CHAPTER X
Some children were playing at the doors of the cottages and on the green, and they stopped and stared at her, and one ran into a cottage and brought out its mother to stare also. The woman bobbed a courtesy, and Declina went up and spoke to her and patted the head of the child, who hid its face shyly in its mother's apron. She wanted to make friends with the people among whom she was going to live. Then she went into the shop. There were two steps down, and the smell of all the "smelly" things on this earth seemed to rise and embrace her. A stouthead, middle-aged woman came out from the parlor as the door-bell tinkled. She had a round, ruddy face with saucer eyes, and wore a sun-bonnet perched on the back of her head. She wiped her face on her apron as she waddled behind the counter, and stared at Declina with a curiosity which found vent in an eager—"Lor, now, you're the young lady what's come to The Woodblines, I'll be bound, miss?" "I am Mr. Deane's daughter; yes," said Declina. "And I'm glad to see you, miss," said Mrs. Topper, genially. "I should a-know you in the twinkling of an eye; you're so like your brother. Ah, what a handsome young gentleman he is! and nice, too, though he is so full of his fun. Calls me 'Mother Topper' as often as not; but, there! I don't mind that. And so you've come to live among us? Well, I hope you'll like it. There's worse places than Stretton Wold, and worse people, though I shouldn't say it, for I was born and bred here. And where did you come from, miss, if I may make so bold?" "From London," said Declina. "I want some bacon, and some sugar—" "To be sure!" said Mrs. Topper, cheerfully. "From London, ah, I've never been to London. Stretton's where I was born, and Stretton's good enough for me." "And some tea," said Declina, suppressing a smile; "and—oh, a great many things; but here's a list I've written out."

Keeps Baby's Skin Healthy

If every mother could only realize the danger which lurks in the neglect of chafing and skin irritations she would not take chances on being without Dr. Chase's Ointment to apply after baby's bath.

It arrests the development of eczema and makes the skin soft, smooth and velvety.

Mrs. Topper took it, but laid it on the counter without glancing at it. "And so you've come to keep house for your good father, miss? Ah, wonderfully clever man he be! A bit in the clouds, as they say; but what can you expect from a jennyass! Clever people ain't like ordinary folks. The list, miss? Oh, yes, I'll see as the things are sent up all right."

"Thank you," said Declina. "And may I have the bill every week, please? I'm afraid it has not been sent regularly. Let me have an account-book every Saturday, and I will see that it is paid each Monday."

Mrs. Topper smiled, indulgently. "Lor, miss what's the need?" she remarked. "The book will come in every half year or so, and it don't make no odds whether it's paid."

"But I want—" "Don't you bother about that, miss," broke in Mrs. Topper, pleasantly. "It'd only worry you, and me too, for that matter, a-making up the account every week. You see, since my gal got married and left me, I've done all the bills myself, and I ain't much of a hand at figures."

Declina sighed with a kind of comic despair.

"Well, let us say every fortnight." "Ah, well," assented Mrs. Topper, but not very assuringly. "I'll do my best, miss, and no one can do more, can they?"

Declina was obliged to admit this, and Mrs. Topper, leaning over the counter as comfortably as she could, ran on:

"And I suppose you've heard the news, miss? All the place is in a state of excitement this morning. They was in here last night in perfect droves, so as I couldn't get to move about, and all with the same story. It did sound at first too good to be true, but Mrs. Murphy—she keeps the inn, you know, miss—ran in last thing last night to tell me as it was true, and that she'd had it from Mr. Bright himself; and all I can say is, that it's the best news we've had in Stretton Wold for many a year."

"What is the news?" asked Declina, though she could guess.

"Lor, now didn't I tell you?" said Mrs. Topper, smiling and tossing the sun-bonnet a little further on her head. "It's that his lordship's going to take up his residence at the Hall. Of course, you being a stranger—you won't mind me, miss?—it don't seem so important to you as it does to us as has lived here all our lives, and gets our living out of the place; but of course it makes all the difference to trade, having one of the gentry—and the only gentry, excepting yourselves at The Woodblines, of course, miss—a wanderin' about the face of the earth instead of settling down in his own house and among his own people. I can recollect when the Hall was as full as a hive with visitors, and us a-taking pounds and pounds a week for groceries—that was in the old lord's time—and it has seemed dreadful like to see the big house all empty, and not a pound of sugar or a loaf of bread a-goin' up to it from year's end to year's end."

"I think I must go now, Mrs. Topper," said Declina.

"Yes, miss; I'm a-dertain' of you! But, as I was saying, all that's come to a finish now; and we're going to begin fresh. Mrs. Murphy, she says that Mr. Bright was a-inquiring for maids—my gal's married, worse luck; or she'd be one—and men-servants; and I hear that Mr. Cobbet, the builder, is a-going up to the Hall to see about repairs and alterations—" As Declina edged toward the door she thought of Bobby, and smiled.

"—And there's to be three gardeners took on at once. Lor, it is a change, as you may say, miss, ain't it? It most takes my breath away; but I'm mortal glad, not only for the sake of trade, but for his lordship's own. Ah, miss, you've no idea of the stories as we've heard about him! Dreadful, poor gentleman! They do say as all London was a-ringing with his wildness. But, there! most of the nobility run wild some time or other, don't they? It's excusable, I suppose, and don't count against 'em, as it does against common folks."

Declina got her hand upon the door, and Mrs. Topper sailed round the counter after her.

"But that's all come to an end now; and I'm hoping, miss—she panted breathlessly—"that his lordship will settle down like an ordinary Christian, not to say county gentleman. You haven't seen him, miss, I suppose? A fine figure of a man and a handsome—like all the family. I can recollect him as a boy—such a fine, strong young fellow—if I may make so bold as to call him such—but dreful wild and reckless. Afraid of nothing, miss—nothing at all. I've seen him with these own eyes pop over that wall on his pony as if—'twere a kitchen fender. And fight! Why, he fought William Saunders' Tommy, as was drownin' a cat, until Tommy was like a jelly; and his lordship, though he'd got two black eyes, rode off whistling. Just like a Gaunt! It's in their blood, as you may say. And your father's well, miss, I hope and trust! There ain't no need to ask after Master Robert. It's a pleasure to see him a-going by with his handsome face and laughing eyes. He always calls out to me if he sees me at the door. 'Mother Topper' he calls me. But, Lor, I don't mind. And he's a-going to be a young officer, miss! Lor, what a fine figure of a soldier he'll make; and I hope I'll live to see him marchin' through the village with a band a-playin'!"

As Declina, almost as breathless as Mrs. Topper, opened the door and fled, Mrs. Topper called after her: "You'll give my best respects to the good gentleman, your father, miss, and to Mr. Robert, and I'll send the things."

Declina went down the street—it street it could be called—laughing, and almost ran into the arms of Mr. Bright, who was coming out of one of the cottages.

There was a smile of satisfaction on his good-natured countenance, which deepened as his good-tempered eyes rested on the lovely face and slim figure in its plain morning-dress.

"Oh, Miss Deane, good-morning! How do you do?" he said in cheery accents, and mopping his brow as he raised his hat. "I am very glad to see you. Hot, isn't it? But I've been rushing about—fearfully busy. Never had a more delightful morning's work, though, never! Are you going this way, and may I come with you for a minute or two? Thank you, thank you! The fact is, I wanted to tell you—some moment. Hi, Robins!" He called to a man who lumbered across the street to him. "Robins, come up to the Hall. I want you for some work at once. In half an hour, you understand; and bring two or three other men with you. Yes, I'm awfully busy," he went on to Declina. "Lord Gaunt's sudden return has brought a rush of work upon me—quite a rush. There's such a tremendous lot to do, and in such a short time. He talks of coming down at the end of the week, and not only talks of it, but means it. I'm to get as much of the Hall put straight in the time as I can, and the remainder afterwards. Been engaging servants all the morning, and wiring up to London for those I can't get here, and other things. The workmen will set to work to-day, or to-morrow at least. Lord Gaunt has given me carte blanche."

He laughed with satisfaction, and mopped his forehead again. "It was, 'Do what you like, but don't bother me with more than you can help.' Just like him. A strange man you'll think him, Miss Deane, but with all his abruptness and eccentricity, one of the best-hearted men in the world." He sighed and was silent for a moment.

"There's to be rather a large establishment. The horses are coming down at once. I'm sure I don't know how I shall get the stables ready. And, oh, Miss Deane—I—really—scarcely like to say it, for I'm afraid you'll think it presumptuous of his lordship—well, scarcely presumptuous, but——but strange."

"What is it, Mr. Bright?" asked Declina, smiling at his hesitation and nervousness.

"Well," he said, still reluctantly, "the fact is, that whenever I consulted Lord Gaunt about the house—I mean the things he would like to have done—he said, 'Ask Miss Deane; she promised to help you; I didn't.'"

Declina colored.

"I'll Oh, but—" Mr. Bright put his hand upon her arm with timid earnestness. "I was afraid you would think it strange. But you wouldn't feel offended if you knew Lord Gaunt as well as I do. It's his way to take things seriously. And you promised, you know; you promised!"

"Did I?" said Declina, with a faintly troubled look in her eyes.

"Yes, indeed you did. And—and see here, my dear young lady," he went on, earnestly and yet deprecatingly.

N. F. Board of Trade President is Optimistic

Mr. Brooks Gives Political Twist to Interview—High Prices in England Get Knock Out—Italian Labour Goes on Protest Strike—Toronto Preparing for Recurrence of Influenza.

HIGH COST OF LIVING OVER IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Oct. 14. The high cost of living in England at an end. "The war boom is over" according to London newspapers who announce the fact in prominently displayed streamers across their front pages. They indicate that the English are optimistic of giving a knock out blow very soon to remaining high prices. During the past six months the average fall in prices on raw materials has been thirty per cent. Rubber products have come down fifty per cent, tin has tumbled twenty-five per cent, copper six per cent, marine wool forty-five per cent, and American cotton thirty per cent. The sensational decline among food staples, however, was a thirty per cent drop in the price of sugar.

