London, Nov. 24.—The Daily Mail, in an editorial called forth by the fact ed by the Chinese that the influence that the people are marveling that such

"The fact is." the paper says, "that London's showy, but ineffective fire-fighting equipment is a decade behind that of Montreal or New York. Madrid, Nov. 24.-The friends of Gen. Weyler say the popular demonstration was not so big, because he was not expected to arrive here until today, when it was intended to make a great demonstration in his honor.

The official report of the landing of Gen. Weyler at Barcelona differs from the independent reports. The former says the general landed without the demonstration in his honor assuming the proportions anticipated, and that as he traversed the streets the public appeared indifferent. Continuing, the official version of the affair adds that six gala carriages awaited the general, but that the crowd was small, no enthusiasm was manifested, and that there were no delegations of students or politicians, and that no windows were decorated.

BRITAIN'S TRADE RIVALS.

London, Nov. 24.—Right Hon. Chas. T. Ritchie, president of the board of trade, made an important speech before the chamber of commerce of H. TENNANT-VETERINARY SUR Creydon, taking as his theme the decline of British exports during the last ten months, upon which he hung a grave warning against American competition, now "ousting British trade." Mr. Ritchie, after declaring that the Dingley tariff and the engineering trade dispute were mainly responsible for the recent decline of exports, and after pointing out that England had no weapons against the tariff, said there was a great deal of talk in commercial circles about the serious competition of Germany; but he thought they were too apt to overlook a much more serious competitor, the Unital The man who is unsuccessful in love at least escapes the horrors of war which ought to be executed here. Houston, Texas, Nov. 24.-A special to the Post from Morgan, Texas, says. "In March last, in the columns of the Post, was noticed the death of Joseph E. Blanther, alias Forbes, who committed suicide in the Meridian jail in this county on March 2. While Blauther was incarcerated in the Meridian jail for the murder of Mrs. Langfeldt, a prisoner named Pitts, accused of a minor charge, occupied the cell adjoining that of Blanther. Pitts is a farmer, who now lives at Iredell, in this county. In a letter to Worl, Dillar & Word, attorneys, of Meridian, under date of Nov. 22, Mr. Pitts incloses a letter from Blanther and says: "I have been looking through some papers they had on file in jail in Maridian, and I find the inclosed sheet, which speaks for itself. A SAD STORY

In Connection with the Thanksgiving Season-Death Saved the Bailiff Any Trouble. New York, Nov. 24 .- A sad story of Thanksgiving time is thus given in the World: Death has ended the struggles of the aged widow, Mrs. Isabella A. Hatschatcher, who lived at the rear of 139 Ten Eyck street, Williamsburg. Last week she got a letter from a collector for an agency in New York, in which $12 was demanded for rent due. The woman had earned 65 cents. She told her neighbors that she would put away 50 cents for the rent, and with the remaining 15 cents she would still be able to buy something to eat.

"I am 63 years of age," she said. "Life is a struggle for me. I don't believe I will live many more days." Her neighbors tried to cheer her, but she left them, and, going to rer rooms.

turned the key. On Monday morning the postman slipped a letter under the door, and as there was no response to his repeated raps he called a policeman. The door was forced open, and the old woman was found on a pallet of straw, dead from starvation. The letter lay where it had been placed. The policeman opened it. It was a notification that unless the rent was paid at once, the wo-the last weekly report issued by the surgeon-general of the marine hospital service giving the returns up to the 19th inst., there had then appeared. during the yellow fever epidemic in the south a total of 4,289 cases, of which 446 had proved fatal. Of the total number of cases, 1,847 were reported from Louisiana, 1.625 from Mississippi, 740 from Alabama, 52 from Tennessee, 16 from Texas, 4 from Illinois, 3 from Georgia, and one each from Florida and Kentucky. All but ten of the cases reported from Louisiana are credited to New Orleans. Among the cities, Biloxi and Edwards, Miss., come next. the former with 584 and the latter with 455; Scranton, Miss., furnished 360 cases and Mobile, Ala., 355. In Tennessee the fever was confined to Memphis, Ocean Springs, Miss., where the epidemic originated, furnished 23 cases and 6 dearns. The cases in Kentucky, Illinois and Georgia were confined to refugees. A computation shows that about 101/2 per cent of the cases proved fatal. In Mississippi the death rate was less than 6 per cent of the total number. At New Orleans, 141/2 per cent of the patients died, and at Mobile, less than 13 per cent.

