Only a Beggar;

A Queen Among Women

CHAPTER XXVI.

His face cleared a little. "I'll see to it," he said. "I'll get"—then his brow darkened—"no, I can't be seen on it," he said moodily. "I'm in hiding. I only go out at night—living in a quiet place in the slums over there—he jerked his thick thumb over his shoulder in the direction of Lambeth. "In hiding from that—that man I told you of, the man who forced me to try for the diamonds. Well, well!" as he saw Diana shudder. "We'll forget that. Ah, no, you can't. I know. And no more can I! That's the worst of it between you and me, my gel; there's no forgetting! And you're livin' here like a pauper, left all your friends—half fed, badly clothed—"

He broke off with a groan, and, sinking on to a chair, hid his face in his hands. Diana wanted to comfort him, but she could find no words, could not force herself to lay her hand on his shoulder as she wanted to do. He was her father, but she still shrank from him, still inwardly shuddered at the sight of his face, the sound of his voice. She could only look at him and try to accustom herself to his presence.

Presently the sick girl moved uneasily, turned and opened her eyes. "I am still here," she said faintly. "How good you are to me! I've seen you before. Yes, I remember. But for you I should have been lying dead in the river there. Oh! why did you save me? I wanted to die. I had nothing to live for, nothing, nothing!" Diana quivered. How often had that cry been hers?

"Hush!" she whispered. "There is always something to live for, dear!" "Not for me," moaned Lucy, turning her head away. "I am not fit to live. I will go home." She raised herself on her elbow; but Diana gently forced her back again.

"Not yet," she said softly. "You will stay here with me until you are better, stronger. I shall be glad, very glad to have you, for I am all alone." "Who is that?" asked Lucy fearfully, as she caught sight of Garling. "My—my father," said Diana with a choking sensation. "He—he helped me bring you here. There is no need to be frightened, dear."

"I will go home," said Lucy faintly; then she sobbed out: "Home! I haven't any! They—they turned me out—I had no money, not a penny—I've slept in the streets for—for ever so many nights—her voice broke and she clung to Diana with the terror of the homeless.

Diana soothed her as one soothes a child; indeed, she seemed more child than woman. "Hush, hush! You are here safe and in good keeping."

"Good—good!" The white lips caught up the word. "Ah, you don't know! I'm not good! I'm not fit for you to touch. Let me go!"

She began to struggle, and Diana, half frightened, turned to Garling; but as he came to the bed, the fragile figure ceased to struggle and fell back.

"I'm hot—and I was cold a little while ago," Lucy panted. "Hot! So hot! I'm burning!"

"Fever!" said Garling. Diana nodded. "A doctor?" He bit his lip and hesitated. "Better not; not yet. Wait a little while. Hush, listen! She's raving, poor girl. Yes; I'll get a doctor."

As he turned, Lucy's voice, at first incoherent, grew clearer, and, extending her hands imploringly, she cried, in a piteous, heartrending tone:

"Don't leave me, don't desert me. Oh, keep your promise, dear! You loved me once. I'm not altered. I'm the same, and I love you, dear, oh! I love you; take me away with you, and—and make me your wife! You promised, promised faithfully; and I've waited, waited so long! Ah, don't be cruel to me, don't desert me!"

There was a pause; then suddenly her arms fell to her side, her head sank, and with a deep sob she wailed: "He's gone. He will never come back; he's tired of me. Oh! I knew it from the first. God help me! He has gone!"

Garling looked at Diana, and Diana turned her head away and sighed. "Some scoundrel," said Garling hoarsely. "I'd—I'd like to have him here! She's very bad. I'll fetch a doctor."

CHAPTER XXVII.

Garling came back quickly with the doctor, who stood and looked at the delirious Lucy with pursed lips and the keen eyes of a man who has to diagnose more cases in a day than the ordinary practitioner sees in a week.

"Brain-fever, following on shock to a system completely run down by—yes, I should say want of food and exposure to the cold and wet." He gave the necessary directions; then, as he edged toward the door and his next patient, he said, in answer to Diana's anxious inquiry: "Will she pull through? Ahem, shouldn't like to say. All depends upon how thin the metal has worn; and it has worn pretty thin I'm afraid. Good-by. Look in to-morrow."

Lucy raved for some hours, then sank into the coma of insensibility; and Diana sat beside her and held her hot, wasted hand. The fact that the girl had been betrayed had in no wise dried up Diana's pity and charity; indeed, it had increased her pity and made her desire still more keenly to help the victim of a man's selfishness and cruelty. Diana had seen too much of the world of late to turn from a fellow woman who had erred for love's sake; and she was now too skilled a student of the human face divine not to know that, wronged though she might have been, the girl was still pure at heart.

In the morning Garling came round from his hiding-place in the neighborhood. He had brought ice, and wine, and delicacies suitable for an invalid, and hung over the bed examining the flushed face eagerly.

