WAR COUNCIL CALLED AS SOON AS WORD RECEIVED

Sir William Robertson Likely to be Kitchener's Successor—When Council Was First Called No One Knew Why, and the Report Was "Kitchener Was Not Present".

(By Special Wire to the Courier)
LONDON, June 6, 2.10 p.m.—When the news of the sinking of the cruiser Hampshire with Earl Kitchener and his staff on board was received in London, a meeting of the British War Council was immediately called. Sir William Robertson, chief of the Imperial staff, who probably will become the head of the War Office; Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs; Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer; and David Lloyd-George, Minister of Munitions, were present at the Council.

Long List of Canadian Casualties at the Front Commencing to Come Through—Colonel Baker the First Canadian M.P. to Give His Life.

MISSING.
London.—Capt. J. E. Lattimer. Though losses among Canadian officers were numerous in the recent Ypres engagement, there are few Western Ontario men in the lists issued at Ottawa yesterday, and men from this district appear to have escaped comparatively lightly. Western Ontario units are few in the brigade which was mainly engaged in the fight, but several companies, which had gone as reinforcements from local battalions, were evidently among those taking part. So far only five Western Ontario officers are reported killed or wounded as given above.

BURFORD BOY

Capt. J. E. Lattimer, reported as missing, is a Burford boy and comes of a family prominent in that district. He was a member of the Brant Dragons, Burford Squadron, and went for overseas service with the 4th C.M.R. "One of the best," remarked Lt. Col. M. F. Muir, when speaking to a Courier man with reference to him. The Captain is a splendid type of man and a large circle of relatives and friends will hope that his safety may be even yet announced. He is unmarried.

London, June 6.—A 2.30 p.m.—Accompanying Earl Kitchener, as his staff were Hugh James O'Beirne, former councillor of the British embassy at Petrograd and former minister at Sofia; O. A. Fitzgerald, Earl Kitchener's private secretary; Brigadier-General Ellershaw and Sir Frederick Donaldson.

On board the Hampshire with the British war secretary were also a number of minor army officers. Sir Hay Frederick Donaldson, among those who accompanied Lord Kitchener on the Hampshire, was technical adviser to David Lloyd George, minister of munitions. He was prominent in the engineering world, being a past president of the Institute of Mechanical Engineers, and a member of the Iron and Steel Institute, and of various engineering societies. Before the war he was chief mechanical engineer of ordnance factories from 1899 to 1903 and chief superintendent after that date.

He was born in 1856.

SPECIAL EDITION

The bulletin boards in front of this office were surrounded by large throngs this morning, when the news was displayed, which came over the Courier's telegraphic wires with regard to the appalling disaster to Lord Kitchener and his personal staff. At noon a special edition was issued and the press was kept busy meeting the demands, which also extended to Paris, Simcoe and other adjacent points. Several hundreds of copies were quickly disposed of.

LONDON, June 6th—Admiral Jellicoe, commander of the British Grand Fleet, has reported to the admiralty that the British Cruiser Hampshire with Earl Kitchener and his staff aboard, has been lost off the West Orkneys.

Four boats were seen to leave Hampshire, but a heavy sea was running. Only a capsized boat and some bodies have been found.

Earl Kitchener was on his way to Russia. Admiral Jellicoe reports there is little hope that there were any survivors.

The names of the members of Earl Kitchener's staff have not yet been learned.

Sir William Robertson, chief of the Imperial Staff, is in London.

ADMIRAL JELICOE'S STATEMENT

Admiral Jellicoe's report to the Admiralty follows:
"I have to report with deep regret that His Majesty's ship Hampshire, Captain Herbert J. Saville, R.N., with Lord Kitchener and his staff on board, was sunk last night at about 8 p.m., to the west of the Orkneys, either by a mine or a torpedo.

"Four boats were seen by observers on shore to leave the ship. The wind was north-northwest and heavy seas were running. Patrol vessels and destroyers at once proceeded to the spot, and a party was sent along the coast to search, but only some bodies and a capsized boat have been found up to the present. As the whole shore has been searched from the seaward, I greatly fear that there is little hope of there being any survivor.

"No report has yet been received from the search party on shore. "H.M.S. Hampshire was on her way to Russia."

The Orkney Islands, off which the Hampshire went down, are off the north coast of Scotland. The Hampshire was on her way into the Atlantic around the northern end of the Scandinavian peninsula into the White Sea. Earl Kitchener probably intended to debark at Archangel.

The Hampshire was one of the Devonshire class of six cruisers. She was built in 1903 and carried normally 655 men. She displaced 10,850 tons, was 450 feet long, 68½ feet beam and drew 25½ feet. She was armed with four 7.5-in., six 6-in., two 12-pound and twenty 3-pound guns and two torpedo tubes. She cost $4,250,000.

The Hampshire has been in use as a scout boat and for carrying officials on various missions, having ample accommodation for the latter purpose.

NOT LOVED, BUT PROFOUNDLY RESPECTED, WAS EARL KITCHENER

Of several things that entitle Earl Kitchener to a place in world history, the most notable is that he organized the largest volunteer army the world has ever seen in the greatest war of all times.

Within a year from the sudden outbreak of the European war in August, 1914, the ranks of British fighting men were quadrupled by an increase from less than one million to nearly 4,000,000.

All other great powers that entered the war had huge standing armies and compulsory military service. Great Britain alone faced the issue with confidence that its people would readily respond to the call of King and country without compulsion, and the precipitous developments that led to the war found both the people and the government unanimous in the verdict that Kitchener of Khartoum was the man to lead in the recruiting and organization of the necessary army.

PROFOUNDLY RESPECTED
It was not a sentimental clamor, for though Kitchener was a proven hero of many campaigns, his personality was as impenetrable as hardened steel, and he was not a hero that could be loved; even the war office had no pronounced liking for him, but on all sides there was profound respect for his military efficiency and for all he had done to extend the domains of the British Empire.

HOME WHEN WAR BROKE OUT

By mere luck, Kitchener happened to be in England on one of the comparatively rare visits that he had paid to London during his long career abroad, when the European war broke out. He had just come home from service as British agent in Egypt, had accepted an earldom from King George, and was being talked of as Viceroy of India. Within a few hours after England's declaration of the war, Kitchener was appointed Secretary of State for War, and immediately took full charge at the war office, where he worked day and night to overcome the handicap which the central powers had over England in the matter of fighting strength.

He grimly told the British people they had a bigger war on their hands than they realized, and one that might last longer than they expected, but it was to be faced with entire confidence.

For his triumphs in the Sudan he was raised to the peerage as Baron Kitchener of Khartoum and received the thanks of parliament and a grant of $150,000.

Without his crowning achievements

the great organizer of the British campaign in the European war, Kitchener had already won wide and lasting fame by his many campaigns in Egypt, South Africa and in India.

BORN IN IRELAND

He was born June 24, 1850, County Kerry, Ireland, a fact that gave rise to the belief that he was of Irish blood, but his parents were of French and English descent. His father was a soldier, but of no very high rank. He had managed to climb to lieutenant-colonelcy of a dragoon regiment when he retired to the estate in Ireland where Horatio Herbert Kitchener, the to-be-distinguished son, was born. Young Kitchener received his fundamental military education at Woolwich, where he displayed only ordinary brilliancy, with the exception of his liking of mathematics.

OMDURMAN

The fight at Omdurman, Sept. 2, 1898, just across the Nile from Khartoum, was the greatest battle of Kitchener's time in Egypt. Osman Digna faced him with 50,000 Mahdists, while he had but 20,000 men. When the battle was over 11,000 of the Mahdists had been killed outright, 16,000 wounded and 4,000 taken prisoners, while the English and Egyptian losses altogether were under 500 men.

LOCAL CASUALTIES ARE BEGINNING TO COME IN

Captain Creighton and Major Allen, the Latter of New Durham, Wounded—Lieut. Bishop Reported Safe.

