Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XXV.

That hour had come to her—once! The little golden hour on the night of the dinner party, when she and Philip had driven home together.

An aching memory of the way he had caught her in his arms and kissed her nose before her vividly. She had thought that he really cared then; but since she had often wondered bitterly if it had only been a man's ordinary treatment of a girl whom he found attractive at the moment. She hated herself for remembering that there had been a good deal of champagne drunk that night at dinner.

Mrs. Winterdick, watching her across the room with worried, trembling eyes, saw the sadness of the girl's face and the way her hands fell listlessly to her lap when she had reached the end of the song. Eva had forgotten for the moment that she was not alone. She was thinking of the night in this very room when Philip had wanted to kiss her, and wondering if she had been wrong to refuse him.

After all, surely any sort of love was better than none!

She wondered what Philip was doing—how he was spending the last evening. She turned suddenly and looked at Mrs. Winterdick, remembering her presence with a start. The elder woman said gently:—

"My dear, don't worry about me—go and see what Phil is doing."

Eva did not answer. She stood twisting her wedding-ring nervously. She wondered how much this mother of Philip knew of the tragedy of their marriage. Many, many times she had longed to tell her all about it, but she was afraid.

She had never quite conquered the feeling that the Winterdicks looked down upon her, and that they still considered the obligation entirely on their side.

She turned to the door, when Mrs. Winterdick called her back.

"After to-night," she said gently, "I shall have to leave my boy's happiness to you . . ." She took the girl's hand, and Eva could feel how her own trembled.

"Perhaps we haven't been quite fair to you, my dear," she said again, with an effort. "Perhaps we haven't considered you as much as we might have done, but . . . oh, he is so well worth loving, if only you'll try to be patient with him." She added pitiously.

Eva tried to answer, but no words would come.

So well worth loving! Did she need to be told that? She bent hurriedly and kissed the elder woman's sad face and went slowly away.

There was a wood fire burning in the hall, for the evenings were chilly, and she went across to it and knelt down before the cheery blaze, holding her hands to its warmth. But for the moment the tears in her eyes blurred everything.

Got No Sleep

But now the neuritis has gone, the pains have ceased, the nervous system is restored and the writer of this letter pays a grateful tribute to the medicine which made him well.

Mr. John Woodward, P.T.O., Lucan, Ont., writes:

"It gives me much pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's medicine, especially the Nerve Food. I was a sufferer from neuritis for several years, and tried all kinds of remedies, yet never seemed to get any better. At last my nerves and whole system seemed to give way through not being able to get any rest or sleep at night, and I was nearly blind. I used to take me in all parts of the limbs and feet. My nerves would twitch all my whole body would seem to jerk right up as I lay in bed. Almost at the point of despair, I decided I would get Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I did, and after taking twenty boxes I believe myself almost normal again. I also keep a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on hand, and for the past year I seem to enjoy my usual health."

She knew just how Philip's mother must be feeling—just what pain had prompted her words. Her own love for Philip gave her understanding, and yet through it all rose the rebellious thought that nobody had considered her. Nobody knew or cared that her own heart was breaking.

"After to-night I shall have to leave my boy's happiness to you."

She could only suppose that everybody believed that she cared nothing for Philip, since even his mother hesitated to trust his happiness to her; and yet without him she felt that she would just cease to exist.

As she knelt there she heard Philip come down the stairs into the hall behind her.

She did not turn, but her heart began to race as he came close up to where she was kneeling.

For a moment she wondered if he would try to kiss her again—if she closed her eyes giddily. His voice broke in upon her incoherent thoughts:—

"You don't know what's become of my tennis racket, do you? I thought I'd let Peter have it. I shan't play any more this year."

She woke from her dreaming with a start and rose slowly to her feet.

Philip was not looking at her, or he would have seen how white her face was.

"I daresay it's been packed with the other things and sent up to town," she said with an effort. "I'm sorry if you wanted it."

"Oh, it doesn't matter." He turned away, and she saw him cross the hall and take down his coat.

"I'm going out for half an hour," he said.

She followed him to the door.

"Would you like me to come to?" she asked stammeringly.

His hand was on the latch and he pulled it back with a jerk, letting in a rush of cold night air; then he said: "It's pouring with rain—you can't come out; it's pelted."

It was quite true—the rain was teeming down through the darkness. She drew back; she did not mind the rain, but the relief she had heard in her husband's voice decided her at once.

"Very well," she said quietly.

For an instant she wondered if he could be going to see Kitty Arlington, but she drove the thought away ashamed.

When he had gone she went up to her own room and tried to read, but the rain against the windows distracted her attention.

She put her book down and went over to the window, pulling the blind aside, but she could see nothing save the waving branches of a tree close to the window.

The night passed slowly. She heard the servants locking up downstairs, and she went out on to the landing and told them to leave the front door unfastened; then she stole down and made up the fire in the hall. Philip would be cold and wet through when he came in, she knew.

It was nearly eleven o'clock. She felt curiously restless and excited; there was a sort of dread in her mind as she thought of to-morrow. What fresh disappointments awaited her in the new life to which she was going?

Whenever she thought of the fat she thought also of Calligan; she knew instinctively that he was to have some important influence on her life, and it made her afraid.

There was no man in the whole world for whose love she cared anything if she could not have her husband's, and yet the very thought of Calligan quickened her pulses.

She paced up and down the room restlessly. "Supposing Philip's jealous suspicions were correct, and Calligan did think something of her?"

Philip did not want her—he had been glad that it was raining so she could not go out with him; he cared nothing for her—he never would marry her.

And she wanted him so badly—his refusal to-night had stirred the pain into agonized throbbing again.

