Fall of the Campanile.

The Century Magazine prints, by permission, an account of the fall of the Campanile, as seen by an American girl. She writes: "Yes, we are all safe. The tower did not fall on any of us, although I suppose we shall never be pushed nearer being buried alive than we were this morning. It came without any warning. We were on our way to Cook's, which is on the side the crack first appeared. As we came down from the hotel we noticed a small crowd of people watching the tower, and some of the Piazza officials had placed a few boards around it to keep people from going up to it; but the crack was so slight that we asked where it was. We walked to the other side under the clock-tower, and as we stood there bricks began to fall out of the crack, which grew wider every minute. Some people thought that a corner of the tower might go, but no one was really there but a few tourists and some shopkeepers. We, having lots to do, went to Cook's, where we could see if anything did happen, and still attend to our business. Cook's men smiled at the Americans who thought that a tower which had seen eleven hundred years could fall without any warning. Suddenly as we stood there a huge gap appeared from top to bottom, and then the whole thing seemed to groan and tremble, and, with apparently no sound, sank in a heap where it stood; only the top . . . poised itself a minute in mid-air, tipped, and fell crashing toward St. Mark's. Pieces of the gilt angel were picked up on the church steps; otherwise nothing but a pile of bricks and mortar was to be seen. We all stood in the doorway, too stunned to move. The people in the square fled panic-stricken in every direction. Instantly [what appeared] a scid wall of dirt and plaster rose from the mass, as high as the tower had been, and spread in every direction I thought, of course, we should be suffocated, and a rush followed for the back of Cook's office. Every one screamed to shut the doors, but there were none at hand, being separate and kept packed away all day. The dirt entered like a thick fog, and you could not distinguish your best friend. Fortunately, it cleared away in a minute or so, enough to see where we were, and all were safe. Not even one woman fainted where we were. . . . The dust was about two inches deep, huge rocks were against Cook's building, and I picked up a piece of one of the bronze bells on the other side of the square. Venice went wild, of course, and the square was soon crowded by hundreds of mourning people. It was a very sad sight. All shops closed at once, and every one waited."

The Cradle of San Francisco.

We are told that even in its best days this chapel lacked the architectural beauty of many of the other missions. "There were no arches, no arcades, no towers, no buttresses, no ornamental faades. The severity of outline is relieved only by four columns flanking the entrance and the niches where hang the bells." This description does not, however, really do justice to the austere impressive front shown in the illustration, and topped by a severely plain but very prominent urn. "The interior decoration, however, was left undisturbed, and today shows the pious Fathers took with even their plainest sanctuaries. The uncovered, rough-hewn rafters, which rest on heavy, adzed supports, are painted in diamond-shaped patterns, the dull red, yellow blue and white giving an effective touch of color against the monotonous gray of the adobe walls. On the north wall is an immense symbolic painting on canvas, the work of Spanish artists, representing the religious mysteries. This was a part of the religious recreation, and the difficulty of early transportation is shown by the canvas being in many small pieces, carefully matched in hanging. The painting is in excellent condition except for holes in the lower part where mischievous youngsters have been at work with pocket-knives. Two side altars support images of saints. . . . In the sanctuary the decoration is quite elaborate and in a good state of preservation. The entire end of the chapel is a mass of carving painted in a dull reddish color with much gilt. Five empty niches show where images formerly stood, and which were probably removed for safety as time weakened their supports. A plain, inert, rustic wooden altar, painted white, is clearly of comparatively recent date. It covers the original altar. . . . Here in the sanctuary is the grave of Father Carroll. . . . There are other graves beneath the floor of the main body of the church. Back of the sanctuary is the sacristy, which contains some interesting relics of former days." The full-page picture of the church's interior is very striking. There are but two rows of pews, one on either side of the aisle, which leads right up to the quaint old sanctuary. The rafters of the roof are certainly unique.

The First Church in San Francisco.

A pleasing number of Sunsets, "a magazine of the Border," a Western magazine hitherto unknown to us, has been brought to our notice through an article, graphically illustrated, on "San Francisco's Mission Dolores," by Sarah Henry. It seems a little difficult to take in the fact that this little church was actually the only church in San Francisco as late as the year 1849. It was built in 1776, and the article says that it is fairly well preserved. In reading its story we must bear in mind that the Declaration of Independence was signed, when the great state of California, one of the proudest in our Union to-day, was the Indians' home, the Spaniard's possession, and the Catholic missionary's harvest field. "The Mission San Francisco de Asis, the Mission Dolores," says our writer, "was the sixth of the chain of missions that marked the zig-zag path of the Franciscans from San Diego to Sonoma, the distance from mission to mission being a good day's journey. For six years prior to the founding of the San Francisco mission, Monterey was the northernmost outpost, that having been established within a year after the Franciscans entered Upper California. During these six years many unsuccessful attempts were made to found a mission on the bay of San Francisco, which had been discovered in 1769 by the first overland expedition sent northward from San Diego. Father Serra, prompted by his pious zeal, represented to the Marquis de la Croix, then viceroy of Mexico, that it was a reproach to Catholic Christianity that there was no mission dedicated to St. Francisco de Asis, the patron of the order which bore his name. According to a tradition of native Californians, the viceroy replied: 'If our Father San Francisco wants a mission dedicated to him let him show us that good port up beyond Monterey, and we will build him a mission there.'

The First Church Service.

St. Francis did not fail to answer this appeal to him. In 1772, by a land expedition, Father Junipero established the existence of the bay which bears the great Saint's name, and in 1775 the viceroy of New Spain decreed that a fort, presidio and mission should be founded there. In the diary of Father Palou these words are found: "About the middle of September, 1776, the soldiers had already built their wooden houses, all duly roofed; the lieutenant had his royal house. . . . It was immediately decided that the festival should be celebrated with a procession, fixing upon the day as that of September 17, the same on which Our Mother the Church celebrates the memory of the impression of the wounds of our Saviour Father, St. Francis." Meanwhile the Fathers, with the help of some Indians and sailors, built "a house thirty feet long and fifteen wide, all of plastered wood with tile roof, and a church fifty-two feet long with a room for the sacristy behind the altar." As Miss Henry remarks: "A San Franciscan standing before the low, tile-roofed chapel of the Mission Dolores has somewhat the feeling of the man who finds in a dark corner of the attic the cradle in which he once slept. Both wonder if they were ever small enough to find room in so small a thing."

