Poetry.

Ode to Canada.

Sweet as the lightning's vivid beam from East to West, the north of brotherhood, the Canadian breast.

Indistinct as the needle's flight to its magnetic pole, so turns each true Canadian heart to its destined goal.

As graven on cedrella palm the name of Zion above, so deep enshrined in every heart is Canada's proud throne.

When'er the honor of our land is touched by foreign foe, there leaps to life a fervid flame, a patriotic glow.

From ocean shore to ocean shore her wide domain extends, from inland sea to ocean pole her kingdom never ends.

The wave that frets Atlantic coast, that taves Pacific shore, the icebergs in the Arctic seas her scepter floateth o'er.

Her deep soil tickled by the hoe, shall laugh with harvest mirth, her boundless prairies yet shall fill the garner of the ear.

Hurray, hurrah for Canada, the young, the free, the brave, in all her grand Dominion her flag floats o'er no slave.

O God of nations, be the guide to lead our nation on, should north and south as kindred drops be mingled in one!

Or linked with adamantine bond with noble motherland; or as youngest among nations we independent stand.

May Canada's glad mission be to aid the coming dawn, when like an overflowing sea the gospel tide flows on.

And man to man a brother is, and nations disappear, and all are one in Christ's wide fold, Love banishing all fear.

—Robert Matheson.

Interesting Story.

A Happy Chance.

Leonard Goring was a busy man, for though comparatively young, in his hands rested almost the entire charge of the business of an old-established firm of solicitors in Lincoln's Inn.

An important matter of business, too delicate to be entrusted to a clerk, took him to Liverpool, where he arrived early one foggy November morning, so early, indeed, that being in want of a slave before it was likely that the more fashionable hair-dressers had opened for the day, he turned into a small barber-shop in a quiet street of poor-looking houses, and submitted his chin to the hands of his proprietor.

"It was a happy chance," Mr Goring has often since that murky morning declared—that led his steps towards that humble shop, for just as he was on the point of leaving, a low, sweet voice sounded close behind him, saying:

"Please, Mr Wilson?"

"Hullo, Jessie," said the barber, "what's the matter?—Mother worse?"

"Mr Wilson," and the sweet voice was pitiful and strained, "you said my curls were worth a lot of money the other day."

"So I did," said the barber, eagerly.

"Will you give me some for them? Our coal is all gone, and there is nothing to eat, and mamma—"

Here Jessie broke into passionate sobs.

Mr Goring stooped forward a little, and lifted Jessie to his lap.

"Let me see your curls," he said, gently lifting a shabby hat, and letting fall a shower of hair of the purest golden color. "Suppose you sell it to me," he said, quietly; "but you must promise me that nobody shall cut it off but myself. And I must know your name, and where you live, so I can come for it."

Jessie, whose sobs had been stilled by the sight of money, answered:

"Oh, thank you! Nobody else shall touch my curls. My name is Jessie Herriek, and I live on the top floor of this house."

"And how old are you, Jessie?"

"Ten years old last July. Please, may I go now? It is so cold in our room, and mamma is so ill," the lips quivering.

"You run back to mamma, and I will send the coal," said Mr Goring, muttering, as the child sped away:

"If it should be a direct Providence," she said to the barber: "Who is she?"

"This child of a widow dying upstairs. After her husband died she worked for me, and she was not strong, and things have been going badly for the past few months."

"Has she had a doctor?"

"Yes, the dispensary doctor."

Mr Goring, having given an order at the nearest grocery for food and fuel, returned to the office, and mounted to the fourth floor.

A door, standing wide open, showed him the interior of a poorly-furnished room, and Jessie standing near a bed, listening to a gentleman speaking in a low tone to her.

"Pardon me," Mr Goring said; "the doctor?"

"Yes; Dr Musgrave."

"I am a friend of Mrs Herriek. I have just heard of her illness. Can you send a competent nurse? I am Leonard Goring, and Mrs Herriek's lawyer. I will be responsible."

To Jessie a few hours later, it seemed as if she was living a fairy tale.

First, there appeared a stout, elderly woman, all motherly kindness, who lifted her mother out of the hot tessel bed, made it comfortable and clean, set the room in order, made such an extravagant fire as Jessie had never seen, and then began to cook delicious things taken out of a great hamper sent into the room.

All the luxuries the poor child had longed vainly to give her mother appeared as if by magic, and her own hunger was satisfied as it had not been for weeks.