CANADIANS RETALIATE. Montreal, Nov. 24 .- For many years the American cyclists have found it easy to come over the border and race for glory or for money, but they will strike a snag in the future, and they have only their own government to thank for this. The officials at Washington insist upon the enforcement of a very silly regulation or law, and Canada, as a consequence, has decided to retaliate. Heretofore, the Canadian Wheelmen's Association has gone bond for the machines and good behavior of the American wheelmen, and, to the credit of these gentlemen, it must be said that this confidence was never betrayed, but such can no longer be the case. The United States $25 each and suspended them until the have decreed that the order giving fines are paid. The men monkeyed in Canadians only three days duty free a race in Philadelphia.

Cyclists all over Canada regret this action, but they feel that the government is justified in taking such a stand. For the American racing men nothing but the most kindly feelings are entertained, and they hope that the present "stiffness" will soon blow over. MICHAEL HAS A FINE BANK ACCOUNT.

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 24.-A disastrous fire started in the city hall early this morning, and had gained such headway when discovered that the efforts of the firemen were powerless to stop it, and its total destruction was inevitable. NARROW ESCAPE FROM CREMA-

The upper part of the building was used as an opera house, police court and city offices, while the lower was occupied by the public library and reading room, city treasurer's office, market arcade, including the stores of W. R. Marshall & Son, produce dealers; McAuley & Son, butchers; T. B. Johnson, butchers, and the lockup, in which were a couple of tramps, who were not gotten out without some difficulty. The contents of the stores were mostly removed in safety, but the rest of the building, including the public library, is practically a total loss. A Scotch concert was held last night, and a new piano brought from Toronto for the occasion, together with the one belonging to the hall, were destroyed. The origin of the fire is not ascertainable at the moment of writing, but is supposed to have started in the upper part of the building, about the stage or dressing rooms. A strong breeze is blowing, but the building is isolated, and the fire will not likely spread. Burning embers are falling thickly around, but a coating of snow on the roofs will likely prevent further damage. Loss, about $50,000; insurance on

Farm Machinery.

Shelter, Care and Loss Resulting From Neglect.

Practical Man Talks Most In terestingly.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: All will agree that farm machinery should be sheltered and otherwise cared for when not in actual use. As we find comparatively few farmers provided with an implement house, we therefore suggest building one. In the first place, select a site convenient to the lanes leading to the various fields and at a proper distance from the other buildings to insure safety in case of fire. Twenty by forty feet is a convenient size for an average farm. Divide into three spaces, two of 13 feet each and one of 14 feet. Inclose these spaces on one side with doors, either roll or swing. Have a window in the end of building in the 13 foot space. As for lumber, common will do, using good shingles for roofing and pine lumber for doors. Make good joints to prevent the entrance of fowls and sparrows, which are extremely fond of roosting on the implements much to the discredit of the owner. The floor should be 12 inches above the ground, and the approaches to the doors filled evenly with earth or gravel. The farmer and two or three neighbors, one of whom should be a "framer," can build and complete it in four days. The shed being ready, store in the implements as follows: The binder in the 14 foot space, and by it the rest of the harvesting implements; next the balance of the implements, and lastly the vehicles. Leave a passage of 10 feet between harvesting and tillage machinery that there may be convenient access to all. Order in this building is very important. Have a place every article and every article in its place. When the implements are gathered into the shed, procure a gallon of coal oil and a 25-cent brush and apply a coat of the oil to the bright parts of castings and wherever liable to be injured by rust. Do this once or twice a year; also get half a gallon of boiled linseed oil and apply to woodwork, especially where the paint has worn off. Repeat this operation once in five years. Use good machine oil on all the bearings. Run the binder and other harvesting machine of the state of the st chines in shelter every day as soon as the day's work is over. Allow no implement to remain in the field for any lengthy period, but place in the shed in the condition described. It is thus ready to be taken out on the shortest notice in good working order. Tighten all loose bolts before using an implement. Keep all machinery knives, colters, skimmers, etc., sharp and in good repair, thus resulting in good work, lighter draft and heavier crops. A workbench set under the window ing would be a good investment. But in the celebration of the festival. farms are most pernicious. Plows, sizes, was settled without an apology, harrows, seed drills, etc., lie exposed to each party to pay his own costs. weather the year round and the binder for months after harvest; the vehicles fare much the same; in fact, all are most shamefully neglected. None give satisfaction while in use. We consider that such negligence causes an annual loss to the owner of at least 20 per cent of their original cost.

Dr. J. A. Robertson, of amount of work, but cared for under the two different modes of treatment. He estimates the one neglected to last but four years, while the one well cared for will last twelve years. A large area of new fall wheat has been sown, but owing to the dry condition of the soil much of the seeding was done later than usual. Spring wheat was rather poor in the west, but good in the remainder of the province, although much shrunken grain is reported in some quarters. Rye and buckwheat were splendid crops this year.