There are many anxious Brantford hearts in connection with the recent severe fighting through which the Canadians have passed. CAPT. CREIGHTON WOUNDED. A wire was received to-day announcing the severe wounding of Capt. W. Creighton, only son of Mrs. M. A. Creighton, 113 Dufferin avenue. His injuries are recorded as in the left arm and the left side. He belonged to the 6th and the wire states is now in the Duchess of Westminster's hospital at Touquet. The Captain is a Brantford boy and his father the late W. L. Creighton, was manager of the branch of the Montreal bank in this city. No finer lad ever lived, and the entire hope of the community will be that he may yet recover from his hurts. Mrs. Creighton and his two sisters Mrs. Leggett and Mrs. H. W. Pitton are in the thoughts of many friends. LIEUT. BISHOP SAFE. Mackenzie, license inspector of West York, came a cablegram from his son, Lieut. A. D. Mackenzie, of the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles, stating that he had come unscathed through the fighting, although a number of his comrades were missing. Another message from Lieut. Kenneth Marlett to his parents at Oakville read "at least Denison, Coleman, Lea, Bishop, safe." Lieut. Bishop above referred to is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bishop of this city. Gordon and Harvey Cockshutt, of this city were at first thought to have been in the fighting, but as their names have not been mentioned it is believed that they were not in the struggle. MAJOR ALLEN WOUNDED. A wire this afternoon announces the wounding of Major Merrill Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Allen, New Durham. He joined the 2nd C. M. R. in Vancouver and is a brother of Mr. Fred Allen, 46 Walnut street. Toronto, June 6.—To Mr. Donald

Major Hamilton Gault Killed; Had Premonition of Death

By Special Wire to the Courier.
MONTREAL, June 6.—The announcement of the death of Major Hamilton Gault, who raised the Princess Patricia regiment, reached his family to-day. Major Gault was wounded twice before he received a mortal wound in the recent Zellebek fighting. Major Gault was the unsuccessful petitioner for a divorce before the Senate recently, naming a fellow officer as co-respondent. He told friends when he left to join his regiment that they would never see him again, as he was going to sell his life on the battlefield.

DESCRIPTION OF GREAT NAVAL FIGHT; BATTLE CRUISERS CLOSED WITH THE ENEMY

Battle Cruiser Squadrons of Each Side Engaged Each Other First, Then the German Main Fleet Came up, and Afterwards the British Main Fleet, So Germans Fled.

By Special Wire to the Courier.

London, June 6.—The Daily Chronicle publishes from the Glasgow Herald a realistic description of the various phases of the battle of Jutland. The first phase follows:

3.45 p.m., May 31. Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers, consisting of the Lion, Princess Royal, Queen Mary, Tiger, Inflexible, Indomitable, Invincible, Indefatigable and New Zealand were on a southeasterly course, followed at about two miles distance by the Queen Elizabeth. Four enemy light cruisers were sighted and shortly afterward the head of the German battle cruiser squadron, which consisted of the new cruiser Hindenburg, Seydlitz, Derflinger, Lutzow, Moltke and possibly the Salamis. Admiral Beatty at once began firing at a range of about 20,000 yards, which shortened to 15,000 as the fleets closed. The Germans could see the British distinctly outlined against the yellow sky.

PROTECTED BY HAZE.

The Germans were covered by a haze and could be but very indistinctly made out by gunners. The Queen Elizabeth opened fire. One after another, as they came within range, the German cruisers turned to port and drew away to about 20,000 yards. The second stage, 4.40 p.m.—A destroyer screen then appeared beyond the German battle cruisers. The whole German high sea fleet could be

He solved the murder of the Nutty family at Rawdon by proving Tom Nutty had killed his two sisters and brother in order to make room in the home for his wife. McCaskill handled the St. Cange murder, Cadelia Viau and Sam Parslow being hanged for murdering the former's husband.

TORONTO DOING WHAT SIMCOE DID IN 1889

"Simcoe Debenture Act" the Guide for Queen City's New Finance Minister.

Simcoe, June 5.—An editorial in a Toronto daily credited Mr. Bradshaw of that city with originating recently a new system of handling debentures. On January 21st, 1889, with Lorne Campbell as Mayor, Simcoe got a special act of parliament passed authorizing the payment of debentures in annual instalments and the practice has been in vogue here ever since. The act is known as the Simcoe Debenture Act. At the time it was put through the town officials were the recipients of considerable ridicule.

Pioneer Felt Mfg. Dies in Berlin, Ont

Berlin, June 6.—George Rumpel died yesterday morning in his 67th year, after a short illness. Mr. Rumpel was born in Muehlhausen, Germany, May 10, 1849. In 1870 he migrated to America, settling in Hamilton, Ont., where he resided for several years and where he was married. He came to Berlin 42 years ago and began an active career as a felt manufacturer, town-builder and public man. Mr. Rumpel was the pioneer felt manufacturer of the Dominion. He gave freely of his time and thought to municipal matters, serving at different times as alderman, and reeve, and in 1898 as mayor, and for many years afterwards he was on the park board. His services as a business man were sought in many directions. He was a director of the Economical Fire Insurance Company and a charter member and past president of the News-Record company. He was also an annual member of the executive of the North Waterloo Conservative Association.

The Situation

Deeply overshadowing all other news from the front is the lamentable announcement to-day of the death by drowning of Earl Kitchener and his personal staff.

It is not too much to say that the deplorable incident has come with a deep sense of personal loss to each one of us.

It will be seen that Kitchener and his associates were on the British cruiser Hampshire, bound for Russia, when the vessel either struck a mine or was torpedoed.

That Germany, with the ramifications of her spy system penetrating everywhere, knew of the distinguished company on board the cruiser, is almost certain, and it would be the highest delight of the devilish disciples of "Kultur" to sink such a load.

The thought presents itself that so distinguished a man and his staff should have been very closely convoyed. Perhaps they were, and this precaution, of which no present mention is made, may be announced later.

The loss of such a man as Kitchener is a very serious blow, but, of course, not irreparable. He had completed the initial work in connection with the great war, and the enormous burden which for a lengthy period he carried alone had latterly been divided.

And the tremendous service which he did render will take a very high place indeed in all future history. His capacity and the public confidence placed in him were assets of supreme worth to the Empire, and in these essentials his loss constitutes a very severe regret indeed.

A general outline of his career and of his services is given elsewhere in this issue. He met death as he would have wished, while on the Empire's business, and with his passing there will be the universal and the world-wide tribute that seldom shall we look upon his like again.

With regard to the general war news, the facts which are still coming to light emphasize the result of the big naval engagement as a British victory in all the essentials. The German fleet has sustained a severe blow, and her light cruiser squadron is pretty much out of business.

The toll of Canadian heroes in connection with the recent severe fighting on the Ypres front is commencing to reach these shores and homes. It would seem as if the losses were likely to prove as heavy, or perhaps even more heavy, than those at St. Julien, and the record of magnificent bravery and resource has proved the same in both instances.

The news is confirmed that in the first day of their tremendous new drive against the Austro-Hungarian lines from the Pipet Marshes to the Roumanian frontier, the Russians met with complete success and captured thirteen thousand prisoners.

Torrential rains are giving somewhat of a halt to the Verdun operations.

SIR W. ROBERTSON IS CONSIDERED THE ONLY SUCCESSOR

Kitchener's Last Appearance Friday Most Remarkable Incident.

By Special Wire to the Courier. The first question asked when the news of Earl Kitchener's death was announced, was: "Who will succeed him?" The answer invariably was: "Robertson, of course."

Sir William Robertson, who is regarded as the only possible successor to Earl Kitchener as the head of the British army, already had taken over the war secretary's duties temporarily when the secretary started on his ill-fated journey. On Saturday and again yesterday he had audiences with King George to report on the activities on the British front, in which the Canadians have so distinguished themselves.

The General has the full confidence of the country. While he cannot become secretary of war unless he is raised to the peerage, a member of the House of Lords might be put at the head of the war office with the understanding that the General, like Earl Kitchener, would have a free hand. Earl Kitchener's conference on Friday with members of the House of Commons when he explained confidentially the military situation, was a remarkable incident. Two hundred members gathered to talk with him. Extraordinary precautions were taken to keep outsiders from the precincts of Westminster Palace.

Earl Kitchener generally made rather a poor impression as a speaker since he always read his statement from manuscript, and did not talk in an effective way.

On this occasion, however, he conversed with the members, answering questions from some critics who showed considerable bias.

After leaving the conference, some of the members declared their judgment of Earl Kitchener's work had been greatly enhanced by his explanations. The proceedings were closed with the usual formality of a vote of thanks.

