SEED AWARDS

Judging in the county sweepstakes at the annual seed exhibition, in the Gray-Dort garage, West King street, was held last Friday morning. Prof. W. Squirrel, of the experimental farm, Guelph, and W. J. Lennox, of the Ontario grass seed department, being the judges. Special mention was made of the excellent quality of the barley and oats, while the potatoes were also spoken of very favorably. There were 200 entries and the judges had a task in making their awards. Only the winners of the township competitions were eligible to compete in the county show. The following were the awards:

Bushel fall wheat, white—George E. Horning & Son, East Flamboro; W. H. English, Ancaster; Erland Lee, Saltfleet; Amos French, Glanford.

Bushel fall wheat, red—William Beaton, East Flamboro.

IN THE SURROGATE COURT OF THE COUNTY OF WENTWORTH

In the matter of the guardianship of Harry Stewart Gunn, infant child of D. W. Gunn, deceased.

NOTICE is hereby given that after the expiration of twenty days from the first publication of this notice, application will be made by Mrs. Mable Gunn, of the City of Hamilton, in the County of Wentworth, Widow, to the Surrogate Court of the County of Wentworth, for a grant of letters of guardianship of the person and estate of the above-named Harry Stewart Gunn, infant child of D. W. Gunn, late of the City of St. Thomas, deceased who died without appointing any guardian of the said infant, the said Mrs. Mable Gunn being the lawful mother of the said infant. Dated at Hamilton this 1st day of March, A.D. 1919. Applicant in person.

Carlisle, March 16th, 1919.

On Thursday evening last the Orange Lodge held their annual oyster supper at the home of Wm. and Mrs. Livingston. The tables as usual were bountifully laden with the tasty good things that the Carlisle ladies better than any others know how to prepare. After everyone had done a little more than justice to the inner man an excellent program of local talent was enjoyed by all present. Dr. Morrow ably attended to the duties of chairman. Many of the gentlemen present gave brief speeches. The company was honored by having present Mr. Oliver and Mr. Russell. Mr. Russell spoke for some time on religion, and predicted that the world would come to an end in 1925. One gentleman plainly intimated that if the world was really coming to an end in October, 1925, that he would in that year plant only early maturing crops, such as early peas, onions, squash, cabbages, rhubarb and leeks. He considered that it would be useless to plant crops that would not mature until after the last trainload of natives had left Flamboro and Progression stations. Mr. J. W. Robbins of Freeton, who is a member of the White House at Waterdown, spoke on the desire of the White House members to do something in the way of building a Memorial Hall or Statue in honor of our heroes who have died at the front. Mr. Robbins had the support of the meeting, something ought to be done, and favored the building of a Memorial Hall rather than a statue. After the program was brought to an end the younger members of the company retired to the k-k-k-kitchen, just as the moon was coming over the cow shed, and had one of those good old times that old maids and bachelors never heard about.

The writer of this epistle to The Review unfortunately got his hand cut with the axe while sharpening it on the power emery wheel. That part was bad enough, but it might have been worse, for the first time I met Mr. Robert Alderson, commonly known as Bob, he emphatically recommended me to use some of his world-renowned Alderson Salve. This salve according to Mr. Alderson and the testimonials of thousands of those who have used it, is said to be a grand sincipital, astacial, panticular, nervous cordial, and cures all diseases instant to humanity, and if any young lady should have the misfortune to lose her teeth a little rubbed on her gums would cause new ones to sprout out like mushrooms in a hot bed. Mr. Alderson sits one instant where a man had accidentally chopped the tail of his dog. He applied some of this salve, and instead of healing the tail it grew another dog. As I said before my case might have been worse, for if I had used that salve on my hand my wife might have had two husbands.

Would the Flamboro Centre correspondent who wrote "The Romance in Charles A. Newell's Apple Orchard" kindly send his portrait to the Review office so that it can go along with this own Romance in Frank Baker's Apple Orchard) and which will appear in the Review before dog days.

Canadian Wonder Tales

WE are usually inclined to say that Canada has no folk lore. A recent volume of stories collected by Cyrus Macmillan and entitled "Canadian Wonder Tales" furnishes ample proof that such is not the case. You can find folk stories if you know where to seek for them.

Variety is given to this volume by the fact that its contents are drawn from not one source but two—Indian and French. At the very opening we are transported back to the days when Canada was ruled over by seigneurs, who came out as representatives of the French King, and who lived in stately houses, surrounded by a hard-working, simple peasantry. It is an atmosphere something like that of Perrault's fairy-tales. "The Baker's Magic Wand" was doubtless born in France, for it relates the story of a stern and avaricious seigneur, a poor baker befriended by a fairy, and—very French and very unlike a children's story—a wife intent upon deceiving her husband carrying on an intrigue with the village lawyer. "The Shrove Tuesday Visitor" is another tale that we may believe French in origin rather than French-Canadian; it pictures "a village on the banks of a great river," in the seventeenth century, a marriage feast and dance attended by a happy rural population, a stranger of bold and pleasing mien, who makes a deep impression upon the assemblage, and is finally on the point of eloping with the bride while the spiritless bridegroom sits rejected in the corner, and a rescuing priest, who rushes into the room, and by his holy Latin forces the Evil One—for no less a personage is the stranger—to disappear to the accompaniment of a clap of thunder. It is a quaintly religious tale. "Jack and His Wonderful Hen" is another story caught from French-Canadian lips, and a soundly moral one. Jack, spoiled by his early success in obtaining from a fairy benefactor a hen which lays two dozen eggs a day, and which he sells to the seigneur for a great price, is seized with the idea of selling the family goat and then stealing it back. His parents warn him against this evil deed, but in vain; he successfully commits the theft, but is met on his return by a robber, who coveting the goat, slays Jack to obtain it.

But most of the thirty and more stories are of Indian origin, and very pretty some of them are. The author has made a larger, more soberly garbed collection of Indian tales for scientific purposes, and these are a selection of the ones most attractive to children. The blend of the natural and the supernatural is often delightful. Where did the Northern Lights come from; why does the bluejay stay in the north and the woodpecker fly away south in wintertime, though they are intimate and are dressed alike in summer; under what circumstances did the Sun-God promise the Blackfeet that if they held an annual dance in his honor their sick would be healed; when did the partridge learn to drink; why does the bear eat fish; why does the moose travel alone, and why do the caribou travel in herds?—such are the questions these stories answer. The writer assures us that many of them were first told to him in smoky Indian lodges or around forest campfires. Some of them have a finely poetic quality, as, for example, the tale called "How Summer Came to Canada." It is slighter than the story of Persephone, but of almost as fine stuff. So with the account of the origin of the Northern Lights—a story of the reunion of a man and his wife after long separation and much tribulation.

"They were happy again. It was a cold autumn night and the moon was full, and his wife said: 'We must not stay here. This is a wicked place where men forget. If you stay here, you will forget me again.' Then she shuddered when she thought that her husband might forget her again, and he shuddered when he thought that he might lose her again. And they continued to tremble in fear. Then she said, 'We must go to another land. It is a more beautiful land than this. It is the Land of Eternal Memory, where men and women never forget those they love.'"

The trembling of these reunited lovers as they were transformed into and made immortal in the Northern Lights is a beautiful sight for Canadian children.

AWFUL STORY

Of Wife Slavery in British Chinatown.

(London Tit-Bits).

Recent revelations as to the immensity of the secret drug traffic have shown that much of the "dope" which is being used so indiscreetly by promising young actresses, jaded society women, and others finds its way into this country via the Chinatowns of Great Britain. And this is but one of the many underground ways by which the yellow man grows wealthy by catering for the vice of the foolish.

