Poetry.

The pure, the bright, the beautiful,
That stirred our hearts in youth;
The impulse to a wordless prayer
The dreams of love and truth;
The longing after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry,
The striving after better hopes—
These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid The timid hand stretched forth to aid A brother in his need;
The kindly word in grief's dark hour,
That proves a friend indeed—
The plea for mercy, softly breathed,
When justice threatened high,
The sorrow of a contrite heart—
These things shall never die.

The memory of a clasping hand,

The memory of a clasping hand,
The pressure of a kiss,
And all the trifles sweet and frail
That make up life's bliss;
If with a firm, unchanging faith,
And holy trust and high,
Those hands have clasped and lips have met
These things shall never die.

The cruel and the bitter word
That wounded as it fell,
The chilling wants of sympathy
We feel but never tell—
The hard repulse that chills the heart
Whose hopes were bounding high,
In an unfading record kept—
These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand Must find some work to do: Must find some work to do;
Lose not a chance to waken love—
Be firm and just and true.
So shall a light that cannot fade
Beam on thee from on high,
And angels' voices say to thee,
These things shall never die.

The Typewriter.

John C. Bush, ruler and potentate of the flourishing firm of Bush, Merrill & Co., had advertised for a new typewriter, and Mrs. John Bush, supreme ruler and potentate of the afore-mentioned ruler and potentate, was on tenter hooks accordingly.

Now, there is something rather plebeian and vulgar about jealousy, even at the best, tattoo on the desk before him with his fingers. but jealousy promiscuously indulged in, and without respect of persons, is tant pis, as the | the machine over there and let me dictate to French say. Nevertheless, Mrs. Bush was not at all particular as to the persons against whom she turned the gatling guns of her ire and suspigan to dictate rapidly to her, evidently in cion. They were directed alike towards her next door neighbor, the vivacious little widow of a deceased banker, and the waiting-maid and Janet wrote: at her own table. Only once had there been a comely-looking servant in the Bush estabishment, and she had been packed off bag for Mrs. Bush could forgive anything in a servant rather than good looks. Indeed, Mrs. Bush's domestics had come in time to have a kind of local reputation of their own for pronounced and extreme ugliness. As the genial head of the household sometimes remarked under his breath—it made his face street. New York.

But if Mrs. Bush held absolute and despotic way under her own roof tree there we other places where she felt that the potent voice of her authority, must of necessity, be dumb and such a place was the flourishing warehouse of Bush, Merrill & Co. If Bush, Merrill & Co., thought best to employ a female typewriter, Mrs. Bush found that she And then he dictated rapidly again and must "possess her soul in patience," even though it cost her a pang. If this female typewriter should turn out young and pretty, Mrs. Bush saw the necessity of still submitting to the inevitable, with, at least, outward composure, even though it cost her another pang, even more intense than the former. There was only one bright spot in Mrs. Bush's sombre thoughts that morning, and that was that she was momentarily expect-ing the arrival of a favorite niece of hers, Miss Janet Wells, who was coming, in response to an oft-repeated and cordial invitation to make her a visit. Miss Wells had een educated abroad and had lived for the last 10 years of her life in Dresden, and so it had come to pass that Mrs. Bush had not set eyes on her niece since her marriage with the senior member of Bush, Merrill & Co. When at last the cab had rumbled up t the front door and her aunt had piloted Janet to her room, where the outer coating of soot and grime attendant on a long railroad jour ney was duly removed from that young lady's fair exterior, Mrs. Bush felt that the responsibilities connected with her position of hostess had been accomplished, and, throwing her arms about Janet's neck, her overburdened heart found expression in a torrent of hysterical sobs. "Dear, dear, auntie, what is the matter!" exclaimed the surprised girl, meanwhile drawing Mrs. Bush down upon the lounge beside her and placing a protecting and comforting arm about the weeping matron's waist.

And then Mrs. Bush told her all.

"She will be beautiful, Janet!" exclaimed Mrs. Bush. "The other was pretty, but not pretty enough; so she was discharged. There will be no mistake this time—the new one will be beautiful, I tell you!"

Oh, I'd give almost anything if I could watch him just for one day, and see what really goes on in that inner office when the door is closed!" "You can!" said Janet, after a moment's aunt, staring in blank amazement.

"I mean, auntie," said the girl, as she rose to her feet and began putting on her jaunty little travelling hat, "that I intend to apply for the position of typewriter to the firm of Bush, Merrill & Co."

"Never, Janet! I will not let you!" "But you cannot help yourself, auntie, dear," said Janet, with a decided little toss of her pretty head; "I am going to do it!
You will never be happy until you know the ruth, and you will never be able to know the truth in any other way. Uncle John will not know me, as he has never seen me, and if he hires me I can tell you faithfully what goes on in that inner office. The only

And having secured the out in russet velvet, and a pair of Kentucky address of Bush, Merrill & Co's warehouse, thoroughbreds, with their tails cut just Janet kissed Mrs. Bush affectionately and went tripping lightly down the steps.

Arrived at the business of Bush, Merrill & Co., Janet found a heterogenous company of women, of all ages, kinds and descriptions, awaiting an interview with the head of the firm. WORSHIP AS THEY PLEASE.

Recently the Salvation Army at Emporia, Kan., acquired an eloquent leader. A party of Normal College girls attended his meeting at the barracks and were induced to join the army. The next night they brought more girls, and this was kept up until the faculty of the college attempted to put a stop to it, when the girls raised the standard of rebellion, asserting that they intended to worship according to the dictates of their conscience.

One of the leading young women in the college amounced that she will give up her school studies to join the Army's alumming brigade in New York. It is thought that she is enlisting others to go with her. The faculty is troubled, and parents of the pupils are making anxious inquiries.