Played His Own Requiem.

Venerable Organist Dies While His Hands are on the Keys.

Aged John Dummer, an organist of Trenton, N. J., received warning that he was to die before the day had closed on Sunday, so he went for a priest, and received the sacraments and quietly began playing Mozart's requiem as a welcome to death.

He was sitting at the organ when he had practiced for forty years, when his white-crowned head dropped on his chest and his hands fell from the keys, leaving unfinished the strains of the requiem.

When the presentment came to Dummer he told several persons and sent for his friend, the priest. After Father Killian had administered the last rites, the old organist said to him:

"Father, for thirty years I played the organ in the cathedral. You are the only priest who has grasped its altar who has not heard my music. While I have not sat at my organ since I left the hospital last spring, I am going to do so now."

Dummer crossed the room wearily to the old-fashioned organ and touched the keys with infatigable tenderness. Then he paused, and Father Killian, with bowed head, awaited.

"It is for you, Father, I am going to play." The old man began Mozart's "Last Requiem." His eyes were cast upward as he played. The priest approached softly and stood by his side. True was the touch of the old organist, and Father Killian, with bowed head, was awed by the solemn music.

The requiem was half finished when the organist's hand dropped from the keys and his head fell forward. Father Killian knelt by his side and supported him. Paralysis had stricken the old musician. Assistance was summoned and he was carried to his bed. Five hours later he died.—N. W. Chronicle.

It has been made abundantly clear by these intimately acquainted with the facts that in Ireland Catholics are, as far as employment is concerned, subjected to severe boycotting by many public companies and even by business concerns, although both depend largely for their profits upon the people whom they treat in this un-Christian way. The vexed question was dealt with in a vigorous manner by Father Corbett at the thirty-first annual meeting of the Queenstown Catholic Young Men's Society. A federation of Catholic societies for the protection of Catholic interests is the remedy proposed by Father Corbett. In this he was supported by the Bishop of Cloyne, who said what he strongly objected to was the exclusion of Catholics from positions to which they were entitled by their intelligence, their moral rectitude and their business habits simply because of their religion. They had, he asserted, the remedy in their own hands, and he thought it was time they had an organization to look after the material interests of Catholics. He wished that it should be started and that it should spread all over the land for the purpose of asserting their rights. Such a society as that proposed by Father Corbett has a wide field for operations in Catholic Ireland.

The Right Rev. Mgr. the Hon. Algernon Stanley has been appointed Assistant Bishop to His Eminence Cardinal Vaughan of Westminster. Mgr. Stanley is a brother of Lord Stanley, third Baron Stanley of Alderley. He was made Protocollary Apostolic to the Holy See by Leo XIII. in 1897. Mgr. Stanley was a pupil at Rugby of Archbishop Temple, the head of the Anglicans. Mgr. Stanley was born in 1843. After leaving Rugby he graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and was ordained in the Church of England. He was for some years a curate of the High Church of St. Mary, Sobho, and then took charge of a very poor district near King's Cross. It is to his honor that he declined the valuable, family living of Alderley in order to work among the poor. At that time he used to ride third class and was very fond of his pipe.

The recent decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska, denying the right to read the Bible in the public schools of the State, has aroused a number of Protestant churches to vigorous action, and in dozens of churches all over the State resolutions have been passed denouncing the decision. The decree is declared to be a menace to religion and contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, which recognizes God. Concerted action was taken, not to intimidate the court, which has been asked to grant a rehearing, but to encourage the numerous teachers that have announced that they will consider the wishes of the majority of their patrons and will continue Bible reading until enjoined by the courts.

The death of Right Rev. William Vaughan, Bishop of Plymouth and uncle of His Eminence Cardinal Vaughan, removes the most venerable figure of the Catholic hierarchy in England. Dr. Vaughan was consecrated Bishop of Plymouth in 1855

Rev. H. C. B. Campbell, B. A., lately curate of the Anglican Church of St. Alphege, Southwark, was received into the Catholic Church on Wednesday, October 15, at St. George's Cathedral, Southwark.

The death is announced of the venerable mother prioress of the Carmelite community of the Monastery of the Immaculate Conception, Rosebank, County-Dublin. Mother Josephine Dunn had spent no less than sixty-eight years within the cloister.

There is, says the "Franciscan Annals," every probability that the solemn beatification of the great Irish son of St. Francis and redoubtable champion of Our Lady's Immaculate Conception, the Venerable Dan Scotus, will very shortly take place.

The "New World," of Chicago, takes pleasure in announcing that the new chief surgeon of the United States army, Surgeon General O'Reilly, is not only a Catholic, but a good practical one as well. The honor which the new chief surgeon has received is one in every way deserved.

The Right Rev. Herman J. Alcreding, D. D., Bishop of Fort Wayne, laid the cornerstone of a new $250,000 building which, it is said, will practically double the capacity of St. Mary's Academy, Notre Dame, Ind. Very Rev. Andrew Morrissey, O. S. C., president of Notre Dame University, delivered the oration.

The many friends and admirers of Henry Austin Adams will rejoice to learn that his health has broken down under the severe strain of hard work put upon him and that he has had to suspend all further lecturing, and has been advised by his physician to take a thorough rest in Europe.

The Michigan Central finished laying its track to Notre Dame University the other day. Very Rev. J. A. Zahm, provincial of the Order of the Holy Cross in America, drove the last spike. The line fills a long felt need at the university, which is given direct communication with Chicago and the East.

Rev. Jean Francois Chambon, S. J., died October 9th at Sault-au-Recollet, Canada, aged seventy-one. He was born in France, was ordained priest in 1837 and began his novitiate in the Society of Jesus in 1867. Ten of his years as a Jesuit Father were spent in ministrations at New York hospitals and prisons, and twenty-one in work among the poor Indians of Manitoulin, in the wide regions north and south of Lake Superior, etc. He spoke the English and Indian languages with as much ease as his mother tongue.