ITALIANS PROTEST STRIKE.

LONDON, Oct. 14. A two-hour nation wide general strike in Italy in protest against the arrest of political offenders who are opposing the Allied policy toward Russia, occurred to-day, says a Rome despatch to the "Exchange Telegraph." This strike was in effect from three o'clock to five this afternoon, during which time all trains were stopped.

Why Stay Fat?
The answer of most fat people is that exercise and dieting is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous a method to force the weight down. However, in Marmole's Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. They are absolutely harmless, entail no dieting or violent exercise, and have the added advantage of cheerfulness. One little tablet after each meal and at bedtime—no need to eat so candy—will reduce your weight two, three or four pounds a week, and leave no bad results such as wrinkles or flabby skin. A good size box is sold by druggists at the reasonable price of one dollar, or if preferable they may be obtained by sending the amount to the Marmole's Co., 94 Grenville Building, Detroit, Mich. They will reach you by mail, postpaid, in 10 days, sealed cover. Now that you know this you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce two, three or four pounds a week without fear of bad after-effects.

will weather the dull times with ease. Some of our young men are going to Canada and the United States but they usually do after the fishing season and most of them will return in plenty of time for next season. The lumber and pulp industry is prosperous and making good progress.

Freemasonry and the English Speaking People.

The Masonic Fraternity, throughout the English speaking world, has been for the past few years, and is now having a phenomenal growth in membership. This is undoubtedly a splendid sign, for it is from the loyal and fraternal teachings set forth in Masonic Lodges, that the world may be saved from the chaos of anarchy.

In speaking with brethren, hailing from the United States, we learn that the two million or more Masons in that land, at every opportunity offered, emphasize, by word and action, "the oneness of the English-speaking people."

The publisher, and editor of "The Watchman of Israel," a monthly journal published in Boston, in the interest of Anglo-Saxon Unity, in a recent letter to us points out, the unlikelihood of any difficulty arising between the United States and Canada by the many influences working in that land at the present time, by saying:

"Is there not a reason for the fact that the standing army of this country is practically domiciled on the Mexican borders instead of on the Canadian. It would be possible to have serious trouble with our southern neighbor, because of the unlikeliness of our ideals, but no serious trouble could ever take place between this country and yours (Canada) any more than your country could take up arms against England."

Freemasonry has played a very important part in welding together the different parts of the British Empire, and it is also doing a good deal towards fostering a oneness of ideals among the English speaking people throughout the world, even in spite of those who are endeavoring to foster the spirit of antagonism in the United States and Canada.—Masonic Sun.

The High Commissioner in Egypt.

Lord Allenby, the conqueror of the Turks, and now High Commissioner for Egypt, has arrived in England from Cairo on sick leave, and it is rumored that he will not return to Egypt. It is said that he does not wholly approve of the new policy with respect to Egypt, which will place a very large part of the control of affairs in the hands of the Egyptian Nationalists and will diminish the authority and prestige of the office Lord Allenby has been filling.

Lord Allenby is one of the big outstanding figures of the world-war. His name as liberator of Jerusalem and of the Holy Land from five centuries of Turkish thralldom, will ever shine brightly on the pages of British history.

Lord Allenby is an old Haileybury School boy, and as a soldier a son of the Inniskilling Dragoons, for it was with that famous corps that he began his military career. He began with the cavalry and when the world-war broke out he was given command of the cavalry that formed part of the first Expeditionary Force. Then he went to the East.

Tracts and Their Abuse.

We are a strong and firm believer in the widest possible toleration for all sects and creeds, but we do think that their advocates should exhibit a little common decency in their methods of pushing their business. Quite recently there have been certain peripatetic gentlemen making the rounds of the city and suburbs dropping pamphlets and letters at the doors presumably with the desire of enlightening the public and making them better and wiser. The pamphlet is calculated to do anything but this. Filled as it is with the most absurd and distorted applications of Scripture, it is likely to win few adherents. The language is painful English, and passage after passage is full of the coarsest and crudest abuse of all the "older established forms of Christianity, abuse that

A Third to a Half full of Carnation Milk—then fill up with water

THAT gives the children a rich, nourishing drink of pure, sweet cow's milk. Adding an equal portion of water restores Carnation Milk to the natural consistency—not of skimmed or separated milk—but of rich, "whole" milk.

It is gathered daily in Canada's best dairy centres. A part of the water is removed by evaporation, leaving a milk of creamy consistency. Fresh and sweet, it goes into clean, new containers. Then it is sterilized to insure purity.

In this form it goes to you in perfect safety and is kept until you are ready to use it. It is used as cream in tea and coffee, on cereals or fruit.

But for ordinary use add an equal quantity of water.

You always get milk of this quality from the Carnation condenseries.

It is rich. It is pure. It is absolutely safe.

Such quality in your milk supply—such freedom from bother—such assurance of safety—are due entirely to Carnation methods of distributing milk.

To start with, the milk is rich and pure.

There is no sugar or anything added to Carnation Milk, so it may be used for every household use.

"From Contented Cows"

could only emanate from the lowest strain of human ignorance. These writers seem to have as their only object the abuse of the authorities who refused to permit a lot of sabbled loafers to stay around while better men than they went to the front to save civilization from the assault of the brutal Huns and to protect Canada on the battlefields of Flanders. When the Empire and its Allies were menaced by the Kaiser and his legions; when the call came for men to flock to the colors, the man who suddenly found that he had a conscientious objection to going to war was not a man deserving of much sympathy or respect, let alone consideration. When the same man began to urge others to go and even to resist the impressment, that man was naturally and certainly inviting some rough attention which he got and he deserved. When, still further than this, he began to talk pro-Germanism, the mere excuse of being a Bible student or pursuing Bible studies was not sufficient to excuse him from prosecution and imprisonment. The Founder of Christianity never said that it was sinful for a man to defend his country, and no man can point to any such statement emanating from that source. Britain's cause in the great war was a just cause by every test of justice which may be applied, and for men dwelling on British soil and enjoying the protection of its laws and its power to express pro-German sentiments, to have pro-German books in their possession, to talk treason and refuse to obey our laws, no punishment can be too severe and no severity can serve to win our sympathy. Our advice to these people is: Obey the laws, stand of trial, respect and cease to abuse the opinions of others, then you will have nothing of which to complain.—Acadian Recorder.

Nature's Acrobat.

The weasel has been called the acrobat of Nature. It performs every kind of acrobatic feat. It does not, however, perform merely for the pleasure to be obtained from the performance, nor yet to give pleasure to others. There is a far more deadly purpose behind its somersaults. The weasel adopts this method of approaching its victims with a view to attacking them. It does not attempt to hide itself from its prey, but gradually performing all the time, approaches nearer and still nearer until within striking distance of its unsuspecting prey.

His Slack Time.

Dr. George Clarke Simpson, the new Director of the Meteorological Office, tells this story apropos of the atrocious weather of last July, and the early part of August. A motor-coach (he says) was about to start from Ludgate Circus for a tour round London, and amongst the passengers was a re-tired individual, evidently an Indian Paragon. "What sort of a chap is that?" asked the driver of the conductor, in a stage whisper. "I fancy that 'is come off' them 'fellers wot worships the sun!' coz he 's the reg'lar in an umbrella." "Works up the sun, eh?" repeated the driver, with a shiver. "Then I suppose the rooms over 'ere to 'ave a blinkin' rest!"

Her English Maid.

Mme. Calve, the famous prima donna, who is to retire after a career of twenty-five years in grand opera, is fond of telling this story against herself.

"I once," she says, "had an English maid. She was a thorough good girl, truthful, honest and obliging. But she lacked tact. 'One day I had occasion to make a train journey, and as I was entirely alone I took her with me in the same compartment for company. 'Presently she noticed that a rope of pearls I usually wore was missing, and in a sudden panic she exclaimed: 'Oh, madam, where are your pearls?' 'At home in the safe,' I told her, adding that I never wore them when travelling. 'Oh, dear, what a pity!' commented the maid. 'They make you look like a real lady.'"

To-Day's Messages.

KILLING OCEAN FREIGHTS.
NEW YORK, Oct. 14. Some shippers say that the action of United States Shipping Board in removing restrictions will mean the cutting of ocean rates to a level where it will be impossible to meet operating expenses. The market now shows an allround drop of a dollar per ton, owing to the spot boats offering in excess of requirements.

A NEWFOUNDLANDER AMONG CREW.
PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., Oct. 14. The steamer James Carruthers collided with United States steamship Surveyor in a hurricane Tuesday night off Green Island. The Surveyor, a much larger vessel, was carrying seventy-four men on their way from Alaska. The Carruthers tore a hole in Surveyor about eight feet above the water line, which was soon patched. The impact put the Carruthers in a sinking condition, and four men are missing from her. They are James Mansfield, Newfoundland, Alex. Murray, Nova Scotia, C. Kerr, Scotland, and George Anderson, Norway.

THE BEGINNING.
MONTREAL, Oct. 14. A decline in the price of butter and of beef was reported at the Bonsecours market here to-day. Butter is fifty cents per pound and one cent cheaper for the consumer. Beef has dropped about a cent per pound.

THE WORST OVER.
LONDON, Oct. 14. A War Office report says that a review of the war situation in Mesopotamia gives hope that our worst troubles are over.

GERMANY GETS THE ORDER.
OTTAWA, Oct. 14. Canada has lost an order for two thousand steel railway cars, which the Belgian Government through the Canadian Trade Commission sought to place with manufacturers in this country. Instead of "Made in Canada" cars, Belgians will ride in coaches of "Made in Germany" variety, when the order is filled. Advice to the Trade Commission are to the effect that Belgium has placed the order with Germany, and will pay for railway material with food stuffs, which are to be supplied to Germany.