She must have his love—must make him care; that was her one desperate thought; she felt wildly that it did.

She must have his love—must make him care; that was her one desperate thought; she felt wildly that it did.

not matter what means she used in order to gain her end.

Supposing she went down to him when he came in to-night? Supposing she tried to make him understand—she flushed hotly at the mere thought. What would she do if he rebuffed her again?

Supposing she wrote him a little note and left it on the hall table—she knew that he always took his boots off by the fire in the hall before he came upstairs.

She pencilled a note to him with shaking fingers.

"I want to speak to you—Eva." That was all, but it would be enough, if he cared for.

She stole down through the silent house, and laid the folded note on the table beside his slippers, so that he could not fail to see it, then she flew upstairs again as she heard his tread on the wet gravel path outside and his voice speaking to one of the dogs.

She left the door of her room ajar, and stood there in the darkness trembling; she felt as if she had done something of which to be ashamed; had there been time, she would have gone down and recovered the note before he came in, but already she heard his key in the front door, heard him open and shut it.

A little silence followed; she opened the door and crept across the landing, peering down over the balusters into the hall below.

Philip was there, still in his wet coat, one foot on a chair, unlacing his boots. In another moment he would look round for his slippers . . . She stole back to her room.

She felt afraid of him now—more afraid of herself. She could not imagine what she could say to him, what excuse she could make for having written at all.

She heard him coming up the stairs two at a time, and her heart seemed almost to stop beating. But Philip passed her door and went on to his own room, and she gave a little gasp of relief, thankful for a moment or two in which to recover her composure.

But Philip did not come, though she could hear him moving about.

She waited breathlessly. A moment ago she had been afraid because she thought he was going to answer her summons, and now she was more afraid because she believed that he would not.

If he did not come she would indeed know that he cared nothing for her. Her heart seemed almost to stop beating. She stood there in the darkness, leaning against the wall for support.

Then a bar of light from his room that had streamed out across the landing was suddenly extinguished. It was followed by the shutting of his door, and then—then there seemed nothing in all the world any more but silence.

John Barleycorn and Prohibition.

The American newspapers have lately been giving to the public some figures which illustrate the immensity of the task which the enforcers of Prohibition have upon their hands and apparently the future contains little or no promise of much immediate improvement in this regard.

According to the Internal Revenue Reports, during the year 1921 the Government Forces confiscated six million gallons of alcoholic beverages and arrested 350,000 persons for offences against the Act. Property to the value of over eleven million dollars was seized by the "Dry" Agents, and included in this were 8,746 distilleries, 10,991 stills, 5,182 wineries, and 70,000 fermenters of different sorts. The largest number of arrests were in New York, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Texas and California.

The State of Delaware had only one gallon of liquor seized, and 14 persons arrested, this being the lowest limit of offence. In Florida there were seized liquor, distilleries and other paraphernalia to the value of over two million dollars, while New York fell short of this record by $700,000. Of the liquor taken, 414,000 gallons were beer, 5,000,000 gallons of whiskey and wine and 435,000 gallons of cider.

These figures seem of course enormous, but when one comes to consider the vast area of the territory, the huge population and the almost infinite possibilities of carrying on the business surreptitiously, it becomes evident that there is a task of unparalleled magnitude before the large army of officials engaged in the enforcement of a statute that, while it is undoubtedly popular as a question for public voting, is the very summit of unpopularity among a large number of people who think their rights interfered with, while the chances for making fortunes almost overnight cause men to dare any danger whatever in breaking the law—Academy Recorder.

Whooping Cough.

Mr. Robert Wilks, 8274-103rd Ave., Edmonton, Alta., writes:—
"I really believe we would have lost our two-year-old baby with whooping cough had it not been for Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine. He would cough and cough until he would fall back in my arms white as death. We had a doctor for him, but his medicine did not do him any good. We got a bottle of Linseed and Turpentine and to our surprise it did wonders for him. After the second dose there was a difference in his condition, and we kept giving it to him until he was entirely well."

The World's Mystery Animal.

When four living specimens of the duckbill platypus were sent 1,000 miles across the Australian continent for Lord Northcliffe's inspection, the two babies were the first live ones exhibited anywhere, and the two adults "nearly the first" to be seen in Sydney, writes Leslie G. Maenland in a London paper.

The platypus has earned its right to be termed the world's mystery animal. An honest description reads like a piece of diseased imagination. It lays eggs like a bird or reptile; it pounces like a kangaroo, has a flattened bill like a duck, is clothed in beautiful fur, and has webbed claws, armed, in the case of the males, with poison glands.

Mr. A. S. LeSouef, Director of the Sydney Zoo, who has just brought the record collection of Australian animals to England, showed some wonderful platypus photographs at the Zoological Society's scientific meeting in London. He showed the beast swimming under water, its nest, its eggs, and its young in all stages.

A queer recent discovery is that the platypus will not use its poisoned hind claws against man however much it is handled and however violent its struggles.

It is believed that these weapons are reserved for fights among the males themselves.

The wonderful burrow (made by the female) follows what appears to be a reasoned design calculated to make a fool of an enemy.

Following up the tunnel you come to a blind alley ending in a small chamber. Some way back is a ring of mud marking the real continuation of the burrow. Remove this and once more you come to a blind alley. Hark back to a second plug of mud and you go on to be stopped by the third and last plug, which is the door to the nest proper. (In addition to laying eggs the platypus makes a very birdlike nest.)

Burrow after burrow has been investigated and all follow this plan. The mud-plugs are moved and replaced by the platypus every time it arrives and departs.