Peas have been a great disappointment; the yields generally were light, and there are many small peas. The bug was unusually destructive. It was

Fruit trees are in good condition. There is not the usual surplus of pears, and apples are scabby and scarce in most parts of the province.

The Day We Will Observe.

Tomorrow Canadians will celebrate the special Thanksgiving Day of 1897 with lighter and more cheerful hearts than earthly conditions have dictated for many a long day. Indeed, for the by our people this year thanksgiving might most appropriately be rendered daily. Peace has been maintained within our borders, while other nations have been ravaged by war, with its attendant horrors. We have been blessed with a good harvest, which is being marketed at remunerative prices. | minion. Trade has been revived, employment has been multiplied, and prosperity has taken the place so long occupied by depression. In every part of our country new industries have been springing up, and our great Northwestern heritage is found to be far richer in natural wealth than the most sanguine of us imagined. Evan the much-despised far north rocky territory proves fabulously rich, so that while our prairies yield gold in grain the virgin soil of the foothills of the of being an impudent forgery. The Rockies contribute their full share to our country's wealth in yield of the yellow metal itself.

Never before today has the country stood so high in the eyes of the nations of the earth in point of natural and to the point. Consult any authenresources, of prosperous development, tic report, such as Pliny's letter to the of social progress, and for this, too, Emperor Trajan, and it will be seen we ought to be thankful. A totally unfounded charge of partisanship is made against Lord Aberdeen by an anenymous correspondent in our city contemporary, the Free Press. The writer more than insiauates that Lord Aberdeen, in his dianer parties attending the change in the leadership of the Government of Ontario boycotted the members of the Opposition! The facts are plain to those who read the public press. The eve before the retirement of Lieut .-Governor Kirkpatrick, who is a Conservative, the Governor-General gave a dinner to which were invited the personal friends of that dignitary. On the eve of Sir Oliver Mowat's assumption of the office of lieutenant-gove :nor. Lord Aberdeen gave another en. tertainment, to which were invited the personal friends of the newly-appointed representative of her Majesty in the Provincial Administration. And he might have added that the best cheese imported comes from this fair Do-

of our contemporaries, purporting to be the alleged report of Pontius Pilate to the Roman authorities on the trial of Jesus Christ, is not taken much stock in by paleographers. Indeed, it is held by the leading librarian of New York city to bear on its face evidence length of the report, says this authority, is a condemnation in itself. Roman officials were men of action, not men of words, and their reports were brief While others were afflicted, terested Rome, and that they told their port is not denied. Let us analyze it. The conspiracy of Cataline was in B. C. 63, and a "chief" conspirator must have been, at least, 50 years of age, to command any respect. The crucifixion, according to the consensus of Biblical chronologers, was in A. D. 30; hence we have (30 plus 63 plus 29) 122 years from the birth of Manilius to acept the uncertain candidacy grandpere to the secretaryship of his against Mr. George Bertram in Center grandson. Let us say Manilius III. was only 20 years of age, in A. This evidence makes it pretty conclusive that the "report" is only another evidence of the frauds with which the Christian world was deluged during the first few hundred years of its existence.

FACTS ABOUT HEALTH

A to Easy to Keep Well It We Know How-Some of the Conditions Neces-

tary to Perfect Health. The importance of maintaining good health is easily understood, and it is really a simple matter if we take a correct view of the conditions required. In perfect health the stomach promptly digests food, and thus prepares nourishment. The blood is employed to carry this nourishment to the organs, nerves, muscles and tissues which need it. The first great essential for good health, therefore, is pure, rich blood. Now it is certainly a fact that no medicine has such a record of cures as Hood's Sarzaparilla. It is literally true that there are hundreds of people alive and well today who would have been in their graves had they not taken Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is depended upon as a family medicine and general regulator of the system by tens of thousands of people. This is because Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure. This is the secret of its great success. Keep your system in good health by keeping your blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla, which absolutely cures when other medicines fail to do any good whatever.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

POULTRY FOR EXPORT. Prof. Robertson, commissioner of agriculture, and Mr. A. G. Gilbert, manager of the poultry department at the experimental farm, attended a meeting at Smith's Falls the other day. They had with them specimens of turkeys, chickens, geese and ducks, dressed in the manner suited for the British market. Raisers and shippers of turkeys who were present said that the style of dressing was much superior to that now common among the farmers, and would give the poultry a more attractive appearance for the local markets, as well as for export. The minister of agriculture has directed that several sets of other specimens be

Two tug boats which were lying alongside were towed out into the riage house-all for the sum of $2,250.

After about three hours' work, when the firemen were about congratulating themselves upon having the fire under control, a terrific explosion sent debris flying in every direction and knocking the firemen off their feet. feet. The first explosion was followed by a second and a third, and gradually the vessel began to sink until there was scarcely anything left of her above water.