Day after day, for the business on which he had visited Liverpool detained him for many weeks, Leonard Goring climbed the stairs to Mrs Herriek's room, to bear from the nurse how the poor little widow was getting on.

She was able, after a while, to sit up, and looked like a fair, pretty child in her big chair. Fruit, flowers, books, all were sent to make the hours of convalescence less tedious, and when at last he departed, he tried to face the fact that an episode of his life was nearly over, that it would cost him bitter pain to resign.

"Who would have imagined," he asked himself, sorrowfully, "that I, who never cared for a woman in my life, would walk into a back alley and fall in love with a widow? I can't ask her to marry me, that is clear. She would think I had had mercenary objects in view all the time. I think I will write. I will, I'd better not trust myself to see her again, and Briggs knows all about the case."

Little Mrs Herriek, in a soft, white wrapper and shawl, was sitting in her big chair, with Jessie nesting on a low seat beside her, talking of Mr Goring.

Mrs Maguire, bustling about the room, smiled merrily at the sentences reached her ears, but she was a discreet woman and held her tongue.

"Though," she thought, "if ever two people were head and ears in love, them's the two. Young folks never had it worse."

"When he comes to-day," Mrs Herriek was saying, when a rap at the door interrupted her.

A gentleman was ushered in who introduced himself.

"Twice Mrs Herriek read the letter.

"Do I understand," she said faintly, "My father died four years ago, and forgave me, leaving me his entire fortune."

"Exactly. You see the child's name gave Mr Goring the clue, and he has been working while you were ill, so that everything is arranged for you. You can take possession of your old home whenever you will."

"Mr Goring knew, then, when he came here?"

"Yes. By the way, you were advertised for over and over again."

A brief conversation made everything clear, and Mr Briggs went away.

But Mrs Herriek, who had been very calm through the whole interview, lay back white and trembling in her chair, one thought only in her heart.

"He has gone away! He is afraid I will suspect him of mercenary motives, and he has left me! He loves me! I know he loves me, but he will never come back to me!"

Busy days followed, and the widow took possession of her property.

But she did not get strong, though she had all things to make her so that money could procure.

What her heart longed for was the presence of Leonard Goring. It seemed bold, unwomanly to send for him.

And yet the happiness of two lives was at stake.

She decided at last. If he despised her the separation could be no more complete.

So, one morning, Leonard Goring found upon his breakfast-table a little note, upon paper stamped with the name of a fashionable hotel. And inside he read—

"DEAREST MR GORING—Mamma says if you would like to cut off the curls you bought last winter, you will find us at this hotel. JESSIE HERRICK."

Face to face once more, pride was thrown to the winds and love triumphed. Leonard Goring had no further fear of being misunderstood when Mrs Herriek's eyes answered his loving words before her lips spoke.

And she never doubted that it was love, and love only, that brought her lover back to her.

And Jessie keeps her curls, although her step father declares they are his, and threatens to cut them off when she is married and leaves him, a threat that may daunt little Jessie's lovers in the future, but assuredly does not frighten anybody now.

Kissing Mother.

A father, talking to his careless daughter, said: "I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a care-worn look upon her face. Perhaps it was not brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast; and when your mother comes, and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face."

Beside, you owe her many kisses. Away back, when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and stollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands, whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough old world; and then the midnight kiss with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned above her restless pillow—these have all been on interest for long, long years.

"She may not be so pretty as you are, but if you had done your share of work the last ten years, the contrast would not have been so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours; yet if you are sick, that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's, as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort; and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face."

"She will leave you one of these days. The burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands, that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. When those neglected lips, that gave you your first baby kiss, and those sad, tired eyes, are forever closed, then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late."—Eli Perkins' Book.

Rev. Sam Jones on Whiskey.

The liquor traffic ought to be made so odious that nobody but an infernal fool will drink it. Separate these liquor-dealers from their liquor, and they will be all right. The church that will house a man who rents a store to sell liquor is a hateful hypocrite. Some of the churches here in Atlanta are doing just that thing. If there is a man or woman in this vast audience who never had a relative or loved one hurt or ruined by whiskey, I want him or her to stand up right now. You have all had a brother, or a son, or a father, or a son-in-law ruined by whiskey! My goodness! these sons-in-law. I'd rather have a ho-constrictor around my neck than to have a drunken son-in-law. The devil cannot do anything worse than he wants it. And when he has this control over himself, he can preach louder and more in a day than the Reverend Pentecost can preach in a year.