Scores of Chinamen have made big fortunes out of the secret sale of such harmful drugs as opium, cocaine, heroine, trionel, bang, veronal, and betel-nut. Despite the public attention which has been focused on the traffic and the increased activity of the authorities, the game is still proceeding.

The profits are enormous. And the business, all the more dangerous because it is generally carried on under the cloak of a seemingly innocent trade, flourishes not only in the Limehouse district of London, but in Liverpool, Cardiff, and Glasgow, and, in a lesser degree, Birmingham and Manchester as well.

DELPORABLE MARRIAGE.

All the Chinese colonies in these cities are connected by strange mysterious links. The inhabitants of one known perfectly well, in an incredibly short space of time, what is going on in the other. They stand or fall together in any financial enterprise. A wrong done to one is a wrong done to the whole race domiciled in this country. And, if necessary, they will band themselves together and spend any amount of money to avenge an injury to the most insignificant member of their community. There is no more "clannish" race on earth.

The "Yellow Peril" is far from being merely a figure speech. It is a real menace. Perhaps the most deadly form it takes is in the marriage of Chinamen to white girls. Recent investigations I have made in the Chinatown of Great Britain—London and Liverpool in particular—reveal an astonishing and deplorable state of things. First of all the fact stands out clear and distinct that any white girl who marries a "chink" sells herself into the worst form of slavery.

For the Chinaman seldom marries for love. He weds so that he can utilize his white wife in various crooked money-making schemes, such as, for example, sending her into the night resorts of great cities to dispose secretly of harmful and costly drugs to depraved devotees who are willing to pay practically any price to satisfy their craving.

If she is caught by the police she goes silently to prison. Terror prevents her from knowingly or willingly implicating her husband, for the "chink" has ways of dealing with a white wife who endangers his liberty besides which the horrors of ordinary prison life pale into insignificance.

TERRORIZED DECOYS.

Another way John Chinaman utilizes

"I have used Zam-Buk myself for the same ailment, also for sores and burns, and have the greatest confidence in it."

Zam-Buk

his white wife is to force her to act as a decoy and bring rich visitors to his opium-den or fan-tan room. If he dared to venture into crowded night resorts himself he would be subject to suspicion. Every movement would be shadowed by plain-clothes police and prospective victims prevented from falling into his clutches. Accordingly to sends his white wife as his representative, and although the task may be repugnant to her she has to perform it or suffer the penalty.

When she is at home the wife has to work like a slave. The idea of disobedience never enters her head. In the Chinese lodging-houses of Liverpool and Cardiff it is not an uncommon thing for the English wife of the proprietor to have to wait upon twenty or thirty lodgers by day and when night falls sally forth well dressed to dispose secretly of drugs or decoy the stranger to the den her husband runs-a-den which can never be found by the agent on a second visit after he has been robbed, because it is so cunningly camouflaged.

THE LAUNDRY CLOAK.

Wealth is the only god the Chinaman really worships. His methods of making it are most thorough. He lives on next to nothing. No matter how much money he derives from the secret sale of drugs—and in London the profits of some Chinamen from this source alone range between £30 and £80 a night—he will still wash a garment most beautifully for sixpence and show genuine distress at a customer's threat to find a new laundress.

If any unpleasant official inquiries are made as to the extent of a Chinaman's wealth he can generally produce well-kept books of account to show that his laundry business—which is often a cloak for many sinister transactions—is in a flourishing condition, that he has made several profitable deals in curios, or that he has disposed of some rare Chinese jewel at a good profit. Clever, indeed, is the detective who can trap a Chinaman on a matter of account.

The methods by which a "chink" lures a British girl into marriage are ingenious in the extreme—well worthy, indeed, of a race whose chief characteristic is cunning. I have discovered these methods at first hand, and an exposure of them may serve the useful purpose of causing any girl to think very carefully before she allows even the idea of life-long alliance with a Chinaman to enter her head.

CHORUS-GIRL DANGERS.

With the sole object of finding a wife, he can turn eventually into a slave—not one whom he can love and cherish—the yellow man haunts the theatres and takes stock of the chorus girls. Perhaps a poor struggling girl is dazzled by the visions John paints of his wealth.

When thousands of girls were engaged on muttons, he carried out this plan at various factories, and in the Birmingham district in particular several girls fell into the net so cunningly spread. Now that the munitioneers are disbanded and have to find some other means of livelihood, John Chinaman is dividing his time between them and the theatre girls. He has no object in contracting an irregular alliance; what he desires is a proper legal marriage so that he may have legal control over the girl he has chosen.

In the courtship stages he is an ideal lover—generous, solicitous, and ardent. He lavishes presents on the girl (which he takes back forcibly after marriage!) paints glowing pictures of the future life of ease and happiness, and only reveals his true character on the return from an expensive honeymoon. That is usually the last piece of happiness the British wife of a Chinaman experiences.

THE ONLY RELEASE.

No sooner has she settled down than she is gradually initiated into the mysteries of drugs, the preparation of the opium pipe, the playing of fan-tan, the luring of the victims to her husband's resort, the secret sale of "dope," and the way to dodge the police. She has been married as a speculation or investment. And she earns every penny of her keep and a great deal more.

Too late she realizes that the life John Chinatown had, in his wooling days, sworn to her would be a garden of roses is, instead, a garden of thorns—from which there is no escape except death.

Electric Protection.

Many of the devices conjured up for war service, under pressure of deep desires, will be useful for the piping times of peace. The Canadian aviator who has designed a way to keep a flier warm by equipping his suit with electric wires may be painting the dawn of a new day for people who live in apartments where the janitor is careless.—Montreal Star.

SAVED BABY'S LIFE

Mrs. Alfred Tranchemontagne, St. Michel des Saints, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine. They saved my baby's life and I can highly recommend them to all mothers." Mrs. Tranchemontagne's experience is that of thousands of other mothers who have tested the worth of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a sure and safe medicine for little ones and never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach thus relieving all the minor ills from which children suffer. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Building the City.

The new and better world after the war, of which we dream these days, will not build itself any more than the rubble which marks the site of Ypres and Louvain will come together of itself into beautiful and splendid buildings, observes a writer. It will take time and struggle and infinite patience, and if men and women are not willing to pay the price of a new and better world, such will not come merely because they have airy visions of it. Much of our talk about better things to come is too cheap and easy and has not enough of grip and purpose to make it worth much. What God is giving us, and will give us in those great after-the-war days, is a wonderful opportunity, but we shall have to meet that opportunity with heroic endeavor and self-sacrificing effort before it can possibly become fruitful. Talk is cheap and dreams are sweet and inspiring, but it is not with these alone that the Kingdom of God is builded in the earth and mankind is won for righteousness and brotherhood.

DIED OF FRIGHT.

Man Who Declined to Save Zeppelin Crew.

Pathetic circumstances attended the fate of Skipper Martin, of the Grimsby, Eng., trawler King Stephen, who declined to rescue the crew of a Zeppelin in the North Sea. The adventure preyed on his mind, and he died after a nervous collapse caused by the mistaken belief that he had been poisoned. He had received a number of anonymous letters containing threats, apparently from Germans in England, and when he became ill after smoking a cigarette from a packet which had been sent to him by post, he was convinced that the cigarettes had contained poison. Analysis proved that his fears were unfounded, but he never recovered from the shock. "He died from sheer fright," was the verdict of his medical attendant. The Zeppelin incident occurred on Feb. 1, 1916, and public opinion held that Martin acted rightly. The trawler discovered the disabled airship in the sea, with its huge envelope rising about 50 feet out of the water. The commander offered to handsomely reward Martin and his crew if they would save them, but Martin declined on the ground that he would not trust the Germans. "I had," said Martin, "talked it over with Denny (the mate), as we were drawing near, and after considering all the pros and cons, both of us agreed that if we lowered a boat and sent some of the crew to the Zeppelin they would at once be secured and kept as prisoners until we did as the Germans wished, which would probably be that in the end we should have them take charge of the ship if they came on board, or if we refused to fetch them off they would carry out the crew of it down with them. I had all my own men safe and sound, and I was determined to take no risks. I knew what the Germans had done to my class in the North Sea, and, besides, Zeppelin crews dropping bombs on houses and killing women and children didn't appeal to me. Even if the Huns hadn't proved barbarous, there would still have been a big risk, because there were eighteen Germans and only ten of us, and you could scarcely imagine their allowing us to take them to Grimsby as prisoners. Nothing we could have done would have prevented their taking charge of the trawler, seeing they were two to one."