The Port Patrick was built in Glasgow eight years ago. She was 268 feet long, 33 feet beam, 22 feet draught. She was a full-rigged steel clipper. She was valued at about $100,000.

FOUGHT A MAD DEER.

Feminine Prowess Saves Lives on Long Island After a Desperate Battle.

New York, Nov. 24. - A story of feminine prowess comes from Long Island. Miss Lois Dunton, of Jamaica, with her sister Emma, went to the deer paddock at Hollis to gather twigs for the decoration of the local church. A deer confined there was known to be fierce, and the girls had been warned not to enter the paddock. Miss Lois had petted the beast, however, and she was surprised when the animal suddenly lowered his antlers and charged at Miss Lois grasped the deer by the antlers, and though the animal reared and plunged about, she held fast. Miss Emma went to her sister's aid. but both girls were almost exhausted when their mother summoned Charles Bauer, an employe. He grasped the deer's antlers, and the girls ran out of the paddock. A terrific fight between the man and buck followed. But Bauer did not handle the deer as well as Miss Dunton. He was knocked down, trampled upon and gored in his right leg. His shoulder was also badly injured.

Baseball prospects for 1898 are rosy. London will be in an international league. It will be a six-club Three of the teams will be Canadian and three American. ply with the rules. Application was made to President Nick Young, of the National League, for protection and reservation. A favorable answer is expected in a few days, when another meeting will be held to elect officers and complete organization. Protection cannot be refused a six-club league. The Canadian League suffered greatly last year for lack ot it. The privilege of reservation will also enable the managers to hold their players or sell their good men if desirable.

The salary limit was fixed at $750 per month. The Canadian League limit last year was $650. The American representatives wanted a lower figure, but the Canadians held out success-

The London representatives flatly re fused to play Sunday ball, either at home or abroad. Mr. Sheere also refused on behalf of Guelph. Saginaw, Bay City and Port Huron will play Sunday ball at home, and Hamilton may also be induced to play Sunday games in Michigan.

The schedule will be drafted 'n April. It will be a difficult task. Visiting teams will make two-day stan is everywhere in order to save traveling expenses. Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 24.-Harry Beecher, the prominent football authority has the following to say about brutal football: "The football controversy hinges upor the question whether the game as played today is brutal or not. Both its de-fenders and detractors are prone to exaggerate, as is natural in a heated argument. "Its greatest admirer cannot face th chapter of accidents and not truthfully acknowledge the roughness of the sport. Its bitterest enemy cannot fair ly advocate the abolition of its playing because of injuries received through a willful neglect of caution. "The fact that accidents do occur, no matter from what cause, should be the strongest incentive to surround the game with every safeguard. The department of play that engenders casualties should be eliminated by stringent rules. Football cannot afford to face the charge of brutality without first trying to remove the grounds for the accusation. "The game has so much manliness, so many characteristics, that to go to make up Young America, that to blot it from the list of American sports should be the last resort. Football is ailing; its sickness can be cured by the doctors who control the rules of play. "There is no question in my mind but that the mass plays are responsi-

Against the Village of London West for Damage to Property, Arising Out of the Construction of the Street Railway Bridge at Kensington.

Today there was a meeting of the board of arbitration appointed to assess and allot the amount of damages sustained by Mr. Jerry McDonald and Ed. Horsman, owner and tenant of the Riverside Hotel, which they claim has been depreciated in value $1,500 by the raising and grading of the road to form an approach to the new street railway bridge, and which amount was sought from the village of London West. The board is composed of Judge Edward Elliott, for London West; Mr. Frank Love, for Messrs. Horsman and Mc-Donald, and Mr. Patrick Mulkern as the third arbitrator. Mr. J. McEvoy is looking after the interests of Mr. Horsman; Mr. E. R. Cameron for the village of London West; Mr. I. F. Hellmuth for the street railway company, and Mr. Thomas Purdom for Mr. Jerry McDonald. Mr. McDonald claims that his building and its business has been damaged, the right to draw sand and gravel from the river cut off, and a portion of his land taken for the pur pose of the street railway bridge at the foot of Dundas street. The land, he said, was originally purchased for $300, then another strip which permitted of drawing sand and gravel was purchased from Mr. Hutchinson in 1879 for $75 or three years afterwards and cost about $1,000. The profits accruing from the right to draw the gravet and sand amounted to about $150 per year, and sometimes this right was given with the lease to tenants. The house and premises were damaged by the flood in 1883, after which time he spent $1,000 in improving the place, raising it 4 feet 6 inches. The value at that time was $4,000. To make the place worth anything like as much as it was before, it would be necessary now to move it 6 feet to the west, raise it 6 feet, and move it back 6 feet. This, he thought,

DEATH OF A NOTED LOCOMOTIVE

BUILDER Manchester, N. H., Nov. 24.-Aretas Blood died at 8:15 this morning. Mr. Blood was born in Weathersfield, Vermont, years ago. In 1853, with Oliver W. Bayley, he established a machine company in this city, which the next year was incorporated as the Manchester Locomotive Works, which now has a capacity of 150 engines a year. In 1872 the fire engine business of the Amoskeag Company was purchased by Mr. Blood, and under his direction the first piece of horseless fire apparatus was built.

