FOR THE FULL FLIGHT ALONG SOMME FRONT

Paris, August 28.—The German retreat on the Somme battlefield has become precipitate. The French first and third armies are at no point losing contact with the enemy. The French are inflicting heavy losses on the retreating Germans along an extended front.

"GERMANY MUST SEEK NEW WAYS IN THE POLITICAL AS WELL AS MILITARY SPHERE"

Captain von Salzmann Explains That Kaiser's Attempts to Force Decisions by Hammer Blows Were Abandoned On July 15.

Amsterdam, Aug. 28.—Captain von Salzmann, who is usually entrusted with the task of preparing the German people for a change of policy, elaborately explains that Germany's attempts to force a decision by means of much vaunted hammer blows were really abandoned on July 15. In the course of an article written for the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, Captain von Salzmann declares:

"Even the recent considerable tactical successes of the Entente cannot alter the fact that Field Marshal von Hindenburg has been nearer the end of the war, which England and America are endeavoring to prolong as much as possible."

"Apart from consideration of loss or gain of ground, it is to the advantage of the Germans to entice the enemy into the trackless, roadless and waterless waste of the Somme."

"It must be admitted that England was the first to turn the war into a world war. Thus Premier Lloyd George, Field Marshal von Hindenburg's great opponent, as so often seen, is endeavoring to shift the centre of gravity of the war from the Somme to the Atlantic of the twentieth century. Germany's purely continental power, fights for Europe, while England, a world power for centuries, is fighting all over the world."

"It is to her interest to establish an equilibrium on the western front and seek partial decisions elsewhere. Final decisions must be made in France."

"Germany is just as ready to adopt a new policy as to adopt new military tactics. Germany must, however, realize that England's history clearly shows she can learn her lesson. Striking proof of this is afforded by her successful resistance to the last German offensive. Germany's problem is the fifth year of war can be solved only if she is able to find new ways and methods in the political, as well as military sphere."

Facing Her Darkest Hours

Amsterdam, Aug. 28.—"The German army and nation now face dark hours. May God protect the fatherland," concludes an article by Lieut.-Gen. Baron von Ardenne in the Dusseldorf Nachrichten of Tuesday.

"The period from August 20 to 28 has been one of the trying tests of this hardest of wars," the critic continues, but he thinks the Germans have stood the test magnificently, and compares certain isolated actions with the stand of Leonidas at Thermopylae.

Gen. von Ardenne speaks of measures "of which it is not yet permitted to speak," and which will aid the Germans in resuming the initiative and recouping their losses. He does not believe the offensive will end speedily.

AMERICAN GUNS POUND AWAY AT BRIDGES OVER RIVER AISNE

American Headquarters on the Vesle, Tuesday, Aug. 27.—The situation along the Vesle is altering, though in a most curious fashion. The American pressure has not increased, and though the American guns are never silent for long their objectives rarely are the lines in front of them, but rather the bridges over the Aisne.

Despite stubborn enemy resistance, Gen. Mangin is pressing steadily eastward across the Juvigny Plateau toward the Soissons-St. Quentin road, and his guns already are in position there to take in the rear the German artillery supporting the line of the Vesle from the great limestone buttress northeast of Soissons. This doubtless is of great importance, not only to the Vesle line, but also the strongest of the flank defenses by which the western end of the Chemin-des-Dames is covered. That is why the Germans are making such determined efforts to retain it.

WHEAT ACREAGE OF ENGLAND GREATEST SINCE YEAR 1884

London, Aug. 28.—The board of agriculture states that the arable area in England and Wales amounts to 12,400,000 acres, an increase of 1,152,000, compared with 1917 and a record for twenty years. The wheat acreage has increased by 628,000 acres and is a record since 1884. Oats have increased by 25 per cent; corn 24 per cent, and potatoes by 25 per cent all records.

GERMAN EMPRESS GROWING WEAKER

London, Aug. 28.—The German empress, who has been ill for several days, has taken a turn for the worse, according to a message received in Amsterdam from Dusseldorf and forwarded to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The message adds that her heart displays increased weakness. Emperor William has not been able to leave the bedside of his wife, who is at the castle at Wilhelmshöhe. It is declared that no bulletin on the empress' condition will be published in order not to alarm the people.

Peking, Friday, Aug. 23.—Gen. Semenov, the anti-Bolshevik leader, has crossed the Siberian frontier and retaken Matsievski Station, west of Manchali, capturing prisoners. The Japanese troops are engaged with the Bolsheviks near Dauria. It is reported that the Allies have taken over the operation of the railways.