Ship on Girl's Back Bar to Society

A ship on a girl's back is a bar to her entrance into society, according to State Senator Alfred J. Gilchrist, of New York City. The senator declares that a Brooklyn girl is barred from society because, when ten years old, a ship was tattooed on the girl's back. She cannot wear a fashionable, low-neck dress because of the spreading sails across the ocean on her back. The senator, therefore, asks for a law imposing a fine of $500 for anyone who mars a young woman's beauty.

Wives and Mothers Need Not Have Sore Backaches

Constantly on their feet, attending to the wants of a large and exacting family, women often break down with nervous exhaustion.

In the stores, factories and on a farm are weak, ailing women, dragged down with torturing backache and bearing down pains. Such suffering isn't natural, but it's dangerous, because due to diseased kidneys.

The dizziness, insomnia and other symptoms of kidney complaint can't cure themselves; they require the assistance of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which go direct to the seat of the trouble.

To give vitality and power to the kidneys, to free the blood of poisons, probably there is no remedy so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. For all womanly irregularities their merit is well known.

Because of their mild, soothing and healing effect, Dr. Hamilton's Pills are safe, and are recommended for girls and women of all ages. 35c. per box at all dealers. Refuse any substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Meadrate and Butternut.

If a woman is nervous or has dizzy spells, suffers from awful pains at regular or irregular intervals she should turn to a tonic made up of herbs, and without alcohol, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. It is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Druggists sell it in liquid or tablets. Send 10 cents to the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package. CHATHAM, ONT.—"As a girl I was wonderfully helped by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I had become all run-down, weak and nervous. I suffered with terrific backaches. I also suffered from suppression and pain. My mother gave me 'Favorite Prescription,' and it so completely regulated my condition that I have never had any trouble since. There is nothing so good for girls or women who suffer as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. Wm. M. Ross 135 Wellington Street, E.

FRANCE TO AID IN FEEDING HUN

Paris Cable — France to-night receded from her position with reference to food for Germany, and after an all-day session of the Supreme Economic Council a compromise has been reached whereby the French claims upon money Germany proposed to use for food payments will be satisfied in such a way as to enable her to withdraw her objections, which have been stated in these despatches.

Germany will pay for her supplies, partly in cash and partly in notes and partly in materials. France's interests will be secured so that the reparation due to her will not be diverted to any other purpose. Details of the new plan are to be given to the Germans at the Spa meeting, which will be held Tuesday. The solution of the problem removes a serious difficulty, for all were agreed that grave danger lay in failure to permit the Germans sufficient food to fight down famine and its concomitant Bolshevism.

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them.

GERMAN STRIKE STILL SPREADS

Amsterdam Cable — The strike movement is making progress throughout Germany, according to advices received here from Berlin to-day.

The proposal for a general strike at Jena, 12 miles southwest of Weimar, put forward by the leaders of the workmen, has been carried.

A general strike has begun at Eisenach, 44 miles west of Weimar, where the situation is reported serious, rioting having broken out.

Virtually all the miners are out at Hamborn, the advices add.

Absolute anarchy reigns at Zeitz, southwest of Leipzig. According to reports, both the workmen and the bourgeoisie are on strike and a number of persons have been killed or wounded in street fighting. The town has been in darkness for several nights. Part of the troops there are said to remain loyal to the government.

Berlin, Tuesday, March 4.—Government troops occupied the city of Halle, between Berlin and Weimar, late Monday, after sanguinary street fighting in which thirty civilians were killed, according to an aviator who has arrived here by airplane from Halle. The troops also suffered casualties.

SOVIETS TAKE 8,000,000 RUBLES TO SPREAD WORLD PROPAGANDA

Meanwhile They Are Out of Funds, Look for Big Loan in U. S.

Washington Report — Swedish press reports received by the State Department to-day said the Russian Soviet Government had appropriated eight million rubles merely for carrying on its propaganda in various countries.

A LOAN IN AMERICA.

Stockholm Cable — The Soviet Government of Russia hopes to be able to arrange a big loan in America, and is prepared to offer in exchange important mining and railroad concessions, according to Petrograd advices received here.

Reports show that the internal war in Russia has cost four billion rubles during the past two months, and that an extra levy of ten billion rubles has been insufficient to cover the total deficit of the Soviet Government. It is said that the Bolshevist treasury is hardly able to raise 450,000,000 rubles.

FOOD FROM UKRAINE.

Berne, Tuesday, Report — A large consignment of food has reached Moscow from Ukraine, where it was requisitioned by the Bolshevist army, according to a telegram given out here by the Ukrainian press bureau to-day. The shipment consisted of sixty carloads of flour, two of manufactured articles, and thirty of sugar. The requisitioning of these supplies was approved by M. Rakowski, Premier of the Ukrainian Soviet Ministry. It is said.

Trial is inexpensive.—To those who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism or any ailment arising from derangement of the digestive system, a trial of Parmalee's Vegetable Pills is recommended, should the sufferer be unacquainted with them. The trial will be inexpensive and the result will be another customer for this excellent medicine. So effective is their action that many cures can certainly be traced to their use where other pills have proved ineffective.

TO AGAIN SAVE CIVILIZATION

Britain's Task, Premier Tells Industrials.

Sees Germany Also Going to Pieces.

London Cable — Addressing the first session of the industrial joint committee of employers and employes which was constituted at the industrial conference Feb. 27, and which was held privately this morning at the Central Hall, Westminster, Sir Thomas Munro presiding, Premier Lloyd George said he was returning to Paris to the Peace Conference this afternoon, but thought it important to come there to say a few words to them, who were also sitting at a peace conference which was more important for the future than perhaps they realized.

Russia had gone to pieces, and he was sorry to say that the symptoms were that Germany was also going to pieces. There was in Germany a lack of cohesion of ideas regarding the way the country was going to march. He would not be surprised if Great Britain had again to save civilization in more ways than one.

The committee's task was to settle peace for the country, but they were doing more, they were setting up a model of civilization for the rest of the world. Let them approach their labors in that spirit. Civilization might be shattered to atoms; it could only be saved by the triumph of justice and fair play to all classes. The Premier urged them not to try to get advantages over each other. They were not advocates, but judges for the whole nation, which looked to them to save the state.

He advised employes not to seek temporary advantages which might finally ruin them, but to take a long view and see that the foundations which in some places were rotten were underpinned and made secure. He pointed out to the workers that what was happening in Russia, and might happen in Germany, showed that they were a class which anarchy suited least, and that when they seemed to be triumphing most they were really, with the exception possibly of a favored few, suffering the most dreadful horrors.

They must see that the stream of prosperity irrigated to the whole land. It was a mistake to keep men working longer than was absolutely necessary, but at the same time two things must be borne in mind, namely, foreign competition and the need of productivity for a community of 45,000,000. There it was necessary to find a legitimate boundary just as the Paris Peace Congress was trying to fix European boundaries. They must use common sense and get a line that would meet the justice of the case.