PEACE TREATY SIGNED.
HELSINGFORS, Oct. 14. Russo-Finnish peace treaty was signed to-day at Dorpat.

TO DISCUSS SUGAR.
OTTAWA, Oct. 14. The Federal Government has suspended the Board of Commerce order respecting sugar, until a hearing can take place before the Governor in Council on October twenty. The Prime Minister, in view of this hearing, has postponed his western trip for one week.

LOYD GEORGE'S STATEMENT.
LONDON, Oct. 14. After consulting with Sir Robert Horne, President of the Board of Trade to-day, Lloyd George replied to the Miners Executive to the effect that the Government had exhausted every effort to prevent calamity, had explored, and was still ready to explore, every avenue which might lead to a peaceful solution.

RIOT CASUALTIES.
ROME, Oct. 15. Eleven persons were killed and one hundred wounded, during rioting at San Giovanni Rotondo yesterday.

QUAKER CITY MAN ELECTED.
TOKIO, Oct. 15. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, was elected President of the World's Sunday School Association at yesterday's session of the organization here.

NAILS AS PASSPORTS.
HALLE, Germany, Oct. 14. "When we left for Moscow, several months ago, Daumig and Stoeker, members of the German economic mission to Russia, advised me to fill my pockets with iron nails, one of which they said would readily be accepted in Russia for courtesy or service." This information was conveyed by Herr Criespen to delegates of the Independent Socialist convention yesterday.

AGREES TO EXCHANGE.
LONDON, Oct. 15. Leonid Krassin, Soviet representative here, has sent a note to Earl Curzon, Foreign Secretary, agreeing to begin an exchange of prisoners across the Finnish frontier.

WELL SUBSCRIBED.
DUBLIN, Oct. 15. The Sinn Fein Republican lean, floated in Ireland, Great Britain and France, realised three hundred and seventy-two thousand pounds, according to a statement of Sinn Fein yesterday.

KILLED IN STREET FIGHTING.
LONDON, Oct. 15. A Dublin despatch says three civilians were shot dead and more than thirty wounded in a Talbot Street affair yesterday. The district, last evening, was in a state of high excitement and several raids were being carried out.

ASQUITH, CARSON AND LLOYD GEORGE.

LONDON, Oct. 14. The political tempest, which has been aroused by recent pronouncements of prominent men on the Irish problem, notably by Premier Lloyd George, Viscount Grey and former Premier Asquith, received a fresh impetus to-day when Asquith bitterly attacked Lloyd George, while at the same time Sir Edward Carson, Ulster Unionist leader, made an equally acrimonious assault on Asquith. Speaking at Asquith with reference to Lloyd George's Welsh address, Asquith declared that "the Premier's flippancies, and all his vulgarities have not diverted, and cannot divert, attention from the outstanding fact of his confession of political bankruptcy." He said that the Premier's speech would be interpreted as at least condoning reprisals in Ireland. Regarding reprisals, Asquith said he was confident that when Parliament reassembled it would insist upon an independent and impartial inquiry into reprisal cases, which "were not acts of self defence, but of blind vengeance."

POLES MUST LEAVE VIENNA.
PARIS, Oct. 15. Leon Bourgeois, President of the Council of the League of Nations, told Ignace Jan Paderewski, former Polish Premier, yesterday that the occupation of Vienna by Polish troops is in violation of the undertaking of Poland to the League. Should Vienna not be evacuated speedily, the League would be obliged to convene and examine the situation, which could only be regarded as serious, said M. Bourgeois.

ANOTHER TOUR.
LONDON, Oct. 15. The Prince of Wales announces that before long he hopes to visit South and East Africa.

WHOLLY SUCCESSFUL.
NEW YORK, Oct. 15. John W. Davis, United States Ambassador to Britain, said in a speech last night that the League of Nations up to the present time had been entirely successful. "It was never designed to take over and solve by mere magic the multiple troubles which the Great War has brought upon mankind," said the speaker.

WORK SUSPENDED.
LONDON, Oct. 15. Italian despatches say there were only partial suspensions of work in Rome Thursday. Rioting in Bologna was due to Extremists attacking police station. The dead in the city include two policemen. It was quiet last night, but work was suspended to-day as a sign of mourning for those killed in street fighting.

FREE PASS FOR WITNESSES.
NEW YORK, Oct. 15. Committee of one hundred on Ireland has received letters both from the British Embassy and Eamonn De Valera, giving assurances that no reprisals will be attempted on either side against witnesses who come to the United States from Ireland to testify at the public enquiry into conditions in Ireland to be inaugurated at Washington in November.

MINERS DECIDE FOR STRIKE.
LONDON, Oct. 15. The British Government this morning put an embargo on coal export, effective immediately. This move is the result of threat of coalminers strike, beginning Monday. Miners conference decided to-day, in view of unsatisfactory reply of Government to their latest communication that there was no course but to inform districts that work in mines will cease to-morrow.

SHORT OF STORAGE.—Owing to shortage of storage space, the police were obliged this morning to remove 2 barrels of essence used in the manufacture of "moonshine," and they are now outside the lockup door with the heads removed. A good opportunity to secure the nucleus of a thriving industry awaits somebody, as the police do not know what to do with the stuff.

North Sydney Murder Case.

PRISONER ADMITTED TO BAIL.

North Sydney, Oct. 12.—Intense interest was manifested at the preliminary hearing of Duncan Macdonald, which commenced yesterday morning in the court house, at 11 o'clock before Stipendiary Archibald. Long before the hour set for the trial, groups of men gathered together and discussed the case, and in every instance while deep regret was expressed over the tragic affair, universal sympathy went out to the young prisoner, one of whose children died this morning.

The court room was crowded. D. A. Cameron, representing the defence, spent a short time in consultation with his client. The latter, however, was not brought up from his cell, as Crown Prosecutor Carroll was not present. D. D. McKenzie, acting for the crown, was also present, and waited patiently for the arrival of Mr. Carroll. Finally the attorneys for the prosecution and defence agreed to adjourn the hearing until 2 o'clock when it was expected Mr. Carroll would be on hand.

The police were busy serving subpoenas on Friday and Saturday, and it is understood a large number of witnesses will be heard.

At ten o'clock this morning Duncan Macdonald, who for the past two weeks was incarcerated in the local jail in connection with the death of Mary Molins on the night of Sept. 9th, was liberated, and is to-day receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

The seeming unnecessary delays in bringing the trial to a head, coupled with the sad death of his nine-year-old child while he was a prisoner, helped the Crown in granting bail to the young chauffeur and automobile expert.

The amount paid by the Crown was $20,000, and two sureties, R. E. Whitman and Dr. Rindress in the sum of $5,000 each.

The preliminary hearing will take place next Tuesday morning before Stipendiary Archibald, in the court house.

DOING EVANGELISTIC WORK IN U. S. A.

Rev. George W. Ridout, D.D., formerly of St. John's, Nfld., is now engaged in special evangelistic work. He was appointed by Bishop Berry at Atlantic City, N.J., Conference Evangelist. During the summer Dr. Ridout has preached in St. John, N.B., Des Moines, Iowa, also in meetings in Illinois and Mississippi. He is now engaged in an evangelistic campaign in Beacon St. Methodist Church, Bath, Maine. He next goes to Bonton, New Jersey, then back to Maine for another meeting. His home is at 6327 North 21st Street, Philadelphia, Pa. He has charge of the Annual Convention for the Deeper Life in Philadelphia, Nov. 5-14. During 1921 Dr. Ridout may be evangelizing in the East somewhat, and hopes in the near future to visit Newfoundland and hold a series of evangelistic services.

During his meeting at Bath, Maine, the Daily Times reported as follows: Large congregations greet Evangelist.

Good sized congregations greeted Dr. G. W. Ridout, Evangelist, at the Beacon St. Methodist Church revival services Sunday at both services. In the morning service the Evangelist spoke of the Message of the Holy Spirit. It was a stirring message for the church folk and the close attention of the congregation evidenced their deep interest. The Evangelist also addressed the Sunday School session.

At the evening service the Evangelist used as his subject "The Kaiser and the Prophet Daniel." He told how at the signing of the armistice he applied at the headquarters in Paris for the privilege to do the work of a clergyman for which he had been especially trained. They sent him to work among American troops in Germany. He described his visit to the cathedral in Metz where he saw the statue of the Prophet Daniel from which the head had been removed and that of the Kaiser had replaced it. From that story he showed the great contrast between the Kaiser and the ## Turn Your Rain Coat Into an Overcoat.

Overcoat prices are going to be high this winter, and overcoats no better. $70, $80, $90, sound dolefully to the ears of your pocket-book, eh? Why not turn your raincoat into an overcoat? And that's where we step into the breach. Yes, sir, when we present one of our cosy lamb's fleece linings to your admiring gaze your sense of comfort will rise in rejoicing and your pocket-book shout hurrah! For here's the solution to high overcoat prices.

Fleece Interlinings for Raglans, Raincoats, and Overcoats.

Buttons inside your own raincoat, remains invisible; the only difference it makes is in your added comfort. The whole combination weighs scarcely half as heavy as a winter coat. Bring this with you and you are prepared for any weather, rain, hail or snow—or shine. In summer just unbutton the lining and wear the coat in the ordinary way. An overcoat can be worn only for one season; fit your raincoat or raglan with a fleece lining and you can wear it all through the year. Yes, it sure does put the half-Nelson on the weather.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE MEANEST FORM OF SELF-DEFENSE.

There is a certain way which some people have of meeting rebuke or criticism which seems to me the meanest, most exasperating form of self-defense that I know.

I refer to the method of refutation by exaggeration.

