigation systems. The ditches are broad and deep on the boundaries of the land. By a smaller ditch the water is taken to the individual field and from this it is carried in still smaller ditches, and then into furrows from which it oozes over every area of the land surface.

There is nothing original about land irrigation. It is modeled after the complete and efficient system by which the blood-vessels supply every part of the human body. From the heart which is the reservoir and pumping station the blood is sent through a great big blood-vessel, into large arteries. These, in turn, give off smaller and still smaller branches. This division and redistribution continues until the tips of the body are reached. The tips of the fingers and toes and the crown of the head are well irrigated. The blood supply differs from the artificial irrigation systems in that the fluid returns after its complete circuit of the body. By a reverse construction the blood comes back through tiny veins which open into larger ones and these empty into still larger ones. Eventually all the venous blood reaches the main trunk and pours into the heart.

Each artery has at least one corresponding vein which runs beside it. In general, the arteries and veins parallel each other. As we would expect, Nature has chosen wisely in locating the blood-vessels. Some of them run along the inner sides of the arms and legs. Some-body has described the location of the chief artery of the arm by saying it corresponds to the inner seam of the coat-sleeve. You see, this location is less likely to be the seat of an injury, because it is protected by the body and the bones and muscles of the arm.

In spite of Nature's efforts, however, the blood-vessels do get cut and serious bleeding is not uncommon.

Usually you can tell whether the blood comes from an artery or a vein. If it is bright red and comes in spurts, corresponding to the pulsations of the heart, it is an artery which has been broken.

Blood from a vein is likely to flow slowly and steadily and to be dark in color. At another time I will tell what to do in case of severe bleeding. Pressure and the application of cold will usually control it. The location of the pressure is determined by the injury, whether it is of an artery or a vein. QUESTIONS REASONS FOR ONTARIO CHARTER

London Depositor in Home Bank Discusses Holding Company's Incorporation.

A London depositor in the Home Bank wants to know why a holding company incorporated by the province was used to take over the real estate of the bank instead of a company incorporated by the federal government. This investor says: "Though a depositor in the Home Bank I was never much in accord with the formation of the Canadian Properties, Limited, of Toronto, which was formed some time ago, and which, after taking over all the real estate of the bank floated a $1,300,000 6-1-2 per cent loan in the States, establishing a first charge on the property of the bank."

"Now, the Canadian banking act, as I understand it, prevents a bank from owning property other than the actual buildings in which it transacts its business. At my own expense I asked the advice of a legal firm in Ottawa as to whether the holding company was incorporated in Ottawa or in Toronto, and was greatly surprised to find that it had only a provincial incorporation.

"My own conviction," continued the depositor in question, "is that there was very little chance of federal sanction being given to the formation of any such company, and that the directors of the Home Bank in order to form their holding company deliberately avoided the Ottawa incorporation and in some way obtained the provincial authority."

He pointed out that in the case of the federal incorporation the proposal must pass through the house. While in the case of the provincial authority only the secretary need be consulted. "In the present situation," the American bondholders of the Canadian Properties, and though the directors will probably say that it was necessary to obtain the extra money supplied by the sale of the bonds of the company, still the whole transaction seems to me to be well worth a strict investigation."

THINK COSGRAVE'S ELECTION CERTAIN IN IRELAND

SAYS FREE STATE STARE OF VICTORY IN IRISH ELECTION

Londoner Describes Impressions Gained During Tour of Ireland and Scotland.

MUCH IDLENESS

Despite an appalling amount of poverty and unemployment the Irish Free State government expects to be returned with a handsome majority on the day of the elections in Ireland, August 27.