Stafford's COD LIVER OIL Compound

TONIC and TISSUE BUILDER

This combination possesses the curative properties of cod liver oil without any of the latter's disagreeable features, as well as the medicinal virtues of the other standard remedies that enter into its composition. It is palatable, effective, and does not even in the most delicate, produce stomach disturbances and other bad after-effects that are such a drawback to the best action of cod liver oil in its crude state and many other disagreeable medicines.

THE ARMAMENTS TREATY.
 WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. The draft treaty for the limitation of naval armament was presented to a preliminary session of the Washington conference to-day. The treaty is divided into three chapters. Chapter one names the ships that may be replaced by the contracting powers, and those that may be replaced by others. Chapter two provides for the following: United States 525,000 tons; British Empire 525,000; France 60,000; Italy 175,000; Japan 40,000 tons.
 Article five fixes the 35,000 ton limit for the maximum displacement of any ship which shall be acquired, constructed by, for, or within the jurisdiction of any of the contracting powers. Article six says no ship shall carry a gun with a calibre in excess of 16 inches. Article seven fixes the total tonnage of aircraft carriers at United States 10,000 tons, British Empire 125,000 tons, France 60,000, Italy 60,000, Japan 10,000 tons. Article eight provides for replacement of aircraft carriers to be affected only as prescribed in chapter two part three but specifies that all such tonnage built or lying before November 12, 1921, regarded as experimental and renewable without regard to the age of the ships. Article nine provides that no aircraft carrier exceeding 10,000 tons shall be acquired by or constructed by for or within the jurisdiction of any of the contracting powers except that each of the powers may within the tonnage ratio of the treaty construct no more than carriers of a maximum of 33,000 tons each or may convert war craft services to be scrapped into such carriers in order to effect economy. The maximum displacement of aircraft carriers is limited to a maximum of eight guns of not more than 16 inch calibre per ship. Article ten provides that no carrier shall carry a gun heavier than eight inch calibre. It provides also without prejudice to article nine (with reference to the limit of eight inch calibre) that no ship of the 33,000 tons limit or of eight inch calibre or if no guns exceeding 16 inch calibre are carried for no more than the number of guns per ship. It also provides that the number of anti-aircraft guns or of anti-aircraft calibre or of anti-aircraft calibre must not exceed five inch calibre. Article eleven provides that no warship exceeding ten thousand tons displacement, other than a capital ship aircraft carrier, shall be built or acquired or built within the jurisdiction of the contracting powers, with a provision that vessels not specifically built as warships, nor taken in time of war under Government control for war purposes, but which are employed in time of war to aid in hostilities, otherwise than as fighting ships, shall not be within the tonnage limitation. Article twelve provides that no war vessel shall be laid down other than a capital ship shall carry guns in excess of eight inch calibre. Article thirteen provides that no vessel designed to be scrapped may be replaced into a war vessel. Article fourteen provides that no propeller shall be made in merchant ships guns, fire control and moving parts of barbettes and turrets and their operating machinery, all fire control instruments, ammunition, torpedoes and tubes, radio installations, conning towers and all side armor or alternatively main propelling machinery and all aviation accessories. Rule four provides that vessels to be scrapped under rule three shall be rendered incapable of warlike service within six months and finally scrapped within six months from the coming into force of Treaty and scrapping, "finally effected within eighteen months." Where ships are to be replaced, however, the scrapping must begin not later than the date of completion of its successor, and the vessel rendered incapable of war service within six months and finally scrapped within eighteen months. If completion of the replacement ship is delayed scrapping of the replaced vessel must begin within four years after the laying of the keel of the new ship; the six months and eighteen months periods to apply in that case also for completion of the work.

 Part three of chapter two is the replacement provision for capital ships and aircraft carriers, and is contained in two sections. Section one provides the general rule that such ships may be replaced twenty years from the date of their completion, "keels of replacement ships to be laid not earlier than seventeen years after each date of completion; and it is further provided that with the exception of the two British capital ships provided for and the replacement building in specified cases by France and Italy no capital ship tonnage shall be laid down until ten years from November 12, 1921." It is also provided that the names, dates of authorization, date of keel laying, displacement and principal dimensions of ships to be replaced and similar information as to ships planned to replace them be communicated promptly to all contracting powers in case of accidental loss or destruction of ships, replacement construction may begin immediately subject to the restrictions of size, armament, etc., imposed by the treaty.

A GENEROUS POPE.
 LONDON, Feb. 1. "Benedict XV did all he could to bring an end to the war, remaining strictly neutral himself," declared Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland to the Rome correspondent of the London Times. The Cardinal explained the necessity of economy by pointing out that the late Pope "gave away every penny he could find. When he found he could not end the war, he devoted all his energies to relieve the suffering it had caused. Surely was there never a more generous Pope."

Whale Holds Up Large Steamer.

A fish tale of enormous proportions was related by officers and passengers aboard the Italian steamship President Wilson, which arrived in New York from Trieste, Italy, in mid-ocean a week ago the ship was making 17 knots an hour. Scores of passengers were on deck in the sunlight when they were brought to their feet by the vessel's sudden impact with some seemingly large, solid, but invisible mass. As the ship shuddered and trembled and nosed up a bit, Captain Ottore Zer came from his cabin and inquired what happened. Officers on the bridge replied that they had seen nothing. Engines were reversed, and the vessel brought to a standstill. The first thought that struck the skipper and crew was that their boat had run down a sunken wreck. They got a clue to what had occurred. The surging waters round the ship began to churn up volumes of blood and red brine. Passengers said that there then appeared on one side of the ship the head and forward half of an enormous bull whale. On the opposite side of the ship, they say, appeared the tail and hind half. They inferred that the monster had been severed by the ship's bow.

The Banquet of the Season.

