WASHINGTON CONFERENCE REACHES PEACE BASIS WAR CLOUD DISAPPEARS

Secretary of State Knox Announces That Negotiations Begun at Albany Have Concluded by Reaching Modus Vivendi.

DECLARATION OF TARIFF PEACE.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(Special to The Sunday World.)—At 3 p.m. the following statement was issued by Secretary Knox:

"Negotiations between the president and the Canadian representatives, which were begun at Albany some days ago, were resumed at Washington to-day, and were concluded. They have taken a form which gives assurance that a friendly understanding will be come to immediately. It is expected that the official announcement will be made simultaneously at Washington and at Ottawa on Wednesday, the 30th inst."

WASHINGTON SAYS 'TIS A CANADIAN VICTORY

Payne-Aldrich Law Not Workable in Present Form—May Lead to Reciprocity.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(Special to The Sunday World.)—It would seem that at last a new era in the relationship between Canada and the United States is about to dawn, and that an era is rapidly being put to the commercial distrust that has resulted from the failure of the last attempt to bring about reciprocity between the two countries.

It has been a case of bluff on the part of the United States and diplomacy on the part of Canada, and the latter has won. A Modus Vivendi.

For the purpose of meeting President Taft and the Secretary of State, Mr. Knox, and attempting to adjust his minor differences now existing between the two countries on the tariff question, W. S. Fiedling, Canadian minister of finance, and George H. Graham, Canadian minister of railroads, two of the ablest men in the cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, are in Washington, and as a result of the various conferences it may be stated with good authority that a modus vivendi has practically been established.

It is now practically admitted in administrative circles that the way in which matters have thus far been handled precludes the possibility of making tariff basis held out by the Payne-Aldrich law. The Canadians were more than this, and the ten or a dozen minor concessions which the government of Canada is willing to cede on American products such as citrus

WITH THE BALL TEAM.

Charles W. Cavers, city editor of the Toronto Daily World, left Saturday night for Charlottesville, Virginia, with the Toronto Baseball Club, and will represent the Daily and Sunday World at the training quarters of the team on the circuit at the latter end of April.

Mr. Cavers will have the services of a first-class photographer, and will take by telegraph daily every move that is made by the men whom Joe Kelley has gathered around him, and whom Toronto's hopes will hang upon during the season of 1910.

The Sunday World will receive telegrams from Mr. Cavers a special telegraph and all the illustrations necessary to keep the public thoroughly informed on the work of the team.

LET CITY ASK THE QUESTION

In view of the uncertainty which has prevailed now for some weeks in connection with the working out of the terminal plans of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the vicinity of Carlton-street, it is interesting to note what the City of Buffalo did last week under similar conditions.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has been contemplating an expenditure of $1,500,000 at its Buffalo terminals. When it became evident that the Lehigh Valley was undertaking work in that city of considerable proportions (the Buffalo council at once presumed to have the right to have the company disclose its hand in relation to the city.

Asked Point Blank. The Lehigh Valley people were asked point blank if they would be willing to erect a new passenger station within a definite time, and other questions were asked bearing on other phases of the situation. What has happened in Buffalo prompts the suggestion here to ask, "Has the city council of Toronto not the right to ask the C.P.R. to disclose its plans with reference to this city, to expect an answer that will enlighten the public?"

Fifty Pounds of Food Would Have Won Pole

SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON.

Antarctic explorer who landed at New York yesterday and will shortly visit Toronto.

WITH 50 POUNDS MORE FOOD COULD REACH POLE

Sir Ernest Shackleton Will Not Attempt the Feat This Year.

NEW YORK, March 26.—(Special.)—Lieut. Sir Ernest H. Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, is here. Lady Shackleton also.

The explorer declared he firmly believed that he would have discovered the south pole last year if he had carried 50 pounds more food. He said also that he believed Capt. Scott, who is soon to start with an expedition, will have little difficulty in finding the south pole. At any rate, Sir Ernest said, he would himself make no effort in that direction while Capt. Scott is in the Antarctic. This resolution will not keep him from making a trip to the Antarctic regions for scientific research.

MAY SOON HAVE A TYPHOID SERUM

Prof. Metchnikoff Succeeds in Inoculating Chimpanzee — Experiments Will Have Important Results.

(Special Cable to Sunday World.)

PARIS, March 26.—Prof. Metchnikoff, the famous head of the Pasteur Institute here, announced to the Academy of Medicine to-day that he had inoculated a chimpanzee with typhoid fever. This is the first time typhoid has been transmitted to an animal. Metchnikoff's success is regarded as the most important step yet taken toward preventing the disease in humans, just as vaccination prevents true smallpox.

"In the 20 years since the discovery of the typhoid bacillus science has made great progress in the study of the disease," said Prof. Metchnikoff to the savants of the academy. "But science has been checked always by the seeming impossibility of reproducing the disease for experimental purposes, so it has been impossible to answer certain essential questions: Can the typhoid bacillus produce the disease of itself, or must it be aided by some other microbe? Can typhoid be treated by serums that will inoculate against its virulent form? If so, what is the most efficacious method?"

Prof. Metchnikoff said that with the help of his assistant, Besredka, he obtained a virus from a man suffering with typhoid and injected it into the chimpanzee. The animal died, and an autopsy disclosed the bacilli of typhoid in the intestines.

"The result is that by experimenting with animals, we will answer the question of whether or not we can produce typhoid within a radius of a hundred miles. The craft will carry eighteen passengers.

WILL BUILD DOWN TOWN LINES ONLY

Street Railway Will Refuse to Carry Extensions Into New Territory.

To build downtown car lines. To refuse all extensions into new territory.

This is the definite two-fold policy of the street railway as announced by Manager Fleming. It means that the company will apply to the Ontario Railway Board for power to make use of such central streets as it desires, and that it will leave the responsibility of giving a service to the huge area not included in the agreement of 1891 to the municipal system of tubes and surface lines.

The streets which the company will seek permission to invade are those for the use of which the railway board has already given consent. This order was upheld by the Canadian courts and the privy council. The railway board at that time, however, was limited in its powers and issued its order on an interpretation of the agreement.

Bay-street—Front to Queen. University-avenue—Queen to Bloor. Wellington-street—Church to York. Victoria-street—Adelaide to Wilton. Wilton-avenue and Elliott-street—Victoria to Broadview. Shuter-street—Yonge to Victoria. Adelaide-street—Jarvis to Bathurst. Anderson and St. Patrick-street—University to Bathurst.

Canadian Pacific Plans To Capture Business of Toronto Expenditure of Millions

New Up-Town Station, All Freight Down Town and Improved Service to New York City.

New York Central Working With C.P.R.

The big purchases (1) of land and houses begun over a year ago north of the Tannery Hollow (near Rexboro-street), and from Yonge-street to Avenue-road, and over on the north side of the C.P.R. tracks; (2) the more recent and more extensive purchases south of King-street (including Government House and acres and acres to the west of it; and (3) lastly, the purchase of thirteen acres north of Carlton and east of Yonge-street, with other purchases between this point and Howard-street, may now be linked together in the greatest railway terminal proposition ever put thru by any road in Canada. It means twenty millions or more expended in Toronto by the Canadian Pacific.

IS BREAKING LOOSE. The Canadian Pacific is cutting loose from the Grand Trunk in regard to joint passenger terminals in Toronto.

The C.P.R. will abandon the Union Station and the Esplanade for its passenger service. It will build a big new terminal station at the corner of Yonge and Carlton-streets (one mile north of the waterfront), with a tunnel to the north for a mile, where it will connect with its thru up-town main line east and west.

A PALACE HOTEL. It will build a big hotel with the new station; all its freight business down town. The extensive purchases south of King-street are for freight.

It will do these things more or less in co-operation with the New York Central, so as to make the highest class and fastest service, passengers and freight, between Toronto and New York. The New York Central will share in these expenditures, which will include a new station at Hamilton.

The C.P.R. and New York Central will also combine for a fast transcontinental service between New York and Vancouver, via the Falls, Toronto, Sudbury and Winnipeg.

MAKING UP THE TRAINS. The passenger cars will be stored and the trains made up at the present yards of the C.P.R., north of Roxboro-street up-town. But the sidings up there will be greatly enlarged. That is the meaning of the many purchases made up-town within the past year between Yonge-street and Avenue-road.

There will be considerable changes in the main line of the C.P.R., east of Yonge-street, where a double track and four new viaducts over the Don ravines will be provided. A new line will also be built from Lambton to the Grand Trunk line to Hamilton, over which the C.P.R. has running rights.

There may be a new line from Lambton to Hamilton and the Falls—perhaps over the Canadian Northern's power line right of way. If this were adopted the Canadian Northern would get into the new terminal station at Toronto.

WATER IMPROVING

End of Typhoid Epidemic Thought to Be in Sight.

So decided a decrease has been seen in the colonies of bacteria in the city water that its condition is now highly satisfactory and the end of the typhoid epidemic apparently in sight.

The analysis of water taken on March 23 showed 3500 colonies of bacteria per cubic centimetre, whereas the latest test, water taken on March 23, shows but 320 colonies.

City Engineer Rust says the use of the bleaching powder is only partially responsible for the improvement. The settling down of the lake, which has not been nearly so rough for the past few days, is an important factor.

Cashier Convicted. INDIANAPOLIS, March 26.—(Special.)—Wm. H. Barker, former cashier of the First National Bank of Tippecanoe, Ind., was found guilty of embezzling $100,000 of the funds of the bank by a jury in the United States district court to-day.

At Boston, it was announced to-day that W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central Railroad, has purchased the trotting mare Albia, 2:10 1/4, and that he will campaign her in the grand circuit this year, together with other trotters which he expects to purchase on April 15.

GRUEL REVELATIONS WRECKED HER HEALTH

Widow of President Faure Under Surveillance at Villa Near Paris.

PARIS, March 26.—(Special cable to The Sunday World.)—The famous Steinheil case may have an unexpected and pathetic epilogue. In the course of the hearing of the case Mons. Felix Faure was mentioned under circumstances which are still in the public memory. This was the means of bringing to the knowledge of the widow of the erstwhile president of the republic such cruel revelations of her first husband's mental faculties as seriously affected her family, which lavished on her the tenderest affection, took in her regard special measures of precaution, but in spite of a sojourn in the south of France, on which the family counted that first improvement, Mme. Faure was brought back in such a highly nervous condition as to necessitate her transfer to a villa in the environs of Paris, where she is the object of special surveillance.

WITH THE TRAP SHOOTERS

Trap-shooting is beyond a doubt one of the cleanest and most healthful of outdoor sports. At the present time, when our game laws are low but a short period of each year in which we may roam and explore the wild places and the haunts of game, with our ever-true and trusted friends, dog and gun, we must find a substitute, as our blood is hot and we feel in our bones that we cannot lay our guns to one side, but must go where we can shoot and enjoy the pleasure and good fellowship of our brother enthusiasts. It is the gun club which fills this want, and this is where we spend our Saturday afternoon. Here we have the latest and most improved traps, which throw targets at unknown angles. This makes a shooter on the alert and have quick eye-sight and quick judgment as he has to think fast as to where to shoot in order to kill the bird.

One of our most eminent men once said that "a man who was a good shot was a double asset to his country." Of course the old adage says that "the pen is mightier than the sword," but if our forefathers had not been there with the sword, and what's more, the way to use it, well, things might have been different. It is a great thing to know how to use a gun, and the trap-shooter has it on the average man. The average man may go into the woods once a year for a week or two; but the trap-shooter is shooting nearly every week of the year, and it is good reason to believe that the more experience a man gets the more he learns. Therefore, our parents and wives should encourage us to indulge in such healthful, pleasant and valuable pastime as trap-shooting.

It is interesting to note the rapid strides that trap-shooting has taken during the past few years. Gun clubs have been formed all over the country and the sport continues in its popularity, which is based on its clean, straight portmanteau.

The Stanley's have among their members many notable shots; one who was sent to the Olympia show in England three years ago; three who have won the highest honors in Canada, viz., the Grand Canadian Handicap, also several top and eight-men teams, which have won many trophies and championships, and many who are in the front rank of our Canadian shots. The grounds are open every Saturday afternoon and visitors are always welcome.

With the Golfers in Toronto

The golfing season of 1910 has, thanks to the steady flow of earlier in the month, got off to a good start. It may not be inopportune to consider for a moment what manner of game this is which claims a thousand active adherents from amongst the business men of this city, to what its popularity is due, what benefits its players derive from it, and what, if any, objections can be found to it.

Taking the last point first: We believe that there is no game more free from objection than golf. Of course, some of its followers take it too seriously, and thru over-zealousness lose the chief pleasure and benefit to be derived from it. It is essentially a game calling for calmness of temperament and resembles boxing on account of the necessity of acquiring, if one has not already got, a strong control over the temper. We believe that as an exercise, and as a means of attaining equality, we see too frequently in other sports players losing their temper, and such an extent as to result in acts of brutality, serious physical damage to fellow-players, and even loss of life.

Golf, however, has a safer way of meeting out punishment for loss of self-control, the result of which, while not a benefit to his opponent. In fact, the opponent reaps a distinct benefit, as a rule, from such lapses of temper. The more the player deteriorates as his temper rises. Frequently a game is lost owing to some trivial, irritating circumstance which should really have had no effect whatever on the fortunes of the day. The first and most prominent benefit which her votaries derive is undoubtedly in improved health and strength. We have referred above to the possibility of overdoing the game, but this was to the mental, not the physical, aspect, as, unlike rowing, for instance, which is a strenuous and heavily taxed, causing in competition at times complete exhaustion, the golfer, while he may honestly tire himself in the course of a day's play, has not to face any severe demand on the heart's action, the strain of which is of serious distress.

Strain on Heart.

To refer again to the heart, the heavy demand upon the heart to sustain a severe and long-continued physical effort in a race extending over fifteen to twenty minutes, when every two seconds during that time muscular power of the body is demanded in the stroke, applied quickly and relieved only for a brief space during the recovery, has resulted in many clubs having their members undergo a medical examination preparatory to taking their part in a game. A prospective golfer, however, can rest assured that, while having his physique under control, the game, when there will be no excessive demands made upon it. While, therefore, we have no hesitation in pronouncing it a healthy and useful game, we also assure him of a first-class mental exercise under pleasant conditions, for full-sized golf courses require upwards of two hundred acres, and the character of the ground must be such, having both high and low ground, that there is a continually changing scene as the course is played, giving pleasant and often extensive views. A golf property is often acquired more on account of its beauty of scene and picturesque views than for its apparent suitability as regards turf and character of ground. The best turf country courses are by the seashore, the soil is of a sandy character, entirely suited to the game, and the views obtainable from them are often very beautiful, while the actual ground on which the course is laid out would not infrequently be described by non-golfers as unattractive.

Effect of Scenery.

An instance of an excellent golf course, also picturesque in itself, is that of the Victoria Club, a golf course of three miles from the capital of British Columbia. From almost every tree a beautiful panorama of the Straits of Juan de Fuca is presented to the player, the picturesque Olympic Mountains bounding the southern horizon, while to the eastward the towering Mount Baker rears its snow-capped peak above the range of mountains in the foreground.

Several hotels are on a promontory, and views are obtainable in all directions, yet the course is one to satisfy golfers, as it is well laid out, and the turf is perfect. To come nearer home, there is obtainable from the old Toronto links, alias, we understand, to be lost for ever to its members, a charming view of Lake Ontario, and the property on which there are some beautiful trees is entirely suitable for the game, too rapidly being surrounded by houses.

The Lambton links are in an open valley, and the views from all parts, especially from the clubhouse, of a pleasant character.

The Mississauga players have already gone some distance from town, to the banks of the Credit River, where they own a valley, which for beauty has been often compared to the famous English links from Richmond Hill, on the Thames, generally considered the most perfect bit of scenery of its type anywhere. The Mississaugas have no reason to fear the comparison. The Credit River flows thru the middle of the property, and at different points in the course, which it intersects, views are obtainable both up and down stream, both from the high and low ground, all being beautiful, and indeed fascinating. The turf here is also sandy and entirely suitable for the game.

Benefits Mind and Body.

So we find that golf takes its adherents out of doors to pleasant surroundings, and while not overtaxing them, gives them a reasonable exercise, beneficial to both mind and body. Its popularity is due in no small measure to this, while it leads to the formation of pleasant acquaintance, and invigorating while not too severe

AT TORONTO BOWLING CLUB.

Outside of the "Primers' League," who have practically declared winners in both sections, the final of all other rolling on the Toronto Bowling Club alleys promises to be the most exciting in years. In the T.B.C. League three separate series were scheduled for the season, the Queen City, last year's champion, winning the first, while the second is still undecided, and now, with the Cubs in a runaway lead with the third series a hot finish is looked for in Toronto's oldest league. In the Business Men's League the Canadian General Electric in the lead are now being crowded by John Macdonald and the H. Murby Co., and with ball rolling in great form the present leaders will have their work cut out for them to hang on until the end of the season.

One of the most successful leagues, however, and one that will be watched next season, is the newspaper two-man. This league was only started after the beginning of the year and with seven out of ten clubs in the lead, it looks almost decided for the lead and with only two weeks more to run a neck and

Miss Olivia Smith Tells Women of Toronto Thru Sunday World Why She Spoke In Legislature

The Little Woman, Whose Methods Carried Cause Over Telegraph Wires From Coast to Coast, Explains Her Motives.

Written Exclusively For The Sunday World

Seated in the speaker's gallery, on that memorable Saturday morning of the prorogation of parliament and looking around the scene, the first thing that arrested my attention was, what appeared to me to be a large red pin-cushion on the table—use unknown to me.

"How I would like to pin a 'Votes For Women' button on it," I whispered to my friend.

However, my thoughts soon became more serious, as I listened to the official voice read over in a deadly monotonous tone, "A bill passed for so and so, etc." Too numerous were the items to mention here, and so he chanted on.

Aspect Was Funereal. I rubbed my eyes to make sure I was not at a funeral; the speech sounded so like "Dust to dust—ashes to ashes"—that like the immortal Sairy Gamp I queried, "Is this a lying in or lying out?"

Were the bills coming into existence or were they passing out? From the tone of the voice one might have supposed the latter.

However as I listened it was borne in upon me that among all these acts, there was not one giving the long delayed justice to women. Taxation without representation is tyranny. Surely the most elementary sense of justice would grant "representation" to all the taxed—even a woman's mind can grasp so simple a problem as that. That one-half the taxed should be debarred because of a difference in sex, is as ridiculous to me as debarring a mare from oats because she is not a horse.

Felt the injustice. It was this that made me get up in the house and protest against this simple want of justice, not knowing at the time that women can lay their grievances before the government in a constitutional manner in this country. Till the year 1832 women could vote and did make use of this privilege. Rich women either came up to parliament and cast a vote, or they voted by proxy, sending someone in their place, which they were allowed to do.

In the year referred to, the word male was inserted before the word person, in the statute referring to voting, which robbed women of a right, which here-to-fore had been theirs. Therefore women are merely asking for restoration of a right of which they have been robbed in a very unconstitutional way. So why should woman's method of retaining her right not be made in an unconstitutional manner also? Would it be possible for women to improve on the methods of men, who are supposed to be chosen because of their capability of introducing ways and measures, which are the very best for obtaining a given end. Hence, our unconstitutional or constitutional methods. I did what I did because in England, we have no other way of reaching the ear of the government, and because I believe the militant methods are the only ones which will succeed.

Militant Methods Successful. For forty years, women have been agitating in a quiet, lady-like way, without success, a petition signed for woman's franchise was a few years ago, sent into the house so large, that it was wheeled in, as it could not be carried easily, and it was never even opened. Since the adoption of militant tactics that movement has grown in a marvelous way. Even a member of the august chamber of Westminster, thought it worth his while a year ago, to mention the fact, that so successful had these women been that they had raised and spent twenty thousand pounds in a comparatively short period, and that these women had no doubt, owing to their energetic methods, lost the seats for them of a good number of candidates, notably, Winston Churchill when running for Manchester. He was never allowed to make a speech owing to the interruptions of the women. I believe in the militant method because history shows that nothing has ever been gained without fighting for it.

Progress of Liberty. The working man obtained his franchise by these methods, indeed they went to greater lengths, such as pulling down structures, burning of buildings and even taking of life. Was not King John at the point of the sword, forced to sign the Magna Charta? Did not Garibaldi raise his country from a state of well-nigh dissolution to take its place among the nations. Did not Mazzini, by agitation and militant action, save Italy? What of worth has ever been accomplished without fighting for it, yes—even to the extent of using physical force.

Did the founder of politics debar women from deliberation? Not Pythagoras, the philosopher, framed and drew up the first constitutional forms of government, and he welcomed women and taught them side by side with men, and allowed them to express opinions on all matters under discussion.

Why I Did It. I did what I did Saturday, because as a self-respecting woman, I object to being classed with witless lunatics, paupers, criminals and peevish. I suppose it is for this reason that we are not treated with respect when we make our demands in a constitutional way.

As this article is for a Sunday paper, may I be pardoned if I finish with a little sermon? Among all these reasons, my most sincere ones are these—I believe in equal rights of all human beings; I believe in equality of opportunity; I believe in imprisoning any human soul by sordid environment; I believe the race given half a chance will develop great qualities, and I believe the rich should be freed from the stunting, depressing effects of their riches. I believe in freeing the poor from the damning influence of poverty. I believe in the freeing of the laboring classes from the suicide of excessive labor; I believe that the land belongs to the people as much as the air and I believe that the environment of each individual should be such that he could live up to the best that is in him. I believe that the government, as the parents of the state, should see to it that its children have the necessities of life, and I firmly believe that the state, if it had a mother as well as a father would do so.

Hoping that this gentle creed of mine will sink into the hearts of my readers at this Easter time and spring up and bear fruit for the amelioration of the ills of our race, consisting of men and women, I am yours truly.

(Signed) Olivia Smith.

Girls and the Men. By inadvertence the lines for two of the illustrations in the theatrical section of the editorial section, it will be noticed, are transposed. Those for John K. Robertson as "The Mayor" and J. A. Marcus as "Boss Harrigan," in "The Man of the Hour" are under the picture of Ruby Marion and Amy Thompson of "The Washington Society Girls" company, and the girls' lines are made up under the picture of the men.