Autumnal Processions.

With shout and noise and dip and roar, like waves that beat upon the shore, with noise and roar and shout and din, like angry breakers tumbling in, with pattering rush of many feet, I see the crowd come down the street; above the tumult on the stones I hear the maddened farmer's groans; in the shrill accents of despair it seems to me I hear him swear; I cannot see the farmer man, his wagon or his patient span; I only hear the rising noise, and see the surging throng of boys. This is the way the boys of town escort the apple wagon down.

I look around your city and see the bar-rooms as thick as the stars in the heavens. Each one of the three hundred bar-rooms in Atlanta represents at least, ten confirmed drunkards. Three thousand men in Atlanta, across the line, are gone to ruin! You can stop it if you want to. There are church members enough in this town to turn out any day and vote liquor out of it. You don't want to have a fuss. Well, I'll tell you every good man dreads a fuss, but he doesn't fear anything that walks on the earth. God despises a coward. I had rather die at the mouth of a cannon doing my duty than to run away from it because I was afraid. God entrusts all the noble causes on this earth to men who are game.

Is Marriage a Failure?

"There was a man here and he left a note for you," said a Warren-avenue man to his wife, who was out when he came home in the evening.

"My goodness!" said the lady, while she untied her bonnet. "Who is it from?"

"How do I know?" said her husband, rather tartly. "I don't know all your friends."

"You oughtn't to talk that way to me, Charles," said the wife, just ready to whimper. "You know I never flirted in my life. What did the man say?"

"Oh, he said nothing; he just left the note for you. It's there on the bureau."

"Charlie—boo hoo—I didn't think you'd think that way of me—boo hoo. Where's the baby, where's my baby, and I'll leave you to your unjust suspicions."

"Why don't you read the note?"

"I don't want to see it."

"You had better read it. It won't help things not to read it."

"Why,"—drying her eyes,—"it's from Aunt Margaret, and stamped and postmarked too, as though it came in by mail. I thought you said a man left it for me."

"So I did, my dear—the postman."

The Prohibition Party.

The organ of the Third Party in the United States, in order to show the growth of the prohibition party movement publishes the following comparative statement:

1872.....Black .....5,608

1876.....Smith.....3,759

1880.....Dow.....11,640

1884.....St John.....153,128

1888.....Fisk.....about 300,000

A vote that keeps doubling itself as above will surely absorb the franchise in time. Concerning the late election General Fisk, the Prohibition candidate, makes the following observations:

"For more than two months I have been satisfied that our vote would not be as large as many of our people anticipated. I have received hundreds of letters from Prohibitionists stating that in view of the position taken by the President and his party on the Tariff question, they were constrained to vote this year with the Republican party to defeat free trade tendencies, and would then come back to Prohibition. A large number of our voters who came to us from the Democratic party wrote to me that, believing the position taken by Mr Cleveland on the Tariff question was correct, they thought they ought to vote once again with their old party and declare against unnecessary taxation."

It Takes a Man.

Rev. Hugh O. Pentecost, of Newark, is the minister who says: "When I want a drink I take it." For the soul of me I can't see anything very remarkable about that, even in a preacher. He would be a fool to take a drink when he didn't want it. But when he does want it, that is the time to take it. Even a donkey does that, and the donkey can't be compelled to drink when he doesn't want to. So you see, my son, there is a difference between a man and a donkey. Any man, parson or layman, can do as the donkey, and take a drink when he wants it, or even refuse to take a drink when he doesn't want it. But it takes a man, my boy, to refuse a drink when he wants it. And when he has this control over himself, he can preach louder and more in a day than the Reverend Pentecost can preach in a year.

SCROFULA

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for Scrofula in my family. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting result than any medicine I ever used.—E. Haines, No. Lincoln, O.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.—Mary C. Amesbury, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and in a few months was cured.—Susan L. Cook, 600 Albany St., Boston Highlands, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I have ever tried. I have known it for Scrofula, Catarrh, and Salt Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach.—Mills Jane Peirce, South Bradford, Mass.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., DEC. 14, 1888

Christmas.

