The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol  $\rightarrow$  (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol  $\nabla$  (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole  $\rightarrow$  signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole  $\nabla$  signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. LIFE AND WRITINGS OF JOHN TRUMBULL, LL. D.

MACFINGAL, the principal Poem in this collection, has been more than forty years before the public, and has passed through the ordeal of criticism, in all its various forms of gazettes, magazines, and reviews, both in England and America. Being published anonymously, the world were left to their conjectures, as to the author. The first part of the poem, containing the two first cantos, was printed in Philadelphia, in the fall of the year 1775; and in the course of the next year, reprinted in London, where it passed through several editions. The nature of the subject and the situation of the times gave it popularity with the anti-ministerial party, who were averse to the war with America: but it was asserted that the author was an Englishman. Sometimes he was affirmed to be an Oxford scholar, then on his travels in this country; sometimes a British officer, who had been superceded in their service, had joined the Americans and written the poem in revenge. When it was afterwards discovered that the writer was a native of New England, he of course received his due share of that obloquy and contempt, which is lavished by their compilers of reviews, on every thing which appertains to this country. The Quarterly Review, with its usual accuracy of information, has lately declared that the poem was written by one Mr. Fingal, who, it assures us, is no descendant of the hero of Ossian. The Edinburgh Review contents itself with simply asserting that "the Americans have no literature." In the United States, the conjectures were for a long time equally various; and after his name became generally known, many false anecdotes, and several erroneous accounts of his life, have been printed by those who had no other information than rumour and hearsay. Hundreds of essays have been charged upon his pen, containing principles which he never held, abuse on persons whom he respected, and low attempts at humor, which would have disgraced the scurrility of PETER PINDAR. In a word, to him have been ascribed, as he once complained,

"Jests he ne'er utter'd, deeds he ne'er achiev'd, Rhymes he ne'er wrote, and lives (thank heaven) he never lived."

On these accounts, it seems necessary that a short and accurate Memoir of his life and writings should accompany this collection of his poems.

The family of Trumbull was among the early settlers in New England. Their ancestor came from England, and in 1645 fixed his residence at Ipswich in Massachusetts. His son, named John, removed and established himself at Suffield in Connecticut. He had three sons, John, Joseph, and Benoni, whose descendants are still living in this state. The Rev. Benjamin Trumbull, D.D., the respectable historian of Connecticut, was the grandson of Benoni. Joseph settled in Lebanon, and at his death left one son, Jonathan Trumbull, who was governor of the state during the whole revolutionary war, and whose patriotic exertions are amply recorded in history. Two of his sons were Jonathan Trumbull, afterwards governor of the state, and John Trumbull, the celebrated painter, whose merits have long been distinguished, both in Europe and America.

The author of these poems is the grandson of John Trumbull, eldest son of him who first settled in Suffield. He was born on the 13th day of April, old style, (the 24th according to the present mode of computation,) in the year 1750, in the parish of Westbury, then a part of the town of Waterbury, in New Haven county, but since formed into a separate township, by the name of Watertown, and annexed to the county of Litchfield. The settlement of that village was begun a few years before his birth. His father, who was the first minister of the Congregational church in that place, was a good classical scholar, highly respected by his brethren, and for many years one of the trustees, or fellows, of Yale College. His mother was a daughter of the Rev. Samuel Whitman, of Farmington, in Hartford county, and granddaughter of the Rev. Solomon Stoddard, D.D., of Northampton, in Massachusetts.

Being an only son, and of a very delicate and sickly constitution, he was of course the favorite of his mother. She had received an education superior to most of her sex, and not only instructed him in reading, from his earliest infancy, but finding him possessed of an extraordinary memory, taught him all the hymns, songs, and other verses, with which she was acquainted. His father's small library consisted mostly of classical and theological books. The Spectator and Watts' Lyric Poems were the only works of merit in the belles-lettres, which he possessed. Young Trumbull not only committed to memory most of the poetry they contained, but was seized with an unaccountable ambition of composing verses himself, in which he was encouraged by his parents. The country clergy at that time generally attempted to increase their income, by keeping private schools for the éducation of youth. When he was about five years of age, his father took under his care a lad, seventeen years old, to instruct and qualify him for admission as a member of Yale College. Trumbull noticed the tasks first imposed; which were to learn by heart the Latin Accidence and Lilly's Grammar, and to construe the Select Colloquies of Corderius, by the help of a literal translation. Without the knowledge of any person, except his mother, he began in this way the study of the Latin language. After a few weeks, his father discovered his wishes, and finding that by the aid of a better memory, his son was able to outstrip his fellow-student, encouraged him to proceed. At the commencement in September 1757, the two lads were presented at college, examined by the tutors and admitted as members. Trumbull, however, on account of his extreme youth at that time, and subsequent ill health, was not sent to reside at college till the year 1763. He spent these six years in a miscellaneous course of study, making himself master of the Greek and Latin authors usually taught in that seminary, reading all the books he could meet with, and occasionally attempting to imitate, both in prose and verse, the style of the best English writers, whose works he could procure in his native village. These were of course few. The Paradise Lost, Thompson's Seasons, with some of the poems of Dryden and Pope, were the principal. On commencing his collegiate life, he found little regard paid to English composition, or the acquirement of a correct style. The Greek and Latin books, in the study of which only, his class were employed, required but a small portion of his time. By the advice of his tutor, he turned his thoughts to Algebra, Geometry, and astronomical calculations, which were then newly introduced and encouraged by the instructors. He chiefly pursued this course during the three first years. In his senior year he began to resume his former attention to English literature. After receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1767, he remained three years longer at college as a graduate. Being now master of his own time, he devoted himself chiefly to polite letters; reading all the Greek and Latin classics especially the poets and orators, and studying the style and endeavoring to imitate the manner of the best English writers.

His acquaintance now commenced with Doctor Dwight, afterwards president of the university, who was then in his third year in college, and two years his junior in age. That young gentleman had translated two of the finest Odes of Horace, in a manner so elegant and poetical, as would not have disgraced his more mature productions. Happy in the discovery of a rising genius, Mr. Trumbull immediately sought his acquaintance, and began an intimacy, which continued during their joint residence at New Haven, and a friendship terminated only by death.

At this period the learned languages, mathematics, logic, and scholastic theology, were alone deemed worthy of the attention of a scholar. They were dignified with the name of Solid Learning. English poetry and the belles lettres were called folly, nonsense, and an idle waste of time. The two friends were obliged to stem the tide of general ridicule and censure. This situation first called forth the satirical talents of Trumbull, in occasional humorous and poetical essays. Their party was soon increased by the accession of several young men of genius; and a material change was eventually effected in the taste and pursuits of the students.

In 1769, they began the publication of a series of essays in the manner of the Spectator, in a gazette printed in Boston, and continued it for several months. They next commenced a course of similar essays in the newspapers printed at New Haven, which they increased occasionally to more than forty numbers.

Yale College was founded in the year 1700, by the donations of a number of the Congregational clergy; and a Board of Trustees was soon after incorporated by a charter from the legislature. It was designed as a religious institution for the education of youth for the ministry. In 1739, the Rev. Thomas Clapp was appointed president, and continued in office almost thirty years. He was an accurate scholar in the learned languages, particularly fond of the Hebrew, and uncommonly skilled in geometrical and astronomical calculations. By his aid and influence, some of the students were induced to turn their attention to these subjects. About the year 1740, a few members of the higher classes had attempted the cultivation of polite literature, and produced some successful essays in English poetry. But when they quitted the college they left no successors; and the poem entitled, Philosophic Solitude, by William Livingston, afterwards governor of New Jersey, is all that remains to the public of their productions at that period. In 1763, the study of Algebra was first introduced by the tutors, and made a part of the collegiate exercises.

But Yale College had now become unpopular among a large proportion of the inhabitants of the colony. The trustees, relying on their charter, claimed to be completely independent of the government; and denied its right of visitation, or of any interference with the management of the institution. They were charged with illiberality towards all denominations of Christians but their own. Many civilians encouraged the students in opposition to their authority. A petition was drawn and signed by almost every member of the higher classes, addressed to the trustees, containing a variety of charges against their instructors, and praying for their dismissal from office. All authority and subordination were now at an end; the tutors abdicated, and the scholars were dispersed during the summer of the year 1766. After holding the commencement in September, the president resigned his office. The professor of theology was appointed president pro tempore. Three very respectable gentlemen and accomplished scholars were chosen to the tutorship; one of whom was Mr. Mitchell, since Chief Justice of the State. After the vacation the students were assembled, and order was again established. The management of the institution fell almost entirely into the hands of the tutors. They encouraged the study of the English grammar and language, and excited some attention to composition and oratory. But the state of the college precluded any great or immediate innovation in the usual course of instruction.

In 1769, Mr. Joseph Howe, afterwards pastor of a church in Boston, was appointed one of the tutors. He was not only a good classical scholar, but possessed an elegant taste and considerable poetical talents. Besides the usual collegiate studies, he employed the class under his immediate care in English compositions, instructed them in the beauties of style, and exercised them frequently in public declamation. A relish for polite literature became general among the students.

In September 1771, all the tutors, except Mr. Howe, resigned the office. Messrs. Trumbull and Dwight were chosen to supply the vacancies. From this period, every effort was unanimously made, to cultivate in that seminary, a correct taste in style and elocution.

In 1772, Trumbull published the first part of a poem, which he entitled, the Progress of Dulness, designed to expose the absurd methods of education, which then prevailed; he added a second and third part in the course of the next year. Dwight published a poem entitled, America, written in the manner of Pope's Windsor Forest. He had some time before begun his greatest poetical work, The Conquest of Canaan; and now completed his first sketch in five books. By the advice of Mr. Howe, he added the Vision of Futurity, which now makes the tenth book, and upon the suggestion of Mr. Trumbull, he inserted the night-scene of the battle, illuminated by the flames of the burning city of Ai. The whole was the work of Dwight; those gentlemen assisted him, only by their criticism and advice. After their dispersion he considerably altered and enlarged the poem, and published it in its present form, in eleven books.

During their residence at the university, several young gentlemen were associated in their literary and poetical society, particularly Messrs. David Humphreys and Joel Barlow.

Trumbull, while he held the office of tutor, paid as much attention, as his other avocations would admit, to the study of law, which he had now selected as his future profession. In November 1773, he was admitted as a practising attorney at the bar in Connecticut, but immediately went to Boston, and entered as a student in the office of John Adams, Esq., since president of the United States; and took lodgings with Thomas Cushing, Esq., then speaker of the House of Representatives, afterwards a delegate to the first Congress, and lieutenant-governor of the state of Massachusetts. He was now placed in the center of American politics. The contest between Great Britain and the colonies approached rapidly towards a crisis. The violence of party was extreme. The governor, council, judges, and all the legal authority under the crown, employed their utmost efforts to establish the universal supremacy, and enforce the oppressive acts, of the English parliament. The leaders of the popular party had the complete control of the House of Representatives, and directed every movement of the populace. By means of an extensive correspondence, with men of the best information at the British and French courts, they were fully convinced, at that early period, that nothing short of warlike resistance, could successfully oppose the claims of Great Britain to unlimited authority; and that, without eventually declaring independence and assuming the rights of sovereignty as a nation, no important assistance could be obtained from France, Spain, or any European power. Still the people were impressed with an awful idea of the omnipotence of Britain, and shuddered at the thought of attempting a separation. They placed their hopes on the effect of their petitions to the king, their agreements to stop all commercial intercourse, and the exertions of their numerous friends in the British nation and parliament. To cement the union of all the colonies, to counteract the fears of the people and encourage their confidence in their own strength and resources, to lead them into measures decisive in their consequences, and to prepare their minds for resistance by arms, was the only policy which the leaders could, at that time, pursue. Trumbull entered into their sentiments, with all the ardor in favor of liberty, which characterizes a youthful politician. Though he prosecuted the study of law with the utmost attention, he frequently employed his leisure hours in writing essays on political subjects, in the public gazettes; which had perhaps a greater effect from the novelty of his manner, and the caution he used to prevent any discovery of the real author. Nor did he neglect occasionally to cultivate the muse; and just before he left Boston, anonymously published his Elegy on the Times, which is contained in the present collection. Every thing then verging towards hostility in Massachusetts, the session of the courts being suspended, and Mr. Adams absent at the Congress in Philadelphia, he returned to New Haven, and successfully commenced practice at the bar, in November 1774.

The year 1775 was a period of terror and dismay. The war had commenced by the battle at Lexington. Unconditional submission, or a total rejection of the authority of the crown, presented the only alternative. Every exertion was made by the friends of American liberty, to inspire confidence in our cause, to crush the efforts of the tory party and to prepare the public mind for the declaration of independence. With these views, at the solicitation of some of his friends in Congress, Trumbull wrote the first part of the poem of M'Fingal, which they immediately procured to be published at Philadelphia, where Congress was then assembled. He had also formed the plan of the work, sketched some of the scenes of the third canto and written the beginning of the fourth, with the commencement of the Vision, at which point, not being gifted with the prophetic powers of his hero, he was obliged to leave it then unfinished.

In November 1776, he married Miss Sarah Hubbard, daughter of Colonel Leverett Hubbard of New Haven.

That town being exposed to invasion, and all business rapidly declining, he returned in May 1777 to his native place, where he remained four succeeding years. Too constant application to his studies, and the fatigue of attending courts at a distance, in all seasons, and especially during the severe winter of 1780, occasioned the loss of his health by a nervous decline. With the hope of recovery, by a change of situation to a place more advantageous for his professional business, and more agreeable by its literary society, he removed, in June 1781, with his family, to Hartford, where he has ever since resided.

A friendly club was soon after established, who assembled once a week for the discussion of questions on proposed subjects, legal, philosophical and political. Trumbull, though fully employed in the duties of his profession, was one of its most active members. The fate of the revolutionary war being now eventually decided by the capture of Lord Cornwallis and his army, the friends of the author urged him to complete the poem of M'Fingal; and having obtained his promise, immediately put into circulation a subscription for the work. Thus situated, he employed his leisure hours in revising the first half of the poem, which he divided into two cantos, and in composing the last. The whole was finished, and the first edition published at Hartford, before the close of the year 1782. As no author, at that period, was entitled by law to the copyright of his productions, the work soon became the prey of every bookseller and printer, who chose to appropriate it to his own benefit. Among more than thirty different impressions, one only, at any subsequent time, was published with the permission, or even the knowledge of the writer; and the poem remained the property of newsmongers, hawkers, pedlars, and petty chapmen.

After the peace in 1783, the United States were left without any efficient government, and connected only by the Articles of Confederation. Each state was an independent sovereignty and pursued its own separate plans of policy. The officers of the revolutionary army were every where unpopular, on account of the extra pay for five years, granted them by Congress in lieu of half pay for life, which was first stipulated. Their remaining in combination by forming the society of the Cincinnati was also a subject of general jealousy and clamour. A large addition to the national debt arose from the unpaid arrears of the army, and the sums promised to the soldiers, as a compensation for payments in depreciated bills, and as a douceur, to persuade them to retire peaceably to their homes, on being disbanded at the close of the war. The country was greatly impoverished; and almost every individual believed, that he had already paid and suffered more than his just proportion of the public expense.

In Connecticut, mobs were raised to prevent the officers from receiving their certificates for the five years' pay. A self-constituted convention assembled to second the views of the populace, and for that purpose, to effect a revolution in the state, and fill every office with the leaders of disorganization. Had not the insurrection of Shays, in Massachusetts, been speedily crushed, the eastern states would have become a scene of anarchy and confusion. A considerable proportion of the people of Connecticut were prepared to join in a general opposition to government, and involve the country in the horrors of civil war. The friends of order, justice, and regular authority, endeavored to counteract this spirit by every effort in their power—by remonstrance, argument, ridicule, and satire. Among other occasional productions, a course of essays was published under the signature of Lycurgus, in a strain of ironical humor, exposing to contempt the principles and views of the Jacobinical party.

The public in time became sensible of the want of a general and efficient government; and the contest ended happily in the adoption of the federal constitution. During most of this period, several of the principal literary characters of the state were resident in Hartford, and gave to the friends of order whatever assistance could be afforded by their publications. The principal work they produced was a set of essays, entitled American Antiquities, first printed in the gazettes in Hartford and New Haven, and reprinted in other newspapers, in almost every part of the United States. At this time public curiosity had been awakened by the discovery of ancient Indian fortifications, with other relics, which were considered as proofs, that this country had once been inhabited by a people highly advanced in the arts of civilized life. The story of the emigration of Madoc, with a body of Britons and Welch, about the year 800, and of an existing tribe of their descendants in the interior part of the continent, was revived and circulated. These writers assumed the fiction, that in digging among the ruins of one of those forts, an ancient heroic poem in the English language was found. The essays consisted of supposed extracts from that poem, (which they styled, The Anarchiad,) accompanied with critical remarks in prose. Colonel Humphreys, who had seen in England a similar work, called the Rolliad, ascribed to Fox, Sheridan and their associates, was the first proposer of the design. Most of the essays were written in concert. The writers were Humphreys, Barlow, Doctor Lemuel Hopkins, and our author. The publications of these gentlemen were supposed, at the time, to have had considerable influence on the public taste and opinions; and by the boldness of their satire, to have checked and intimidated the leaders of disorganization and infidel philosophy.

After the adoption of the federal constitution, Trumbull was first called forth to act in a public capacity. In 1789, he was appointed attorney to the state for the county of Hartford. In May 1792, he was representative of the town of Hartford in the state legislature, where he took an active and influential part in their debates and deliberations; particularly in obtaining an enlargement of the funds, and an alteration of the charter of Yale College. But the increasing burthen of his employments, public and professional, again impaired his health, and at length reduced him to the lowest stages of nervous debility. He spent his summers, for two or three successive years, in taking long journies and visiting the most noted mineral springs, in quest of health, but in vain. In 1795, he resigned his office of State's Attorney, and declined all public business. In November 1798, he experienced a severe fit of sickness, from which, contrary to expectation, he escaped with life, and which appeared to form the crisis of his nervous disorders. His convalescence, though slow, was favorably progressive; and as, during his long confinement, he never relinquished his habits of reading, nor his attention to public affairs, he was enabled, on his return to society, to resume his former rank, in professional business, and official employments. In May 1800, he was again a member of the legislature. In 1801, he was appointed a Judge of the Superior Court of the state of Connecticut. From this period he declined any interference in the politics of the state, and applied himself exclusively to the duties of his office—being of opinion, that the character of a partizan and political writer was inconsistent with the station of a judge and destructive of the confidence of suitors in the impartiality of judiciary decisions. In 1808, he received from the legislature the additional appointment of a Judge of the Supreme Court of Errors. He was happy in the society of his brethren on the bench; and the courts of the state were at no period more respectable for legal science, or more respected for the justice and integrity of their adjudications.