QUICKLY PERSUADED. Mr. Piker—How did he happen to lend you the ten dollar note? Tommy Short—I happened to hit him with a piece of pipe first.

Ten Pretty Daughters, Count 'Em, Ten; How'd You Like to Pay the Milliner?

SPENCERVILLE, O., Mar. 26.—How would you like to have 10 pretty daughters—count 'em, 10—and buy hats for them all? Wouldn't Easter be a nightmare for you?

There's a man in this town that 10, who says he likes it. Thos. Berry, farmer, banker and state senator, the daddy of 10 of the prettiest girls in Van Wert County. There are no boys, and he says that Easter is the best day of the year. "Why the old homestead is like a flower garden that day," says Pa Berry. "To see the girls all looking pretty and happy—that makes me happier than three times the money it costs."

"I don't ever expect to be a rich man. But riches like these girls of mine is worth more than a big bank account. If they're happy, I am."

There's Adda, and Beatrice, and Grace, and Norma, and Anna, and Eunice, and Nell, and Hazel, and Bernice, and Little Jessie, 7 years old. Adda is just a little taller than Beatrice, and Beatrice just a little taller than Grace, and so on down the line—a graded six yards of roses, home grown.

"I'm satisfied," says Daddy Berry, "and Mrs. Berry smiles assent, too. 'I can't spare one of them,'" she adds.

FOUND HIS DAUGHTER

In Montreal After Three Years Search.

MONTREAL, March 26.—After three years' search Louis Behner of Hartford, Conn., recovered his daughter, Anna here last night, and ex-Lt. John Capehart of the United States navy is held by the police on a charge of abduction, while the Hartford police also prefer a charge of forgery against him.

The couple were living on Victoria-street when found by detectives, under the name of Shaw. Anna was 16 years old when she ran away with Capehart, who was cutting a wide swath in Hartford society at the time. Father and daughter were re-united at detective headquarters, and she left with him to return home.

Lord Morley One of the Most Brilliant Englishmen

Sketch of Career as a Literary Patriarch, Scholar and Statesman.

Among the picturesque figures standing before the people of England today, there is none more brilliant and versatile than Lord Morley. As a literary patriarch and scholar, as a statesman and powerful orator, he has no superior, and few, if any, equals.

For nearly a third of a century he has dwelt on a perilously exalted pinnacle of achievement, as a thinker and author and a writer. His literary style is marked by a high and a sustained magnificence the fascinating splendor of which is without a parallel in our time. His speech in the house of lords, to which he was recently elevated and in which he defended the Asquith government for its conduct upon the issues which had sent it to seek the approval of the British Islands at the polls was marked by literary grandeur and superiority of thought. Whatever bears the seal of Lord Morley's literary approval may justly be regarded as the very purest gold. He is the editor of the only collection of books produced by this age which can be rightly regarded as classics—The English Men of Letters Series. Altho some of these books were written by men of very moderate ability, mediocrity is emphatically not a characteristic of the series. His own biographical contributions to the series—the Life of Edmund Burke, as well as his other earlier works, the lives of Rousseau and his fellow-electrifiers of France and Europe—are marked by exactness, erudition, stateliness and thought. There are paragraphs in those writings which, when they were written, seemed to fall like a thunder-clap on England. His monumental work on Gladstone seems, for many reasons, to lack the popularity of his earlier efforts. This may be because the book consists so greatly of extracts from Gladstone's own writings and speeches, and Gladstone is a man who will always be believed much more than he will be read. Or it may be for the reason that the biography has been circulated thru channels whereby it has passed into the possession of those who acquire books rather than read them. Still, notwithstanding the disadvantages under which the book has been produced, it will always have many readers and admirers. The life of England's greatest statesman written by England's greatest scholar cannot fail to take a permanent place in literature.

Commanding Personality. In parliament, as in literature, Lord Morley for many years has been a commanding personality. His eloquence has not been vociferous, nor has it been marked by a splendid purity and strength. He has impressed his hearers by his superb intellectuality, rather than by the thunder and reverberation of the voice. In this respect he wonderfully resembles more than had they the sublime utterance of Chatham, Brougham or Webster; and as Macaulay's speeches will always be regarded as literary treasures by succeeding generations, so will be the judgment regarding Morley's. Men who did not own his opinions, and men who voted against his party, flocked to the chamber of the house of commons when Macaulay was pouring his restless torrent of welcome rhetoric upon the numbers of enchanted England. And three-quarters of a century afterwards an intellectual charmer in the person of Lord Morley—with voice of no great volume, and dramatic power far inferior to that of many of his fellows, engaged in joyful repetition, performed with ease and ability the self-same envied task.

A Comparison. I have made mention of Lord Macaulay. The comparison between him and Lord Morley is complete. It is strange that so many writers and scholars in all generations have failed to make the most of the great English tongue. There is a magic minstrelsy in language which most writers overlook. In selections of poetic prose or thrilling rhetoric, how quickly does a compiler descend from the first class to the twentieth, search the catalog of writers however much he will; literary strength quickly forsakes literary sweetness, while literary magnificence and picturesque completeness speedily degenerate into aggregations of empty words. The only writer in our language who can triumphantly glory in having attained and maintained unflinchingly the pinnacle of sustained literary strength combined with rhetorical splendor, not merely in isolated passages of unapproachable grandeur but in every page he has written, is the wonderful Lord Macaulay. Not far from him, although arising and descending with irregular variety is Milton. The English dictionary seems to have exploded in the hands of both these men, and the treasures of language have been scattered in wild profusion at their feet. Macaulay's wealth of language has been approached only by the most illustrious instances by Irving, Ruskin, Eliot, Canning, Thackeray and Carlyle. Apart from these, the horizon of literary grandeur bends over an oasis desert. Even the poets fall far below the ordinary when their detestable imitations of the letters of classic Britain, the correspondence of very Shylock, might have been written by a clerk. In view of this melancholy testimony it is no discredit to Morley to say that he falls not very far below Macaulay. ### King and Queen of Wurtemberg Likely to Visit Prince of Wales—Other Social Notes Chiefly Concerning Royalty.

LONDON, Mar. 26.—Comment has been excited by the absence of female influence behind the scenes in the recent political crisis. Perhaps this may account for the fact that cabinet secrets have been so well kept. Several of Mrs. Asquith's society friends who took the opportunity of discussing political questions with her during the crisis came away much charmed and convinced that her husband had told her nothing. But even before her marriage Mrs. Asquith had a reputation for subtlety.

Since her marriage, Mrs. Winston Churchill has become one of the most popular of young married women (fizzing prominently) in the society world. She is greatly admired both for her good looks and her brilliant conversational gifts.

Among the many royalties who are to be marked down as probable visitors to this country during the next few months must not be placed the King and Queen of Wurtemberg, who are expected here upon a private visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House. For many years the King of Wurtemberg and the late Duke of Teck were upon considerable terms of friendship, and this friendship has since been maintained by Her Royal Highness. This forthcoming private nature, and their majesties are expected to remain in this country about a fortnight.

Some time ago the German Emperor made it clear that he did not approve of the monarchs of the other states that go to make up the German Empire paying state visits to foreign powers, hence it is that neither the King of Wurtemberg nor the King of Saxony have yet been entertained by Their Majesties at Buckingham Palace. Now, however, it is understood that the Emperor is disposed to regard this matter in a more tolerant light.

Of the courtiers of our sovereigns of the Hanoverian line, with its Saxe-Coburg continuation, Queen Alexandra is certainly the most highly connected—a king's daughter and the sister of two kings and a czarina. In instances where Her Majesty's nephew has married her husband's niece the advantage has been to the latter in a worldly sense—the it is very possible that the present Empress of Russia has envied before now the comparatively obscure yet safe position of her elder sister, Princess Louise of Battenberg. The match between Princess Sophie of Prussia and the Crown Prince of Greece was even described as "brilliant," at the time for the royal bride. It was curious that after the marriage of Queen Victoria's eldest son and the lovely Alexandra of Denmark, the greatness seemed more on the bridegroom's side of the altar at the wedding, it shifted afterwards; as the children of the then Princess of Wales' clever mamma made far better matches than did the younger daughters of the grief-stricken widow who occupied the English throne.

Before Prince Albert of Wales returns to the Royal Naval College at Osborne, the Prince of Wales proposes to pay a visit to the palace in order to inspect once more the surroundings amid which his son is lodged. The recent epidemic there of influenza has conclusively demonstrated the utter unsuitability of the college for the housing of so many young cadets, and unless there is ample evidence of the improbability of anything of a like nature occurring in the future it is quite on the cards that the young Prince will not return to Osborne at all, but will join his older brother, Prince Edward, at the senior branch of the college at Dartmouth.

On the eve of publication it was decided to postpone indefinitely the issue to the public of a novel written by an author whose works have considerable sale amongst members of the smart set. The volume was already in the hands of the reviewers when this decision was come to, but urgent messages were sent out by the publisher asking them to be good enough to return their copies. Various explanations for the recall of the book have been put forward. The one that finds most general acceptance is that at the eleventh hour the writer repented of a certain reference he had made to one of the most prominent politicians of the day. Undoubtedly he acted wisely, whether it was on his own initiative or that of some candid friend, in acquiescing in the course that had been taken.

Expectations were cherished that the King would consent to stay at a certain famous country house in connection with the inauguration of a great public work. However, those who are aware of the strained relations which exist between the couple who would, in the event of His Majesty's compliance, be his host and hostess, are of the opinion that good reasons will be found to excuse His Majesty from staying under that roof.

At Princess.
 Robert Hilliard, known to fame as the best dressed man on the American stage, will be at the Princess this week with his startling play on the vampire question which induces the audience to say "the more I see of women the better I think of rattle-snakes." The women of the company are said to be quite up to the star's form sartorially and Miss Annette Constock wears some lovely gowns built on the new Russian peasant lines, while the sorceress, a very beautiful woman, has some of those trailing, clinging, glittering effects beloved of all vampires and considered the principal ear-mark of a stage adventuress.

Morrison—Tyler.
 The marriage took place last week at the residence of the bride's mother, of Miss Ella Jean Morrison, daughter of Mrs. A. B. Morrison, to Mr. Harry Leo Tyler, Bowmanville. The drawing room was profusely decorated with Easter lilies and palms and the Rev. Mr. Frazer read the wedding service. Miss Ruth Simpson playing the music and singing "Because," during the signing of the register. Mrs. Morrison gave away her daughter, who was wearing a traveling suit of emmett silk rep with real lace blouse and violet toque; her bouquet was a shower of white roses and lily-of-the-valley; she was attended by Miss Emily Morrison, maid of honor, and Miss Irene Cronk as bridesmaid, the former wearing mauve with Irish lace and carrying daffodils and the latter in pale pink and carrying tulips to match. Each received a pearl brooch from the bridegroom, who gave a pin of the same stones to his best man, Mr. Hugh Young. Mrs. Morrison was wearing pale blue gown with real lace. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler left by an afternoon train for New York and on their return will reside at 45 Aston-avenue.

Patronesses of Athletic Club Dance.
 The Amateur Athletic Club dance at McConkey's on Friday evening, April 1, is under the patronage of Mrs. Gibson, Lady Pellatt, Mrs. Cotton, Mrs. Albert E. Gooderham, Mrs. John Massey, Mrs. Albert Austin, Mrs. MacKenzie, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. D. Bruce Macdonald, Mrs. Ewart Osborne and Mrs. Denison. The names of the committee in charge appear elsewhere.

Sign of the Zodiac.
 Those born between March 21 and April 19 come under the influence of Aries. The Ram, the higher attributes of this sign being reason and intuition. People born under Aries are usually of great executive ability, earnest and determined, they will accomplish what they resolve upon, and are usually not greatly upset if their cause fails.

They are natural leaders and dominate all with whom they come in contact; they are magnetic and possess occult powers, they are often excellent pay-rols, chemists, mind readers and spiritual comforters, and diving, without words, the troubles of their friends to whom they are often foolishly loyal and generous. These people are brilliant scholars, bright, witty, genial and great talkers, in fact they generally talk too much, mostly about themselves, they should practise silence and spend a part of each day alone. They love beauty and harmony in all things; fine descriptive writers, poets, novelists and excellent teachers are born under this sign. The tendency of most Aries people is to over estimate their executive powers and frequently become reckless in the use of them ending in loss, disaster and often nervous prostration. The faults of people born in this sign are selfishness and impetuous temper, they do not easily forgive tho they are not revengeful and will die for a friend or principle, these people are impatient of detail, and the women are very prone to jealousy. Aries people should marry those born under Sagittarius (Nov. 22—Dec. 21) or those of their own sign. Their governing planets are Mars and Neptune, the gems are amethyst and diamond and the astral colors rose, pink and white. The diseases most likely to attack Aries people are affections of the eyes, headaches, internal troubles and paralysis.

Symphony Orchestra Concert.
 The fifth concert this season of the Toronto-Symphony Orchestra at Massey Hall on Thursday evening, called out one of the largest audiences of the season and bore witness to the ever-increasing appreciation of the Toronto public for their local orchestra. The last concert for the season will be held on April 21, when we will have another chance of hearing THE Komena, the delightful Dutch contralto, who so charmed her audience when here in the autumn. Among those present at the concert on Thursday were: The Misses Gibson of Government House, accompanied by Mr. Hope Gibson and Mr. Sydney Fallowes, A. D. C.; Lady Moss, Mrs. Lonsdale Capreole, Miss Amelia Warlock, the Misses MacMurphy, Miss Chipman, Mrs. Woodworth, Dr. and Mrs. Thorburn, Miss Muriel Millchamp, Mr. Gordon Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Cox, Mrs. Edward Cox, Mrs. Albert Austin and Mr. Bert Austin, Mr. Fraser of England, Dr. Herbert Bruce, M. de Champ, Mr. George Sears, Miss Evelyn Taylor, Mrs. Gerard Burton, Mrs. and Miss Plaville, Mr. Byron E. Walker and his daughter, Mrs. Carl Hunter, Dr. and Mrs. Vogt, Mrs. Murray Alexander and her daughter, Mr. Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Robins, Mrs. Cromarty, Miss Scott, Mrs. Miller Lash, Mrs. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Brien, Prof. and Mrs. J. J. # Weird Story of One of the Strangest and Most Pathetic Funerals on Record When the Bodies of Thirty-Seven Miners Were Buried in Frozen Northland

Aftermath of Disaster Of Which Outside World Heard All But Nothing

It is Big Undertaking to Dig One Grave in the North in Winter and in This Case the Task Was Overwhelming.

DOUGLAS, Alaska, March 26.—(Special.)—The funeral of the 37 miners who met death in the explosion in the Mexican mine here on the night of March 2, 1910, was like nothing else in the history of Christian burials, and yet lacked nothing of those tributes which we seek to soothe the pain of death. There have been quartz mine catastrophes of greater magnitude, and very many have been the coal mine disasters where the number of the victims seem few by comparison, but never before, even in the wilds of Alaska, where the facilities for Christian burial are so primitive and in the winter so difficult, have there been so many victims of a single accident, nor the funeral indignity of man so taxed.

Hard to Dig Graves.
A single burial in Alaska in winter, even in Southeastern Alaska, is fraught with difficulties. The ground itself is frozen to a considerable depth, and often the heavy snows are half thawed and then frozen. There is then the difficulty of conveying the dead to the cemetery, over untraced and often hardly passable trails, in a country which is so sparsely settled, death is an infrequent visitor, and where hearses are unknown.

On the day following the disaster, while the dead were being prepared for burial at the hospital, a company of Tlingit-Indians, under the direction of Robert Kinzie, superintendent of the Treadwell Company, were fighting their way thru the ice and frozen ground, digging graves in the little cemetery which has sufficed for Douglas Island for 20 years. It was a slow process, but the task was completed on the 26th.

The men were buried in four funerals. The first occurred from the Church of Our Lady of the Mines on Saturday morning, two days after the catastrophe, and from there nine bodies were taken to their final resting place. From the church door to the edge of the city the caskets were borne by the comrades of the dead men, and the population of Douglas Island followed on foot. At the city limits the portage halted, for here the trail narrowed. A thin path had been broken and beaten down by the Indians and those of the white men who directed them. There were only a few feet, which had threaded their way to the cemetery since the snow had fallen. Here the sleds waited—such as the traveler in Alaska carries his winter stores upon as he rushes thru the great white silence.

Here the bodies were laid carefully upon the sleds, and made fast.

For the most part, the men drawing the sleds walked single file, and if one stepped a few inches to the right or left, his feet dropped thru the crust of the snow. They proceeded carefully, however, and the sad journey of a mile or more was made without accident.

On the same afternoon, the bodies of 17 Montenegrins, Slavonians and Austrians were buried from the Russian Church, one from the Swedish Lutheran.

The cause of the catastrophe is still a profound mystery. The powder magazines in all the mines owned by the Treadwell Company are located near the shafts, conforming to the rules of good mining engineering—since the disaster in the Butte mine, when the magazine was located some distance from the shaft, exploded, filling the drift with gases and cutting off from escape the miners who were at work in the stope beyond where the explosion had occurred. To avoid this, the Treadwell mines, where nothing is omitted which can make human life more secure, all the magazines on all the levels are located near the shafts, so that the fumes will go up the shaft, and the danger of cutting off the workers from escape is obviated.

A number of quartz mine explosions have occurred in other mines thru the practice of thawing powder (which always freezes in the winter) by candles in the mine. This practice is not permitted in any of the Treadwell mines, and the powder is thawed by steam on the surface, and brought to the magazine on each level in sufficient quantities for one day's use only.

When Explosion Occurred.

The powder magazine on each level is a room blasted out of solid rock, heavily timbered at one end, equipped with a steel grating door which is kept locked except at certain times when the powder is issued to the men. The last time at which powder should have been issued from the magazine on the night of March 2, was a few minutes after 11 o'clock, and under the custom of the stope bosses and the company, at 11:30, when the explosion occurred, the iron door should have been locked, and the stope bosses should have been at the shaft, ready to superintend the entering of the cage by the men, who are taken to the surface every night at this hour for supper. There is every reason to believe that the door was locked, and the stope bosses at the shaft.

Had the explosion occurred at any other time in the night, had it happened a few minutes earlier or a few minutes later, not more than a few lives would have been lost. As it was, but one man escaped from death, which was instantaneous, or nearly so. The explosion did not take place until all work had been suspended, and the men assembled at the shaft, waiting to ascend.

No theory which regards the explosion as an accident has been advanced which will satisfactorily account for all the conditions which are known to have existed at the time of the disaster. A strike was instituted against the Treadwell Company by the Western Federation of Miners three years ago, and when the strike failed, there were many threats, but there is no evidence, except the circumstances related above, of foul play, and this theory of the disaster is not acceptable to the management.

Only Four Were Married.
Fortunately, out of the thirty-seven men who lost their lives, only four were married and only two of these have children.

The Treadwell Company has always continued on its pay roll, after death, at the same wage, the name of every married man who has been killed in the operation of its properties, paying the amount each month to the widow, and this too without regard to its legal liability. The same thing is done in the case of cripples whether married or single.

THE ARCH.

The consensus of opinion among the learned is to the effect that the arch was invented by the Romans. Some claim that Archimedes of Sicily was the inventor, while there are others who would make it to be of Etrurian origin, but there can be no doubt about the fact that the Romans were the first to apply the principle to architecture. The earliest instance of its use is in the case of the Cloaca Maxima, or Great Sewer, of Rome, built about 588 B.C. by the first of the Tarquin line of kings, a work which is regarded by the historians as being one of the most stupendous monuments of antiquity. Built entirely without cement, it is still doing duty after a service of almost twenty-five centuries.

THE FIRST COMEDY.

Thalia is the muse of comedy and lyric poetry. Susrion and Dolon, supposed inventors of theatrical exhibitions, 52 B.C., performed the first comedy at Athens, on a wagon or movable stage, on four wheels, and were rewarded with a basket of figs and a case of wine.

Show Girls to Marry

The Members of "Havana" Octette More Fortunate Than Their Sisters of Florodora Fame—June Brides Will Wear June Roses.

Isn't it nice to be a "Hello Girl," to be admired, wooed and dined by nobility and all the swell set throughout the world.

These lucky girls who comprise the octette with "Havana," the London and New York musical comedy of which James T. Powers is the star, are happy.

The company has left the New York Casino, which place has been their home for two seasons and will be seen here next week. This very day news-boys' headlines has the original "Florodora Sextette" beaten before they start. The fact is that the octette of the "Havana" musical show bids fair to achieve a greater amount of fame and fortune than befell the lucky "Florodora Sextette." In fact, "Jimmy" Powers thinks his girls are all members of Royalty, or will be some day. Talk about striking it rich—well that is precisely the idea in the case of the "Hello Girls" who nightly sing:

"Hello, people, people hello!
They are a lively lot of girls
These girls from London town
Each one dressed just like the rest
In just a simple gown.
They didn't mind much where they went
Yet each was bent and quite content
On dreaming of this little text
Where shall we go next?
Hello People."

It looks very much as if Edith Kelly, who was the leader of the now famous "Hello People" will "go to" Frank Gould.

She is an English girl, nineteen years old and stunning. Young as she is, this is not the first affair of the heart in which she has figured. When she was only sixteen she became engaged to an English millionaire gunpowder manufacturer, but the affair lapsed somehow.

Then Edith went on the stage and began breaking more hearts in a work than she earned pounds in a month. The voice of destiny whispered in her ear, "Go West, sweet maid, so west," and she went as far west as Broadway and Thirty-ninth-street, where she appeared as the leader of the Octette. Her beauty was lauded along the Great White Way, and soon came to the ear of Frank Gould, whose divorce has left him again detached.

He came, and saw, and was conquered. Nearly every night thereafter he was to be found in the front row, and when he chanced to meet the sparkling Edith, she was amiable and charming.

This summer when Miss Kelly visited London, Frank Gould was not very far away. In fact, they were soon so much together that a report came from the exclusive Savoy Hotel, that "Frank Gould and his American bride had registered."

Every one remembers Erminie Havell, the fair Brooklyn girl of "Florodora" fame, who was recently chosen by Harrison Fisher as the model in face and form as an inspiration for the new Harrison Fisher girl.