"First the monk, then the priest." In these words a Radical newspaper in Paris sums up the anti-clerical policy of the French Government. M. Combes has driven out the monks, now he is in hand to hand conflict with the secular clergy. With every week, says the "London Catholic Times," the evidence grows more and more clear that the hatred of the anti-clericals will not cease until the Church is destroyed or a counter revolution sweeps them away to their own place.

The few Italian converts to Protestantism contribute in turn a contingent of converts to Catholicism. Cases of this kind have been reported frequently. Again on the feast of St. Michael, Mgr. Gasparri, Archbishop of Caserta received into the Church Signora Cecilia Giuseppina de Gaetano, nee Moitana, of Cagliari, mother of Signor Arturo De Gaetano, whose conversion to Catholicism took place on May 31st last. Signora De Gaetano is the widow of a Baptist minister of Cagliari; her son was, until his conversion, a Baptist minister of Palermo.

Minard's Liniment relieves neuralgia.

All Stuffed Up That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic. "I was ill for four months with catarrh in the head and throat. Had a bad cough and raised blood. I had become discouraged when my husband bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and persuaded me to try it. I advise all to take it. It has cured and built me up." Mrs. Hiram R. Bourne, West Litchfield, N. S.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

THE HERALD

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 26th, 1902. SUBSCRIPTION—$1.00 A YEAR, PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY JAMES MCISAAC, Editor & Proprietor

Mr. DUNSMUIR has retired from the Premiership of British Columbia, and Colonel Prior, who has been a member of the Government for some time has succeeded him in the Leadership. Colonel Prior was a member of the House of Commons from 1888 to 1901, and was Controller of Inland Revenue in the Bowell and Tupper Governments. He has about completed his cabinet.

THERE are six or seven vacancies in the House of Commons; but the Government instead of bringing on all the elections at once have selected three of these seats, thought to be safe constituencies for the first by-elections. The constituencies chosen are Massonneuve, where Mr. Prefontaine seeks re-election on acceptance of office; Argenteuil, made vacant by the death of the sitting member, and Yarmouth, N. S., vacant through the acceptance of the Clerkship of the Commons by Mr. Flint. The Conservatives have put a candidate into each of these constituencies, and the elections may not be so much of a picnic for the Government nominees as they first imagined. So frightened are the Liberals because in Yarmouth that Mr. Pelton, the first Government nominee has retired in favor of a Mr. Law, who is described as "a far stronger man." Evidently the nomination of Mr. Corning, the Conservative candidate has caused a little consternation in the Grit camp, as Mr. Fielding, the Minister of Finance, is said to have camped down in the constituency.

THE Grit convention that met in this city yesterday for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest the second district of Queen's, seems to have been a very inharmonious conglomeration. Two candidates, Mr. John Wheatley and Mr. James McLean were put in nomination. A motion was then made that the choice of the convention be unanimous; but this was objected to by Mr. Wheatley and his friends, who contended that he had been properly chosen as the candidate at a previous convention. A warm discussion ensued, after which Mr. George Wheatley attempted to read letters from different men protesting against this convention. We are told that the disorder at this stage became so great that it was found necessary to remove to the Legislative chamber. It appears that thirty-nine of the fifty-five delegates in attendance proceeded to the last named place of meeting and balloted for the prospective candidates. The result was "28 for McLean and 11 for Wheatley. A motion was carried making the nomination of Mr. McLean unanimous. What will Wheatley do?

DEEP and universal sympathy is expressed for Dr. S. R. Jenkins, in the great loss he has suffered and the sad affliction that has overtaken him while in the pursuit of his noble profession. A little more than a week ago, while attending one of his patients at the P. E. Island Hospital, some pus entered one of his eyes. He paid little attention to it at the time; but a day or two afterwards evil effects began to manifest themselves, and it was soon discovered that he had been poisoned. Dr. Conroy and his other brother physicians most assiduously and unselfishly labored with the case. In his suffering and affliction the most Christian resignation. The untiring efforts of his brother physicians were unable to save the sight of the affected eye; it is now absolutely sightless. The question is whether or not it may affect the other eye, which up to the present seems to be all right. It is devoutly to be hoped that, through the skill and devotion of his fellow practitioners, the sound eye may be preserved and that the sufferer may not be deprived of his sight. In common with the whole community we extend our heart-felt sympathy to the Dr. and Mrs. Jenkins and family, and sincerely trust the worst is over.

Just two weeks from today the by-elections for the Provincial Legislature will be held in the second district of Queen's and the third district of King's. As we pointed out last week, these elections are brought on by the Government at a time when the financial condition of the Province cannot be fairly discussed, for the reason that we have no published statement of the Government's financial transactions for the current fiscal year, now within a few weeks of its close. By the non publication of the public accounts until some time in 1903, the Government are able to cloak over almost a year's public business, and conceal from the electors the amount they have added to the Provincial debt during the last twelve months. As they have taken advantage of this subterfuge to hide their shortcomings the people will only have to judge them by their past record. If the Government during the present year have been true to their administrative record, and there is no reason for believing anything to the contrary, about $50,000 have been added to our Provincial debt during the past twelve months. This will bring our indebtedness away beyond the $700,000 mark. In his last budget speech the Leader of the Government admitted a debt of $642,000, and we may be very sure his statement fell far short of the actual indebtedness. Annual deficits of about $50,000; a Provincial debt amounting to upwards of $700,000 and an interest charge of more than $25,000 a year are the salient features of the present Provincial Government's financial administration. Is this a record that should entitle them to the continued confidence of the people? Surely not! Electors of Cardigan and West River show your disapproval of such maladministration by voting for Messrs. Currie and Morson, the Conservative candidates, on December 9th.

over, active politicians of the Grit persuasion and are connected by family ties with Government supporters in the House of Commons. They bring all their influence, and the influence of their family connections in and out of Parliament, to bear on the Minister of Railways, and by means of this political pull they hope to effect a profitable sale of their real estate to the Government, wholly regardless of the great inconvenience and hardship such a transaction may inflict upon the travelling public. Railway stations and works of a kindred nature established at public expense and paid for with the taxes of the people, should surely be placed where they are likely to afford the greatest possible accommodation to the general public, rather than where their erection may serve to gratify the avarice and swell the coffers of this or that political follower, who happens to have some influence with the government of the day. We understand one of the members of the Commons for this Province is connected by family ties with some of those Pictou politicians so deeply interested in having the new station built on the proposed new site. Will he exert his influence on the side of his family connection rather than in favor of the convenience and accommodation of the people of his own Province and Riding? From the statement of facts here set forth our readers will readily see that the selection of the proposed new site for the Pictou railway station would be nothing short of a scandalous and outrageous attempt to subordinate public convenience to private gain and to manipulate public expenditure for the special advantage of political favorites.