To these offices he was annually appointed by the legislature, till their session in May 1819, when * *

His high descent our heralds trace

For though their name some part may lack,
Old Fingal spelt it with a Mac;

We hope will add the next edition.

Whence gain'd our 'Squire two gifts by right,
Rebellion, and the Second-sight.
Of these, the first, in ancient days,
Had gain'd the noblest palm of praise,
'Gainst kings stood forth and many a crown'd head
With terror of its might confounded;
Till rose a king with potent charm
His foes by meekness to disarm,
Whom every Scot and Jacobite
Strait fell in love with at first sight;
Whose gracious speech with aid of pensions,
Hush'd down all murmurs of dissensions,
And with the sound of potent metal
Brought all their buzzing swarms to settle;
Who rain'd his ministerial manna,
Till loud Sedition sung hosanna;
The grave Lords-Bishops and the Kirk
United in the public work;
Rebellion, from the northern regions,
With Bute and Mansfield swore allegiance;
All hands combin'd to raze, as nuisance,
Of church and state the Constitutions,
Pull down the empire, on whose ruins
They meant to edify their new ones;
Enslave th' Amer'can wildernesses,
And rend the provinces in pieces.

With these our 'Squire, among the valiant'st,
Employ'd his time, and tools and talents,
And found this new rebellion pleasing
As his old king-destroying treason.

Nor less avail'd his optic sleight,
And Scottish gift of second-sight.*
No ancient sybil, fumed in rhyme,
Saw deeper in the womb of time;
No block in old Dodona's grove
Could ever more orac'lar prove.
Nor only saw he all that could be,
But much that never was, nor would be;
Whereby all prophets far outwent he,
Though former days produced a plenty:
For any man with half an eye
What stands before him can espy;
But optics sharp it needs, I ween,
To see what is not to be seen.
As in the days of ancient fame,
Prophets and poets were the same,
And all the praise that poets gain
Is for the tales they forge and feign:

* They who wish to understand the nature and modus operandi of the Highland vision by second-sight, may consult the profound Johnson, in his "Tour to the Hebrides."

So gain'd our 'Squire his fame by seeing
 Such things, as never would have being;
 Whence he for oracles was grown
 The very tripod* of his town.
 Gazettes no sooner rose a lie in,
 But strait he fell to prophesying;
 Made dreadful slaughter in his course,
 O'erthrew provincials, foot and horse,
 Brought armies o'er, by sudden pressings,
 Of Hanoverians, Swiss, and Hessians,
 Feasted with blood his Scottish clan,
 And hang'd all rebels to a man,
 Divided their estates and pelf,
 And took a goodly share himself.
 All this with spirit energetic,
 He did by second-sight prophetic.

Thus stored with intellectual riches,
 Skill'd was our 'Squire in making speeches;
 Where strength of brains united centers
 With strength of lungs surpassing Stentor's.*
 But as some muskets so contrive it,
 As oft to miss the mark they drive at,

* The tripod was a sacred three-legged stool, from which the ancient priests uttered their oracles.

† Stentor, the loud-voiced herald in Homer.

And though well aim'd at duck or plover,
Bear wide, and kick their owners over:
So fared our 'Squire, whose reas'ning toil
Would often on himself recoil,
And so much injured more his side,
The stronger arguments he applied;
As old war-elephants, dismay'd,
Trode down the troops they came to aid,
And hurt their own side more in battle,
Than less and ordinary cattle.

Yet at Town-meetings every chief
Pinn'd faith on great M'FINGAL's sleeve;
Which when he lifted, all by rote
Raised sympathetic hands to vote.

The Town, our hero's scene of action,
Had long been torn by feuds of faction,
And as each party's strength prevails,
It turn'd up different, heads or tails;
With constant rattling, in a trice,
Show'd various sides, as oft as dice.
As that famed weaver, wife t' Ulysses,*
By night her day's-work pick'd in pieces,
And though she stoutly did bestir her,
Its finishing was ne'er the nearer:

* Homer's Odyssey.

So did this town with ardent zeal
Weave cobwebs for the public weal,
Which when completed, or before,
A second vote in pieces tore.
They met, made speeches full long-winded,
Resolv'd, protested and rescinded;
Addresses sign'd; then chose committees
To stop all drinking of Bohea teas,*
With winds of doctrine veer'd about,
And turn'd all whig committees out.
Meanwhile our hero, as their head,
In pomp the tory faction led,
Still following, as the 'Squire should please,
Successive on like files of geese.

And now the town was summon'd, greeting,
To grand parading of Town-meeting;
A show, that strangers might appal,
As Rome's grave senate did the Gaul.

* One of the subjects of dispute, which brought on the war, was a tax upon tea, on its importation into the colonies. And therefore one of the weapons of opposition was an universal agreement by the people, not to drink any tea, till the tax was taken off. The committees referred to, were called Committees of Correspondence: part of their business was to enforce the execution of the voluntary regulations made by the people in the several towns.

High o'er the rout, on pulpit stairs,*
 Mid den of thieves in house of prayers,
 (That house, which loth a rule to break
 Serv'd heaven, but one day in the week,
 Open the rest for all supplies
 Of news, and politics, and lies;)

Stood forth the constable; and bore
 His staff, like Merc'ry's wand of yore,
 Waved potent round, the peace to keep,
 As that laid dead men's souls to sleep.
 Above and near th' hermetic staff,
 The Moderator's† upper half
 In grandeur o'er the cushion bow'd,
 Like Sol half seen behind a cloud.
 Beneath stood voters of all colours,
 Whigs, tories, orators, and brawlers;
 With every tongue in either faction
 Prepared like minute-men‡ for action;

* In country towns in New England, the town-meeting is generally held in the church, or meeting-house.

† Moderator is the name given to the chairman or speaker of a town-meeting. He is here seated in the pulpit.

‡ Minute-men were that part of the militia of our country, who being drafted, and enrolled by themselves, were prepared to march at a minute's warning wherever the public safety required.

Where truth and falsehood, wrong and right,
Drew all their legions forth to fight.
With equal uproar scarcely rave
Opposing winds in Æolus' cave;
Such dialogues with earnest face
Held never Balaam with his ass.

With daring zeal and courage blest,
Honorius first the crowd address'd.
When now our 'Squire, returning late,
Arrived to aid the grand debate;
With strange, sour faces sate him down,
While thus the orator went on.
—"For ages blest thus Britain rose,
The terror of encircling foes;
Her heroes ruled the bloody plain,
Her conq'ring standard awed the main.
The different palms her triumph grace
Of arms in war, of arts in peace.
Unharrass'd by maternal care,
Each rising province flourish'd fair;
Whose various wealth, with liberal hand,
By far o'erpaid the parent land.*

* Before the revolution, the colonies ever styled Britain their mother-country, themselves her children, and England their home.

But though so bright her sun might shine,
'Twas quickly hasting to decline,
With feeble ray, too weak t' assuage
The damps, that chill the eve of age.

“For states, like men, are doom'd as well
Th' infirmities of age to feel,*
And from their different forms of empire,
Are seiz'd with every deep distemper.
Some states high fevers have made head in,
Which nought could cure but copious bleeding;
While others have grown dull and dozy,
Or fix'd in helpless idiocy;
Or turn'd demoniacs to belabor
Each peaceful habitant and neighbor;
Or vex'd with hypochondriac fits,
Have broke their strength, and lost their wits.
Thus now while hoary years prevail,
Good mother Britain seem'd to fail;
Her back bent, crippled with the weight
Of age, and debts, and cares of state.
For debts she owed, and those so large,
As twice her wealth could ne'er discharge,

* This is asserted by all the grave statesmen, who treat on the disorders of that noted aliegorical personage, the Body Politic.

And now 'twas thought, so high they'd grown,
She'd come upon the parish soon.

Her arms, of nations once the dread,
She scarce could lift above her head;
Her deafen'd ears, 'twas all their hope,
The final trump perhaps might ope;
So long they'd been, in stupid mood,
Shut to the hearing of all good.

Grim death had put her in his scroll
Down on the execution-roll;
And Gallic crows, as she grew weaker,
Began to whet their beaks to pick her.

“And now her powers decaying fast,
Her grand climact'ric had she pass'd,
And just like all old women else,
Fell in the vapors much by spells.
Strange whimsies on her fancy struck,
And gave her brain a dismal shock;
Her memory fails, her judgment ends;
She quite forgot her nearest friends,
Lost all her former sense and knowledge,
And fitted fast for Bedlam-college.
Of all the powers she once retain'd,
Conceit and pride alone remain'd.
As Eve, when falling, was so modest
To fancy she should grow a goddess;*

As madmen, straw who long have slept on,
Style themselves Jupiter and Neptune :
So Britain in her airs so flighty,
Now took a whim to be Almighty ;*
Urg'd on to desperate heights of frenzy,
Affirm'd her own Omnipotency ;
Would rather ruin all her race,
Than yield supremacy, an ace ;
Assumed all rights divine, as grown
The church's head, like good Pope Joan ;†
Swore all the world should bow and skip,
At her almighty goodyship ;
Anath'matized each unbeliever,
And vow'd to live and rule for ever.
Her servants humor'd every whim,
And own'd at once her power supreme ;

* See the Act declaring her right to bind the colonies in all cases whatsoever. See also Blackstone's remarks, in his Commentaries, on the Omnipotence of the British parliament.

† Whether there actually was a woman, who assumed the dress of a monk, and was finally elected Pope, has occasioned violent disputes among the ecclesiastical historians. To them we must leave it—since the world have not the benefit, as in the case of the Chevalier D'Eon, of the report of any legal trial for ascertaining her sex, before any Lord Mansfield of that age.

Her follies nursed in all their stages,
 For sake of liveries and wages ;
 In Stephen's Chapel* then in state too
 Set up her golden calf to pray to ;
 Proclaim'd its power and right divine,
 And call'd for worship at its shrine ;
 And for poor heretics to burn us,
 Bade North† prepare his fiery furnace ;
 Struck bargains with the Romish churches,
 Infallibility to purchase ;
 Set wide for Popery the door,‡
 Made friends with Babel's scarlet whore,
 Till both the matrons join'd in clan ;
 No sisters made a better span.

" What wonder then, ere this was over,
 That she should make her children suffer ?
 She first without pretence or reason,
 Claim'd right whate'er we had to seize on ;
 And with determin'd resolution
 To put her claims in execution,

* The parliament-house is called St. Stephen's Chapel.

† Her Prime Minister of State at that period.

‡ Alluding to the Act of parliament, establishing the Papal worship and religion in Canada.

Sent fire and sword, and call'd it Lenity ;
Starv'd us, and christen'd it Humanity.
For she, her case grown desperater,
Mistook the plainest things in nature ;
Had lost all use of eyes or wits,
Took slavery for the bill of rights ;
Trembled at whigs and deem'd them foes,
And stopp'd at loyalty her nose ;
Styled her own children, brats and catiffs,
And knew us not from th' Indian natives.

“What though with supplicating prayer,
We begg'd our lives and goods she'd spare ;
Not vainer vows with sillier call
Elijah's prophets raised to Baal ;
A worshipp'd stock of god or goddess
Had better heard and understood us.
So once Egyptians at the Nile
Ador'd their guardian crocodile,
Who heard them first with kindest ear,
And ate them to reward their prayer ;
And could he talk, as kings can do,
Had made as gracious speeches too.

“Thus, spite of prayers, her schemes pursuing,
She still went on to work our ruin ;
Annull'd our charters of releases,
And tore our title-deeds in pieces ;

Then sign'd her warrants of ejection,
And gallows rais'd to stretch our necks on.
And on these errands sent in rage
Her bailiff, and her hangman, Gage ;
And at his heels, like dogs to bait us,
Dispatch'd her Posse Comitatus.

“ No state e'er chose a fitter person
To carry such a silly farce on.
As heathen gods in ancient days
Receiv'd at second hand their praise,
Stood imaged forth in stones and stocks,
And deified in barber's blocks :
So Gage* was chose to represent
Th' omnipotence of Parliament.
As ancient heroes gain'd by shifts,
From gods, as poets tell, their gifts ;
Our general, as his actions show,
Gain'd like assistance from below,
By Satan graced with full supplies
From all his magazine of lies.

* General Gage, commander-in-chief of the king's troops in North America, was in 1773 appointed governor and vice-admiral of Massachusetts, in the room of Hutchinson, who had been the most active agent of the minister in fomenting the disputes which brought on the war. Lond. Edit.

Yet could his practice ne'er impart
The wit to tell a lie with art.
Those lies alone are formidable
Where artful truth is mix'd with fable.
But Gage has bungled oft so vilely,
No soul would credit lies so silly,
Outwent all faith, and stretch'd beyond
Credulity's extremest end :
Whence plain it seems, though Satan once
O'erlook'd with scorn each brainless dunce,
And blundering brutes in Eden shunning,
Chose out the serpent for his cunning ;
Of late he is not half so nice,
Nor picks out aids because they're wise :
For had he stood upon perfection,
His present friends had lost th' election,
And fared as hard, in this proceeding,
As owls and asses did in Eden.
“ Yet fools are often dangerous enemies ;
As meanest reptiles are most venomous :
Nor e'er could Gage, by craft or prowess,
Have done a whit more mischief to us ;
Since he began th' unnat'ral war,
The work his masters sent him for.
“ And are there in this freeborn land
Among ourselves a venal band ,

A dastard race, who long have sold
Their souls and consciences for gold ;
Who wish to stab their country's vitals,
Could they enjoy surviving titles ;
With pride behold our mischiefs brewing,
Insult and triumph in our ruin ?
Priests, who, if Satan should sit down
To make a Bible of his own,
Would gladly, for the sake of mitres,
Turn his inspired and sacred writers ;
Lawyers, who, should he wish to prove
His claim to his old seat above,
Would, if his cause he'd give them fees in,
Bring writs of Entry sur disseisin,
Plead for him boldly at the session,
And hope to put him in possession ;
Merchants who, for his friendly aid
Would make him partner in their trade,
Hang out their signs in goodly show,
Inscribed with, Beelzebub & Co. ;
And judges, who would list his pages,
For proper liveries and wages ;
And who as humbly cringe and bow
To all his mortal servants now ?
There are ; and shame, with pointing gestures,
Marks out th' Addressers and Protesters ;*

* The Addressers were those who addressed General

Whom following down the stream of fate,
Contempts ineffable await ;
And public infamy forlorn,
Dread hate and everlasting scorn."

As thus he spake, our 'Squire M'FINGAL
Gave to his partisans a signal.
Not quicker roll'd the waves to land,
When Moses waved his potent wand,
Nor with more uproar, than the tories
Set up a general rout in chorus ;
Laugh'd, hiss'd, hem'd, murmur'd, groan'd and jeer'd ;
Honorius now could scarce be heard,
Our Muse, amid th' increasing roar,
Could not distinguish one word more ;
Though she sate by, in firm record
To take in short hand every word,
As ancient Muses wont ; to whom
Old bards for depositions come ;
Who must have writ them ; for how else
Could they each speech verbatim tell 's ?

Gage with expressions of gratitude and attachment, on his arrival with a fleet and army to subdue the country: the Protesters, those who published protests against the measures of the first Congress, and the resolves of the people in town-meetings and conventions.

And though some readers of romances
Are apt to strain their tortured fancies,
And doubt (when lovers all alone
Their sad soliloquies do groan,
Grieve many a page, with no one near 'em,
And nought but rocks and groves to hear 'em)
What sprite infernal could have tattled,
And told the authors all they prattled;
Whence some weak minds have made objection
That what they scribbled must be fiction:
'Tis false; for while the lover spoke,
The Muse was by with table-book,
And least some blunder should ensue,
Echo stood clerk, and kept the cue.
And though the speech ben't worth a groat,
It can't be call'd the author's fault;
But error merely of the prater,
Who should have talk'd to th' purpose better:
Which full excuse, my critic brothers,
May help me out as well as others;
And 'tis design'd, though here it lurk,
To serve as preface to this work.
So let it be—for now our 'Squire
No longer could contain his ire,
And rising 'midst applauding tories,
Thus vented wrath upon Honorius.

Quoth he, "'Tis wondrous what strange stuff
 Your whigs-heads are compounded of;
 Which force of logic cannot pierce,
 Nor syllogistic carte and tierce,
 Nor weight of scripture or of reason
 Suffice to make the least impression.
 Not heeding what ye rais'd contest on,
 Ye prate, and beg, or steal the question;
 And when your boasted arguings fail,
 Strait leave all reas'ning off, to rail.

"Have not our High-church clergy* made it
 Appear from Scriptures, which ye credit,
 That right divine from heaven was lent
 To kings, that is, the parliament,
 Their subjects to oppress and teaze,
 And serve the devil when they please?
 Did not they write, and pray, and preach,
 And torture all the parts of speech,
 About rebellion make a pother,
 From one end of the land to th' other?
 And yet gain'd fewer proselyte whigs,
 Than old St. Anth'ny 'mongst the pigs;†

* The absurd doctrines of passive obedience, non resistance, and the divine right of kings, were inculcated with great vehemence at this period.

† The stories of St. Anthony and his pig, and of St. Austin's preaching to the fishes, are told in the Popish legends.

And changed not half so many vicious,
 As Austin when he preach'd to fishes,
 Who throng'd to hear, the legend tells,
 Were edified, and wagg'd their tails:
 But scarce you'd prove it, if you tried,
 That e'er one whig was edified.
 Have ye not heard from Parson Walter*
 Much dire presage of many a halter?
 What warnings had ye of your duty,
 From our old rev'rend Sam. Auchmuty;*
 From priests of all degrees and metres,
 T' our fag-end man, poor Parson Peters?†
 Have not our Cooper and our Seabury
 Sung hymns, like Barak and old Deborah;
 Proved all intrigues to set you free
 Rebellion 'gainst the Pow'rs that be;

* High-church clergymen, one at Boston, one at New York.

† Peters, a tory clergyman of Connecticut, who after rendering himself generally detestable, absconded from the contempt, rather than the vengeance of his fellow-citizens, and went to England, where he published a libel, which he called, A History of that Colony; Cooper, a writer of the same stamp, President of the College at New York, Poet, Punster and Satirist; Seabury, a clergyman of the same Province.