In the "Florodora" sextette at one time was Dessa Gibson, who gave Charles Dena Gibson the inspiration and furnished the type for his well-known "Gibson widow." Dessa Gibson afterward became engaged to the Marquis di Rudini, son of a former Italian prime minister, but the engagement was broken off.

A good many of the girls who at one time or another appeared in the famous sextette of "Florodora" subsequently became famous leading ladies, and the "Havana" octette seems to be just as auspicious a nursery for budding Modestas and Bernhards.

Against Daisy Green, the effie "Florodora" collection, Daisy became a prima donna to be sure, but pretty Caroline Green of "Havana" fame married a Colorado millionaire.

Then there was Edna Croxton, who is the daughter of Edward M. Steck, the millionaire coal dealer. When Edna was sixteen, she eloped with Warren W. Croxton, a well-known railway man, but she repented and went on the stage. She had the stage fever so bad that her younger sister, Helen caught it, and both of them set out for New York, with an irate father in close pursuit.

Both of the parents had originally been opposed to the stage aspiration of their daughters, but the mother had ultimately acquiesced. Little Helen had just been initiated into all the glories of her dream when her determined father appeared breathlessly behind the scenes and forbade her to go on. Mr. Steck was a big man, and Helen, the determined, was very slight. Helen did not go on, but Edna, being older, was allowed to proceed with her part. And "the song that 'Where shall we go next?' so prettily, that a well-known wealthy New Yorker lost no opportunity to cultivate her acquaintance. His attentions were very persistent, and 'the' it is at present a dark secret, the fact is that before long Edna will get her divorce and her marriage to the broker will be immediately announced.

Carlo Mayo, a pretty member of the octette comes of a good old New England family. They like most families are opposed to the stage and they have made all kinds of inducements to have a share in it. Her uncle, one of the judges of the New York supreme court, is also trying to discourage her determined niece's aspirations but to no avail.

Edwin K. Lord, a millionaire of Malden, has offered to adopt her and send her to Wellesley, to make her a lady of leisure with automobiles and servants galore, but she will have none of it. Miss Mayo likes her work and says she will be a great artist before she quits more.

Frances Belmont, a "Florodora" girl, acquired a husband and a title at one time, when she married Baron Astburton, and Edna Croxton, Dolly Fliley and Edith Kelly have almost equally brilliant possibilities.

Dolly Fliley is an original "octette." Almost any day may bring the announcement of her engagement to a wealthy banker of New York, a member of the Yale class of 1903, who has been courting her assiduously ever since he saw her at the show. Every night he took her to her home in a big yellow touring car, and when the show left the Casino, he was on hand to help more.

Thanks to his valuable tips Dolly has made a tidy little fortune on the stock market, and she is practically independent means to-day.

Erminie Clark may turn out to be the luckiest of all. Frances Belmont married her baron, and Dessa Gibson nearly married her marquis, but the girl with the operatic name may marry her duke. Yes, when she was in England this summer the Duke of Leinster, the best match in Europe to-day, fell head over heels in love with the simple chorus maiden. Report had it that his romantic somersaults had landed him at the feet of the Irish dancing girl, but it would seem now that pretty Dolly cut more of a figure with him. The progress of his courtship was interrupted when Dolly returned to New York this fall, but the impulsive and hot-headed young duke is not apt to let a little thing like the Atlantic ocean separate him from the girl of his choice.

Then there is Vivian Raymond, another Brooklynite, who has profited by the example set by her "octette." Dolly Fliley and she has dabbled with tickers and stocks, and she has already won a fair competence as a result of her speculations. If a "s sextette" without money can marry a title, how long will it be before an "octette" with money is snapped up by some of those title-holding fortune hunting foreigners?

Verily the day of the "s sextette" is done and the hour of the "octette" has struck.

SHAKSPERE'S GREATEST PLAY.

It is impossible to say which of Shakspeare's plays is the "greatest." It is safe to say that the greatest of his productions are "The Tempest," "Julius Caesar," "Hamlet," "Lear," "Macbeth" and "Othello," but to pitch upon any one of these six, or of the others, as being the greatest would be a bit of unpardonable temerity. It is a question of individual taste and judgment. Some claim that "Hamlet" bears the palm, others are found to be in favor of giving the high honor to "Macbeth," while each one of his 15 or 20 greater plays seems the "greatest" to some people. Perhaps the most talked of, if not the most popular, of the Shakspearean dramas is "Hamlet," while the majority of the pronounced Shakspearean critics unite in pronouncing "The Tempest" to be the high-water mark of the great dramatist's wonderful genius.

Jennie Busley, the comedienne, has been granted a divorce.

Marie Cahill and her husband, Arthur Klein, were ejected from a theatre in Atlanta, Ga., because she refused to remove her hat.

An unusual opportunity comes to Sunday World readers through the REMOVAL SALE

HEINTZMAN & CO. LTD.

Makers of Canada's Greatest Piano to purchase a piano at a generous reduction from manufacturer's prices.

This is no ordinary Sale, such as comes under the classification of "Stock-taking Sale," "Early Spring Sale," "Clearing Sale," and what not.

On April 1st we come into possession of our new premises, the Brown Building, 193-197 Yonge Street. Plans for remodelling the entire big store are ready, and contractors will enter upon their work without delay.

For forty-one years we have occupied the present warehouses, 115-117 King St. W., so this sale may be classed as a sale of a lifetime, and we intend that it shall be a sale of a lifetime—an opportunity never before presented the piano-buying public.

Over one thousand Pianos, Player-Pianos and Organs are offered for sale—prices cut deep in every case, for we entertain no thought of removing a stock of this size from King Street West to Yonge Street, above Queen Street. There is to be a real clearing.

Every piano bears a ticket showing regular price, and below it Removal Sale Price—a plain, straightforward way of conducting the sale.

Easy terms of payment may be arranged. If out-of-town, write for special list, mentioning The Sunday World.

HERBERT BOOTH ONCE MORE VISITS TORONTO

Former Salvation Army Commissioner Says He is Now the Property of All the Churches.

Herbert Booth, the youngest son of General Booth, is once more in Toronto. He arrived on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Booth has donned the field marshal's uniform, which he wore when in Toronto as commissioner of the Salvation Army, and wore a sombre grey suit of clerical cut. He is very quiet in manner and retains his gracious courtesy. He is here to conduct an evangelistic mission for a week at the Metropolitan Church, and to speak for the Canadian Temperance League to-day at their closing meeting at Massey Hall.

Mr. Booth said to The World: "I lived here for four years—that is, my home was then here, but I lived chiefly on the cars, somewhere between St. John's, Newfoundland, and Victoria, B. C. Two of my sons were born in this city, and I have often told audiences in all parts of the world that Toronto as I then knew it was the best governed city on the globe. I hope you have been living up to the reputation.

Finds Better Spirit. "So far on this visit I have only passed thru the eastern parts of Canada. The thing that chiefly impresses me is the change in the spirit of your citizens. The thought that was manifest when I left is changed to one of hopefulness everywhere. I am not at the moment attached to any organization. I am the property of all the churches—one of the Lord's free lances—kind of 'voles in the wilderness.' Doors are open to me anywhere in any denomination.

"I have thus far declined many tempting offers to keep free in this way. What I shall do, I cannot say. For the moment I take all my time to cope with the invitations I receive to conduct missions all over the world. "Of this I am convinced, that of all the callings none can compare with the advocacy of the gospel—elevation, education, socialization, legislation, emancipation—they can all do little without salvation and salvation is of the Lord."

At Mexico City, Jack Connell of Canada, former sporting partner of Stanley Ketchel, will fight a six-round battle with Sator Williams of England at Salina Cruz during the first week in April for the championship of Mexico.

Connell is now champion of Mexico, he having won that title last Sunday night by defeating Jim Smith, the negro, and by the further reason that Mitchell, the former champion, has left the country and refuses to meet the Canadian.

FLYING FLOOD IS SWEEPING ONWARD

Eruption of Mount Etna Continues to Terrorize Peasantry—Lava Covers Twenty-five Miles.

(Special Cable to Sunday World.) CATANIA, Sicily, March 26.—The eruptions from the side craters of Mount Etna continued to-day and the fiery river formed at the foot of Mount Castellanza moved slowly toward Borrolo and Belpasce, consuming everything in its path.

The lava's stream winding in and out over the uneven surface of the mountain base has covered probably 25 miles, the its head is not more than 10 miles from the sources in an air line. Throughout the night the summit of Mount Etna appeared to be ablaze, but to-day a cloud of black smoke enveloped the peak. Prolonged rumblings from the central crater and frequent explosions from the side fissures served as effectually as the flood itself to hold in terror the populace for miles around.

Magnificent Spectacle. An early morning visit into the threatened region afforded a spectacle magnificent beyond description, which could be thoroughly enjoyed by the hundreds of sightseers flocking there but for the other side of the picture. The terror and real distress of the peasants in the vicinity is depressing. A panic has seized them, and they cling to their little homes until the flood was almost upon them, they have now abandoned all but their portable possessions. Driving before them their donkeys and pigs, the former loaded with household goods, they are wandering about with the single aim of preserving what little has been left to them.

On the hill tops little groups of men, women and children could be seen looking back sadly to the sites of their former homes, now covered with lava to a height of perhaps 15 feet. Others, whose homes had not been overtaken, clasped their crucifixes, images of the Madonna and the saints, and with the characteristic cries and prayers implored that their little huts be spared. Meantime the molten mass crawled irresistibly forward, and the determined that nothing should escape it.

The deafening detonations accompanied by earthquake shocks give the impression of an angry monster struggling to lose its bonds. At times a storm of cinders obscured the volcano, and then suddenly a shift of the wind forced back the cloud and the sun, bursting the, smiled down upon the most fertile country in the world.

Snow on the Summit. The summit of Mount Etna appears to be still covered with snow. The people of the district have been wrought up to a high pitch of excitement and are ready for miracles, and at the same time declaring that the evil eye is upon them. At a little roadside altar erected to Saint Joseph, at a point above Nicolosi, the priests and children had gathered to implore mercy. As they knelt they saw in the distance the destructive flood advancing. It drew near, and the agitation among the group increased until one exclaimed, "A miracle has occurred. The lava will not touch the sanctuary." The cry was taken up by the others, and then the chanting of the melancholy Sicilian hymns was renewed.

Near came the lava, but when its heat had nearly suffocated the praying ones the stream diverged. With cries of joy, at what appeared to be a miraculous manifestation, the worshippers sprang to their feet. A moment later the course of the flood again changed, and sweeping down upon the worshippers, permitted them a bare time to flee for their lives, while it engulfed and burned the sanctuary.

MINE WORKERS TO MEET OPERATORS HALF WAY

Will Open Independent Negotiations With Employers—Vote Almost Unanimous.

CINCINNATI, O., March 26.—Influenced by the pleadings of Peter L. Lewis, the international committee of the United Mine Workers of America today advocated the action taken at the recent Indianapolis convention and instructed its representatives on the joint scale committee to negotiate with Indiana and Pennsylvania operators separately for a fresh wage contract to go into effect April 1.

The action is regarded as almost revolutionary by certain factions in the union, these men declaring that it means the dissolution of the central competitive field joint conference as an organization, and the substitution of state and district policies for national and concerted action.

Micro-president McCullough declared that some Ohio operators were willing to grant an advance. "I've seen the written documents authorizing their representatives to give the advance," he declared. "It would be suicidal for us to refuse to negotiate with Indiana and Pennsylvania."

SIX-YEAR-OLD PRINCE RAN AWAY TO BE SAILOR

Wanted to Emulate His Famous Ancestor, Peter the Great.

(Special Cable to Sunday World.) ST. PETERSBURG, March 26.—The six-year-old heir to the throne of all the Russias, is being closely watched to-day to prevent him running away again.

The czarwitsch was lured by the sea. He had determined to become a sailor. Young Alexis disappeared from Tzarsook-Selo, where the Imperial court is. The palace and park were searched thoroughly, but no trace of him was found. Then there was great consternation. The czar was in despair; the czarina, from whom the news could not be kept, was distracted.

Everybody feared that nihilists had kidnapped the imperial youngster. After several hours of frightful suspense the soldiers who had been despatched to scour the country, brought back the czarwitsch, accompanied by a lady who had met the child walking along the road two or three miles from the palace.

The czarwitsch asked her the way to St. Petersburg. Recognizing him, she offered to take him there; instead she led him toward the palace. The little fellow was in high spirits. "They'll never catch me now," he said gleefully, "so I'll be a sailor like my great-great-great-papa, Peter the Great, whom they all tell me about."

The empress gave a beautiful bracelet to the lady who brought him back.

The Derby candidate, Galant Pirate, J. R. Wainwright's entry in the big race, is extremely high in flesh, and it will take much work to get him ready.

PARKDALE RINK

No Better Evidence of Its Great Popularity Than the Enormous Crowds Good Friday.

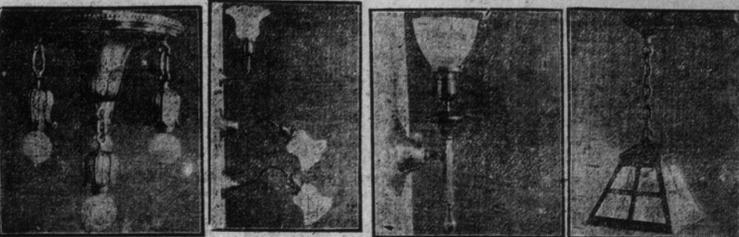

A favorite with particular people is the Parkdale Roller Rink. This beautiful skating academy, considered the finest in Canada, did an exceedingly big business on the holidays, in fact, Good Friday was one of the biggest days the rink has ever known. The management announces the attractions for the week are: On Tuesday evening, March 23, a skating contest for ladies and gentlemen, skating in couples; and on Thursday evening, March 25, a popular Parkdale block party will be given.

The rights of labor unions are in jeopardy, according to a warning which has been sent out to all affiliated organizations by the executive of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. The circular is signed by the president, vice-president and secretary, and refers to what it terms "Senator Belcourt's attack," which is made thru the introduction of a bill in the federal government to amend a section of the criminal code. If such bill were passed it would practically mean the disruption of every trade union in Canada, says the circular.

Copies of the circular were received by various union business agents Saturday, with the timely warning that if any representation is to be made to the government on behalf of organized labor, quick action should be taken, as the second reading of the bill will be taken on April 7th next.

Wicked Attack. "The most wicked attack on trade unions yet made in Canada," says the circular, "has come from Senator Belcourt, who, by a bill introduced in the senate, and read a first time on March 17, 1910, proposes to place trade unions in the category of illegal associations.

By section 496 of the criminal code, a conspiracy in restraint of trade is defined as an agreement between two or more persons to do or procure to be done, any unlawful act in restraint of trade.

Such section would apply to trade unions, but the saving section, No. 497, protects them from the provisions of clause 496. It reads: "The purposes of a trade union are not, by reason merely that they are in restraint of trade, unlawful within the meaning of section 496."

Would Disrupt Unions. The proposal of Senator Belcourt's bill is to amend the saving section by adding after the word "union" the words "whose members are British subjects." It is quite apparent, therefore, that such amendment would mean the instant disruption of every trade union in Canada.

"You might have members in your organizations who have lived here for 50 years and are citizens in every sense of the word," states the circular, "but because there are not naturalized, Senator Belcourt would make criminals out of them."

"If it wasn't for the fact that the heads of industries bring in foreigners during the time of strikes," said Business Agent Watt of the Journeymen Tailors, "there would not be foreigners in the unions."

A second section to Senator Belcourt's bill amends, in a similar way, the section of the code dealing with agreements, namely, to unduly limit facilities for transporting, manufacturing, supplying, storing or dealing in any article of trade or commerce, etc. This would cover a strike or agreement on a railroad, mine or elsewhere.

At Los Angeles, Sam Langford denied to-day that he would break his Philadelphia engagement to fight Stanley Ketchel in San Francisco next month. "I am going to fight Ketchel six rounds in Philadelphia on April 27," was Langford's statement. He has signed no articles calling for a fight in San Francisco.

Miller Bill May Get Six Months' Hoist

Friends of the Thoroughbred Will Have Full Facts Placed Before Parliament—Interesting Budget of News From the Winter Tracks—Trotting Horse Futurities.

The Canadian racing situation is both novel and complex. The Miller bill is, of course, the dominating factor. A peculiar picture is presented of the big jockey clubs on the verge of sliding down after Canada's first half-century of the premier British outdoor sport. On the other hand, the spectacle is witnessed of the members of the Dominion Parliament being called upon in the closing hours of a projected session to deal a mortal blow to the thoroughbred industry.

There are several reasons why horsemen should keep cool. The Miller bill in no sense a government measure, as tremendous organized agitation by the promoters of the Miller bill has not stymied the government. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, himself distinctly opposed to the measure, and has not uttered a word in its behalf. It is not a question of the measure, and has not actually begun, and the outcome of the debate in the commons is absolutely uncertain. The friends of the thoroughbred have a good fighting chance of success to wind up the session of a very marked character.

The Miller bill will, of course, in accordance with the announcement made by the government be up for a full discussion. When that has been held, the pledge of the government will have been completely fulfilled.

There is no indication that the bill will be treated in any sense as a party measure. The probability is that the government will be quite willing giving the bill the six months' hoist when the division bell calls in the members.

VISIT TO THE WOODBINE.

Inspection of R. J. Mackenzie's String of Juveniles—Interesting Quarter of Filled.

R. J. Mackenzie's string of juveniles at the Woodbine are in the pink of condition, while quite willing to give the Woodbine a serious winter health resort for horses. He has not had to spend a five-cent piece on medicine since his charges arrived last fall. The four-year-old ch. c. Bursar could not be in better health. They take their daily gallop, and will be breezed if the track is available in about a week. So far, some of them have been given more work at the Woodbine late last fall.

Bursar has developed a very strong will of his own, and makes a stiff fight every time he is taken to the track to get back to his cosy stall in row O. When he is broken of this habit, his trainer looks for some good work from this son of Imp. Esserlaw-Burdette. He has the blood and conformation of a good prospect. The four fillies are a nice-mannered quartet, except that the ch. f. Deering-Gretchen B. in a fit of restlessness a few nights ago, kicked her blanket off and made a mad dash across the sides of her stall. Her half-sister, the b. f. Deering-Cleaver, is a timid little white star, but when boxed up alone until an opening in the stable-partition so that she could have the championship of her chestnut relative.

The ch. f. L'Eau d'Or, by Imp. Altes d'Or—Logan Water, will not be ready for early racing. She looks unwieldy for her height, but a few months may work wonders, and Mr. Mackenzie's wisdom in placing this youngster in his string may be justified.

Miss Martimas, b. f., 2 years, by Martimas-Butterscotch, is the pet of the stable. A white star on her forehead and two white socks distinguish her. Her manners are perfect, and she is built for speed, and when out for exercise is eager to be allowed to run.

Should the regular Woodbine meeting be held, Mr. Mackenzie will bring Jockey Tapin and this string of horses from California. Those who have seen Jockey Tapin, out of White Frost; Elin Beau, b. h., 3 years, Philanglo, out of Picture Hat; Michael Angelo, ch. h., 4 years, by Imp. Ormus, out of May Angelo; Desperado, b. h., 4 years, by Imp. Loyalist, out of Amey; May Angelo, out of Tehoupetoula; Laurier, b. c., 2 years, by Ormsl, out of Plumiera; Kerry Gow, b. c., 2 years, by Gary Herrmann, out of Bonaria; b. c., 2 years, by Handspring, out of Pond Lily; ch. f., 2 years, by Blues, out of Penitence 2nd; Direct, ch. h., by Don de Oro, out of Froken.

The General Armstrong, b. g., 3 years, Ben Storme, out of Privateer, is out of training, having broken down.

VALLEY FARM HORSES IN TRAINING.

In the letter to the instruction, Trainer John Nixon wrote that the Windsor track is in such fine shape that a good horse could even now easily do a 140 mile on The Valley Farm horses are ripe for training. They include Glimmer, 6 years; Charlie Gilbert, 6 years; Shimonese, 5 years; William Pitt, 3 years; Lady Sybil, 3 years; English Esther, 3 years; Denham, 6 years; Noble, 3 years; Last Port, 3 years; Waup, 2 years; Farmer, 3 years; Commodore, 3 years; Legislator, 2 years; Rush Water, 2 years; Valley Maid, 2 years; Nobility, 2 years; Placer Lad, 2 years; Powerman, 2 years; Ranger, 2 years; George Hendrie's, ch. c., 2 years, by Monsieur Beaucaire—Noblesse; ch. c., 2 years, Monsieur Beaucaire—Whitling Girl; Cumberland, 4 years.

J. Charles has just sent half a dozen horses, including two purchases at the Livingston sale, down to the Woodbine. They will have a try-out as soon as their condition is sufficiently advanced.

Nat Ray has his jumpers out cantering every day.

Trainer D. Harrison has the Ben Brush-Nisbat three-year-old Hickory Stick, well advanced, and he will likely open the season down at Pimlico, where the sort going will be to his liking. Hickory Stick is owned by A. W. Bryan. Trainer Harrison is also well satisfied with the way T. Smith's Lady Etta has wintered. The Allan-Dale filly had some good work on the track last season, and was the money twice out of her ten starts. Mr. Harrison has his charges comfortably quartered in the brick stable near Small's Pond.

Sir Montagu Allan's fine chestnut colt Come-On has made a great improvement since last season, and is free action while being galloped around the Woodbine track, under Trainer C. Wise's eye. The track is rather heavier than last week, owing to the soft weather bringing up the frost out of the ground.

MONCREEF PARK.

Jacksonville Meeting Extended Until April Sixteenth—Powers has a Mishap.

The race meeting at Moncreif Park, Jacksonville is receiving such encouraging support that the closing date has been extended until April 16.

Vincent Powers had an exciting time when riding the favorite Sou, when his mount bolted against the inner rail and all but unseated her rider. Powers managed to snatch her up and when he dismounted it was found that Sou had an ugly gash on the shoulder where she came in contact with the rail.