"If there's anything that can be done—if there's anything money can get, tell the doctor to mention it, only mention it," he said with sudden eagerness. "I've set my heart on saving her. Poor little thing! And you, Diana; you aren't going to turn from me, and refuse the things my money can buy?" he pleaded. "I tell you, I swear to you, it was come honestly by. When she's better you'll leave this place," he looked round almost savagely, "and let me make life comfortable for you?"

Diana was spared a response; for, fortunately for her, the invalid moved uneasily; and Diana went to her. The doctor came again, but still declined to give any opinion; though Garling pressed him hard and offered him a fee, which made the doctor suspicious. But he had too many of the criminal class among his patients to attach much importance to the character of this rough, brusque man, and pocketed the fee without question or comment.

Garling came in and out during the day, and, after looking at the sick girl, sat beside the fire, brooding. "When she gets better she shall go away to the seaside. Wrong time of the year? Not for the South. We can take her. I forgot; you wouldn't come, not with me."

"Yes; you forget," said Diana in a low voice. "I offered to go with you."

"I know, I know," he assented hoarsely. "You did, but—I saw your face. And you know what I am; she doesn't!" he jerked his head toward the bed. "And she needn't know. I'll take care of her as if—as if she was you." He was silent a moment or two, then he said, more to himself than to Diana: "The man—I want to meet him. Yes, and I may some time."

After one of his long silences, he said, suddenly:

"Where's your Aunt Mary?" Diana shook her head. "I do not know. I have not heard." "I understand. You've hid away from everybody because you're ashamed of me. And you're too proud to take a penny, a mouthful of food from me. But you're right, my gel! Pity I didn't die instead of Brown. Pity!"

He said, "Good night!" soon afterward and went out. At the end of the street he stopped and looked round him restlessly and wistfully. The silence and solitude of the den in which he was hiding were to be shunned as long as possible; instead of going home he went up the road and past the House of Parliament. The Policeman, little guessing the true character of the man he was aiding, stopped the traffic so that he might cross the road. Among the vehicles was a hansom cab with a gentleman inside, who was leaning forward and regarding the passers-by absentmindedly, but as his glance rested on Garling, his eyes opened with a quick light in them, and, putting up the trap-door in the roof, he said swiftly:

"Follow that man there—the short one. See?"

"Right!" said the cabman, and he turned up toward the park after Garling.

Presently the gentleman alighted, told the cabman to wait, and stepping quietly up to Garling, laid a hand on his shoulder, saying quite calmly and pleasantly:

"How do you do, Bourne?" Garling started, and, turning with a swift movement, raised his hand, as if about to strike; but the gentleman seized the hand and shook it, as if it had been offered for the purpose.

"Mr. Fielding!" gasped Garling, hoarsely. "Splendid memory yours; almost as good as mine," responded Mr. Fielding, with a nod. "Strange, meeting you here. Are you busy, engaged? If not, perhaps you will come to my office and have a chat."

Garling, with a look of resignation in his working face, made no refusal, and Mr. Fielding, linking his arm in his, led him to the cab. The clerks were gone, the office in darkness, but Mr. Fielding let himself in, lit the gas, and waved Garling to the chair on which Diana had sat.

"And how are you, Bourne?" he asked.

Garling eyed him stoically, and with a touch of resentment mixed with awe.

"You knew I was alive?" he said sullenly.

"Not exactly 'knew,'" confessed Mr. Fielding, with a touch of regret and self-reproach. "I only guessed, surmised. Why should your daughter run away and hide herself unless she had heard you were alive or seen you? And that partnership business was—thin. It was merely conjecture by deduction. Understand? And how is Miss Diana?"

"She is—How do you know I've seen her—know where she is?" Garling demanded.

"Well, I know now, if I didn't a moment before," said Mr. Fielding with a grave smile. "Poor girl! Is she well—safe and well? I ask for personal reasons, Bourne, for I am fond of her; and I've suffered not a little remorse on her account. You see, I'm the cause of all the trouble."

"You? You mean me?" Fielding shook his head. "No; you couldn't help not dying; and though I think you might have refrained from turning up again—"

"You're not a father," said Garling huskily. "You've never plied for a sight of your gel, the child you left."

"No, Oh, yes, I can make allowance for your paternal feelings, my good fellow. Troublesome things these same feelings. In your case they have ruined your daughter and wrecked her life."

"I know it," said Garling with a dry sob. "And you don't know all—how completely I've done it." He was thinking of Diana's discovery of him "at work" at Glenaskel. "What's to be done, Mr. Fielding? You'll help me? You always have."

Mr. Fielding shrugged his shoulders. "Afraid I can't help you here," he said with genuine regret. "I tried to play amateur Providence once, and I've made a mess of it. Of course I ought to have told Lord Dalesford of Diana's—or—parentage before they became engaged."