CHINA BEFORE PEACE CONGRESS

More Than Once Offered to Share in War.

Wants Independence and Integrity.

Paris Cable — China's part in the war was reviewed to-day by Mr. Wang, one of the Chinese peace delegates, at a reception to the newspaper correspondents given by the Peace Commission.

Mr. Wang said China expressed to the Allies her desire to enter the war against Germany, and to participate in the Anglo-Japanese operations at Tsing-Tao, in August, 1914, "but the proposal was not pressed, owing to an intimation reaching the Chinese Government that its proposed participation would likely create complications with certain powers."

Again in November, 1915, Mr. Wang added, China was prepared to enter the war in association with the Allies, but "the Japanese Government refused its assent."

Mr. Wang explained that more than 130,000 Chinese had labored behind the battle lines in France, many of whom had been killed. Chinese workmen, he added, participated in the British operations in Mesopotamia and German East Africa, and many British ships were manned by Chinese sailors. China gave the Allies nine steamers, and offered to despatch an army of 100,000 men to the western front, but the Allies could not accept the proffer, owing to the lack of tonnage, Mr. Wang said.

China's claims before the Peace Conference, according to Mr. Wang, represent broadly an effort to maintain the "independence and integrity of China, which has been guaranteed in a series of conventions and agreements concluded by Great Britain, France, Russia and the United States with Japan."

Mr. Wang explained that China's efforts to adapt herself to the new environment created by foreign pressure and intercourse had been difficult, because of her riches in territory, China's mineral deposits exceeding those of all continental Europe.

In concluding, Mr. Wang commended a League of Nations.

Asthma No Longer Dreaded. The dread of renewed attacks from asthma has no hold upon those who have learned to rely upon Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. So safe do they feel that complete reliance is placed on this true specific with the certainty that it will always do all that its makers claim. If you have not yet learned how safe you are with this preparation at hand get it to-day and know for yourself.

A NEW CHARTER OF WORLD LABOR

Main Proposals of the British Draft.

Adopted by Peace Congress Commission.

London Cable — The main proposals of the British draft, adopted with minor alterations by the International Legislation Commission at Paris as the new International Charter of Labor, are given in a special despatch from the Labor correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

The provisions of this draft preclude the employment of children under 15 years of age in industrial occupations and the children between 15 and 19 for more than six hours daily. At least two hours each day must be devoted by these young workers to technical or regular educational classes, and they will not be permitted to work at night, or on Sundays or holidays.

A Saturday half-holiday will be introduced into all countries, and workers shall be allowed a continuous weekly rest of at least 36 hours, while the hours of work shall not exceed eight a day, or 48 weekly, and even less than this in dangerous trades.

Women shall not be employed at night, and employers shall not give women work to do at home after their regular days' work. Women shall not be employed in especially dangerous trades, which it is impossible to make healthy, nor in mines, above or below ground.

Women shall not be allowed to work for ten weeks altogether before and after childbirth, six weeks of which shall be taken after confinement.

In every country a system of maternity insurance shall be introduced providing for compensation at least equal to sickness insurance benefit payable in the country concerned.

Women shall receive the same pay as men for the same job. The use of poisonous materials shall be prohibited in all cases where it is possible to procure substitutes for them.

Workers shall have the right of free combination and association in all countries. A system of unemployment insurance shall be set up in every country. All workers shall be insured by the state against industrial accidents.

A special code of laws for the protection of seamen shall be established.

Regarding immigration, which shall not be prohibited in a general way, the charter, according to the correspondent, recognizes the right of any state to restrict immigration temporarily in a period of economic depression or for the protection of the public health, and recognizes the right of a state to require a certain standard of education from immigrants.

CAUGHT MEAN THIEF.

N. Y. Priest Overpowers Poor Box Robber.

New York Report — After a ten-minute strenuous tussle with a thief attempting to rob the poor-box, the Rev. Francis H. Wall, pastor of St. Charles Borromeo's Catholic Church, No. 211 West 141st street, last night turned him over to the police.

The poor-box of the church has been broken open four times in the past month, and sums ranging from a few pennies to $20 taken. A week ago Father Wall installed an electric burglar alarm on the box. He was reading in his study when the alarm rang, and he hurried to the rear of the church, where he saw a man trying to pry open the box. Father Wall, after a struggle, got the jimmy away from him, and held him while he telephoned for the police.

The man gave the name of George Donnelly. He has been arrested eleven times and in prison nine times, the records show, and has been arrested before for robbing poor-boxes.

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will drive worms from the system without injury to the child, because its action, while fully effective, is mild.

BRITISH LOSS IN YPRES SALIENT

London Cable — In the House of Commons to-day, replying to a question by Mr. Entwhistle, Right Hon. Winston Churchill, British Secretary of War, stated that the total casualties of the British, Canadian and Australian troops in the Ypres salient from July 31 to November 18, 1917, were 255,837, as follows:

British—
Officers	10,795
Men	207,838
Canadians—
Officers	496
Men	11,917
Australians—
Officers	1,289
Men	26,502

PUNISH PLUNDERERS

Is Demand of France, With Restitution.

Paris Cable — The French Government is asked to make every effort to secure the punishment of all German officers and soldiers found guilty of plundering or causing devastation in the occupied regions of France, in the report made by Senator Reynold on behalf of the Senate committee which recently visited the devastated districts. The report asks the Government to call the attention of the allied powers to the German methods of destruction, and urges the Government to obtain restitution of stolen property. The Government is urged to hasten material reconstruction and to aid the economic life of the people affected.

Internal parasites in the shape of worms in the stomach and bowels of children sap their vitality and retard physical development. They keep the child in a constant state of unrest and, if not attended to, endanger life. The child can be spared much suffering and the mother much anxiety by the best worm remedy that can be got, Miller's Worm Powders, which are sure death to worms in any shape.

HUGE BRITISH AIRSHIP READY

London Cable — Great Britain's largest airship is waiting to fly. Everything is ready to launch her at Selby, Yorkshire. Whether or not the airship will attempt a trans-Atlantic flight is for the Air Ministry to decide, but experts say she is capable of the flight. Although she weighs 30 tons she has a lifting capacity of an additional 30 tons. Speed of possibly 80 miles per hour is expected and, in that event, New York could be reached in less than two days.

TWO CHILDREN CREMATED.

Winning despatch: It is thought that two children, Mrs. Henry Mixer, of Woodbridge, Man., were burned to death late Tuesday afternoon in a fire which destroyed their home. From information it seems that the parents left them alone in the cottage while they went to cut wood. Upon their return they found their home a heap of ashes. No trace of the remains of the children can be found.

Q. M. Sergt. A. E. Richards after nearly three years active service in France, arrived home last Sunday evening. Sergt. Richards was severely wounded during the closing stages of the war. His brother Harold is still with the Canadian army in Belgium.

The many friends of John Prudham will be surprised and no doubt regret to know that, after having spent nearly 50 years of successful and satisfactory work in the agency of the Massey-Harris company, he has resigned, and severed his connection with that company. Failing health has, however, compelled Mr. Prudham to take this course. He will continue to reside in Waterdown Fred Watson, Dundas street, has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Prudham's resignation.

Another new fancier, in the person of Rev. J. F. Wedderburn, has been added to Waterdown's long list of admirers of the feathered world. Rev. Mr. Wedderburn will specialize in White Wyandottes, having purchased a number of fine specimens of this variety, and will conduct the business along philosophical lines. A fine new poultry house, of the very latest design with perfect ventilation, light, sun parlor, etc., has been erected under the supervision of Architect Frank Slater. The new business will be known locally as the Red Fence Poultry Farm.