About Railway Stations

Nothing has of late been heard about the site for the new railway station for Charlottetown. Has the Minister of Railways returned any answer to the unanimous resolution of the Board of Trade meeting, recommending the site opposite the Hotel Davies as the most suitable and the most convenient for the travelling public? The question of erecting a new passenger station has been discussed for some time; all will admit that this accommodation is needed and none will deny that the site in question is admirably adapted for such a building. Moreover, the sum of $300,000 was voted for this purpose at the last session of Parliament. In view of these facts, it is to be hoped the authorities will lose as little time as possible in starting the new station and that they will erect it where it shall afford the greatest convenience and accommodation to the public.

In this connection it seems proper to refer to the proposed new railway station at Pictou, which has been spoken of for some time, and for which $70,000 was appropriated at the last session of Parliament. The daily connection of the steamers from this port with the railway at Pictou makes the location of the station in the last named town a matter of much interest to the travelling public of this Province. The present railway station at Pictou is, as all who have passed over the route know, quite convenient to the steamboat landing. There is ample warehouse accommodation on the wharf and the close proximity of the passenger station seems to meet all the requirements, so far as making close connections is concerned. Besides the present station appears to be located about the centre of the town and to be equally convenient, as near as may be, to all the citizens of Pictou. It will thus be seen that for all concerned, those who reach Pictou by boat and wish to make close railway connections, as well as those who depart from and arrive at Pictou by train, the location of the present station is the most convenient possible. This being so it would be most natural to expect that the new station would be erected on or near the site of the old one. It has not been started yet, so far as we know, although as above stated, $70,000 was voted for it last session. We are informed on the very best authority that a strong and determined effort is made to have the new station erected a long distance from the present depot—a mile or two west, clear out of the town altogether. If the proposed site is chosen it will not afford special accommodation to anyone; on the contrary it will prove a hardship and an inconvenience to the people of Pictou, no less than to the people of this Province, who may be travelling that way. Those who want the new station built on the site in question, or are interested in real estate in that locality. They are, moreover, active politicians of the Grit persuasion and are connected by family ties with Government supporters in the House of Commons. They bring all their influence, and the influence of their family connections in and out of Parliament, to bear on the Minister of Railways, and by means of this political pull they hope to effect a profitable sale of their real estate to the Government, wholly regardless of the great inconvenience and hardship such a transaction may inflict upon the travelling public. Railway stations and works of a kindred nature established at public expense and paid for with the taxes of the people, should surely be placed where they are likely to afford the greatest possible accommodation to the general public, rather than where their erection may serve to gratify the avarice and swell the coffers of this or that political follower, who happens to have some influence with the government of the day. We understand one of the members of the Commons for this Province is connected by family ties with some of those Pictou politicians so deeply interested in having the new station built on the proposed new site. LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

KENSINGTON is having new sidewalks laid.

YALE defeated Harvard on Saturday at New Haven by a score of 23 to 0; more than 30,000 people witnessed the game.

S. H. JONES sent his last shipment of lambs from Summerside for this season on Monday. Mr. Jones has forwarded this fall to the American market 12,948 sheep, and about 900 live geese, aggregating a cost value of about $30,000.

The barquentine Gemma, Davies, sailed from Summerside on Monday with a cargo of 38,000 bushels of white oats and 24,000 feet of deal for Bristol Channel, England. Hon. Wm. Richards Bidford, is the skipper.

GEORGE A. HENRY, the popular writer of books for boys is dead. He had seen service in several campaigns as war-correspondent and had written over seventy stories, mostly all dealing with historical events.

A bad fire occurred at New Annan at an early hour yesterday morning by which the residence of Mr. Edwin Fogge was completely destroyed. Only part of the furniture was saved. There is no insurance. The exact cause of the fire is not known.

The annual St. Andrew's Dinner under the auspices of the Caladonian Club of P. E. Island, will be held at the Queen Hotel on Monday evening next, Dec. 1st. The event is anticipated, with the usual interest and enthusiasm by the sons of the hearth and their friends.

The S. S. Halifax made her last trip of the season to this port yesterday, and sailed on return last evening. The outward cargo comprised 3000 cases canned goods shipped by H. W. Longworth, Myrick & Co., and J. J. Hornby, 340 cases by Wheatley Bros and Carvel Bros., 710 cases canned goods, 600 cases lard, 600 bbls pork shipped by Dominion Packing Co., also a quantity of sundries.

The Allan Line S. S. Skellan, from Montreal for Liverpool, which sailed from Quebec on Monday morning, struck a submerged wreck or at boulder, opposite Bellechasse, a few miles below Quebec city. As the steamer began making water rapidly, she at once returned to port. No 1 hole was filled with water, while No 3 was leaking badly. The cargo is being removed. The Skellan's passengers have been forwarded by rail to St. John whence they will sail on the Allan liner Bavarian.