Garling started. "Do you mean to say that she was going to marry a—a nobleman, a swell?"

Mr. Fielding nodded. "Yes. The only son of the Earl of Wrayborough. She would have been a countess if you had not—or—inconveniently come to life again."

Garling wiped the sweat from his face. "And—and—you kept it from them?"

"Yes," said Mr. Fielding, shrugging his shoulders again. "I thought that it would be safe to do so; I thought—no, I didn't think of anything but Miss Diana's happiness," he broke off with fierce self-reproach. "I laid the flatteringunction to my soul that the secret of your—past was buried with you, and that if it leaked out after her marriage it would not matter. I was wrong, of course; both Mrs. Burton and I were wrong."

In the region southeast of Ypres the enemy attempted three violent attacks of infantry, which have been repulsed.

In the woods of Le Pretre we have made very good progress.

In the Vosges the enemy attacked several times the signal station of Lamere-Heny, northwest of Senones, but have been repulsed.

On the Danube front there is no change.

THE POPE'S OFFER NOT ACCEPTED.

ROME, Dec. 14.

The Observator Romano, the Vatican Organ, referring to the efforts of Pope Benedict to bring about a truce during the Christmas season among the warring powers, says: His Holiness the Pontiff, in home-grown faith and devotion to Christ, the Redeemer, who is the Prince of Peace, and also believing the sentiments of humanity toward the families of the combatants, addressed a peaceful note, confidentially, to the belligerent Governments, to ascertain how they would receive the proposal of a truce during such a solemn festivity as Christmas. All the Powers declared they highly appreciated the loftiness of the Pontiff's initiative, and a majority gave their sympathetic adherence to the truce, but some did not feel able to agree to it. Thus lacking the necessary unanimity, the Pope has been unable to reach the benevolent result which the paternal heart of His Holiness promised himself.

S. School Anniversary.

COCHRANE STREET CHURCH.

The anniversary services of the Cochrane Street Sunday School held in the College Hall yesterday, were very largely attended, and most enthusiastic. The platform was neatly decorated with the flags of the Empire. The morning service was conducted by the Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, B.A., the subject being Patriotism. The preacher referred to Newfoundland as being the oldest British Colony and exhorted the scholars of the school to be loyal and true, to rejoice in our liberty, to be honest, kindly and pure so as to become citizens of God's great kingdom. After the offering had been taken up, Mr. Charles Hatcher sang the solo, "God Save England"—the words being by Sir Conan Doyle.

The afternoon service was presided over by Mr. H. N. Burt. The opening prayer being made by the Rev. G. Paine. The programme consisted of recitations by Misses Curtis and Parsons, and two on the Flag and Newfoundland by two of the scholars.

Two motion songs by nine little girls, a solo by Miss Peach and a duet by Misses Bowden and Taylor. The address was given by Hon. J. A. Robinson, who after congratulating the Hon. H. J. B. Woods on his many years of active service as Superintendent of the school, gave a capital address on the present war; the speaker spoke touchingly of the plucky little Belgians, and during the course of his remarks was frequently applauded. The Secretary of the school gave a resume of the year's work.

At the evening service the Pastor the Rev. C. A. Whitmarsh, M.A., delivered an earnest address on the "Patriotism of the Future," taking as a general motto the words found in Deuteronomy. The twentieth century is a wonderful age in more respects than one, the advance of knowledge, the educational advantages and the wonderful advance in social service. English history appeals to the heroic.

If ever there was a time when a call to the heroic is being made that time is now. Our old Empire has gone through seas of peace and safety, but to-day it is plunged in the horrors of this awful war. Our nation is very great and marvellous, proudly are we able to wave our Union Jack. God has made us mighty. Let all enlist under the banner of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. At the close of the service Miss Mitchell sang as a solo the Lord's Prayer. The singing was hearty—the organ was manipulated by Mr. Arthur News, the piano by Miss Woods, cornets by Messrs. Parsons and Dutoit and violin by Mr. C. Maunders. We congratulate the Superintendent, Mr. Woods, and his able staff of officers and teachers on the successful carrying out of yesterday's programme, the subject of Patriotism being of special interest all over the wide world at the present time.

War Rates Reduced.