FORD WINS ON THE ONE TICKET, LOSES ON OTHER

Motor Car Manufacturer To Be Democratic Senatorial Candidate.

Detroit, Aug. 28.—Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer and choice of President Wilson for the Michigan senatorial nomination, was today on the face of returns from more than half the state, both winner and loser in Tuesday's state-wide primaries. Commander Truman H. Newberry of Detroit, former secretary of the navy, has won the Republican nomination for U. S. senator by a vote, which incomplete returns indicate may equal the total number of votes polled for both Ford and former Governor Osborne. Only a light vote was cast for Wm. G. Simpson of Detroit, the other Republican candidate.

In the Democratic balloting, however, the Detroit manufacturer, who was a candidate on both party tickets, won an easy race from his lone opponent, Jas. W. Helme, figures this morning being 2 to 1 in favor of his candidacy.

SURVIVORS ARE LANDED.
Crew of U-Boat Claim They Torpedoed an Oil Tanker.

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 28.—The Newfoundland three-masted schooner Bianca was captured and sunk by a German submarine on Saturday night, her crew, which landed today, report that the schooner was bound from Brazil to a Canadian port with a cargo of tobacco. The crew of the submarine told Capt. Burke of the Bianca that they had sunk an oil tanker and that they intended to sink eight steamers now bound for this port.

SIR ROBERT TO GO ON FISHING TRIP AFTER DISPOSING OF C.N.R. QUESTION

Premier Is Unable to Accept Invitations to Address Gatherings.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ottawa, Aug. 28.—The very first business to be disposed of by the cabinet following the return of the prime minister and his colleagues will be the railway question.

The award to the Canadian Northern will in all likelihood be paid this week, and immediately thereafter the new board of directors for the Canadian Northern Railway will be appointed.

It is now stated that the amount to be paid for the line stipulated in the agreement, despite the fact that the arbitrators valued the stock at $100,000. It is quite possible that in the appointment of the new board the whole question of co-ordination of all government lines will be considered.

Sir Robert has had many invitations from various parts of the Dominion to address the people on the results of his visit. It is not likely that he will accept any of them at present as he contemplates a brief holiday on the conclusion of the matters above referred to. He will go fishing.

CHAULNES AND THIRTY OTHER VILLAGES CAPTURED BY FRENCH

Paris, Aug. 28.—Chaulnes has been occupied by French troops, according to the official statement issued yesterday by the war office.

Progress toward the Somme was continued this morning by the French, the statement says. Since yesterday, 30 villages have been taken by them.

Among the larger villages taken by the French are Omirecourt, about two miles east of Chaulnes; Balatre, three miles northeast of Roie; Roiglise, a mile and three-quarters southeast of Roie toward Noyon, and Verpilleries, south of Roiglise.

The text of the statement reads:

"During the night the French maintained contact with the rearguards of the enemy and have continued their advance."

"North and south of the Aisne we have occupied Chaulnes, Omirecourt, Balatre, Roiglise and Verpilleries."

"Further south we have penetrated into the wood of Crapeau-mesnil and have taken Dives."

"This morning we have continued our advance toward the Somme and north of the Aisne have reached the general line toward the Somme, and north of the Aisne have reached the general line of Lieourt, Potte and Mesnil-le-Petit (just west of the Somme River) and Nesle."

"Since yesterday we have taken 30 villages and have realized at the same time an advance of twelve kilometres at certain points."

LARGE SUPPLIES OF WAR MATERIALS TAKEN BY BRITISH

Recapture of the Ammunition Dumps Followed Haig's Success.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 27.—The British have recaptured large dumps of ammunition which they left behind last spring, and which the Germans had not touched. They also have taken immense stores of German material.

The German ammunition came in very handy, and saved a lot of transport as it offered bullets and shells when they were needed. Large engineer dumps, which are most useful in clearing the battlefield in the wake of the advancing armies, also have been captured.

"BOMBHELLS ON HER SKULL."
Germany will be saved only if defeated to the uttermost. There can be no education for Germany by the application of ideas upon her brains. She can be educated only by the hurling of bombshells on her skull.

IF LONDON'S first experience with the Chauvinau movement did nothing more, it brought before an audience of staid citizens the great dramatic soul of Dr. Frank Bohn of New York, an idealist who applies himself to the practical problems of life, and who for the years since war broke out has been applying himself to the cause of world democracy.