Brought over many a scripture text,
That used to wink at rebel sects,
Coax'd wayward ones to favor regents,
And paraphrased them to obedience ;
Proved every king, ev'n those confest
Horns of the Apocalyptic beast,
And sprouting from its noddles seven,
Ordain'd, as bishops are, by heaven ;
(For reasons similar, as we're told
That Tophet was ordain'd of old)
By this lay-ordination valid,
Becomes all sanctified and hallow'd,
Takes patent out as heaven has sign'd it,
And starts up strait, the Lord's Anointed ?
As extreme unction, which can cleanse
Each penitent from deadly sins ;
Make them run glib, when oiled by priest,
The heav'nly road, like wheels new greased ;
Serve them, like shoe-ball, for defences,
'Gainst wear and tear of consciences :
So king's anointment clears betimes,
Like fuller's earth, all spots of crimes,
For future knaveries gives commissions,
Like Papists sinning under license.
For heaven ordain'd the origin,
Divines declare,* of pain and sin.

* See the modern Metaphysical Divinity.

Prove such great good they both have done us,
Kind mercy 'twas they came upon us ;
For without sin and pain and folly,
Man ne'er was blest, nor wise, nor holy :
And we should thank the Lord 'tis so,
As authors grave wrote long ago.
Now heav'n its issues never brings
Without the means, and these are kings ;
And he who blames when they announce ills,
Would counteract th' eternal counsels.
As when the Jews, a murm'ring race,
By constant grumblings fell from grace,
Heav'n taught them first to know their distance,
By famine, slavery, and Philistines ;
When these could no repentance bring,
In wrath it sent them last a king :
So nineteen, 'tis believ'd, in twenty
Of modern kings for plagues are sent you ;
Nor can your cavillers pretend
But that they answer well their end.
'Tis yours to yield to their command,
As rods in Providence's hand ;
For when it means to send you pain,
You toss your foreheads up in vain ;
Your way is, hush'd in peace, to bear it,
And make necessity a merit.

Hence sure perdition must await
 The man, who rises 'gainst the state,
 Who meets at once the damning sentence,
 Without one loophole for repentancē;
 Ev'n though he gain the Royal See,
 And rank among the Powers that be.
 For hell is theirs, the scripture shows,
 Whoe'er the Powers that be oppose;
 And all those Powers (I'm clear that 'tis so)
 Are damn'd for ever, ex officio.

“Thus far our clergy, but 'tis true
 We lack'd not earthly reas'ners too.
 Had I the poet's* brazen lungs,
 As soundboard to his hundred tongues,
 I could not half the scribblers muster,
 That swarm'd round Rivington† in cluster;
 Assemblies, councilmen, forsooth,
 Brush, Cowper, Wilkins, Chandler, Booth:
 Yet all their arguments and sapience
 You did not value at three halfpence.

* Virgil.

Did not our Massachusettensis*
For your conviction strain his senses;
Scrawl every moment he could spare
From cards and barbers and the fair;
Show, clear as sun in noonday heavens,
You did not feel a single grievance;
Demonstrate all your opposition
Sprung from the eggs† of foul sedition;
Swear he had seen the nest she laid in,
And knew how long she had been sitting;
Could tell exact what strength of heat is Required to hatch her out committees;
What shapes they take, and how much longer's
The time before they grow t' a Congress?

* A course of Essays under that signature was published in Boston, in the latter part of 1774 and beginning of 1775. It was the last combined effort of Tory wit and argument to write down the Revolution.

† "Committees of correspondence are the foulest and most venomous serpent, that ever issued from the eggs of Sedition," &c. Massachusettensis.

The scheme of appointing such committees in every town was first devised by the celebrated Samuel Adams; they became a most powerful engine for combining the sentiments and directing the energies of the people.

He white-wash'd Hutchinson, and varnish'd
 Our Gage, who'd got a little tarnish'd;
 Made them new masks, in time no doubt,
 For Hutchinson's was quite worn out:
 Yet while he muddled all his head
 You did not heed a word he said.

“Did not our grave Judge Sewall* hit
 The summit of newspaper wit;
 Fill every leaf of every paper
 Of Mills & Hicks, and mother Draper;†
 Draw proclamations, works of toil,
 In true sublime of scarecrow style,
 Write farces too 'gainst sons of freedom,
 All for your good, and none would read 'em;
 Denounce damnation on their frenzy,
 Who died in whig-impenitency;
 Affirm that heav'n would lend us aid,
 As all our tory writers said;
 And calculate so well its kindness,
 He told the moment when it join'd us?

“’Twas then belike,” Honourous cried,
“When you the public fast defied,
Refused to heaven to raise a prayer,
Because you’d no connections there ;
And since with reverent hearts and faces,
To governors you’d paid addresses,
In them, who made you tories, seeing
You lived and moved and had your being,
Your humble vows you would not breathe
To powers, you’d no acquaintance with.

“As for your fasts,” replied our ’Squire,
“What circumstance could fasts require ?
We kept them not, but ’twas no crime,
We held them merely loss of time.
For what advantage firm and lasting,
Pray, did you ever get by fasting,
Or what the gain, that can arise
From vows and offerings to the skies ?
Will heaven reward with posts and fees,
Or send us tea,* as consignees,
Give pensions, salaries, places, bribes,
Or choose us judges, clerks, or scribes ?

* Alluding to the famous cargo of tea, which was destroyed in Boston harbor, the consignees of which were the tools of the British ministry.

Has it commissions in its gift,
Or cash to serve us at a lift?
Are acts of parliament there made,
To carry on the placeman's trade,
Or has it pass'd a single bill
To let us plunder whom we will?

“ And look our list of placemen all over;
Did heaven appoint our chief Judge Oliver,*
Fill that high bench with ignoramus,
Or has it councils by mandamus?†
Who made that wit of water-gruel
A judge of admiralty, Sewall?
And were they not mere earthly struggles,
That raised up Murray, say, and Ruggles?
Did heaven send down, our pains to medicine,
That old simplicity of Edson,
Or by election pick out from us
That Marshfield blunderer, Nat. Ray Thomas;

* Peter Oliver Esq., without legal science or professional education, was appointed Chief Judge of the Supreme Court in Massachusetts.

† The Council of that Province had ever, by its charter, been elective. The charter was declared void, and the King appointed them by writ of mandamus. The persons, named in this paragraph, were some of the most conspicuous of the new members.

Or had it any hand in serving
A Loring, Pepperell, Browne or Irving ?
“ Yet we've some saints, the very thing,
To pit against the best you'll bring ;
For can the strongest fancy paint,
Than Hutchinson, a greater saint ?
Was there a parson used to pray,
At times more regular, twice a day ;
As folks exact have dinners got,
Whether they've appetites or not ?
Was there a zealot more alarming
'Gainst public vice to hold forth sermon,
Or fix'd at church, whose inward motion
Roll'd up his eyes with more devotion ?
What puritan could ever pray
In godlier tone, than Treasurer Gray,
Or at town-meetings speechifying,
Could utter more melodious whine,
And shut his eyes, and vent his moan,
Like owl afflicted in the sun ;
Who once sent home, his canting rival,
Lord Dartmouth's self, might outbedrivel.
“ Have you forgot,” Honourous cried,
“ How your prime saint the truth* defied,

* Hutchinson, while Governor of the Province, in his letters to the ministry declared the necessity, in order to

Affirm'd he never wrote a line
 Your charter'd rights to undermine,
 When his own letters then were by,
 Which proved his message all a lie ?
 How many promises he seal'd
 To get th' oppressive acts repeal'd,
 Yet once arrived on England's shore,
 Set on the Premier to pass more ?
 But these are no defects, we grant,
 In a right loyal Tory saint,

maintain government, of destroying the Charter, abridging what he termed English Liberties, making the Judges dependent only on the crown, and erecting a nobility in America. Doctor Franklin, then provincial Agent at the British Court, obtained a number of the originals, and transmitted them to Boston. In 1773, in a speech to the Legislative Assembly, he affirmed the absolute and unlimited authority of the parliament over the Colonies. This drew from the House of Representatives a spirited and argumentative reply. He rejoined; and in the course of the debate, finding himself suspected of advising the ministry to oppressive measures, declared that he had ever been an advocate for the rights of the Province contained in the Charter, and the equal liberties of the Colonists with the other subjects of the British Dominion.— On this, Hutchinson's letters were immediately published in Boston, to the utter confusion of all his pretensions, political and religious.

Whose godlike virtues must with ease
Atone for venial crimes, like these :
Or ye perhaps in scripture spy
A new commandment, 'Thou shalt lie ;'
If this be so (as who can tell ?)
There's no one sure ye keep so well."

Quoth he, "For lies and promise-breaking,
Ye need not be in such a taking :
For lying is, we know and teach,
The highest privilege of speech ;
The universal Magna Charta,
To which all human race is party,
Whence children first, as David says,
Lay claim to't in their earliest days ;
The only stratagem in war,
Our generals have occasion for ;
The only freedom of the press,
Our politicians need in peace.
Thank heaven, your shot have missed their aim,
For lying is no sin nor shame.

"As men last wills may change again,
Tho' drawn, 'In name of God, Amen ;'
Be sure they must have clearly more
O'er promises as great a power,
Which, made in haste, with small inspection,
So much the more will need correction ;

And when they've, careless, spoke or penned 'em,
Have right to look them o'er and mend 'em;
Revise their vows, or change the text,
By way of codicil annex'd;
Strike out a promise, that was base,
And put a better in its place.

“So Gage of late agreed, you know,
To let the Boston people go;
Yet when he saw 'gainst troops that braved him,
They were the only guards that saved him,
Kept off that satan of a Putnam*
From breaking in to maul and mutton him;
He'd too much wit, such leagues t' observe,
And shut them in again, to starve.

“So Moses writes, when female Jews
Made oaths and vows unfit for use,

* General Putnam took the command of the provincial troops, and blockaded Boston, immediately after the battle of Lexington. Gage, while his army were in possession of that place, promised to permit the inhabitants to retire into the country, on condition of surrendering up their arms; but after their compliance, he refused to perform his engagement—hoping that the Americans would not attempt to bombard the town, or enter it by storm, while they must endanger the lives of so many thousands of their fellow-citizens.

Their parents then might set them free
From that conscientious tyranny :
And shall men feel that spiritual bondage
For ever, when they grow beyond age ?
Shall vows but bind the stout and strong,
And let go women weak and young,
As nets enclose the larger crew,
And let the smaller fry creep through ?
Besides, the Whigs have all been set on,
The Tories to affright and threaten,
Till Gage amidst his trembling fits,
Has hardly kept him in his wits ;
And though he speak with fraud and finesse,
'Tis said beneath duress per minas.
For we're in peril of our souls
From your vile feathers, tar and poles ;
And vows extorted are not binding
In law, and so not worth the minding.
For we have in this hurly-burly
Sent off our consciences on furlow ;
Thrown our religion o'er in form,
Our ship to lighten in the storm.
Nor need we blush your Whigs before ;
Had we no virtue, you've no more.
“ Yet black with sins, would spoil a mitre,
Rail ye at faults by ten tints whiter ?

And, stuff'd with choler atrabilious,
Insult us here for peccadilloes ?
While all your vices run so high
That mercy scarce could find suppl :
And should you offer to repent,
You'd need more fasting days than Lent,
More groans than haunted church-yard valleys,
And more confessions than broad-alleys.*
I'll show you all at fitter time,
Th' extent and greatness of your crime,
And here demonstrate to your face,
Your want of virtue, as of grace,
Evinced from topics old and recent :
But thus much must suffice at present.
To th' after portion of the day
I leave what more remains to say ;
When, I've good hope, you'll all appear,
More fitted and prepared to hear,
And grieved for all your vile demeanor :
But now 'tis time t' adjourn for dinner."

* Alluding to church discipline, where a person is obliged to stand in an isle of the church, called in New England the broad-alley, name the offence he has committed, and ask pardon of his brethren.

CANTO II.

THE TOWN-MEETING, P. M.

HE Sun, who never stops to dine,
Two hours had pass'd the mid-way line,
And driving at his usual rate,
Lash'd on his downward car of state.

And now expired the short vacation,
And dinner o'er in epic fashion,
While all the crew, beneath the trees,
Eat pocket-pies, or bread and cheese,
(Nor shall we, like old Homer, care
To versify their bill of fare)
Each active party, feasted well,
Throng'd in, like sheep, at sound of bell ;
With equal spirit took their places,
And meeting oped with three Oh Yesses :
When first, the daring Whigs t' oppose,
Again the great M'FINGAL rose,

Stretch'd magisterial arm amain,
And thus resumed th' accusing strain.

“Ye Whigs attend, and hear affrighted
The crimes whereof ye stand indicted ;
The sins and follies past all compass,
That prove you guilty, or non compos.
I leave the verdict to your senses,
And jury of your consciences ;
Which though they're neither good nor true,
Must yet convict you and your crew.

“Ungrateful sons ! a factious band,
That rise against your parent land !
Ye viper race, that burst in strife
The genial womb that gave you life,
Tear with sharp fangs and forked tongue
The indulgent bowels whence ye sprung ;
And scorn the debt and obligation,
You justly owe the British nation,
Which, since you cannot pay, your crew
Affect to swear was never due.

“Did not the deeds of England's* primate
First drive your fathers to this climate,

* The persecutions of the English Church under Archbishop Laud are well known to have been the cause of the peopling of New England.—Lond. Edit.

Whom jails and fines and every ill
 Forced to their good against their will?
 Ye owe to their obliging temper
 The peopling your new-fangled empire,
 While every British act and canon
 Stood forth your causa sine qua non.
 Who'd seen, except for these restraints,
 Your witches, quakers, whigs, and saints,
 Or heard of Mather's* famed Magnalia,
 If Charles and Laud had chanced to fail you?
 Did they not send your charters o'er,
 And give you lands you own'd before,
 Permit you all to spill your blood,
 And drive out heathens where you could;
 On these mild terms, that, conquest won,
 The realm you gain'd should be their own?
 And when of late attack'd by those,
 Whom her connection made your foes,†

* See in Mather's Magnalia, a history of the miracles, which occurred in the first settlement of New England; see also his "Wonders of the invisible World," for a full and true account of the witchcraft at Salem.

† The war of 1755, between the English and French, was doubtless excited by causes foreign to the interests of those Colonies, which now form the United States. They however paid more than their proportion of the

Did they not then, distress'd by war,
Send generals to your help from far,
Whose aid you own'd, in terms less haughty,
And thankfully o'erpaid your quota ?
Say, at what period did they grudge
To send you governor or judge,
With all their missionary* crew,
To teach you law and gospel too ?
They brought all felons in the nation
To help you on in population ;
Proposed their bishops to surrender,
And made their priests a legal tender,
Who only ask'd in surplice clad,
The simple tithe of all you had :

expense, and a balance was repaid them by the British Government after the war.—Lond. Edit.

The fact is that England involved us in the war, in which the Colonies must have been destroyed in its earliest stages, had it not been for their own extraordinary exertions.

* These Missionaries were Clergymen, ordained by the Bishop of London, and settled in America. Those in the northern colonies were generally attached to the royal cause.—Lond. Edit.

Great efforts were also made to send us Bishops, to rule the New England churches ; but this was prevented by the revolution.

And now, to keep all knaves in awe,
Have sent their troops t' establish law,
And with gunpowder, fire and ball,
Reform your people, one and all.
Yet when their insolence and pride
Have anger'd all the world beside;
When fear and want at once invade,
Can you refuse to lend them aid,
And rather risk your heads in fight,
Than gratefully throw in your mite?
Can they for debts make satisfaction,
Should they dispose their realm at auction,
And sell off Britain's goods and land all
To France and Spain, by inch of candle?
Shall good King George, with want oppress'd,
Insert his name in bankrupt list,
And shut up shop, like failing merchant,
That fears the bailiffs should make search in't;
With poverty shall princes strive,
And nobles lack whereon to live?
Have they not rack'd their whole inventions
To feed their brats on posts and pensions;
Made their Scotch friends with taxes groan,
And pick'd poor Ireland to the bone:
Yet have on hand, as well deserving,
Ten thousand bastards,* left for starving?

* A great proportion of the old English peerage con-

And can you now, with conscience clear,
Refuse them an asylum here,
And not maintain, in manner fitting,
These genuine sons of mother Britain?
"T' evade these crimes of blackest grain
You prate of liberty in vain,
And strive to hide your vile designs
In terms abstruse, like school-divines.
"Your boasted patriotism is scarce,
And country's love is but a farce:
For after all the proofs you bring,
We tories know there's no such thing.
Hath not Dalrymple* show'd in print,
And Johnson too, there's nothing in't;

sists of the left-handed progeny of their kings. In this business, Charles the second was the last hero.

* This writer undertook to demonstrate, that all the celebrated British patriots were pensioners, in the pay of France. His proof is derived from the letters of the French ambassadors, who accounting for the monies received from their court, charge so many thousand guineas paid to Hampden, Sidney, and others, as bribes. We are told also that Admiral Russell defeated the French fleet, at a time when he had engaged most solemnly, and received a stipulated sum, to be beaten himself.

Produced you demonstration ample,
 From others' and their own example,
 That self is still, in either faction,
 The only principle of action;
 The loadstone, whose attracting tether
 Keeps the politic world together:
 And spite of our double dealing,
 We all are sure as so, from feeling
 "Who heeds your babbling of transmitting
 Freedom to brats of your begetting,
 Or will proceed, as tho' there were a tie,
 And obligation to posterity?
 We get them, bear them, breed and nurse.
 What has posterity done for us,
 That we, least they their rights should lose,
 Should trust our necks to gripe of noose?
 "And who believes you will not run?
 Ye're cowards, every mother's son;
 And if you offer to deny,
 We've witnesses to prove it by.
 Attend th' opinion first, as referee,
 Of your old general, stout Sir Jeffery;*

* Sir Jeffery Amherst, Grant and other officers, who had served in America, were so ignorant, silly or malicious, as to make such assertions in parliament.