The year '88 is hurrying on towards its close. In a few more weeks it will have bidden us good-bye and we shall have entered upon a new one. But before it goes its gladdening and merriest season is to be. Christmas is coming. Before this number of the ACADIAN reaches its circle of readers many a bright eye no doubt has sparkled in anticipation of the joyous event. We all love the Christmas time—both the young and the old—and as the season is approaching again it is looked forward to with the same delight with which it is always greeted. No snow has come as yet to make sleighing, which is looked for so eagerly by the merchants at this season of the year, but there may be sleighing yet in time for the Christmas trade. However, during the early part of this week the wagoning has been good and the village has been filled with people purchasing Christmas goods. The merchants, whose business the Christmas season affects the most, have spared no pains to make their different stores as attractive as possible, and we congratulate them upon their success. We have made a personal inspection of the stores and can say that never before were the Wolfville merchants in a better position to meet the wants of their customers. All that is needed now is fine weather and good traveling to make a brisk Christmas trade.

Our Dikes.

Some of our most valuable lands are those which have been reclaimed from the sea and which continue to yield satisfactory yearly returns to the husbandmen without any corresponding outlay in fertilizing. In the township of Horton a large quantity of such lands are to be found, such as the Grand Pre and the Wickwire dikes and dikes upon the Gaspeau and Cornwallis rivers. These dikes previous to the great Sable storm in 1869 were kept up at a comparatively small outlay, but since that storm from some cause or other the expense of keeping out the sea has materially increased. Whether the tides are gradually rising in height, or the dike lands are settling away, is matter of conjecture, and concerns us but little further than to show us the necessity of changing the method now adopted of just keeping the running dikes high enough to keep out the tide and only strong enough to prevent them breaking under ordinary circumstances. Properties so valuable as are our dikes should be protected in such a manner as would make them comparatively safe under any circumstances. We believe the penny wise and pound foolish policy of the past and present should be abandoned and a safe policy adopted, even should the cost in the first place be doubled. Let the running dike and abutments be built at an angle of from 45 to 60 degrees outside instead of the almost perpendicular one of the present day and have them at least one foot higher than the ordinary highest tide and the danger of the dikes breaking would be reduced to a minimum.

A Cheap Light.

We have referred on several occasions to the subject of lighting our streets, and various methods have been suggested by which it could be done at small cost. One method, that of using lamps suitably constructed and burning the ordinary kerosene oil, has found considerable favor, and several parties have at their own expense placed such lamps opposite their premises. These lights have proved to be very acceptable to pedestrians in their immediate vicinities, but owing to the long distances they are apart, fail to meet the required want. Besides, these lamps being owned by private individuals, we have no guarantee that they will be lighted except at the pleasure of the owners. What we want is some system of lighting which will be cheap and certain, such as is attained by some of the methods of electric lighting. We are in a position to state that a gentleman in this town will undertake to light our streets, stores and dwellings with the incandescent electric light for three and one-half cents per light per night, providing that two hundred lights are taken. There should be no difficulty in disposing of this number of lights at such a price, when the first cost of lamps, the breakage of chimneys and the care of sifting, trimming, cleaning, and lighting is taken into consideration. Other towns have adopted this light with good results. There is no doubt but that at the present time it is the cheapest and best light extant. Our people should not neglect this opportunity of securing good and sufficient light at a nominal cost. The benefit to be gained by having our streets well lighted, besides the satisfaction to be derived from it as a means of lighting stores and dwellings, should induce our people to take immediate steps towards having the light introduced and made a permanent institution of our town.

Talmage Reviewed.

Perhaps the distinguished Brooklyn preacher, Dr Talmage, never said a truer word than when he represented the machinery of the United States government as moved and controlled by his Satanic majesty. Here it is transcribed from his book entitled, "Coals of Fire."

SATAN AT THE CRANK.

"Five hundred small wheels in political machinery with cogs reaching into one great centre wheel, and that wheel has a tire of railroad iron and a crank to it in which Satan puts his hand and turns the centre wheel, and that turns the five hundred other wheels of political machinery."

Quite in keeping with this are his pictures of the political condition of his country as presented in his sermon preached the Sabbath before the last presidential election, in which he uses the ballot box as the Ark of the American Covenant.

BRIEF EXTRACTS

will suffice. After presenting the gross ignorance that too often controls the ballot box, he said:

"Another powerful enemy of this sacred chest, the ark of the American covenant, the ballot box, is spurious voting. In 1880 in Brooklyn there were a thousand names recorded of persons who had no residence here, and if there were a thousand attempted fraudulent votes in the best city on the continent, what may we expect in cities not so fortunate?"

INTIMIDATION OF EMPLOYEES.