Canadians will have a direct interest in the new American Derby, to be run for the first time on Saturday, April 2, owing to Irving H. Wheatcroft having his entrant, Alfred the Great in fine shape for the event. He thinks so well of his colt's chances that he is staying at Jacksonville to personally superintend his preparation and to witness the race. The proprietor of the St. James Stable may have his big surprise in store in Alfred the Great as his horse, Green Seal, gave in winning the rich Florida Special on Saturday last. Those who saw Alfred the Great on the Canadian tracks last fall expect him to achieve an enviable three-year-old record.

NEW YORK PROSPECTS.

All the Leading Stables Represented in the Opening Handicap.

Thirty eastern tracks have already been nominated for the Carter Handicap, the opening feature of the New York season. It will be run at Aqueduct on April 15. Weights will be announced April 1.

RUSHING TO NORFOLK.

Jamestown Track to Be the Future Opener of the Northern Running Season.

Owing to the number of applications for stalls at Jamestown, Secretary Gerhardt has arranged with the Country Club, a nearby neighbor, to house the overflow in their stable. According to all indications the time is not far distant when Norfolk will open and close the eastern racing season, as Benning was wont to do. This historic city will present an opportunity to horsemen to sit their charges for the Metropolitan tracks.

With such horsemen represented as R. F. Carman, John Schorr, Samuel Ross, C. C. Smithson, James McLaughlin, R. H. M. McKenzle, John Madden, P. S. P. Randolph, Barney Schreiber, David Dunlop, William Parish, Carter Hall, T. Temple, M. Burton, the Chelsea Stable, W. S. Defenderfer, Frank Gardner, William and John Shields, William Garth and Green D. Morris the class of horses competing will be higher than were those at previous meetings.

It depends upon the weights as to whether or not C. L. Harrison will start Waldo in the Camen Handicap at the Lexington meeting. This event is virtually a preliminary to the Kentucky Derby, which will be decided on May 10 at Churchill Downs.

"I have a colt in training Bob that in ordinary years could win a Kentucky Derby," says George Reif, "but the way horsemen talk about Waldo I figure that I have little chance. I have an honest game colt that will surely go a mile and a quarter. If Waldo runs up to present expectations the Kentucky Derby of 1910 is as good as over, as neither Fighting Bob nor any other entrant in the race is the sort of a horse Waldo is claimed to be.

MONDAY NEXT A Carload of Bush Horses

From the De La Plante Lumber Company, Limited, Tomiko, Ontario.

Navigation Will Open When Staunch Steamer Macassa Reaches Port Tomorrow

Waterfront Is New One of Busiest Sections of City—Fitting Out Fleet of Freight Carriers and Passenger Steamers.

When the steamer Macassa of the Hamilton steamship line crosses from Hamilton to Toronto tomorrow, the 1510 navigation season on the lakes may be said to have fairly opened. The marine insurance period does not commence until the middle of April and the majority of the lake and river fleets will not go to commission until that time, but there will be something doing from now on along Toronto's waterfront. The Toronto Ferry Company are already making a noise. The first of July with a 20 minute service to Hanlan's point and the Island Park. This service was commenced on Good Friday with the steamers Primrose and Ada Alice, Island Queen and John Hanlan churning the waters of the bay.

A Dock Lounger.
A World reporter sauntered along about a mile of the waterfront yesterday, and found conditions quite summerlike. An old man, apparently overcome by the sultry air, was reclining on the wharf and thinking—thinking no doubt of the many long summer days and nights in store for him away from the busy, dusty streets. The picture struck the newspaper man as constituting proof absolute that summer had come, and he approached with his camera, but the old fellow rose up and threatened to kick both the camera man and his box into the harbor.

Shipbuilding Active.
All along the waterfront an air of remarkable activity reigns, the chief fields of exertion being boat repairing and cleaning, wharf repairing and shipbuilding. Extensive improvements are now being carried out at the Niagara Navigation wharves, the Nichollet and Ontario Navigation wharf, the Hamilton Steamship Company's new wharf and others. A large gang of men are remodeling and practically rebuilding the old Geddes dock, which is now held under a lease of five years by the Hamilton Steamship Company for the docking of the Macassa and Mod-

Jacka. New warehouses and platforms are being constructed on the dock.

Argyle Moves.
The steamer Argyle, which docked at the Geddes wharf last year, will find berthing room at the Sommerville wharf just west of the Toronto Ferry docks when she commences operations in May. A new boat worth $150,000 has been ordered in the old country by the Argyle Steamship Company and will be ready for commission about the middle of June. Captain Mueller of the Argyle Steamship Company has gone to the old country to bring the new boat over, and when she arrives she will be placed on the Toronto-Ottawa Beach run. The Argyle during the 1910 season will cover what is known as the north shore run, plying between Toronto and Cobourg and way points. The Garden City and Lakeside will renew operations between Toronto and Port Dalhousie. The first trip will be made by the Garden City on April 11. There has been some talk of the company putting on a new boat this season, but the Toronto offices have not yet been advised as to what will be done in this respect.

The Garden City and Lakeside will dock at the foot of Yonge-street as last year, while the space on the west side of the slip will be occupied by Clarke Bros.' fleet of small island freight boats.

equipped with twin screw engines of the four-cylinder, triple expansion type, and of 900 h.p. The boiler will be 14 ft. 8 in. in diameter and will stand 165 lbs. pressure. Excellent passenger accommodation will be provided, consisting of 46 cabins all lighted from the outside, and containing two berths each. Entrances and observation platforms, etc., will be furnished in red oak and the cabins in cypress with decorated panels. When completed the steamer will stand the R. & O. Company about $150,000. All the steel and wooden work is being handled by the Toronto Ship Yards while the John Inglis Company is building the boilers and engines. She will have a speed of 16 miles per hour.

Craft for Winnipeg.
The company is also constructing a 70 ft. tug for the Arctic Ice Company of Winnipeg, which will be finished about the middle of next month. It will be shipped west in knocked-down condition. The tug will be equipped with twin screw, compound engines made by the Doty Engine Works of Goderich.

More Room Wanted.
Over at the Polson Iron Works a similar tale of activity is heard. There may also be heard some outspoken criticisms from Manager Main regarding the city's treatment of his application for more room. With a growing business Mr. Main naturally wants more space. He wants to expand westward from his present plant, onto property which his company actually owns, but is prevented by some mysterious impediment understandable only by the lawyers. He also wants to build shipways on the Ashbridge's Bay property, but that scheme is also being delayed by the city of course. In the meantime the Polsons are struggling along in their present cramped quarters, building a 30 ft. steamer for the C.P.R. Arrow Lake service; a tug for the Dominion Government to be used on the Rideau Canal, a fancy yacht for Mr. Kuhn of Philadelphia to be used on Muskoka Lake, a suction dredge for the Great Lakes Dredging Company of Port Arthur, a new ferry for the Toronto Ferry Company which will be the same size and design as the Blue Bell, a dipper dredge for the Montreal Harbor Commissioners, and sundry other craft.

The Polson Company is making about $35,000 worth of repairs to the steamer Japan, which will be re-chartered to the City of Hamilton and will be operated by the Merchants' Line between Montreal and Chicago as a sister ship to the City of Ottawa and the City of Montreal.

LET THE BOYS PLAY

Joe Lally Believes in Junior Development.
"Joe" Lally of Cornwall, one of the foremost lacrosse enthusiasts in Canada, and an all-around sport and gentleman, was in the city this week in connection with the Canadian Lacrosse Association convention. "Lacrosse is the greatest game in the world," said Mr. Lally, "for the development of young manhood. No exercise that I can conceive of will give greater physical benefit and strength of character than lacrosse as played by a team of youngsters 10 or 12 years of age. Lacrosse as a national game has a greater part to play among young boys than it has even among the more mature, although the older and faster teams must always be the standard to which the young men will aspire as the highest expression of skill in the game. Just now the missionary field of lacrosse is among the boys and we hope to see it encouraged in such a way that it will become widely popular among Canadian boys of 10 to 12 years of age."

At the Plaza.
Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, accompanied by Major Trotter, was in New York, stopping at the Plaza Hotel, on a pleasure trip, and returned to Ottawa on Friday. While at The Plaza a great many newspaper men called to see his excellency, but he could not be seen, stating that he was not over here on business.

Earl and Countess Lansborough and Lady Irene Butler are enjoying a fortnight's visit at The Plaza.
Mr. W. B. Baker, assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Mrs. Baker, are also at The Plaza.
Mr. and Mrs. E. H. LeMay, and daughter of Montreal are expected today.

Miss Roman, Crawford-street, will not receive this week or again this season.

Stuck.
Toledo Blade: "Here, you write carefully on that machine," grumbled the president of the Banco Trust. "You've spelled 'stockholders' with a 'u' in place of the first 'o'."
"Comes closer," murmured the stenographer.

CRIME TO HAVE A COLD

Radical Opinion Advanced by Government Chemist.
ITHACA, N.Y., March 25.—"It is a crime to have a cold." This was the statement by W. H. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, in a lecture to Cornell students to-day.
"It is a crime for a child to have a cold. Since children may not be old enough to know better, I am not going to say whose crime it is. A man once came to me whose children all had colds and wanted a cough medicine which did not contain alcohol. I told him I could not tell him of a remedy that did not contain alcohol; that to go home and put the windows of their sleeping rooms wide open."
"People do not have colds at the north pole. Lieutenant Shackleton did not have a cold on his trip across the south pole. But when they get back to civilization they do have colds. One would never have a cold if he did not breathe foul air."

TO DIE AT 62.

Old Man Gets Death Sentence After Reconstruction of Murder Scene.
Sentence of death was passed by Justice Grantham at Monmouth assizes last night on William Butler, aged 62 years, for the murder of Charles and Mary Thomas, an aged couple, at Bassaleg, near Newport, on the night of Nov. 11. The couple were murdered in their bed with a hammer, counsel suggested.
Amid breathless attention Rudd Thompson, county analyst, by means of the actual window from the cottage of the victims, showed how a nail in the coat worn by the murderer might have been caused in breaking the window in order to effect an entrance. Mr. Thompson, wearing the coat, struck at the imaginary head of a victim in order to show how bloodstains came to be on the coat. He tried in what position it was possible to strike a blow at a point where the head of the murdered man was supposed to be, and using a policeman's staff as a weapon, raised his right arm in such a manner as to account for the bloodstains on the underside of the sleeve.
The only unconcerned person in court during Mr. Thompson's evidence was the prisoner, who yawned as if bored.
It was twenty minutes to 9 before the judge began to sum up. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, and when sentence was passed Butler fought violently with the warders in the dock.

An Amphibious Machine.
Pittsburg Dispatch: The French war office has recently acquired an amphibious machine which is capable of being changed instantly from a land to a water machine. It has a speed of 40 kilometres on land and 12 kilometres in the water. It can carry four persons and is actuated by a 14 horse power motor.

BARRING THE NEGRO
How State of Maryland is Dealing With Problem.
ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 25.—Late to-night, in a caucus of the Democratic members of the legislature looking to the disfranchisement of the negroes of this state, it was decided to adopt the Digges plan. This is based on the fact that the State of Maryland has never ratified the 15th amendment to the federal constitution, which gave the negroes the right to vote. It provides that as the constitution of the state gives the ballot to white men only, negroes may be refused registration.
It is not intended under this plan to attempt to prevent negroes voting at congressional or presidential elections, the restriction applying only to state and municipal elections.

ENGLISH JUDGES
Are Generally Less Impartial, It is Said, in Their Charges to the Jury.
"The judges in England are more outspoken in their comments, regulate trials more arbitrarily, and make less pretence of being colorless and impartial in their charges of instruction to the jury," said George E. Lewis, a barrister of London, yesterday, discussing English law procedure.
"They diminish the responsibilities of justice when there are conflicts of evidence and witnesses are either to be believed or discredited. So vigilant and laborious are they in the direction of cases that juries can be selected with less critical examination of the material on the panel than is required in America. Trial by judge with the assistance of a plainly instructed jury has manifestly its advantages. It also has serious risks. The judge is fallible, and, from force of habit, assumes that whoever is charged by the police with a criminal offence is more likely to be guilty than innocent."
"English critics of American law practice are constrained to admit that there are so many miscarriages of justice in their own courts and such pronounced delays in liberating the victims of perjury that facilities for criminal appeal are urgently required. That is left to enterprising newspapers and generous novelists with highly developed detective talents. It is true that disagreements in murder cases occur less frequently in England than in America; and this may be due to the more direct intervention of the bench in instructing what is known as the average jury selected from a single panel in the course of a few hours—Washington Herald.

Does Platonic Love Pay? The Answer in This Tragedy is "No!"

MRS. BYRON L. SAYLER.

DR. WILLIAM R. MILLER.

Lesson for Human Men and Women in Trial for Murder of Dr. Miller and Mrs. Sayler, Now in Progress - Lax Domestic Relations and a Husband in the Background Led to Death, Broken Homes, Misery.

WATSEKA, Ill., March 26.—There was only a platonic affection between Dr. Miller and Mrs. Sayler. It is a wicked lie to say that such a friendship between man and woman is impossible. Dr. Miller, as the friend of my husband, took me out fishing, hunting and fishing. My husband often urged me to go and frequently went with us, as did Dr. Miller's wife, sometimes, says Banker Sayler's widow, in her dismal jail in the Watska jail.

MISS GOLDA SAYLER, Daughter of woman on trial.

but it had its "best society." In it moved the banker of the town, Byron L. Sayler, and his wife, Dr. Wm. R. Miller was the most prominent physician of Crescent City, tall and handsome and married. He was a social lion.

Having forbidden Dr. Miller's coming to his home, "By" Sayler, as he was popularly called, was surprised to find him there when he unexpectedly crossed his own threshold that July night. He became livid with anger and crazed for revenge. There were loud arguments, and harsh words; the banker threatened the man whom he claimed had ruined his home; and he was shot. "Shot four times by Dr. Miller," says the state's attorney.

In Crescent City, this county, are two homes broken forever. A husband done to death. A wife and a husband on trial for their lives. An innocent girl who must listen to the details regarding the murder of her father's friend.

That Mrs. Sayler had ceased to love her husband, that the affection she once had for him had been transferred to Dr. Miller, the man whom the husband had often entertained as a guest and had treated as a friend.

"I can't believe they think of hanging me," says Mrs. Sayler in her cell. "I am not guilty. But those biases! Why, they have many of whom I have helped when they were in distress and want; acquaintances who have dined at my table; friends whom I have always welcomed at my home with open arms, and now—oh! they treat me as if I were a cowardly pack of starving wolves."

CAUGHT, HE ENDS LIFE

Had Made Counterfeit United States and Canadian Coins. PORT HURON, Mich., March 26.—Following his capture and subsequent arrest as a counterfeit, Frank Mills, former engineer at the city waterworks here, fled himself tonight by taking cyanide of potassium. United States secret service men have been in Port Huron for some time attempting to discover the source of a large number of United States and Canadian counterfeit coins. Late this afternoon they searched Mills' house, where it is said moulds and a number of finished and unfinished coins were found hidden in the basement.

Burned to Death.

QUEBEC, March 26.—(Special).—A woman named Groux, residing at Montmorency Falls, was burned to death this morning. It is stated that she committed suicide by pouring a gallon of kerosene oil and setting fire to herself.

MANY UNION MEN HAVE RETURNED TO WORK

General Sympathetic Strike in Philadelphia Thing of the Past. PHILADELPHIA, March 26.—The general sympathetic strike in this city is a thing of the past. The various unions which quit work out of sympathy to the striking carmen are preparing to return to work on Monday. A meeting of the Central Labor Union will be held to-morrow at which the sympathetic strike will be formally called off. Many union workers have anticipated this action and have already returned to work.

BOSTON'S SCHOOL FOR WIVES

A "school of matrimony," having for its object the inculcation of "the prime essentials of wedded happiness," has been instituted in Boston. To teach a Boston girl how to be a happy wife seems like attempting to paint a lily, and there is reason to suspect that the academy in question is a form of the educational philanthropy for which the Hub is noted.

TEMPLE OF ZEUS, OLYMPIUS.

The great Temple of Zeus Olympius, at Olympia, Greece, was 354 feet long and 171 wide. The columns of this famous shrine were 90 feet in height, and 4 1/2 feet in diameter, and are the largest which now remain of ancient architecture in marble. Sixteen of the wonderful columns are still standing and are among the most imposing in the world.

Board of Control Principle Has Worked Well in Toronto

While it would be mistaken enthusiasm to assert that an effort to improve upon Toronto's form of civic government would be equivalent to trying to paint the lily, it must be admitted that the administrative machinery in use in this city for the past six years has some apparent virtues.

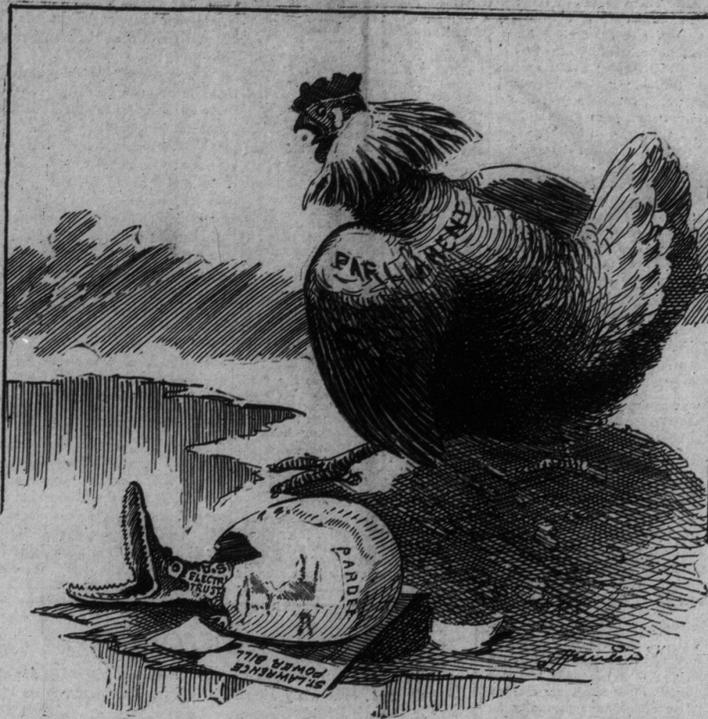

If the method of having an elective board of control, to supervise the work of a city council is not a progressive step, then certain other municipalities which have investigated Toronto's system, pronounced it good and become copyists, have suffered from acute myopia, Montreal and Hamilton among them.

They have, however, no reason to be alarmed about the outcome of their experiment. Whatever shortcomings such a system may have, it has proven in Toronto's case decidedly superior to the old order of things when the aldermen got together and apportioned several of their number to positions on a so-called board in the process of distributing the other plums of office. The emolument was small but it was considerably larger than the public usefulness of such a body.

The true function of a board of control as now constituted is to separate the good from the bad, the wise from the otherwise, in the mass of ideas which aldermen air at committee meetings. The board is as the hopper in relation to the golden grain, or, as the householder might prefer the simile, like the sifter to the ash heap. The controllers being paid $2500 a year for their services are presumed to be able to afford more time to give sound and sane judgment to civic problems than are the aldermen who can live in little pomp and splendor on the modest $300 they receive and are shrewdly suspected to direct their best energies along private lines.

It is true that the board of control's valuation of the worth of this and that plan for floating bond issues or improving the monkey cage at the Zoo is not always accepted as just and equitable. The originator may be, and often is, aggrieved that a pet scheme should be thrown into the discard, but it is comparatively seldom that he can muster a sufficient number of his colleagues to administer an effective reproof to the board. The reason probably is that each alderman with a recollection of personal discomfiture, has a natural, human satisfaction in seeing his fellows similarly treated. Of course, if the aldermen combined, they could overthrow the cabinet

Some Improvements in Conditions in The States.

President Taft has been, and is, the subject of much criticism these days and there has been a very considerable questioning of the confidence that was reposed in him in the presidential election. Mr. Taft was selected by Colonel Roosevelt as his successor for the express purpose of carrying out the Roosevelt policies. So far little progress therein has been made; the Republicans in the west who believed in Roosevelt are now doubting his successor. Mr. Taft promised if elected to "revise the tariff downwards," to use his own words; but in the special session called immediately after his inauguration for this very purpose the net result was that Speaker Cannon, in the House of Representatives, and Senator Aldrich, in the Senate were clever and influential enough to upset the president's wishes and the people's expectations.

This tariff revision has been an absolute disappointment. It rather increased the duties and it has been the source of what may be a misunderstanding with Canada.

There are many men in the United States who make the charge that Mr. Taft is altogether too friendly and too much under the influence of Cannon and Aldrich; and one proof is that the president has taken occasion of late to make speeches in defence of both of these two Republican leaders at Washington. The first result is that "the insurgent movement" started at Washington to depose Cannon has succeeded, very much to the surprise of the whole nation. In fact there were so many Republican members who had found out from their constituents that it would be useless for them to come back this fall for re-election if their record in congress was that of a "Cannon man." Indeed this was so pronounced that scores of Republican congressmen had to turn into "insurgents" and join with the Democrats to beat Cannon to save their own seats. Hardly anyone outside can imagine how intense this feeling is in the west against the czar record of Cannon and this suspicion of Taft; and one of the big magazines has recently declared that the same feeling is growing up in the east.

Now what is true of Cannon is doubly true of Aldrich in the Senate; only Aldrich is much better entrenched than was Cannon. Aldrich for years has been the leader of the Senate and the man of most influence in the Republican party. He is the champion of all the trusts, of all the interests, of all the railroads, and in all likelihood, too, he has been the negotiator of the enormous contributions to Republican election funds that came from the predatory few. It is hard, however, to bring public opinion to bear upon the Senate as the election of the Senators comes thru the state legislatures; but we have no doubt that a dead set will be made at Aldrich, after the overthrow of Cannon; and the president will soon be called upon to declare where he is in regard to the leadership of Aldrich; or put it in another way, Taft himself will have no chance of re-election if he has not before that time got rid of Aldrich.

Much on the same lines is the effort of Senator Root and Governor Hughes to get rid of the Republican bosses in New York State. They have been proven corrupt, in the service of the corporations, and the rank and file and public opinion is saying that they must step down and out. New York as a city has also deposed Tammany from the city hall in a most surprising way.