METHODIST GUARDS COMRADES CELEBRATE OPENING OF NEW CLUB ROOMS—PRIME MINISTER DELIVERS ORATION.

Last night in the Methodist College Hall the Methodist Guards Comrades Association celebrated the opening of their new Club Rooms with a banquet, which was well worthy the occasion. About 7.30, 270 guests assembled themselves at the festive board, which occupied practically the whole floor of the spacious auditorium. The tables were artistically decorated with hot-house flowers and the catering in the hall was attended to by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The catering in the hall of Mrs. E. S. Ayre was commended upon by practically every guest. Sir Richard Anderson presided at the feast provided for that for over quarter of a century the M.C.C.I. had been renowned for its banquets, but the feast on this occasion had exceeded them all. The band under Capt. Peet rendered some very pleasing selections throughout the evening their different numbers received much applause. The arrangement of the list, the names of many veteran dinner speakers added considerably to the success of the affair, and recitations were interspersed throughout the programme, and Mr. C. E. Hunt's song recitation was the "best yet" and caused no small amount of amusement. Miss Elsie Herder rendered a solo which was very pleasing. The applause testified to her popularity in response to continuous encore rendered a very pathetic song. Fred Gushue gave two popular recitations which also received well deserved appreciation. When dinner was about finished Chairman H. J. announced the opening Toast which was honoured in the usual manner. Dr. J. A. Robinson following opened a subject that proved both interesting and instructive. The Toast proposed by Rev. Mr. Fenwick, D.D., brought forth Governor Boyles ode to Newfoundland. Premier Squires' address was eloquent. He crystallized his address into the words "Service," the complete Toast List was as follows:

The King.—Prop. The Chairman; "God Save the King."
The Empire.—Prop. Dr. J. A. Robinson; resp. Sir P. T. McGrath, K.B.E. Newfoundland.—Prop. Rev. Mr. Fenwick, D.D.; resp. Sir Richard Anderson, Squires, K.C., LL.B., Prime Minister.
The M.C.C.I.—Prop. Lt.-Col. R. F. Fenwick (C.L.B.); resp. Mr. H. J. Fenwick and the members of the Newfoundland Athletic Association.
The Major J. W. March, M.C.; Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C.; Mr. W. B. Ayre, LL.B.
The War Heroes.—Prop. Mr. B. P. Blackwood; resp. Major B. P. Blackwood, M.C.
The Ladies' Auxiliary.—Prop. Mr. J. Fenwick; resp. Mr. H. Wyatt.
The Guests.—Prop. Mr. L. J. Fenwick; resp. Rev. C. H. Johnson, M.A., Mr. C. McGrath, (C.C.C.) and Mr. Paterson, (Nfld. Highlanders).
The guests present were: Cook, Mr. Chas. R. Duder, Inspector General Hutchings, Hon. W. W. Ward, Messrs. George Kearney and Mr. Ayre. The Guards Band looked smart in their new uniforms and their appearance was favourably commented upon. During the evening the Chairman announced that the new Association had shortly undertake the re-establishment of the Guards Brigade which brought forth tremendous applause. The affair was brought to a close at 12.30 by the National Anthem.

Co-Operative Marketing vs. Nationalization.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—A "heated" debate on "The Marketing of the Colony's Codfish" took place in the Methodist College Literary Institute last week. It is pleasing to note that so vital a question is engaging intelligent interest, and the debaters, generally, are praiseworthy for the measure of light they threw upon many features of the subject. The affirmative speakers favored the exporting and marketing of the Colony's codfish under a system they called Nationalization. The negative speakers said that this was nothing more or less than the adoption and enforcement of the repealed Fish Regulations, and that at the bottom Nationalization was state socialism. It was unanimously admitted that existing methods are bad, inasmuch as they result spasmodically in undue competition in foreign markets in the sale of Newfoundland fish. There was no suggestion by any of the speakers of a system of marketing which would not be Nationalization or under official regulation, yet would avoid undue competition in the sale of Newfoundland fish. Though unalteringly opposed to both Nationalization and the Fish Regulations, I cannot agree with the negative speakers in their identification of the one with the other, because ruinous as the Fish Regulations were, Nationalization would be a still greater tragedy. The two things differ as the day, the night, though both are bad.

DIVIDED AUTHORITY. Under the Fish Regulations, the exporters continued to be the buyers of fish at home, and the sellers of it abroad, hampered, however, as to shipment by the need of procuring licenses from the Codfish Exportation Board, and, as to freedom of sale, by the provision that agreements for sale, on forms prescribed by the Board, should be made, unless the Board consented otherwise, in advance of shipment. The Board itself had no power of sale. The result of this divided authority was, that the owner of the fish could not sell where and when and for the price he wished, but was governed in all these respects by the Board, which had no direct interest in the matter. And, on the other hand, the Board had no power of making sales, but only of formulating contracts and fixing prices, which were generally higher than could be obtained abroad, but sometimes not as high, perhaps, as might have been obtained, but for the fact that the fixed prices were made public. Nationalization proposes that a Marketing Board, appointed by the Government of the Colony, shall buy all the fish caught in our waters at a price fixed by the Board, and shall sell abroad all fish of this Colony at such prices as it may obtain, the profits, if any, on the transaction, being retained by the Board for a purpose not yet defined, and the losses, if any, being paid out of a surplus fund created by previous profits, or, if such surplus fund be non-existent, out of taxation levied upon the whole people of the Colony. Under this policy, fish merchants could no longer sell their own fish, which would be pre-empted by the Board, and the Board, instead of merely having the power of regulation, as under the Fish Regulations, would be supremely autocratic, and, having vital power over the prosperity of the people of the Colony, by monopoly of the fish trade.