"Another powerful foe of this sacred chest is intimidation. Corporations sometimes demand that their employees vote in this and that way. It is skilfully done. It is not positively in so many words demanded, but the employee understands he will be frozen out of the establishment unless he votes as the firm do. So you can go into villages where there are establishments with hundreds and thousands of employees and having found out the politics of the head man in the factory, you can tell which way the election is going. Now, that is damnable."

BRIBERY.

"Another powerful foe of that sacred chest, the ark of the American covenant, the ballot box, is bribery. Bribery is one of the disgraces of this country. And there will be more money used in bribery this autumn's election than in any previous election. It is often the case that a man is nominated for office with reference to his capacity to provide money for the elections or with reference to his capacity to command money from others. You know the names of men who have at different times gone into the gubernatorial chair or congressional office buying their way all through. I tell you no news. Your patriotic heart has been pained again and again with it."

THE PART THE SALOON TAKES IN POLITICS.

"Another powerful foe of the sacred chest, the ark of the American covenant, the ballot box, is the rowdy and drunk-an caucus. The ballot box does not give any choice to a man when the nominations are made in the back part of a grocery. When the elector comes up he has to choose between two evils. In some of the cities men have come to the ballot box to vote, and have found both names such a scaly, greasy and stenchful crew they had no choice. You say, Vote for somebody outside. Then they throw away their vote. Loyal men, patriotic men, go and take possession of the caucuses, handkerchief with cologne or some other disinfectant, go down to the caucuses and take possession of it in the name of the Lord Almighty and the American people, though after you come back you should have to hang your hat and coat on a line in the back yard for ventilation."

"In some of the States politics have got so low that the nominees no more need good morals than they do a bath tub. Snatch the ballot box from such men. Where is the David who will go forth and bring the ark of the covenant back from Kirjath-jarim? Do you not think politics have got to a pretty lowebb in our day when a Tweed could be sent to the Legislature of New York, and a John Morrissy, the prince of gamblers, could be sent to the American congress?"

And yet this wonderful country which, judged in the light of his own words, is the very cesspool of corruption, is ordained to rule over this whole American continent. He says in the closing paragraph: "We are going to have one government on this entire continent. Let the despots of Asia keep their feet off the Pacific coast, and let the tyrannies of Europe keep their feet off the Atlantic coast. We are going to have one government. Mexico will follow Texas into the union, and Christianity and civilization will stand side by side in the hills of the Montezumas. And if not in our day, then in the day of our children, Yucatan and Central America will come in dominion, while on the north Canada will be ours; not by conquest—oh, no! American and English swords may never clash blades—but we will woo our fair neighbor of the north, and then England will say to Canada: "You are old enough for the marriage day"; and then, turning, will say: "Giant of the West, go take your bride." And then from Baffin's Bay to the Caribbean there will be one government under one flag, with one destiny—a free, undisturbed, Christianized American continent."

Now, Brother Talmage, from most a score of years' residence in your country we can heartily endorse all you have said of the corruption of the land of the "Star-spangled banner," only the half has not been told; but when you talk of wooing our fair Dominion and prophesying wedlock, a loyal people forbids the ban.

"A Song in the Night."

"O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." Give thanks, give thanks unto the Lord, O soul by Him redeemed; Sing of His goodness and His love, Whose light on thee hath beamed. In darkness, and in sore distress, Thou unto Him didst cry; He pitied, pardoned, soothed thy fears, And brought deliverance nigh.

The Lord is God—the glorious Lord Who rules life's troubled sea— Whose love and power are infinite— He bindeth up the wounded hearts; He calls the stars by name— Jehovah Jesus, God of grace, Eternally the same.

The Lord is good, though thou hast found Around thee and within Such evil as has made thee long For a life that knows no sin. The Lord is good—his blessed truth No tear-mist e'er can dim. Look up! and praise the wondrous grace That bids thee live in Him.

The Lord is good—this thou dost know; His goodness thou hast proved; His faithful chastenings only show How truly thou art loved. Through grief and suffering, His mercy still hath followed thee, Therefore his praises sing.

The Lord is good, the Lord is good— Be this thy thankful song; Though tribulation presseth hard, Still sing it and be strong. The Lord is good—the Lord is love— Remember Calvary! Oh! theme to fill thy heart with praise— Through all eternity.

Trusting his goodness brings a peace The world can never know; That compensates for woe. Join in the glad song, all His redeemed, And love him for the love That seeks to train through earthly pain For purer praise above. —A. B. R.