Another significant thing is the distribution of the Rockefeller millions at this time. Mr. Rockefeller sees he cannot take the money with him, he sees the coming social storm, and he is making a noble effort at both restitution and a state-off. Even the newspaper press of the United States will have to turn more or less honest in view of the new movement. The betrayal of the public by their professed newspaper champions has been the most significant force in the demoralization of the United States. The same thing is happening in Canada. The corporations are getting hold of the papers here—they have them in the States.

Also significant: Mr. Justice Grosscup of the United States Court, who made the decision against the Standard Oil Co., has published an article in The North American Review, dealing with the trusts. In substance he says there will be social disorder of a surprising character in less than five years if a way is not found to regulate them. He says these trusts must be allowed to consolidate; that when this has been done there must be a fair valuation of them made under federal law; all their operations to be subject to inspection of such federal power; that a reasonable dividend be allowed on the amount ascertained to be invested; and all money over that to go to the United States treasury; but rather than allow this to go to the treasury the trusts will be forced to reduce their prices and profits to the amount allowed by law and nothing more. He says such a proposition is far in advance of anything proposed now by Mr. Taft. He further says that if this is done he is confident that in ten years or less the consolidation of the ownership of these great interests in a few hands will be removed and that the property will be owned by smaller investors and cheaper goods prevail.

From these things above set out, namely, the insurgent movement in the Republican party, and the necessity there appears to be of regulating the corporations, there is some hope of an improvement in the political and economic situation in the United States. Where Roosevelt will come in on this new situation remains to be seen after his return, but that he intends to play some part in it is quite evident.

Car Ventilation

The street railway company should give occasional lectures to its conductors on the best methods of ventilating street cars, and the company itself might devote more attention to keeping its cars clean and free from dust. Many of the colds from which people of Toronto are suffering at the present time have been contracted thru the conductors showing no consideration for the passengers. The rear doors are thrown open and draughts sweep thru the cars. When the brakes are applied, clouds of dust follow in the way of the cars and fill the air with germ-laden clouds as the car comes to a stop. Governor Hadley of Missouri has purchased a farm and announces his intention to raise chickens. The Missouri executive should take care lest he expose himself to the charge of inept plutocracy. — New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Blue Law Sundays

We think the time has arrived when Sir Wilfrid Laurier and members of his government may take a more reasonable view of what the people of this province may be expected to tolerate in connection with the operation of the Sunday laws.

We will back the government, the Lord's Day Alliance or any other organization in any effort that calls for one day's rest in seven for working men of any class. Society is organized in such a way that it is impossible that every man can be free on the Sabbath day. Street car conductors and motormen, firemen, restaurant and hotel employees, railway and police employees; all are subject to work on the Sabbath. But an adjustment can be made legally by which every man will receive 24 hours' rest each week. To this extent the work of moral reformers deserves support. But, when they begin to interfere with the liberties of individuals in trivial matters affecting their convenience or comfort, the line should be drawn.

There is no reason why hotel clerks, who are obliged to be on duty Sunday, should not be in a position to supply their patrons with newspapers or magazines which will enable the guests to spend a quiet Sunday and forget, for a time at least, the monotony of their surroundings.

There is no reason why, in the severely hot days in the summer, that restaurants, which must be open to care for their patrons, should not also be in a position to serve cooling drinks and ices which would make the day what it was intended to be—a day of rest and relaxation.

There is no reason why a guest at one of the large hotels should not be able to receive his New York, Detroit, Cleveland or Buffalo papers on Sunday.

There is no reason why any individual should be interfered with in the slightest degree where his personal actions are harmless and do not cause suffering, loss or inconvenience to his neighbor.

The people of Ontario, except a few extremists and agitators, want a quiet Sunday, but a rational and sensible Sunday. The average citizen of Ontario does not care to make as much noise as men largely responsible for the blue laws of this province. But he is thinking hard, and will give the government his best support for any measure that will result in a change.

Deserved It

Poetry that Lives

Now fades the last long streak of snow.

Now burgeons every maze of quick About the flowering squares, and thick

By ashen roots the violets blow.

Now rings the woodland loud and long. The distance takes a lovelier hue, And drown'd in yonder living blue The lark becomes a sightless song.

Now dance the lights on lawn and lea, The flocks are whiter down the vale, And milkier every milky sail On winding stream or distant sea;

Where now the seamew pipes, or dives In yonder greening gleam, and fly The happy birds, that change their sky

To build and brood, that live their lives

From land to land; and in my breast Spring wakens too, and my regret Becomes an April violet, And buds and blossoms like the rest.

—Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

Achievement

This is not an advertisement. The Sunday World extends sincere congratulations to the Canada Foundry Company on its rapid erection of the steel frame work of the new Standard Bank on West King-street.

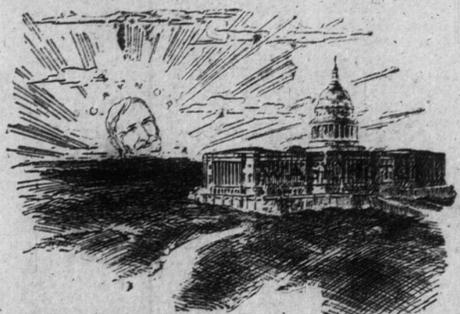

Fourteen days from sidewalk to roof is one of the most impressive accomplishments in the history of Canadian building. It is a credit to Canadian industry, and the spirit which prompted this great enterprise to raise one hundred feet of structural steel into the air is an augury of what will be accomplished in Canada when twenty or forty million people are here.

The spirit of achievement runs thru the blood of the Canadian people, and this instance is but one of many equally notable in an era of transcontinental railroads, mighty bridges, deepened waterways and tall office buildings. A nation that can give birth to an enterprise which can throw up the steel work of an eight-story building in fourteen days can accomplish anything that is worth accomplishing in competition with leading nations of the earth.

THE RISING SUN.

at any time, but such dark conspiracies are seldom. At bottom, the alderman has a good deal of respect for the board and its powers.

It is significant that never since the elective board was instituted has there been any movement towards its abolition. Whether its personnel be strong or weak, it seems to be generally accepted that the system at any rate is sound. Some astute experts on civic government see in the adoption of the board of control by an increasing number of large municipalities a sure trend towards the principle of administration by a small body of fully trained men, in other words by commission. Perhaps, they are right. Anyway, the board of control has come to stay pending further evolution in the science of municipal management.

A Woman's Voice

Miss Olivia Smith, formerly of Holloway, England, is a little woman of pleasant countenance and subdued aspect, but in two minutes created a furor that has echoed from the speaker's gallery of the legislature from one end of the Dominion to the other.

The newspapers encamped on her trail at once. The telegraph wires grew warm as thousands of words about her were winged to the east and west.

The prime minister, it was charged, regretted that some one had not been there to throw a bucket of water over her. Others were shocked by the little woman's effrontery. A young woman friend who accompanied her to the gallery was astounded beyond measure.

But this is just the sort of thing that has made people talk about woman's suffrage and what is more it has made people think about it.

A Merchant Marine

Canadians are more interested today in the building of a merchant marine than they are in the construction of a navy, however necessary the latter may be. A contract has been let by a company to the shipbuilding works at Collingwood for the construction of a freight carrier 585 feet long. The development on a grain carrying fleet on the Canadian lakes has kept up with and a little ahead of the development of the country. The men who are behind the shipping interests of the Great Lakes in Canada are men of foresight and courage and they deserve to make money.

And now we have it from Rear-Admiral Bacon, director of the naval ordnance in Great Britain, that the battleship of the future will be 50 per cent. larger than the dreadnought of to-day. At that rate, our little boats will not even be flies on the wheel and will be obsolete before they are built. This proposed Laurier navy is the biggest sham of the century.—Kingston Standard.

A man who had an eye put out by a woman's hatpin in Brussels has recovered $2000 damages — $1000 from the woman and $1000 from the street car company in which she was riding at the time of the accident. That is, to say the least, rather stretching it to hold a company—in effect—responsible for what a woman wears. Probably the theory held by the court was that this was a case similar to where a man bringing anything dangerous on his property is held responsible for it. In any event, it will probably give pause to some women who incline overmuch to the long hatpin. It is better to sacrifice style than eyes.—Kingston Standard.

is matters of commerce, and tariffs, and such. The fault of the Yankees—the same as the Dutch—is giving too little and asking too much.—Goderich Signal.

Mackenzie & Mann evidently like company for their C.N.R. Not only will it parallel the C.P.R. in this province for nearly 300 miles but, according to Jack Stewart, the big railway contractor, it will hug close to the G.T.P. for 350 miles west of Edmonton, being, he says, almost in sight of it for all that distance. Maybe Mackenzie & Mann are afraid of getting lost should they get out of sight of a real transcontinental railway.—Victoria, B.C., Saturday Sun-Set.

The dignity of the court room would be enhanced if the sheriff was to insist upon the constables reserving the right of entry within the bar to counsel, witnesses and officials connected with the cases before the judges. Under present conditions, quite a number who have no connection with the case in progress are admitted and occupy seats while those who have priority have to obtain accommodation as best they can. This remark also applies to the press if fiscal year—Hartford Times. But a mere trifle compared with the war pensions of the United States—even more of which are granted undeservedly than is the case with the old-age pensions!—Halifax Echo.

Why is it that the Ottawa government so frequently desire to conceal the facts regarding measures which they wish to force thru the house? The Montreal Star, referring to the recent fight over the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Bill, says: "It has yet to be explained why, if the proposals are fair and equitable, it was considered desirable to resort to devious, hole-and-corner methods to prevent a discussion of the merits of the question on the floor of the house—neither has it yet been made clear why there is such earnest desire for haste."—Peterboro Review.

Chief Food Inspector Dr. McCarry has been investigating cold storage in Montreal. He reports that in one cold storage house two thousand sheep have been kept cool for two years. The owners of the sheep declare that they are still in good condition and fit for human consumption, but the general public would like to have some more unprejudiced opinion. A careful scientific examination should be made to ascertain the exact condition of meat that has been stored so long.—Peterboro Review.

The Philadelphia Record thinks that the United States ought to go in for reciprocity with Canada "because Canada has very little to sell to the United States." The Record comments upon the fact that commissioners, have gone from Washington to all parts of the globe to discover some one to trade with, while right at their doors are the best customers in the world. That's what Canadians used to tell their neighbors; but they refused to listen. We are inclined to think that our neighbors have, in respect to their reciprocity, "stunned away the day of grace!"—Victoria, B.C., Colonist.

Press of States

Says The Rochester Herald: There has been no more deplorable lack of statesmanship in American legislation than in acts which have applied directly or indirectly to Canada. There is no reason in the nature of things why Canada and the United States should not at all times be the best of friends. For many years it seemed almost inevitable that sooner or later Canada would become a part of the American Union. But there are few to-day, we fancy, who look for such a consummation, unless it be in the far-distant future. The policy of the United States towards Canada has been based on motives so selfish that Canadians long ago grew disgusted, and adopted toward us an attitude of hostility. The tariff wall which we erected to keep the goods of our neighbors out of our land was succeeded by another tariff wall to keep our goods out of Canada, and thus far, Canada has suffered far less from our tariff policy than we ourselves have suffered, also injury has been done to both, as was inevitable.

The same paper, proceeding to discuss the tariff situation, says: There should be free trade between the provinces and the states. Every argument which applies in favor of free trade between New York and California applies with redoubled force in favor of free trade between New York and Canada. But, of course, the dear old tariff wall must not be broken down, for if it were most of our Republican politicians would be out of a job.

The Superior Telegram takes another view. It proceeds: "However, our new tariff law afforded just the opportunity they (Canada) had been looking for. Our maximum rate appeared to afford an opportunity for a retaliatory tariff against our products without exciting the disapproval of the mother country, Great Britain. This, they figured, would cause our manufacturers to establish plants in Canada to supply their Canadian customers, greatly to the benefit of Canada. Hence there is no anxiety on the part of Canada to be included in a settlement for a minimum rate. If President Taft succeeds in getting that country to come in, the high character of his diplomacy will be proven."

The same paper says the balance of trade is running against United States now: "The government's report on the country's foreign trade in February shows that imports of merchandise last month ran $4,300,000 above exports. The reason why interest attaches to such an excess of imports is that nothing of the sort has been witnessed at this time of year since 1895. Within that 15-year period the month of February has presented an unbroken series of 'export balances,' rising as high as $50,000,000 in February, 1900, and $83,000,000 in February, 1908.

"Canadian business men, some of them, think that trade in both Canada and the United States will be injured if the maximum tariff under the present law is put into effect. In another column will be found an interview with a Mr. Keyes, an owner of a wood pulp mill, in which he says that if the maximum duty on pulp, the product of which he has been shipping to the United States, is levied, his mill will have to shut down. He and other manufacturers are on their way to Washington to ask the president not to have the high pulp duty take effect," says The Manchester, N.H., Guardian.

"At the same time, every proposition of our government should be considered a little more fairly than some people, on either side of the border, are doing." The interchange of Albany of sentiments of warm friendship between the representatives of Canada and America cannot fail to exert an important influence in securing a settlement of the tariff controversy.—Newark Herald.

The boundary between the United States and Canada is more than 3000 miles long, and cut by many ranges of mountains running north and south. Navigable rivers following their valleys, the great lakes and the level plains make natural highways of commerce between the two countries. Convenience, easiness, the short haul and cheap water transport make a vast trade mutually beneficial.

What a triumph of stupidity would be the arbitrary and artificial interruption of this natural commerce thru a quarrel over rates to the hurt of both parties! To prevent it—in the words of Gladstone in a great emergency—"only common sense is necessary."—New York World.

In The Air Lanes.

The wild geese are coming in. You cannot often see them but if on a clear night you will stand outside and listen, you may hear their honking voices, as they pass on northward. They are wild, canny birds and they hate the sight of cities' smoke and glare but not even a city can swerve them from their line of flight.

Perhaps their strong wings beat a little faster and their clamor grows wilder and more confused, but they are high and safe. They keep to their line of flight. They flying a V-shaped flock, the watchful old gander at their head. He knows where the spring feeding-ground lies at the end of the long air-lanes. When he dips toward earth his followers dip with him; when he rises higher, they rise. They depend entirely upon their old leader and would be lost without him.

When the wide plain begins to unfold itself far beneath, the leader gives a call and, with set wings, the flock drops a little closer to the earth. That plain is the goal for which the weary birds have sought; there, is food and respite from danger. Here and there, across it are little ponds with green shoots dotting their bosoms.

The geese are tired and hungry. They have made the long voyage thru the air with scarcely a rest. They welcome the cry of the sagacious leader and the V-shaped flock swings lower. Day has dawned before the flock settles for rest and food. With the first misty light of spring morning, from the far corner of the low muck land, comes an answering honk to the grey leader's call. Then the weary wings of the air-voyagers beat a little faster and following the leader they swing down towards the welcome invitation.

A flock of their own kind are feeding there on the tender, juicy shoots of the wild rice of the muck-land. The sentinel father of the flock stands, straight and commanding, a

Folly of War

The obvious is the untrue. To realize this is a sad blow to the large class of people who believe all they see and swear by all they read—in their party newspapers. Nature herself is a gay deceiver, and appears to delight in misleading people. Or, turning the fact around, people are far more gullible than they like to admit. For nature nor anyone else can gull the man who keeps his eyes open and his mind free from prejudice.

Norman Angell has just published a book in England which makes a horrible assault upon the established views of things in matters of war and trade. Perhaps the most interesting thing about the book will be the way people will hear what it has to say, and then pass over its undoubted facts as tho they heard them not, and continue to follow the charming of the party press. It is too much, thinks the average man, to ask him to believe that everybody is wrong, and that people are crowding after a delusion like a lot of hallucinated rabbits. So the average man goes with the troop, and is at least satisfied that he is no worse off than his neighbors.

Mr. Angell's book is entitled "Europe's Optical Illusion." The immediate peg upon which the interest of the book depends is the possibility of a war with Germany. Such a war would arise from the delusion that commerce depends upon military supremacy. Mr. Angell describes this all but universal idea as a "gross and desperately dangerous misconception." It partakes

The Resurrection.

IN the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre.

"And behold there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

"His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow.

"And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

"And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

"He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

"And go quickly, and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead; and behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him: Lo, I have told you.

"And they departed quickly from the sepulchre, with fear and great joy, and did run to bring His disciples word.

"And as they went to tell His disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held Him by the feet, and worshipped Him.

"Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren, that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

"Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them.

"And when they saw Him, they worshipped Him: but some doubted.

"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth.

"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

To-day in all countries of the world, among all peoples, the wonderful old and ever beautifully new story of the resurrection of Jesus will be told, refreshing the faith of the world's half-billion Christians. To the aged it is a blessed promise; to youth it is an inspiration; to little children it is a song full of sweetness.

little apart from them, his long neck stretched high, his sharp eyes probing the advancing light for dangers.

Whitney is Right.

There may be genuine sincerity behind the clamor for repealing the three-fifth clause, but this paper is disposed to doubt it. At any rate we believe their contention is not well founded. The simple majority rule could never be applied with success where it affects the personal liberty of individuals. The law is based on common sense.

Slowly but surely the advocates of temperance have been over-coming the three-fifth "handicap" as they choose to call it. Every year two scores or more municipalities are added to the dry list. The effect of this, one would suppose, would be a general increase in temperance sentiment which would make it easier to over-come the alleged handicap in the remaining circumstances where licenses are still issued.

THE SPEAKER AS JOE SEES HIM

ever. The wealth and prosperity of a nation do not depend upon its political power. The small states of Europe are actually more prosperous than the large ones. Holland with no army is as well off as Germany with two million soldiers, better off than Russia with four. Belgian three per cents are quoted at 96, and German three per cents at 82. Russian three and one-half per cents are quoted at 81, and Norwegian three and one-half per cents at 102. The trade per capita of the small nations is in excess of that of the great.

Another point, of interest to Canadians, is the view that it would be impossible for Germany to rob England of her colonies with advantage to herself. Countries do not "own" colonies. If England lost hers she would be a gainer to the extent of not having to provide for their defence. If Germany undertook that defence it would only be a disadvantage to her. England has to yield to her colonies what she would not yield to a foreign power. Germany is not looking for a white elephant, and her experience hitherto with colonies has not been encouraging.

Are the statesmen of Germany and other nations acquainted with these facts? Unquestionably they are, but for purposes of party politics, or the self interest of small financial cliques, and thru the ignorance or thoughtlessness of the people generally, armies and navies and warlike sentiment are maintained. War, says Mr. Angell, is essentially sentimental as the duel, and like it will eventually pass out of fashion.

England led the way, he remarks, in religious toleration. He urges that

In Pittsburg

It is not only the smut from a thousand smoking chimneys that has blackened Pittsburg. The smut of bribery has also blackened this prosperous American city. Last Monday municipal scandals there took a queer turn when a score or more of Pittsburg's councilmen were given an "immunity bath" by the district attorney upon their confessing that they had accepted bribes to push thru certain "depository ordinances." The immunity bath took the form of suspended sentences; and since the news of the district attorney's loving kindness reached the ears of the remaining guilty ones, all have been hurrying to the court house in order to save themselves from indictment before the grand jury.

Pittsburg's district attorney is plainly a good psychologist; he knows that human nature is always the same the world over. But, as a doctor of the law, he confesses, by his action in dealing with the councilmen accused of bribery, to a weakness in his own powers and methods. Practically, he acknowledges that he was incompetent to bring about the indictment and punishment of the council, save by hurrying the statutory methods of legal procedure, and thus injustice to secure justice. And in a final analysis, he has been guilty of flagrant immorality. For he has placed the righteous citizens of Pittsburg in the position of being compelled to harbor amongst themselves, totally immune from punishment, a body of men who are now free to laugh up their sleeves both at the law and at the moral sense of judiciary and the decent public.

The optimist sees the pork chop. The pessimist sees the price.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

Pittsburgh Gazette.

England ought to lead the way in applying common sense to the problems of bloodshed and slaughter. Probably England is too deeply saturated with the traditions of the past to do what is needed in this direction. The young nations, unfettered by dead precedents, may grow wiser, and while Mr. Angell does not ask for immediate disarmament, they may take the plan he suggests of educating their people in political common sense.

Of course, the price of meat is governed by the supply. It is on this account the trust endeavors to regulate the supply.—Philadelphia Ledger.

PARISIAN APACHE HELD UP AS MODEL

French Deputy on Trial Charged With Publishing Article About Thug Likely to Incite Murder.

PARIS, March 26.—A charge of inciting to murder, at the first hearing, resolved itself into a burlesque kind of enquiry as to whether the police are brutes.

The trial was at the assizes, the accused being Gustav Herve, the anti-militarist editor of La Guerre Sociale and French deputy, and his printer, Henri Auroy. Their offence was stated as "provocation to murder and apology of a crime."

The prosecution particularly complained of an article in which M. Herve condemned the crime of the Apache, Liabeuf—"the human porcupine"—who shot a policeman dead and wounded others.

The article was headed, "Let Us Imitate the Apache," and went on: "Liabeuf has a certain beauty and grandeur. He was falsely accused. Every day honest people, for no reason whatever, are assaulted by the police and accused of offences against public morals by our brutal policemen. I myself have been knocked about by the guardians of the peace of the republic, but have refrained from making reprisals."

Journalist Subpoenaed.

M. Herve summoned 51 witnesses, including M. Henri Rochefort, the well-known journalist; M. Octave Mirbeau, the author; M. Jaures, the Socialist leader; Mr. Sebastian Faure, and a dozen or so of social revolutionary deputies.

The accused announced that he would first of all call on M. Rochefort, who had already received 22 condemnations, including a death sentence, for offences arising out of breaches of the press law, a record which M. Herve could never hope to equal.

Defence Press.

The wonderful octogenarian, Rochefort, in common with the rest of the witnesses, made a speech which resolved itself into a pungent criticism of the law against the liberty of the press and police tyranny. There was, he said, no need for anyone to read M. Herve's article if they did not wish to. Whether in his article he had committed any offence was simply a matter of appreciation.

Paris Police Brutal.

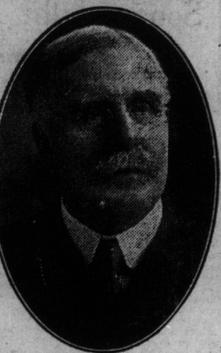

A number of witnesses for the defence testified to police brutality which they had witnessed at various times. The Apache Liabeuf was not, however, called, as suggested by M. Herve's advocates.