Who swore that with five thousand foot
He'd rout you all, and in pursuit
Run thro' the land, as easily
As camel through a needle's eye?
Did not the mighty Colonel Grant
Against your courage pour his rant,
Affirm your universal failure
In every principle of valor,
And swear no scamperers e'er could match you,
So swift, a bullet scarce could catch you?
And will you not confess, in this
A judge most competent he is?
Well skill'd on running to decide,
As what himself has often tried?
'Twould not methinks be labor lost,
If you'd sit down and count the cost,
And ere you call your yankees out,
First think what work you've set about.
Have you not roused, his force to try on,
That grim old beast, the British Lion;
And know you not, that at a sup
He's large enough to eat you up?
Have you survey'd his jaws beneath,
Drawn inventories of his teeth,
Or have you weigh'd in even balance,
His strength and magnitude of talons?

His roar would change your boasts to fear,
As easily, as sour* small beer;
And make your feet from dreadful fray,
By native instinct run away.
Britain, depend on't, will take on her
T' assert her dignity and honor,
And ere she'd lose your share of pelf,
Destroy your country, and herself.
For has not North declared they fight
To gain substantial rev'nue by't,
Denied he'd ever deign to treat,
Till on your knees and at his feet?
And feel you not a trifling ague
From Van's "Delenda est Carthago?"†
For this now Britain has projected,
Think you she has not means t' effect it?
Had she not set at work all engines
To spirit up the native Indians,
Send on your backs the tawney band,
With each an hatchet in his hand,

* It is asserted that the roar of a lion will turn small beer sour.

† Carthage must be annihilated. There actually existed a little time before the war, a member of parliament of the name of Van, who in a speech there applied this famous threat of Cato to America, and particularly to Boston, as the place to begin the work of destruction.

T' amuse themselves with scalping knives,
And butcher children and your wives
And paid them for your scalps at sale
More than your heads would fetch by tale ;
That she might boast again with vanity,
Her English national humanity ?
For now in its primeval sense
This term, humanity, comprehends
All things of which, on this side hell,
The human mind is capable ;
And thus 'tis well, by writers sage,
Applied to Britain and to Gage.
On this brave work to raise allies,
She sent her duplicate of Guys,
To drive at different parts at once on
Her stout Guy Carlton and Guy Johnson ;*
To each of whom, to send again you,
Old Guy of Warwick were a ninny,
Though the dun cow he fell'd in war,
These killcows are his betters far.

“ And has she not essay'd her notes
To rouse your slaves to cut your throats ;

* A half-breed son of the famous Sir William, who influenced and led some of their tribes against us during the war.

Sent o'er ambassadors with guineas,
 To bribe your blacks in Carolinas?
 And has not Gage, her missionary,
 Turn'd many an Afric to a tory;
 Made the New England bishop's see grow,
 By many a new-converted negro?
 As friends to government, when he
 Your slaves at Boston late set free,
 Enlisted them in black parade,
 Emboss'd with regimental red;
 While flared the epaulette, like flambeau,
 On Captain Cuff and Ensign Sambo;
 And were they not accounted then
 Among his very bravest men;
 And when such means she stoops to take,
 Think you she is not wide awake?
 As the good man of old in Job
 Own'd wondrous allies through the globe,
 Had brought the stones* along the street
 To ratify a cov'nant meet,

* The stones and all the elements with thee
 Shall ratify a strict confederacy,
 Wild beasts their savage temper shall forget,
 And for a firm alliance with thee treat, &c.

Blackmore's paraphrase of Job.

And every beast, from lice to lions,
To join in leagues of strict alliance :
Has she not cringed, in spite of pride,
For like assistance, far and wide,
Till all this formidable league rose
Of Indians, British troops and negroes ?
And can you break these triple bands
By all your workmanship of hands ?

“Sir,” quoth Honorius, “we presume
You guess from past feats what’s to come,
And from the mighty deeds of Gage
Foretell how fierce the war he’ll wage.
You doubtless recollected here
The annals of his first great year :
While, wearying out the tories’ patience,
He spent his breath in proclamations ;
While all his mighty noise and vapor
Was used in wrangling upon paper,
And boasted military fits
Closed in the straining of his wits ;
While troops, in Boston commons placed,
Laid nought, but quires of paper, waste ;
While strokes alternate stunn’d the nation,
Protest, address, and proclamation,
And speech met speech, fib elash’d with fib,
And Gage still answer’d, squib for squib.

“Though this not all his time was lost on;
He fortified the town of Boston,
Built breastworks, that might lend assistance
To keep the patriots at a distance;
For howsoe'r the rogues might scoff
He liked them best the farthest off;
Works of important use to aid
His courage, when he felt afraid,
And whence right off, in manful station,
He'd boldly pop his proclamation.
Our hearts must in our bosoms freeze,
At such heroic deeds as these.”

“Vain,” said the 'Squire, “you'll find to sneer
At Gage's first triumphant year;
For Providence, disposed to teaze us,
Can use what instruments it pleases.
To pay a tax, at Peter's wish,
His chief cashier was once a fish;
An ass, in Balaam's sad disaster,
Turn'd orator and saved his master;
A goose, placed sentry on his station,
Preserved old Rome from desolation;
An English bishop's* cur of late
Disclosed rebellions 'gainst the state;

* See Atterbury's trial.

So frogs croak'd Pharaoh to repentance,
 And lice delay'd the fatal sentence :
 And heaven can ruin you at pleasure,
 By Gage, as soon as by a Cæsar.
 Yet did our hero in these days
 Pick up some laurel wreaths of praise.
 And as the statuary of Seville
 Made his crackt saint an exc'llent devil ;
 So though our war small triumph brings,
 We gain'd great fame in other things.

“Did not our troops show great discerning,
 And skill your various arts in learning ?
 Outwent they not each native noodle
 By far, in playing Yankee Doodle,*
 Which as 'twas your New England tune,
 'Twas marvellous they took so soon ?
 And ere the year was fully through,
 Did not they learn to foot it too,†

* This was a native air of New England, and was often played in derision by the British troops, particularly on their march to Lexington. Afterwards the captive army of Burgoyne were obliged to march to this tune, in the ceremony of piling their arms at Saratoga.—Lond. Edit.

† At the battle of Lexington.

And such a dance, as ne'er was known,
For twenty miles on end lead down ?
Did they not lay their heads together,
And gain your art to tar and feather,*
When Colonel Nesbitt, thro' the town,
In triumph bore the country clown ?
Oh what a glorious work to sing
The veteran troops of Britain's king,
Adventuring for th' heroic laurel
With bag of feathers and tar-barrel !
To paint the cart where culprits ride,
And Nesbitt marching at its side,
Great executioner and proud,
Like hangman high on Holborn-road ;
And o'er the slow-drawn rumbling car,
The waving ensigns of the war !
As when a triumph Rome decreed
For great Caligula's valiant deed,
Who had subdued the British seas,
By gath'ring cockles from their base ;

* In the beginning of 1775, to bring forward an occasion for a more serious quarrel, than had yet taken place between the people and the army, Lieutenant-Colonel Nesbitt laid the following plan. The country people being in the habit of purchasing arms, he directed a sol-

In pompous car the cong'ror bore
His captive scallops from the shore,
Ovations gain'd his crabs for fetching,
And mighty feats of oyster-catching:
'Gainst Yankees thus the war begun,
They tarr'd, and triumph'd over, one;
And fought and boasted through the season,
With force as great and equal reason.

“Yet thus though skill'd in vict'ry's toils,
They boast, not unexpert, in wiles.

dier to sell one of them an old rusty musket. The soldier soon found a purchaser, a man who brought vegetables to market, who paid him three dollars for it. Scarcely had the man parted from the soldier when he was seized by Nesbitt and conveyed to the guard-house, where he was confined all night. Early next morning they stripped him entirely naked, covered him with warm tar, and then with feathers, placed him on a cart, conducted him to the north end of the town, then back to the south end, as far as Liberty Tree; where the people began to collect in vast numbers, and the military, fearing for their own safety, dismissed the man, and made a retreat to the barracks.

The party consisted of about thirty grenadiers of the 47th regiment, with fixed bayonets, twenty drums and fifes playing the Rogue's March, headed by Nesbitt with a drawn sword. Lond. Edit.

For gain'd they not an equal fame in
The arts of secrecy and scheming;
In stratagem show'd wondrous force,
And modernized the Trojan horse,
Play'd o'er again the tricks Ulyssean,
In their famed Salem expedition?
For as that horse, the poets tell ye,
Bore Grecian armies in its belly,
Till their full reckoning run, with joy
Shrewd Sinon midwived them in Troy:
So in one ship was Leslie bold
Cramm'd with three hundred men in hold,
Equipp'd for enterprise and sail,
Like JONAH stow'd in womb of whale.
To Marblehead in depth of night
The cautious vessel wing'd her flight.
And now the sabbath's silent day
Call'd all your Yankees off to pray;
Safe from each prying jealous neighbor,
The scheme and vessel fell in labor.
Forth from its hollow womb poured hast'ly
The myrmidons of Colonel Leslie.
Not thicker o'er the blacken'd strand,
The frogs detachment,* rush'd to land,

* See Homer's Battle of the Frogs and Mice.

Furious oy onset and surprise
To storm th' entrenchment of the mice.
Through Salem straight, without delay,
The bold battalion took its way,
March'd o'er a bridge,* in open sight
Of several Yankees arm'd for fight ;
Then without loss of time or men,
Veer'd round for Boston back again,
And found so well their projects thrive,
That every soul got home alive.

“Thus Gage's arms did fortune bless
With triumph, safety and success.

* The object of this expedition was to seize some provincial artillery and stores, placed at a short distance from Salem. Notwithstanding his stratagem, when he came to a small river which lay between, Leslie found the bridge taken up, the stores removed, and the people alarmed and rapidly collecting in his front, as well as rear. He then opened a parley, and promised that if they would lay down the bridge and suffer him to march over it, he would immediately return from whence he came, without doing harm to any person or thing. The treaty was concluded; Leslie marched with his party over the bridge, wheeled about instantly and returned to Boston; having performed every article on his part, with the greatest honor and safety.

But mercy is without dispute
His first and darling attribute ;
So great, it far outwent and conquer'd
His military skill at C<sup>c</sup> acord.
There, when the war he chose to wage,
Shone the benevolence of Gage ;
Sent troops to that ill-omen'd place,
On errands mere of special grace ;
And all the work he chose them for,
Was to prevent a civil war ;*
For which kind purpose he projected
The only certain way t' effect it,
To seize your powder, shot and arms,
And all your means of doing harms ;
As prudent folks take knives away,
Lest children cut themselves at play.
And yet, when this was all his scheme,
The war you still will charge on him ;
And tho' he oft has swore and said it,
Stick close to facts, and give no credit.
Think you, he wish'd you'd brave and beard him ?
Why, 'twas the very thing, that scared him.

* This Gage solemnly declared in a letter to Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, soon after the expedition. The correspondence was immediately published.

He'd rather you should all have run,
Than staid to fire a single gun.
So for the civil war you lament,
Faith, you yourselves must take the blame in't ;
For had you then, as he intended,
Given up your arms, it must have ended :
Since that's no war, each mortal knows,
Where one side only gives the blows,*
And t' others bears them ; on reflection
The most we call it is correction.
Nor could the contest have gone higher,
If you had ne'er return'd the fire :
But when you shot, and not before,
It then commenced a civil war.
Else Gage, to end this controversy,
Had but corrected you in mercy ;
Whom mother Britain, old and wise,
Sent o'er, the colonies to chastise ;
Command obedience on their peril
Of ministerial whip and ferule ;

* Si rixa est, ubi tu pulsas, ego vapulo tantum.
Juvenal.

It was deemed both by the British and Americans, a matter of the utmost importance to determine which party began the war. Some hundreds of depositions were

And since they ne'er must come of age,
Govern'd and tutor'd them by Gage.
Still more, that mercy was their errand,
The army's conduct makes apparent.
What though at Lexington you can say,
They kill'd a few, they did not fancy ;
At Concord then with manful popping,
Discharged a round, the ball to open ;
Yet when they saw your rebel rout
Determined still to brave it out,
Did they not show their love of peace,
Their wish that discord straight might cease ;
Demonstrate, and by proofs uncommon,
*Their orders were to injure no man ?**

taken in the dispute, and it was fully proved that hostilities were first commenced at Lexington by the British troops, who fired on a company of militia, assembling under arms, killed eight on the first discharge, and dispersed the rest without opposition. The popularity of the war, in England as well as in America, depended greatly at that time on the result of this enquiry—frivolous as it may now appear.

* This was another assertion by Gage, in his letter mentioned in the former note.

For did not every regular* run,
As soon as e'er you fired a gun ;
Take the first shot you sent them, greeting,
As meant their signal for retreating ;
And fearful, if they staid for sport,
You might by accident be hurt,
Convey themselves with speed away
Full twenty miles in half a day ;
Race till their legs were grown so weary,
They scarce sufficed their weight to tarry ?
Whence Gage extols, from general hearsay,
The great activity of Lord Percy ; †
Whose brave example led them on,
And spirited the troops to run ;
Who now may boast, at royal levees,
A Yankee-chace worth forty Chevys.
“Yet you, as vile as they were kind,
Pursued, like tigers, still behind ;

* In the former wars in America, the term Regulars, was applied to the British troops, to distinguish them from the Provincials, or new levies of the country.

† “Too much praise cannot be given to Lord Percy for his remarkable activity through the whole day.”

Gage's account of the Lexington battle.

Fired on them at your will, and shut
 The town, as though you'd starve them out ;
 And with parade preposterous* hedged,
 Affect to hold them there besieged :
 Though Gage, whom proclamations call
 Your Gov'rnor and Vice Admiral,
 Whose power gubernatorial still
 Extends as far as Bunker's hill,
 Whose admiralty reaches, clever,
 Near half a mile up Mistic river,
 Whose naval force yet keeps the seas,
 Can run away whene'er he'd please.
 Nay, stern with rage grim Putnam boiling,
 Plunder'd both Hogg and Noddle Island ; †
 Scared troops of Tories into town,
 Burn'd all their hay and houses down,
 And menaced Gage, unless he'd flee,
 To drive him headlong to the sea ;
 As once, to faithless Jews a sign,
 The De'el, turn'd hog-reeve, did the swine.

* "And with a preposterous parade of military arrangement, they affect to hold the army besieged."

Gage's last grand proclamation.

† Two islands in the harbor of Boston.

“But now your triumphs all are o'er ;
For see from Britain's angry shore,
With deadly hosts of valor join
Her Howe, her Clinton, and Burgoyne !
As comets thro' th' affrighted skies
Pour baleful ruin as they rise ;
As Ætna with infernal roar
In conflagration sweeps the shore ;
Or as Abijah White,* when sent
Our Marshfield friends to represent,
Himself while dread array involves,
Commissions, pistols, swords, resolves,
In awful pomp descending down
Bore terror on the factious town :
Not with less glory and affright,
Parade these generals forth to fight.
No more each British colonel runs
From whizzing beetles, as air-guns ;

* He was representative of Marshfield, and was employed to carry to Boston their famous town-resolves, censuring the Whigs and reprobating the destruction of the Tea. He armed himself in as ridiculous military array, as a second Hudibras, pretending he was afraid he should be robbed of them.

Thinks horn-bugs bullets, or thro' fears
Muskitoes takes for musketeers;*
Nor scapes, as if you'd gain'd supplies,
From Beelzebub's whole host of flies,
No bug these warlike hearts appalls;
They better know the sound of balls.
I hear the din of battle bray;
The trump of horror marks its way.
I see afar the sack of cities.
The gallows strung with Whig-committees;
Your moderators triced, like vermin,
And gate-posts graced with heads of chairmen;

* Absurd as this may appear, it was a fact. Some British officers, soon after Gage's arrival in Boston, walking on Beacon-Hill after sunset, were affrighted by noises in the air (supposed to be the flying of bugs and beetles) which they took to be the sound of bullets. They left the hill with great precipitation, spread the alarm in their encampment, and wrote terrible accounts to England of being shot at with air-guns; as appears by their letters, extracts from which were soon after published in the London papers. Indeed, for some time they seriously believed, that the Americans were possessed of a kind of magic white powder, which exploded and killed without report.

Your Congress for wave-off'rings hanging,
And ladders throug'd with priests haranguing.
What pillories glad the Tories' eyes
With patriot ears for sacrifice!
What whipping-posts your chosen race
Admit successive in embrace,
While each bears off his sins, alack!
Like Bunyan's pilgrim, on his back!*
Where then, when Tories scarce get clear,
Shall Whigs and Congresses appear?
What rocks and mountains will you call
To wrap you over with their fall,
And save your heads in these sad weathers,
From fire and sword, and tar and feathers?
For lo! with British troops tar bright,
Again our Nesbitt heaves in sight;
He comes, he comes, your lines to storm,
And rig your troops in uniform.†

* Bunyan represents his pilgrim, as setting forth burdened with a very heavy pack, containing all his sins, original and actual.

† This want of uniform dresses in the American army was a constant theme of ridicule with the British, at the beginning of the war.

To meet such heroes will ye brag,
 With fury arm'd, and feather-bag,
 Who wield their missile pitch and tar
 With engines new in British war?

“Lo! where our mighty navy brings Destruction on her canvass wings,*
 While through the deep the British thunder
 Shall sound th'alarm, to rob and plunder!
 As Phæbus first, so Homer speaks,
 When he march'd out t' attack the Greeks,
 'Gainst mules sent forth his arrows fatal,
 And slew th' auxiliaries, their cattle:
 So where our ships† shall stretch the keel,
 What vanquish'd oxen shall they steal!
 What heroes, rising from the deep,
 Invade your marshall'd hosts of sheep;
 Disperse whole troops of horse, and pressing,
 Make cows surrender at discretion;
 Attack your hens, like Alexanders,
 And regiments rout of geese and ganders;

* Where'er our navy spreads her canvas wings,
 Honor to thee and peace to all she brings. Waller.

† The British navy was at first employed in plundering our seacoasts, to obtain fresh provisions.

Or where united arms combine,
 Lead captive many a herd of swine!
 Then rush in dreadful fury down
 To fire on every seaport town;
 Display their glory and their wits,
 Fright helpless children into fits;
 And stoutly, from the unequal fray,
 Make many a woman run away.

“And can ye doubt, whene'er we please,
 Our chiefs shall boast such deeds as these?
 Have we not chiefs transcending far
 The old famed thunderbolts of war ;*
 Beyond the brave knight-errant fighters,
 Styled swords of death, by novel-writers;
 Nor in romancing ages e'er rose
 So terrible a tier of heroes.
 From Gage what sounds alarm the waves!
 How loud a blunderbuss is Graves!†
 How Newport dreads the blustering sallies,
 That thunder from our popgun, Wallace,

—————* duo fulmina belli,
 Scipiadas.