Stock Exchange Business Stopped

By Special Wire to the Courier. London, June 6, 3 p.m.—Business on the stock exchange was suspended when the news of Earl Kitchener's death was received. The members stood idly about the floor discussing the national loss.

The markets had been firm all day on the Russian report of the victorious inauguration of an offensive movement and closed subdued, though there was no business to test prices.

Russ Offensive Covers 250 Miles

By Special Wire to the Courier. Petrograd, June 6, via London.—It is estimated that the Russians in their new offensive campaign on the southwestern front are opposed by forces numbering between 600,000 and 650,000. The line between the Pipet Marshes and the Roumanian border, is more than 250 miles in length.

Attacks Repulsed

By Special Wire to the Courier. Paris, June 6 (noon)—Two attacks by the Germans on the French lines between Fort Vaux and Damloup on the Verdun front were repulsed by the French last night, according to an official statement issued by the war office to-day. The heavy bombardment of Fort Vaux continues with intermittent cannonading on the west front.

ON PEACE YET IN SIGHT; CHANCELLOR OF GERMANY SAYS HUNS ARE WINNING

In Remarkable Speech He Outlines Particularly Negotiations Between Britain and Germany Prior to the War, and Claims Germany Did All That Was Possible to Keep Peace—Dropped a Hint About U-Boat Controversy.

By Special Wire to the Courier. Berlin, June 5, via Amsterdam and London, June 6.—The Imperial Chancellor has again discussed peace in the Reichstag.

"Six months ago, on December 9," he said, "discussing our military situation I spoke here for the first time of our readiness for peace. I could do so in entire confidence that our war situation would continue to improve. Developments have confirmed this confidence. We have made further progress on all fronts. We are stronger than we were before."

"If, with this development before my eyes, I declared we were ready for peace, I need not regret my statement, even if our offer evoked no response from our enemies. "In the critical times of July, 1914, it was the duty of every responsible man before God, his country and his conscience to leave nothing untried that could preserve peace with honor. We also desired after the successful repulse of our enemies to shorten the terrible sufferings experienced by the people of Europe in such a conflagration."

"I told an American journalist that peace negotiations could only reach settlement if they were conducted by statesmen of the belligerent powers on the basis of the real war situation as shown by the war map. This proposition was rejected by the other side. They will not recognize the war map as they hope to improve it in their own favor. But it has constantly changed in our favor. We have added to it since that remark was made. The surrender of the British army at Kut-el-Amara, defeats, with tremendous losses, of the French at Verdun, the collapse of the Russian offensive in March, the mighty thrust forward of our allies against Italy, the strengthening of our lines before Saloniki and just now we have received news of the naval battle off Jutland with jubilant and grateful hearts."

"This is how the war map looks now. If our various enemies desire to shut their eyes to it, then we must, and shall, fight on until final victory. COUNTRY IS UNITED "We did what we could to pave the way to peace. Our enemies repelled us with scorn. Consequently all further talk of peace initiated by us becomes futile and evil. Some statesmen, in England and elsewhere, have made attempts to feel the pulse of our people and, while making contrasts between our different states as political units, have tried to console themselves into the belief that our striking force was near the breaking point. These gentlemen are indulging in strange notions. If they do not desire to deceive themselves they will notice only how firmly beats the hearts of the German people. There is no external influence that can shake our unity even in the slightest degree."

ADMITS SOME DISENSIONS "Certainly we have had our differences of opinion on such matters as the U-boat question and the question of our relations with America, but I declare emphatically that each side in these controversies has respected the convictions of the other and that we have remained always one and the same great national question."

"We discussed these matters in committee and decided it was impossible to satisfy the demands for a public announcement. We were, I believe, absolutely agreed that in these cases exhaustive public discussion would damage the country. Nevertheless I want to say that I, too, long for the time when the administration of the censorship can abandon the restrictions and inconveniences which are at present inseparable from it."

ENOUGH CENSORSHIP NOW. "I in no way desire to resurrect the censorship debates. Let me say this much to remove any doubt. Each political measure, without exception, in this time of war, has had only one object in view, namely, to bring the war to a glorious end. The censorship should be carried on from the same point of view whether it be military or political. "I shall endeavor to see that where the connection of political matters with the war is only slight the pencil of the censor shall be employed as lightly as possible. "PRIVATE PAMPHLETS. "As far as I am concerned the news papers will find a few shackles as possible and a just and impartial appreciation of their aims. The existence of press censorship has recently given rise to a new nuisance, namely, the circulation of numerous private pamphlets, some without names attached, as if the confidence of the people could be thus destroyed, although this is the very purpose of these pamphlets. As an example of this class, I take a pamphlet which was recently widely circulated. The writer, under the guise of an anxious patriot, collected from the political history preceding the war a chain of gross untruths and distortion. DID NOT NEARLY COLLAPSE. The Chancellor proceeded to give illustrations of the alleged falsehoods in the pamphlet. One of the typical statements was that the English ambassador announced the breach of relations between Great Britain and Germany. The speaker declared that this was absolutely false. "Sir William Goschen at his farewell visit was personally so deeply affected that I have from a natural feeling of propriety avoided speaking about it. March, the very subject of a pamphlet which the chancellor denied, was that Germany could have drawn Japan to her side before the outbreak of the war by a big war loan."

TRIED TO KEEP ENGLAND OUT. One of the most stirring passages in the speech came when the chancellor referred to a pamphlet's charge that in the opening days of the war he had believed England would have remained Germany's friend or at least neutral, and that he had wasted three days parleying with England, three days which meant an enormous prolongation of the war because the first blow was not struck promptly enough.

"I know that my attempts at an understanding with England," he said, "are my capital offence, but what was Germany's position in the period prior to the war? France, and Russia were in a strong anti-Germany party in Russia and an influential and growing section in France which was called in the worst of terms, our enemies, and which was held in check if the only hope of English aid was successfully taken from them. They would then have never ventured on war. If I wished to work against war I had to attempt to enter into relationships with England."

MUCH APPLAUDED. "I made his attempt in the face of the development of an English policy which was hostile to Germany, and which was entirely cogniant. I am not ashamed of my conduct even though it proved abortive. He who on that account charges me with being guilty of hecatombs of human sacrifices, may make his accusation before God. I shall await God's judgment calmly."

This passage caused a tremendous sensation in the house and it was repeatedly interrupted by loud cheering.

FIREMEN HAD SMALL BLAZE

Two Small Boys Playing Caused Some Damage and a Scare.

Paris, June 5.—The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the Y. M. C. A. parlor on Friday afternoon, with Miss Alice Apps in the chair in the absence of the president. During the afternoon two instructive papers were read by Mrs. Ridley and Miss Apps, while Mrs. Muma gave a Bible reading. It was decided to hold a temperance Sunday on the 17th of June, when suitable literature will be placed in all the Sunday schools. The annual convention of Brant County workers will be held in Brantford on June 17th, which is open to all interested in the work.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

A representative meeting was held on Friday evening in the Council with Mayor Patterson in the chair, to consider the adoption of the Daylight Saving scheme in Paris. Messrs. Bonnor, Martin, Robinson, Haire, Wheeler, Sinclair, Stewart and Harcel spoke for the industries of Paris, while Messrs. Inkster, Pitts, McCasland and other supporters of the Daylight Saving scheme were present. A resolution was then passed adopting the same, which came into effect this morning. The Mayor's proclamation was printed on the side of every house and a notice left in every house stating that the clock should be advanced on Sunday night June 5th, one hour from 9 o'clock to 10 o'clock. If four o'clock was not reached by 10 o'clock, the law will remain in force until midnight of Sept. 30th.

The Customs receipts in Paris for the month of May show a large increase. The receipts for May amount to $2,417,560, as against $2,191,192 for the corresponding month of May, 1915, an increase of $226,368.

SMALL FIRE

The firemen had a run on Saturday morning about 11.30 to Mr. E. Gosnell's residence Grand River street. The house was being rehinged, and the firemen were called to a fire in the side, which caught on the fireplace and spread over to the barn. A neighbor by the name of J. K. Martin and his wife were in the house at the time the fire broke out. There was quite a high wind at the time and but for the prompt action of Mr. Marsden a bad fire might have resulted.