Here is the sort of thing I mean: A wife reproaches her husband because he comes home late on an evening when he has promised to get home extra early and take her to the movies. He delayed for conversation for her business; his wife has to keep his supper for him and miss the movies which she has been looking forward to all day. He might say he was sorry, but it is about as easy for an elephant to get through the eye of a needle as for the average man to say he has been wrong. The thing can do no wrong and every man is king in his own house. Therefore, he must defend himself. And so he says, "Yes, just because I'm a few minutes late once in a while I'm the worst husband in town. I guess you don't know when you're well off. I've a good mind to give you something to really complain of."

Now, she hasn't said he was the worst husband in town; she has simply said that he was mean to forget about his promise—which he was.

A Blow Below the Belt.

And to make a defense like that, which sidesteps the issue and tries to put your opponent in the wrong in an utterly unfair way, is the sign of meanness—it is the blow below the belt in the family sparring match.

Maybe it's the husband who is the rick. He complains with justice that something was not properly cooked. Whereupon his wife, instead of finding out what the trouble is and making up her mind to do it better next time, dissolves in tears, declaring, "Nothing I do ever suits you. I wish I were dead," and so on and so on.

Sometimes it's a Last Straw. Of course there are times when a single criticism coming as the last straw on top of constant fault-finding may precipitate such a counter-accusation. But we have all known people who used this method to fend off any attack at all. A further development of the method is, "Yes, everything I do is wrong. Of course you're perfect, you wouldn't ever do anything that wasn't perfect."

It is very hard to defend one's self against such unprincipled attacks. One's best defense lies in contemptuous silence, and the surety that it is only weakness that makes an opponent seize on such a poor weapon.

Prince of Wales.

Visits a Masonic Lodge in Honolulu. "Sitting" with royalty was no new experience to some of the older brethren of Honolulu, but meeting H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in a lodge was a decided novelty, and the function will never be forgotten by those privileged to have part in it.

While the great battleship was still several hundred miles at sea there had been wireless in the intimation or "command" that the heir to the British Crown, while sojourning in Honolulu "desired to meet his Masonic brethren." Appropriate reply was made by Brother Jas. F. Fenwick, district inspector for the Grand Lodge of California. A meeting was called and given a place on the official programme.

A deputation of the brethren, headed by the inspector, met the Renown in the fairway, and the party was taken aboard at once. Here the Prince, Admiral Halsey and several other Masons gathered in a room arranged for the occasion. Greetings completed for the lodge session ashore.

Promptly at 8 o'clock in the evening the royal visitor with his brethren from the ship entered the crowded lodge room. Worshipful Master Lester Petrie extended a welcome, while the callers stood at the altar, and they invited the Prince and several of his party to the east, where they took their seats at once.

Grand Master Adams, of California, who happened to be visiting the Island lodges, in a felicitous address presented the Prince with a small silver trowel, having a handle of a beautiful polished native wood, koa.

In accepting the gift His Royal Highness spoke for five minutes on the condition of the craft in the British Empire, and expressed his delight over the opportunity afforded for communication with his brethren upon American soil.—New England Craftsman.

USEFUL BILL.

I watched Old Wilhelm as he wrought, and I knowed the stately yew trees cold, while down his regal dome of thought the sweat of honest effort rolled. Of old this Wilhelm seemed no good, when he was hoodooed by a crown; yet now he whacks up cords of wood—you cannot keep a good man down. There is no nobler task than his, now coal is scarce and hard to get; I watch him make his bucksaw whiz, and cry, "Old Bill's our one best bet." When he was ruler of our one best bet, he earned no high and rich reward, such as she earns while sawing elm and pulling down six bits a cord; now, when he goes to roost at night, he has no crimes or' which to fret; the record of his day is white, and Wilhelm is our one best bet. If we all do as Wilhelm does, and ply our bucksaws in the sun, the bats that in our bellies buzz would find their fettle errands done. We ply the swift and tireless jaw until its hinges creak and smoke, when we should weld the trenchant saw and pile up ricks of helpful oak.

Just Folks

NO CHILDREN.

No children in the house to play! It must be hard to live that way! I wonder what the people do when night comes on and work is through. With no glad little folks to shout, No eager feet to race about, No youthful tongues to chatter on About the joy that's been and gone? The house might be a castle fine, But what a lonely place to dine!

No children in the house at all. No fingermarks upon the wall. No corner where the toys are piled—Sure indication of a child—No little lips to breathe the prayer That God shall keep you in His care, No glad caress and welcome sweet When night returns you to your street, No little lips to kiss to give—Oh, what a lonely way to live!

No children in the house! I fear We could not stand it half a year. What would we talk about at night, Plan for and work with all our might, Hold common dreams about and find True union of heart and mind. If we two had no greater care Than what we both should eat and wear? We never knew love's brightest flame Until the day the baby came.

And now we could not get along Without their laughter and their song. Joy is not bottled on a shelf, It cannot feed upon itself, And even love, if it shall wear, Must find its happiness in care; Dull we'd become of mind and speech Had we no little ones to teach. No children in the house to play! Oh, we could never live that way!

Where Land May Not Be Sold.

More than 600 years B.C. this law was written into the code of Palestine: "The land shall not be sold in perpetuity." And that is to be the law in the Palestine which is to be developed through the return of the descendants of the ancient inhabitants. Sir Herbert Samuel, administrator of Palestine, has announced that ownership of land will not carry the right to sell. Title to occupation and use may be conveyed to heirs and land may remain in control of a family from generation to generation, but it may not be disposed of as a commodity. In the ancient days when land passed into the hands of others than the original owner or his heirs, the alienation was temporary. Every fifty years, in the year of jubilee, all land that had been alienated returned to its first possessor or his heirs or lawful representative, and the occupant during the time of alienation was required to pay the original owner a sum based upon the number of harvests he had gathered. The new Palestine rule eliminates the jubilee restoration by beginning with a prohibition that invalidates any transfers.

Household Notes.

If boiled starch is left over, put it into the water with which linoleum is washed. It will keep it bright and new. Bake oranges like apples. Cut a slice off the top of each to form a lid, and insert a little sugar and lemon juice. An excellent gargle for sore throat is made with one-third teaspoonful of salt in a glass of tepid water.

To save your eyes while learning a new pattern of Irish crochet, practice with a large hoop and wrapping string.

A perforated cover for the frying pan prevents grease splattering, saves time and allows the food to brown nicely.

A teaspoonful of corn or rice starch sifted with the salt will make it flow easily from cellars in damp weather.

Medicines should be bought in small quantities, as with keeping some lose their strength and others grow stronger.

When mixing mustard for a mustard plaster, use tepid water, as hot water destroys the medicinal properties of mustard.

The addition of a tablespoonful of fruit juice and a half cupful of almonds, blanched and chopped, makes hard sauce delicious.

Lamp chimneys washed in ammonia water and dried with a soft cloth and polished with tissue paper will shine beautifully.

If water is sprinkled over the newspaper before emptying the vacuum cleaner bag upon it, the dust will

King George as Critic.

King George, like his father, is wonderfully quick in detecting any irregularity in uniform or ceremonial dress. A striking instance of the King's regard for accuracy, and quickness in detecting any departure, was displayed when their Majesties went to Mr. Bertram Mackennal's studio to inspect the sculptor's model of the King Edward Memorial Statue. They were at once struck with the fine resemblance which the distinguished Australian sculptor had secured and expressed their approval of his work in very flattering terms. But the King had detected an inaccuracy in the dress. Mr. Mackennal had represented the late Sovereign in full Field-Marshal's uniform wearing the ribbon of the Royal Victorian Order. He at once pointed out that his father when in Field-Marshal's full dress always wore the broad ribbon of the Garter and the Jewel of that order.

To be used to help adjust the unnormal differences between the decreased prices of our fish and the increased prices of our every day requirements!

To the Public of Newfoundland---St. John's in Particular:

Our main industry—fish—is not bringing prices that it has the past four years. Canada is not getting the same prices for her dependable products, the United States of America is still worse off than Canada and Newfoundland, losing her enormous export trade due to the war; consequently the immediate depression in all three countries, and from same causes the whole world.

In Canada and the States merchants are trying to adjust the purchasing power of the people with their earning power, by disposing of the millions of dollars worth of Merchandise at unprecedented reductions.

Here in Newfoundland face the same conditions that other countries are now going through.

STARTING FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 15,

and continuing for Three Weeks

We, THE LONDON, NEW YORK and PARIS ASSOCIATION OF FASHION of St. John's, connecting ourselves with no other firm in this town, have decided to offer to the general public of this country a weapon in the form of $120,000 worth of wearing apparel for Men, Women and Children at prices that will forever be remembered by our population as a duplicate of prices gone by.

Words and unfulfilled deeds are not worth the paper they are written on these days.

The only method to adjust things to-day in our Newfoundland is by our method.

WE OFFER MERCHANDISE AT AN IMMENSE LOSS TO OURSELVES

but we do it merrily, because we are compelled to do it now or later; and just when everybody requires their Fall and Winter Wares, we feel justified in giving the public the benefit now, because later our effort would be as nil, because the public would be all bought up and consequently would not be able to stand behind this most beneficial movement for all concerned.

WE WANT THE WHOLE TOWN TO MARCH DOWN HERE FOR THE NEXT 3 WEEKS. We must have the backing of the whole town, otherwise our effort will be useless; and we believe every Man, Woman and Child in this town are waiting patiently for the day when everybody will do as we are to do.

The Herring Fishery.

The fall herring fishery season is approaching, and preparations are being made for that industry. Recent arrivals from New York have told us that there promises to be a very good demand for large and medium grades of Newfoundland herring by the Scotch pack; but of the smaller grades of fish the market is somewhat glutted by large shipments from Alaska. So far as we can learn, there will likely be as many packing factories in operation here as last year. It is a little early yet to know definitely just what number of vessels will be here seeking salt bulk cargoes, but we have heard of some that are coming, and on a whole it looks as though the demand for the fish will equal that of last year.