The son of one of those followers of Carl Marx who in 1849 fled to America to escape the vengeance of a harsh Fatherland, so cruel it would exterminate the child that attempted to make of its dark, fearsome home a more wholesome place, Dr. Bohn held a legacy of hatred from the system of Kultur. His German extraction to him was a challenge; every drop of blood in his veins was intended as a purge to cleanse the evil germs from the heart of his Father's country. He has devoted himself passionately to the cause for which his father fought; he has inherited the good things that came from all of Germany's great sons; and in a land of freedom he has been given a chance to cultivate the noble spirit that comes of rebellion against tyranny into the desire of the crusader who would carry to the Germans and to all races a mighty hammer with which to strike off the ball and chain that drags at the feet of the oppressed.

Coming fresh from Europe, from the heart of the German empire in 1915, whither he had gone to make investigations for the French, Dr. Bohn stood before an unknown audience under a certain racial suspicion. Could this be a form of propaganda, thought the observer trained to watch for signs of Germany's new attempt at inserting the wedge of "regeneration"? The man was there on trial, his Teutonic lineage strong in his face, his prayers for the German people a possible keynote for the suspicious, his theories of geographical development of races open to a certain challenge. One sat and watched him, conscious of his mastery of language and facts, conscious of his deep understanding of human nature, conscious of his ability to force tremendous ideas to the very souls of men. His Bismarckian theory might have been open to question; for a time he might have seemed to be advancing an insidious plea for the German people.

Then came the flash of light, out from the man to all those who heard him. It resembled a soul beam tapped from a mighty battery of humanitarianism. He told of the intimate life of Germany, of the perversion of all religion, all home relationships, all personal contacts, all good impulses, merged and melted into a tremendous iron resolution to sacrifice all else for the sake of the Fatherland. The state had taken everything in life and shaped it into a vast impersonal entity. The Protestant or Catholic in Germany was a Protestant or Catholic up to the point that his religion could be operated privately without interference with the state aims of Germany; once the conflict of love or Christianity met the stern, pointing figure of national obedience, off dropped the outer mask of piety and on came the cruel countenance of iron discipline. Down fell the whole nation before its deified master, the kaiser!

The speaker carried his audience on, taking them to America with the German exiles of '49, carrying them back to the lost cause that meant the doom of Germany when the democrats and lovers of humanity went down and were banished, and with them the hope of Teutonic future. This blood that flowed to America was the purifying influence that was diverted. Could it have been saved to Germany, to cleanse the intellect, no foul things would have crept into the stream of national life! But it perished in its effort! Woe and lamentation for the world! A moral desert, covered only with the mirages of Kultur and junkerdom, the color and the pomp of militarism, the marvel dream of public control, the groveling insects below, slaking their thirst in figurative pools, and taking the poisonous alkali into their souls.

Was there any succor for these? That was what the audience waited for. Soft words and sweet reasonableness! Prayers and peace with folded hands! No, a hundred thousand times, no! Not until the last Prussian dictator has been hanged, not until the last conception of a possibility of future devilry had been wiped aside, not until the menace of the Prussian hordes and the Russian hordes and the Yellow hordes, merged from the remnants of an inconclusive peace by the boa-constrictor that hissed behind the dove, had been swept clean from the surface of the globe! Not education or ideas! Bombshells for their skulls! Smash them to the earth, and implant the idea by force in place of that which was given them by force! Then one day 85,000,000 Teutonic people might kneel in the tears of repentance before the throne of mercy and beg for forgiveness.

In the words of the idealist become militant in the cause of the world, this man Bohn struck at the dangers of the hour with a triphammer force. Beware of what comes in the next sixty days! Beware of the elation to follow the apparent giving-up stage in Germany! Beware of everything until the last Junker has been exterminated and a peace enduring for the rest of time fastened upon the world with fetters of steel. A thousand times better that the whole race perish and the beasts inherit the earth than that a shred of German philosophy should remain to stain the pages of humanity.

THANKSGIVING DATE.
IN THE CONSCIOUSNESS of those beings who form the Canadian cabinet, Thanksgiving Day is purely and simply a holiday, and, with this view in mind, they are considering the advisability of changing the date, making it later in order to make the periods between Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas more nearly equal.

Why not extend the idea? Why not alter the dates of the anniversary of Christ's birth and the first day of the year? Why let tradition interfere?

If these days are worth celebrating, it is not because they provide holidays; the holiday has come into existence that these days may be fittingly marked. It is bad enough to have Christmas looked upon as a time in which financial resources are strained by present-giving and the stomach overtaxed by gluttony. Let us keep Thanksgiving at a time when the reason for gratitude to the Divinity is sufficiently keen to make the occasion worth while. Who thinks of thanksgiving when wintry winds are blowing and the first snow is flying? If there is a change in date it ought to be in the other direction, just when the crops are safely harvested.