Mr. R. E. Johnson, Barrister, who for the past six years has been a member of the Law firm of Bell & Johnson, Summerside, was tendered a complimentary banquet at the Queen Hotel, Summerside, on Monday evening last, on the eve of his departure for the United States, where he intends to reside in future. The banquet was attended by the members of the legal fraternity in Summerside, as well as by the leading citizens engaged in other professions and in commercial and banking pursuits. Nell McQuarrie, Esq., presided and the banquet was prepared, and spread in the excellent manner for which the Queen Hotel is famous. After the inner man had been satisfied the intellectual part of the feast was entered upon and well carried out. The usual toasts were proposed and responded to and many complimentary things were said about the guest of the evening. Mr. Johnson expressed his appreciation of the great kindness he had experienced in Summerside and his deep regret at leaving the town. We understand Mr. Johnson intends to locate in Portland, Oregon. We wish him every success in his chosen field of professional labor.

Across Canada.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—Canada is to have a second trans-continental railway, extending from ocean to ocean. The announcement was made to-day by Chas. M. Hays, second vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway. The construction of the new line will be commenced as soon as the necessary legislation can be obtained from the Canadian parliament.

The Grand Trunk will be behind the new road and will operate it, but, as in the case of the Grand Trunk lines west of the Detroit river, will be constructed under a separate corporate name: the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company. The new line, according to Mr. Hays' statement, will have a mileage of about 3000 miles, besides the constructions, including equipment, stations, bridges, ships and other facilities, will involve an expenditure of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. According to the present arrangements, the new system will run through that portion of Northern Ontario known as New Ontario, starting from the North Bay or Gravenhurst and extending through Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia to Bute Inlet, or Port Sampson, B. C., as may later be determined upon. The line will be of the most modern and up-to-date character, having in view especially low grade, long tangents, steel bridges of great spans, as well as ample station facilities and equipment for the handling of freight and passenger traffic.

"No one," said Mr. Hays, "who has been studying the wonderful developments that have taken place in the Northwest during the last few years can fail to be deeply impressed with the growth of that extensive and rich territory, and our directors feel that it is of the apparent need of additional railway facilities, and in order to guarantee to the present Grand Trunk system direct connection with that very important and growing section of Canada, the only wise policy is to take active steps towards this extension."

The building of this trans-continental route has been under consideration by the Grand Trunk directors for some time, but it was only during Mr. Hays' recent visit to England that it was decided to carry out the project at as early a date as possible.

Mr. Hays added that the line would probably be in full operation within five years, and that steamship lines on the Pacific would come as a necessary adjunct.—St. John Sun.

The book reading public has been visited by an epidemic of autobiographies, recollections and memoirs of diplomats. Latest among those viewed by the London papers is that of Horace Rumbold, recently British ambassador at Vienna. Sir Horace entered the diplomatic service in the fifties and has resided at several capitals. Among the stories he tells is a new one concerning Lord Palmerston and the affairs of the British vessel.

As soon as the news reached England, a cabinet council was summoned, and I had it on the same day from Evelyn Ashley that Lord Palmerston, on entering the room where the ministers met in Downing street, threw his hat on the table and at once commenced the address by his colleagues in the following words: "I don't know if you are going to stand this but I'll be d—d if I do." The ultimatum demanding the surrender of the prisoners was decided upon then and there, and sent out within two days.

The Americans, on their side, did the same to secure support against us, and I was assured on excellent authority that it was a positive fact, generally far from generally known, that General Scott, had been charged in Paris to offer the Emperor Napoleon an American alliance and Canada as the price of his co-operation.—St. John Sun.

He is a splendid football player, and a good all-round athlete.

The new reservoir for the Charlottetown Water works is now almost completed. It is built on the site of the old reservoir and will have capacity for holding 1,500,000 gallons. The new reservoir is roofed, the roof being constructed of concrete, supported by 45 piers of the same material. This will prevent rust and refuse from being blown into the reservoir. The roof will be soaded all over and seeded next summer the reservoir will take on the form of a beautiful green mound.

An Ottawa despatch of the 22nd says: Prosper George T. Rodd of the 3rd C. W. R., who falls from this district, was reported to the Department in June as fit with enteric fever and when his comrades came home they said he was dead. Relatives dined, mourning garb and lamented the sad fate of young Rodd. To the surprise and delight of his friends, George stepped off the train yesterday, hale and hearty and was surprised when he heard he was found numbered among the fallen.

A SESSION was created at a meeting of the Halifax Council Thursday evening, when Deputy Sheriff Malcolm, served a writ on account of the action of the City Council in connection with the Carnegie library matter. He held that the acceptance of Carnegie's offer constituted a contract; and an injunction has been issued restraining action on the part of Mayor Crosby as representative of the city. This is to stop the city from going back on its agreement to take the Carnegie money for the library. The matter now goes to the Courts.

QUITS an excitement was caused on the street Friday evening by the arrest of a man named Dunbrack. This man has been working at the bridge since last July and has borne a good character, being sober and industrious. On Friday morning he was paid off, receiving $100.50 for wages. He says he is not a drinking man, but on Friday he had several glasses of beer. He went into Hewitt's saloon on Sydney street that evening and says that the proprietress only gave him change for a $1 bill, while he had given her a $10 in mistake. He demanded that she look in the register and see if such was not the case but she says was refused and he was laughed at. He naturally grew indignant and swore he would not leave the place till he got his proper change. The police were telephoned for, and when they arrived a struggle ensued in which some sharp rapts were exchanged. When they got the prisoner a short distance up Queen street he suddenly upset one of their number and broke away. About an hour later five policemen went to this man's boarding house and after another tussle he was arrested and escorted to the station. The case came up for hearing the next morning before a crowded court-room. W. S. Stewart appeared for the prisoner. From the evidence taken the magistrate said the prisoner had committed a case of assault on the officers, but in view of his previous good character would not impose the usual heavy penalty for such an offense. He was fined $20 or 1 month. He is out $30.

CONDUCTED BY TOM A. HAWKES.

Truth seems to be more of a stranger than fiction—these times.

Hound a man and he can't help having a dog's life.

It takes a rich man to enjoy the pleasures of poverty. The poor beggars don't know how to appreciate such things.

There's no use in having a surplus of trouble when so many people are anxious to borrow it.

Most men think that life is a grind, and so fail to recognize the turning point when it comes.

One thing we like about some of the good old songs of the past is that nobody sings them anymore.

There are some women in this town who keep their age well—by never giving it away.

If all men had to live by their wits there are several in this town who would be very short lived.