Owing to the high cost of gear many of the fishermen are not purchasing any new outfit this season and some of them are contemplating not engaging in the voyage at all. However, the appearance of the fish might have a different effect and it is quite likely that the voyage this fall will be prosecuted with all the old time vigor of past seasons.—Western Star.

New Mail Service for Newfoundland.

We understand it is proposed to maintain a steamship mail and passenger service the coming winter between Canada and Newfoundland, via Halifax and Argentina. It is claimed this service would escape all ice interruption experienced more or less on the Cabot Strait route. We have made some enquiries and learn that the cross country express is not likely to be continued during the coming winter. It is proposed, however, so we understand, to operate the freight train service should weather conditions over the Gaff Topsails permit. It is now thought that the new super-heated engines that have been ordered for the cross-country railway will not be delivered until some time in the new year.—Western Star.

Manufacturer Alleges Waste of Power.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—During this week and for an indefinite time all local industries are closed during the afternoons, owing to the lack of electric power due to some repairs being made at Petty Harbour.

This has thrown out of employment a large number of workmen. In view of this serious condition, why are the cinema theatres (using a large amount of current) supplied with power for amusement purposes? The industrial workers are being sacrificed to provide amusement, as at least a half dozen factories could be operated with the current used on the high-powered machines at the nickels.

Yours truly,
MANUFACTURER.

Curley Returning.

Curlew returned to Labrador in September, after an absence of many years, and good bags were made by the fishermen who on off days, covered the marshes in quest of this succulent bird. It is a remarkable coincidence that curlew forsook Labrador at the same time as the herring took their departure from its waters. This year it has been remarked that a better sign of herring occurred than for many years previously. The above fact has been communicated by a very old fisherman, and one whose knowledge of Labrador conditions and natural history are second to none.

Obituary.

On October 13th, at Seldom, Mrs. Dinah Penney entered into her rest. Deceased was 99 years old, and retained all her faculties to the end. She was ailing for about a month but only kept her bed one day before she died. She leaves to mourn their sad loss, two brothers, four daughters, one son, 33 grandchildren, a number of great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren, many relatives and a large circle of friends, who will grieve with sorrow and tear upon the vacant arm-chair. She was familiarly known to all as "Grandma."

"When the day of toil is done,
When the race of life is run,
Father, grant Thy weary one Rest for evermore."

Not All Gold That Glitters.

Levi Bellows, who went to Western Canada to seek employment, has returned home. He found things out west very much different to what he expected and the trip cost him over a hundred dollars. We hear that others will be returning home just as soon as they can scrape together what it cost them to go.—Western Star.

The Love That Came to Michael Angelo.

(By Thornton Hall, in John O'London's Weekly.)

In the early years of our eighth Henry there was no more enviable woman in all Italy than Vittoria, Marchesa di Pescara. From her cradle Fortune smiled her sweetest on this daughter of the great princely house of Colonna; for, in addition to her heritage of birth and splendour, she was dowered with a rare loveliness and with no less rare gifts of mind and graces of character.

The little Princess "with the dazzling sun-crowned head and heart of pure gold," had barely seen her fourth birthday when she was affianced to Francesco d'Avalos, son of the great Neapolitan noble, Alphonso, Marchese di Pescara; and the next twelve years the child-lovers spent together in the Pescara Palace, on the island of Ischia—running wild and free on the shore or in the woods of their beautiful island, studying together, and ideally happy in their mutual companionship and devotion. And Vittoria's happiness was crowned when, one day in 1509, they were married, and they made their home together on their beloved island.

The Knight Who Did Not Return. Then followed three golden years of love and splendour and gaiety before her husband was called away to fight against France. And that day the gate of her earthly paradise closed on her; for the years that followed were long years of lonely and anxious waiting. Once he returned to her arms, a sorely-stricken man, but after a few weeks of perilous happiness he was called back again to war, and she never saw him again. He fell, fighting valiantly, on the field of Pavia, and her life was left desolate.

For long years Vittoria mourned her dead knight, shutting herself away from the world in Ischia, alone with her grief, and finding solace in writing those exquisite sonnets which raised to his memory an undying monument of fame. And it was not until middle-age was creeping over her that she at last emerged from her seclusion, to devote herself to good works. But time and sorrow had only served to ripen her beauty.

A Sad Old Man.

It was at this time—in 1538—that Vittoria went to Rome, and in the Sistine Chapel—where he was painting his immortal fresco; "The Last Judgment"—first set eyes on Michael Angelo, of whose fame as the supreme sculptor of his day, as well as artist and poet, she had long heard. A sad old man of sixty-three Michael Angelo is described at this time, the loneliest. "Alone before Heaven," he laments in one of his poems, "I have no friends; I need none; I wish for none." His fame, great as it was, had brought him no happiness.

And it was just when the gaunt, grizzled artist, with the awful majesty of soul and brain, had abandoned all hope of love, that it came to him, when looking down from his lofty perch in the Sistine Chapel his eyes fell on the sweet upturned face of the golden-haired Vittoria, who had at last come out of her great tribulation into a great peace.

Nine Years of Worship.

"What a man Michael Angelo would have become," says Grimm, "had fate led him to know Vittoria in his younger years; and had she met him then, when she was herself less wearied by years and experience!" Now she had nothing to give him but kindly gentleness sympathy, and friendship, while he gave to her the whole long-garnered and restrained love of a lifetime. He was a boy again, with all a boy's passionate ardour, and his idolatry of the loved one. He was transported to heaven when he went to see her in her villa on the outskirts of Rome; in their long and intimate conversations every moment was for him "a delight beyond all imaginings." She was the inspiration of his most exquisite sonnets. And though he knew that she had no love to give him, that her heart was buried with her dead hero, he was grateful for every smile and gracious word that expressed her sympathy and her friendship. For the rest, he cherished an unshakable hope that her love would be his "beyond the veil."

For nine years Michael Angelo worshipped at her shrine. And then came that tragic day of agony when he watched the life that was so unspeakably dear to him ebb away.

The Parting.

He hung over that death-couch, we are told, in such an agony of grief that he almost lost his senses. Only the majesty of the dying lady kept him calm, for her sake; so that when the last hour was come and Vittoria whispered to him, "I am dying. Help me to repeat my last prayer; I cannot now remember the words," he was able to command himself and to murmur with her that beautiful supplication, closing: "I entreat, O most Holy Father, that Thy most living flame may so urge me forward that, not being hindered by any mortal imperfections, I may happily and safely again return to Thee."

Before the prayer ended, Vittoria's voice had sunk into silence, and Michael Angelo was left to finish it alone. Then, as he knelt by her bedside, his lips pressed to her cold hand, she turned to him, and a smile trembled on her lips while she murmured some words he could not hear. So passed from earth the spirit of Vittoria Colonna.

For seventeen years Michael Angelo survived the woman he had loved so well, during which her spirit was always with him, moving him "to gain a fourth crown by the verses he wrote to her." And to his last day it was his great lament that he had "never kissed her, save on the hand."

Home of Earthquakes.

Italy's latest disastrous earthquake has visited a district that usually suffers only minor tremors put into motion by the volcanic disturbances of Mount Vesuvius and Etna. That these exceedingly active volcanoes are extending fields of violence seems assured from the fact that Vesuvius is located well down within the instep of the Italian "boot," while Etna is still further south on the island of Sicily, just across the narrow straits of Messina from the extreme end of the toe.

These last shocks confined themselves almost entirely to Northern Italy, extending from Florence, the southernmost victim of the quakes, to Milan on the north. But the disturbances at Milan were more or less mild, the great undulations being between Florence and Modena, which is about half way between Florence and Milan.

Southern Italy has been visited by numerous disastrous earthquakes, the first of which there is any reliable record occurring at Catania, Sicily, in the year 1157, when 15,000 people lost their lives. In 1456 there were severe shocks in the vicinity of Naples, statistics of that day allotting a total of 40,000 persons to its toll of human life, while Sicily was again the victim of nature's wrath in the year 1693, when the huge total of 100,000 inhabitants paid the penalty for living so close to Mount Vesuvius and Etna. Great tidal waves washed in over the low shores of the island and added materially to both life and property loss on this occasion. Aquila furnished the ground for the next momentous quake, with a loss of 5,000, which seems small when compared with previously recorded catastrophes.

We now come to the first record of an earthquake in the northern districts of Italy, severe disturbances occurring in the Abruzzi section during 1706, exacting a toll of 15,000 lives and much property damage. As most of this northern part is mountainous it is probable that the property damage was not in as great a proportion as the loss of life.

No quake of any consequence has since visited Northern Italy until the recent one, but it may preface disturbances of a similar nature telegraphed up to that sector through the successive stratas of the Apennines, influenced by the powerful volcanic forces generated by Mount Vesuvius and Etna.

In 1726 the scene of earthquake operations again makes its appearance in Sicily. The brunt of these shocks is borne by the city of Palermo and vicinity, which is on the opposite side of the island from Mount Etna. The loss of 6,000 lives resulted, while many other thousands were rendered homeless. Just six years later Naples had a succession of tremors that reduced its population by 1,900, which is indeed a comparatively small loss for the usual earthquake of Southern Italy. Things then went along quietly enough in an earthquake way, with the exception of the many slight tremors coming yearly, to which the average inhabitant pays little attention, until the year 1783, when the Calabria district experienced one of the worst quakes since becoming the toe of Italy's "boot." This disturbance was possibly caused by the nearness of the volcano to Mount Etna, which is just across the narrow straits of Messina. It is recorded that 25,000 people lost their lives in this catastrophe.

Twenty-two years later Mount Vesuvius evidently got in another one of its telling blows by causing a severe series of quakes in the Naples district, the loss of life being placed at 6,000 and the property damage correspondingly high. In 1835 Calabria again suffered a loss of 1,000 inhabitants from what they considered a minor shake, but the more disastrous one following it in 1857 increased its human toll to 10,000.—New York Tribune.