EMERGENCY CORPS MEETS

Martin and Mrs. C. Walker. Those who called during the afternoon were given registration papers with a number of questions on to sign, and are asked to leave same at the Y. M. C. A. Every Friday evening after 7.30 when some one of the committee will be there and give papers to any who wish to sign. It is earnestly hoped that there are some ladies among young people who will not only consider the matter, and if they have any leisure time, devote it to the welfare of the Empire in this present crisis. Such can only be done by a thorough heart to heart talk with oneself.

Yesterday morning "C" Company of the 125th battalion, paraded to St. James church for divine service. The Rev. R. J. Seton Adamson in the course of his remarks, gave a very plain talk to the men in regard to their duty towards God as also their service to the Empire as soldiers of the King. PRESIDENT OF CHINA IS DEAD

Yuan Shi Kai Passed Away Yesterday Morning.

By Special Wire to the Courier.

SHANGHAI, June 6.—Yuan Shi Kai, President of the Chinese republic, died yesterday morning.

Yuan Shi-Kai, who was 57 years of age, was reported to have been taken seriously ill on May 23. At that time despatches from China stated it was believed in Peking that the president had been poisoned, but this report was denied by the Chinese ambassador at Washington, who insisted that the president was not even ill.

Yuan Shi-Kai died while the storms of revolution were gathering in increasing strength. The revolt broke out in December, 1915, when the president announced his intention of establishing a monarchy and ascending the throne as the first emperor of a new dynasty. His coronation was set for early in February of this year, but was postponed indefinitely owing to the extraordinary rapidity with which the flames of revolt spread through southern China. Several attempts were made upon the president's life and a bomb plot was discovered in the imperial palace.

The establishment of a monarchy was strenuously opposed by Japan and the final abandonment of the plan was largely credited to the representations made by Tokio.

The revolt progressed, however, and in March the governors of the Chinese provinces demanded the resignation of the president. In May, the provinces of Shan-si and Shan-tung announced their independence and a provincial government was established by the generals commanding the revolutionary forces in the south. President Yuan Shi-Kai announced on May 26 his intention to resign when a suitable successor was chosen. It was reported a little later that the president intended to take refuge in Japan and despatches from Tokio said that he was negotiating for a residence in the Japanese capital.

third division participated at the weekend and which the official statements indicate is not yet concluded. No detailed story has yet been cabled officially and there may be none till the eyewitness report comes at the end of the week. So far 130 officers have been reported in the casualties, 17 killed, and the list is by no means complete. Also over 700 men, many killed. In place of being widely scattered over the division, however, the losses are more particularly confined to the brigade, which went as Mounted Rifles, but became infantry, under Col. Victor Williams. The peculiar peril of the Canadian salient without any decided compensating advantage, has long since suggested the strengthening out of the line. There are some prominent men among the fallen. Col. Harry Baker, M. P. for Bromo, who commanded a Quebec cavalry brigade, is dead of his wounds; Lieut.-Col. H. C. Matters of Interest for Our Women Readers

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

By Adele Garrison

"Then You Must Be His Margaret"

"Here we are!" said Miss Sonnet, tucked away between two pages of her cherished scrapbook was a small envelope. Opening it, she drew out a number of clipped newspaper paragraphs, selected one and passed it to me.

"What do you think of it?" she asked. I took it mechanically. My mind was far away from the impromptu chafing-dish supper we had met each other in the dining room.

For as Miss Sonnet turned the pages of the scrapbook containing her most prized mementoes and clippings I had caught a glimpse of a photograph which I was sure was Jack Bickett's. What it was doing there I could not imagine. I had never seen the name of every woman Jack had ever met, for I had always been in his confidence.

The little incident jarred me more than I was willing to admit. I felt that I must satisfy myself that the photograph was really Jack's, and, if so, how it came in her possession. But I had a strange reluctance to ask her outright. I must devise some other way. In the mean time, I must give a verdict on the recipe she had handed me. I had not seen a word of it, although it had been lying straight at it. I read it rapidly to myself.

By three slices of bacon crisp, remove them, and in the same fat cook one sliced onion until light brown. Beat one egg thoroughly, season with cayenne, add three tablespoonfuls of thick stewed tomato, the fried onion and the crisp bacon, finely crumbled. Turn into a greased chafing pan, and roll it up with a fork as the egg thickens, then let color slightly, roll over and turn on to a hot platter.

"This sounds very appetizing," I commented, raising my eyes to find the little nurse looking at me with a curious questioning gaze. As her eyes met mine, the expression on her face changed instantly. But I knew that she had seen my momentary confusion.

Some Interesting Little Souvenirs.

"Do you think we can manage it without raising the house?" she asked dubiously. "When I spoke of it, I did not realize it was quite so complicated. Frying onions in the kitchen, with the outside door open to take away the odor," I decided quickly, "and we won't attach the chafing dish at all. I'll put the blazer over a pan of hot water on the gas stove, and when our concoction is done we'll eat it immediately. I am really hungry, aren't you?"

"Haven't you returned the little nurse, smiling, and we went into the kitchen. "Suppose there should be no onion?" she said with hurried anxiety. "But there is!" I announced triumphantly.

We both smiled, as if we had said something wonderfully original and humorous. We were like two youngsters let out of school, and women, both used to self-repression, both schooled in life's hardships, I had conceived a genuine idea, and I was sure that I had returned my feeling. My enjoyment of our little lark would have been perfect, save for my wonderment over the presence of Jack Bickett's picture in her scrapbook.

Our onion was a success. Miss Sonnet attended to its final heating in the chafing dish while I saw to it that the coffee was just right, opened a bottle of stuffed olives I had found and provided generous portions of bread and butter for each of us.

"This is the psychological moment," she said gaily as she bowed and followed in from the kitchen and I followed with a hot platter in my hand. "I do hope it's right." "Perfect!" I murmured admiringly as she carefully turned the daintily browned concoction out on the platter. "Let me taste a minute."

We are both healthy young women, with good appetites, and we thoroughly enjoyed our impromptu little meal. We ate the last crumb of the omelet, drank two cups of coffee, and then we looked at each other sheepishly.

"I feel like a sored avocado," said Miss Sonnet. "I hope no one needs a nurse before morning. I should like to exert myself in any way."

"But are you sleepy?" I asked, hoping she would reply in the negative. I felt that I did not wish to go back to bed until I learned the reason Jack's picture was among her effects.

"Not a bit," she answered promptly. "Then casually, 'Would you like to look at my scrapbook?' It has some interesting little souvenirs in it of experiences I have had."

"Do You Know Him?"

Would it? My heart beat more quickly at the question, but I made my voice monotonous.

"Indeed, I should enjoy it very much. Come down to the end of the table away from the debris of the feast. We can clear up afterward."

With our heads close together we bent over the book, lingering over many interesting little scraps and pictures she had picked up. As she turned the page to the Kodak pictures, she said with a pretentiousness that I was sure was assumed:

"These are just some Kodak prints of myself and some of my friends. You wouldn't be interested."

"I am," I answered, "I answered, putting an ostentatious hand out to prevent her turning the page. I looked at the pictures, and confirmed the impression I had received when I first saw the page.

It was Jack Bickett's photograph. I schooled my voice to a sort of careless surprise.

"He is the nearest relative I have," I returned quietly. "A distant cousin, but brought up as my brother."

Her face flushed. Her eyes shone with interest.

"Oh! then you must be his Margaret!" she cried.

How to Attain a Graceful Carriage by Proper Exercise

By LUCREZIA BORI
Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

HAVE you ever stationed yourself upon one of the crowded thoroughfares of a city where woman-kind loves to walk to see and be seen? Have you not marvelled at the ungainly way most of the passers-by walk and carry themselves? Few women have perfect carriage, and for this reason only about 30 per cent. is said, walk gracefully.

You have noticed the corpulent lady who "waddles" from side to side as if each limb, in turn, was just a trifle too short to walk without dipping. You know that there is no shortness of limb, but just an inclination to favor the right side.

Then there is the woman who swings her arms like the pendulum of a grandfather's clock with every stride and holds her head forward.