The fellow whose courtship drives him to bankruptcy has no business to wonder why marriage is a failure.

Misunderstandings may cause separations, but sometimes a man and his wife may separate because they understand each other too well.

One of our exchanges states that American women in Cuba have adopted the Spanish custom of flirting with a fan. In this country they flirt with the man.

An eastern scientist has made the assertion that dyspepsia causes a man to lie. If that is the case a lot of the citizens of this town were born dyspeptic.

Naturalists say that a swallow will devour 600 flies a minute. Perhaps that is the reason why some men who are fond of a swallow use that old saying, "there are no flies on me," so often.

A DIFFERENT POINT OF VIEW. It is said that Mr. Carnegie's greatest weakness is his fear of death. Probably his heirs do not share his alarm.—St. John Telegraph.

WALL STREET ARITHMETIC. 10 miles make one trust, 10 trusts make one combine, 10 combines make one merger, 1 merger makes all the money. —British Commercial Bulletin.

SAD, BUT NOT NECESSARILY TRUE. A fool girl of Paris named Jane, Once threw herself into the Seine, She was off in her head, The fisherman said, Who found her. He found her in Seine.

NOT A LUXURY. The right of a policeman to make citizens "move on," like his right to carry a revolver, was granted him for use in case of necessity.—Toronto Globe. Charlottetown policemen might give this thought a little reflection.

AS HE UNDERSTOOD HIM. "I have a little poem here," faltered the poet. "Sorry," replied the editor, "but I'm full." "All right, sir," was the meek reply, "I'll call round when you're sober."—Atlanta Constitution.

ANOTHER TRUE YARN (?) It is told of an East Indian law student that he once threw his examiners into confusion by declaring matrimony to be an illegal status. "How so?" he was asked by the perturbed examiner, many of them married men. The student smiled beautifully. "Marriage," quoth he, "is a lottery, and lotteries are forbidden by law."

A story is told of a digger who had ridden into a western Australian town to consult a doctor. Having done so, he went to have the prescription made up. "How much is the lot?" he asked the chemist. "Well, let me see," was the reply. "There's seven-and-sixpence for the medicine and a shilling for the bottle." He hesitated, uncertain whether he had charged for everything. "Oh, hurry up, boss," said the impatient minister. "Put a price on the cork, and let us know the worst."

WILLING TO GO WITHOUT. Henry Caws, perfectly bald, was once travelling on a western railroad. Sitting directly behind him was a coarse looking man with a rough shock of hair the color of brick dust.

Tapping Mr. Caws on the shoulder, the fellow remarked: "Goes you want?" around when they gave out the hair. "Oh, yes," was the answer, "but I was a trifle late, and there was nothing left but that stuff you wear, so I told them I'd rather have none."

THE ZOO RACE. The animals thought they would have a race: The Bull was stakeholder, for, as he said, It was his nature to be. The Camel got a hump on himself; The Lion ran with might and mane; The Tiger stood off, for a beast of his stripe Was not let to enter again. The Elephant took his trunk along In case he won the prize; The Peacock was starker, and missed no one.

For, you see, he was all eyes. Some sported the Leopard for winner sure; The old one chose the Gun; While those who leap to conclusions quick Bet on the Kangaroo. The Ostrich plumed himself on his speed; All tried the record to break; The Hippopotamus blew his own horn out. But the Giraffe he won by a neck. —Baltimore American.

PUSSVILLE, Lor Foua, November 3, 1902. The Herald, Charlottetown, P. E. I. Sirs,—Your picture of his Holiness Pope Leo, arrived safely and I cannot tell you on paper how pleased I am with it. It is the best I have seen and I would pay a dollar for it alone. I am having it framed at once. With this I am sending you a dollar for the paper for another year and I hope the picture of the King and Queen will be as good as that of the Pope. Hoping to have the other pictures soon, I am, Sincerely Yours, DANIEL GALLIAN.

Mr. James McLean, Editor of the Herald: Dear Sir,—Your beautiful pictures have been received by me and I cannot find words to express how well pleased I am with them. That of his Holiness, Pope Leo XIII. is especially a high-class work of art and one that all your readers will not likely miss securing, as it will be a picture well worth having in years to come. The picture of the King and Queen is also very fine and one of the best that I have yet seen of their Majesties. Yours Truly, THOMAS DENNIS. Charlottetown.

REID'S TRYON FACTORY-MADE CLOTHS!

Blanketing, Drugget, Shirting and Factory- Made Yarns.

Tryon tweeds are the best on the Island, and they are made from P. E. I. wool—no shoddy, but pure, genuine wool. We have purchased a big stock of all-wool Tweeds, every yard guaranteed. Reid's double and twisted tweed weighs heavier, is better made and better secured and better finished than any tweed imported into P. E. I. That is why we buy it and sell it. There is no better blanketing, Drugget, Flannel or Yarn for the farmer made. In factory flannels we carry a stock of browns, greys and greens at 33 cents per yard. Wool is bringing a small price this year, and so we are asking a small price for our goods. This quality of flannel generally brings 42 cents elsewhere. Our all-wool Druggets and flannels for men's underwear we are selling at 35 cents. Some people ask 45 cents for imported stuff that will not wear as well. Remember to encourage home industry every time when the price is lower and the goods better.

Tryon Tweed made for the farmers of P. E. Island.

By a P. E. Islander for a gentleman to wear. The patterns are copies of the famous Bannockburn designs. Every thread, warp and weft is double and twisted. You won't find amongst any of our double and twisted every alternate thread plain. We guarantee every thread to be twisted. We have even twisted the price down from $1.00 to 80 cents per yard. Farmers, don't pay $1 a yard for imported Double and twist, when you can buy the same goods at 80 cents. We guarantee you a saving of 20 cents a yard, (single width) and 40 cents double width on imported goods.—You must have them, we will give you the famous Tryon make for 75 cents.

A Bargain in the Ready-Made Department.

About 50 Suits worth from $7.88, $9.00, you can have your choice as long as they are here for a five dollar bill. Now Mr. Farmer, hurry up and come to the farmer's store where you will get Blanketing, Drugget and Ready-made Suits at a price you never heard tell of before.