Francis McAteer, 324 King street, who just returned from a three months' visit to the land of the shamrock, believes the Free State has vindicated itself in the eyes of the Irish people. In the course of his visit, during which he toured every county of both Ireland and Scotland, Mr. McAteer had long conversations with Eamonn de Valera and "Tim" Healy, governor-general of Ireland. Everywhere Mr. McAteer found destitution and unemployment. Scotland is suffering from the burden of industrial depression and war debts as keenly as Ireland. The unemployment of both countries represents the most serious problem with which their respective governments have to deal. Thousands, anticipating relief, are preparing to emigrate for Canada, which they view as a land of promise and a country in which high ambitions may be realized.

In Piteable State.

Mr. McAteer stated: "Hundreds of thousands are out of work with no prospect of getting jobs anywhere. What republican agitation there is can be accounted for by the dissatisfaction resulting from unemployment. Nevertheless, the Irish Free State will undoubtedly be returned in the forthcoming election. The people understand that a repudiation of the government will only add to the general turmoil."

Mr. McAteer was favorably impressed with De Valera, the self-styled "president" of the "Irish Republic." He is a well-known, fanatical, irreconcilable type, but his eloquence and acknowledged brains have endeared him to a large minority of the people.

"He is very tall, a very thin man with the face of an aesthete," Mr. McAteer said. "I was not surprised to find him so. He is a man of great intellect and a keen understanding of the political situation. He is a man of great intellect and a keen understanding of the political situation. He is a man of great intellect and a keen understanding of the political situation."

Governor-general "Tim" Healy was a boyhood chum of Mr. McAteer's. Consequently, he was readily granted an interview. He is a man of great intellect and a keen understanding of the political situation. He is a man of great intellect and a keen understanding of the political situation. He is a man of great intellect and a keen understanding of the political situation.

Taught Their Lesson.

The Irish "die-hards" no longer resort to violence to attain their ends. They have learned their lesson. The Free State is protected by the great mass of the people. Demonstrations against it, therefore, are only a waste of energy, and very dangerous.

The Baldwin government is not popular in Scotland. Mr. McAteer said, owing to the widespread unemployment throughout the country. Something the Scotch people claim, should be done to relieve the condition. They look to emigration as the only solution to the unemployment problem, however, and thousands may be expected to arrive in Canada during the fall and through the succeeding months.

Attempts of temperance advocates to bring Scotland in line have been dismal failures. The Scotch will never abandon the traditional ease with which they can secure drinks. Mr. McAteer said, and no attention is paid to American prohibition workers such as "Pussyfoot" Johnson and others.

"The parks and public places swarm with unemployed. Meetings of protest are held every day, but nothing ever comes of them. Thinking people realize that Premier Baldwin and his cabinet are doing their best."

Although Mr. McAteer is attached to the country of his youth, he declared he would not live in the old country in preference to Canada. He declared that he would not live in the old country in preference to Canada. He declared that he would not live in the old country in preference to Canada.

"It will be interesting to learn the result of the Irish elections. If by any chance a republican majority is elected, Ireland will again indulge in an orgy of bloodshed and discontent. Her only salvation is ungrudging support of the Free State."

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES TO PICNIC WEDNESDAY

Township and county officials will take a rest from the daily grind of routine on Wednesday, and will assemble at Springbank to celebrate the occasion of the first annual municipal county picnic.

The committee in charge of the picnic is composed of Warden William Ross, Reeve John Cousens, Alvin MacPherson, County Treasurer T. Robinson and County Clerk John Stuart.

FIRE-FIGHTERS RESPOND TO ALARMS FOR TWO FIRES

The fire department answered two calls this morning, but in neither case was any damage done. The first was to White's Rolling Mills, at Matland and Philip street, where a pot of tar, boiling on the roof while workmen were making repairs, became ignited. The blaze was extinguished without difficulty. At 11:45 a call was sent in from John Garvey & Sons, wholesale grocers on King street, where a small fire had started in the rear.

That the rain at Port on Saturday did not interfere with the appetites of the employees of Penmans, Limited, who had assembled on Invererie Heights for their yearly frolic, is clearly shown in the above photograph. The Advertiser snapped the lunchers soon after they had sat down to the well-laden tables. Everything was in readiness for supper

"NOW, THEN, WHO SAID SUPPER?"