Waterdown

Just fifty years ago to-day, on March 10, 1869, Lizzie Raspberry and John Lyons, of West Flamboro, drove to Hamilton through a blinding snow-storm and were married at Christ Church cathedral by the Rev. A. Geddes. Mr. Lyon had purchased a farm known as the Knowles farm on the mountain, where the happy couple made their home for over thirty years. Mr. Lyons then bought the Baker property, on the fifth concession, East Flamboro, where they moved, and have since resided.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lyons are enjoying good health and are able to take an active part in community life. Mr. Lyons will celebrate his 79th birthday on March 17, and Mrs. Lyons is in her 74th year. Mr. Lyons has been a staunch Liberal all his life, and can tell many amusing stories of fifty years ago. He has the canoe which he hewed by hand out of a huge log, over 65 years ago. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lyons were present at the terrible Desjardins' canal accident in 1863, and well remember the laying of the Great Western railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyons have six children living and eight grandchildren. They were each presented with a handsome chair from the family.

A large circle of friends join in wishing the old couple many future years of happiness.

War Museums Proposed.

The Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal, an old organization located in the historic Chateau de Ramezay and in possession of a valuable collection of historical relics, advocates the establishment of a chain of war museums in the leading cities throughout Canada. The matter was brought up by the president of the society, Mr. W. D. Lighthall, K.C., at the annual meeting, in which connection Mr. Lighthall said: "One of our duties is to record the deeds of our men by a collection of war records, pictures and portraits, of library material and of war relics." The proposal met with unanimous approval and a committee was appointed to take the matter up with the Dominion Government.

Fifteen Planes for Canada.

At the Hendon Air-drome Sir Edward Kemp received from Lord Londonderry, representing the air ministry, fifteen airplanes, subscribed by Canadian and overseas British residents through the Overseas Club. Seven of these were presented by friends of the club living in Canada. The club during the year has given the Government a total of 172 machines.

Sir Edward Kemp, in accepting the machines, assured the donors that Canada could be depended upon to develop the air service, both commercially and in a military sense, to as great an extent as any other part of the Empire. He mentioned that the Imperial Air Service had received over 8,000 officers from Canada, 1,200 being selected from the Canadian forces, 4,280 recruited directly in Canada, and 3,000 privates transferred from the Canadian to the Imperial Air Force.

The speech making was occasionally drowned by the noise of planes overhead doing exhibition stunts. Several officers of the two Canadian squadrons now awaiting despatch to Canada as complete units flew from Oxford to Hendon for the ceremony.

Women as Fire-rangers.

To the creditable list of occupations in which the war showed women to be efficient and faithful, may be added that of serving as observers in lookout posts on the peaks of western mountains and hills. From these lonely points of vantage watch is constantly kept for forest fires in the region roundabout. Because of the scarcity of available men during the war, this work was performed largely by women and girls, many of the latter being of High School age, who were glad of an opportunity to spend a summer vacation in the open. Usually the girls "manned" the posts in pairs, but in one instance a lone girl and her faithful dog were on duty. Whenever smoke was seen rising among the trees it was the task of the watcher to calculate the location of the fire by means of special apparatus provided for the purpose, and then communicate at once by telephone to the forest-rangers, who would hurry out prepared to fight the flames.

Reaches Front Benches.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, an expatriated Canadian, has been a member of the British House of Commons for 12 years, and by his assiduity and ability has won the Under-Secretaryship that now comes to him. As a progressively successful lawyer he should find congenial work at the Home Office, and men of all parties will welcome him to the front bench in the House of Commons.

East Flamboro Council Meeting

The East Flamboro Council met at the American Hotel, Waterdown, on Monday, March 3rd, 1919.

Reeve and Councillors all present.

Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

Mr. Platt and Mr. Parsons addressed the Council urging them to do something at once towards macadamizing the North Shore Boulevard. The Council promised to look after it right away.

W. R. Platt, Mr. Robinson and Mr. Marr also requested the Council to do something towards repairing the 2nd Con. The Council agreed to look after it as soon as the weather and conditions were favorable.

Communications were received as follows:

From J. F. Vance, County Clerk, stating that the County Council would need a copy of the Assessment Roll of the Township for the County equalization.

From Hamilton City Hospital, saying that A. A. Stonefish had been admitted as a patient and would be chargeable to East Flamboro.

And from the Commissioner of Industries, Hamilton, asking East Flamboro Council to pass a resolution in favor of changing the name of Burlington Bay to Hamilton Harbor.

A by-law was introduced and given three readings whereby the Treasurer's salary was increased to $200.00 per year, and the Clerk's to $480.00.

On recommendation of Councillor Attridge a resolution was passed whereby Charles Newell was allowed $30.00 for improving a portion of the Town line road between East Flamboro and Nelson Townships, Nelson Township agreeing to give a like amount.

It was moved by W. H. Easterbrook, seconded by J. W. Robbins, and resolved, that the Reeve issue his order to pay all accounts passed at this meeting. The following accounts were ordered paid:

Charles Newell, for work done on Town line	$ 30 00

Earning Basis

Remember, when you are filling up your Thrift Card, that the 25 cent Thrift Stamps, which you can buy wherever you see the above sign, are simply a means to an end.

Thrift Stamps earn no interest.

The interest begins when your Thrift Card, filled with 16 Stamps, is taken to the Money-Order Post Office, Bank or other place displaying the Beaver-Triangle sign, and exchanged as $4.00 in the purchase of a War-Savings Stamp, which costs $4.02 this month.

War-Savings Stamps earn 4½ per cent compound interest, being redeemable on January 1st, 1924, for $5.00 each.

POWER OF PREJUDICE.

The Reason Why People "Don't Like" and "Can't Eat."

To a far greater extent than we admit, or possibly are aware of, man is governed by his prejudices. They cost him more than he knows, for a prejudice is an expensive proposition. In no other respect is this weakness so apparent as in the matter of food. During the reign of the food administration many people were persuaded or beguiled into eating things they had never eaten before and thought they "didn't like." "I'll try anything—once!" was regarded as a liberal-minded concession to the unfamiliar. Yet our likings are almost universally a matter of habit established by repetition. Few of us have taken kindly to caviare, avocado pears, or even olives, on first acquaintance.

When the use of whale meat was first urged upon the public, people laughed and quoted: He baited his hook with tiger's tails, And sat on a rock and fished for whales.

Whale meat is purchasable in many parts of Canada, but where is the steward or chief brave enough to place it on a hotel menu? As a matter of fact, there is nothing in the slightest degree objectionable to eye, nose or palate in whale steak, as those unprejudiced may quickly learn. It resembles corned beef—possibly a little less so, and broiled and served with a sauce, either drawn butter or a lemon sauce, is tasty enough for a second helping, once we have overcome our dread of the untried. That this meat will eventually be recognized as a food adjunct is indicated by two large canneries doing a good business on the Pacific Coast and the concessions granted to the syndicate supplying them.

The flesh of the shark is said to resemble that of the surgeon—the fish that "goes to the Caesar's dish," but it's cannibalistic reputation, firmly fixed in the popular mind, is against it. Man's dread of the gastronomically untried is only equalled by his curiosity, which after all gets the better of his fears. Truly, he was a brave man who first swallowed a raw oyster.

Prejudice plays a large part in our food purchases. Take the case of Butter versus Oleomargarine. Experts in the former have been known to fail in ability to distinguish the two, yet we are willing to pay 20 per cent. more for butter than for the substitute. The prejudice against goods from storage helps bolster the cost of living. Were it not for storage facilities butter and eggs to-day would be luxuries for the very rich only. The public was recently reliably informed that storage eggs had proved fresher than fresh eggs. The rabbit would furnish food as well as fur if our "don't like" did not stand in the way. As a matter of fact, our "can't eat" and "don't like" are mainly psychological states fixed in habit and prejudice.