ADJOURNED SINE DIE.
THAT DINNER or banquet for which the crown prince sent out the invitations, to be held in Paris on July 11, has been postponed sine die. More than that, Foch is moving for a change of venue to Berlin and may enjoy the dinner of the crown prince himself in Berlin on Christmas, while the crown prince is eating crow.

GERMANY'S COLONIAL FAILURE.
HISTORY RECORDS not a few nations that have possessed the colonizing spirit, but few indeed that have possessed colonizing genius. A matter of a few hundred years ago Spain and Portugal agreed to divide the world between them; today, save for language and physical characteristics, Spain and Portugal scarce survive overseas. Every land is mainly what men make of it, and Spain and Portugal made their lands but scenes of plunder. It was upon the wrecks of their efforts that England, France and Holland came to the front, at first as possessors of the barren lands their rivals discarded, later as possessors of domains that Spain and Portugal knew not how to administer.

Before the present war Germany had a colonial domain six times as large as the area of the empire at home; today she has none of it, and the difference it has made to those lands is what future history will record. Germany could never have been a true colonizing agency, because her people would never go to her colonies to settle. Instead they went to the United States and to England. They had neither the pioneering spirit, the education that would enable them to subsist in strange conditions, nor the disposition that would enable them to win over native inhabitants to their side. Bureaucratic methods and military spirit had no small part in the loss by France of Canada in the eighteenth century, just as they have been sources of actual weakness to Germany overseas in these last four years.

The German colonial policy aimed at keeping every other nation out of the market. Before the war it was almost impossible for another nation to trade in a German colony, the bureaucratic and military methods of the administrators serving to defeat the much-boasted free entry for competitors. England's policy was exactly the opposite, as is well known. England's share of the Egyptian trade before she occupied that country was 57 per cent, in 1891 it was only 54 per cent, and in 1913, the year before the war, it had fallen to 37 per cent. Lord Milner was aware of such facts when he wrote: "So far from unduly favoring the commercial interests of their own countrymen, the British administrators in Egypt err, if anything, on the other side; so intense is their anxiety that in the position of trust which they occupy they should be above the least suspicion of partiality."

It is doubtful if ever again there can be a return to the old conditions of the German colonies. Either those lands will be administered by others or Germany, seeing her past mistakes, will seek to build up on new principles. The principle of smaller nations' security, so often advanced in this war, might well be made to include those lands which have no independence, but whose people have as much right to life, liberty and opportunity as Belgium or Serbia or Poland.

"PRO PATRIA"
By Jane Osborn.

It was a good half hour after the last of the evening "office hours" neatly painted on the frosted glass sign that was affixed to Dr. Burton's front door; and so usually monotonous were his evenings spent in the little neighborhood of Farmington that he experienced no little surprise when he heard a ring of his front door bell. He had the evening paper in one hand, his carpet slippers on his feet, and his shell-rimmed spectacles hanging loosely over one ear, when he went to the door. It was his neighbor, Miss Margaret Kellogg—Margaret Kellogg, noted in the neighborhood none the less for her success as teacher of the "infant class" in the one church of the neighborhood than for her dress-making establishment that consisted of one very young sewing apprentice, a long pier glass in her front parlor, a half-dozen well-chambered, and not too recent dressmakers' journals with French names and glaring colored designs, and encouraging the constant untill the doctor, assured by the level, blue eyes of the girl seated before him, decided to tell her his own matters. He had been hankering to make a breast of the situation to someone, and now he had found a sympathetic ear in the form of a very young girl.

"I would like to subscribe as much as I can," she said, "but I don't know how to do it. I've been here—let me see, three years. When my uncle, Dr. Burton, died I felt that as was as good an opening here as anywhere else, and I hankered after the life of a country doctor. I had a considerable mortgage on this old place of his and I've had to keep paying on his place. He couldn't sell them and he couldn't eat them all. He snacked his lips over the sample and said he could well afford to pay a little to have his cherries converted into food for the winter. He said he would have Margaret make arrangements to earn her bit toward buying thrift stamps. It was very little, but the doctor was not rash in spending it. Besides, he could send some jars to his mother and brother and enough left to himself as himself. The doctor brought the basket of cherries in stealthily and Margaret noted her neighbors of the arrangement. And then one day when Margaret had to have some repairs made on her old house—there was to do to earn a little extra every once in a while—she had heard of people doing that. So the doctor and he, too, wanted that in Farmington he might find some simple task to perform, by which he might earn the little necessary to make his small subscription to government loans and thrift stamps. Now they had both told each other their little predicament and somehow they felt that there was something between them that did not exist between them and any one else in Farmington. The doctor rose and as he passed the kitchen door, he sniffed over so slightly. Miss Margaret told him he smelled of fresh cherry jam to be sampled. That was how it began. The doctor said he had some cherries going to waste on his place. He couldn't sell them and he couldn't eat them all. Our Prosperity