Huge Silencers.

For Internal Combustion Engines. Eight ships now sailing the Pacific Ocean are equipped with great silencers weighing 8,000 pounds each, the invention of Hiram Percy Maxim, famous as the inventor of the gun silencer bearing his name. If successful, the "newest" Maxim silencer may stimulate the tendency toward general substitution of the speedier, more economical oil-burning vessels driven by the super-powerful engines of the Diesel type for the present-day steamers. "The motor-driven ship is the ship of the future," Mr. Maxim said recently. "However, in the past there has been one great disadvantage, the terrific noise of the motors. The new silencer we expect will solve that problem." Mr. Maxim said that inasmuch as his patents had not been issued, he can not disclose the construction of his new invention. However, in general principle it is not unlike other Maxim silencers, depending on accomplishing its work by absorbing the recoil and hence silencing the terrific exhaust.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE PRINCE.

LONDON, Sept. 27th, 1920.
So far the Prince of Wales has no plans about what he will do when he gets back to England. It has been long for a long rest, and the King and Queen would doubtless prefer this. The Prince, however, is an independent young man, and prefers to make his own arrangements. Quite probably he will decide to attend the Lord Mayor's banquet on November 9th, when he would be the guest of honour.

ADMIRALTY ARCH APPROACH.

It is now a matter of fact that the Admiralty Arch at the East End of the Mall, in St. James's Park, has been plotted, and a comparatively narrow approach to it from Charing Cross was provided. The war caused six years' delay in completing the scheme, but it now promises to go forward. Offices for an insurance company are about to be rebuilt, and when this is done a temporary building which at present is much in the way will be demolished. Then the approach to the Arch will be 90 feet wide, and a fine vista from Trafalgar Square along the Mall to Buckingham palace will be fully opened up. The insurance company's new building is to be of a design appropriate to the site, and will have a colonnaded front. The scheme carries out proposals of a joint committee representing H. M. Office of Works, the London County Council, and the Westminster City Council, and each of these authorities will bear a third of the cost. The improvement will add immensely to the appearance of the locality. People will also more fully realise that the Mall is really in almost a straight line with the Strand.

HEAVIER THEATRE SCENERY.

Producers now favor heavier scenery at the London theatres. At the Playhouse the single scene required for the three acts of "Wedding Bells" is built up of pure walnut, and is so heavy that it is never moved after the performance. In "Oh! Julie," at the Shaftesbury all three scenes are solidly built up on wooden foundations, and there will be some difficulty in moving it to the Prince's Theatre, as none of the "sets" can be folded up, as is the case with the scenery of touring productions. At the Royalty Theatre a very solid dining room scene is used in the first and third acts of "The Romantic Young Lady," the doors of which really slam. Fred Terry always insists on using furniture that really belongs to the periods of his different historical plays, although the weight of old oak adds to the cost of touring.

THE GERMAN AMBASSADOR.

Soon after the Court returns to London the King will have to receive the German Ambassador, Herr von Sthamer, and also the members of his suite. It will be interesting to notice whether von Sthamer will don uniform for the occasion. Up to now he has merely represented his country here as a Charge des Affaires, who does not need to present his credentials to the King, but an Ambassador attached to the Court of St. James's must do this. Moreover, once an Ambassador has presented his credentials, he can seek an audience of the King without asking the British Foreign Secretary to arrange it for him, whereas a Minister has to make the request through the Foreign Office. Another special mark of attention paid to an Ambassador newly-appointed to this country is that the King directs that one of the Royal ceremonial coaches shall bring the Ambassador to the Palace for the ceremony of presenting credentials.

FALLING COST OF HOUSEBUILDING.

A new competitive element in housing construction is introduced in the form of contracts now before local authorities in different parts of the country. A London firm has reduced its original offer to one Midland corporation for the building of 380 cottages by £160,000, undertaking to erect each dwelling with concrete at a net cost of $3,000, as against the average cost of brick houses at $3,400. For the most part the tenders submitted generally are for brick buildings, there being some prejudice among contractors against the use of concrete. Hitherto concrete houses have not been a success, but by a unit system of steel shuttering which is available, but not known to contractors in this country, it is expected to overcome the difficulties and prejudice to concrete. The plans have been approved by the Board of Trade, and the Ministry of Health is giving every encouragement to the new system. The same firm has reduced its offer for 87 cottages by $36,000 on the same understanding that the houses will be built of concrete within a shorter period than brick buildings.

MORE FRENCH SHOPS IN THE WEST END.

During the last few weeks several famous Parisian costume makers have opened branches in the West End of London, and it looks as though a concerted attempt was being made by French fashion experts to capture a large portion of the trade in exclusive dresses hitherto done by British dress-makers. The fact of the matter is that English firms have greatly improved their "creations" during recent seasons and that English women are becoming more appreciative of the good things which are produced in our own land to the detriment of Paris. The French houses, therefore, have been forced to take premises in the heart of fashionable London in order to revive their trade. This example set by "fashion" houses is being emulated by French firms who deal in trimmings and wovens, and if many more French firms come over here we shall have quite a Parisian shopping quarter in the West End.

INCREASED WHISKY SUPPLIES.

The moderate consumer of whisky on the domestic hearth is becoming almost dazed with the prospects, for the first time since the early days of the war, of promptly obtaining all he requires. For a time before the armistice his supply was so small as to drive him occasionally to temporary and temperate despair. Even for a twelvemonth afterwards he found himself so restricted that he was cap-in-hand to the trader all through when, for the entertainment of his friends, he wished an additional bottle. All of a sudden, as if by a harlequin's wand, the trader has become amicable, and not antagonistic, and the householder has been placed in the position of the hunter and not the hare. Within the last few days the outlook for the moderate whisky consumer in the Metropolitan has been materially opened out. "We are now in a position," mildly suggests one large firm which for a time was extremely haughty even over a solitary bottle, "to increase the supplies of whisky and orders up to one dozen can be executed until further notice." A smaller vendor, who a week ago was adamant, is now apologetic, and even pleads to be allowed to supply what he so recently refused. The average man is asking where all these fresh supplies are coming from, and even more anxiously whether they are in any degree matured.

THE PASSING OF "BLACK MARIA."

It seems ages since the last horse bus passed through the London streets. I think the London Fire Brigade sends out a very few horse-drawn vehicles in the Salvage Corps service, which follows the Fire Brigade to save goods from warehouse fires. Now "Black Maria" is to be replaced by a motor vehicle. Who first called the "Black Maria" by that name I know not, but every Londoner, high or low, calls them so. They are the big two-horse prison vans which bring prisoners from the remand prisons at Brixton or other suburbs of London to the Courts at Bow Street or Marlborough Street, and then take them away again to serve their sentence. Outwardly, at least, they are eighty and well-kept vehicles, almost sufficiently like enclosed family coaches to justify Phil May's habitual offender who said, "Home, John," to the coachman. Inside, they contain two rows of little cells, with grills opening on a narrow central passage in which a constable sat—or so at least I have been told. The new motor vehicles are to be painted brown, so the populace will have to find a new pet name for them.

Why He Was Valuable.

The lady district visitor was trying to get friendly with little Johnny. "Do you think your mummy would let me buy you, Johnny?" she asked. "Buy me what? An air-gun?" asked Johnny, quickly. "No! No!" laughed the district visitor. "Would she let me buy you from her and take you away with me?" "She might!" replied Johnny. "But I'm afraid you haven't got enough money!" "Why, how much would it take?" asked the lady. "A thousand pounds!" promptly answered Johnny. "Oh—but that seems an awful lot of money!" expostulated the lady. "Are you quite sure you're worth, as much as that?" "Well, p'raps not!" admitted Johnny, "but you see, there's six of us, and if mummy sold me it'd break the seal!"

Character in "Carving."

(From the Point of View, in the October Scribner.)
Carving at table is one of the most characteristic things that a man can do. It is the household art where all his masterful attributes are called into play. Fire-building, furnace-shaking and lawn-mowing bring out his homely attributes, but carving is a broader test. Here is a primitive art overlaid with a complex technique, a pioneer act in a dainty environment. For this kind of thing a man should be allowed the freedom of the wilderness. Enveloped by the modern table-cloth, he must be not only masterful but cautious; not so much fearless as adroit. The situation is a test not only of the man but also of his relations with his wife. When a married couple feel equally responsible for an act at which only one of them can officiate, they are tempted to exchange remarks. The most tactful wife yields sometimes to the impulse to do a little coaching from the side-lines, and many husbands have been known to respond with a few well-chosen words about the knife. This happens sometimes even when the husband is an artist at his work, for the ideals of two artists will occasionally conflict. And even the model wife who ignores the carving and engages the guests in conversation until the worst is over will at times find herself clutching the tablecloth or holding her breath at the critical points—when the drumstick is being detached from the second joint, for instance, or when the knife hovers over the guest's portion of the steak. These two crises are the great moment for the man who carves. In fact you have not taken the complete measure of a man until you have seen him carve both steak and fowl. These two make totally different demands upon the worker. The chicken calls for a sense of structure, a versatile skill in manoeuvring for position, and the delicate wrist of a violinist. But your true portierhouse calls for shrewd judgment and clear-cut decisions, with no half-way measures or reconsiderations at all. With the chicken, you can modify, slice, combine, arrange to best advantage on the plate. With the steak, you work in the flat and in one color; every stroke must count. There are men who would rather parcel out the Balkans than map a steak.

DON'T SEE HOW I STOOD THE STRAIN, SHE SAYS.

Clifton Woman, Now Well And Happy; Says Tanlac Would Be In Every Home If People Knew It Like She Does.