When the sudden downpour put a stop to all merrymaking, and the picnicers had a busy time clearing the "eats" off the tables and putting them under cover before the rain spoiled the supper. A few minutes after the air cleared, however, the tables were again set, and with happy smiles all prepared to put to the test the efforts of the refreshment committee. And, speaking of that body, the chairman thereof, Harold Richmond, can be seen in the center of the picture hustling along to supply the increasing demand for pink lemonade. Beside him are two of his trusty lieutenants, who also worked hard that no one should go away hungry.

BOTTLE N FIELD LEADS TO CHARGE AGAINST WOMAN

PRISONER GAVE TIP

Acting on information secured from William McDougall in police court this morning, Inspector Lucas arrested Thomas Emid and his mother, 26 Empress avenue, on a charge of selling liquor. After being taken to police court they were allowed out on $500 bail, to appear tomorrow morning.

A small quantity of liquor was found in a vacant lot, next to 26 Empress avenue, on the statement by McDougall that he had purchased or ordered two bottles of liquor from the woman.

McDougall, St. James street, was arrested last night, when he was found in a vacant lot, next to 26 Empress avenue, with two bottles of whiskey at his feet. He was charged with having liquor in other than a private dwelling.

Pleading not guilty, McDougall stated he had been told the liquor would be in this field waiting for him. When he went to get it, he noticed the policemen, and they got it first. He had not paid for it, and was merely seeing if it had been deposited as promised.

Sergeant Oakley and P. C. Lay testified that they had seen McDougall in the field, and that he was stooping down as though to pick up something. They did not see him with the liquor in his possession.

A second charge followed, to which McDougall pleaded guilty, that of being drunk. He was assessed $25 and costs or 30 days on this charge, the fine being paid.

More than 100 detectives, thousands of patrolmen, every taxicab and truck driver in Greater New York, and scores of plain citizens were joining in the hunt for the sickly child, and every newspaper in New York featured a statement from the physician which had attended the infant outlining for the kidnappers the diet necessary to keep it alive.

The baby disappeared from her carriage in front of a downtown shop Saturday while her mother, Mrs. Ella McKenzie, was shopping. The mother was frantic with grief today after two sleepless nights of waiting in a police station for news of her child.

"I know my baby will die," she said. "She only has been kept alive by the most careful treatment and special diet, and in the hands of any person cruel enough to kidnap her she cannot get the care she must have every hour of the day."

OF SUMMER COMPLAINTChild Welfare Nurses Report
Large Attendance at City Clinics.

Miss Bertha Smith, head of the child welfare department of the public nursing staff, reports a most successful summer's work at the clinics held in the various schools of the city. There has been very little illness among the children of London so far, and the child welfare nurses are now warning the mothers to be on the lookout for summer complaint, which usually appears about the middle of August and continues throughout September.

There has been a large attendance at the clinics this summer, showing that interest in the work is increasing every year. The women's committee of the Child Welfare Association will be called some time shortly to make all plans for the child welfare exhibit at the Western Fair this year. The same tent will be maintained near the horticultural building as in previous years, and some very fine exhibits are being prepared.

Marries Cecil V. WatersSt. Paul's Cathedral Is Scene of Quiet But Charming Wedding
Early This Morning.

St. Paul's Cathedral was the scene of a quiet but very charming wedding this morning at 10:30 o'clock, when Martha Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Robinson, Elmwood avenue, became the bride of Mr. Cecil V. Waters of Walkerville, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Waters of Mitcham, Surrey, England, the Rev. Denny Bright officiating.

Tall standards of gladioli on the chancel steps were the only decorations, the old church making a dignified setting for the stately bride, who appeared on the arm of her father, in a lovely gown of gray georgette, heavily beaded in cut steel. Her hat was large and of gray velvet, trimmed with a drap of changeable silk. She wore gray shoes and stockings and a necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Her flowers, a colonial bouquet of Ophelia roses, were contained in a quaint, old-fashioned silver holder, which has been carried by brides of the family on several occasions. Mr.