It is no wonder that the greatest satisfaction is expressed in Chile among the Chileans and the general body of foreigners there at the destruction of the German fleet under Admiral von Spee, which is completed by the stranding of the Dresden at Gallegos, a port of the Argentine Republic, a little to the north of the Strait of Magellan. With the destruction of the Scharnhorst, the Gneisenau, the Leipzig, the Nürnberg and the stranding of the Dresden, the whole of the fleet which was reported under von Spee when he defeated Admiral Cradock, is accounted for. If the Strassburg is still at large in the Pacific, with a few auxiliary cruisers, they will soon be rounded up either by the Japanese or the Australians. At all events, there is no German unit at large in the Pacific which could not be destroyed by the Melbourne or the Sydney. These cruisers are 5,400 tons, have a speed of 24 1/2 knots, and carry eight 6 in. guns. The Strassburg is somewhat smaller and carries twelve 4.1 guns. The Australian flagship is the Australia. She is a battle cruiser of 18,000 tons and carries eight 12 in. guns, and sixteen 4 in. Her speed is 23 knots. These and the Japanese should have no difficulty in running down the Strassburg and any German auxiliaries. In the Atlantic there is the Karlsruhe and the story is around that the Von der Tann escaped from Kiel and for the South Atlantic. There is no confirmation of the story. Even if it is so, Admiral Sturdee is understood to have a force of superior battle-cruisers with him, and the latest British battle-cruisers are known to be in the Atlantic, and they will not be long in either rounding her up and the Karlsruhe also, or in forcing them to seek safety by entering in a neutral port. The torpedoing of the Turkish battleship may not be of much account, taken by itself, but it is significant that the feat was accomplished by a British submarine. It would be interesting to learn where the action took place. It may be that the British are penetrating the Dardanelles by submarines. So far as commerce is concerned, Admiral Sturdee's success has already had its effect in bringing down war rates on shipping.

GERMAN HOLD ON ST. MIHIEL LOOSENING.

NEW YORK, To-day. A cable to the Herald from London this morning, says: "By admission from Berlin, it seems certain the sander German hold on the Meuse at St. Mihiel, is about to be broken by France having crossed the German line of communication with Metz, and between St. Mihiel and Pont au Mousson. Although at a cost of 600 prisoners and a large number of men killed and wounded. The French have been particularly active the last few days in Woivre district as the culmination of a steady grinding fight forward from the woods, south of Apremont, and an equally grueling advance from the forts south of Verdun. This conflict, almost lost sight of in the larger events of Flanders and of the Polish campaign, would in any other war have been ranked among great campaigns. It was on October that the German left centre made a sudden dash from the Franco-German frontier in an effort to cut a way through the barrier forts, roll back the French to Verdun and Toul, and compel General Joffre to risk his army in an effort to outflank the German right. The dash resulted in the capture of the Fort de Romains and Fort Les Paroisses, a hold on the left bank of the Meuse and the occupation of St. Mihiel. There the invading army was checked, but the weeks that have passed have been filled with almost constant fighting to break this arrow-like force, projecting into French territory. From the north, south and west the French have been battering the German lines. Their lines crept on each side until two weeks ago the Germans held only a tiny thread of their position. It is reasonable to expect in the near future the beginning of a desperate battle of extrication."

Lecture On France

AT THE GRENFELL HALL.

A crowded audience was in evidence at the Grenfell Hall last evening to hear a lecture on "France," given by Mr. W. H. Jones, Manager of the Seamen's Institute. The lecturer gave a graphic account of that beautiful land and its people from historical and industrial standpoints, and for upwards of an hour held the closest attention of his listeners. Illustrating his remarks with views, the speaker reviewed the history of France back to over a century ago when that nation was hostile to Britain, and gave a sketch of Napoleon Bonaparte, whom it is a remarkable coincidence, finished his career in the same room at Boulogne where he had been drawing out his plans for the invasion of England. One out of every sixth man throughout France is risking his life for his country. Almost every woman there and little girls of tender years is engaged in some occupation. Some excellent views of Amiens, Metz, Alsace, Lorraine and other principal centres in France were thrown on the screen, including one of Paris at the time of the Revolution; also some striking pictures of the touching reunions that occurred while the French soldiers were leaving for the battlefield. There were attractive pictures of President Poincare and the Prince of Wales inspecting the French troops and of His Majesty King George, the late King Edward the Peacemaker, Sir Edward Grey, Mr. Winston Churchill, General Kitchener, Joffre and French and Admiral Jellicoe. Next Sunday, the second anniversary of the Institute, Mr. Jones will speak on "Russia."

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Clemmons' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.
"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge P. O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were released of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."
Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Had Stormy Trip.

The Furness Liner Queen Wilhelmina, Capt. Dickson, arrived here Saturday night, after a stormy trip of ninety hours from Halifax. She left that port early Wednesday morning. Fog was met the greater part of that day and the following one, the ship making very slow headway. On Friday a terrific snow storm was encountered and the ship labored heavily. The ship had a deck load of timber and part of it broke loose on account of the huge waves that swept over the ship. After difficult management the cargo was adjusted. The ship brought a thousand tons of cargo. She is expected to sail again for Liverpool to-morrow night, taking a large outward freight, including the Christmas gifts for our volunteers. The Queen Wilhelmina had a hard time of it on her recent trip from Liverpool to Boston and met with damage about decks. Capt. Dickson was last here in the s.s. Snowden Range when she put in for repairs two years ago.