The avocet general, in his speech for the prosecution, declared that M. Herve had written an abominable article, which, in the minds of honest persons, could be read as an incitement to crime.

After deliberating for an hour, the jury found M. Herve "guilty," without extenuating circumstances. The printer, his co-defendant, was acquitted. A number of the prisoner's death had gathered in the court, and after the verdict was announced, created a disturbance, crying, "Long live Herve. Long live the republic!"

By order of the presiding judge, the manifestos were summarily ejected. Herve was ordered four years' imprisonment and further condemned to pay a fine of $200.

Folly of Canadian Tariff War

New York American.

The threatened tariff war with Canada is foolishness.

Tariff regulations between neighboring countries should be made as a matter of business. Neither the national pride nor the national honor is concerned.

The Payne tariff law empowers the president to impose an extra 25 per cent. ad valorem tax on the goods of any country that "unduly discriminates" against us in its own tariff laws. This power can be used or not used, at the president's discretion. It is absurd that it should be used for any purpose that will not improve the economic condition of this country.

Certainly a tariff war with Canada will not do that.

A tariff war with Canada would be an economic calamity—wreck would finish whatever little credit remains to the administration on its dubious tariff record.

Protectionists put themselves in a ridiculous and self-contradictory attitude when they undertake to use the tariff as a mere retaliatory measure.

The American believes in a protective tariff—to cover the difference between the cost of labor here and the cost abroad.

If the Payne tariff has been adjusted substantially on this basis, as Mr. Taft says, then its value to us as a protective measure is wholly independent of Canadian tariff arrangements.

And nothing could be clumsier or more illogical than that the president should double up our tariff against Canada, without regard to labor cost or any other protective consideration, but merely to bully the Canadians into the relinquishment of their own peculiar protective standards.

The false assumption that underlies all this international tariff bickering is that we have enacted a tariff not to serve our own domestic purposes, but to hurt our neighbors.

It is thus assumed that tariffs are carefully scheduled curses.

No doubt the aversion that most Americans feel for the Payne-Aldrich act has a good deal to do with this view.

But it would certainly be inconsistent in Mr. Taft if he were to take action against Canada on such a theory. Let us have peace.

Curious Letter of Patriotic Canadian Agent Canada's Place in Festival of Empire.

LONDON, March 26.—The romance of Canadian life has perhaps never been better epitomized than in a curious incident which has just occurred at the offices of the Festival of Empire at 48 St. James-street. A package bearing the Edinburgh postmark was received the other day. It contained a half sovereign tied up in the corner of a red check handkerchief, two ears of ripe wheat and a letter which is a veritable human document. The letter was as follows:

"I understand that you're fixing up a Canadian week at the Festival of Empire. Do it well. You can't pay too much attention to Canada. She's only human, and she's the best looking sister in the family. I'm an old man now, but I'm dead keen on seeing Canada at the Crystal Palace. I want the best seat you can give me for the half a sovereign tied up in the handkerchief, and if I can't come myself I'll send my grandson, aged 17."

In spite of the great demand for seats at the pageant, the half sovereign, accompanied by a ticket for a reserved seat in the grand stand, has been sent back to the applicant.

SPORTING NOTES.

LONDON, March 26.—There seems as much chance of a match between Welsh and Macfarland as there was between Hackenschmidt and Gotch. The whole thing has turned out a fiasco, and now it is nothing more or less than rivalry between sporting papers and writers that keeps up the fighting in the papers and not in the ring.

The latest deadlock is the referee question. Here both men are to blame but if they are to blame it is the referee and the newspapers that have really mean business they will get to the bottom of it. He is certainly the referee, Driscoll, and is by no means over-anxious (despite his plausible talk) which held good until Macfarland arrived, and doing what he says he can do—beat Macfarland with a fair referee.

No doubt in the history of boxing there have been questionable referees and questionable decisions, but it is not only boxers who have suffered through this. We have no reason to doubt the American referee's decision, and Welsh only a poor sportsman who grumbles at a referee and doubts his honesty—especially in England.

Heavyweights Extinct.

For years the complaint in boxing circles has been the dearth of heavyweights who had any pretensions to be considered in the first flight. Bantams, feathers, and lightweights we have always had in plenty, many of them world's champions, but heavyweights have been as rare as a white swan, and many people have come to look on the species as utterly extinct in England.

A year ago Hague was undoubtedly at the top of the tree. In short order he disposed of Corporal Sunshine, Charlie Wilson, Ben Taylor and Gunner Mott, and by general acclamation he was dubbed the Amateur Swimming Association at an inaugural dinner which was held at the Holborn Restaurant.

The trophy in face and form, is an exact reproduction of the statue to be erected on Clarence Lawn, immediately facing the pier, at Dover, in April. It is a new country, strengthened by the larger hope of sturdiness and independence.

Nearly $15,000 Income.

Mr. Baker, the present head of Dr. Barnardo's homes, explained that the income from Lord Mountstephen's trust would amount to nearly $15,000 a year, and this would enable the homes to send out an additional 300 children annually. The whole of the income would be spent on emigration pure and simple, none of it going to establish charges, either in England or Canada.

FADS IN PERFUMES SELECTED BY QUEENS

Royal Ladies' Fashions in Choice of Scents for Their Persons and Apartments—Czarina Lavish.

PARIS, March 26.—There is a great perfume in Paris who boasts of the confidence of queens, and flatters himself he is more indispensable to them than any dressmaker of the Rue de la Paix. Reigning sovereigns are his best customers. They use perfume as lavishly as their predecessors did in the times of Henry Quatre or Louise Quatorze, when all at court drenched themselves with perfume, and none used soap.

Czarina Liberal User.

The most extravagant user of perfume in our day is the Empress of Russia, whose supplies of it, wherever she is, come from Paris. Her apartments in the royal palaces, and her cabins in the royal yacht are daily sprayed with essences of lilac, jasmin, jonquille, tuberosa, and white musk. The perfume, who loves to stir his English, and speaks like Mrs. Malaprop, says the empress's rooms are "perfumed" with perfume to such an extent that when her accustomed attendants are sickened by their atmosphere.

Some hint that overheated rooms, laden with scent, have much to do with the breakdown of the czarist's health. Naturally, her purveyor scoffs at such an idea. He points out that none but the very best perfumes are used by his imperial customer. The flowers from which these perfumes are made are selected specially, the very hours at which they are pulled being fixed by imperial order. From Grasse comes an immense quantity of violets for perfume. He points out that the queen has abandoned the use of it, and adopted instead a perfume manufactured in Madrid, which she obtains for perfume for her toilet and bathing water from the great man in Paris. Its composition is a secret which he says, "of rose water, cocoon oil and ... the rest is mystery."

Dutch Queen's Way.

Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands is self-willed in most things and carries her own will to her toilet. She will have nothing to say to perfume water for her baths, to powder, or even to soap. A daily bath, taken for seven minutes, followed by a minute's cold douching in her Spartan rule; but she is not quite hopeless from the perfumer's point of view.

Alexandra Conservative.

The English court is conservative. Queen Alexandra remains faithful to the special which has been in use by the royal family of England since 1823. The recipe for this perfume is jealously guarded by the manufacturer and handed down by them, from father to son. When the great court perfumer talks of so mighty a secret as this he becomes purposely vague. All he will say of it is that it is composed of amber mixed with maces, essences of rose, violets, jasmine, orange flowers, and lavender. "A fitting bouquet from which to cull a perfume for a beloved queen."

A young woman in the west has filed a claim of over nine hundred dollars against an estate for blood which was drawn from her veins and injected into the veins of a dying woman. LONDON, March 26.—A romance has recently come to light in which the duke and Miss Millar were the principals. Miss Millar, who is the wife of Lionel Monckton, is a prominent dancer in "Our Miss Gibbs." The duke has been seen frequently of late in the company of Miss Millar. The duke and the duchess, who was Miss Constance West, have not been on good terms for some time and a divorce suit was contemplated. It is reported that owing to the intercession of King Edward the duke has agreed to give up Miss Millar and a reconciliation will take place between the duke and duchess.

IRELAND ROBBED BY ENGLISH TAXATION

New System of Taxes Unite All Irish Parties in Demand For Change in Financial Relations of Erin and England.

DUBLIN, March 26.—Englishmen are never tired of declaring that whatever may have been the treatment accorded to Irish industries in the past, they are now receiving equal advantages with those of England, but the new spirit duties are a case in which it would appear that a dead end has been made at an industry which gives employment to thousands of Irishmen and affords an outlet for the grain grown by thousands of Irish farmers.

When the woollen industry of Ireland was suppressed by direct enactment it was worth only $350,000 a year and a great fuss was made over it. This year Lloyd George's whisky tax has cost Ireland nearly $4,000,000 in export trade alone, not to speak of the great falling off in domestic consumption. The latest figures available show that during the first nine months of the financial year the quantity of Irish whisky delivered from bond was only 3,246,000 gallons compared with 5,658,000 gallons in the corresponding period of last year.

Lloyd George's Defence.

Lloyd George's reply to the charge that Ireland has been unduly discriminated against in the new taxation is, to say the least, amazing, and if it were not a serious matter for so many Irishmen it would be amusing. He declares that Ireland has received over $12,000,000 in old age pensions, so that she thus obtains a remission of $2,000,000 in taxation. Of course the reply is absurd, for the money paid in old age pensions is in no sense a remission of taxation, but even if it were, everyone knows that in a very few years the present abnormal number of old people in Ireland will be much reduced while the whisky taxes will go on.

Violates Act of Union.

One good result is anticipated, however, from the new taxes. They have united all Irishmen in a demand for a readjustment of the financial relations between Ireland and England. Unionist papers like the "Irish Times" are demanding it as strongly as Nationalist papers like the "Freeman's Journal" and the Unionist members of parliament are as loud in their opposition to the new taxes as William O'Brien's followers. Of course, the present situation in itself is a violation of the solemn pledges undertaken by the act of union. That instrument provided that Ireland should bear her share of the expenses of the United Kingdom in proportion to her taxable capacity, and on that basis she is now paying $23,000,000 a year more than she ought to.

The injustice is even worse than this, however, for while she bears far more than her share of the expense of the imperial army and navy she receives far less than her share of the work that results from this expenditure. At present she is paying 6.23 per cent of the total revenue and last year she received only .75 per cent of the expenditure on naval construction and contracts.

Admiralty Remiss.

It cannot even be urged that she is not equipped for the work, for in Belfast there are two of the greatest shipyards in the world, yet no warship has been built at Belfast. Cork has as fine a harbor as it is to be found anywhere, yet only the most trifling sums have been spent on its improvement and the construction of the docks. Louisburgh is of great strategic importance and warships are being exercised constantly in it, yet the adjoining waters, yet Derry can get nothing out of the admiralty for deepening the channel and improving the port.

Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Harrison May Get $5,000 a Year Pensions

Senate Committee Favors Annuity for Widows of Former Presidents, But Kills Provision Making Theodore Roosevelt Head of the Army.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 26.—The senate committee on pensions has agreed to report favorably bills to grant pensions of $5,000 a year to Mrs. Frances F. Cleveland, widow of President Grover Cleveland, and Mrs. Mary Lord Harrison, widow of President Benjamin Harrison.

The committee declined to report a bill which would place President Roosevelt at the retired list as commander in chief of the army and navy, and give him $10,000 a year for the remainder of his life.

There was opposition to the bills pensioning Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Harrison. The senators voting for them were Messrs. Scott, Burnham, Curtis, Shively, and Gore. Messrs. Curtis, McCumber and Gore argued that neither Mrs. Harrison or Mrs. Cleveland were in need of assistance from the United States treasury, and they therefore voted against the favorable report. Two republicans voted against the bill, opposed it because it created a new office and displaced the president of the United States a commander in chief of the army and navy. The position was to have been for life.

MOUNTSTEPHEN PLANS EMPIRE BUILDING

Allocates $300,000 to Send Out Young Emigrants From United Kingdom to Canada.

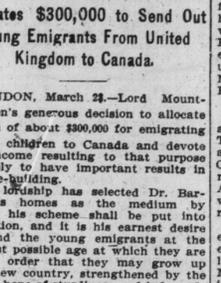

LONDON, March 26.—Lord Mountstephen's generous decision to allocate a sum of about $300,000 for emigrating young children to Canada and devote the income resulting to that purpose is likely to have important results in empire-building.

His lordship has selected Dr. Barnardo's homes as the medium by which his scheme shall be put into execution, and it is his earnest desire to send the young emigrants at the earliest possible age at which they are fit, in order that they may grow up in a new country, strengthened by the larger hope of sturdiness and independence.

Nearly $15,000 Income.

Mr. Baker, the present head of Dr. Barnardo's homes, explained that the income from Lord Mountstephen's trust would amount to nearly $15,000 a year, and this would enable the homes to send out an additional 300 children annually. The whole of the income would be spent on emigration pure and simple, none of it going to establish charges, either in England or Canada.

Songs of the French-Canadians

An Appreciative Essay in Two Parts. By John Boyd.

"Yet survives a strain, One of saddest singing. On the river ringing. Born in old France, All of dance and song."

To the great majority of English-speaking Canadians the songs of their French-speaking fellow countrymen, breathing, as they do, the most ardent love for our common country, are practically unknown. While there are few who have not heard of "O Canada," how many are there who have any knowledge of those innumerable songs which form a precious possession of the French-Canadian people?

Regarding "O Canada," some reference will be in place at the outset. Unlike most of the other popular songs of French Canada, Judge Routhier's famous composition is of comparatively recent date. It is essentially Canadian in its conception and scope and set to Calixte Lavallee's beautiful melody it has taken its place as the par-excellence national song of the French-Canadians.

Judge Weir's verses at least have the merit of striking a patriotic note and of being more expressive of the feelings of English-Canadians than Judge Routhier's song, which was, naturally, written from a French-Canadian point of view.

Volunteer Motor Corps Great Help In Strike

Quaker City Motorists Use Cars To Carry Police—Millionaire Driver Hustles Officers About City In Record Time—Cars Used To Charge Mobs.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 26.—When the present trouble with the trolley strikers and their sympathizers in the various trades unions of this city is finally settled, no single agency will have done more to quell the riotous outbreaks so general throughout Philadelphia during the past fortnight than the motor car, and no association of public-spirited and law-abiding citizens will have worked more faithfully and disinterestedly to bring about a cessation of hostilities than the Quaker City Motor Club's First Volunteer Motor Corps. For over two weeks these men have neglected their various businesses to assist the authorities in maintaining order. Nearly a score of the volunteers, with 22 cars of their own and a dozen hired vehicles, under the direction of Commander Charles J. Swain, a former president of the Quakers, has been whipped into a most wonderful weapon of municipal defence. Night and day, 24 hours a day, they have been on duty, with short intervals of necessary rest, for 15 days, with prospects of possibly as great a length of service ahead of them. There are millionaires among them, professional men and men of business, but they are uncompromisingly doing their trick each day, driving in person frequently, and providing a substitute when compelled to rest.

The First Volunteer Motor Corps was organized about two years ago, and when it offered its services in turn to the city, state and nation, Mayor Reuburn, Governor Street and President Roosevelt each hastened to accept them. When the trolleyman's strike suddenly was called, Saturday, Feb. 15, like a flash of lightning from a clear sky, the local police authorities were caught unprepared, and riots were in progress in a dozen different sections of the city at one time, the police having very inadequate means of carrying men to the various danger points. At 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, seven or eight of the volunteers gathered hastily at the Q.C.M.C. quarters in the Hotel Walton, in response to a hurry call over the phone from Commander Swain, with the result that at 3.15 a tender of assistance was phoned to the city hall.

Mayor Reuburn did not stop to consult his assistants, but accepted the tender then and there. Twenty minutes later, eight big cars, most of them capable of carrying dozen or more men in a pinch, were at the city hall and were immediately pressed into service. Before night, more than a dozen additional volunteers had reported, some of them with two cars. The authorities hired about a dozen others. Owners and drivers alike were sworn in, provided with badges and revolvers, and put to work at once. Riot calls from turbulent Kensington, five miles away, were responded to in 10 minutes—sometimes less. Millionaire J. Fred Betz 3rd, one of the hardest working of the volunteers, who is devoting his time and his car—the big yellow Simplex 60 he drove in the Fairmount Park race—to the cause of law and order, when given permission to "get there as quick as you can," carried a captain and a bunch of blucosists to 4, West Philadelphia, riot in six minutes. It was only five miles, but the coppers were scared stiff by the rate at which they traveled. They thawed out in short order, however, when they began to mix into the hot scrap in progress. The rioters had been in full possession, and were working their will upon a bunch of blockaded cars and their crews. Ten minutes after the riot call reached the city hall two scope of big coats were on the ground and the mob was flying in all directions.

That is a fair sample of the work the volunteers have been doing for a fortnight. They are still on the job. They get a chance—and draw $2.50 a day. This self-sacrificing work in the interest of law and order and for the preservation of the good name of the city whose name they bear is costing these gentlemen money.

It is saving the city thousands of dollars in riot damage claims, as one of the city officials admitted, and has provided the department of police with a defensive weapon without which it would have been helpless.

WHAT IS SPEED LIMIT OF MODERN MOTOR BOAT

Fifty Miles an Hour Possible With Hydroplane Type—Seaworthy Boats Can Do Thirty-five.

During the past five years the progress made in the development of the high-speed pleasure and racing boat has been most remarkable, due largely to the rapid development of the gasoline motor in delivering great power, with comparatively light weight. In comparison with the powers used heretofore for boat propulsion.

What the limit of speed will be for the boat of the future it is difficult to predict. There are many successful pleasure boats to-day of 35 feet in length, which develop easily 22 to 23 miles per hour, this speed being obtained with about 60 h.p. in hulls of good proportion and substantial construction.

There is a demand for a pleasure boat of 28 to 30 miles speed. This is possible on the length of 40 feet, but requires a motor of at least 175 h.p. If no sacrifice is made in the hull qualities of the boat or the hull construction, faster boats than 30 miles for pleasure use can only be obtained by increasing the length. Sixty-foot boats of twin-screw power equipment have developed a speed of 40 miles an hour. In the racing class, one huller of the hydroplane type claims to have developed a speed of 40 miles per hour, while we have seen two demonstrations of 40 to 50-foot racers, with seaworthy qualities, developing 37 to 39 miles per hour.

It is probable that in the near future we will see the 50-mile motor boat. The first boat to develop this speed will probably be one of the hydroplane type further developed, which design undoubtedly offers a most interesting study, where the maximum speed is to be obtained with the minimum power. The best weather conditions will have to prevail and a smooth sea.

The seaworthy 50-mile racer is still further off, due to the difficulty in obtaining suitable power equipment, but this is only a matter of time and development. The international motor boat races greatly assist in developing high speed motor boats, which are a forerunner to the successful high speed pleasure boat.

Synchronization is the secret of the smooth-running motor. All the intake valves should open and close at the same points in the strokes of the respective cylinders, as should also the exhaust valves. This matter of timing applies with equal force to the points of occurrence of the ignition sparks. Since most cam shafts are now made solid, all that is necessary to secure synchronization is to see that the clearances between the valve stems and the ends of the cam followers are the same in all cases.

POINTERS ON STARTING YOUR MOTOR BOAT ENGINE

Useful Hints on How to Get Engine Going After Winter Lay-up.

In the case of an engine that has been standing unworked for a long time, it frequently happens that it is found to turn with great difficulty, and that there is little or no compression. In such cases, some people are in the habit of introducing gasoline into the cylinders by means of the compression taps or the spark plug orifices. Occasionally these measures succeed, but not often. When they fail, they only aggravate the evil. A writer in a French contemporary states that he has always adopted a mixture of half cylinder oil and half kerosene. The root of the trouble is the fact that during the long stationary period nearly all the oil has flowed down the cylinder walls back into the crank chamber, while what remains having become oxidized no longer presents any lubricating qualities. Those portions of the pistons which are consequently devoid of oil are dry and the metal surfaces are directly in contact with each other, thus on the compression stroke the gas can leak by.

The suction on the carburetor, the latter be the best of its kind, is consequently relatively weak, and a very poor mixture finds its way into the cylinder. When gasoline is introduced into the cylinders the four explosions resulting are sometimes sufficient to start up the engine and raise some dust up to the cylinder walls, but it frequently happens that the explosions so induced are too weak actually to start the engine, the exploded gases passing down walls of the cylinders past the pistons for the reasons given above. The gasoline so introduced, having dried up what little oil remained in position, the engine becomes more difficult to start than ever.

On the contrary, he holds, the thinned engine oil will flow between and around the piston rings and form a good gas seal at once; it will disperse itself to start the engine, the exploded gases passing down walls of the cylinders past the pistons for the reasons given above. The gasoline so introduced, having dried up what little oil remained in position, the engine becomes more difficult to start than ever.

DEVICE TO PREVENT UNAUTHORIZED DRIVING

Hours That Car Is in Use Recorded By Electric Protection Company.

A New York company which operates electric alarm systems for the protection of bank vaults, stores, and offices, has devised and is putting into effect an ingenious system by which "joy-riding" may be stopped. Joy-riding is now the universal term used to signify the using without permission of an automobile by the chauffeur and his friends.

The system gives a definite and exact report of the presence of the automobile in its garage, or its absence therefrom, through the 24 hours of each day, and its coming or going is electrically signalled to the office of the alarm company without the possibility of collusion between the chauffeur and the garage attendants. When the chauffeur brings the car into the garage he is required to insert a brass plug attached to a flexible cable into a socket on the side of the car. The plug will only fit the lock of this individual socket, consequently the car must be in the garage to make the connection. When the connection is made a signal is received at the central office, and the removal of the plug to take the car out also records a signal.

A report sent once a week to the owner of the automobile shows just how many times the car left or entered the garage, and at what hours.

The Cad and The Gentleman.

Usually the man who can afford an automobile has made a success in business, and his success has been measured by his courteous and thoughtfulness for those with whom he came in contact in his business way.

These characteristics he carries into his motoring. He will dead still and assist a driver to lead past a frightened horse. He wishes to pass a team ahead he will refrain until courtesy has the way, and will usually turn his head as he lets in the clutch. "Thank you."