WFO WOULD FORM THE BOARD. The affirmative speakers for Nationalization said that present day exporters in this Colony, with few exceptions, are not experts, not trained or efficient men, but are without knowledge of "the delicate science of marketing," whilst under Nationalization there would be a National Board of Marketing Experts, composed of the Colony's best marketers, who would purchase the fish from the merchants, and sell it abroad. These marketers, who are the exceptions to the prevailing incapacity of our fish exporters, according to the advocates of Nationalization, are identifiable, I suppose, by their measure of financial success in the fish business, and, therefore, it will not be difficult, perhaps, for the public to name the men at present in public view who would be eligible for such a Board. They would be high priced, evidently, for they would, of course, be required to abandon their private business for salaried places on the Board. They would, of course, include such successful men as Sir John Crosbie, Sir M. P. Cashin, Mr. A. E. Hickman, and, naturally enough, the Hon. W. F. Coaker. Commenting upon the debate, one of the speakers said that the Board "would not be political, but independent." It would, of course, have to be appointed by the Government, and how a Board so appointed could be anything else than political passes one's understanding. To be independent, its members would have to be irremovable, and so would have autocratic powers for life over the most vital material interests of the Colony. No taxation without representation is a fundamental constitutional doctrine of a self-governing people. All our laws concerning taxation are within the exclusive power of an Assembly elected by manhood suffrage. Yet here is a proposal to put the buying and selling of codfish, the prosperity, and even the livelihood, of the whole people, in the hands of a select group of Water Street exporting merchants, who once appointed by the Government of the Colony could never be removed except by the hand of death, when others, presumably, would be appointed in their places.

PARTISAN AND POLITICAL.

Or contemplate the other contingency, that the members of the National Board of Marketing could be removed at pleasure by the Government of the day. What else but partisan could such a Board be? The Board's purchase of fish, and sales thereof; the price it paid for fish, and the price it got; its disposition of the surplus, or its losses, in any one year, and all the other things that it did, or could be charged with doing, affecting, as they would, the happiness and prosperity of the people at large, would be heatedly debated in every hamlet of the Island, and the doings of the Board would become much more political in the minds of the people, and justly so, than the doings of the Government of this Colony in relation to every other matter. The conduct of this National Board of Marketing would become much more a party question, and much more exclusively political, than any other subject that can be conceived of in relation to the affairs of this Colony. Such a Board would employ political supporters at home and agents abroad, and the Government of the day would have to see to this, or it would cease to be the Government by the votes of outraged people throughout the Colony. In short, whilst the power of appointment is in a political Government, the Boards, or other organizations appointed by it, must be political also. No stream can rise higher than its source; the source being political, the stream must be the same, and as streams run downward, necessarily, it also may be taken for granted that the creatures of partisan governments would be much more partisan; or, in other words, that government boards would be more partisan than governments.

With your permission, Sir, I will pursue this subject in further letters, examining into the methods which have been advocated by those who are in favor of Nationalization. Yours truly, ALFRED B. MORINE, Feb. 1, 1922.

Winkler, Man., Feb. 1st.—(Special)—Just how Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a reputation as suffering women's best friend is again shown in the case of Mrs. J. J. Funk, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. Let her tell her story in her own words: "I suffered for years from kidney trouble, female weakness and nervousness," Mrs. Funk says. "I was so bad I could not do my housework. I suffered terribly, but after using Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel much better. "I can do my housework again and I will keep on using Dodd's Kidney Pills until I am entirely well. "I am well satisfied with what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done so far. Everybody who suffers should try them. I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills."

CONCLAVE ASSEMBLES.

ROME, Feb. 2. The Conclave of the Sacred College, which is to choose a successor to Pope Benedict, began its sittings to-day. Fifty two Cardinals, who are in Rome, went into seclusion last night, and when the great oak barrier at the entrance of the court yard of St. Damaso was closed, they were cut off from any communication with outside, until their sacred task was done. The balloting is expected to consume more than two days, and the next Pope, in the consensus of opinion, will come from the moderate section of the Sacred College. Crowds gathered in St. Peter's Square to watch for the tell tale smoke wreaths from the chimney of the Sistine Chapel. The ballot is taken in the morning and evening of each day, and smoke puffs come from the burning ballots. When no election is effected a little straw is burned with the papers, giving the smoke a dark color. When the choice is finally made, ballots burning alone emit a thin wisps of light smoke.

COMING FOR REPAIRS.

The Glencoe is due here to-day from the South West Coast service, and will remain here for some time to undergo repairs. S.S. Sagona is replacing the ship on the route. The Glencoe requires new decks and a general overhauling, which will take at least three weeks or a month to complete. She will then resume service.

Millions Involved in Old Chest.

English people are much interested in a keen search now being made for an old chest, last seen in Hastings in 1876, which is supposed to contain a secret drawer documents relating to a fortune of $27,000,000 left in 1770 by Pieter Tayleur Van Der Hurst, of Haarlem. The acquisition of this vast sum by a Woolwich Arsenal storekeeper named James Taylor, of Plumstead, depends on the discovery of the chest. The romantic nature of the story has appealed to the inhabitants of Hastings and district, who realize also that the happy possessor of the chest is likely to receive a handsome reward when he reveals the whereabouts of the chest, says the Hastings correspondent of a London paper. The main interest centres in Hastings workhouse and the thickly populated district that surrounds it for the missing chest, which is of oak with three brass bands at each corner, and which measures 2ft. by 15 in. by 10 in. It is believed to have been taken with other possessions of the family to the workhouse when James Taylor's step-mother and family entered it in 1875. The clerk to the Guardians has had a special search made by his staff of clerks for records regarding the Taylor family, while Mr. Cory, the master of the workhouse, has himself assisted in a survey of 400-year-old volumes which he has unearthed from the strong-rooms at the workhouse. He has, moreover, arranged for a comprehensive search to be made of the whole premises.