Virgil.

† Graves was admiral; Wallace, Captain of a frigate stationed before Newport.

While noise in formidable strains,
Spouts from his thimble-full of brains!
I see you sink in awed surprise!
I see our Tory brethren rise!
And as the sect'ries Sandemanian,
Our friends, describe their hoped millennium;*
Boast how the world in every region
At once shall own their true religion,
For heaven shall knock, with vengeance dread,
All unbelievers on the head;
And then their church, the meek in spirit,
The earth, as promised, shall inherit
From the dead wicked, as heirs male,
Or next remainder-men in tail:
Such ruin shall the Whigs oppress;
Such spoils our Tory friends shall bless;
While Confiscation at command
Shall stalk in terror through the land,
Shall give all whig-estates away,
And call our brethren into play.

“And can you pause, or scruple more?
These things are near you, at the door.

* The year 1793 was the period they fixed upon, for this event to take place.

Behold ! for though to reasoning blind,
 Signs of the times you still might mind,
 And view impending fate, as plain
 As you'd foretell a shower of rain.

“Hath not heaven warn'd you what must en-
 And providence declared against you? [suc
 Hung forth the dire portents of war
 By fires and beacons in the air ;*
 Alarm'd old women all around
 With fearful noises under ground,
 While earth, for many a hundred leagues,
 Groan'd with her dismal load of Whigs ?
 Was there a meteor, far and wide,
 But muster'd on the Tory side ;
 A star malign, that has not bent
 Its aspects for the parliament,

* Stories of prodigies were at that time industriously propagated by the Tories in various parts of New England, and with some success in alarming and intimidating the superstitious. In fact, about the commencement of the war, a large meteor passed through our atmosphere, and the aurora borealis appeared more frequently, and assumed more singular appearances, than usual. These materials were sufficient for a beginning ; nonsense easily supplied the rest.

Forboding your defeat and misery,
As once they fought against old Sisera ?
Was there a cloud, that spread the skies,
But bore our armies of allies,
While dreadful hosts of flame stood forth
In baleful streamers from the north ?
Which plainly show'd what part they join'd ;
For North's the minister, ye mind ;
Whence oft your quibblers in gazettes
On Northern blasts have strain'd their wits ;
And think you not, the clouds know how
To make the pun, as well you ?
Did there arise an apparition,
But grinn'd forth ruin to sedition ;
A death-watch, but has join'd our leagues,
And click'd destruction to the Whigs ?
Heard ye not, when the wind was fair,
At night our prophets in the air,
Who, loud, like admiralty libel,
Read awful chapters from the Bible,
And war and plague and death denounced,
And told you how you'd soon be trounced ?
I see, to join our conq'ring side,
Heaven, earth and hell at once allied ;
See from your overthrow and end,
The Tory paradise ascend,

Like that new world, which claims its station,
Beyond the final conflagration.
I see the day, that lots your share
In utter darkness and despair ;
The day of joy, when North, our lord,
His faithful fav'rites shall reward.
No Tory then shall set before him
Small wish of 'Squire and Justice Quorum ;
But to his unmistaken eyes
See lordships, posts and pensions rise.

“ Awake to gladness then, ye Tories !
Th' unbounded prospect lies before us.
The power, display'd in Gages banners,
Shall cut their fertile lands to manors ;
And o'er our happy conquer'd ground,
Dispense estates and titles round.
Behold ! the world shall stare at new setts
Of home-made Earls* in Massachusetts ;
Admire, array'd in ducal tassels,
Your Ol'vers, Hutchinsons, and Vassals ;
See join'd in ministerial work
His Grace of Albany and York.
What lordships from each carved estate,
On our New York Assembly wait !

* See Hutchinson's and Oliver's letters.

What titles —uncys, Gales, and Billops ;*
Lord Brush, Lord Wilkins, and Lord Phillips !
In wide-sleeved pomp of godly guise,
What solemn rows of Bishops rise !
Aloft a cardinal's hat is spread
O'er punster Cooper's reverend head.
In Vardell, that poetic zealot, †
I view a lawn-bedizen'd Prelate ;
While mitres fall, as 'tis their duty,
On heads of Chandler and Auchmuty !
Knights, viscounts, barons, shall ye meet,
As thick as pebbles in the street ;
E'en I perhaps (heaven speed my claim !)
Shall fix a sir before my name.
For titles all our foreheads ache,
For what blest changes can they make !
Place Reverence, Grace, and Excellence,
Where neither claim'd the least pretence ;

* Members of the ministerial majority in the Legislature of New York.

† Cooper, President of King's College in New York, was a notorious punster ; Vardell, author of some poetical satires on the sons of liberty in New York ; Chandler and Auchmuty, high-church and tory writers of the clerical order.

Transform by patent's magic words
 Men, likest devils, into Lords
 Whence commoners, to Peers translated,
 Are justly said to be created.*
 Now were commissioners you saw,
 Shall boards of nobles deal you law ;
 Long-robed comptrollers judge your rights,
 And tide-waiters start up in knights.
 While Whigs subdued, in slavish awe,
 Our wood shall hew, our water draw,
 And bless the mildness, when past hope,
 That saved their necks from noose of rope.
 For since our leaders have decreed,
 Their blacks to join us, shall be freed,
 To hang the conquer'd whigs, we all see,
 Would prove but weak, and thriftless policy,
 Except their Chiefs: the vulgar knaves
 Will do more good, preserved for slaves."

" 'Tis well," Honorius cried ; " your scheme
 Has painted out a pretty dream.
 We can't confute your second-sight ;
 We shall be slaves and you a knight.

* "To create a Peer" is the English technical phrase.
 —Considering the materials frequently made use of, it is easy to perceive the propriety of the expression. Thus Adam was formed of the dust of the ground. Gen. ii. 7.

These things must come, but I divine,
They'll come not in your day, nor mine.

“But, oh my friends, my brethren, hear;
And turn for once th' attentive ear.
Ye see how prompt to aid our woes
The tender mercies of our foes;
Ye see with what unvaried rancour
Still for our blood their minions hanker;
Nor aught can sate their mad ambition,
From us, but death, or worse, submission.
Shall these then riot in our spoil,
Reap the glad harvest of our toil,
Rise from their country's ruins proud,
And roll their chariot-wheels in blood?
See Gage, with inauspicious star,
Has oped the gates of civil war,
When streams of gore, from freedom slain,
Encrimson'd Concord's fatal plain;
Whose warning voice, with awful sound,
Still cries, like Abel's from the ground;
And heaven, attentive to its call,
Shall doom the proud oppressor's fall.

“Rise then, ere ruin swift surprize,
To victory, to vengeance rise.
Hark, how the distant lin alarms;
The echoing trumpet breathes, to arms.

From provinces remote afar,
The sons of glory rouse to war.
'Tis Freedom calls! the raptur'd sound
The Apalachian hills rebound.
The Georgian* coasts her voice shall hear,
And start from lethargies of fear.
From the parch'd zone, with glowing ray
Where pours the sun intenser day,
To shores where icy waters roll,
And tremble to the glimm'ring pole,
Inspired by freedom's heavenly charms,
United nations wake to arms.
The star of conquest lights their way,
And guides their vengeance on their prey.
Yes, though tyrannic force oppose,
Still shall they triumph o'er their foes;
Till heaven the happy land shall bless
With safety, liberty, and peace.

“ And ye, whose souls of dastard mould
Start at the bravery of the bold;
To love your country who pretend,
Yet want all spirit to defend;
Who feel your fancies so prolific,
Engend'ring visions whims terrific,

* The province of Georgia had not then joined the union.

O'errun with horrors of coercion,
Fire, blood, and thunder in reversion ;
King's standards, pill'ries, confiscations,
And Gage's scare-crow proclamations ;
Who scarce could rouse, if caught in fray,
Presence of mind to run away ;
See nought but halters rise to view,
In all your dreams, and deem them true ;
And while these phantoms haunt your brains,
Bow down your willing necks to chains.
Heavens! are ye sons of sires so great,
Immortal in the fields of fate,
Who braved all deaths, by land or sea,
Who bled, who conquer'd, to be free ?
Hence coward souls, the worst disgrace
Of our forefathers' valiant race ;
Hie homeward from the glorious field,
There turn the wheel, the distaff wield ;
Act what ye are, nor dare to stain
The warrior's arms with touch profane ;
There beg your more heroic wives
To guard your own, your children's lives ;
Beneath their aprons seek a screen,
Nor dare to mingle more with men."

As thus he spake, the Tories' anger
Could now restrain itself no longer ;

Who tried before by many a freak, or
Insulting noise, to stop the speaker ;
Swung th' un-oil'd hinge of each pew-door,
Their feet kept shuffling on the floor ;
Made their disapprobation known
By many a murmur, hum and groan,
That to his speech supplied the place
Of counterpart in thorough bass.
Thus bagpipes, while the tunc they breathe,
Still drone and grumble underneath ;
And the famed Demosthenes*
Harangued the rumbling of the seas,
Held forth with elocution grave,
To audience loud of wind and wave ;
And had a stiller congregation,
Than Tories are, to hear th' oration.
The uproar now grew high and louder,
As nearer thund'rings of a cloud are,
And every soul with heart and voice
Supplied his quota of the noise.
Each listening ear was set on torture,
Each Tory bellowing, " Order, Order ;"

* Demosthenes, the Grecian orator, is said to have exercised his voice, by declaiming to the waves in a gale ; which party made the most noise, history does not inform us.

And some, with tongue not low or weak,
Were clam'ring fast, for leave to speak ;
The Moderator, with great v'lence,
The cushion thump'd with, " Silence, Silence !"
The constable to every prater
Bawl'd out, " Pray hear the moderator ;"
Some call'd the vote, and some in turn
Were screaming high, " Adjourn, Adjourn."
Not Chaos heard such jars :     clashes,
When all the el'ments fought for places,
The storm each moment fiercer grew ;
His sword the great M'FINGAL drew,
Prepared in either chance to share,
To keep the peace, or aid the war.
Nor lack'd they each poetic being,
Whom bards alone are skill'd in seeing ;
Plumed Victory stood perch'd on high,
Upon the pulpit-canopy,
To join, as is her custom tried,
Like Indians, on the strongest side ;
The Destinies, with shears and distaff,
Drew near their threads of life to twist off ;
The Furies 'gan to feast on blows,
And broken head, and bloody nose :
When on a sudden from without Arose a loud terrific shout ;

have

And straight the people all at once heard
Of tongues an universal concert ;
Like Æsop's times, as fable runs,
When every creature talk'd at once,
Or like the variegated gabble,
That crazed the carpenters of Babel.
Each party soon forsook the quarrel,
And let the other go on parol,
Eager to know what fearful matter
Had conjured up such general clatter ;
And left the church in thin array,
As though it had been lecture-day.*
Our 'Squire M'FINGAL straitway beckon'd
The Constable to stand his second ;
And sallied forth with aspect fierce
The crowd assembled to disperse.

* In the New England churches, previous to the administration of the sacrament, religious service was performed, and a sermon preached, on some day in the week preceding. These sermons were styled Lectures, and the day called Lecture-day. But usually these meetings were very thinly attended, like the Wall-lectures in the English Universities, in which to supply an audience, they depend on the proverb, that Walls have ears. See V. Knox's Essays, No. 77.

The Moderator, out of view,
 Beneath the desk had lain perdue ;
 Peep'd up his head to view the fray,
 Beheld the wranglers run away,
 And left alone, with solemn face
 Adjourn'd them without time or place.

 On this, Hutchinson's letters were immediately published in Boston, to the utter confusion of all his pretensions, political and religious.

 destroyed in Boston harbor, the consignees of which were the tools of the British ministry.

END OF CANTO SECOND.

* The object of this expedition was to seize some provincial artillery and stores, placed at a short distance from Salem. Notwithstanding his stratagem, when he came to a small river which lay between, Leslie found the bridge taken up, the stores removed, and the people alarmed and rapidly collecting in his front, as well as rear. He then opened a parley, and promised that if they would lay down the bridge and suffer him to march over it, he would immediately return from whence he came, without doing harm to any person or thing. The treaty was concluded; Leslie marched with his party over the bridge, wheeled about instantly and returned to Boston; having performed every article on his part, with

CANTO III.

THE LIBERTY POLE.

OW warm with ministerial ire,
Fierce sallied forth our loyal 'Squire,
And on his striding steps attends
His desperate clan of Tory friends.

When sudden met his wrathful eye
A pole ascending through the sky,
Which numerous throngs of whiggish race
Were raising in the market-place.
Not higher school-boys's kites aspire,
Or royal mast, or country spire ;
Like spears at Brobdignagian tilting,
Or Satan's walking-staff in Milton.
And on its top, the flag unfurl'd'
Waved triumph o'er the gazing world,

Inscribed with inconsistent types
Of Liberty and thirteen stripes.*
Beneath, the crowd without delay
The dedication-rites essay,
And gladly pay, in ancient fashion,
The ceremonies of libation ;
While briskly to each patriot lip
Walks eager round the inspiring flip :*
Delicious draught ! whose powers inherit
The quintessence of public spirit ;
Which whoso tastes, perceives his mind
To nobler politics refined ;
Or roused to martial controversy,
As from transforming cups of Circe ;
Or warm'd with Homer's nectar'd liquor,
That fill'd the veins of gods with ichor.
At hand for new supplies in store,
The tavern opes its friendly door,
Whence to and fro the waiters run,
Like bucket-men at fires in town.

* The American flag. It would doubtless be wrong to imagine that the stripes bear any allusion to the slave trade.

† Flip, a liquor composed of beer, rum, and sugar ; the common treat at that time in the country towns of New England.

Then with three shouts that tore the sky;
'Tis consecrate to Liberty
To guard it from th' attacks of Tories,
A grand committee call'd of four is;
Who foremost on the patriot spot,
Had brought the flip and paid the shot.

By this, M'FINGAL with his train
Advanced upon th' adjacent plain,
And full with loyalty possesst,
Pour'd forth the zeal, that fired his breast.

“ What mad-brain'd rebel gave commission,
To raise this May-pole of sedition ?
Like Babel, rear'd by bawling throngs,
With like confusion too of tongues,
To point at heaven and summon down
The thunders of the British crown ?
Say, will this paltry pole secure
Your forfeit heads from Gage's power ?
Attack'd by heroes brave and crafty,
Is this to stand your ark of safety ;
Or driven by Scottish laird and laddie,
Think ye to rest beneath its shadow ?
When bombs, like fiery serpents, fly,
And balls rush hissing through the sky,
Will this vile pole, devote to freedom,
Save like the Jewish pole in Edom ;

Or like the brazen snake of Moses,
Cure your crackt skulls and batter'd noses ?
    " Ye dupes to every factious rogue
And tavern-prating demagogue,
Whose tongue but rings, with sound more full,
On th' empty drumhead of his scull ;
Behold you not what noisy fools
Use you, worse simpletons, for tools ?
For Liberty, in your own by-sense,
Is but for crimes a patent license,
To break of law th' Egyptian yoke,
And throw the world in common stock ;
Reduce all grievances and ills
To Magna Charta of your wills ;
Establish cheats and frauds and nonsense,
Framed to the model of your conscience ;
Cry justice down, as out of fashion,
And fix its scale of depreciation ;*
Defy all creditors to trouble ye,
And keep new years of Jewish jubilee ;

* Alluding to the depreciation of the Continental paper money. Congress finally ascertained the course of its declension at different periods, by what was called, A Scale of Depreciation.

Drive judges out,* like Aaron's calves,
By jurisdiction of white staves,
And make the bar and bench and steeple
Submit t' our sovereign lord, the People ;
By plunder rise to power and glory,
And brand all property, as Tory ;
Expose all wares to lawful seizures
By mobbers or monopolizers ;
Break heads and windows and the peace,
For your own interest and increase ;
Dispute and pray and fight and groan
For public good, and mean your own ;
Prevent the law by fierce attacks
From quitting scores upon your backs ;
Lay your old dread, the gallows, low,
And seize the stocks, your ancient foe,
And turn them to convenient engines
To wreak your patriotic vengeance ;
While all, your rights who understand,
Confess them in their owner's hand ;

* On the commencement of the war, the courts of justice were every where shut up. In some instances, the judges were forced to retire, by the people, who assembled in multitudes, armed with white staves.

And when by clamors and confusions,
Your freedom's grown a public nuisance,
Cry "Liberty," with powerful yearning,
As he does "Fire!" whose house is burning;
Though he already has much more
Than he can find occasion for.
While every clown that tills the plains,
Though bankrupt in estate and brains,
By this new light transform'd to traitor,
Forsakes his plough to turn dictator,
Starts an haranguing chief of Whigs,
And drags you by the ears, like pigs.
All bluster, arm'd with factious license,
New-born at once to politicians.
Each leather-apron'd dunce, grown wise,
Presents his forward face t' advise,
And tatter'd legislators meet,
From every workshop through the street.
His goose the tailor finds no use in,
To patch and turn the Constitution;
The blacksmith comes with sledge and gra.
To iron-bind the wheels of state;
The quack forbears his patients' souse,
To purge the Council and the House;
The tinker quits his moulds and doxies,
To cast assembly-men and proxies.

From dunghills deep of blackest hue,
Your dirt-bred patriots spring to view,
To wealth and power and honors rise,
Like new-wing'd maggots changed to flies,
And fluttering round in high parade,
Strut in the robe, or gay cockade.
See Arnold quits, for ways more certain,
His bankrupt-perj'ries for his fortune,
Brews rum no longer in his store,
Jockey and skipper now no more,
Forsakes his warehouses and docks,
And writs of slander for the pox ;*
And cleansed by patriotism from shame,
Grows general of the foremost name.
For in this ferment of the stream
The dregs have work'd up to the brim,
And by the rule of topsy-turvies,
The scum stands foaming on the surface.

* Arnold's perjuries at the time of his pretended bankruptey, which was the first rise of his fortune; and his curious lawsuit against a brother skipper, who had charged him with having caught the above-mentioned disease, by his connection with a certain African princess in the West Indies, were among the early promises of his future greatness, and honors.