These men have not invited legislation against the motor car. Their whole example has been to remove friction, not to create it. The men who draw forth the heated criticisms and unduly restrictive measures in the legislatures are the "joy-riders" and "four flushers." The former are now being curbed by the discipline of the owners and the garages.

But the "four-flusher!" The man who mortgages a cigar business or a fifteen-cent restaurant to raise the price of a car, and draws his all into a show-down; that is the kind who makes the most with the "honk-honk" and whose women friends assume a legislative retaliation.

People of culture know how to avoid friction. It is easy to see whether the owner of a car is the head of a mortgaged peanut business or a man of worth. Not the finest polished limousine can veneer the coarseness of the owner, if the owner be that sort of individual.

Motor Notes

It frequently happens that while one is on a long tour and trying to make a certain place, it becomes very late and dark and often foggy, especially in the early spring or fall. Searchlights, as they are, are then found to be useless. In this kind of weather, the best, quickest and handiest method is to place a white linen cloth or handkerchief over the glass door, and the light will penetrate the fog in a wonderful manner. If one is at home and has the time and material, a good method is to put "whiting" on the glass. This will cause the light to pierce any fog and make an otherwise uncertain ride a safe one.

The tire should be inflated as fully as possible when filling cuts or gashes in its surface. This full inflation allows one to work the filling rubber well in and is thereby conducive to a more permanent repair.

If trouble is experienced in keeping the oil lamps lighted—this applies more particularly to the tail lamp—it is well to inspect the vent or draft holes in their tops, since these often become clogged with soot.

If the gas lamps light quickly with a yellowish flare, it is a positive indication that there is a leak somewhere.

TO TEST CARS

Auto Club of America Will Have Committee to Test Cars and Accessories.

Believing that a need existed for an impartial body to conduct tests of cars, tires, lamps, and in fact every accessory attached to or part of a motor car, the board of governors of the Automobile Club of America has authorized the technical committee to draw up a set of rules for the testing of the same.

The committee has completed its rule making and is now preparing to conduct tests of cars and accessories, and will issue certificates of the actual performance during the test. The certificates will be issued to the motor vehicle or part that passes the test, and such observations as the committee may deem desirable in England the Royal Automobile Club has conducted similar tests for some years, which have proved of a great benefit to the trade, and the owners of automobiles as well, and there is little doubt but that the plan is a wise one.

VANDERBILT WANTS GRAND PRIZE RACE

New Race in Prospect for Foreign and American Auto Drivers.

The Motor Cup Holding Company, composed of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr. and his friends, has applied to the Automobile Club of America for sanction for the International Grand Prize race for the club's $5000 Gold Cup to be held next October on the Motor Parkway and the roads of Long Island. The conditions and rules for the contest, it is said, will be announced later.

Just what sort of a race will be arranged is rather uncertain, as no race was arranged for the French Grand Prize contest this year, and no cars were built under the rules adopted last year.

Savannah, where the first race was held, is clamoring for another International contest, and if it can't get the Grand Prize, it will probably be satisfied with any big car race in which the foreign drivers can be induced to compete. In case the foreign drivers do come, over for the Motor Parkway race, the date of the Savannah contest could be so arranged that they could compete there also.

Travelling Salesmen Save Time With Auto

Commercials Whose Districts Take In Small Towns Find Motor Car of Great Service—Many Valuable Hours Saved.

The automobile as a means of getting to places is now used by many travelling salesmen whose districts take in many small towns. A few hours, and sometimes only an hour, is required by a salesman to close up his business in a small community, after which he kicks his heels against the baseboard of the local hotel while impatiently waiting many hours for the one train a day running in the direction he wishes to take.

The elimination of such lost time is, of course, the most important service an automobile can perform for the salesman, but there are other excellent features. The automobile will take him to small towns not favored with a railroad. The trouble attending the transportation of his samples from a railroad station to the sample room of a hotel or to the stores themselves is also a thing of the past if he travels by automobile instead of by train, to say nothing of the impression an automobile makes on the storekeeper.

Carries 7 Passengers
Costs Only $2,760 Equipped

THE only car in Canada of the kind. For years there has been a call for a car like this. For years there has been a crying need of a real seven-passenger touring car which would give all the accommodation and comfort necessary, but which would cost much less to buy and maintain than the regular seven-passenger type.

Do you realize that at last such a car has come? Do you know that to-day you can buy a Russell model SPECIALLY DESIGNED FOR SEVEN PASSENGER SERVICE at this low figure? Here is an automobile that is strictly high-grade in every respect. A car that will stand any service anywhere. Russell seven-passenger is a long car—120 inches wheel base. It has big wheels—36 inches all around. But it's a light car, and therefore an economical car to maintain. The two extra seats in the tonneau can be easily removed when not needed. It has shaft drive, selective transmission, floating type of rear axle, etc.

No man who has needed capacity in his car for seven passengers can fail to appreciate the importance of this splendid model. No man can ride behind the motor of this car without knowing that here is reserve power that will laugh at hills, mud, or sand.

Come in and see the car—have a ride in it. We'll be glad to show you what this car can do. Telephone us to-day (Main 2072), and arrange for a demonstration. Fully described in our catalogue, sent on request.

Those most prominently identified with the management, however, are men who have had wide experience in Detroit factories.

The wheels of a car should be jacked up and periodically tested for smoothness of running and for side play. If a sharp click is heard when spinning the front wheel, or if its motion is momentarily checked, it is possible that one of the balls has become broken or split. If this is the case, the ball should be removed at once and a new ball substituted, since if this is not done, serious damage may result, and an entire renewal be necessitated.

To Clean The Radiator

The safest and most efficient method of removing scale from a radiator is to soften the scale with a chemical which will act upon the deposit and have little or no effect on the metal of the apparatus. A compound that possesses this property to a remarkable degree is tri-sodium phosphate.

A solution of this chemical is made in water in the proportion of 1 lb. to 1 gallon of water. This is added to the water in the radiator, 4 to 6 ounces at a time, with the engine running, to keep the water in circulation. Continue to add the solution at intervals of a few minutes until an excess is present, viz., until a little water drawn from the radiator and allowed to settle, or still better, filtered, shows no further sediment when a few drops of the phosphate solution is added.

When the neutral point has been reached, add a half pint of the solution in excess, and operate the machine for a few hours. Then empty the water from the radiator and thoroughly flush out. Repeat this treatment and afterwards always add a small amount of tri-sodium phosphate solution to the water when replenishing the radiator. If much water is lost from steaming, flush out radiator about every 1000 miles.

The amount to use for waters of different localities will vary, but can be estimated roughly as outlined above. The doctrine of prevention is the most satisfactory in treating of radiator troubles. Ordinarily, scale is composed largely of compounds of lime, magnesia and iron. When the water is fresh, these minerals are held in solution by the carbonic acid gas, which is always present in our natural waters, and gives them their so-called "life." Under the action of heat from the engine, this gas is quickly driven off, and the minerals which it had held in solution become solids and settle onto the metal of the radiator, forming a hard crust or scale in a short time. The action of tri-sodium phosphate is to change the nature of the scale-forming minerals, transforming them into light, flocculent solids which do not stick to the metal of the radiator and harden.

Whenever possible, it is best to separate these scale-forming minerals from the water before using it in the radiator. This can be done in a tight barrel by stirring in the phosphate solution, allowing to settle and using the clear water.

TO TEST GOGGLES

Expensive Goggles Often Make Poor Glasses. How to Tell Good From Bad.

The price of motor goggles has often been little to do with their quality, and sometimes the most expensive are fitted with inferior glasses. Consequently, the purchaser should test them thoroughly before buying, especially as such testing is a simple matter. The easiest method is to hold the glass two or three inches from the eye, and look at some distant object thru it, moving the glass up and down, from side to side, and partially rotating it, all on the same plane. If the object on which the gaze is fixed appears to move in the slightest degree while these movements are being made, the glass is faulty.

A second method is to remove the glasses from the goggles, polish them carefully with a clean handkerchief, and then slide one over the other, using a fair amount of pressure. Should colored rings appear, it is certain that the surfaces have been very thoroughly ground and polished.

FORD'S BIG SHIPMENT

Record-breaking Output for One Day Reached by Makers of Popular Car.

On Monday, March 14, the Ford Motor Company shipped 140 cars from its Highland Park plant. This is the largest single day's shipment ever made by the Ford Motor Company, and probably the largest one-day output ever reached by any manufacturer.

It is the intention to continue this rate of production, and the only thing that can prevent it is the difficulty to secure sufficient freight cars. If the railroads could supply cars enough, the daily output of the Ford factory would average 200 automobiles.

"Now that we are housed in our big plant at Highland Park, we can easily build 250 to 300 cars every day in the year" is the way Mr. Ford expresses it.

That this one day's shipment is not the result of a spurge or a sudden burst of enthusiasm is evidenced by the orders booked the last few days. On the 11th, 242 orders were received by mail and telegraph; on the 12th, 338, and on the 14th, 170.

THE BRENNAN MONO-RAIL

This car is driven by a gasoline engine. It is a further enlargement of the already huge field of the internal combustion motor.

CAUSE OF IGNITION TROUBLE.

The wiring of a car should be examined from time to time for signs of wear in the insulation. It often is found that at certain places the wires are exposed to continual the slight friction which will ultimately break thru the insulation and establish a short circuit. The timely application of a little insulating tape often will save much trouble in this respect. Wires often lie close to or loosen up and fall upon the hot exhaust pipe or muffler and their insulation destroyed by the heat; then again, they sometimes rub against moving parts, such as control rods of the carburetor or ignition devices, so that the insulation is worn away; or the sharp edges may have been left on the insulating tube or brackets designed to protect them, and thru the aid of the car's vibration their insulation damaged therefrom.

Spare tire shoes should always be kept in perfect condition and free from cuts. If these latter are left open, the fabric will become permeable with moisture, and deterioration will be more rapid than if the tires were in use. A good plan is to fill all such cuts with rubber cement immediately they are noticed; but, if there is not time for this, and they must be stowed away for some time before repairs can be made upon them, extreme care should be taken to exclude moisture.

McLAUGHLIN TROPHIES

The magnificent trophies shown in the above illustrations are the best possible evidence as to the supremacy of the McLaughlin car. They were won at the Manitoba and Montreal racing meets, the only racing meets that have yet been held in Canada.

The McLaughlin car was victorious in all kinds of events, from the one-mile to the 100-mile endurance test. There are no better tests of a machine than races of this kind. Victory proves that the winning auto is powerful, speedy and thoroughly sound in construction. In one of these high-speed races a car receives more racking and abuse than it would experience in a month of ordinary driving. The enormous number of McLaughlin cars sold in Canada during the first few weeks of this season shows that the general excellence and efficiency of this car are thoroughly appreciated by the motoring public and those who are about to become motorists.

CARE OF TERMINALS IN IGNITION SYSTEMS

Battery Ports Must Be Kept Clean and Free From Dirt—Hints on Temporary Connections.

The terminal binding screws of both battery and plugs should be properly set up and the battery posts kept clean and free from corrosion. Now that the patent clip and snap terminals are so largely used, there is very much less trouble upon this score than formerly, as the new style connections protect the cables from chafing at the ends and also from jarring loose. When making a temporary connection it is well to remember that a good strong connection can be made by twisting the strands of wire up tightly and forming a loop by bending over the right. If this is done, the binding screw will closely grip and hold the looped wire in place, and form a perfect electrical contact with the electrode of the plug. If the wire is bent to the left, the screw will have a tendency to force the loop apart when the screw is tightened, and the connection will be imperfect.

It is, of course, important to keep the terminals dry, as water is a fairly good conductor and its presence is likely to lead the current from its proper path and so cause a short circuit. This may be easily and effectually prevented by waterproofing the connections, either by employing insulating tape, or by varnishing. Common red sealing wax dissolved in gasoline is often used for the purpose, and forms a good protection. Paraffine is also largely used, and an ordinary candle rendered liquid by the application of heat may be used to form a protecting film on the wiring and answers the requirements very well indeed.

Soap should be dissolved in the water some time before using, if it is desired to prevent damage to the varnished surface. Dissolve about one pound of high-grade soft soap in each gallon of water and use anywhere from one-half to a full pint of this solution in each bucket of washing water. The car body should first be wet with clear water, then washed with the soap solution and immediately rinsed with water from a hose or with a sponge.

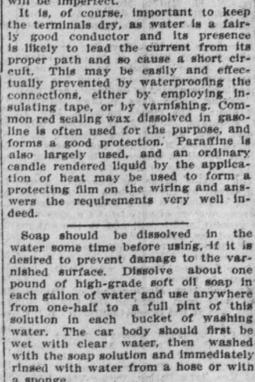

Spark plugs are invariably carried in the tool box, and unless some special means is provided for their protection, it often happens that porcelain are found to be broken when good ones are most needed. In the absence of a special carrying case or box, it is good practice to supply oneself with several sections of garden hose of sufficient diameter to accommodate a plug and of such lengths that the ends can be closed with waste to securely retain the plugs.

AEROPLANE GOT LOST FOR HOURS IN CLOUDS

Remarkable Episode in Test-F High From Paris to Rheims—Aviator Disappears From Sight.

PARIS, March 26.—One of the most daring performances in the annals of modern aviation has just been performed in France by M. Van den Born, the Belgian aviator. Rising from Châlons Camp on his Farman biplane, he made straight off in the direction of Rheims. He had remarked as he left that he intended lunching in that city. He reached Rheims in about 20 minutes, and alighted on the military rifle ground at 10.25 o'clock.

Out of Sight.

After luncheon, M. Van den Born re-started his motor, made several circles in the air like a carrier pigeon seeking his direction, and then flew off towards the Village of Prones. Here, however, the flying man lost his way, and M. Henry Farman and Mme. Van den Born, who had been following the aviator in a motor car, lost all trace of the aviator's whereabouts.

Becoming anxious, Mr. Farman sent a message of enquiry to Châlons Camp. M. Chvez, a pupil of Mr. Farman, who has made astonishing progress of late, thereupon went up into the air to look for the lost aviator. After rising to a height of 1500 feet, M. Chvez saw M. Van den Born, who had by that time found his way, flying towards the camp. M. Van den Born estimated that he covered a total distance of about 40 miles.

Aviator's Story.

Calm and radiant after his feat, M. Van den Born gave his impressions of his flight. He said: "Several days ago, I motored over the road to Rheims to know exactly how the ground lay. I was frightened when motoring by the height of some terrible looking poplar trees. I did not tell this to my wife, who would certainly have prevented me from making the attempt. But this morning when I was flying the poplars did not seem any bigger than bushes or hedgerows. At Rheims I did not attempt to fly round the cathedral, as I did not wish to endanger the lives of others. When I started homewards, I had no cathedral towers to guide me.

"After much aimless flying, I found myself over the hills which surround Rheims. I then altered in what I believed to be the direction of Châlons, but I soon found myself completely out of my course, so I decided to descend. I came to earth near the Village of Prones, where I got a farm laborer to give me directions and to start my propeller. I rose again, and almost immediately caught sight of the camp and distinguished Chvez on an aeroplane high up in the sky.

It is interesting to note that M. Van den Born and Chvez are rivals for the prize of Mr. Farman's premier pupil, and both cherished ambitions of being the first to fly to Rheims.

You are not only a progressive lot here, but you're wide awake—yes, I might say you're very wide awake. Here's an instance: I was taking a run around the city on the Belt Line, admiring what I could see of Toronto in that way. At the corner of Queen and Spadina a poorly dressed woman with an infant in her arms, got on the car. She was crying and it seems she had left her pocket book on the car that morning. Of course the conductor had not seen anything of it. While she was speaking with the conductor, a laboring man came in. He carried one of those dinner-pails with a vat top, you know the kind. He listened to the poor woman's story and said, 'and I feel like getting in on it myself. Let me repay you that money.' I handed him a dollar and he put it in his pocket. 'Much obliged,' said he. 'Oh, you're more than welcome,' said I. He picked up his dinner pail and as he was getting off the car he said, 'You don't happen to know the

Robert Hilliard breaks a mirror and shatters superstition at every performance of "A Fool There Was."

There is a scene of tragic intensity in the last act, that is as grimly gripping as the fatal supper in "A Parisian Romance," where Mansfield as the paled old rous Chevalier went down among the fragments of his shattered wine glass.

The fool of Kipling's verse and Porter Emerson Browne's play is alone in his dust-covered library. The vampire woman has brought him down to disgrace. The furniture is overturned, the curtains dragged down; everywhere is evidence of the rage excesses committed in the delirium of drink.

Finally the wreck of manhood finds courage to look into the fragment of a shattered mirror. What he sees reflected causes him to cry out in horror. He drops the glass; it shivers into a dozen pieces.

There are other deep-rooted theatrical superstitions that Hilliard defies. In his dressing-room is a bunch of peacock feathers, the most dreaded of theatrical hoodoos. To even point a peacock feather into the decorations of a theatre is supposed to be fatal ill luck.

And then there is the ladder. Nine the New York architect. It was with the host's little daughter Marie, who grew up to be Mrs. Gustave Frohman, and Mr. Hubert wrote the play. Marie and Robert were, of course, highly applauded by admiring friends and relatives and great careers were predicted for them, but they decided after much deliberation not to become stars at once, but went back to school.

The acting microphone had found lodgment in Master Hilliard's system, however, and lay quiescent but alert. Force of circumstances and the advice

At the Royal Alexandra

For two seasons past James T. Powers has been amusing large audiences at the Casino Theatre, New York, in the London musical success "Havana," which comes with the original cast and production to this city for an engagement of one week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, beginning Monday. That "Havana" has been a genuine success is evident enough in the fact of its long stay in New York and the reports which have come from play-goers who have seen it during that time.

The American stage has no more accomplished comedian than James T. Powers, in fact he is almost alone in the field. He is fitted for it by his build and his voice and practice has developed these comical possibilities to the utmost. In "Havana" Mr. Powers plays the part of a sailor man with such irresistible comedy that he keeps the audience in gales of laughter during the entire time he is on the stage. This sailor-man is named Niz, who, seven years prior to the opening of the play visited Havana and wedded a fair Cuban girl, but he does not remember her for he was taken aboard his vessel by his mates and not allowed to return. In fear and trembling he comes back to the island every moment that his wife will get him. This aloofness leads some revolutionists to suppose that he is one of them and he is dragged into their councils. The police raid the meeting and arrest him as the leader of the movement and he is led out to the slaughter and only saved by the timely arrival of his wife who declares him legally dead as he has been absent seven years and so they may not shoot him. Thus all ends happily. As the said little sailor-man Mr. Powers is said to have the best part of his whole career.

The Messrs. Shubert, under whose direction Mr. Powers is appearing, have staged "Havana" magnificently and have surrounded their star with a splendid company numbering about one hundred players. The original cast will be seen here and besides Mr. Powers includes Edith Decker, Ernest Lambert, Percy Ames, Harold Vizard, Suzanne Willis, Joseph Phillips, Will Phillips, Charles Prince, Ernest Hare, Geraldine Malone, Marie Satoris, Donald Archer and others. There is a big chorus of typical Casino beauties who are exquisitely gowned.

Musically "Havana" is said to be well above the average musical play. The score was composed by Leslie Stuart, and one of the numbers in particular, "Hello People, People Hello," sung by an octette of little girls, has made a tremendous hit. There are some twenty musical numbers in all, and they are praised for their melodious quality. The original book of "Havana" was written by George Crossmith, Jr. and Graham Hill, but it was revised for America by Mr. Powers. The lyrics are by Adrian Ross and George Arthur. The piece was staged by Ned Wayburn. From this distance "Havana" looks like a sure winner. Matinees will be given on Thursday and Saturday.

her brother become involved. He places honor above everything else and prefers to be defamed rather than do what he considers not just right. Finally by his handling of certain situations, he is proclaimed the "Man of the Hour" and a public idol.

Henry E. Harle has placed in rehearsal Winchell Smith's new comedy, "Bobby Burnit," a dramatization of George Randolph Chester's popular novel, "The Making of Bobby Burnit," on Monday, March 14. Wallace Edinger will be the featured member of the company. It will open at Atlantic City on April 4, playing four nights, and will play Washington for a week's engagement, beginning April 11. By reason of the great friendship existing between William Gillette and Mr. Smith, the former will attend the rehearsals and assist in staging the production by his valuable advice. Mr. Gillette has postponed a trip to Europe until after the opening of the play.

At the Grand

That unusual play "The Man of the Hour," will be seen in this city for the first time at less than dollar fifty prices at the Grand this week, opening with a special matinee Easter Monday. Despite the fact that it has three years of record-breaking business to its credit, George Broadhurst's clever satire on certain American conditions, still retains as firm a hold on the public as at first—this grasp on the public's approval is in a great measure due to the fact that the play is a good repeater, one that can be seen time after time with unabated interest and unalloyed pleasure. Wm. A. Brady and Jos. R. Grismer have selected a particularly fine cast of prominent players for this season's portrayal of the well-known characters in the play. The company includes John G. Sparks, John Robertson, Thos. Irwin, Homer Barton, J. A. Marcus, Tom Hall, Frank Kendrick, Bernard Cavanaugh, Mart Cody, E. H. Peit,

In keeping with Easteride, Manager Walt M. Leslie will offer a vaudeville bill composed entirely of headline acts this week at this popular playhouse. The bill will be headed by Miss May Tully, the talented Canadian actress of Victoria, British Columbia, who will present "Stop, Look and Listen," one of the most realistic pieces of its kind in vaudeville. Through the sketch, there is not a waste moment, nor one that is not attractive. The title of the piece is chosen from the warning signal put up at grade crossings on railroads, and admirably fits the play, which points the moral that young women who are stage struck should remain at home and not run away to bask in the lights of the Gay White Way.

musical comedies, the producer has excelled himself. In "The Twentieth Century" there is a capable company of thirty, three big scenes and a finale to the act that makes the audience sit fast and hold tight to the seats, as they apparently swing thru the country on the back of an observation train, at a sixty-mile-an-hour clip. The glow of the lamps on the rear car as the train thunders along thru the dusk of an August day is a beautiful picture in itself, with the framework of the car giving a setting for the smiling faces of the young people in the car, who are supposedly en route to Chicago, so that Susie Spooner and Jack Higger, the hero and heroine of the piece may elude the irate father who is pursuing them with a constable, in order to prevent their marriage. "The Twentieth Century" is one of the important events in the local theatrical season and it is safe to predict that its engagement here will result in the same record-breaking business that has attended its appearance everywhere else.