"Tanlac would be in every home if everybody knew as much about it as I do," declared Mrs. Sandy F. Flewelling of Clifton, New Brunswick, while relating her experience with the medicine recently.

"Ever since childhood I have been in bad health," she continued. "I have suffered from my stomach nearly ever since. I can remember and my appetite had become so poor that I could hardly eat anything. Nearly every week bilious spells came on me and I would feel weak and faint and sick at my stomach. I suffered dreadfully from gas and would bloat up so bad it almost took my breath away. My heart palpitated so fearfully at times that I thought sure I had heart trouble and often there was an awful burning all through my chest and throat.

"But what I dreaded more than anything else was those terrible headaches that came on me regularly. I just hate to think of the sufferings they caused me, why, I don't see how I stood the strain. My head just felt like it would burst open and I would have to stop whatever I was doing and go lie down in a dark room with a cloth over my eyes. I was subject to regular nervous spells when I would break out in a cold sweat and sometimes it was as long as two and three hours before I could get myself easy again. I lost sleep night after night and just seemed to be getting weaker and weaker every day.

"But I'm so glad I tried Tanlac for I could not have done a better thing. I just think it is wonderful that I am in such splendid health again after all these long years of suffering. I enjoy everything I eat for it agrees with me perfectly and never causes me the slightest trouble in any way. My nerves are just as steady as anyone could wish and I sleep just as sound as my child. But what I'm so glad of is that I am free from those awful headaches, and oh, what a relief it is. I have gained ten pounds and feel so much stronger that my housework is now a real pleasure. Tanlac has been a blessing I will never forget and I just think it is the greatest medicine on earth."

What is Speculation?

There are not many business operations which have not some element of speculation in them. The farmer who plants a crop is making an investment in the expectation of a larger but more or less uncertain return in the future, and the man who buys the farmer's crop when it is harvested and carries it and distributes it throughout the year to the consumers is acting from a similar motive and rendering a necessary service.

The party who buys commodities when he thinks they are lower than conditions warrant, with the expectation of selling later at an advance, is a speculator, but such dealings broaden the market and tend to stabilize it.

Is it legitimate to store eggs in June for consumption in January? Who knows what it is safe to pay for eggs, or lend upon eggs, in June to be stored for the winter market? Who knows how freely hens will be laying next fall and winter? And if, as the season develops and conditions change, the original purchaser of the eggs concludes to sell to a secondary purchaser who will carry them the remainder of the season, is either a pernicious speculator? Would the interest of the public be served by requiring the producer to carry the eggs from June to January, or by forbidding the first dealer to sell them to another dealer? Can the second dealer get a higher price for the eggs in January than the first dealer could have obtained if he had carried them the full time, and is there gain or loss to the public in having a free market for eggs? Just where does pernicious speculation begin?

Just now there is an appeal for bankers to lend money to wool-growers to enable the latter to carry their wool until prices recover from the recent slump; and, on the other hand, a general demand that bankers shall not support the withholding of products from market.

Is it legitimate to lend money on stocks and bonds? They represent tangible property, i.e., lands, buildings, machinery, goods. Is it legitimate to lend on the pledge of such property, or would it be in the public interest to deny to its owners (the right of using their credit)?

Of course, these questions come up to bankers in many places and discrimination must be exercised according to the circumstances of each case and the conditions of the time. At the present time the pressure for credit is so great that there is a tendency for discrimination in favor of the most essential uses, as there is in ap-

What Did He Mean?

In the great drawing-room, with its rich furniture and rose-shaded lights the heiress and her husband sat chatting after dinner.

"Percy, dear," she said presently, a tender light in her eyes, "do you remember what day to-morrow is? Fancy, we shall have been married nine years, and not once have I missed baking you a special cake for the day, have I?"

Percy gazed fondly at her.

"No, my darling," he agreed. "You have never failed me, and I look back on those cakes as milestones in my life."

Wise Men Say—

That sourness spoils men as well as milk.

That listening often pays better than talking.

That a man with lofty aims may be a poor shot.

That an active brain is of little use unless you act.

That to make a mistake and then wall about it is to make two.

That the man who gets the most of it may not get the best of it.

That it is not the man who knows the most who has the most to say.

That things don't turn up in this world unless somebody turns them up.

That open confession may be good for the soul, but it is bad for the reputation.

That flattery is the best cure for a stiff neck. There are few heads it won't turn.

That the best time to hold on is when you reach the point where the average fellow would fall off.

That praise may puff up a shallow nature, but it always brings something of humility to a deep one.

That when your final account comes to be made up, a large heart will count for more than a large fortune.

That if you are a failure, if you are unhappy and despondent, you may see the person who is most to blame by stepping to the looking-glass.

Civic Commission Weekly Meeting.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Commission was held last night. Chairman Gosling and Commissioners Ayre, Mullaly, Peet, Morris and Vincombe were present. Minutes of previous meetings being disposed of the Board dealt with the following matters:—

Imperial Oil Co. Ltd. wrote undertaking to pay for extending water to their South Side premises.

Crosbie & Co. asked rebate on cargo coal on which duty was paid but cargo not discharged in St. John's. This is a matter for the Asst. Collector of Customs to adjust.

A. Donnelly applied for one of Council's houses. As terms offered were satisfactory he will be given one.

A communication was read from the Newfoundland Atlantic Fisheries Ltd. asking extension of water main to Smoke-House. Request will be acceded to provided they pay for cost of extension, also water consumption at usual charges.

M. W. Myrick on behalf of residents of Knight St. asked new water main be laid in street. Ordered same be done.

Howley and Fox, Solicitors, requested that arbitration be held in connection with Summers' land, New Found Road. Council will proceed with arbitration immediately.

City Solicitor Carter reported Council was not liable for upkeep of retaining wall Shea's premises.

In the matter of Traffic Regulations the Solicitor reported the Council were within their rights under the Act in making regulations governing traffic on city streets.

Resolutions made by Councillor Devine at last meeting regarding one way thoroughfares were deferred until his return to town.

Regulations made by Inspector General regarding Vehicular Traffic were on motion of Com. Ayre ordered published as Municipal Regulations.

T. J. Stafford requested attention be given retaining wall South Side. The Engineer was instructed to attend to same.

Petitions were received from residents of Gilbert St. West, also those of Casey and New Gower Streets, asking lights be installed in these localities. Engineer was instructed to visit the places mentioned.

Health Officer Brehm reported he was submitting to the Government for approval regulations governing the use of towels in such places as restaurants, factories, etc.

Plans passed: Mr. Maddigan, (anex) Water St. West; W. J. Kent, Gower St.; Parker and Monroe Factory (reinforced concrete smoke stack).

Not approved: Plans submitted by M. J. Walsh, to erect buildings Nunery Hill; N.B. Express Company's plans for erection of building on Promenade were also not approved as the building in question would be on Council property and they have no right to grant same.

The health of city for week showed quite a number of new cases of Diphtheria.

Reports of City Engineer and other Officers were read.

Pay rolls and b's submitted were ordered paid. Meeting adjourned 11 o'clock.

Oh, Those Professors!

The professor, who was brother to the highbrow who, when the nurse said, "It's a boy," replied, "Ask him what he wants," suddenly remembered he had a daughter. He went to the nursery to see her, and found his wife adoring her. He listened to the mother's raptures for a while, then asked hesitatingly:

"Can the little thing walk?"

"Walk, Herbert?" cried his wife. "Why, she's been walking now for six months!"

"Dear me, dear me!" said the professor, thinking busily of something else. "What a distance she must have travelled!"

Ancient Babylonians Founded Parcel Post.

Even the parcel post was known to the civilization of ancient Babylon. In fact, if we knew more about ancient days and countries, we might find that most of our modern conveniences were old when Nebuchadnezzar suddenly became a vegetarian.

A recent investigator among museum collection of ancient brick, or baked clay letters and books has written a book detailing particulars of the books used, postage and packages dispatched by post many centuries ago.

The Babylonians used tags of clay, pressing these on a card while they were wet or drawing a rope or cord through holes made for it in the clay; the tablet tag was then attached to any commodity that was to be sent out. It was practically indestructible. In cuneiform a scribe scratched on the label the contents of the package, its destination and price of receipt. When the package arrived, the recipient read, paid, signed and detached the bag. He then baked the label, to preserve it as a record, and filed it away. It contained an itemized memorandum which he needed to refer to afterward in balancing his account.

Reposed in the Archives. This label reposed in the archives of the man who had received the goods. These archives were small, modest ones in a private home and were part of the library; but in large business houses, and, particularly, in the temples, the archives were large and important. There is no doubt any more in the minds of archaeologists that the Babylonians were the most businesslike people in the world and that all their records, business and private, were preserved in a very complete filing system, and that there was a card index arrangement (of clay) attached, with alphabetical or other indicating list. Prof. Raymond Phillip Dougherty refers to this in his "Records From the Time of Nabonidus," another recent publication of cuneiform redactions. He says he found numerous manifestations that "tablets in the temple archives were systematically arranged primarily according to subject matter, and that the scribes and attendants had 'a proficient means of looking up records'."

The professor is more explicit in describing a group of finds among the clay tablets. "These labels, suspended on a card, as shown by the two holes on the left hand edge, were attached to the outside of the archives case. They state the character of the records or documents filed in each particular case, and so are the equivalents of the labels on filing cases to-day. The classification, cataloguing and filing of the great number of records concerning the temple's transactions were intrusted to a staff of scribes or registrars." It sounds most ancient!

And in all these files were to be found express tags. What soiled and battered express tags from an express parcel in 1920 A.D. could be put on file in any well appointed office?

System Was Very Simple.

We of to-day in sending off an express package have to have an extra system of slips and books and a double signing besides our tags to secure the transit of any goods. But each Babylonian—the sender and the recipient—was involved in only one medium of record. The sender kept the copy of that, and to the recipient came a well-nigh indestructible brick of convenient dimensions (these clay records can be held in the palm of the hand usually), which served as a receipted bill, since it was signed by the carrier on delivery and payment, and a proof of the safe arrival of the goods. If the goods were not satisfactory, he did not accept, or he accepted readjustment being explained in cuneiform on the label.