SAGONA ARRIVES.—The s.s. Sagona arrived in port from North Sydney at 1 p.m. yesterday, with a cargo of coal to the Nfld. Produce Co.

Patrick Coady,
Steward S.S. Sagona

MEETS HORRIBLE DEATH.

A fire occurred on board the S. S. Sagona at an early hour this morning which cost the life of the Chief Steward, a promising young man of 27 years old. The victim is Patrick P. Coady, son of Matt Officer Coady, of the S. S. Portia.
Chief Steward Coady was seen to go on board his ship about midnight, and it is supposed that he went to sleep while smoking a cigarette, which must have ignited the bedclothing and set fire to the steamer's cabin. The fire was discovered about 1.30 a.m. by the watchman, Mr. Escott, who in making his rounds noticed an immense flame issuing from the saloon door. The watchman immediately boarded the ship and woke up the crew, after which he sent in an alarm to which the Central and Western Companies quickly responded. Several streams of water were directed on the blaze which was under control in about fifteen minutes. In going through the cabin of the ship the firemen found the lifeless body of Coady in his berth. It was apparent that the unfortunate young man made no attempt to escape, as the body was found lying on the left side, and badly burned from the hips upwards. The remains were taken to the morgue for a post mortem examination.
The cabins were badly damaged by the fire, while the fixtures and linen were completely ruined by water and smoke. These of course can be replaced, but the tragic death of the young man Coady, who was so well known to the travelling public has evoked the sympathy of the whole community. To the deceased young man's father, brothers and sister who are left to mourn, the Telegram extends sincerest sympathy.

Some Christmas Suggestions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine has a unique Christmas custom. A day or two before Christmas he goes over his bills and pays every one of them. He says that his creditors tell him that they seldom receive any money in the last few days before Christmas and their pleasure and gratitude is sufficient repayment for any sacrifice this custom may entail.

I called this custom unique. Perhaps I overstated that. But I'm sure I'm safe in calling it extremely unusual.

The Chinese celebrate their greatest holiday not only by gift giving but by bill paying. A Chinaman has not lived up to his religion unless New Year's Day finds him with every bill paid.

Apparently there are some things that even the "Heathen Chinese" might teach the enlightened races.

Don't select Christmas as a good opportunity to pay off your debt to someone who has done you a kindness.

I once knew a girl who was grateful to a friend for kindness shown her during a fit of sickness; she tried to square things up by sending the friend (with whom she had never exchanged gifts) a pretty Christmas present.

The recipient felt troubled because she had not sent a gift in return, the next Christmas she took up the game; they are now exchanging gifts and apparently will do so for years as neither likes to break it off. Incidentally, as I happen to know, it is rather a burden to both.

Of course it is a very sweet thought

Hidden Art Treasures at Bottom of River.

London, Dec. 7.—There have been many reports since the Germans invaded Belgium regarding the places to which the country's priceless art treasures were taken for safety.

Doctors and Gas Fires

In an article which recently appeared in the London "Evening News," Mr. W. G. Faulkner stated: "In making my inquiries I discovered one significant fact. This was that one company—the Gas Light and Coke Company—had among their consumers 2,500 doctors who had gas fires installed in their houses, some as many as ten or a dozen; that 1,500 of these doctors had become users of gas during the past three years; and that not one had ever given them up."

Professor C. V. Boys, F.R.S., says in the "Standard": "Sentiment and inertia are the only obstacles against the general adoption of gas fires and cooking appliances. Wonderful strides have been made, in spite of deep-rooted prejudice. A gas fire, burning with a blue, is an admirable agent for heating a room; and, as a scientist, I fail to understand how such a gas fire dries the air in a room more than any other fire."

Landstrumers Tell Kaiser to Yield

The officers, it is understood, flatly refused to move."

British Rule in Egypt.

Salvation of Country Says Egyptian Premier.

London, Dec. 2.—The Cairo correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, cables an interview given to him by Rashedi Pasha on the advantages of British rule in Egypt.

"Britain is the natural protector of Egypt on many grounds," said the Prime Minister. Her prominence in Egypt assures for her the great bich-way to the east will be kept open. Her control safeguards the European financial interests in Egypt, and to it means the integrity of our territory.

"An enormous majority of Egyptians appreciate Great Britain's work and on every ground would greatly regret a break in her interest in the country. We shall have more hope of realizing our ambitions to become an important state if we work under Britain's guidance. No other power could help us in the same way."

"Rashedi Pasha spoke in warm terms of Earl Kitchener's work in Egypt and expressed the hope that when the British Secretary of War's task in Britain is finished he will return."

"The Egyptians would be most happy to have Earl Kitchener back," he added.