"The story is a most interesting and romantic one," said Mr. Cory, "and you may rely on it that if that chest is anywhere about these premises I will have it found." Mrs. Sutton, of Old London Road, in the village of Ore, near Hastings, is the living workhouse official in the district. "I was schoolmistress at the workhouse in 1875," she said, "and I remember the Taylor family—the mother and four children—being admitted to the workhouse. It was not unusual in those days when a whole family were admitted to allow them to bring some of their personal possessions with them. We used to keep them in the clothing stores. In some cases, when people were able to leave a workhouse, they took away their things, but in other cases they were after a time sold."

"Periodic sales were held, and these were usually attended by small local dealers and the poor people in the district. The chances are that if that chest is not to be found in the workhouse it was disposed of at one of these sales, and is very likely to be in the possession of some one in the immediate district."

The Marseillaise.

It was in the night of April 25, 1792, when war against Austria had just been declared, that Rouget de Lisle, then a Captain in the Strasbourg garrison, wrote "The Marseillaise," which he entitled "War Song of the Army of the Rhine." It was sung by Mireaux, the Deputy for the Montpeller, who had accompanied some local volunteers belonging to that town, and so it was called "The Marseillaise," whereas the name "Strasbourgerges" would have been more correct. Oddly enough, we are now being told that a few Frenchmen have an accurate knowledge of their national hymn, with the exception of the first and the last strains, which, by the way, was not written by Rouget de Lisle. Take a score of persons at hazard, put them to the test, and the fact will be clearly demonstrated. It is interesting to learn that the stanzas, which is the best known after the first, was composed by the poet, Louis Dubois, for the civic festival of October 14, 1793. When Rouget de Lisle, who had retired to Choisy le Roi, felt, on a lovely June morning in 1886, that he had not many hours to live, he was heard to murmur, "I know that the end is approaching. I have made the world sing, and I am about to die." Hearing that the end was near, people flocked during the day to the house, and when evening came the doctor had the windows of his chamber opened, and then, in the cool air, arose a song, sung in almost hushed tones by the crowd, but with wonderful effect, all the same. It was while "The Marseillaise" thus softly reached his ear that Rouget de Lisle passed away.

One third of your life is allotted to sleep. Do you get your share? The most important period in the process of applying nutrition to the repair of the body is while you are asleep. For the most favorable transformation of digested food into nerve and cell tissue, so doctors tell us, sleep is absolutely essential. Is it any wonder that those who suffer from lack of proper sleep are weak, pale and lacking in energy or ambition? One of the causes of insomnia is nerve-irritation from tea and coffee drinking. Tea and coffee both contain caffeine, which has a tendency to cause undue stimulation. The irritating effect of caffeine often results in insomnia, depression, and a weakened nervous system. You can easily overcome these troubles by drinking Postum instead of tea or coffee. Postum is a delicious, satisfying cereal beverage, and it is absolutely free from caffeine, or any other harmful substance. Ask your grocer for Postum. Drink this delicious, refreshing beverage for ten days. Then see if you do not feel better and more clear headed, and if you do not sleep better at night—on so many other people have proved for themselves. Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (to also made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water). "Under the Gaslight."

PACKED AUDIENCE LAST NIGHT.

Never has the Casino contained such an audience numerically as it did last night at the third presentation by the E.I.S. Players of "Under the Gaslight." The officials at the ticket office had to discontinue selling early in the evening, yet persons anxious to see the show persisted in waiting in the corridor, and all manner of seating accommodation had to be provided; one gentleman even going so far as to invade the sacred realms of the backstage and commandeering two biscuit boxes, intended to be used as properties, for himself and his better half, which he subsequently deposited in the middle of the centre aisle to the bewilderment and consternation and despite the protests of the ushers. The entire cast excelled itself last evening, and the performance was remarkable for its precision and smoothness. Miss Mary McCarthy's acting in the emotion scenes last night was a revelation even to her most intimate friends; and it was fully equal to that of any professional that it has been our lot to witness on the local stage. Running Miss McCarthy close for honour was Capt. O'Grady as Ray Trafford, Mr. Phil Moore as Snorkey, the one armed veteran, had the sympathy of the audience right from the start, and his scenes with Bormudas and the wharf rats carried the house by storm. Miss Angela McGrath and Miss Gerie Ryan added new lustre to the honours previously achieved, while Miss Molly Horan gave a very faithful interpretation of Old Judas and though in a most unpopular role was continuously applauded on her brilliant acting. It must have been particularly trying for Mr. Max Channing to portray so brilliantly as he did last night the part of the Signalman after figuring in the near tragedy at Silverlock's Garage earlier in the day. The other members of the cast, especially the youngsters, also added new leaves to their laurel wreaths. The various charming specialties were well received and loudly encored. A special mead of praise is due to the C.C.C. Band for the excellent program of music they rendered last night, and their novelty numbers delighted the large audience present.

The performance will be repeated to-night and to-morrow night.

Popular Opera Numbers Heard at Nickel.