You've caused your pyramid t' ascend,
And set it on the little end.
Like Hudibras, your empire's made,
Whose crupper had o'ertopp'd his head.
You've push'd and turn'd the whole world up.
Side down, and got yourselves at top,
While all the great ones of your state
Are crush'd beneath the popular weight;
Nor can you boast, this present hour,
The shadow of the form of power.
For what's your Congress* or its end?
A power t' advise and recommend;
'To call forth troops, adjust your quotas—
And yet no soul is bound to notice;
To pawn your faith to th' utmost limit;
But cannot bind you to redeem it;
And when in want no more in them lies.
Than begging from your state-assemblies;

* The author here, in a true strain of patriotic censure, pointed out the principal defects in the first federal constitution of the United States: all which have been since removed in the new Constitution, established in the year 1789. So that the prophecy below, You'll ne'er have sense enough to mend it, must be ranked among the other sage blunders of his second-sighted hero.—Lond. Edit.

Can utter oracles of dread,
 Like friar Bacon's brazen head,
 But when a faction dares dispute 'em,
 Has ne'er an arm to execute 'em :
 As tho' you chose supreme dictators,
 And put them under conservators.
 You've but pursued the self-same way
 With Shakespeare's Trinc'lo* in the play ;
 " You shall be viceroys here, 'tis true,
 " But we'll be viceroy's over you."
 What wild confusion hence must ensue ?
 Tho' common danger yet cements you ;
 So some wreck'd vessel all in shatters,
 Is held up by surrounding waters,
 But stranded, when the pressure ceases,
 Falls by its rottenness to pieces.
 And fall it must ! if wars were ended,
 You'll ne'er have sense enough to mend it :
 But creeping on, by low intrigues,
 Like vermin of a thousand legs,†

* This political plan of Trinculo in the Tempest, may be found in the old folio edition of Shakespeare. It has since been expunged by some of his wise commentators † Millepedes.

'Twill find as short a life assign'd,
As all things else of reptile kind,
Your commonwealth's a common harlot,
The property of every varlet ;
Which now in taste, and full employ,
All sorts admire, as all enjoy :
But soon a batter'd strumpet grown,
You'll curse aud drum her out of town.
Such is the government you chose ;
For this you bade the world be foes ;
For this, so mark'd for dissolution,
You scorn the British constitution,
That constitution form'd by sages,
The wonder of all modern ages ;
Which owns no failure in reality,
Except corruption and venality ;
And merely proves the adage just,
That best things spoil'd corrupt to worst :
So man supreme in earthly station,
And mighty lord of this creation,
When once his corse is dead as herring,
Becomes the most offensive carrion,
And sooner breeds the plague, 'tis found,
Than all beasts rotting on the ground.
Yet with republics to dismay us,
You've call'd up Anarchy from chaos,

With all the followers of her school,
Uproar and Rage and wild Misrule :
For whom this rout of Whigs distracted,
And ravings dire of every crack'd head ;
These new-cast legislative engines
Of country-meetings and conventions :
Committees vile of correspondence,
And mobs, whose tricks have almost undone 's :
While reason fails to check your course,
And Loyalty's kick'd out of doors,
And Folly, like inviting landlord,
Hoists on your poles her royal standard ;
While the king's friends, in doleful dumps,
Have worn their courage to the stumps,
And leaving George in sad disaster,
Most sinfully deny their master.
What furies raged when you, in sea,
In shape of Indians, drown'd the tea ;*

* The cargo of tea sent to Boston, after been guarded for twenty nights, by voluntary parties of the Whigs, to prevent its being clandestinely brought ashore, was thrown into the sea, by a party of about two hundred young men, dressed, armed, and painted like Indians ; but many a ruffled shirt and laced vest appeared under their blankets.

When your gay sparks, fatigued to watch it,
Assumed the moggison and hatchet,
With wampum'd blankets hid their laces,
And like their sweathearts, primed* their faces :
While not a red-coat dared oppose,
And scarce a Tory show'd his nose ;
While Hutchinson,† for sure retreat,
Manœuvred to his country seat, *

* Primed, i. e. painted.

† When the leading Whigs in Boston found impossible to procure the Tea to be sent back, they secretly resolved on its destruction, and prepared all the necessary means. To cover the design, a meeting of the people of the whole county was convened on the day appointed, and spent their time in grave consultation on the question, what should be done to prevent its being landed and sold. The arrival of the Indians put an end to the debate, at the moment, when one of the Whig orators was declaiming against all violent measures. Hutchinson was alarmed at the meeting, and retired privately in the morning, to his country seat at Milton. Whether from mistake or design information was sent to him, that the mob was coming to pull down his house. He escaped in the utmost haste across the fields. The story of the day was, that the alarm was given, at the time, when he sate half shaved under the hands of his barber.

And thence affrighted, in the suds,
Stole off bareheaded through the woods.

“Have you not roused your mobs to join,
And make mandamus-men resign,
Call'd forth each duffil-drest curmudgeon
And dirty trowsers and white bludgeon,
Forced all our councils through the land,
To yield their necks at your command ;
While paleness marks their late disgraces,
Through all their rueful length of faces ?

“Have you not caused as woeful work
In our good city of New York,
When all the rabble, well cockaded,
In triumph through the streets paraded,
And mob'd the Tories, scared their spouses,
And ransack'd all the custom-houses :*
Made such a tumult, bluster, jarring,
That mid the clash of tempests warring,
Smith's† weather-cock, in veers forlorn,
Could hardly tell which way to turn ?

* The custom house was broken open at New York,
and all public monies seized.

† William Smith, an eminent lawyer in New York.
He at first opposed the claims of Britain, but after wavering
some time, at last joined our enemy. He was afterwards made Chief Justice in Canada.

Burn'd effigies of higher powers,
 Contrived in planetary hours;
 As witches with clay-images
 Destroy or torture whom they please :
 Till fired with rage, th' ungrateful club
 Spared not your best friend, Beelzebub,
 O'erlook'd his favors, and forgot
 The reverence due his cloven foot,
 And in the selfsame furnace frying,
 Stew'd him, and North, and Bute, and Tryon ?*
 Did you not, in as vile and shallow way,
 Fright our poor Philadelphian, Galloway,
 Your Congress, when the loyal ribald
 Belied, berated, and bescribbled ?

* Tryon was Governor of New York and a British General during the war. He had the glory of destroying the towns of Fairfield and Norwalk. Burnings in effigy were frequently the amusements of the mob at that period, and in imitation of the former custom of the English in burning annually the Pope, the Devil and the Pretender, Beelzebub, with his usual figure and accoutrements, was always joined in the conflagration with the other obnoxious characters.

What ropes* and halters did you send,
Terrific emblems of his end,
Till, least he'd hang in more than effigy,
Fled in a fog the trembling refugee ?
Now rising in progression fatal,
Have you not ventured to give battle ?
When Treason chaced our heroes troubled,
With rusty gun,† and leathern doublet ;
Turn'd all stone-walls and groves and bushes,
To batteries arm'd with blunderbusses ;
And with deep wounds, that fate portend,
Gaul'd many a Briton's latter end ;
Drove them to Boston, as in jail,
Confined without mainprize or bail.

* Galloway began by being a flaming patriot; but being disgusted at his own want of influence, and the greater popularity of others, he turned Tory, wrote against the measures of the Congress, and absconded. Just before his escape, a trunk was put on board a vessel in the Delaware, to be delivered to Joseph Galloway, Esquire. On opening it, he found it contained only, as Shakespeare says,

“A halter gratis, and leave to hang himself.”

† At the battle of Lexington.

Were not these deeds enough betimes,
To heap the measure of your crimes :
But in this loyal town and dwelling,
You raise these ensigns of rebellion ?
'Tis done ! fair Mercy shuts her door ;
And Vengeance now shall sleep no more.
Rise then, my friends, in terror rise,
And sweep this scandal from the skies.
You'll see their Dragon, though well jointed,
Will shrink before the Lord's anointed ;*
And like old Jericho's proud wall,
Before our ram's horns prostrate fall,"

This said, our Squire, yet undismay'd,
Call'd forth the Constable to aid,
And bade him read, in nearer station,
The Riot-act and Proclamation.
He swift, advancing to the ring,
Began, "Our Sovereign Lord, the King"—
When thousand clam'rous tongues he hears,
And clubs and stones assail his ears.
To fly was vain ; to fight was idle ;
By foes encompass'd in the middle,

* The Tory clergy always styled the King, the Lord's Anointed. The language of Cromwell's and Charles' days was yet frequent in New England.

His hope, in stratagems, he found,
And fell right craftily to ground ;
Then crept to seek an hiding place,
'Twas all he could, beneath a brace ;
Where soon the conq'ring crew espied him,
And where he lurk'd, they caught and tied him.

At once with resolution fatal,
Both Whigs and Tories rush'd to battle.
Instead of weapons, either band
Seized on such arms as came to hand.
And as famed Ovid* paints th' adventures
Of wrangling Lapithæ and Centaurs,
Who at their feast, by Bacchus led,
Threw bottles at each other's head ;
And these arms failing in their scuffles,
Attack'd with andirons, tongs, and shovels :
So clubs and billets, staves, and stones
Met fierce, encountering every sconce,
And cover'd o'er with knobs and pains
Each void receptacle for brains ;
Their clamors rend the skies around,
The hills rebellow to the sound ;
And many a groan increas'd the din
From batter'd nose and broken shin.

* See Ovid's Metamorphoses, Book 12th.

M'FINGAL, rising at the word,
Drew forth his old militia-sword;
Thrice cried "King George," as erst in distress
Knights of romance invoked a mistress;
And brandishing the blade in air,
Struck terror through th' opposing war.
The Whigs, unsafe within the wind
Of such commotion, shrunk behind.
With whirling steel around address'd,
Fierce through their thickest throng he press'd,
(Who roll'd on either side in arch,
Like Red Sea waves in Israel's march)
And like a meteor rushing through,
Struck on their pole a vengeful blow.
Around, the Whigs, of clubs and stones
Discharged whole vollies, in platoons,
That o'er in whistling fury fly;
But not a foe dares venture nigh.
And now perhaps with glory crown'd
Our 'Squire had fell'd the pole to ground,
Had not some pow'r, a whig at heart,
Descended down and took their part ;*

* The learned reader will readily observe the allusions in this scene, to the single combats of Paris and Menelaus in Homer, Æneas and the Turnus in Virgil, and Michael and Satan in Milton.

(Whether 'twere Pallas, Mars, or Iris,
'Tis scarce worth while to make inquiries)
Who at the nick of time alarming,
Assumed the solemn form of Chairman,
Address'd a Whig, in every scene
The stoutest wrestler on the green.
And pointed where the spade was found,
Late used to set their pole in ground,
And urged, with equal arms and might,
To dare our 'Squire to single fight.
The Whig thus arm'd, untaught to yield,
Advanced tremendous to the field :
Nor did M'FINGAL shun the foe,
But stood to brave the desp'rate blow ;
While all the party gazed, suspended
To see the deadly combat ended ;
And Jove* in equal balance weigh'd
The sword against the brandish'd spade,
He weigh'd ; but lighter than a dream,
The sword flew up, and kick'd the beam.
Our 'Squire on tiptoe rising fair
Lifts high a noble stroke in air,

* Jupiter ipse duas æquato examine lances
Sustinet & fata imponit diversa duorum,
Quem damnet labor, &c. Aeneid, 12.

Which hung not, but like dreadful engines,
 Descended on his foe in vengeance,
 But ah! in danger, with dishonor
 The sword perfidious fails its owner;
 That sword, which oft had stood its ground,
 By huge trainbands encircled round;
 And on the bench, with blade right royal,
 Had won the day at many a trial,*
 Of stones and clubs had braved th' alarms,
 Shrunk from these new Vulcanian arms.†
 The spade so temper'd from the sledge,
 Nor keen nor solid harm'd its edge,
 Now met it, from his arm of might,
 Descending with steep force to smite;

* It was the fashion in New England at that time, for judges to wear swords on the bench.

—† Postquam arma Dei ad Vulcania ventum est,
 Mortalis mucro, glacies ceu futilis. ictu
 Dissiluit; fulva resplendent fragmina arena. Virgil.

—The sword
 Was given him temper'd so, that neither keen
 Nor solid might resist that edge; it met
 The sword of Satan with steep force to smite
 Descending and in half cut sheer. Milton.

The blade snapp'd short—and from his hand,
 With rust embrown'd the glittering sand.
 Swift turn'd M'FINGAL at the view,
 And call'd to aid th' attendant crew,
 In vain; the Tories all had run,
 When scarce the fight was well begun;
 Their setting wigs he saw decreas'd
 Far in th' horizon tow'rd the west.
 Amazed he view'd the shameful sight,
 And saw no refuge, but in flight:
 But age unwieldy check'd his pace,
 Though fear had wing'd his flying race;
 For not a trifling prize at stake;
 No less than great M'FINGAL's back.*
 With legs and arms he work'd his course,
 Like rider that outgoes his horse,
 And labor'd hard to get away, as Old Satan† struggling on through chaos;
 'Till looking back, he spied in rear
 The spade-arm'd chief advanced too near:
 Then stopp'd and seized a stone, that lay
 An ancient landmark near the way;

——* nec enim levia aut ludicra petuntur
 Præmia, sed Turni de vita et sanguine certant. Virgil.

† In Milton.

Nor shall we as old bards have done,
 Affirm it weigh'd an hundred ton ;*
 But such a stone, as at a shift
 A modern might suffice to lift,
 Since men' to credit their enigmas,
 Are dwindled down to dwarfs and pigmies,
 And giants exiled with their cronies
 To Brobdignags and Patagonias,
 But while our Hero turn'd him round,
 And tugg'd to raise it from the ground,
 The fatal spade discharged a blow
 Tremendous on his rear below :
 His bent knee fail'd, † and void of strength
 Stretch'd on the ground his manly length.
 Like ancient oak o'erturn'd, he lay,
 Or tower to tempests fall'n a prey,
 Or mountain sunk with all his pines,
 Or flow'r the plow to dust consigns,
 And more things else—but all men know 'em,
 If slightly versed in epic poem.

* This thought is taken from Juvenal, Satire 15.

† Genua labant———incidit ictus,
 Ingens ad terram duplicato poplite Turnus. Virgil.

At once the crew, at this dread crisis,
Fall on, and bind him, ere he rises ;
And with loud shouts and joyful soul,
Conduct him prisoner to the pole.
When now the mob in lucky hour
Had got their en'mies in their power,
They first proceed by grave command,
To take the Constable in hand.
Then from the pole's sublimest top
The active crew let down the rope,
At once its other end in haste bind,
And make it fast upon his waistband ;
Till like the earth, as stretch'd on tenter,
He hung self-balanced on his center.*
Then upwards, all hands hoisting sail,
They swung him like a keg of ale,
Till to the pinnacle in height
He vaulted like balloon or kite.
As Socrates† of old at first did
To aid philosophy get hoisted,
And found his thoughts flow strangely clear,
Swung in a basket in mid air :

* And earth self-balanced on her center hung. Milton.

† In Aristophanes' Comedy of the Clouds, Socrates is represented as hoisted in a basket to aid contemplation.

Our culprit thus, in purer sky,
With like advantage raised his eye,
And looking forth in prospect wide,
His Tory errors clearly spied,
And from his elevated station,
With bawling voice began addressing.

“ Good gentlemen and friends and kin,
For heaven’s sake hear, if not for mine !
I here renounce the Pope, the Turks,
The King, the Devil and all their works ;
And will, set me but once at ease,
Turn Whig or Christain, what you please ;
And always mind your rules so justly,
Should I live long as old Methus’lah,
I’ll never join in British rage,
Nor help Lord North nor Gen’ral Gage ;
Nor lift my gun in future fights,
Nor take away your Charter-rights ;
Nor overcome your new-raised levies,
Destroy your towns, nor burn your navies ;
Nor cut your poles down while I’ve breath,
Though raised more thick than hatchel-teeth :
But leave King George and all his elves
To do their conq’ring work themselves.”

This said, they lower’d him down in state,
Spread at all points, like falling cat ;

But took a vote first on the question,
That they'd accept this full confession,
And to their fellowship and favor,
Restore him on his good behaviour.

Not so our 'Squire submits to rule.

But stood, heroic as a mule.

"You'll find it all in vain," quoth he,

To play your rebel tricks on me.

All punishments the world can render,

Save only to provoke th' offender;

The will gains strength from treatment horrid,

As hides grow harder when they're curried.

No man e'er felt the halter draw,

With good opinion of the law;

Or held in method orthodox

His love of justice in the stocks:

Or fail'd to lose by sheriff's shears

At once his loyalty and ears.

Have you made Murray* look less big,

Or smok'd old Williams* to a Whig?

* Members of the Mandamus Council in Massachusetts. The operation of smoking Tories was thus performed. The victim was confined in a close room before a large fire of green wood, and a cover applied to the top of the chimney.

Did our mobb'd Ol'ver* quit his station,
Or heed his vows of resignation ?
Has Rivington† in dread of stripes,
Ceased lying since you stole his types ?
And can you think my faith will alter,
By tarring, whipping or the halter ?
I'll stand the worst ; for recompense
I trust King George and Providence.
And when with conquest gain'd I come,
Array'd in law and terror home,
Ye'll rue this inauspicious morn,
And curse the day, when ye were born,
In Job's high style of imprecations,
With all his plagues, without his patience."

* Thomas Oliver, Esq. Lieut.-Governor of Massachusetts. He was surrounded at his seat in the country and intimidated by the mob into the signing of his resignation.

† Rivington was a Tory Printer in New York. Just before the commencement of the war, a party from New Haven attacked his press, and carried off, or destroyed the types.

Meanwhile beside the pole, the guard
A bench of justice* had prepared,
Where sitting round in awful sort
The grand committee hold their court ;
While all the crew, in silent awe,
Wait from their lips the lore of law.
Few moments with deliberation
They hold the solemn consultation ;
When soon in judgment all agree,
And clerk proclaims the dread decree ;
“ That 'Squire M'FINGAL having grown
The vilest Tory in the town,
And now in full examination
Convicted by his own confession,
Finding no tokens of repentance,
This court proceeds to render sentence :
That first the Mob slip-knot single
Tie round the neck of said M'FINGAL,
And in due form do tar him next,
And feather, as the law directs ;

* An imitation of legal forms was universally practised by the mobs in New England, in the trial and condemnation of Tories. This marks a curious trait of national character.

Then through the town attendant ride him
In cart with Constable beside him,
And having held him up to shame,
Bring to the pole, from whence he came."