"Then you will see the girl who thinks it is 'cute' to walk in a round-about, finely plaited mat of vegetable fibre, which she fits snugly to the baby's head. Over this she winds a cord of strong sinnet. At first the cord is loosely wound, but every morning it is bound more tightly. The purpose of the net mat under the cord is to give the cord a good purchase, so it cannot possibly slip.

If the mat and the cord were wound about the entire head, the growth of the hair, but at this is not the New Hebrides ideal of the crown of the head is left exposed. Neither the mat nor the cord is wound about the crown, for it is desired that the top should receive all the growth, and so gradually push upward into a cone shape.

Of course, the method is not particularly pleasant for baby. Some of the children I saw were crying all the time, but the mother did not let present discomfort spoil her future beauty and chance of a successful marriage. Indeed, the mother of the picture, as you see, does not possess a cone-shaped head.

It was her mother's fault that she did not marry well, while her friend, who had a more careful mother, married a chief. She did not intend that her daughter should have the ill-luck that followed her. Let us hope that the pain of the early days will be fully made up to baby when she is a reigning beauty and makes her successful marriage.

STORIES OF THE OPERAS

Condensed by ADRIEN TOURNIER

"The Girl of the Golden West"

THE Girl of the Golden West, an Italian grand opera, is a story of California in the days of the gold fever. The bar-room of the Polka is the rendezvous of the miners. Rance, the sheriff, is among them, and Ashby, the who bobs up and down like a cork upon the water as she takes her short, quick steps.

Proper Preparatory Methods.

If you should find that you have acquired any of these wrong ways of walking or carry yourself in a manner that will brand you as being "starchy," begin today a course of exercises that will teach you to poise your body correctly. Simple calisthenics, deep breathing, and dancing will aid you to obtain quick results.

If you cannot or do not care to form a class or to join a gymnasium, then "read up" on the subject of physical culture and systematically follow a course of exercises being your own physical director. Be determined to build up your shoulders and well-poised head.

Begin your exercises by standing erect. Correct carriage belongs to her, and her walk was a movement which combined grace and strength.

You should constantly bear in mind that any posture of the body that is not proper breeds difficulty in breathing, and that the body most susceptible to disease had postures interfere with the process of digestion and our complexions and general health pay the toll.

Worth-While Results.

If you belong to that great army of "workers," pay particular attention to the carriage of your body. It is natural to allow the body to droop when you are tired, but you should be determined to correct carriage, and you will be surprised to find how much less tired you are.

A perfect carriage is not to be acquired in a day; in a week nor even in a month. It cannot even be acquired in a longer time if you release into old habits as soon as the minutes set aside for exercising are over. In this, like in every other work, while doing, you must be persistent! At all times you must stand correctly. Minnie and the Sheriff Play for Johnson's Life.

the sheriff's boast that he will soon marry Minnie. Rance tries to make love to her, but she will not listen to him.

A stranger appears, saying that his name is Dick Johnson. The sheriff threatens him, but Minnie claims that she has met him before. In reality Johnson is Rance, who has come to the Polka to look the ground over, knowing that the miners leave their gold in Minnie's charge. Outside the outlaws are waiting for the signal of their leader, but he lingers to make love to the girl. She insists that he wait until she can get her things, and he leaves, promising to do so.

Minnie goes home to her cabin and dresses to receive Johnson. Her two Indian servants crouch in one corner and when her father arrives she receives him graciously. He declares his love for her and she acknowledges her affection for him. A snow storm suddenly comes on and Minnie invites Johnson to remain for the night. Distal shots are heard and the girl discovers Rance and his posse outside. She confronts Johnson, not caring to have the miners find a man in her house, then opens the door.

Rance tells Minnie that they are looking for Dick Johnson, who is Ramerrez, and, fearing for her safety, came to find him. Minnie is astounded at his revelation, and, after the miners leave, upbraids Johnson for deceiving her when she had given him her love. The outlaws begin today a course of exercises that will teach you to poise your body correctly. Simple calisthenics, deep breathing, and dancing will aid you to obtain quick results.

If you cannot or do not care to form a class or to join a gymnasium, then "read up" on the subject of physical culture and systematically follow a course of exercises being your own physical director. Be determined to build up your shoulders and well-poised head.

Begin your exercises by standing erect. Correct carriage belongs to her, and her walk was a movement which combined grace and strength.

You should constantly bear in mind that any posture of the body that is not proper breeds difficulty in breathing, and that the body most susceptible to disease had postures interfere with the process of digestion and our complexions and general health pay the toll.

Worth-While Results.

If you belong to that great army of "workers," pay particular attention to the carriage of your body. It is natural to allow the body to droop when you are tired, but you should be determined to correct carriage, and you will be surprised to find how much less tired you are.

A perfect carriage is not to be acquired in a day; in a week nor even in a month. It cannot even be acquired in a longer time if you release into old habits as soon as the minutes set aside for exercising are over. Not Loved, But Respected

With the capture of Khartoum, capital of the Sudan, which meant the re-establishment of British possession of the upper reaches of the Nile, Kitchener became the object of hero-worship in England.

Shortly afterwards he was promoted lieutenant-general and then chief of staff to Lord Roberts in the South African war, and on Lord Roberts' return to England in November 1900, succeeded him as commander-in-chief in that field. By constructing a 3,500 mile chain of block houses, he stopped the Boer raids and virtually ended the war in South Africa. This added to his popularity and prestige at home, and he was rewarded by the title of Viscount, promotion to the rank of general for distinguished services, the thanks of the parliament and a grant of £250,000.

IN INDIA.

Immediately after the peace General Kitchener went to India as commander-in-chief of the British forces there, and in this position which he held for seven years he carried out many far-reaching administrative reforms, but a complete re-organization and strategic redistribution of the British and native forces. On leaving India in 1908, he was promoted field marshal and appointed commander-in-chief and high commissioner in the Mediterranean and later on took a tour of inspection of the forces of the empire, drawing up a scheme of defense of the overseas dominions.

BACK TO EGYPT.

He then returned to Egypt, the scene of his first triumph, in the capacity of British agent and consul-general in Cairo—virtually a governor-generalship of Egypt—and led in the economical development of the country, building new roads and irrigation works on a large scale.

During all the years the British people had looked on Kitchener's silent, but effective work, they had never been able to fathom his personality. A Cockney non-commissioned officer, who had seen much service under him, summed up the general opinion, when he said of Kitchener:

NO TALKER.

"E's no talker. Not 'im. E's all steer and 'nice."

His face was that of a man who neither asked for sympathy nor wanted it.

He had steady, blue gray, passionate eyes, and a heavy moustache covered a mouth that shut close and firm like a wolf trap. He believed with all his might in the gospel of work. He had a grim laconic humor. "What is your taste in hairpins?" for instance, is said to have been the query with which he annihilated a dandy and general. He was indifferent to popularity, particularly among women, and though feted all over the world in social circles, he never married.

Earl Kitchener was appointed secretary of State for War on August 8, 1914, a few days after Great Britain's declaration of war on Germany. He was regarded as England's greatest soldier, and the decision was made to entrust him with supreme direction of the war was received with unanimous approval.

WAS CRITICIZED.

As the war progressed and Great Britain's deficiencies in certain directions, particularly in regard to shortage of artillery ammunition, became apparent, Earl Kitchener was subjected to severe criticism led by Lord Northcliffe. The secretary was charged with responsibility for failure to foresee the extraordinary demand for heavy shells, and as a result the ministry of munitions was formed with David Lloyd-George at its head.

ROBERTSON'S APPOINTMENT.

Earl Kitchener's responsibilities were further lessened by the appointment of General Sir William Robertson as chief of the imperial staff in December of last year. Robertson was further lessened by the appointment of General Sir William Robertson as chief of the imperial staff in December of last year. Robertson was further lessened by the appointment of General Sir William Robertson as chief of the imperial staff in December of last year.

MOVEMENTS SECRET.

There have been no recent reports of Earl Kitchener's movements. He was last mentioned in the cable despatch of Friday, when he went to Westminster Palace to be questioned by members of the House of Commons who were not satisfied with the conduct of the war. No intimation was given that he intended to leave England.

HIGHLY THOUGHT OF.

Premier Asquith paid high tribute to Earl Kitchener's work in his speech at the recent adjournment of parliament, saying no other man could have raised the great armies which Kitchener assembled.