Lived on a "Pharm."

"I want some intelligent men as hospital orderlies," announced Lieut. Worley. "Any pharmacists in the company?" A flaxen-haired individual shuffled forward. "Ye gods," said the lieutenant, "are you a pharmacist?" "Shure ay bane pharmacist," was the indignant reply. "Vy ay bane work on pharm all mae life."

STERN REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Cold or Wet Weather May Start the Pains, but the Trouble is in the Blood.

Every rheumatic sufferer should realize that rheumatism is rooted in the blood and can only be cured by a treatment that will cleanse the blood of the rheumatic poisons. The old-time belief that rheumatism was caused by cold, damp weather, is now exploded. Such weather conditions may start the aches and pains, but is not the real cause. Liniments and outward applications may give temporary relief, but cannot cure the trouble, because they do not reach its source in the blood. The sufferer from rheumatism who experiments outward applications is only wasting valuable time and good money in depending upon such treatment, the trouble still remains, and it is all the time becoming more firmly rooted—harder to cure when the proper treatment is applied. Treat this disease through the blood and you will soon be rid of the pains and tortures. As a cure for rheumatism Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are unequalled. They act directly on the impure weak blood; they purify and strengthen it, and so root out the cause of rheumatism. Mr. D. Lewis, postmaster at Escumaine, N. B., says: "I was attacked with rheumatism, which settled in my elbow, shoulder and knee joints, and at times caused me great suffering. The trouble was particularly severe last spring and I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking the pills for some time the rheumatic pains and stiffness in the joints disappeared and I have not since had any return of the trouble."

If you are suffering from rheumatism, or any trouble due to poor blood and weak nerves, you will find a cure in a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can procure these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LESSON XI. March 16, 1919.

The Cities of Refuge. Joshua 20; 1-8.

COMMENTARY—I. Place of protection (vs. 1-6). 1. The Lord also spake unto Joshua—"And Jehovah spake unto Joshua."—R. V. As the Lord had spoken to Moses, making known to him his will, so he spoke to Joshua his successor as standing between him and his people. God's confidence in his servant is shown in his thus addressing him. 2. Appoint out for you—Set apart, assign for you. The word appoint means to sanctify in the sense of setting apart for a particular purpose. Cities of refuge—Places of protection, that innocent persons might not be put to death. Whereof I spoke unto you by Moses—The purpose of the cities of refuge was declared some years before this and the records are found in Num. 35; 9-34 and Deut. 19; 1-3. The cities of refuge could not be appointed until the tribes of Israel were located in Canaan and the Levitical cities assigned. 3. The slayer, unawares and unwittingly—Providence was made for the protection of one who had taken the life of another through mistake, not knowing it. The Mosaic law made a clear distinction between intentional, premeditated murder and the accidental or unintentional slaying of another. May flee thither—The cities of refuge were set apart for the protection of those only who had unintentionally taken the lives of others. Among the Greeks and Romans and in succeeding centuries there were places of sanctuary (places of protection) provided for criminals of every class, but among the Israelites only the innocent were to be protected. The avenger of blood—The avenger of blood was a near kinsman of the person who had slain, and it was his duty, according to the custom of the age, to pursue the slayer and take his life, thus avenging his death. The avenger of blood undertook to take the life of the slayer without considering whether he was guilty of intentional murder or had slain another accidentally.

4. Both fine untaken of these cities—That it might be as easy as possible for a slayer to reach one of the cities of refuge, it was provided that the roads should be at least thirty-two cubits, or about fifty feet, wide, kept in good repair with all obstructions removed, all streams bridged and signs at every turning showing the way to the city of refuge. Every advantage was thus given to the slayer to escape the avenger of blood. Shall declare his cause—When the slayer arrived at the gate of the city of refuge, he was allowed to state his case to the elders of the city and they received him, assigning to him a suitable place of residence, provided they were convinced that his act in taking the life of another was unintentional or accidental. 5. If the avenger of blood pursue after him—It was expected that the avenger of blood would be in close pursuit of the slayer. Shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand—The elders of the city of refuge had undertaken to protect the man who had fled thither for safety, and they would not give him over to them because they were convinced that he had done no intentional wrong. Hated him not beforetime—If it could be shown that the slayer had hated the victim or had a grudge against him, this would be considered a proof that the slaying was not accidental. Inquiry then, as now, was made regarding the motive for the act. 6. He shall dwell in that city—He had fled thither voluntarily, and that, too, for safety, and he would be safe only as he remained in the city. Until he stand before the congregation for judgment—The hearing he had before the elders at the gate upon his arrival was merely preliminary. He must stand before the assembly of the people that his case might be thoroughly considered and passed upon. The local authorities shall summon him and the 'goel' (Hebrew for avenger of blood) to appear before them for a judicial inquest and verdict. The congregation or jury was to hear both sides, and to decide whether the deed proceeded from malice or was accidental. If he was condemned, he was to be executed; but if he was acquitted, he was set at liberty, but was sent back to live in the refuge till the death of the high priest. 7. Whedon. Until the death of the high priest—The administration of a high priest was regarded as a period complete in itself. With the accession of his successor a new period began, and with it a new order of things. The slayer could not go to his home until the death of the high priest and thus he underwent something of a hardship as a sort of punishment for what may have been carelessness in causing the death of a fellow man. Through the death of the high priest all who were then sheltered in the cities of refuge could go forth in safety. Through the death of our great High Priest all who will may be free from the guilt of sin.

II. Cities of Refuge Set Apart (vs. 7-9). 7. appointed—Set apart. Kedesh in Galilee—In the northern part of Canaan on the west side of the Jordan River. The six cities were so located as to be easy of access from every part of the territory occupied by the Israelites. They were in slightly places with good roads leading to them. Three were on the east side. Kedesh was in the small region then called Galilee, but the term Galilee came later to be applied to the whole northern portion of Canaan. Shechem—in the central portion of Canaan. Shechem—in the central part of the land of Israel on the west of the Jordan. It is situated in the valley between Mount Garizim and Mount Ebal. Kerjath-arba—Also called Hebron. It is the southern city of refuge west of the Jordan. Hebron was an important city among the patriarchs and in the history of Israel. It is twenty miles south of Jerusalem. The distance between Hebron and Shechem was about fifty miles and the distance between Shechem and Kedesh about the same. 8. on the other side Jordan—on the east side. There were only two and a half tribes of Israel on the East side of the Jordan. Reuben, Gad and a half tribe of Manasseh, yet their territory extended nearly as far from north to south as that of the other tribes. There would have to be as many cities of refuge on the east side as on the west to meet their needs. Bezer—This was a Levitical city in the tribe of Reuben and in the southern part of the land east of the Jordan. It was nearly opposite Jericho. Ramoth in Gilead—This was one of the strongholds in the tribe of Gad. Golan—The site of Golan, is now unknown, but it was the northernmost of the three cities of refuge east of the Jordan. This district was once densely populated, but now is mostly deserted. 9. and for the stranger—The cities of refuge were designed for the protection of the Israelites, but not for them alone. The stranger who came to dwell with them was included in this plan for safety. Questions.—Where is the earliest mention of the cities of refuge? Why were not the cities of refuge appointed before Joshua's time? How many were there? How were they located? Who had the privilege of going there? How could a slayer gain entrance into one of these cities? What is meant by an avenger of blood? How long was the slayer to remain in the city? Of what are the cities of refuge typical?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.
Topic.—Our responsibility toward offenders.