Forthwith the crowd proceed to deck
With halter'd noose M'FINGAL's neck,
While he in peril of his soul
Stood tied half-hanging to the pole ;
Then lifting high the ponderous jar,
Pour'd o'er his head the smoking tar.
With less profusion once was spread
Oil on the Jewish monarch's head,
That down his beard and vestments ran,
And cover'd all his outward man.
As when (so Claudian* sings) the Gods
And earth-born giants fell at odds,
The stout Enceladus in malice
Tore mountains up to throw at Pallas ;
And while he held them o'er his head,
The river, from their mountains fed,
Pour'd down his back its copious tide,
And wore its channels in his hide :
So from the high-raised urn the torrents
Spread down his side their various currents ;

* Claudian's Gigantomachia.

His flowing wig, as next the brim,
First met and drank the sable stream;
Adown his visage stern and grave
Roll'd and adhered the viscid wave;
With arms depending as he stood,
Each cuff capacious holds the flood;
From nose and chin's remotest end,
The tarry icicles descend;
Till all o'erspread, with colors gay,
He glitter'd to the western ray,
Like sleet-bound trees in wintry skies,
Or Lapland idol carved in ice.
And now the feather-bag display'd
Is waved in triumph o'er his head,
And clouds him o'er with feathers missive,
And down, upon the tar, adhesive:
Not Maia's* son, with wings for ears,
Such plumage round his visage wears;
Nor Milton's six-wing'd† angel gathers
Such superfluity of feathers.

* Mercury, described by the Poets with wings on his head and feet.

† And angel wing'd—six wings he wore— Milton.

Now all complete appears our 'Squire,
 Like Gorgon or Chimæra dire ;
 Nor more could boast on Plato's* plan
 To rank among the race of man,
 Or prove his claim to human nature,
 As a two-legg'd, unfeather'd creature.

Then on the fatal cart, in state
 They raised our grand Duumvirate.
 And as at Rome† a like committee,
 Who found an owl within their city,
 With solemn rites and grave processions
 At every shrine perform'd lustrations ;
 And least infection might take place
 From such grim fowl with feather'd face,
 All Rome attends him through the street
 In triumph to his country seat :
 With like devotion all the choir
 Paraded round our awful 'Squire ;
 In front the martial music comes
 Of horns and fiddles, fifes and drums,
 With jingling sound of carriage bells,
 And treble creak of rusted wheels.

* Alluding to Plato's famous definition of Man, Animal bipes implume—a two-legged animal without feathers.

† Livy's History.

Behind, the crowd, in lengthen'd row
With proud procession, closed the show.
And at fit periods every throat
Combined in universal shout ;
And hail'd great Liberty in chorus.
Or bawl'd 'confusion to the Tories.'
Not louder storm the welkin braves
From clamors of conflicting waves ;
Less dire in Lybian wilds the noise
When rav'ning lions lift their voice ;
Or triumphs at town meetings made,
On passing votes to regulate trade.*

Thus having borne them round the town,
Last at the pole they set them down ;
And to the tavern take their way
To end in mirth the festal day.

And now the mob, dispersed and gone,
Left 'Squire and Constable alone.
The constable with rueful face
Lean'd sad and solemn o'er a brace ;
And fast beside him, cheek by jowl,
Stuck 'Squire M'FINGAL 'gainst the pole,

* Such votes were frequently passed at town-meetings, with the view to prevent the augmentation of prices, and stop the depreciation of the paper money.

Glued by the tar t' his rear applied,
Like barnacle on vessel's side.
But though his body lack'd physician,
His spirit was in worse condition.
He found his fears of whips and ropes
By many a drachm outweigh'd his hopes.
As men in jail without mainprize
View every thing with other eyes,
And all goes wrong in church and state,
Seen through perspective of the grate :
So now M'FINGAL'S Second-sight
Beheld all things in gloomier light ;
His visual nerve, well purged with tar,
Saw all the coming scenes of war.
As his prophetic soul grew stronger,
He found he could hold in no longer.
First from the pole as fierce he shook,
His wig from pitchy durance broke,
His mouth unglued, his feathers flutter'd
His tarr'd skirts crack'd, and thus he utter'd.

“ Ah, Mr. Constable, in vain
We strive 'gainst wind and tide and rain !
Behold my doom ! this feathery omen
Portends what dismal times are coming.
Now future scenes, before my eyes,
And second-sighted forms arise,

I hear a voice,* that calls away,
 And cries ' The Whigs will win the day.'
 My beck'ning genius gives command,
 And bids me fly the fatal land ;
 Where changing name and constitution,
 Rebellion turns to Revolution,
 While loyalty, oppress'd in tears,
 Stands trembling for its neck and ears.
 " Go, summon all our brethren, greeting,
 To muster at our usual meeting ;
 There my prophetic voice shall warn 'em
 Of all things future that concern 'em,
 And scenes disclose on which, my friend,
 Their conduct and their lives depend.
 There ! †—but first 'tis more of use,
 From this vile pole to set me loose ;
 Then go with cautious steps and steady,
 While I steer home and make all ready.

* I hear a voice, you cannot hear,
 That says, I must not stay— Tickell's Ballad.

THE VISION.

 NOW Night came down, and rose full soon
That patroness of rogues, the Moon ;
Beneath whose kind protecting ray,
Wolves, brute and human, prowled for
The honest world all snored in chorus, [prey.
While owls and ghosts and thieves and Tories,
Whom erst the mid-day sun had awed,
Crept from their lurking holes abroad.

On cautious hinges, slow and stiller,
Wide oped the great M'FINGAL's cellar,*

* Secret meetings of the Tories, in cellars and other lurking places, were frequent during the revolutionary war.

 Their chiefs all sitting round descried are,
 On kegs of ale and seats of cider;*
 When first M'FINGAL, dimly seen,
 Rose solemn from the turnip-bin.†
 Nor yet his form had wholly lost
 Ah' original bright it could boast,‡
 Nor less appear'd than Justice Quorum,
 In feather'd majesty before 'em.
 Adown his tar-streak'd visage, clear
 Fell glistening fast th' indignant tear,
 And thus his voice, in mournful wise,
 Pursued the prologue of his sighs.

“Brethren and friends, the glorious band
Of loyalty in rebel land!

It was not thus you've seen me sitting,
Return'd in triumph from town-meeting:
When blust'ring Whigs where put to stand,
And votes obey'd my guiding hand,
And new commissions pleased my eyes;
Blest days, but ah, no more to rise!
Alas, against my better light,
And optics sure of second-sight,*
My stubborn soul, in error strong,
Had faith in Hutchinson too long,
See what brave trophies still we bring
From all our battles for the king;
And yet these plagues, now past before us,
Are but our entering wedge of sorrows!

“I see, in glooms tempestuous, stand
The cloud impending o'er the land;
That cloud, which still beyond the hopes
Serves all our orators with tropes;

* The second-sight of the Highlanders furnishes poetry with a new kind of machinery. Walter Scott has since made use of it with great advantage, in several of his poems.

Which, though from our own vapors fed,
 Shall point its thunders on our head!
 I see the Mob, beslipp'd at taverns,
 Hunt us, like wolves, through wilds and caverns!
 What dungeons open on our fears!
 What horsewhips whistle round our ears!
 Tar, yet in embryo in the pine,
 Shall run on Tories' back to shine;
 Trees, rooted fair in groves of fallows,
 Are growing for our future gallows;
 And geese unhatch'd, when pluck'd in fray,
 Shall rue the feathering of that day.*

“ For me, before that fatal time,
 I mean to fly th' accursed clime,
 And follow omens, which of late
 Have warn'd me of impending fate.

“ For late in visions of my sight;
 The gallows stood before my sight;
 I saw its ladder heaved on end;
 I saw the deadly rope descend,
 And in its noose, that wavering swang,
 Friend Malcolm† hung, or seem'd to hang,

* The child shall rue, that is unborn,
 The hunting of that day. Chevy Chase.

† Malcolm was a Scotchman, Aid to Governor Tryon

How changed* from him, who bold as lion,

in his expedition against the Regulators, as they called themselves, in North Carolina. He was afterwards an under-officer of the Customs in Boston, where becoming obnoxious, he was tarred, feathered and half-hanged by the mob, about the year 1774.

* ————— quantum mutatus ab illo
 Hectore, qui rediit spoliis indutus. Virg.

† This adventure was thus reported among the anecdotes of the day. When Governor Tryon marched with his militia, to suppress the insurgents in the western counties of North Carolina, and found them, drawn up in array to oppose him, Malcolm was sent with a flag to propose terms, and demand the surrender of their arms. Before the conclusion of the parley, Tryon's militia began to fire on the Regulators. The fire was immediately returned. Malcolm started to escape to his party; and by the violence of his pedestrian exertion (as Shakespeare says)

"His points being broken, down fell his hose;"
 and he displayed the novel spectacle of a man running the guantlet sans culottes, betwixt two armies engaged in action, and presenting an unusual mark to his enemy.

I scarce had made a fearful bow,
 And trembling ask'd him, "How d'ye do;"
 When lifting up his eyes so wide,
 His eyes alone, his hands were tied;
 With feeble voice, as spirits use,
 Now almost choak'd by gripe of noose;
     "Ah, fly my friend, he cried, escape,
 And keep yourself from this sad scrape;
 Enough you've talk'd and writ and plann'd;
 The Whigs have got the upper hand.
 Could mortal* arm our fears have ended,
 This arm (and'shook it) had defended.
 Wait not till things grow desperater
 For hanging is no laughing matter.
 Adventure then no longer stay;
 But call your friends and haste away.
     " For lo, through deepest glooms of night,
 I come to aid thy second-sight,
 Disclose the plagues that round us wait,
 And scan the dark decrees of fate.
     " Ascend this ladder, whence unfurl'd
 The curtain opes of t'other world;

* ————— Si Pergama dextra

For here new worlds their scenes unfold,
 Seen from this backdoor* of the old.
 As when Æneas risk'd his life,
 Like Orpheus vent'ring for his wife,
 And bore in show his mortal carcase
 Through realms of Erebus and Orcus,
 Then in the happy fields Elysian,
 Saw all his embryon sons in vision ;
 As shown by great Archangel Michael,
 Old Adam† saw the world's whole sequel,
 And from the mount's extended space,
 The rising fortunes of his race ;
 So from this stage shalt thou behold
 The war its coming scenes unfold
 Raised by my arm to meet thine eye :
 My Adam, thou ; thine Angel, I.

But first my pow'r, for visions bright,
 Must cleanse from clouds thy mental sight,
 Remove the dim suffusions spread,
 Which bribes and salaries there have bred ;
 And from the well of Bute infuse
 Three genuine drops of Highland dews,

* Leaving the old, both worlds at once they view,
 Who stand upon the threshold of the new. Waller.

Thine eyes, for much thou hast to view.

Now freed from Tory darkness, raise
Thy head and spy the coming days.
For lo, before our second-sight,
The Continent ascends in light.
From north to south, what gath'ring swarms
Increase the pride of rebel arms!
Through every State our legions brave
Speed gallant marches to the grave,
Of battling Whigs the frequent prize,
While rebel trophies stain the skies.
Behold o'er northern realms afar
Extend the kindling flames of war!
See famed St. John's and Montreal†
Doom'd by Montgomery's arm to fall!
Where Hudson with majestic sway
Through hills disparted plows his way,

† As the allusions in this speech refer to the principal events of the American war, they will be familiar to those acquainted with its history. They are too numerous to be explained in notes.

Fate spreads on Bemus' heights alarms,
 And pours destruction on our arms ;
 There Bennington's ensanguined plain,
 And Stony Point, the prize of Wayne.
 Behold near Del'ware's icy roar,
 Where morning dawns on Trenton's shore,
 While Hessians spread their Christmas feasts
 Rush rude these uninvited guests ;
 Nor aught avails the captured crew
 Their marshal whiskers' grisly hue !
 On Princeton plains our heroes yield,
 And spread in flight the vanquish'd field ;
 While fear to Mawhood's* heels put on
 Wings, wide as worn by Maia's son.
 Behold the Pennsylvanian shore
 Enrich'd with streams of British gore ;
 Where many a veteran chief in bed
 Of honor rests his slumb'ring head,†

* Col. Mawhood gained great reputation among the British, by escaping with about two hundred men from the battle of Princeton.

————† Have ye chos'n this place,
 After the toils of battle, to repose
 Your wearied virtue ; for the ease ye find
 To slumber here, as in the vales of heaven? Milton.

And in soft vales, in land of foes,
Their wearied virtue finds repose !
See plund'ring Dunmore's* negro band
Fly headlong from Virginia's strand ;
And far on southern hills our cousins,
The Scotch M'Donalds, fall by dozens ;
Or where King's Mountain lifts its head,
Our ruin'd bands in triumph led !
Behold, o'er Tarlton's blustering train
Defeat extends the captive chain !
Afar near Eutaw's fatal springs,
Lo, rebel Vict'ry spreads her wings !
Through all the land, in varied chace,
We hunt the rainbow of success,
In vain ! their chief, superior still,
Eludes our force with Fabian skill ;
Or swift descending by surprize,
Like Prussia's eagle, sweeps the prize,
    " I look'd ; nor yet, oppress'd with fears,
Gave credit to my eyes or ears ;

* Lord Dunmore was Governor of Virginia at the commencement of the war. He fled with all the slaves and plunder he could collect.

But held the sights an empty dream,
 On Berkley's* immaterial scheme ;
 And pond'ring sad with troubled breast,
 At length my rising doubts express'd.
 ' Ah, whither thus, by rebels smitten,
 Is fled th' omnipotence of Britain ;
 Or fail'd its usual guard to keep,
 Absent from home or fast asleep ?
 Did not, retired to bowers Elysian,
 Great Mars leave with her his commission,
 And Neptune erst, in treaty free,
 Give up dominion o'er the sea ?
 Else where's the faith of famed orations.†
 Address, debate and proclamations,
 Or courtly sermon, laureat ode,
 And ballads on the wat'ry God ;‡

* Berkley, an English philosopher, who refining on Locke's ideal system, denied the existence of matter.

† In this style the British orators and poets talk and write of themselves.

‡ Alluding to an English ballad, much sung and famous at that time, in which Neptune (called the Watry God) with great deference surrenders his trident to King George, and acknowledges him, as monarch and ruler of the ocean.

With whose high strains great George enriches
His eloquence of gracious speeches ?
Not faithful to our Highland eyes,
These deadly forms of visions rise.
Some whig-inspiring rebel sprite
Now palms delusion on our sight.
I'd scarcely trust a tale so vain,
Should revelation prompt the strain
Or Ossian's ghost the scenes rehearse
In all the melody of Erse.**

“ Too long,” quoth Malcolm, “ from confusion,
You've dwelt already in delusion ;
' As sceptics, of all fools the chief,
Hold faith in creeds of unbelief.
I come to draw thy veil aside
Of error, prejudice, and pride.
Fools love deception, but the wise
Prefer sad truths to pleasing lies.
For know, those hopes can ne'er succeed,
That trust on Britain's breaking reed.
For weak'ning long from bad to worse,
By cureless atrophy of purse,
She feels at length with trembling heart,
Her foes have found her mortal part.

* Erse, the ancient Scottish language, in which Ossian composed his poems.

As famed Achilles, dipp'd by Thetis
In Styx, as sung in ancient ditties,
Grew all case-harden'd o'er, like steel,
Invulnerable, save his heel ;
And laugh'd at swords and spears and squibs,
And all diseases, but the kibes ;
Yet met at last his deadly wound,
By Paris' arrow nail'd to ground :
So Britain's boasted strength deserts
In these her empire's utmost skirts,
Removed beyond her fierce impressions,
And atmosphere of omnipresence ;
Nor to this shore's remoter ends
Her dwarf-omnipotence extends.
Hence in this turn of things so strange,
'Tis time our principles to change :
For vain that boasted faith, that gathers
No perquisite, but tar and feathers ;
No pay, but stripes from whiggish malice,
And no promotion, but the gallows.
I've long enough stood firm and steady,
Half-hang'd for loyalty already,
And could I save my neck and pelf,
I'd turn a flaming whig myself.
But since, obnoxious here to fate,
This saving wisdom comes too late,

Our noblest hopes already crost,
 Our sal'ries gone, our titles lost,
 Doom'd to worse suff'rings from the mob,
 Than Satan's surg'ries used on Job ;
 What hope remains, but now with sleight
 What's left of us to save by flight ?

“Now raise thine eyes, for visions true
 Again ascending wait thy view.”

“I look'd ; and clad in early light,
 The spires of Boston met my sight ;
 The morn o'er eastern hills afar
 Illumed the varied scenes of war ;

 As Titans erst assail'd the skies ;*
 Leagued in superior force to prove
 The sceptred hand of British Jove.
 Mounds piled on hills ascended fair

 In thunder on the trembling plain,

should attempt to scale the eminence. Howe after sundry manœuvres was discouraged from the attempt, and as Boston was no longer tenable, made a truce with Washington, evacuated the place, and sailed with his troops to Halifax.

* The Titans are described by the old poets, as giants, sons of the earth; who made an insurrection against Jupiter. They heaped mountains upon mountains, in order to scale the Gibraltar of the pagan Olympus; but were foiled by the thunders of Jove and the arrows of Apollo. See Hesiod, &c.

amused themselves with the acting of a new farce, called The Blockade of Boston ; the humor of which consisted in burlesquing the Yankee phrases, unmilitary dress, and awkward appearance of the new American levies, by whom they were besieged: like the fancy of Cardinal De Retz, who while condemned to a severe imprisonment, took his revenge by writing the life of his jailor. This play was generally ascribed to the pen of Burgoyne. As he was, on his final capture, returned to England, in good condition still to scribble, he took the advice of Malcolm, and wrote the comedy of The Heiress, which is indeed one of the best modern productions of the British stage.

In what dread scenes their courage grows,
And how they conquer'd all their foes."

I look'd, and saw in wintry skies
Our spacious prison-walls arise,
Where Britons, all their captives taming,
Plied them with scourging, cold and famine,
By noxious food and plagues contagious
Reduced to life's last, fainting stages.
Amid the dead, that crowd the scene,
The moving skeletons were seen.
Aloft the haughty Loring* stood,
And thrived, like Vampire,† on their blood.

* Loring was a refugee from Boston, made commissary of prisoners by General Howe. The consummate cruelties, practised on the American prisoners under his administration, almost exceed the ordinary powers of human invention. The conduct of the Turks in putting all prisoners to death is certainly much more rational and humane, than that of the British army for the three first years of the American war, or till after the capture of Burgoyne. Lond. Edit.

† The notion of Vampires is a superstition, that formerly prevailed in many nations of Europe. They pretend it is a dead body, which rises out of its grave in the night and sucks the blood of the living.