Harry T. Dickinson presided at the organ.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. C. A. Whitman, Waterloo street, the house being attractively decorated with flowers for the occasion.

Mrs. Whitman wore a smart white silk suit and black and white hat, while Mrs. Robinson, mother of the bride, was in navy blue satin crepe, and wore a hat of navy and sand, with ostrich trimming.

For going-away, the bride donned a modish gown of reindeer brown crepe, tucked from shoulders to hem, a brown French hat, with chenille trimming and an Isabella fox fur. Mr. and Mrs. Waters leave today for Detroit, where they will catch the boat for Mackinaw and Chicago. On their return they will reside in Walkerville. Out-of-town guests included the bride's brother, Mr. Allen Robinson, and Mrs. Robinson of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Blanford of Hamilton, and their two daughters, the Misses Vera and Eleanor.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception and dinner was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. W. Mock, only the immediate relatives being present. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Niagara Falls, Huntsville and other points, the bride wearing a navy blue tricot suit with hat to match. The bride was charming in a frock of white canton crepe, veil, and bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Miss Elizabeth Gastle, sister of the groom, played the wedding music. Following the ceremony, a dainty luncheon was served, to which about forty guests sat down.

The young couple left for a trip down the St. Lawrence, the bride traveling in a smart brown suit with brown and fawn hat. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm, near Carlisle.

BARNES-BROWN.

One of the prettiest of August weddings was that which took place in the Ridout Street Methodist Church on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Isabella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown, Wootley road, became the bride of Alfred C. Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barnes, also of Wootley road, the Rev. J. A. Agnew officiating.

The church, decorated with gladioli, asters and larkspur against a background of palms and ferns, formed a pretty setting for the bride, who appeared on the arm of her father, in her nuptial gown of white georgette and conventional bridal veil. The gown, pin-tucked from neck to hem, was made with side drapes and exquisitely embroidered with crystals of beads, while the veil of silk net fell gracefully to her feet from a crown of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and roses.

Attending her as bridesmaid was her sister, Miss Effie Brown, in a modish gown of sand georgette, large black hat embroidered in silver and black satin slippers. Her bouquet was of cosmos and she wore the gift of the groom, a rope of pearls. Mr. William Austin of Hamilton attended the groom, his gift being a gold pen-knife. Mr. Gordon Scott presided at the organ, while Miss Marie Barnes of Windsor sang sweetly during the signing of the register.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the house transformed for the occasion with a profusion of gladioli, sweet peas, and lilies of the valley. The mother of the bride, who received with the bridal pair, was charmingly gowned in gray canton crepe and black hat and wore a corsage bouquet of sweet peas. While the mother of the groom wore henna canton crepe, embroidered with beads, a sand hat and corsage bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes left later for a trip down the Thousand Islands, the bride traveling in a smart sand suit, sand duvetyne hat, trimmed with ostrich feathers and sand shoes and stockings. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes will reside on Piccadilly street.

TEN PERISH IN LAUNCH
SUNK IN MISSISSIPPI

Entire Family Wiped Out in Mysterious Gasoline Boat Catastrophe.

Associated Press Despatch.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 20.—Ten persons, including all the members of one family, were drowned last night when a 30-foot gasoline launch mysteriously sank in the Mississippi river near South St. Paul. Not a passenger of the launch survived.

The catastrophe occurred as a party of picnickers were returning to the Twin Cities from Pine Bend.

There was no explosion and a fisherman, some distance away in a small rowboat, was unable to explain the accident. A strong current kept him from reaching the spot in time to save anyone.

The father of the family, Andrew

Martinielli, was a noted builder of boats and had recently completed the ill-fated craft which was on its third trip. Martinielli himself was not with the ill-fated party.