"One does not expect great soldiers to be statesmen, but Earl Kitchener has proved himself, by his clear-sighted policy in Egypt, to be a statesman of the first rank."

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES GARTER IN COWS.

The Hen.

By GEORGE FITCH.

The hen is a large bird which flies like a 1900 model aeroplane and is supplied with a squawk in place of a brain.

Nobody who has watched the hen in her blundering progress through life has any respect for her intellect. She has been severely criticized by all who have seen her mothering a china egg with intense devotion or running twenty-five yards in order to get to a road in time to cross it in front of an automobile. We laugh at the hen as we roughly pluck her from the radiator through which she has tried to fly, and allude, with ribald jest to her punk mental equipment as we toss her in the ditch. Then we put on all speed and race over a railroad crossing, a winner from death by only one small silver of a second. We are much wiser than the hen but has a difference about showing it at times.

The hen is distinguished not merely by her low, retreating forehead, but by her maternal instincts. She is a profuse and enthusiastic mother. It is her ambition to collect a dozen eggs of her own production and to set upon these until they explode into chicks. Ruthless man, however, foils her by stealing the eggs as fast as she lays them. Many a hen goes through life with a puzzled air, laying hundreds of eggs and never getting a single egg ahead on her job. The incubator has driven the hen out of the mother business but thus far nothing can compete with the hen in producing eggs. She has a monopoly of the trade and gets her revenge upon man by going off the job in winter and consuming mill feed in luxurious ease while the price of eggs aviates and Congress appoints committees to probe the high cost of living.

The hen cannot sing and is not handsome to look at, but she has one talent that has endeared her to all mankind. She dies more beautifully and toothsome than any other fowl. When a hen has resolved herself into her component parts each fried in egg and corn meal, she has produced one of the most perfect bits of gastronomic poetry.

Because of this the hen is like the politician—we love her best while reciting her obituary.

The Herring Fishery.

According to late reports, it looks as if the herring fishery at Bonne Bay this season will be the worst on record. Up to the present, and the voyage is now drawing to a close, most of the fishermen engaged have not fared half as well as last year and previous ones. Besides the scarcity, the fish this year are of an unusually small size. Messages received in the city Saturday stated that herring were still very scarce at Bonne Bay.

Sealing Commission.

(Saturday, Dec. 12.)

ARTHUR MOULAND, continued, to Dr. Lloyd, saw the smoke of the Newfoundland on Wednesday evening; witness started for the ship, and saw some others going towards her, who were joined. George Tuff was with the crowd. The weather was then clear, but as night came on it was decided to put up. Witness thought they might have been seen with a glass from the ship, though the ice was very rough, at times hiding the ship from them. Shelters were built, and nine men remained all night, the weather being very cold. Next morning three of the Ventures and the Newfoundland were sighted, and a start was made for the latter. The men were weak from exposure, but a high pan of ice was reached and witness got on it. A seal was seen, which was killed, and portions of it were eaten by the men, after which another attempt to reach the ship was made. Three, who were weaker than the rest, did not travel so fast. After a while some men from the Newfoundland came on with food and stimulants, which was given out. When witness got on board, Capt. Kean came to see him, after which witness turned in for three hours, when he had some food and went on deck. Not being injured seriously, witness remained on the Newfoundland and helped bring her to port. Witness thought panning seals should be prohibited, that when ships strike the seals the men be put out, but that they be not allowed to go more than a quarter of a mile from the ships in any direction. Witness had on one occasion walked five miles from the ship. Men frequently go three or four miles under present conditions. He did not think panning was better than hauling for the men. If short distances from the ship was observed, and if the men were two or three miles from the ship, hauling would be much harder. Men going on ice usually take hard bread and butter; they often have oatmeal and raisins. The ship provides the bread and butter, the men provide the rest. If meat is left over the men may take it with them. Molasses is also provided by the ship. As to clothing the men had various kinds, but in the opinion of witness homespun is best for the ice. He used flannel underclothing, which was warmest. He was continually on the move from Tuesday until Thursday, had no sleep, and came through without injury. The others who were similarly fortunate also kept moving all the time. Some men fell in, which hastened their end. Witness lost eight men out of his watch of thirty-nine, one of them in the hospital.

To the Chief Justice, witness fixed the distance of quarter of a mile, as he thought men would not hear the whistle to windward a greater distance in a storm. Witness thought if the ship was jammed, and seals were half a mile from the ship, the men should still abide by the law, otherwise disasters such as last spring might be repeated. Witness thought a whistle would be heard further than a gun.

To Judge Johnson, witness thought if a whistle could be heard half a mile, it would be all right for men to go that far from it. A powerful whistle might be heard three or more miles to leeward.

To Mr. Fenelon, witness found the food good enough and plenty of it for the men. There might be improvement in the cooking.