Word.

No Name on Earth So Famous -No Name More Widely Imi

No name on earth, perhaps, is so well known, more peculiarly constructed or more widely imitated than the word DODD. It possesses a peculiarity that makes it stand out prominently and fastens it in the memory. It contains four letters, but only two letters of the alphabet. Everyone knows that the first kidney remedy ever patented or sold in pill form was named DODD'S. Their discovery startled the medical profession the world over, and revolutionized the treatment of kidney

No imitator has ever succeeded in constructing a name possessing the peculiarity of DODD, though they nearly all adopt names as similar as possible in sound and construction to this. Their foolishness prevents them realizing that attempts made to imitate increase the fame of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Why is the name "Dodd's Kidney Pills" imitated? As well ask why are diamonds and gold imitated. Because diamonds are the most precious gems, gold the most precious metal. Dodd's Kidney Pills are imitated because they are the most valuable medicines the world has ever known. "Oh, Mr. Keith," cried Theodora,

"please don't talk of such a thing. Come-we have stayed so long before this horrid portrait, and why talk so much about wicked felon?"
"I suppose," said Royden Keith, addressing Mr. Haughton, in a clear, marked tone, "that there is no doubt about Gabriel Myddelton's having been, as Miss Trent says, a wicked felon? You would, doubtless, well investigate the facts,' "Supposing Gabriel Myddelton to be innocent," Mrs. Payte struck in, drowning Lawrence's scornful retort, "would he have old Myddelton's money?" "Impossible, even if he came oack and acquitted himself. The money was

"Of course," replied Phoebe, carelessly; "who ever doubted it?"
"That's pretty," exclaimed Mrs. Payte, standing opposite a heavilyframed painting of a young girl and a pony; "and, I declare, it reminds me of our dinner! Why is that?" "Because it is the same sweep of park, Mrs. Payte," exclaimed Honore. "This is the spot where we dined, and the pony and the girl stand just between where we were and the front of the mansion. Do you guess that is the portrait of Lady Lawrence when a girl? She was not 15 when she went to India, you know." "I'd rather see a likeness taken later," spoke Mrs. Payte, curtly. "That tells nothing of what she would be

"We have a sketch of her taken lately," said Honore. "She is tall and stout, with smooth, black hair, and a placid, serious face." "I don't like that sort of old lady," objected Mrs. Payte, moving away impatiently, and leaving Honore to wonder a little at the bad taste of this speech from one who was so essentially different.

"It certainly is a beautiful park," Baid the little old lady, stopping before one of the gallery windows. "What do you intend to do, Mr. Haughton, if you inherit Abbotsmoor?" "And you, Miss Owen?"

"Let it," replied Lawrence, promply. "Certainly lee it," returned Phoebe, delighted to ec her guardian's an-

"And what?" inquired the old lady, sharply.

"And try to make the old place, and even the old name, honored again." "Gabriel has rendered that impossible," interposed Lawrence.

"Quite impossible," assented Mrs. Payte, "and your idea is childish, Honore. I should have said, if I had een you, pull it all down, and leave not one stone upon another." "I declare, Honore," whispered Hervery, when the group was scattered again, "that little old creature has done nothing but grumble and make herself

They strolled for some time longer through the great gloomy rooms, admiring and finding fault, chattering and criticising. Theodora's sarcasm was excited very often by Honore's fresh delight over what she called trifles, and little Mrs. Payte popping always just into that very group where she did not seem to be wanted.

So closely had Lawrence Haughton followed Honore through that day, and so merry had she been, that it was a great surprise to Royden Keith, late on in the afternoon, to come upon her seated in one of the staircase windows alone, and with a wistful earnestness in her eyes as she looked out over the "It is a beautiful estate, Miss Cra-

"No," she answered, in a tone as grave as the beautiful young face; "I am only wondering how anyone could have lived here such a life as old Mr. Myddelton lived. And-"And?" he questioned, gently. "And wondering if such a life could ever be led here again?'