It has been recognized that there was placed on the war secretary's shoulders a load it was impossible for one man to bear. In the early part of the war he was responsible not only for the organization of armies, but for the enormous work of equipping them with munitions. Since David Lloyd George took charge of the munitions department, Earl Kitchener has been able to devote himself more largely to the work of military organization. Great Britain's Allies had great confidence in Earl Kitchener's judgment. His visits to France and Italy were supposed to have had important results in co-ordinating the work of the Allies. The fact that he had left London for Russia is regarded as an indication that he was on a similar mission to that country. The first intimation came in the bulletin announcing that he had been lost.

to other posts he held during a long career in the diplomatic service, was second secretary to the British embassy in Washington from 1895 to 1898. He was a native of Ireland, born in County Leitrim in 1866.

Brigadier General Arthur Elphinstone was born in 1869, and entered the army in 1890. He was fighting on the Indian frontier in 1897-98. He was severely wounded in the Boer war. In the present war he had gained the Distinguished Service Order.

Lieut.-Col. Oswald Arthur Fitzgerald, who had been personal military secretary to Lord Kitchener since August, 1914, had been closely associated with the late Field Marshal in army service for many years.

PROBABLY STRUCK A MINE

Naval officers express the opinion that the cruiser Hampshire must have struck a mine, as it would have to be an exceedingly lucky shot for a torpedo to have a ship with her speed and under the conditions of the sea which was very rough.

The Hampshire was an old boat and not fit for fleet action; was fast enough for patrol and blockade work. She carried a crew of between 400 and 500 men.

Ottawa, Ont., June 5.—Sir Frederick Donaldson, one of Earl Kitchener's party was munitions adviser to Lloyd-George. He visited Canada last fall on the invitation of D. A. Thomas (Baron Rhondda) to study the possibility of manufacturing heavy ordnance in this country. He was formerly chief superintendent of ordnance at Woolwich arsenal.

AT "THE VALLEY OF 1,000 DEAD."

The following are a few extracts from a letter which has just been received from a young Canadian officer at the front:

Our line can be traced across a couple of farms; the wagon stands out in No. Man's Lane waiting for the return of the toiler; the once well-kept hedge is now shell-torn and ragged; the line cuts it into two and runs up the "Hill of Horrors" and down into the "Valley of 1,000 Dead," and then into the woods and out of sight, but it can still be traced by star-shells which silhouette the old ruins of homes.

Five months in the trenches, and still going strong; scenes of horror and hardships, and still can smile; eating bread and cheese and meat which always has mud and sandbag chreeds in it; drinking tea which looks like tea, but tastes only of chlorine, which is used to purify the water, and still I cannot get indigestion, and with all the wet feet I cannot take a cold; so is it any wonder that with all the long hours of lonely guard and the heavy work of fatigue parties I smile and laugh and grow fat? There is nothing to worry about.

Every once in a while we go back for rest, and then we get into some town and—(bang—No! I am not hit!)—then we get a bottle of wine, a can of tomatoes, and eggs, and what of it? After this I get your lovely cake without letter—only the post-mark to indicate where it comes from and I can only say, "What a peach," and I sure enjoy every crumb of it."

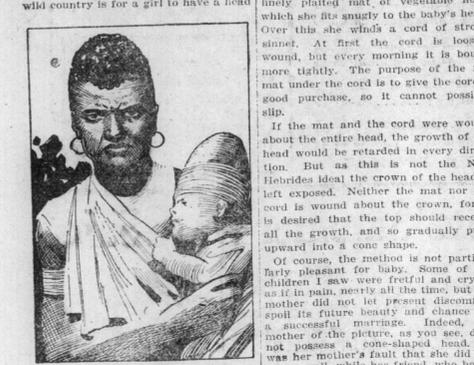

The funeral of F. de Sales Mudd, former State immigration superintendent, was held at Bryantown, Md. A well that has moved down hill twenty feet at Atchison, Kan., owing to landslide, is in good condition and still used.

LOOKING GOOD.

Admiration has been expressed from many local sources at the fine appearance presented by the Brantford platoon of the Bantam battalion when on parade and drilling on the market square. The majority of the men have been thoroughly outfitted and equipped, and are picking up the rudiments of the drill with gratifying rapidity. The total strength of the platoon to date is 177, with several more recruits expected, both here and in Paris, during the next few days.

GREAT PACE.

Says the Hamilton Spectator—"The 215th Brantford battalion is leading No. 2 military division in recruiting. The battalion commanded by Lieut.-Col. Harry Cockshutt, is setting a great pace in recruiting. On Thursday the unit secured 99 men, or one more than all Toronto, yesterday the 215th secured 25 men. Last evening a big recruiting rally was held in the Brant theatre, where ex-Mayor Spence presided. Rev. S. Ban's Nelson, of Hamilton was the chief speaker. Lieut.-Col. Cockshutt also addressed the gathering. At this meeting 15 recruits were secured and this morning eight more men were secured for the Brantford battalion. Capt. R. J. Ferguson, formerly of the Hamilton depot, is in charge of the publicity campaign in the Telephone City and stated that the results being secured there are wonderful. In addition to the recruits secured, 62 rejection buttons were issued in Brantford last week."

TAKES HIS PLACE.

Among the new men signed on yesterday by the 215th, is W. M. Mounfield, 6 Peel street, a brother of whom was killed in action only a few weeks ago, hence Mr. Mounfield is going to fill the vacant place.

USING STREETS.

Stephen Cayless, Terrace Hill St., enquires of the City Clerk, whether special privileges are granted able bodied foreigners, who peddle ice cream, etc. to use the city sidewalks and lawns to push their carts, while the law prohibits children of Britishers from having recreation upon the same with their roller skates. This matter, says he, may merit some investigation.

COMING ON FURLOUGH.

Pte. Harry VanFleet, who left this city with one of the first quotas of men to the first contingent, is about to return to his home in this city on a few weeks' furlough, according to information received this morning by his mother, Mrs. Van Fleet of 128 Oxford street.

MORE RECRUITS.

Another splendid day's results were achieved by the 215th batn on yesterday, when a total of 22 new men were signed up, this bringing the total strength of the battalion to 475. No longer do the sceptics of Brantford enquire "Do they really get them?" The question now is, "Where do they get them." The only difficulty experienced in recruiting now is to outfit the recruits as swiftly as they are obtained, and this is being accomplished, thanks to the tireless efforts of Q. M. Sergeant Thornthwaite and others of the Quartermaster's department.

With the City Police

In the police court this morning Magistrate Livingston administered a severe warning to Pte. Henry Green, charged with an assault upon Lt. Geo. Sweet, and imposed upon the defendant a fine of $5 and $17.65 costs, or 2 months in jail. Mrs. Thomas Lawrence, charged with disorderly conduct, was warned and allowed to go. A charge of conversion against Thos. Aird was adjourned until to-morrow, while R. H. Robbins, upon a similar charge, was remanded once more for a week. Miss Sarah Davis, of Onondaga, preferred a charge of arson against Robert Gordon, in connection with the burning of her barn, but the defendant was proved innocent and dismissed.

In the evening a special sermon was preached by request—"The Conversion of Zacheus, the rich and the publican, who sought to see Jesus but could not for the crowd, because of his little stature. The points made were: 1. The resurrection of Zacheus' soul. Zacheus was small of stature—the crowd was great, the people hid Jesus, but difficulties like these are nothing to a determined soul, for instance Paul was let down over the wall of the city in a basket, his determined friends being possessed with inventive genius. Zacheus climbed a tree, not allowing himself to think of the people who would criticize the act. 2. "Jesus looked up." Wherever there is a looking sinner, there is a looking Saviour. The longing look of Zacheus met the loving satisfying look of Jesus. It was a personal call, and in order to obey it, Zacheus had to humble himself and 'come down' from his pride, love of sin, his self-righteousness and timidity. "To-day I must abide in thy house"—Jesus will be the guest of the publican. He will be the guest if he comes to abide. Jesus brings religion into the home. He does not only abide in the church but he abides in the home of every believer of His word. 3. The reproach of envy. "And when they saw it they all murmured, saying, that he was a sinner." They were not anxious for sinners to be saved. They loved their own traditions more than they loved men.