In the Prospectus which we received recently from the Youth's Companion office, we notice an array of noted contributors which promises unusual excellence for the coming volume. First among them is the Right Honorable W. E. Gladstone, affectionately called the "Grand Old Man," the greatest of living statesmen, who writes on "The Future of the English Speaking Races." Then General Lord Wolseley, who will tell of his strange personal adventures in the field with the British armies. Then Professor Tyndall, and Justin McCarthy, who writes of "Leaders in the House of Lords," Archdeacon Farrar, on "Musicians and Their Struggles," and Professor Huxley. Among American writers we find such well-known names as Lieut. Schwab, who writes of "Tight Fitches in the Arctic," Andrew Carnegie, on "Bits of Advice to Young Men," Dr Austin Flint, Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., on "Young Men in the Law," Admiral Luce, Colonel Thomas W. Knox, James Parton, and at least one hundred others. The Companion is a welcome visitor weekly in more than 400,000 families, and has won a place in home life obtained by no other publication. The wonder is how any family can do without it. The publishers announce that any new subscriber who sends $1.75 now, can have the Companion free every week to January 1, 1889, and for a full year from that date.

"Grip."

With the new year Grip enters upon its thirty-second half yearly volume, a fact which speaks eloquently for the merits of this unique and favorite Canadian journal. No former attempt in the field of humorous journalism in Canada was ever successful, because in no former case was there the happy combination of elements essential to the success of such a venture. In the first place, an uncommon fertility of invention is required to keep a comic paper abreast of the times, and this must be backed up by an artistic ability equal to the task of interpreting the happy thoughts evolved in a popular manner. Secondly, there must be the solid basis of truth, honor, fairness and good taste are all as essential to the success of a comic journal as of a magazine of the highest class. All these features have, from the first number, distinguished Grip in a high degree. It stands to-day alongside of the very best productions of its class in the world, and enjoys a fame far beyond the bounds of Canada. To Canada it ought to be more and more an object of patriotic pride, and certainly but little can be said for the patriotism of any Canadian who pretends to culture and not found upon Grip's subscription list. The subscription price is almost ridiculously low, when the rates of similar (and not equally able) journals elsewhere are considered. It is only two dollars a year although the paper contains sixteen pages filled with bright original humor of pen and pencil, and always gives, without taint, political cartoons on passing events, which in a point, power and humor are certainly unsurpassed in any humorous paper of the day. For ourselves we can say that Grip is the very first journal we open and enjoy on the arrival of our weekly exchanges, and we believe the same is true of nearly every editor in the country. Get it for 1889 without fail.

Moods. Upon a mountain summit high, A trying place of earth and sky, Three friends once stood in silent awe, Each contemplating what he saw.

A Greater Country than the United States. Let us not delude ourselves with fictitious greatness. There is another country at whose greatness we may well pause for contemplation.

God Bless our Canada. In the course of his sermon on Thanksgiving Day, Rev. Mr. Carleton, of Charlottetown, speaking of Canada, said, "Come, as we are with the mother-land, many of us fail to see that there is growing up here a great nation—in territory 600,000 square miles larger than the United States, in moral worth surpassed by no other nation."

Temperance and the Gospel. I used to regard—I cannot say I have very much altered my opinion—temperance as a sort of cutting off one limb of a deadly tree, and I fancied my business was to lay the axe at the root of the tree, and leave others to saw away at the branches.

Philosophy of a Cold. Says Professor Woodbury, of the Medical-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, "If there is anything calculated to take all the brightness out of the sunshine, all the savor out of our food, and all the sweetness out of our life, it is a cold in the head."

Like Other Men. He stood with one foot on the hub of his wagon wheel, talking to his wife, who sat in the wagon holding the lines. "How much did you say, Mary," he asked.

How He Advertised. A gentleman, living in a small city in the West, had inherited consumption from his father, and the doctors told him he must die. He stopped their weakening physic and tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Builders say that more houses were put up in Halifax this year than for the past three years together. The Halifax and Queen hotels, of Halifax, have adopted incandescent electric lighting. The Queen has 376 lights and the Halifax 320.

ITEMS OF INTEREST. Use Seavey's East India Liniment. 12 There are over 7000 pupils in the Halifax schools. A ten foot bed of copper ore 1000 feet long has been struck at the Coxheath mine, Cape Breton.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED. Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured.