 Dealt daily rations out, of poison.
 At hand our troops, in vaunting strain,
 Insulted all their wants and pain,
 And turn'd upon the dying tribe
 The bitter taunt and scornful gibe ;
 And British captains, chiefs of might,
 Exulting in the joyous sight,
 On foes disarm'd, with courage daring,
 Exhausted all their tropes of swearing.
 Distain'd around with rebel blood,
 Like Milton's Lazar* house it stood,
 Where grim Despair presided Nurse,
 And Death was Regent of the house.

Amazed I cried, "Is this the way
 That British valor wins the day?"
 More had I said in strains unwelcome,
 Till interrupted thus by Malcolm.

"Blame not, said he, but learn the reason
 Of this new mode of conq'ring treason.

Then bade these prison-walls arise,
Like temple tow'ring to the skies,
Where British clemency renown'd
Might fix her seat on hallow'd ground,

* This was done openly and without censure, in many instances, by the troops under Howe's command, on his first conquest of Long Island.

† Great pains was taken by emissaries from New York to communicate the small-pox through the country. It became necessary to counteract the attempt by a general inoculation of the inhabitants.

And at this altar for her honor,
Chose this High-priest to wait upon her,
Who with just rites, in ancient guise,
Offers the human sacrifice.
Here every day, her vot'ries tell,
She more devours, than th' idol Bel ;
And thirsts more rav'nously for gore,
Than any worshipp'd Power before.
That ancient heathen godhead, Moloch,
Oft stay'd his stomach with a bullock ;
And if his morning rage you'd check first :
One child sufficed him for a breakfast :
But British clemency with zeal
Devours her hundreds at a meal ;
Right well by nat'ralists defined
A being of carniv'rous kind :
So erst Gargantua* pleased his palate,
And eat six pilgrims up in sallad.
Not blest with maw less ceremonious
The wide-mouth'd whale, that swallow'd Jonas ;

Like earthquake gapes, to death devote,
That open sepulchre, her throat

And sooner bring to cry, enough ;
Or fatten up to fair condition
The learned line of Pharaoh's vision.

Behold her temple, where it stands
Erect, by famed Britannic hands.
'Tis the Black-hole of Indian structure,
New-built in English architecture,
On plan, 'tis said, contrived and wrote
By Clive before he cut his throat ;
Who, ere he took himself in hand,
Was her high-priest in nabob-land :
And when with conq'ring triumph crown'd,
He'd well enslaved the nation round,
With tender British heart, the chief,
Since slavery's worse than loss of life,
Bade desolation circle far,
And famine end the work of war ;
And loosed their chains, and for their merits
Dismiss'd them free to worlds of spirits.

Now turn thine eyes to nobler sights,
And mark the prowess of our fights.
Behold like whelps of Britain's lion,
Our warriors, Clinton, Vaughan, and Tryon,
March forth with patriotic joy
To ravish, plunder, burn, destroy.
Great Gen'als, foremost in their nation,
The journeymen of Desolation !
Like Samson's foxes, each assails,
Let loose with firebrands in their tails,
And spreads destruction more forlorn,
Than they among Philistine corn.
And see in flames their triumphs rise,
Illuming all the nether skies,
O'er-streaming, like a new Aurora,
The western hemisphere with glory !
What towns, in ashes laid, confess
These heroes' prowess and success !
What blacken'd walls and burning fanes,
For trophies spread the ruin'd plains !

victims of his humanity in the East Indies. It is presumed that he showed them the vote of parliament, returning thanks for his services.

What females, caught in evil hour,
By force submit to British power ;
Or plunder'd negroes in disaster
Confess King George their lord and master !
What crimson corses strew their way,
What smoking carnage dims the day !
Along the shore, for sure reduction,
They wield the besom of destruction,
Great Homer likens, in his Ilias,
To dogstar bright the fierce Achilles ;
But ne'er beheld in red procession
Three dogstars rise in constellation,
Nor saw, in glooms of evening misty,
Such signs of fiery triplicity,
Which, far beyond the comet's tail,
Portend destruction where they sail.
Oh, had Great Britain's warlike shore
Produced but ten such heroes more,
They'd spared the pains, and held the station
Of this world's final conflagration ;
Which when its time comes, at a stand,
Would find its work all done t' its hand !
Yet though gay hopes our eyes may bless,
Malignant fate forbids success ;
Like morning dreams our conquest flies,
Dispersed before the dawn arise."

Here Malcolm paused ; when pond'ring long
Grief thus gave utt'rance to my tongue.
“ Where shrink in fear our friends dismay'd,
And where the Tories' promised aid ?
Can none, amid these fierce alarms,
Assist the power of royal arms ?”
“ In vain, he cried, our King depends
On promised aid of Tory friends.
When our own efforts want success,
Friends ever fail, as fears increase.
As leaves, in blooming verdure wove,
In warmth of summer clothe the grove,
But when autumnal frosts arise,
Leave bare their trunks to wintry skies :
So, while your power can aid their ends.
You ne'er can need ten thousand friends ;
But once in want, by foes dismay'd,
May advertise them, stol'n or stray'd.
Thus ere Great Britain's force grew slack,
She gain'd that aid she did not lack ;
But now in dread, imploring pity,
All hear unmoved her dol'rous ditty ;
Allegiance wand'ring turns astray,
And Faith grows dim for lack of pay.
In vain she tries, by new inventions,
Fear, falsehood, flatt'ry, threats, and pensions ;

Or sends commiss'ners with credentials
 Of promises and penitentials.
 As, for his fare o'er Styx of old,
 The Trojan stole the bough of gold,
 And least grim Cerb'rus should make head,
 Stuff'd both his fobs with ginger-bread;*
 Behold, at Britain's utmost shifts,
 Comes Jonstone† loaded with like gifts,
 To venture through the whiggish tribe,
 To cuddle, wheedle, coax, and bribe;
 And call, to aid his desp'rate mission,
 His petticoated politician,

——* medicatam frugibus offam. Virgil.

† In the year 1778, after the capture of Burgoyne, our good government passed an act, repealing all the acts of which the Americans complained, provided they would rescind their declaration of Independence, and continue to be our colonies. The ministry then sent over three commissioners, Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Eden, and a certain lord. These commissioners began their operations and finished them, by attempting to bribe individuals among the members of the states, and of the army. This bait appears to have caught nobody but Arnold. The petticoated politician, here mentioned, was a woman of Philadelphia, through whose agency they offered a bribe to Joseph Read, Governor of Pennsylvania. London Edit.

While Venus, join'd to act the farce,
Strolls forth embassadress for Mars.
In vain he strives, for while he lingers,
These mastiffs bite his off'ring fingers ;
Nor buys for George and realms infernal
One spaniel, but the mongrel, Arnold.

“ ’Twere vain to paint, in vision'd show,
The mighty nothings done by Howe ;
What towns he takes in mortal fray,
As stations whence to run away ;
What triumphs gain'd in conflict warm,
No aid to us, to them no harm ;
For still th' event alike is fatal,
Whate'er success attend the battle,
Whether he vict'ry gain or lose it,
Who ne'er had skill enough to use it.
And better 'twere, at their expense,
T' have drubb'd him into common sense,
And waked, by bastings on his rear,
Th' activity, though but of fear.
By slow advance his arms prevail,
Like emblematic march of snail,
That, be Millennium nigh or far,
T'would long before him end the war.
From York to Philadelphian ground,
He sweeps the pompous flourish round.

Wheel'd circ'lar by eccentric stars,
Like racing boys at prison-bars,
Who take th' opposing crew in whole,
By running round the adverse goal;
Works wide the traverse of his course,
Like ship t' evnde the tempest's force;
Like mill-horse circling in his race,
Advances not a single pace,
And leaves no trophies of reduction,
Save that of cankerworms, destruction.
Thus having long both countries curst,
He quits them as he found them first,
Steers home disgraced, of little worth,
To join Burgoyne and rail at North.

“ Now raise thine eyes and view with pleasure,
The triumphs of his famed successor.”

“ I look'd, and now by magic lore
Faint rose to view the Jersey shore :
But dimly seen in gloom array'd,
For night had pour'd her sable shade,
And every star, with glimm'rings pale,
Was muffled deep in ev'ning veil.
Scarce visible, in dusky night
Advancing red-coats rose in sight ;
The length'ning train in gleaming rows
Stole silent from their slumb'ring foes ;

No trembling soldier dared to speak.
And not a wheel presumed to creak.
My looks my new surprize confess'd,
Till by great Malcolm thus address'd.
"Spend not thy wits in vain researches :
'Tis one of Clinton's moonlight marches.
From Philadelphia now retreating
To save his baffled troops a beating,
With hasty strides he flies in vain,
His rear attack'd on Monmouth plain.
With various chance the dread affray
Holds in suspense till close of day,
When his tired bands, o'ermatch'd in fight,
Are rescued by descending night.
He forms his camp, with great parade,
While evening spreads the world in shade,
Then still, like some endanger'd spark,
Steals off on tiptoe in the dark :
Yet writes his king in boasting tone
How grand he march'd by light of moon.*

* General Clinton's official despatches, giving an account of his marching from Monmouth by moonlight, furnished a subject of much pleasantry in America ; where it was known that the moon had set two hours before the march began. London Edit.

I see him, but thou canst not ; proud
He leads in front the trembling crowd,
And wisely knows, as danger's near,
'Twill fall much heaviest on his rear.
Go on, great gen'ral, nor regard
The scoffs of every scribbling bard ;
Who sings how gods, that fearful night,
Aided by miracle your flight,
As once they used, in Homer's day,
To help weak heroes run away ;
Tells how the hours, at this sad trial,
Went back, as erst on Ahaz' dial,
While British Joshua stay'd the moon
On Monmouth plains for Ajalon.
Heed not their sneers or gibes so arch,
Because she set before your march.
A small mistake! your meaning right ;
You take her influence for her light ;
Her influence, which shall be your guide,
And o'er your gen'ralship preside.
Hence still shall teem your empty skull
With vict'ries, when the moon's at full,
Which by transition passing strange
Wane to defeats before the change.
Still shall you steer, on land or ocean,
By like eccentric lunar motion ;

Eclips'd in many a fatal crisis,
And dimm'd when Washington arises.
    " And see how Fate, herself turn'd traitor,
Inverts the ancient course of nature ;
And changes manners, tempers, climes,
To suit the genius of the times !
See, Bourbon forms a gen'rous plan,
New guardian of the rights of man,
And prompt in firm alliance joins
To aid the Rebels' proud designs !
Behold from realms of eastern day
His sails* innum'rous shape their way,
In warlike line the billows sweep,
And roll the thunders of the deep !
See, low in equinoctial skies, ,
The western islands fall their prize ;
See British flags, o'ermatch'd in might,
Put all their faith in instant flight,
Or broken squadrons, from th' affray,
Drag slow their wounded hulks away !

* In 1779, the French king sent a powerful fleet to the West Indies, which was very successful in the conquest of St. Vincents and Grenada, the defeat of Admiral Biron in a naval engagement, and the capture of a British ship of the line and several frigates, on the American coast.

Behold his chiefs, in daring setts,
 D'Estaignes, De Grasses, and Fayette's,
 Spread through our camps their dread alarms,
 And swell the fear of rebel arms!
 Yet ere our glories sink in night,
 A gleam of hope shall strike your sight;
 As lamps, that fail of oil and fire,
 Collect one glimm'ring to expire.

“ For lo, where southern shores extend,
 Behold our gather'd hosts descend,
 Where Charleston views, with varying beams

 Nor aught the wreaths avail him now,
 Pluck'd from Burgoyne's imperious brow.

* General Lincoln was second in command in the army of General Gates, during the campaign of 1777, which ended in the capture of General Burgoyne. He afterwards commanded the army in South Carolina, and was taken prisoner with the garrison of Charleston in 1780. London Edit.

This happened in consequence of the determination of Congress, that Charleston should at all events be defended.

See, furious from the vanquish'd strand,
Cornwallis leads his mighty band ;
The southern realms and Georgian shore

And far o'er all the extended field
Our forts resign, our armies yield,
Till now, regain'd the vanquish'd land,
He lifts his standard on the strand.

Again to fair Virginia's coast
I turn'd and view'd the British host
Where Chesapeak's wide waters lave
Her shores and join th' Atlantic wave.
There famed Cornwallis tow'ring rose,
And scorn'd secure his distant foes;
His bands the haughty rampart raise,
And bid the royal standard blaze.
When lo, where ocean's bounds extend,
Behold the Gallic sails ascend,
With fav'ring breezes stem their way,
And crowd with ships the spacious bay.
Lo! Washington, from northern shores,
O'er many a region wheels his force,
And Rochambeau, with legions bright,
Descends in terror to the fight.
Not swifter cleaves his rapid way
The eagle, cow'ring o'er his prey;
Or knights in famed romance, that fly
On fairy pinions through the sky.
Amazed, the Briton's startled pride
Sees ruin wake on every side,

And all his troops, to fate consign'd,
 By instantaneous stroke, Burgoyned.*
 Not Cadmus view'd with more surprise,

 I saw, with looks downcast and grave,
 The chief emerging from his cave,
 Where chased, like fox, in mighty round,
 His hunters earth'd him first in ground;‡
 And doom'd by fate to rebel sway,
 Yield all his captured host a prey.
 There while I view'd the vanquish'd town,
 Thus with a sigh my friend went on."

Alas! in vain, all doubts forgetting,
They tried th' omnipotence of Britain ;

* The description here given of the Continental paper-money is not more remarkable, as a splendid example of the sublime burlesque, than as a faithful picture of that financial operation. Though this money was counterfeited by waggon loads in the British garrisons, and sent into circulation in the country, yet none of the consequences followed, which were expected from this manoeuvre. The paper money carried on the war for five years; when it gave place to other measures, which the circumstances of the country rendered practicable, and went peaceably to rest, as here described by the Author.—The "weak crutches," called Regulation and Tender, by which this Spectre is supported, allude to the different acts of the State legislatures, made with the design of maintaining the credit of the Continental paper. Some of these acts regulated the prices of commodities, others made this paper a legal tender in payment. London Edit.

* This has been a most unlucky couplet. The poem, completed by the addition of the two last cantos, was first published in America in the year 1782. Some years after, the whole was reprinted in London. In that interval, Lord North was so unhappy, as to lose his sight. And the British reviewers of that day, with their wonted sagacity, imagined that these lines were intended as an insult upon him for that misfortune; thinking, as we may presume, that M'Fingal foresaw the future blindness of his Lordship, by the aid of his second sight. Their abuse of the author, as wanting candor and common sense, need not be repeated. In a subsequent copy of the poem, he struck out the name of Lord North and inserted that of King George—and lo, in a few years more, the king also was afflicted with blindness. To prevent all further mishaps, the lines are now restored to their original form. See the Lond. Edition of 1792.

With mœ y a deep-drawn sigh and groan,
To mourn her ruin, and his own !
While joyous Holland, France, and Spain
With cong'ring navies awe the main ;
And Russian banners wide unfurl'd
Spread commerce round the eastern world.

And see, (sight hateful and tormenting!)
This Rebel Empire, proud and vaunting,
From anarchy shall change her crasis,
And fix her pow'r on firmer basis ;
To glory, wealth, and fame ascend,
Her commerce wake, her realms extend ;
Where now the panther guards his den,
Her desert forests swarm with men ;
Gay cities, tow'rs and columns rise,
And dazzling temples meet the skies :
Her pines, descending to the main,
In triumph spread the wat'ry plain,
Ride inland seas with fav'ring gales,
And crowd her ports with whitening sails :
Till to the skirts of western day,
The peopled regions own her sway."

Thus far M'FINGAL told his tale,
When startling shouts his ears assail ;
And strait the Constable, their sentry,
Aghast rush'd headlong down the entry,

And with loud outcry, like magician,
 Dispers'd the residue of vision.*
 For now the Whigs the news had found
 Of Tories must'ring under ground,
 And with rude bangs and loud uproar,
 'Gan thunder† furious at the door.
 The lights put out, each Tory calls,
 To cover him on cellar walls,
 Creeps in each box, or bin, or tub,
 To hide him from the rage of mob,
 Or lurks, where cabbage-heads in row
 Adorn'd the sides with verdant show.

* It seems unfortunate that the vision was here abruptly broken off. The capture of two British fleets on our lakes by Commodores Perry and M'Donough, with the naval victories of Hull, Decatur, Bainbridge, and other American commanders, in our late war with Great Britain, could not have escaped the prophetic second-sight of M'Fingal, nor failed of due commemoration, had he been suffered to complete his detail of futurity. He would probably have closed his vision with the battle of New Orleans, which put a fatal end to all the British dreams of conquest of America.

————— either tropic now

'Gan thunder.

Milton.—Paradise Regained.

16

M'FINGAL deem'd it vain to stay,
And risk his bones in second fray :
But chose a grand retreat from foes,
In literal sense, beneath their nose.*
The window then, which none else knew,
He softly open'd and crept through,
And crawling slow in deadly fear,
By movements wise made good his rear.
Then scorning all the fame of martyr,
For Boston took his swift departure,
Nor look'd back on the fatal spot,
More than the family of Lot.
Not North in more distress'd condition,
Out-voted first by opposition ;
Nor good King George, when our dire phantom
Of Independence came to haunt him,†

* This, during the American war, was a fashionable phrase with the British. No officer, who had a lucky escape, failed of stating in his report, that he made a grand retreat under the very nose of the enemy.

† On the Declaration of Independence, the ministerial speakers in Parliament amused themselves by calling it, the phantom of Independence. The wit was echoed by all their newspapers.

Which hov'ring round by night and day,
Not all his conj'rors e'er could lay,
His friends, assembled for his sake,
He wisely left in pawn, at stake,
To tarring, feath'ring, kicks, and drubs
Of furious, disappointed mobs,
Or with their forfeit heads to pay
For him, their leader,* crept away.
So when wise Noah summon'd greeting,
All animals to gen'ral meeting,
From every side the members went,
All kinds of beasts to represent ;
Each, from the flood, took care t' embark,
And save his carcase in the ark :
But as it fares in state and church,
Left his constituents in the lurch.

* As the flight of Mahomet to Mecca fixes the Æra of Mussulman computation ; so the flight of M'Fingal to Boston forms the grand catastrophe of this immortal work. So sublime a denouement, as the French critics term it, never appeared before in Epic Poetry, except that of the Hero turning Papist, in the Henriade of Voltaire.