JOHN E. HISCOCK, sworn, examined by the Minister of Justice.—Was at the ice last spring in the Newfoundland, in Thos. Dawson's watch, have been twelve springs at the ice in various ships. Remember leaving the ship at 7 o'clock a.m. March 31st last. The weather was mild, looked like rain, and clothed himself lightly; others did the same. Walked about N. W. towards the Stephano, which was reached at noon by his watch. The ice was very bad for walking. Thought the Stephano was 5 or 6 miles from the Newfoundland. She was moving when witness got up to her. Capt. A. Kean called out to the men to come on board and get their dinner; as he wanted to put them in a spot of seals. Witness said he got half a cup of cold tea and had a cake of bread, which was his dinner. He understood the Stephano steamed W. while they were aboard. The sun after getting on the ice walked S. W. or were told that was the direction. George Tuff led the crowd. Between half and a mile some seals were reached, and Bunzay stopped with some men to kill them. Tuff went on, and witness asked him if Capt. Kean was coming for them, he said no that they would kill some seals and go to their own ship. It was then blowing hard, with thick, soft snow, very mild. They started for their own ship, going E. S. E. until the path they came out over in the morning was struck. Witness was sure it was their path, because of a Stephano flag which was about 3 1/2 miles from Newfoundland. Witness thought Stephano went further away from the Newfoundland while he was on board, than nearer. The weather was very dirty when the flag was reached, too dirty for men to be on the ice, the snow was blinding. They followed the path towards the Newfoundland until it was lost about 4.30 p.m. It was too dirty to go much further, but judged they should be near the ship. Witness heard no whistle, but heard others say they did, this was about 4 o'clock, and some men shouted, thinking they would have been heard on board. Had the whistle been kept blowing, witness thought they would have reached the ship. They travelled about 1/2 mile after this before stopping. George Tuff directed the master watches to build shelters. Jones' watch came on Dawson's path, with Mouland's behind it. Jones had looked after his own men, on a pan of their own, it would have been better for all. About midnight the wind shifted to N.W., freezing. Next day it was very cold and stormy, until noon. Saw a steamer about 1 o'clock, which afterwards passed out of sight. Just before dark saw the Newfoundland and started for her, but could not reach her. Next morning reached her about 9 o'clock. Witness told Capt. Kean that if he had blown his whistle and his father had not ordered them from the Stephano, the accident would not have happened. Witness said he gets better grub at home than he ever got on any sealing steamer. Witness thought Tuff

BAIT

Or rather the want of it, is one of the principal drawbacks to the fisheries of Newfoundland, and as it is tolerably certain that we shall have good markets and high prices in 1915, now is the time to prepare to capture BAIT fishes.

As a means to this end we are making CHEAP LIGHT CAPLIN SEINES, that will be easily handled, and as one good haul will pay for the outfit, every schooner should have one.

We are making SQUID TRAPS, which will be most effective.

We are making SMELT NETS, in all sizes.

We are making GILL NETS, various sizes.

We are making COD TRAPS and COD SEINES, Hemp and Cotton.

We make SUPERIOR HERRING NETS, Standard and Crescent brands.

We make Hemp and Cotton LINES and TWINES of superior quality.

We make CORDAGE and CABLES of all sizes. In fact we make everything required for the fisheries, and we ask all our people to support HOME INDUSTRIES by using everything that is home made where ever possible, and so keep the money in circulation in Newfoundland.

had made arrangements with Capt. A. Kean to come for their crew, which should have been done. He thought master watches should be capable of taking charge of men before being trusted with them, and that sealing ships should keep their whistle blowing and the lights up, so by night ships keep their lights up, so that their whereabouts may not be known. He found the food on the Newfoundland fairly good. The men's cook did not have proper facilities for doing his work well. He did not think poor clothing had anything to do with the loss of life last year. The men should take meat on the ice with them, also Radways or some such thing in case of accident.

To the Chief Justice, witness thought only the day's work should be panned, which if not taken the same day by their own ship might be taken by any other ship. Not less than 100 seals should be put on a pan, and men should not be allowed to go further than two miles from their ship on a fine day. Deck cargoes should not be allowed on wooden ships. Witness was on the Southern cross on the front. She was then a good ship. He had also made several trips to Labrador in her. The boats usually carried by sealers are not sufficient to save life in a storm. Life boats or dories would be better.

The Commission sits again this afternoon.

Days past—347. To come—17.

GEORGE WASHINGTON died 1799, aged 67. When the dispute between the British home Government and the colonists broke out he became one of the leaders of the local opposition and eventually on the founding of the Republic became its first President in 1789. He was one of the noblest characters in history—good, simple, honest, brave and efficient.

PRINCE CONSORT died 1861, aged 42. He was attacked by typhoid fever and died after a very short illness. It was a blow that Queen Victoria never got over. Their happiness was of the highest, and he had secured the confidence and esteem of statesmen and public alike.