4. The repentant resolve. Zacheus was ready to show his change of heart in a very practical way. The law required him to restore what he had taken, but he went beyond the law and restored fourfold. 5. The reassuring Saviour. "This day is salvation come to this house." He knew the fears and doubts of Zacheus. He knew the doubts of the Pharisees had well nigh crushed the little spark of hope that was springing up in Zacheus, and defends himself against the critics when he says: "For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

The music, under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Thresher was very good. In the evening, the anthem, "Now we praise thee, O God, we praise thee, Miss Edna Kay taking the solo parts.

UP WITH THE LARKS An officer in the Flying Corps sent the following unconventional account of an air reconnaissance:— Herewith latest war news as passed by Censor—so I hope. The weather continues fine and fact to get out in front of the chateau on deck chairs to-day imbuing sunshine. I was up with the lark, likewise Rowland. Weather being fine and we were founded up in the air—to proceed in an easterly direction over the place where the unkind people are—to pick up information. I, even I, was leading the show this morning, i.e., the observer in my machine had to do the observing.

The day was fine and the air was still, and everything went well until Archibald began to flail and 'clafen me with noisome crash. I hid my head, I stopped my ears in vain attempt to calm my fears; I whistled every tune I knew and tried to think it wasn't true. Then came a pause, we'd passed the zone; in fear I fingered every bone. Then lo! a smile o'erspread my face, for every bone was in its place and I turned for home no whit the worse, until three Hunlets on our stern con strained us, like the worm, to turn. Then bullets whizzing fine and bullets founded up in the air—to proceed in an easterly direction over the place where the unkind people are—to pick up information. WHY NOT ATTACK KIEL CANAL BY AN AERIAL FORCE OF 150 UNITS?

French Admiral Suggests a Way by Which Aeroplanes Could Assure Obstruction of Sufficient Duration to Allow Forcing of Straits and Mine Fields—Then the Hun Fleet Could be Outnumbered Either on North Sea or in Baltic.

By Special Wire to the Courier. Paris, June 6.—The allies could extend their blockade to the German coast in the Baltic and neutralize the strategic advantage of the Kiel Canal, according to Vice-Admiral Degouty of the French Navy.

The first of necessary operations to accomplish this, he points out, would be an attack upon the canal by an aerial force of 120 to 150 units divided into flotillas of 20 or 30 machines each.

While the base from which such air assaults might be made is only hinted at by Admiral Degouty, an operation speedily executed would, according to his theory, make possible a landing at isolated points on the German coast and its sufficient fortification so as fully to protect the establishment of an immense aviation camp within 50 to 80 miles of the canal terminus.

Turning skyward. A few days ago 25 bombs fell, but the net damage was slight. On another day at noon time, a raider was observed high among the clouds. Shells from the Russian guns burst on all sides of him, but he sailed seemingly unharmed behind a bank of clouds and disappeared from view.

TOWNSHEND'S MEN WERE VERY HARD PRESSED

For Four Months Were Under Almost Constant Fire.

TOBACCO ALL RAN OUT Milk Gave Out and Hospital Diet Was Corn Flour.

London, June 6.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The straits to which General Townshend's little army at Kut, the remnant of the force which pushed almost to Bagdad, was reduced before they surrendered, with the approval of the home government are becoming only gradually known in England. The latest contribution to the annals of the siege comes in a letter from Edmund Candler, correspondent with the expedition which attempted in the face of impossible weather conditions to relieve Townshend's beleaguered troops. For four months Townshend's men were under almost constant fire with no possibility of making any safe projection from the shells. During the last weeks of the siege the daily deaths from fire and disease, caused mainly by hunger, averaged eight British and twenty-one Indians. When Kut finally capitulated the regiments holding the front line, which had been there for fortnight without relief, were too weak to carry their equipment.

TOBACCO FAMINE

The tobacco famine was a great privation, but the garrison did not find the enforced abstinence cured their craving, as every kind of substitute was there. An Arab brand, a species similar to that smoked in Indian hookahs, was exhausted early in April. After that lime leaves were smoked or ginger or baked tea dregs. In January English "baccy" fetched over three pounds a half pound. In an auction of a dead officer's effects a box of cheap Indian cheroots fetched over thirteen pounds, a box of Egyptian cigarettes eight pounds, and a tin of condensed milk two pounds six. Just before General Townshend's force entered Kut a large consignment of

I tried all kinds of Medicine but none of them did me any good. At last, I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. tained from wounded British officers who were permitted by the Turks to join the main British force below Kut. The writer adds:
"All the artillery, cavalry, and transport animals had been consumed before the garrison fell. One of the last mules to be slaughtered had been on three Indian frontier campaigns and wore the ribbons round its neck. The supply and transport butchers had sent it back twice, refusing to kill it, but in the end it had to go with the machine gun mules. Mule flesh was generally preferred to horse, and mule fat supplied good dripping; also an improvised substitute for lamp oil.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Making Short Folks Taller Latest Triumph of Science

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B. M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University)

If you are of good height, you may not be of the army corps who yearn to grow tall. But if you are short in stature the chances are you have often envied those who tower above you. The Bible tells us that "there were giants in the earth in those days" before the flood, but if the philosopher, Bacon, was right they were not very wise, because he declares "Nature did never put her precious jewels into a garret four stories high; and, therefore, these exceeding tall men had ever very empty heads."

Let all such sensations and observations be as they may, it has remained for Prof. T. Braliford Robertson, M. D., of Philosophy and Science, and of medicine, to discover the active agent in living tissues which grows and causes an increase in the height of the individual. Observations have accumulated over the past dozen years or more to prove that tallness and stamper are inseparable and that with disorders of the pituitary glands and hypophysis. This bit of soft tissue, resembling a double 'o' with a thin filament extending from under the brain into a nest or sac over the nasal bone. Robertson has triumphed over many difficulties and has taken a substance from the organism of the pituitary gland which will cause man and other animals to grow.

What "Tethelin" Is.

It was found that this agent or principle has definite chemical and physiological characters. It is easily obtainable and can be made in great service to humanity. Dr. Robertson has named this substance "tethelin" from the Greek word which means "to grow". It is a white, crystalline substance, soluble in water, and is the most powerful, evaporated, and most potent, redissolved in ether, alcohol, and moved from the body. About 200 head of cattle are required to give about a half a teaspoonful of tethelin. That is to say, from 200 pituitary glands of tethelin come from 200 pituitary glands of oxen, which will make it very expensive for those who wish to take some to become taller. When less than a grain of this pituitary extract is fed to mice over a period of weeks old, it at first noticeably increases in size and muscular power. Mice that have swallowed tethelin are decidedly more compactly built than the average animals of the same age. Age for age, they are bigger.

Some Remarkable Results.

The favorable effect upon the skin of tethelin proves that beauty is more than skin deep and, therefore, intimately interwoven in the web and woof of the flesh and blood. The coats of grown-up animals which have been fed with tethelin retain a youthful middle and advance age the glossy, silky appearance of the coats of young animals. The normal creases six months prior to tethelin, "staring" fur and discolorations. Those fed with tethelin were as beautiful as those 3 and 7 months old. Experiments were also "brought to a victorious conclusion" as the Europeans believe report their various battles—in the matter of fevers, anemias, poor nourishment and like maladies. Tethelin would appear to be a strong tonic to the growth of lost tissues. Textures lost in waste or injury are quickly replaced when tethelin is administered. Twenty-nine wounded and

ASSOCIATED PRESS SUMS UP NAVAL FIGHT

No Doubt That British Fleet Gained Substantial Victory.

GERMAN LOSSES WERE FALSIFIED Many of Their Damaged Ships Likely Able to Limp to Port.

London, June 6.—The latest reports received by the British admiralty enables The Associated Press to give the following review of the naval engagement off the Jutland coast, with various incidents and results, as viewed from the British side:
During the night of May 31—June 1, British destroyers made a determined attack on the retreating German battle fleet which hastened its flight. The British fleet remained in possession of the scene of battle during the morning of June 1 and traversed the field four times, finding no enemy to fire upon. The commander-in-chief took his fleet back to its bases at his leisure and five hours after its arrival reported the battle fleet ready for action.

As regards the German losses, definite evidence, it is declared, has now been obtained that they were deliberately falsified, and that the following were totally destroyed:
Two battle cruisers; one, at least, and probably two battleships; four light cruisers, eight destroyers and one submarine.