I. The cities of refuge.
II. Their typical significance.
1. The cities of refuge. The provision of the cities of refuge was included in the instructions of Sinai and was a well-recognized part of the civic constitution. The custom of blood revenge was of very ancient origin and of wide recognition among Oriental nations other than the Hebrews. Its existence seems to be recognized in the Noahic covenant (Gen. 9:5, 6). Under the patriarchal order the head of the household was ruler, priest and judge. The race was not yet grouped into nations and there was no selected judge or established places of judgment. If any punishment for the taking of human life was to be meted out, it must come through the family itself. The "law of blood," as originally established, was not designed to satiate a spirit of vengeance, but stood as a solemn vindication of the sacredness of human life. In the provision of the cities of refuge there was no condoning of criminality. A wilful murderer was of no account to be suffered to escape, but was afforded a respite until inquiry could be made and judgment rendered. Even God's altar afforded no refuge for the wilful criminal nor could any ransom be accepted. Only he who "unawares and unwittingly" had slain his fellow could avail himself of the provision, and if accultured of wilful crime, his detention in the city whither he had fled provided measurable punishment for carelessness or passion. The appointment of cities assigned to the priesthood was not without significance; and they were as widely distributed and as conveniently located as possible. Three of them, Bezer, Ramoth and Golan, on the east of Jordan, Moses had already appointed. The remainder, Kedesh, Shechem and Hebron, were chosen after the settlement and division of the land. The highways leading to these cities were to be prepared with special care (Deut. 19:3), and the direction is said to have been indicated by guide-posts. II. Their typical significance. That the cities of refuge were symbolic of the provisions of grace is plain. "All have sinned," and "by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." They are available for all, but require personal effort and co-operation. "Who have fled to him for refuge." Deliverance is based only upon the death of the "High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." Security comes only by abiding in Him. Apart from Him the transgressor is constantly exposed to the vengeance of violated justice. The way is made so plain that "the wayfarer man, though a fool, shall not err therein." Offences will come; but we unto him, through whom they come! However every effort is to be made to restore the offender. Charitableness in dealing are grounded in personal liabilities and shortcomings. "Considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." In many things we offend all. The method of procedure is clearly stated by supreme authority. "Tell him his fault between thee and him alone" before telling any other man. Forgiveness is to be granted unto "seventy times seven." The law which said, "An eye for an eye," has been superseded by the gospel which says, "Love your enemies." W. H. C.

Why Women Bear Pain.
Women bear pain better than men as is well known, but Dr. E. O'NEILL Kane says that their tranquility is often receptive, being stoical submission rather than lack of feeling. He believes women are less often affected by shock than men; they endure surgical operations better and pass under anesthesia more rapidly, quietly and safely.

ORIGIN OF THE DOG. Scientists Differ Over One Common Ancestry.

The ancestry of the dog has been the occasion of much controversy, according to Leo S. Crandall's book, "Pats." Many naturalists have considered that it is descended from a single ancestor, such as the common wolf of Europe. Darwin, however, leans toward the theory of multiple origin, and advances much convincing proof in support of his belief. It is widely known that many savage tribes have dogs, which appear to be simply half-tamed representatives of the particular wild doglike animals inhabiting the same regions.

The dogs of the American plains Indians closely resemble the small prairie wolf, or coyote; the husky of the north country is plainly not far removed from the gray wolf; the German sheep dog and the Samoyede are strikingly wolflike in appearance. Whether our present dogs are the result of crossing these many simple derivatives of wolves and jackals among themselves, or, whether there was an original ancestral dog, now extinct, with which the blood of other species has become mingled, we have not yet been able to determine, though so many primordial animal remains have come to light.

According to St. George Mivart, the dingo is the only wild dog still existing which meets the requirements of an ancestor of our modern breeds. This species is found throughout Australia and fossil bones which have been found show its presence there from very early times.

Internally and Externally it is Good
The crowning property of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is that it can be used internally for many complaints as well as externally. For sore throat, croup, whooping cough, pains in the chest, colic and many kindred ailments, it has curative qualities that are unsurpassed. A bottle of it costs little and there is no loss in always having it at hand.

U. S. Getting Busy.

Great preparations for the construction of public works and for general building activities in the spring are being made in the United States. In addition to the survey being conducted by the field men of the Division of Public Works and Construction of the United States Department of Labor, the Kelly and Kenyon Bills have been introduced in Congress to provide heavy appropriations for national constructive activities. Each measure calls for an appropriation of $100,000,000. The Kenyon Bill, in addition, empowers the War Finance Corporation to make advances, within one year from the passage of the Act, to an aggregate amount not exceeding $300,000,000, at not less than 5 per cent. per annum to any State for financing public works whenever unusual unemployment is actual or threatened.

Strong Words of a Guelph Veteran

He Says Dodd's Kidney Pills Saved His Life.

James Black at the Age of Eighty-Five is Shouting the Praises of the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Guelph, Ont., March 16.—(Special)—"I would have had to undergo an operation, or be dead only for Dodd's Kidney Pills." These are strong words. But Mr. James Black, an old gentleman who moved here recently from Maidstone, makes the statement without hesitation. "I suffered from kidney trouble and pain in my back," Mr. Black goes on to relate, "and a friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. When I had used half a box I began to pass sand and gravel. I have half a pound of it in a bottle to show people. "I also had cramps in my legs so that I could not sleep at night. I used 14 or 15 boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and now I am cured of all these ailments."

Mr. Black who is in his eighty-fifth year, is confident that he owes his life to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and never tires of singing their praises. "They are worth twice their weight in gold," he says.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have long ago earned the name of "The Old Folks' Friend." For the kidneys are the first to feel the strain of advancing years. Acting directly on the kidneys and strengthening those organs, they have made many an old person shout, "I feel young again."

Growing Dishrags.
It has been discovered that the thick, spongy gourd of the luffa plant, which grows easily and requires but little attention makes the best kind of dish-cloths and bath sponges. An Ohio woman is making a good living raising them. She sold over 100 to one garage company alone for use in the washing of automobiles. Cut into strips the luffa gourd makes a kind of lace widely used by milliners, and it is also admirably adapted to the making of flower baskets.

WHAT HE PUT ON THE HORSE.
"Can any boy tell me what harness is?" asked the teacher. "Well," she continued, "is there any boy here whose father works among horses?" "Yes, teacher, mine does." "Well," said the teacher, "what does your father put on the horse every morning?" "Please, teacher, every cent he has."

SUBSTITUTE YARNS.

Substitutes are sought abroad. Paper yarn has proved a failure. Such yarn cannot be used for making clothing.

An attempt has been made to produce yarn from cellulose. This, too, has proved unsuccessful as a substitute for cotton and wool yarns.

The great obstacle in the way of the use of substitute yarns so far has been that they are not washable.

Some of them are durable fabrics and can be used for coarser fabrics and those do not require to be washed.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the system. Hall's Catarrh Medicine was prescribed by one of the best physicians in the country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. PARTED BY GOLD

What she had to say she said clearly and with a louder ring of her pure voice, and there was some slight applause at the close of the speech, which suddenly ceased as, with a light step, she advanced to the front and with a wave of the silver wand commenced singing.

Her voice was sweet and well trained, her manner not only fairlike, but modest and almost deprecatory, her soft, winning smile at the close irresistible.

There was a second's silence to see of the song was really finished, then a tremendous thunder of applause, accompanied by emphatic snouts of "Encore, encore!"

She flushed, and Jack, who had never removed his eyes from her face, saw her turn it slightly toward the wing behind which the pirate stood, with, oh, such a loving glance of gentle triumph!

Another thunderclap, a burst of enlivening melody from the whole orchestra, a rush to the front of the ballet girls, and the scene closed in upon a pretty grouping of fairies and demons with the queen in their midst.

Jack drew a long breath and turned to look with a wistful gaze after the crowd leaving the stage.

"By Jove! what a charming little debutante!" said Popton, with genuine admiration.