"Shout yourself hoarse," muttered old Bell, "it will not be easy to overtake us. Pull a long stroke and all together, we have a good quarter of an hour's start."

He gave Johnny a sign, the boat's head was turned, and until we were out of sight of the shouting warder, we made a faint of going up the river. But soon resuming our former direction, we shot down the stream like an arrow, propelled by four pairs of oars, tide and current both with us. Passing by on the opposite side, we saw lights moving to and fro outside the clink, and some of the guard running down to the docks, where the boats lay. Swiftly we flew past the crowd of vessels anchored below London Bridge, past the gloomy walls of the Tower, where so many Confessors of the Faith were immured, past the outlying houses and the City Wall.

Now we thought it was safe to speak. But the boatman said there was still great need for caution. The rain and darkness which were so much in our favor at the Clink, were now just the reverse, for we might easily run upon a sand-bank or come into collision with one of the vessels waiting in midstream for the turn of the tide. He himself took the helm, and sent his boy into the bow, to keep a sharp lookout.

The first streak of light in the east, heralding the dawn of day, found us between Woolwich and Gravesend. The river was getting broader, the banks flatter; nothing was to be seen but water, sandy beaches, led bare at low tide, and on the banks a few stunted willows. When the tide began to flow, rowing became more difficult, but a light breeze sprang up, our sail was hoisted, and we sped onward to Gravesend.

As it was nearly night when we got there, Bill proposed that we should go ashore, and pass the day at a secluded tavern which he pointed out to us, as he thought it unsafe to go on board the Jeanette by daylight. The police were sure to come down before long, and make inquiries for the fugitives. We followed his advice, and lay hidden till evening, when he came and under cover of the darkness, took us on board the Jeanette.

"God who has helped us so far, will help us till the end," whispered my affianced husband, as he assisted me up the ship's ladder. I pressed his hand and followed the others in silence on to the deck. A few moments more, and the friendly skiff disappeared from sight.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

My friend Windsor desires me now to continue my story, and I will not deny that there is much that I can tell which ought not to be omitted from this eventful narrative.

The reader would not be greatly entertained were I to dwell upon the struggle that went on in my soul, distracted as it was by doubt. It is to my own humiliation and shame that I recall the resistance I offered to the truth, a resistance every day more culpable, as conviction was borne in upon me with greater force.

Walsingham's design in desiring me to take up my residence, as I did for a time at Cartley, was that I might watch Windsor and the captive Queen. The more I saw of Windsor, the greater was the esteem I felt for him. He seemed to devote himself to the care of the sick poor, seeking no other recreation than solitary walk, reading his favorite Virgil in the shade of some spreading tree, or angling in the Trent or the Dove. In fact he appeared to be the most pacific of mankind, and had I not known for certain that he was involved in Babington's plot, I should have thought him the last man to engage in anything in the company of suspicious characters. He avoided me; this was only natural, as he could not but be aware that I was there to play the spy on him, and put a spoke in his wheel, when opportunity offered.

Still greater was the esteem wherewith Mary Stuart inspired me. I had thought to still the admiration which her beauty to the poor exacted on the occasion of my first visit to Cartley, by persuading myself that she was actuated by motives of policy, or at least, by Popish ideas of self-righteousness. But now, when I saw and talked to her almost daily, I was forced to acknowledge that her motives were of the most exalted character. Her patience and gentleness contrasted strikingly with Sir Amias Paulet's harsh, unmerciful behavior; scarcely ever did a word of bitterness escape her lips, although the indignation from which she suffered might have exacted some amount of irritability. Nor, in spite of the humiliations to which she was subjected, did she ever lose the sense of her regal dignity. Of Elizabeth, her deadly enemy, she always spoke with moderation, repeatedly expressing the wish that she could have a personal interview with her, as she was certain that all the misunderstandings caused by third persons would then melt away like snow in the spring sunshine. She complained very much of her Royal Sister's persistent refusal to allow her this favor that she asked. Of my Uncle Walsingham she judged too leniently; perhaps from politeness towards myself, more probably because he had advocated her release. Burghley she regarded as her bitterest foe, and when his name was mentioned, begged me never to speak of him before her, as she found it almost impossible to forgive him for having lent his weight to the Scottish rebels and murderers, to destroy her good name.

She related to me her whole history, from the time when, a child of six, she was taken to the French Court as the future bride of the Dauphin, there to spend twelve happy years, the only happy years of her life. She told me how she had, on the death of Queen Mary, as the heir to the crown, assumed the arms and title of the Queen of England, thereby provoking Elizabeth's undying enmity; and how, a widow when scarcely eighteen, she left France to ascend the throne of Scotland, disturbed and in unruly times, when the hand of a young and inexperienced woman was singularly ill-fitted to take the helm of the State.

"I should have been treated with the greatest regard," she said, "had I consented to adopt the doctrines preached by Knox. But as I announced my determination to adhere to the Roman Catholic, the only true Church, Knox openly insulted and defied me, and in league with him and his fanatical proselytes, the Lords of the Covenant never rested until they ruined my good name and saw me cast into prison. And yet I solemnly swore to respect the Reformed religion as then established, for did I persecute one of my subjects on account of his creed?"

She then proceeded to relate how her marriage with her cousin, Henry Darnley, had been a further cause of offence to Elizabeth; how she had proposed, in a constitutional manner, to establish the Catholic religion; how Darnley betrayed his royal consort, and caused Rizzio, her secretary, who was conducting the proceedings, to be assassinated in her very presence. How Darnley was deceived in his turn by the Covenanters, who refused him the reward of his treachery, the kingly power to which he aspired, and displayed to the Queen the document he had signed in proof of the infamous part he had played. How she had, at his entreaty, freely forgiven him, refused to consent to a separation, and after his illness, been fully reconciled to him.

And then came the explosion which destroyed the house of Kirk-in-the-Field where Darnley was sleeping! Murray, Morton and Ruthven were

Loss of Flesh

When you can't eat breakfast, take Scott's Emulsion. When you can't eat bread and butter, take Scott's Emulsion. When you have been living on a milk diet and want something a little more nourishing, take Scott's Emulsion.