That express delivery was carried on before cities and between countries as was, undoubtedly, the postal system that archaeology has found to have existed in 3,000 and 4,000 B.C. Barton and Reiser, both well-known decipherers of cuneiform, are authority for the claim of an "in-terurban post, the cost of which was shared by the different cities" which enjoyed it. Reiser found evidences of a kind of parcel post. "The governor of Simas receives 30 qa of food by messenger." This may, however, be one with the express service, just as larger consignments of goods, by boat or caravan, would correspond to our freight service.

A Man Without a Heart.

"You have no heart!"
Pale but tearless she stood before him, and looked him squarely in the eye.

She was poor, but proud. Adverse fortune had reduced her wardrobe to the calico level, driven her and her venerable mother to the top flat of a back street house, and hardened the lines about her still beautiful mouth. But it could not dim the lustre of her blue-black eye, or tame the unconquerable spirit that animated every fibre of the lissom from standing erect with unconscious grace, and awaiting his answer.

"You have no heart!" she repeated. "No, miss," replied the butcher, "but we've got some mighty nice liver. Will that do just as well?"

Worked Both Ways.

"Bothered with time-wasting callers, are you? Why don't you try my plan?" asked the first.

"What is your plan?" said the second.

"Why, when the bell rings I put on my hat and gloves before I open the door. If it proves to be someone I don't want to see, I say, 'So sorry, but I'm just going out.'"

"But suppose it's someone you want to see?" asked the second. "Oh, then I say, 'So fortunate, I've just come in,'" said the first.

Some Invention.

"Has this car got a speedometer?" asked an old gentleman of the auctioneer at one of the Disposal Board sales.

The auctioneer was equal to the occasion and replied:

"At thirty miles an hour it exhibits a white flag, at forty miles a red flag, and at fifty miles a gramophone begins to play 'I'm going to be an angel, and with the angels dwell.'"

Towers of the Deep.

DEFENSIVE MYSTERY SHIP FOR PORTSMOUTH.

One of the "mystery towers" intended as a surprise for Germany, was launched this week at Shoreham and subsequently "sunk" off Portsmouth, where it will be used for defensive purposes. The towers have been objects of much curiosity and conjecture, as to their ultimate use, and as a result they have become known as "mystery ships." Each of the towers is 180ft. in height, the first four tiers being of hollow blocks of reinforced concrete hexagonal in shape. Nearly 100,000 of these blocks have been used in each ship, and the total weight of concrete used is about 3,000 tons. The steel work of the superstructure weighs, roughly, another 1,000 tons. In spite of all this, the draught when afloat is only 14ft., so that almost 170ft. rise above the surface of the water. Each of the towers cost about £1,250,000. The craft were designed by a Scottish engineer, Mr. Menzies, while Mr. H. A. Clift, a Canadian engineer, volunteered to build the ships, and was sent to Shoreham in June, 1918, with orders to supply eight within six months—an order which the Armistice modified. Altogether 16 were required. The launching was of a private nature, but notwithstanding the fact, dense crowds lined the beach at Shoreham when the ceremony took place. The entrance to the harbour had been dredged, and six powerful tugs were used in the removal of the tower. With a placid sea, and running on a neap tide, a start was made to move the structure from its moorings at 11 o'clock. Two tugs undertook this task, and with a long, steady pull, the monster gradually yielded, and inch by inch moved towards the mouth of the harbour. The seaman-ship in getting her through the harbour was marvellous, as there was only a 5ft. clearance—i.e., 2ft. 6in. at each side; and yet, so carefully was the whole thing carried out, that not even a pile was scratched. Loud cheers were raised, and sirens were blown as the ship passed the gates of the harbour. Once out in the roadstead, two more tugs assisted in the propulsion of the great craft, while two more took up their position astern as "controls." The Tower Ship arrived in the precincts of the Port of Portsmouth about eight next morning, and was taken to a temporary position off Culver, on the eastern side of the Isle of Wight. Operations were at once commenced to sink this floating mass of concrete and steel. The work proceeded slowly in calm weather, but so hazy that it was only possible to obtain an occasional glimpse of the tower. It was the intention of the authorities that the concrete base should be ready finally to rest at the bottom of the sea at low water, and gradual sinking was accomplished by pouring liquid concrete into the hollow blocks in the base of the tower. Just after 7 p.m. it was reported that the difficult task had been successfully completed, and that the Mystery Tower had been converted from a floating object into a solid block of concrete, capable of withstanding the force of storm and tide, and becoming, at the same time, part of the defences of the Solent, as well as a guide to mariners.—News of the World.

Hawaiian Motors Run on Whiskey.

Hawaii's great industries are sugar-making and canning pineapples for export. Since alcohol is derived from sweetening, the islands have right at hand the material for distilling the spirit which dilutes into whiskey.

When the price of gasoline soared into higher regions, it occurred to the Hawaiians that what gives fits to humans, might also energize their automobiles.

The idea worked out splendidly, and not at all to the demoralization of thirsty chauffeurs. The U. S. Government looks after that end of it, and "denatures" every drop of it, making it unfit for human consumption.

The price is now said to be about eight cents a gallon, and it produces one-fifth more power than gasoline, leaving much cleaner cylinders.

But the fact does not work as well in cold climates, or even when the engines are cool. Possibly we may not be able to use the new auto-fuel in Canada yet awhile.

May Overcome Difficulty. The difficulties have been overcome, however, in Hawaii with the aid of ether, which will mix with alcohol in all proportions.

It is very volatile, has a high vapor pressure and an extremely wide range of explosive mixture with air, has a high thermal value, burns with no solid products of combustion, and is easily and cheaply produced wherever alcohol is available. It is therefore possible to produce a mixture of alcohol and ether in such proportions as to form an ideal fuel for gasoline engines in that climate, giving great power, speed, and flexibility combined with smoothness of operation and ease of starting.

The result is that the mixture becomes a true gasoline substitute, which may be instantly substituted for gasoline and which gives the same or better results without modification of the engine or its accessories and with no change in ordinary methods of manipulation.

The motor alcohol made according to the new formula has been manufactured in Hawaii and subjected to successful tests in stationary, marine, automobile, truck and tractor gasoline engines.

Experiments now being carried on in many sections—may yet make it possible to run our auto-driven vehicles and machinery all the year round with the spirit the Dominion has discarded as a beverage.

The Prussians After Waterloo.

Now that the situation is reversed, it is interesting to read what Captain Gronow has to say in his book of reminiscences, about the behaviour of the Prussians in Paris after Waterloo:—

"It is only just to say that the moderation shown by the British Army, from the Duke of Wellington down to the private soldier, during our occupation of Paris, contrasted most favourably with that of the Russian and Prussian military."

While we simply did our duty, and were civil to all those with whom we came in contact, the Russians and Prussians were frequently most inhumane, and never lost an opportunity of insulting a people whose armies had almost always defeated them on the day of battle. I remember one particular occasion, when the Emperor of Russia reviewed his Garde Imperiale, that the Cossacks actually charged the crowd, and inflicted wounds on the unarmed and inoffensive spectators. I recollect, too, a Prussian regiment displaying its bravery in the Rue St. Honoré, a number of hackney coachmen; indeed, scarcely a day passed without outrages being committed by the Russian and Prussian soldiers on the helpless population of the lower orders."

Grand Falls Booming.

From Mr. N. W. Gillingham, of the A.N.D. Co. Ltd., who returned from Grand Falls by last night's express we learn that things are very busy at the paper mills, and the town at present is a hive of industry. The company are now calling for many hundreds of men for their logging operations at Badger and Millertown and very remunerative wage attractions are being offered for this class of work for the fall and coming winter months, and ready employment is guaranteed—all good men applying.

Orphans Entertained on H. M. S. Briton.

Capt. Fenn, N.N., with his usual kindness invited the children of the Belvidere Orphanage on board H.M.S. Briton yesterday afternoon. The youngsters were aboard ship early and thoroughly enjoyed themselves, with the various entertainments which had been prepared for them. A splendid repast was served in the officers quarters to which the children did full justice. The good Nuns of Belvidere are very grateful to Capt. Fenn for his thoughtfulness of the little orphans. notwithstanding Mr. Brookes. Maa. The S.S. Kyle at every trip is filled with passengers crossing from Port aux Basques to North Sydney. Sailing last trip she carried 126 steerage passengers all young men bound abroad to seek a living which has been denied them in their own country.

Why Charter Foreigners

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I notice by an editorial in Wednesday's Star, certain references to our foreign trade being in the hands of the Norwegians and Danes previous to the war. Where were they during the war, when Newfoundland was short of tonnage, and what has happened immediately the war is over? It is said there are about forty Danish vessels chartered this year to market our fish, while our own vessels that were mostly purchased at war prices are laying idle. Some Danes have been chartered through our local shipbrokers; others by the exporters direct. Surely this is not a square deal with regard to our own country. Some say that the reason is the Danish schooners are small, and owing to the regulations no one wishes to ship large cargoes. But there are several vessels owned in different parts of the island, with practically the same carrying capacity as a number of the Danes, and these are carrying coal and anything they can get, because there are no fish freights offering. Everyone is aware what Canada did recently to protect her steamers. Surely Newfoundland could do something to protect its shipping or must we see the trade go to foreigners as happened years ago? Everyone is complaining of the tightness of money, yet nearly half a million dollars will go to Danish and other shipping owned outside Newfoundland, while our own vessels lie peacefully at anchor in the harbor or engage at something that cannot pay running expenses. Surely a Government so experienced at making laws, could give their seamen and shipping some protection along these lines. Yours, etc., MARINER.