The remainder of the German battle cruiser squadron may have reached home ports, but the ships were all severely damaged, as also were ships of the Koenig class, which came under the fire of a portion of the British battle fleet.

Besides the above, the Associated Press has obtained information from returned officers of the fleet to the effect that they were able to identify the lost German battle cruisers as the Hindenburg and Lutzow. Naval officers here point out that on account of their proximity to home ports, some of their vessels in cruiser warfare, would have been able to make port.

Solving the Problem of a Bathing Suit That Water Won't Spoil.

BETH MARVIN and I sat on the top step of our front porch watching the Carter children playing in the next yard. We were so interested in their game of "crash-hopper green" that we never noticed Nan Gilson until she was right on top of us.
"Where are you two lost-in-dreams wandering now?" she asked, getting herself between us.
Then she continued, "Robin, if you can divert your attention from those foolish children long enough to listen to me, I'd like to ask you to suggest a smart bathing suit for me. I want to make it myself—the ones in the shops are so beastly expensive—and you're the only one I know who can help me. In the first place, I don't want a 'show' bathing suit. It must be made of a material that water cannot spoil. I hate mahair, so don't suggest that wiry stuff."
I smiled while Nan voiced her objections to this fabric, and then with a grin equal to that of Teddie Carter when he showed me that he had lost a "toof" I led Nan and Beth upstairs and showed them the bathing costume I had just finished that morning. It was all that Nan demanded of a bathing suit: water could do it no harm, it was "modest," smart, becoming, and made of mahair. Nan was delighted with it, so I proceeded to explain in detail exactly how I had made it.
The material is a new wash tafetta and water-salt or fresh-will not rob it of its beauty. I selected a good shade of navy blue and decided for once I would not use any contrasting color for trimming. It seemed to me that the bathing suit would be smarter if kept in one tone.
I bought a pattern with a full skirt "long lines."
First, I made the bodice, which is not at all "fussy." The front and back is relieved from excess plainness by a narrow, slightly-flaring fold of the material applied about the lower portion to simulate an Eton jacket. I finished the top with a narrow fold of the material ornamented with flat, silk-covered buttons.
The short sleeves I set in at the normal armholes and trimmed them with circular ruffles of the tafetta. Then I finished the pointed neck-line with a band of soutache braiding in the same tone of blue as the tafetta, and a rolled collar of the material.
The skirt is cut with a narrow yoke and with panel front. I arranged the

INDIAN FACTORIES ALL WORK FOR WAR

India is adding to the strength of the forces waging war against the Central Powers by more than furnishing troops and gifts for Red Cross and Patriotic Funds. Advice to hand show that factories for the manufacture of military equipment and aeroplanes are in full swing. HERBERT WATEROUS
The most noted basso on the American stage is Herbert Waterous, who has been recently added to the all star cast of the DeKoven Opera Company of "Robin Hood." Mr. Waterous sings the role of Will Scarlet, a part that he made famous at the recent revival of "Robin Hood" by the DeKoven Opera Company at the New American Theatre, New York City. "Robin Hood" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House to-night.

AT THE COLONIAL
"Tess of the Storm Country," is the play presented for the first half of this week at the Colonial by the Princess Players. The play deals with the life of squatters, Tess's father being accused of murder, though innocent. The evening, a scene Reid takes part of Tess, and gives a vivid portrayal of the untutored but pretty squatter's daughter. Mr. John Higgins, as the villain, Ben Letts, has acted his part in admirable fashion. Beside the play there was the first number of a big serial, "Graft," which promises to be a fascinating story. A big house witnessed the performance.

THE BRANT
The final episode of "The Red Circle," as thrilling and full of heart interest as its predecessors, and bringing the story to a happy close, and Dustin Farman, a screen star, will bring two films of unusual strength and interest, which are shown at the Brant for the first three days of the week. The feature film is particularly meritorious. Dustin Farman's acting proving only once more his right to rank as a fine actor. A number of other interesting and amusing pictures are also shown. Delay encountered by one of the vaudeville troupes crossing the border at the last evening, the management of the Brant the difficult task of providing a suitable act at the eleventh hour. This was ultimately accomplished, and the audience was delighted with a trained dog act of the first class. Clark, Turner and Reece present a novel and interesting repertoire of songs and dances. The management of the Brant have introduced an attractively printed, 16 page program, the evening, a schedule of coming features during the month, and a great deal of interesting data concerning popular film stars.

GAINSVILLE NEWS

The beautiful home and grounds of Mr. J. Graham presented a fairy scene on Saturday evening. Gay with flags and bunting and colored lights with numerous fairies flitting here and there and everywhere, Miss Graham's class "The Cleaners," and Miss Hawley's class "The Cleaners," had charge of the very successful lawn social. The gaily decorated booth was ably managed by the boys. The refreshment tables on the west lawn were prettily served by the girls. An excellent program was rendered consisting of songs by Masters Tullock and Miss Bloxham, city; readings by Miss Heamen and Miss Kendrick; violin solos by Misses Bullock and Carpenter. Mr. F. Sumler was chairman. The boys and girls and their teachers are to be congratulated on the success of the very enjoyable evening.

Miss Mildred Calbeck, city, was the Sunday guest of Miss A. Hawley. Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Jarvis of Jarvis are visiting at Mr. F. Coles.

Miss Bullock is the guest of Miss Elba Perrin.

Rev. Mr. Poss of Middleport, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church on Sunday morning his text being found in Gal. vi, 5-8.

Rev. Mr. Pleye has been in Simcoe attending the conference held there.

Rev. L. Brown of the First Baptist church, Brantford, conducted a very impressive sacrament service at the Baptist mission on Sunday. His text was taken from Isaiah 66: 8, and his remarks were full of inspiration and encouragement.

Marion McCann and Gladys Tottle the girls who have been collecting for the Hospital during the past week, wish to thank everyone in this district for their kind and generous donations. The little red box was found to contain $20 and the girls are well pleased with their efforts in being able to assist that noble band of workers—the W. H. A.

We sincerely sympathize with Mrs. Hagar and Mrs. Poag and family who have suffered bereavement in the loss of a son and brother, Mr. A. Rymal of London, whose death occurred on Thursday last. Mrs. Hagar has been at her son's bedside for the past week. Mrs. Poag and her sister, Mrs. Kern of Hamilton, were in London on Saturday attending the funeral.

INDIAN FACTORIES ALL WORK FOR WAR

India is adding to the strength of the forces waging war against the Central Powers by more than furnishing troops and gifts for Red Cross and Patriotic Funds. Advice to hand show that factories for the manufacture of military equipment and aeroplanes are in full swing. The Indian press does not fail to criticize unfavorably the Mesopotamia Expedition and charge its failure to the parsimony of the Indian Finance Department, and yet in effect they say "We must see this thing through."

While Congressman Glynn was in the street pointing out spots of interest to sightseers in Washington, a man snatched his new $5 straw hat and fled.

even though you need them quite badly, but you not only subject your self to immediate discomfort, but you may also be laying the foundation for serious trouble in the future.

The sense of sight is your most precious gift from Nature. You cannot afford to neglect or trifle with your eyes. To do so might mean not only loss of employment, but also of sight itself.

Classified Advertising PAYS

The waste paper basket in some offices is emptied once a day, sometimes twice a day. Besides scraps of paper and envelopes it usually contains many circulars addressed to the man who seldom opens them.

Thousands of dollars are wasted by circular publicity. There is no surer method of reaching the people you want than through the CLASSIFIED COLUMNS OF THE COURIER. There is no waste publicity in CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING. You can reach a greater number of possible buyers at a cost far below that of sending circulars, and the only time needed is to write your copy.

Eliminate office basket waste and turn your money into CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING.

A GERMAN SCAPEGOAT
Herr Clemens Delbrueck, who a few weeks ago, was extolled in the Reichstag, for his masterly organization of the food supplies of Germany, has been invited to resign from his position. The official reason ascribed for the step is the state of his health. As he is one of the most robust ministers of state, the real cause is naturally held to be that a scapegoat has been found in Herr Delbrueck in order to appease, for the time being the rising indignation of the people at the scarcity and dearth of food throughout the country.