She looked up into his face anxiously, and he met the gaze with one of fearless confidence. "I have no fear," he said; "I see no cloud upon old Myddelton's home now, and no blight upon his wealth." Then she smiled, still looking up into his face; and somehow it seemed as if

The tea-tables had been hurriedly carried in from the park to the great hall, and the guests had gathered there in haste; those, at least, whom the suddenly lowering clouds had warned in time.

"It was very lucky we were so near." said Theodora, looking down complacently upon her thin, crisp dress. "Very," assented Phoebe, with most heartfelt emphasis; "only it is a pity Honore's away."

"Is Honore away?" asked Capt. Trent, looking out upon the fast-falling rain. "What a bore for her!" "Dear me, dear me!" grumbled Mrs. Payte, moving restlessly about. "How silly of the child to run off in that way, with no waterproof, or galoshes, or umbrella!"

One or two laughed, recalling the picture of Honore, as they saw her last, in her pretty summer dress, and with the bright sunshine around her; but others were too much vexed to smile. "Where did you see her last, Phoebe?" inquired Lady Somerson, and everyone waited to hear the answer. "I saw her last at one of the side entrances," explained Phoebe. "I knew Can't help it. Lots of the fellows have she was going about the park to—to had to quit. "Miss Owen, if you will kindly tell me which are Miss Craven's shawls and umbrella," said Royden, turning over a pile of wraps which lay in the hall. "I will find her."

"I think," interposed Theodora, in a raised, distinct tone, "that we can safely trust Honore to find her way here. She knows the park well, and you do not, Mr. Keith." But Royden answered lightly that he was used to finding his way, and donclosed umbrella and the blue waterproof which Phoebe had given him, he started. He had a strong idea that Honore would be taking shelter in the oak on the outskirts of the park, and though he had no motive for the surmise, he was not mistaken. In the somber gloom within the hole of the great oak he saw the girl's bright face looking out, with a doubtful expression, as if the enjoyment of the position were somewhat questionable, but yet to be staunchly maintained. Royden, smiling at the wet figure in its heavy frame, handed her the cloak, and told her she might venture to the house in that and under the umbrella. "I am not coming," she said; "I am thoroughly soaked. I was wet through I shall be scolded and laughed at."

before I could reach this shelter, and "Let me help you on with your cloak," was Royden's only response, as he held it at the opening of the tree. No one will see anything but the cloak. May I come in?"

"No," said Honore, drawing back. "I won't be seen. Go back to your tea, Mr. Keith; and presently, when you are all busy starting, I'll slip up and take my place; then I shall escape She stopped suddenly; but Royden guessed what she wished to avoid. It was not difficult for him to imagine either Miss Haughton's corrections, Miss Trent's sneers, or Miss Owens' exclamations

"Very well, I will wait for you here," he said, coolly. So, leaning against the tree in silence, he waited, while she grew uncomfortable in her snug retreat, and, from being amused at seeing him there in the rain, grew vexed, without understanding that this vexation was another name for anxiety. "Your hat is spoiling, Mr. Keith," she said at last, with a sense of injury upon her. He took it off and examined it, while the rain fell heavily and slowly upon his uncovered head—such a handsome the Dealers Have Abolished the Chairs.

[Detroit Free Press.] The bootblacks of the big cities appear to be after the free shine octopus with a sharp stick. In Cincinnati, they made the shoe dealers throw out the free chairs and in Chicago the dealchairs and given the bootblacks once re a chance to live.

The free chairs in shoe stores were a of polish. Every buyer of a pair of shoes in the free shine stores had the opportunity of getting his shoes shined for nothing as long as they lasted. Many of the bootblacks laid up their kits and went into other business, the while cursing the big dealers that had taken away their means of livelihood For the shoe buyer it was a fairly good bargain when he bought a pair of cheap russets for $3 50 and had wrapped up with them a guarantee that he should have free shines. In Chicago the abolition of the free that gaze, or the few words, had given chairs was accomplished by two young men, friends of the bootblacks, who went from store to store within the district bounded by the river, Con-gress street, the lake and Franklin street, and secured the agreement of the dealers to throw out the chairs. Thirty big stores agreed to quit the business. Signs now hang in the store windows, reading as follows: "On and after Dec. 15, 1897, the free shining of shoes will be discontin-

In Detroit, the bootblacks are grumbling about the free shine chairs in shoe stores. There is no organized movement looking towards their abolition, but the bootblacks are feeling the effects of the blow to their business. The Highland Heroes.

Stories of How Scottish Pipers Have Gone Into Battle at the Head of Their Comrades to Play Them to Victory.