The holiday programme presented at the popular Nickel Theatre yesterday was one of superior excellence. Miss Ruth Chase, Soprano gave a charming rendition of "I Dreamt That I Dwell" and another highclass selection which nearly brought down the house. These numbers held the attention of her hearers who after she finished singing were enthusiastic in their applause. Mr. George Dahn, the popular Lyric Tenor, who is known to put his whole heart and soul in his singing delighted everyone with his well rendered solos. The picture programme consisted of a Goldwyn masterpiece, entitled "A Voice in the Dark." A picture intensely dramatic and at the same time brimful of interest. This story was first made famous by A. H. Woods' famous stage play of the same name. Much interest was also centered on the current episode of "The Double Adventure" featuring Charles Hutchison, and of course to have a well balanced show the programme contained a mirth-provoking comedy, which completed an entertainment well worth seeing.

President Flavin Explains

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—In reference to a letter which appeared in your issue of today signed by me as President of the Longshoremen's Protective Union, I have been asked by all the Companies who had insurance effected upon the L.S.P.U. Hall to make public the circumstances connected with the payment of the insurance to the Union by Bowring Brothers, Limited, Agents of the Liverpool, and London and Globe.

A delegation of the Union waited upon Mr. R. G. Ash, the Adjuster of the Insurance claim, stating that they wanted to purchase a building which was then for sale desiring to make a payment on it promptly and asked to be given the Adjustment Papers at once.

As there was nearly 100 Adjustment Sheets to be typewritten, which would take some time, Mr. Ash asked me if I had spoken to any of the Agents of the Companies in reference to payment of their insurance. I replied that Bowring Brothers, Limited, and Job Brothers & Company would give me a cheque for the amount of insurance as soon as I got the Adjustment Papers. Mr. Ash happened to have some of the Adjustment Papers ready and he gave me the Papers for the Companies represented by Bowring Brothers and Job Brothers which I brought to their Offices and received a cheque from them for the amount of the insurance at once. The following day the remaining Adjustment Papers were finished by Mr. Ash and were delivered to the different Companies.

It is hardly fair to these Companies that a letter which I had signed at the request of the Insurance Clerk at Messrs. Bowring Brothers and which I had no idea would be published in the Press, as the other Insurance Companies would have paid their amounts just as promptly as those represented by Messrs. Bowring Bros. if we had applied to them for payment, as these Companies are all sound financially and are in a position to pay any claims that may be made upon them.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH FLAVIN,

Yesterday's Matinee.

It seems almost incredible but 1400 children saw yesterday's matinee of "Under the Gaslight," and it speaks well for the very efficient ushers that everyone of them was carefully looked after without any discomfort. Long before 2.30 the outside doors had to be closed as every available inch of space was occupied. When the schools were let out there was hundreds of kiddies who were unfortunately disappointed and their little faces plainly showed their chagrin and regret. The thrilling scenes and spectacular tableaux natural ly set the juvenile portion agog with excitement, and sometimes the players were obliged to temporarily abandon their efforts until the enthusiasm subsided. At times it must have been particularly trying to the adults present. The youngsters were particularly enthusiastic, and evinced it in no uncertain manner at the train scene, and long after the curtain was lowered they kept up a deafening din while they were very loathe to part with Peanuts, Keystone, Steve, and Pete in the wharf scene. In view of the numbers of children disappointed it seems to us a pity that some arrangements cannot be made for a repeat matinee, say on Saturday afternoon.

DAHLMANN-STEWART.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Presbyterian church on Tuesday, Jan. 31st by Rev. R. J. Power, when Dr. R. J. Stewart, U.S., led to the altar Miss Henrietta Dahlmann. A reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother, Mount Pearl, after the ceremony.

"Hick'ry Farm" Last Night.

The reproduction of this charming Comedy-Drama by the Holy Cross Dramatic Troupe was a wonderful success. The packed audience kept delighted and charmed until the curtain dropped. A particularly balanced cast did full justice to a beautiful though difficult play. The specialties, which included vocal selections, Irish Jigs and Reels, Flag Drill, and a short operetta by juniors pleased everybody. The scenery, the handwork of that master artist, Mr. D. Carroll, and the lighting effects under the able supervision of Mr. W. Cousins, were very highly commended upon. "Hick'ry Farm" will be repeated to-night and to-morrow night, and there will be a matinee for the youngsters on Saturday.

PRESENTATIONS.—During the evening performance of "Under the Gaslight" Miss Mary McCarthy and Master Jimmy Bradshaw were presented with massive boxes of chocolate from admirers.

SUPPER TO "UNDER THE GASLIGHT" PERFORMERS

Who assisted in any way in the production of "Under the Gaslight," entertained at a supper given last night's performance, by the Auxiliary. The tables were decorated and full justice was done to the food things supplied. After the supper, Mr. P. Moore, Manager of the Casino, in his capacity of chairman of the L. and A. Committee thanked the present for their co-operation in making the play what it was. He paid a well deserved tribute to Miss Mary McCarthy interpretation of her part was masterly performed. Mr. J. C. Wines, President of the Society of Friends, in the absence of the manager, for their help and tendered presentation of the Society for the players and all had contributed. An impromptu dance was then held and continued to an early hour morning when the gathering dispersed.

Men Nearly Gassed.

MECHANICS OVERPOWERED BY FUMES.

Three employees of Silverlock's Garage, St. Croix, Page and Healey, were overcome by gas fumes from the exhaust pipe of a motor car yesterday morning. Artificial respiration was necessary before they could be brought back to consciousness. They had afterwards to be assisted to their homes. The men, in company with another, Max Channing, were testing a new car and had the exhaust pipe so fixed that the gas could escape through the floor. The apertures were however plugged with snow, and the men not being aware of this, the room was quickly filled with gas fumes. Channing, who had left the room, did not feel the effects, but the others were immediately overcome. Channing, realizing their danger, rushed in and shut off the engine and used artificial

ST. JOHN'S DEFEAT TERRA NOVAS EXCELLENT COMBINATION.