To get fat you must eat fat. Scott's Emulsion is a great fattener, a great strength giver. Those who have lost flesh want to increase all body tissues, not only fat. Scott's Emulsion increases them all, bone, flesh, blood and nerve.

For invalids, for convalescents, for consumptives, for weak children, for all who need flesh, Scott's Emulsion is a rich and comfortable food, and a natural tonic.

accompaniers in this murder; Bothwell was acquitted by his judges, and their verdict was confirmed by Parliament. "But suspicion still attached to him," the Queen said, "and therefore I steadfastly refused to marry him, despite the pressure brought to bear on me by a strong party of the Lords. Then he resorted to violence, carried me off to his castle at Dunbar, and compelled me to go through the ceremony which would give him the position of power he coveted. Would that I had died a thousand times rather than submit to it! For this compulsory marriage put a weapon in my adversary's hands, and gave a coloring of truth to the vile accusation they brought against me of having connived at my husband's murder. Some forged letters were brought forward in support of this charge, and my fate was sealed. An insurrection of the Lords of the Covenant was followed by my incarceration at Lochleven and the complete abolition of the Catholic religion. After my escape from and the fatal defeat at Langside, I fled to England, where, as you know, instead of the promised assistance on which I relied, I found perpetual imprisonment in store for me. My principal enemies were, within a short time, arranged before the judgment-seat of God; Murray was assassinated, Marjorie suddenly, Marjorie and Ruthven were executed for the murder of Darnley. Almost all met with a violent death; may God forgive them, as I strive to do! Only one thing is a source of continual anxiety to me; the salvation of my only son, whom I left, an infant in the cradle, when I was taken as a prisoner to Lochleven. To win him back to the Catholic faith, I would gladly sacrifice my life."

This sorrowful story, which was told me in detail, differed from many points from the account which I had previously heard. I cannot deny that I was deeply moved by it. Everything about it seemed to bear the impress of truth, and I said within myself, if this is a tissue of lies and hypocrisy, Mary Stuart is an accomplished deceiver, and I shall find the means of unmasking her. Could I discover her to be in any way mixed up in the design of murdering Elizabeth, not a single word will I believe of her self-defense, although it is stated so calmly and bears so strong an appearance of truth.

The captive Queen did not tell me her history as a connected whole, but in parts, at different times, yet I never detected any discrepancy in her statements. Once I asked her what she would do if she were set at liberty. She replied that formerly it was her design, should she regain her freedom, to hasten to Scotland, to withdraw her son from the influence of synophants, and defeat their schemes; and to call upon the faithful Catholics in the lowlands, as well as the highland clans, to unite in one supreme effort to maintain the Catholic faith in the country. But now she had completely abandoned all such ideas; the time for action was past, her son was already twenty years of age. She would therefore retire to her beloved France, to her relatives of the House of Guise, to end her days in peace and the undisturbed exercise of her religion. Many and many a time had she besought her Royal Sister of England to release her from this almost intolerable captivity, but she would only consent to do so on certain conditions, two of which could not be accepted, namely that she renounce her claim to the crown of England, and abjure the Catholic faith.

THE UNSAID WORD.

Out of sight and out of reach they go— These close, familiar friends, who loved us so; And, sitting in the shadow they have left, Alone with loneliness, and sore bereft, We think with vain regret of some fond word That once we might have said and they have heard.

THE WILL AND THE WAY.

It was a noble Roman, In Rome's imperial day, Who heard a coward croaker, Before the battle say: "They're safe in such a fortress; There is no way to shake it— "On I on!" exclaimed the hero, "I'll find a way to make it!"

Is fame your aspiration? Her path is steep and high; In vain he seeks the temple, Content to gaze and sigh! The shining throne is waiting But he alone can take it Who says, with Roman firmness: "I'll find a way, or make it!"

Is learning your ambition? There is no royal road; Alike the peer and peasant Must climb to her abode. Who feels the thirst for knowledge, In Helicon may slake it, If he has still the Roman will: To "find a way or make it!"

Are riches worth the getting? They must be bravely sought; With wishing and with fretting The boon cannot be bought. To all the prize is open, But only he can take it Who says with Roman courage "I'll find a way, or make it!" —John G. Saxe.

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves, —November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

At the establishment of a certain hair-dresser the following scene recently took place, to the joy of those awaiting their turn:

Barber (inspecting the victim on the chair)—Your hair is getting very thin, sir.

Victim.—Yes? That's all right, I've been giving it anti fat; I hate stout hair.

Barber.—It's quite gray, sir.

Victim.—Of course! I'm in half mourning just now.

Barber.—But you really should put something on it, sir.

Victim.—So I do, every day.

Barber.—Ah! May I ask what? Victim.—My hat.

There is a certain rich newspaper proprietor in the north of England whose ignorance of literature is profound, and the other day the sub-editor used a Keats sonnet as a "filler." Coming down on the following morning, as is his wont, to put his staff "through their paces," the proprietor called for the sub-editor, and said, pointing to the sonnet: "Neaw, wha's that!" "That, sir, oh, that's a sonnet by Keats."

"Well, I ca' it tommy rot. If he sends any more of them in, doant thou use them, or thou'll ha' to pay for them theeself."

A certain small boy was going out to luncheon by invitation. His mother was anxious he should behave well, but, wisely recalling that simplicity is the essence of all true politeness, gave him but one caution: "Act, Tom, as if you were at home; take what you want with a 'Yes, please,' and decline anything with a polite, 'No, thank you.' Be as honest as at your own table."

At night Tom reported results. "I guess I did all right, mother, though I got a laugh on me once."

"What was that?" inquired his mother.

"Well, we had baked apples, and when it came my turn to be served Mrs. C. said: 'And now, Tom, which apple do you want?'"

"You told her, of course," interpolated his mother, as the boy hesitated a little. "You know, I have often explained that it is good manners to give a choice when one is asked."

"Yes, mother, I told her, and that was the laugh. I said, 'The one I want is gone.'"