If a man is worth knowing at all, he is worth knowing well.
Every man feels instinctively that all the beautiful sentiments in the world weigh less than a single lovely action.
Amiableness is the object of love, the scope and end is to obtain it, for whose sake we love, and which our mind covets to enjoy.
It is of little traits that the greatest human character is composed.
Charity, in whatever guise she appears; is the best natured and the beat complexioned thing in the world.
A Christian life is the great key of the Gospel.
Circumstances are beyond the control of man; but his conduct is in his own power.

The state elections are taking place in ny of the states of the neighboring republic ring the present week. These correspond the our local elections, and as they are run strict party lines, they show the drift of blic sentiment in national politics. The coability is that the tidal wave which overall medical party, preceded by the ushers, Milford Marshall and Harris, of Boston, and giving them every prospect of a reeping victory in the presidential contest a year hence. The agitation for free trade seping victory in the presidential contest year hence. The agitation for free trade year hence. The agitation for free trade tariff reform was very short-lived over re, as the question is now seldom or never to the control of here, as the question is now seldom or never nentioned either in the democratic press or public speakers. The commercial crisis hrough which the nation has been passing luring the last two or three years has put a top to any further agitation in that direction for a quarter of a century. It may now safely be taken for granted that the United States will adhere to a policy of protection for that time at least.

The contest in Massachusetts is this year given an unusual interest inasmuch as the women of the state are to say by their votes whether or not they want the franchise. All the women of the state are given a vote upon the question, the only condition being that they shall register their names when the lists are being made. Judging by present indica-

These things seem to indicate quite clearly that only about one woman out of a dozen wants the franchise. While this is the case it would manifestly be unjust to heap duties and responsibilities upon the eleven, responsibilities upon the eleven, responsibilities upon the eleven, responsibilities upon the eleven, responsibilities which they do not want and from which they abrink, simply to gratify the one who does want them. The one who does want them. The one who does want the privilege has of late years been making quite a stir in the world, while the eleven have not been heard from at all; but as the minority must give way in all things to the will and the wish of the majority, the few who are clamoring for the franchise must submit for a time longer, until they first convert to their way of thinking a majority of their sex. There is no doubt that when the time comes that a majority of their sex them of the pear to be, the men are too gallant, there is still too much of the spirit of chivalry in the world, notwithstanding all that may be said to the contrary, to thrust upon the fair sex a whole round of solemn responsibilities which the great majority of them do not want.

These things seem to indicate quite clearly dout, the bride and groom, with their attendants, came and stood in front of beautiful calls lilies, when Rev. R. B. COUNTY COURT, ANNAPOLIS.

The case of Clark v. Barrett, which occupied the Court an unprecedented length of time in July last, has been determined lately by a judgment in favor of the defendant, for a balance of $4.25. It was an action by a nurseryman against his travelling salesman for an amount claimed under a guarantee of half the sales, and to recover back commissions credited him in advance on the sales that proved bad. The court held that where the plaintiff delivered the trees to the insolvent or delinquent purchasers, and gave them time, he discharged the defendant for his liability for the half; where the trees were tendered, and for want of payment were resold at a discount, or perished, the defendant was held liable. Notice of appeal has been given. Gillis & Harris for pltff.; J. M. Owen for defendant. COUNTY COURT, ANNAPOLIS.

MR. EDITOR,—I had the privilege a few weeks ago, through your columns, of again recording my protest against the proposed new road law. for us—a compulsory cash tax system, of trolled by officials of a state's legislature troited by officials of a state's legislature; men who will come in and make your road and your tax what they think proper. It is a most serious action in the direction of destroying local government, and in its place the establishment of a rash, pernicious, political machine. The election of councillors all over the province should be an emphatic protest against it.

GENTLEMEN,—Having been solicited to again allow myself to be a candidate to represent Ward No. 4, in the approaching municipal election, I once more comply with the request, and if elected and permitted to serve for the next three years it will make a quarter of a century that I have enjoyed your confidence and support.

three years it will make a quarter of a century that I have enjoyed your confidence and support.

Being associated with the committees having the most important and onerous duties to perform during the past twenty-two years, my record lies clearly before you, and it is entirely unnecessary for me to go into any of the details of the very many important events which have taken place in matters municipal during that have always taken an active and how which I have always taken an active and how which I have always taken an active and how which I have always taken an active and how which I have always taken an active and how which I have always taken an active and how which I have always taken an active and how which I have always taken and the community in general.

As we are all prone to mistakes there may have been occasions when my action on important measures was in error; but, if such has been the case in the judgment of my friends, they should consider that it is no easy matter to decide on the spur of the moment just which way a vote should always be thrown.

Should I not again have the honor of being myself upontactive, I can at least congratulate myself upontactive, I can at least congratulate myself upontactive, I can at least congratulate in a construction of the confidence of the best of my hardly any other municipality in the parties of those whose support I am now seeking.

A few days ago a very intelligent Carleton county, N. B. farmer gave me some very interesting practical information relative to the position of the farmers of his county as compared with the neighbor farmer across the line in the state of Maine. On the subject of markets he thought the Maine farmer had the advantage, but nevertheless he would rather have his farm on the Canadian side from purely economic causes. I saked "why?" His reply was "the taxes make all the difference." I asked, "what taxes?" He replied: "Principally the road tax. We in Carleton work out our tax and it is small compared with what the Houlton farmer has to pay."

He assured me that while his own tax was only about $13 it would be at least $50 if his farm was in the state of Maine. There they have a system similar to the one prepared for us—a compulsory cash tax system, controlled by officials of a state's least.