PRINCE ALBERT born 1825. We can imagine that the King's second son is itching to get to the front.

SOUTH POLE reached by Amundsen 1911. This clever Norwegian (born 1873) has from his youth been gaining polar experience.

TO OUR DEAD.

Sleep well, heroic souls, in silence sleep,
 Lapped in the circling arms of kindly breath!
 No ill can vex your slumbers, no foul breath
 Of slander, hate, derision mar the deep
 Response that holds you close. Your kinsmen reap
 The harvest you have sown, while each man saith
 "So would I choose, when danger threateneth,
 Let my death be as theirs." We dare not weep.

For you have scaled the starry heights of fame,
 Not ever shrunk from peril and distress

In fight undaunted for the conqueror's prize;
 Therefore your death, engirt with loveliness
 Of simple service done for England's name,
 Shall shine like beacon-stars of sacrifice.

Thirty-Four Men Burned to Death.

ONLY TWO OF THE CREW OF THE BRITISH STEAMER VEDRA ESCAPED.

Barrow, England, Dec. 8.—(Wrapped in flames, and with the sea about her abaze from the cargo of gasoline she was carrying, only two men of her crew of thirty-six escaped death today when the British steamer Vedra piled on the shore near Barrow during a heavy gale, broke up and was consumed.

The two men rescued were severely burned while swimming through the flaming sea to a tug. A majority of the crew were trapped in the fore-castle of the Vedra and perished.

So suddenly did the fire break out when the vessel grounded that only four of the ship's company had time to reach her weather side. These were the chief engineer and three sailors.

Flowing in a torrent from the rent in the cofferdam, the gasoline invaded the engine room. In a second it had ignited and spread to all parts of the doomed vessel, also pouring through rents in the hull into the sea.

Reaching the weather side of the ship the chief engineer gave the three seamen with him life belts he had picked up in his flight and, mounting the rail, plunged headlong into the sea, trusting to his ability as a swimmer to reach a nearby tug which was endeavoring to pull off the Vedra. The engineer had taken only two or three strokes when a huge wave picked him up and dashed him against the side of the steamer, killing him. Two of the seamen immediately followed the engineer and swam until they were picked up, but in doing so were badly burned. The other seaman, unable to swim, feared to take the plunge and was burned to death where he stood.

Meanwhile a number of lifeboats had come on the scene, but they were unable to give aid to the men imprisoned in the fore-castle whose screams could be heard above the roar of the flames.

The Vedra, which was bound from Port Arthur, Texas, for London, is a total loss.

Made of good strong tweeds and finished with dependable linings.

Like a Soldier.

Let me like a soldier fall, with a bullet in my gall, with the colors in my hand—such a passing would be grand, and a line or two I'd catch in some general's dispatch. I might live in tale and song, while my mother scraped along, toiling in her wintry years, saturating things with tears, mourning for her martial son, who was shot up with a gun. Let me like a soldier fall, where the blaring trumpets call, so that some ten-dollar clerk in the War Department works, may inscribe against my name, "Perished on the field of fame." Let me nobly sink to rest with a banner on my breast, while my father, old and blue, does the work I ought to do, drudging for his daily bread, while I hang around stone dead. Let me like a soldier fall, all ripped up by bomb and ball, let me to Valhalla go, with my face toward the foe, so my fame for aye may ring, and the minstrels ever sing of the mighty swath I made where the armies were arrayed, while my widow at the tub washes for her humble grub and my hungry children howl for the wishbone of a fowl. Glory is the stuff I crave, glory and a soldier's grave.

Such Stuff as Dreams are Made

New York Evening Post.—When Herr Harden comes to speak of the way in which the war is to be ended, he gets upon ground where many of his countrymen may be tempted to follow him. It is all very easy. Germany will stay in Belgium, and also conquer "a narrow strip of coast towards Calais." This done, we will close the war. It may be thought that color for such bravado is given by the nature and trend of German military operations. But no members of the German Government, or of the General Staff, unless they are insane, can believe in the possibility of any programme like this. If the French and English armies are annihilated, yes; if the British navy is destroyed, yes; if the Russian avalanche can be stayed, yes; but otherwise it is such stuff as dreams are made of.

'Korff's' Cocoa
Established 1803.
Next time you are buying Cocoa please ask for Korff's. Follow the direction in preparing it and you will enjoy the luxury of a cup of cocoa in perfection. Korff's Cocoa cost you fully 20 per cent. less than Van Houten's, for the simple reason that it is not overloaded with advertising and sells on its merit.

The German Empress has all her dresses made in Berlin at a cost not far below £4,000 ($20,000) per year. By patronizing some of the Dry Cleaning Establishments of Berlin, Her Majesty could reduce this sum to at least half without the slightest sacrifice in dress.
This process is almost marvellous and there is no more up-to-date establishment than