Excellent combination of the team in last night's League game was chiefly responsible for the victory over the Terra Novas. The team of goals to 3. The game was a fast and furious one. The St. John's forwards, was particularly noteworthy feature of the game. The rapid scoring of St. John's was the first period, when they scored four times in five minutes. Cahill and Phelan did the work for St. John's. The line-up was strengthened by the addition of Clouston and the absence was felt in the first game. Mr. G. Herold was

THE FIRST PERIOD.

The start of the game was treacherous after some combined effort Cahill scored within minutes after the puck had been down. A few seconds later, Billy scored from a long shot. The hard to retaliate without the St. John's soon cleared and paid another visit to the goal. Following an unusual play by Tobin, Clouston scored for the Terras. It was then that St. John's saved their opponent's surprise. With only five minutes left down the ice and each at the disc behind Rawlins. Almost simultaneously with the score the last goal came the sound of excitement was intense.

THE SECOND PERIOD.

Starting every effort to reduce opponent's lead. Three from the start, Clouston scored after some very nice play. The remainder of the period was practically confined to the goal but the shooting of the forwards was not effective.

THE THIRD PERIOD.

With the Terras straining every nerve to increase their score. For a while it was fast and furious. Then Cahill scored the third goal. A few minutes later Cahill added one to his score and finally, shortly after the time Phelan obtained another goal for St. John's. The score was as follows:

Newfoundland Lady Centenarian

MARY ANN HACKETT, who was one hundred years of age, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Mathias, 422 St. Antoine Street, Montreal. Mrs. Hackett died in the bed to which she had been confined for several years. She had been a resident of Montreal for the greater part of her life in St. John's, Nfld., in which city she was born. In spite of her advanced age her mental faculties were active to the last, and she died without suffering. She is survived by three sons and one daughter, besides many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.—Montreal Star.

The deceased lady was well and favorably known in St. John's, being the widow of the late Mr. James Hackett, who lived on Bond Street (formerly Darling Street) for many years, and was a man who possessed a fund of valuable information, a most retentive memory, in fact, he was an encyclopaedia of local events and happenings, not alone from his own experience and knowledge, but traditions and local history handed down from his ancestors. He died about 20 years ago, aged 84 years. Mrs. Hackett was a most estimable lady, and was ever ready to extend a helping hand to the poor and needy. Her family were noted for their longevity, her mother (Mrs. Murphy) having attained the patriarchal age of 101 years. Her son, Lawrence, was one of the crew of the steamship Falcon, Capt. Bartlett, which was lost with all hands on a passage from Philadelphia to this port, coal laden, about 23 years ago.

Mayflower Club Concert

Last night a very enjoyable concert was held in the Congregational Lecture Room under the auspices of the Mayflower Club. The attendance was large and the entertainers excelled themselves. Items were contributed by the following:—Misses Langmead, E. Barnes, F. Barnes, E. Thomas, T. Noseworthy, and Master Jack Noseworthy. After a short interval, during which candy was sold, the songs "Leave it to Polly" was splendidly rendered by the following performers, each of whom was quite at home in her part:—Miss Priscilla Kitten, Jean Cowan; Miss Belalita Kitten, Marjorie Frost; Miss Herling, May Calver; Polly, Beattie Stove; Annie, Estelle Barnes; Members of the Junior Class of the Tracey School, Florence Barnes, Janet Barnes, Floris Freeman, Laura Newell, Eleanor Raynes, Isabel Thomas.

Had a Trying Time.

CABMAN CAUGHT OUT ALL NIGHT. Taking a freight to Bay Bulls on Monday, Cabman Gibbs of the West End Stand returned to town last night after a most trying experience. The roads were completely blocked after the recent snow storm and both driver and horse had a hard fight to get through. The return journey was nearly as trying and Cabman Gibbs was caught on the road during the night. He was obliged to spend the time on one of the ponds between Day Bulls and Big Pond. All his rugs were blown away in the storm and when morning came man and horse were nearly all in, but fortunately shelter was found not far distant where a rest was taken before the journey was resumed.

Note of Thanks.

The Guardians of the Juvenile T. A. and B. Society return their many thanks to the Ladies' who helped to make the annual Treat such a great success. To Messrs. O'Neill and Coady of the Majestic Theatre for giving the boys a free show. To the members of the Empire Band for the splendid programme of music rendered at the dance and to the following for assistance and special donations; T. A. Club, K. of C. House Committee, Brehm Manufacturing Company, Mrs. J. Walsh, Mrs. E. Kavanagh, Mrs. T. Connolly, Mr. G. Browning, Mr. J. Clancy, and Capt. Bulley.

No Trace of Missing Girl.

So far no trace of the girl Fowlow who strayed from her home on the Salmonier Road some two weeks ago has as yet been found. The neighbourhood has been scoured by large gangs of men, but without success. It is believed that the unfortunate girl fell in a river, which has since frozen over and that the body will not be recovered before next spring.

The following will assist in Miss T. Power's Piano and Violin Recital in College Hall, Feb. 6th: Mrs. F. J. King; Misses Ryan, Krentzlin and Fraser; Messrs. T. H. O'Neill, F. J. King, Karl Trappell and H. Gordon Christian. Tickets on sale at Royal Stationery Co.—Jan. 31.

PROFIT-TAKING!

We persistently suggested the purchase of Aitchison Railway at $85 and Union Pacific at $104. The former is now $99 and the latter $130. We urged clients to buy American Woolen at $60, now selling at $81, and Studebaker all the way from $45 to $65, now selling at $90 and very likely to sell soon at $100. Both Middle States Oil and Boston-Montana Copper are now very low and we suggest buying for the inevitable price advance.