And What It Has Cost

You remember the uncertainty as regards trade when the war broke out. We finished 1913 with a balance of $293,000,000 against us. We wondered—! The British Navy swept the German flag off the seas. The submarine remained, and the floating mine. Death lurked in the path of every vessel that carried the products of our farms and factories. None but heroes of the finest type would have faced such dangers. But because the men of the Merchant Marine did face them, we finished 1917 with a trade balance of $314,000,000 in our favor. We were able to fill war orders amounting to one billion, eight hundred and twelve million dollars ($1,812,000,000) from 1914 to 1917. But what a price has been paid! Remember the Lusitania! Remember the 176 vessels of which all trace has vanished, together with crew and cargo! Remember the 15,000 seamen of the Merchant Marine who have fallen a prey to the U-Boat and the hellish mine! We are enjoying prosperity that was not dreamed of at the beginning of the war. Let us show our appreciation in the only way worth while—by contributing handsomely to the support of the widows and orphans of the seamen who have died for us. Justice demands we shall not let them want.

CONFIDENCE GREATEST ASSET ON THE GREEN

Really No Mystery in Making Short Putts, Says Hutchinson.

There is no mystery in making short putts, confidence being the biggest asset necessary. So says Jack Hutchinson, who contends that amateurs have more of the essential confidence than professionals on the green. Hutchinson believes that a player should stand so that he can look directly down at the ball, using a pendulum stroke for the shorter putts. Personally, he prefers to keep the left elbow a little bent. It is a bad fault to reach out too far with the arms, and this will be avoided if the golfer stands over his ball. "Hold the club lightly in the fingers and remember that the speed of the ball amounts to a whole lot on short putts," advises Hutchinson. "Play for the back of the hole. If your putt has this character it is more likely to keep its line. Most greens affect good players more than anything else, simply because they are afraid of them. In trying to flickle the ball into the hole it loses its intended course. When we get within a few feet of the cup we are all pretty nearly on an equality," continues Jack. "Height, weight and muscle count little, and in the language of the showman, twenty can play as well as one. There are scores of putters and scores of ways of using them. When Pat Doyle, the Deal professional, defeated Bob MacDonald and myself at Ridgemoor a short time ago, he had his hands about half way down the shaft. Summarizing all the different styles, it appears safe to assert that a man can putt any way he chooses—so long as his ball gets in the hole."

GOLF AS IT ISN'T

(By Percy Prune, The Advertiser Sport Critic.)

Although I have never played the old and ancient game of golf myself, I have seen others play it, and so I feel that I am in a position to give tips to the golfer. Now the first thing to learn about golf is to choose the right sticks to play with. When choosing your sticks, be sure and don't take it from the clubs inside the locker next to your own. This may cause some suspicion on the part of the owner of the club and he may openly accuse you of stealing his club. It is much safer to cop a stick out of the locker farthest away from your own. When choosing your balls, don't go to a pawnbroker. It is seldom that he has more than three or four balls, and they are a bit clumsy for the ancient pastime. It is a good thing to take your own balls. If you can get away with it—or rather them, the majority of golf balls look alike, and you are pretty safe in taking balls from a locker in the farthest corner of the room.

If you get on the right side of the golf pro and hand him a couple of bucks or so of graft money, you may be able to get the keys to the club storehouse. In this case, take a double helping of balls and sticks and another helping for the locker. You never know when the professionals may demand extra profits for handing you the secret opener of the warehouse.

Learn the Language. Before becoming a member of an exclusive club, you must learn how to talk. This pronunciation will convey the impression that you have been in England and have acquired the aristocratic accent. Never allude to your opponent as "old cock" or "old bird." You must call him "Old Chap" or "Old Top." If you wish to masquerade as a golfer, you should be familiar with the language of the club. REAL FIGHTING PREDOMINATES

Les Darcy, the Australian fighter, was outboxed and the result ended in his death because he ran away from his own country to evade war service. His death was tragic, but the "slacker" was not welcome in this continent or anywhere else.

Real fighting predominates over glove fighting these days. Useful service is the first demand. There is plenty of scope in production and food conservation. The farmers want able-bodied helpers with the harvest. Lend a hand. Dig potatoes.