The special attraction for the week is Stuart Barnes the American monologist and no greater favorite every playgoer. Mr. Barnes has not been seen here in two seasons and since that time played a long engagement in London, where he became a favorite immediately. His material is always up-to-date and his songs and monologue never fail to win for him the warmest greeting. Always immaculate in appearance and with a delightful personality and an originality of delivery, Mr. Barnes will be gladly welcomed.

John E. Gordon and Arthur J. Pickens will present a very funny one-act comedy, entitled, "What Would You Do." The six flying Banavards will be a sensational feature of the bill. This is a great casting act and the work of the six is fast and daring. Bowman Bros, black-face comedians, have a genuinely funny talking act. El Cota is an xylophonist of extraordinary merit; he was seen by Sheagor's last season and is very well remembered for his wonderful performance. J. Rubens, the lightning artist, whose transparent pictures are always a delight, will have a place on the bill and the great show of the week will close with the kinetograph.

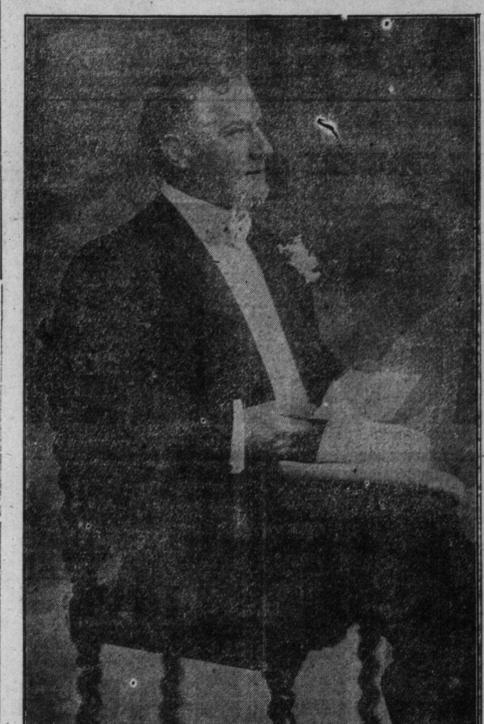

MINNIE BURKE, WITH TROCADERO BURLESQUERS AT THE GAYETY THIS WEEK.

fortune of our theatregoers to witness a company of this kind, and they should not fail to grasp the opportunity. There are a number of novel pieces which will make their first appearance in this country. A new burlesque from the pen of a popular author to the enjoyment of a long and varied bill. Manager Waldron presents two new and uproariously funny burlesques entitled "Sweeney's Fish," a political satire that is said to abound in every hit on the presidential situation and politics in general, and "The Isle of Nowhere," a comedy burlesque, the scene of which is laid on an island off the coast of Japan. This latter skit has a good plot and is full of unique situations, and the color schemes are said to be most varied and beautiful. There are three big numbers which are bound to be immensely popular with the patrons of burlesque houses. They are "The Japanese Girls," "The Bass Ball Girls," and "The Rough Riders." A horse is carried to lend realism to one of the scenes and the production in many respects will prove a revelation on the popular priced circuit.

Both pieces will be under the personal direction of the author, Mr. Frank Finney, who is recognized as one of the cleverest Irish comedians in the business, having already made a reputation for himself as a writer and producer of musical farces and burlesques. Mr. Finney will have the leading role in both skits and this insures the patrons of burlesque that the comedy element will not be neglected. He will be splendidly supported by such capable performers as George Brennan, Harry Buckley, Charles Malison and Frank Ross, and such handsome and accomplished burlesquers as Olga Orloff, Lillian Waters, Minnie Burke, Tillie Cohen and a score of pretty and talented girls. The bill will include a number of high-class vaudeville acts.

Among the features will be Frank Finney & Co. in a racing comedy entitled "A 50 to 1 Shot," in which a horse and moving pictures will be introduced to give the real touch to the scene. Elliot, Belair and Elliot, in a wonderful acrobatic performance; Frank Ross, a clever Hebrew and German comedian. All who want to witness an unusual entertainment of the best and brightest in vaudeville should visit the Gayety Theatre this week.

How Actors Study Characters James T. Powers Tells How He Secured Some Splendid Types

The recent cry of theatrical managers for "types" in plays is well illustrated by the efforts of James T. Powers to find in life a counterpart of Samuel Nix, one of the characters in "Havana." How Mr. Powers who, by the way, in addition to his duties as a comedian, adapted "Havana" for American use, ran face to face with the aforesaid Mr. Nix in an incident not to be found in the play. "It was this way," began Mr. Powers. "Last summer my wife and I were peacefully sojourning in the White Mountains, when my negative and positive poles bumped together, and I got a C. Q. D. from Lee Shubert to go to London to see 'Havana.' A C. Q. D. from Lee Shubert means P. D. Q. and it was not long before I found myself on top of the bus heading for George Edwards' London Gaiety Theatre. After looking the play over, I started out to find Samuel Nix, as he might be in life. I hurried down to the wharves where the bananas come in and was soon mixing with the fruit pirates and stevedores. In half an hour I found myself, that is I found myself as you see me in 'Havana.' Drawing near to the red-headed bonucer of the banana schooner 'Sonora,' I caught a few words from his cannibal looking mouth.

"Three days later I went to the same dock, but to my chagrin, there was no schooner. I had attired myself in an old suit of clothes, so that I might feel perfectly at home. Finally after a long search I located the ship. I sat down to await the villain. Presently my model came ashore and seeing me he said: 'Go aboard, if you want something to do, you land-lubber.' There was something in his tone, or rather his size that made me obey instantly and before I knew it, I was on the deck of the flag ship of the banana squadron pulling away at the rain-soaked canvas. The mate, that is my model, stood over me for over an hour without saying a word, and I glanced at him 'out of the corner of my eye and studied his pose, that is where I got the bend of my legs and the hard-a-port turn about that I use thruout the performance. I suppose most persons who see us get off odd steps on the stage, think that we learn them at dancing school. "Almost in the same way, I found a counterpart for my role in the 'Run Away Girl.' There was a fellow in a little red cap who once piloted our party up the Rhine. This fellow was the real Pippin. Everybody liked him and he certainly showed us the sights. "When I studied the part of the Chinaman in 'San Toy,' I took my washing to the Chinese laundry near Daly's Theatre with the hope of getting something for atmosphere. Entering the laundry I gave him something like this: "How de doo, John? Have collars all luddy plitty soon, Fridee, yep John? "O will have your collars ready for you by Friday Mr. Powers," answered the Chinaman."

Bill At Shea's

Nothing that has ever been produced in vaudeville has had the thrills and delightful atmosphere that marks Jess L. Lasky's sensational romantic musical comedy, "The Twentieth Century," which heads the bill at Shea's Theatre this week. Every act that comes from Lasky's headquarters is better than the one preceding and in this newest of tabloid

Washington Society Girls is an extravaganza company that will make its appearance at the Star for the first time in an entirely new departure in theatricals. or will be one of the main features introducing ten clever comedians and twenty handsome and talented young maidens. An olio of polite vaudeville will also be introduced. The costumes that will be worn in the various productions are said to be marvels of elegance and beauty. Appropriate scenery is also carried to properly present each production. The musical portion of the program it is claimed has been written especially for this company, and some very classical and catchy melodies are introduced. It is safe to say that the management have spared neither time or expense to thoroughly equip the show with all the necessary requirements.

Constance Collier, the English actress who will this spring by special permission of Charles Frohman play the principal woman parts in Shakespearian Stratford-on-Avon performances, is easily the most enthusiastic admirer anywhere in America of Sir A. W. Pinero's new play "Mid-Channel," which Ethel Barrymore is now acting at The Empire Theatre. Miss Collier has recently seen "Mid-Channel" on four successive matinee days when she was not herself playing.

At the Gayety

Few, if any, managers in the burlesque field have had a more varied experience in catering to the public than Mr. Charles H. Waldron, who is among the pioneers of the burlesque business. Mr. Waldron's Trocadero Company, now in its ninth successful season, promises this year to eclipse all its predecessors in the magnificence of its scenery and costumes, the beauty of its women, its clever comedians and splendid vaudeville performers. Many new and elaborate musical numbers have been introduced which will add Augustus Thomas, the author of "The Harvest Moon" and "The Witching Hour," has temporarily given up playwriting to join in New England the Frohman Company that is now on tour in "The Harvest Moon." It is said that Mr. Thomas has in mind a scheme of unusual originality for the future of this same company in different Augustus Thomas dramas. The playwright is to travel with the company for several weeks, at the end of which he is expected to give out the details of his new traveling dramatic stock company. Sydney Rosenfeld, author of "Children of Destiny," will leave for Reno, Nev., in a few days, to put the finishing touches on a farcical play he is now writing entitled "A Divorce Colony," which will be produced early next season.

Cyril Maude's daughter, Margery, made her debut as an actress in the recent London opening of Charles Frohman's presentation of "The Toyman of Nuremberg" at his Repertory Theatre. She scored an instantaneous success and great things are predicted for her. William H. Crane, who has been touring the south in "Father and the Boys," says that the early southern spring which he has been enjoying has turned his thoughts toward yachting already. He has ordered his new boat made ready to go into commission the day he closes his tour for the season.

Concerning English Plays and Players

By M. Watson.

LONDON, March 26. — (Special).— Charles Frohman is back from Paris, but he has not brought "Chanticleer" in his pocket. After witnessing Rostand's play at the Porte St. Martin, he came to the conclusion that he did not want it for this country, altho he still sticks to his determination to do it in America. "You see," he said to me, "my public over there expect it of me, and, whether I lose or make money by the venture, I can't afford to disappoint them. When you are out to do big things you must not mind if occasionally you drop a bit by the way. It's different over here. My own impression is that the interest awakened by the spectacle of a lot of birds and animals playing the principal roles in a big drama in place of men and women would not be long sustained and that the average English playgoer would show but moderate curiosity in the performance. All the same, "Chanticleer" is a splendid piece of work and will probably run 200 nights in Paris. I fancy Hertz and Coquelin, the managers of the Porte St. Martin, will arrange to have the production transferred to London in June or July. When King Edward went to see the piece the other evening, he strongly advised them to do so, and I have no doubt they will act upon the suggestion."

Frohman has acquired all the plays I mentioned last week. Henry Bataille's "La Vierge Folle," one of the most brilliant successes of recent times; Henry Lavedan's "Sire," and Tristan Bernard's "Le Danseur Inconnu," together with a new comedy by Callavet and De Fiers, to be produced shortly at the Varietes. In purchasing this last, he buys a pig in a poke, but the reputation of the authors is a sufficient guarantee for the quality of their work. Frohman is now busy with rehearsals of "Alas Jimmy Valentine," to be done at the Comedy about Easter, with a cast including Gerald du Maurier, Alexandra Carlisle and that old Adelphi favorite, Harry Nichols. "The Climax" has been withdrawn at the Comedy, after a fortnight's run, and Marie Dorso will take a rest until next fall when she makes another of the other side of a new play by William Gillette. He, by the way, is expected in London within the next fortnight. It was pleasing to hear from Frohman that altho Gillette had solemnly declared he would never act again, he, Frohman, was perfectly confident that if only he could find the right piece he would have no difficulty in persuading him to the contrary. "The fact is," said Frohman, "Gillette was a sick man when he made the announcement. Now that he is sound and hearty, I haven't the slightest doubt he will gladly reappear on the stage."

George Tyler of Liebler and Company is due in London on Monday. He has crossed the Atlantic in order to secure a theatre for the immediate production of Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's "The Dawn of a To-morrow," with Gertrude Elliott in the leading part. It is thought he will find it rather hard to get what he wants, for at present there are not many suitable houses vacant. Tyler is only prepared to deal for a month, and no London manager of any importance would care to accept a tenant on such terms. From a cable, which he despatched from New York just before sailing, I judge he has an idea that he will be able to obtain the Lyric in May. But only the absolute failure of Lewis Walker's revival of Sheridan's comedy, "The Rivals," at that house would render such a thing possible. By-the-by, Waller has just engaged that ever-young old favorite, Leonard Boyne, for the part of Sir Lucius O'Trigger. Boyne is a wonderful fellow. I believe he is 60 if not more, yet he looks like a youth of 28. His hair has lost none of its virgin color, and he still boasts a fairly thick crop on the top of his head. His figure, too, has shown no disposition to burgeon out, and his energy is amazing. Hitherto he has, in any production of "The Rivals," always played the hero, Captain Absolute. It must be something of a wrench to him to make his appearance in the elderly role of Sir Lucius.

Business, taken all round, cannot be described as inordinately good. Arthur Bourcier is only doing moderately well at the Globe, with Somerset Maugham's new play, "The Tenth Man" and "The Blue Bird," at the Haymarket, shows distinct signs, especially in the evening, of bringing its flight to a not very distant conclusion.

Herbert Trench, indeed, is about to start rehearsals for a new piece at this theatre. It is named "The Princess Priscilla," and, as I remember rightly, by an American writer, "The Little Damsel," at Wyndham's, comes off at the end of April. Frank Curzon is still undecided whether to let the house for the remainder of the season or to produce a new piece, with Charles Hawtrey in it. At the Lyric, the Sicilians have been a financial failure; and Robert Arthur, who is running them, will drop something like $10,000 as the result of his six weeks' venture.

The Old-Time Shawl.
The shawl was originally not a woman's garment exclusively, for the Scotch Highlands has his tartan plaid, and the men of northern Italy still wear a cloak which is very little more than a shawl. There can be no question that the shawl is more useful and more picturesque as an article of attire than the close fitting coats both men and women now wear. The shawl could in a case of emergency be used to protect two persons or to wrap a child in or as an extra bed covering. Its fashion did not change every three

In the course of a journey between Peking and Kashgar undertaken by M. Zincho Tachi Bana, a young Japanese, he has discovered a number of valuable manuscripts, which he intends to place before the societies interested in the subject in Europe. It is reported that Dr. Dennison Ross, at present principal of the Calcutta University, has examined these manuscripts and declares them to be of great value. Some of them were discovered at the site of Lu-Lan, the capital of an ancient kingdom which flourished somewhere about 200 B.C. The most important discovery is said to be an official letter from a Chinese envoy who termed himself "High Commissioner of the Western Country to the Native Kings." If the writer, as is believed, was an official of the After-Han dynasty, the document would be not more than about 1700 years old.

GENEROUS, GLOWING HEAT THE INSTANT YOU WANT IT

It is only a matter of a few weeks until the house will be uncomfortably warm during the greater part of the day, if coal fires are kept going in stoves or furnaces—and fuel will be needlessly wasted.

But you will want heat—mornings and evenings—in bedroom and bathroom, in dining and living rooms.

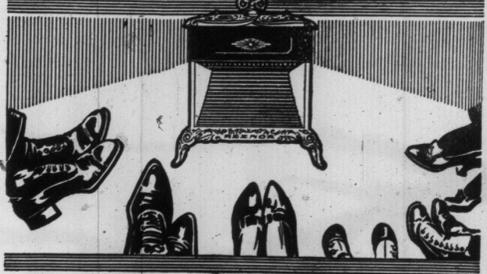

And you will want quick, ample heat.

No heating device in the world can so completely meet these requirements as the Reznor Reflector Gas Heater.

No other diffuses heat so widely as the Reznor does the instant gas meets match and bursts into flame.

For the Reznor, be it known, is the one true reflector heater—because it is the one gas burner that produces the true, yellow illuminating flame.

THIS STOVE KEEPS YOUR FEET WARM

When you buy the Reznor, you do not bind yourself to keep it, satisfactory or unsatisfactory.

On the other hand, if it falls short in one instance of any claim we make for it, we don't want you to keep it. Within a week, sent it back to the dealer from whom you bought it, and we will refund the price.

But you won't send a Reznor back once you have enjoyed its cheery, generous heat.

REZNOR

THE ORIGINAL REFLECTOR GAS HEATER.

But do you get the idea that the Reznor, because these quick results are claimed for it, is anything short of a steady, efficient heater.

Just the contrary is the case, as hundreds of Toronto citizens who have heated their homes all winter long with the Reznor will testify.

It gives off a steady, generous, glowing heat—sending it far out into the room and over the floor.

It is economical almost beyond belief in its consumption of fuel, because it burns every atom of gas—perfect, complete combustion that means 100 per cent. heat from every foot of gas.

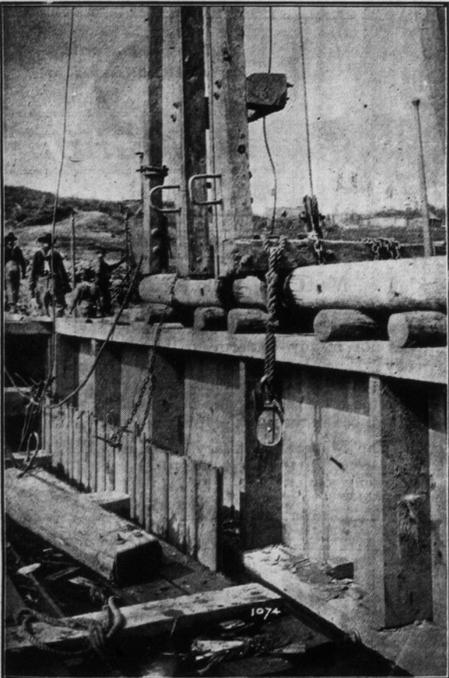

If you think the Reznor a wonderful heater, you are right. But there is yet another feature utterly different—infinitely better.

This is the sale of the Reznor on seven days' trial.

The same gown, same faultless fit and yet the woman wearing a scientifically cut and tailored corset will appear more smartly dressed than she who wears a ready-made corset.

WOOLNOUGH Tailored Corsets $3.50, $6, $10.

Your order can be given and completed just as quickly as you can select a pair of corsets at any store and have them delivered.

Woolnough tailored corsets are designed to meet the changing fashion—to maintain the natural lines of form which nature endows every woman—to correct the defective lines caused from ill-fitting ready-to-wear corsets.

M. Henri Rochefort, the impetuous editor of L'Intransigeant, has made an effort to ascertain the wifely characteristics most desired by the average Frenchman. He asked how, in the opinion of his readers, the following thirteen good qualities in a woman should be graded in point of importance: Beauty, kindness, courage, constancy, fidelity, good nature, brightness, frankness, cleverness, wealth, health, wit and talent. Some twenty thousand men sent in answers, and the result is surprising. The majority put wealth about half way down the list, and beauty last of all. Neither idealists nor realists were prepared for such a result.—Democratic Telegram.

Old English Bookkeeping.
Not so many years ago our national system of bookkeeping was almost as clumsy as the primitive methods of counting on fingers. This was the checkered way of keeping accounts by means of notched sticks of elmwood called tallies, a plan that strongly resembled Robinson Crusoe's mode of keeping his calendar on the desert island. In the reign of George III. an enquiry was made by some revolutionary man as to whether pen, ink and paper could not be substituted, but the

One of the highest endorsements which could be given for them, is that they have been used by the Superintendents of Cemeteries in their own families, and two Superintendents of our large Cemeteries have been buried in them by their own wish—Extract from letter of recommendation from Pittsburg, Pa. The Ventilation of the Simplon Tunnel.
Altho the use of electric traction obviates many of the serious inconveniences of traversing long tunnels caused by the smoke and fumes, the system of artificial ventilation originally employed for the Simplon tunnel is still in use, notwithstanding the adoption of electric locomotives. The two outlets, at Iselle and Brigue, except at the time a train passes, are closed by thick canvas curtains or screens, sliding on an iron framework surrounding the orifice of the tunnel. Two powerful fans, driven by electricity, force 1000
litres of air per second, at the Brigue end, into the tunnel, while a similar installation at the Iselle end extracts the same volume of air per second from the tunnel. The pressure on the screen of the Brigue extremity is four atmospheres per square metre, while at Iselle it amounts to 12 atmospheres.
The raising and lowering of the curtains is effected by electricity, but it can also be done by hand, in case of an interruption in the working of the machines.—London Times.

Pink and Mauve for New Decorations
Pink and mauve are now the most fashionable shades in flowers, and the flower farmers of the Women's Agricultural and Horticultural Union have been advised to grow plenty of pink and purple flowers for this year's market.

A season or two ago, when yellow drawing rooms were in vogue, yellows and rich bronzes were the favorite tints in flowers. A change in furnishing fashions is said to be responsible for the vogue of pink and purple blooms.

The old-world chintz patterns are being revived. Chairs are upholstered in flower patterned materials, in which reds, old roses, heliotropes and purples softly blend. Curtains, wall paper and friezes, even china and pottery, have come under the same color influence, and it is found that pink and mauve flowers give a better effect than yellow blooms in such a room.—New York

"The Man of the Hour." A good many managers wonder how William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grismer contrive to make their successes profitable season after season. Perhaps it is because they play fair with the public. One of their shows is as good the last time it comes as the first. They keep their trade mark glistening, for they intend to use it a long time. There are standard goods in theatricals as in manufactures—as for ex-new play; Robert Mantell in Shakespearean repertoire; Thomas A. Wise and Douglas Fairbanks in "A Gentleman From Mississippi," and four companies on tour in different parts of the country; Tim Murphy in a new play; Wright Lorrimer in "The Shepherd King"; the everlasting pastoral play, "Way Down East," and two companies in George Broadhurst's new play, "The Dollar Mark."

The presentation of "The Man of the Hour" in this city, which begins an engagement of one week at the Grand beginning Monday Matinee will be particularly interesting because it brings several of the well known players who have been identified heretofore only with the long runs in New York, Boston and Chicago.

Altho the long-sought freedom from Street Railway tyranny is denied, Toronto still has reason to support Sir James for has he not left us our reliable genuine 30-day Syl-labic Short-hand Institute—even our Moon College—where our young men and women can secure the best that can be had in Stenography with only 30 days' study. Surely this an asset to Toronto, and hundreds will think kindly of Sir James as they enroll with this famous, reliable, genuine 30-day Short-hand College, and secure good posi-