The Ninety-second Gordon Highlanders, the "Gay Gordons," as they are lovingly known in the British army, have added one more honor to their battle-flag. Long ago it drooped with the weight of glory on it. Dargai Ridge and the men who swept over it are now known wherever the telegraph runs. Piper Findlater, who blew "Cock o' the In two days I had no more lawn; the North," shrill and clear, to an accompaniment of rattling musketry, and the ground. As previously mentioned, the weird screams of comrades, dying as norther is a desiccating wind, and it they charged, is probably lying invalid- dried the loose soil about the grass India. But his name, as a hero, has der, and thus usable to resist the sent a glow to the heart and a thrill hero's mantle. No such stirring story of war as the taking of Dargai Ridge, told in the telegrams the other morning, has been penned about British soldiers for fifteen years. At that time the Highlanders and their pipers were also the men who did it. They took the trenches at Tel-el-Kebir, in Lower Egypt, in silence. Only the triumphant pibroch of the bagpipers urged them on. They are the only men who fight to music. In other regiments the bandsmen, on active service, become stretcher bearers and buglers. But wherever the "kilties" go the piper goes with them, and always in the forefront of the fight. The piper goes into battle with nothing to defend himself but a long "dirk" at his belt. He has been driven to such extremities as to use his instrument—as a bully might swing a chair—in self-defense. But his lack of arms never serves as excuse for lack of courage. He leads the men to battle. And so in the "piping times of peace" he has earned the right to strut and swagger like a peacock, as he always does when his pipes are skirling for war over his shoulder. It was the Highlanders who made "the thin red line" in the Crimea. It was the Highlanders who went through blood and flood and fire to the relief of Lucknow in the Indian mutiny. It was their pipes that Jessie Brown, dying in "I suffered a the beleaguered Residency there, caught great deal for a long the echo of and cried "Dinna ye hear them! oh! dinna ye hear?" It was the Highlanders who, under Roberts, made the famous forced march from Cabul to Candahar in Afghanistan twenty years ago. It was the Highlanders who died to a man fighting the Boers on Majuba Hill. It was the Highlanders who held the square against the wild rush of the Arab hosts at El Teb on the Nile, and it was the Highland Brigade who stormed the trenches at Tel el Kebir and drove Arabi Pasha out of Egypt. And wherever the Highlanders fought the pipers went also, their wild music sounding high above the cheers of the charging men behind them. "Cock o' the North," "Blue Bonnets," "A Hundred Pipers an' a'," or "Pibroch o' Donald Dhu," it does not matter what the tune might be, the stirring strains were up on the sands of Egypt over a de-cade ago. For half the night they had marched in silence. A hot, dusky, chok-lag night it was, under a sky of velvet were winking as if in tears for the brave men marching so resolutely to their death. Commands came in whispers. There was a feeling in the air that an immense crowd was in motion in the darkness on either hand. But no man knew just how much of the army was under way. The "sift, sift," of thousands of feet in loose sand, the choking cough, the stumble of men in the darkness, the clash of steel against steel, the muttered oath, the smell of perspiration from men keyed up to excitement-that was all the privates

Then there were more sounds the noises that always came from men getting ready to fight the next minute. serious blow to the young purveyors Belts were tightening. Helmets were being pushed firmly down. Ammunition belts were being swung clear. Then came the whispered order that the trenches of the Egyptians were right in front. They were to be carried with the bayonet. It was to be a surprise on the sleeping enemy. Tel-el-Kebir was to be captured. As the low order came, "fix bayonets," there was a prolonged rattle as thousands of long, slim slips of steel kissed the rifle muzzles and a "click" as every "locking ring" came around. Then, whether from the British ranks or from some Egyptian sentry who was awake is not known, came the "bang" of a single rifle. fore the sound had died away the bugles blew the charge. There was a quick squeak or two, and the pipes were blazing the way with wild melody. The Highland Brigade was into battle again. Across the strip of sand went the silent, flying, kilted figures. They hesitated at the brink of the trenches. Imagine a street torn up for its entire width to a depth of eight or nine feet, with the earth from the excavation ued, at the earnest solicitation of 2,000 heaped on the other side. what stopped the rush and the piping for a moment. The Forty-second Highlanders, the famous Black Watch, were the first to reach it.

Down into the hole went the piper, From the heap on the other side the along the line. One of his comrades gave the piper "the foot" as a groom lifts a man to horseback, and he was on the slope. With the bullets "zipping" to his ears, and the flash from the rifles paling in the dawn, he calmly clambered up the steep embankment tuning his pipes. Already the screams of dying men were mingling with the music. Already he heard the rush and clatter as men and their accourrements fell back shrieking into the ditch. But he stood there, his back to the enemy and played and blew with might and main. The dirty, helmetless, swearing, sweating men in kilts swept past him. were cutting and slashing among the fugitives, and Arabi, crushed and "Tips? No, I should say not. HARD WINDS.

[Lippincott's.] When the Californian tells you that he has seen the wind blow so hard that it blew the grass out of the ground, you will smile in spite of yourself; it is so perfectly ridiculous. And yet it is true. I once plainted a lawn in March, sowing Kentucky blue grass. It came up beautifully and flourished until May, which is the month in which the norther is prevalent. I think it was the middle of the month, and the grass was about three inches high, when the norther came along. grass had been blown out of the ed in a field hospital in Northwestern roots until it was reduced to a powwind, which dispersed it. It was very largely attended, and the audience enjoyed a good programme of instrumental and vocal music and recitations provided by Messrs. Platt, Gray and H. C. Simpson, Mrs. Ed. James and Miss Maria Short. Rev. W. J. Ford presided. Each person present was given the privilege of guessing at the proper ingredients of a Scripture cake, and as a foundation for the guess a verse from the Bible was furnished, containing the name of one of the necessaries. Miss Jennie Guest, the fourteenth on the list, was the only one who properly named the different ingredients and the amount of LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN. The talk by Mr. Frank Yeigh, in Dundas Center Methodist Church last evening, on his travels in Norway, entertained about 300 people. The lecturer first gave a synopsis of what was to come. He alluded to the feeling of the trade that prayabled in Norway come. He alluded to the feeling of hatred that prevailed in Norway against Sweden, aithough the two countries were under the same king. The calcium light pictures were most interesting and edifying, and sot forth the beauties of the realm of the reindeer and the land of the midnight sun, to the delight of the audience. Among the most remarkable of the pictures were those of the mountains and waterfalls of Norway. One of these presented the highest farm in the world and another the oldest wooden church in the world. It is now, the lecturer said, in a complete state of preserva-tion, and is 700 years old. The audi-ence appreclated the quaintness of the twelfth certury architecture. Other pictures of the Highlands of Scotland. the home of Burns and Scott, together with their tombs, and scenes along the coast and of the many castles, were well received. Miss Eva Roblyn rendered two solos during the evening, the last one of which was given from behind the curtain as the pictures of the interior of the great European cathedrals were being shown. The proceeds will be devoted to the Young Ladies' Mission Circle.

The Noted Lecturer Addresses Two Audiences Here.

The Evening Subject "Ghosts of the Future"-The Principle of Heredity Treated in a Masterly Manner.

Dr. Wood-Allen, of Ann Arbor, Mich., addressed two meetings in the Auditorium yesterday. In the afternoon she spoke to women only, the house being filled. In the evening her subject was "Ghosts of the Future." The attendpurity department of the W. C. T. U., and national lecturer of the department of heredity and hygiene. She has a handsome, intellectual face, a clear. musical voice, and other graces of the orator. Her evening address was a most able and attractive exposition of the principles of heredity, and the lessons to be derived from them.

Mr. C. R. Sayer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., presided. A Scriptural reading by Mrs.Gordon Wright, a hymn by the audience, and prayer by Mr. Fred W. Daly comprised the devotional

All lovers manifest in that generation, but passed of the beautiful science of microscopy on to the future, what might we not see as the ghosts of the future? asked the lecturer. Dr. Wood-Allen dwelt at length on the nature of heredity, and showed how the principle applied to animal, vegetable and human life. Every human being had a three-fold inheritance-race, nation and family. As Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "We are all omnibuses, in which our forefathers ride." Some wished they could dump the whole load of their progenitors, and felt sure that they could pick up a better lot by the way. (Laughter.) The lecturer thought of a homelier figurethat we were like rag carpets, in which were woven the traits of our forefathers and foremothers, with the warp of our own individuality. The speaker cited several remarkable cases of the transmission of physical and mental peculiarities from generation to generation. If we lessened our own vitality we defrauded our descendants. Did the inebriate devolve upon his children the vitiation of alcohol? Medical science says yes. It had been shown that grandfathers could transmit their qualities through their daughters to the children of pious people to be pious than for the children of drunkards. Intellectual traits were transmissible. and so were the effects of education. An acquired characteristic in the parents became an hereditary characteristic in the child. Some men said they did not want intellectual wives, but they always wanted intellectual children. They seemed to think that all intellectuality was inherited from the father. (Laughter.) A cultured mother rendered her children more capable of culture. Were we not each a link in the endless chain of transmission? We were not responsible for our dower intellect; we were responsifor its cultivation. not responsible for our moral nature; we were responsible for its direction. Herbert Spencer laid down fine laws for the education of Liquor sellers were not the only factors in making drunkards; pure, Christian women were partly responsible by giving their children drunken fathers. In one phase the principle of heredity was appalling; on the other side it was a most glorious outlook.