Jack started; he had forgotten his companion, the place, everything.

"Eh? Yes, what—what is this scene—Palace of King Prettyman?"

Walton raised his eyebrows at the other two.

"Jack's hit—shot dead!" he whispered. "Did you see him while the girl was on the stage?"

"Yes, and while she was singing," replied Popton. "If he would only look like that when Lady M—was at the piano, how happy she would be!"

Beaumont moved uneasily as he had done when the name had been mentioned on the preceding evening, but he said nothing.

"Look at him now," said Popton, as Jack turned from the play on the stage and stood peering about the dusty labyrinth behind. "He is looking for her, I'll bet a thousand pounds. Yes, there he goes," he exclaimed, triumphantly.

Jack, having caught sight of the pirate, walked off in this direction, and, catching him as he was entering the greenroom, touched him on the shoulder.

"Pardon me," he said, as the actor turned with a happy smile upon his face. "But I could not help congratulating you upon your daughter's success. It was most complete and undeniable."

"Thank you, sir, thank you!" said the father. "Yes, it was a success, a great success. Oh, sir, you can't tell what I endured during those few moments!"

"Yes," said Jack. "I can think, but you need fear no longer. Your daughter has gained confidence, and will please them still more in the next act."

"I believe it, I believe it," said the pirate, with a greater smile, but his face clouded over suddenly, and he replied: "Won't you step in, sir?"—they have been standing at the door during the conversation. "My daughter is inside, waiting for her call, resting a little."

Jack took off his hat and stepped in. There was no introduction, but Jack bowed and the girl returned it with a drooping of the eyelids and a timid blush. Her father poured out a glass of lemonade and stood holding it for her.

"This gentleman has been congratulating me, Mary," he said, in a low tone. "He saw you and heard you sing."

The girl raised her eyes with a look of gratitude.

"It was very kind of him, dear," she said, in a low voice. "I would like every one to congratulate you if you deserve it," she said, tenderly. "You don't fear for me now, father?"

"No, no," he replied, smiling. "It is all safe; don't forget the cues, and keep your voice for the last song, and all will go well. Drink, my dear, drink, you'll be thirsty and dry else."

She took the lemonade and sipped it, looking up at him all the while with loving encouragement.

Jack had stepped outside again and was wandering up and down. The stage had no interest for him until the Fairy Queen was upon it.

"There's the call," said the pirate, as the callboy shouted:

"Miss Annabelle Montague on!"

Setting down the glass and giving the pirate another kiss, the Fairy Queen tipped past again, and Jack was at his post.

His prognostications of her success came true, and as the curtain fell he found himself helping to produce the thunder by clapping his long, sinewy hands together until they tingled again.

"Bravo," said Walton, "bravo! An equivocal success, a grand first night, eh, Jack?"

But Jack had vanished again, and Walton, clinging to the wing to prevent himself from being knocked down by the rush to and from the stage, laughed aloud.

"Good as the play itself!" said Popton, sentimentally. "Cupid has slain poor old Jack, that's certain. Here lies Jack Hamilton, who met his death from the fatal miasma arising from the bright glances of the Fairy Queen of an extravagant extravagance. Much lamented by his many and sorrowing friends."

Beaumont laughed.

"All very well," he said, "but where's the fellow got to?"

"Don't know. Haven't the slightest idea," said Walton. "Hear him howling with a broken leg, down a trapdoor, directly, no doubt. I say!"

he added, as if a sudden idea had struck him, "can't we get some fun out of this, eh? You know what Jack is, all honor and Don Quixote where women are concerned; can't we manage to heighten the effect of this love at first sight by a little romance?"

"As how?" asked Popton, languidly, but quite ready for any mischief.

"Look here, this girl is called Miss Annabelle Montague, the old pirate is like her father, name of Smith most likely. It's certain he called the girl Mary, and Smith always goes to Mary. Now, I'll tell you how we can get some fun out of it. Pitch a yarn to dear old Jack that the old pirate is a gentleman reduced—an old officer, one of the true Montagues, and that the girl is a lady under difficulties. It will send him mad, he'll be head over heels in love, and there will be real fun. Besides," and he looked at Beaumont, who seemed scarcely to think the fun worth the trouble of concocting the story, "besides we shall be serving Lady M—an ill turn, and we all of us relish that! What do you say?"

"I am ready," said Beaumont, with an air of indifference, though his eyes looked strangely eager.

"All right, only don't bore us too much, Wal," languidly acquiesced Popton.

Walton nodded, and he and Beaumont talked for some moments in an undertone, laughing with easy satisfaction at the close of the conference, when Popton declared he would wait any longer, and having given Jack up for lost, intended making for the exit.

At that moment Jack came up, not with his usual easy, indolent air, but an eager look on his handsome face and a bright flash in his frank eyes.

"Hello, you fellows, are you waiting? Never mind, because I thank the manager, but can't find him. I'm quite bewildered with it all."

"And I'm bored to death," groaned the Hon. Willie. "Come along!" and, seizing the reluctant Jack by the arm, he dragged him along the corridors and out into the open air by the stage entrance.

Mr. Hamilton's brougham was waiting, and the four gentlemen got in.

"Well, what did you think of the scene, eh, Jack?" asked Beaumont.

"Wonderful!" said Jack. "I shall never believe in scenery or acting again."

"What! not the acting of Miss Annabelle Montague?" asked Walton.

Jack's bronzed cheeks grew a darker red, but he said nothing.

"She is the prettiest girl I have seen on or off the stage," continued Walton, touching Beaumont with his foot. "Poor girl!"

"Why poor girl?" asked Jack, rather sharply.

"Well, it's not the life for a gentleman," replied Walton, glibly.

"A gentleman!" repeated Jack, with an increase of eagerness. "Is she that, Wal?"

"Undoubtedly. Father, one of the Yorkshire Montagues; he may not look it, but you see the stage spoils them, takes it out of them in time and veneers them over. Oh, yes, he's one of the Yorkshire Montagues, only I should not recommend you to remind him of it, and the girl is thoroughbred."

"She looks it," he heartily responded Jack. "And so her father is a gentleman," he repeated, thoughtfully.

"Poor fellow!"

"We will drop into the Signet again some night, Jack, eh?" said Walton.

"By all means," said the unsuspicious Jack. "By all means; in fact, I shall have to go very soon, for I have something of Miss Montague's in my pocket."

"Have you? what is it?" asked Beaumont, who had remained silent, but was listening with more earnestness than the joke seemed to warrant.

"A pocket handkerchief," said Jack, taking out a dainty one from his pocket and replacing it again before the others could touch it. "I think I shall drop in there to-morrow and return it."

"Ah, do," said Popton, while Walton whispered in Beaumont's ear:

"I wouldn't give much for Lady Maud's chance now, Beau, eh?"

CHAPTER III.

Down fell the snow lightly and softly enough, and yet with such quiet persistence and determination that the huge houses, the tall chimney pots, the very giants of city churches, were subdued by it and gave themselves up to the oppressor and were buried beneath its white robe.

King Frost was yawning and stretching, to-morrow he would be fully awake and go noiselessly about, treading on the world, turning the water to ice and making the snowy roads crisp and brittle beneath the feet.

That is in the country; in London, King Frost is conquered in his turn to a great degree by the warmth of a million breathing lungs, the heat and smoke of a thousand chimneys.

It was Saturday night and tea time—this is five o'clock—in a little room in a little street leading from a huge roaring thoroughfare. Within the room was a tall man, whose countenance was that of the pirate without his warpaint and buccaneering cap.

"Mr. Montague, I am honored, sir; how do you do, sir? I hope—"

"And perhaps you can spare a word for me, Mr. Tubbs," said the thin, sweet voice.

It was marvellous to see the change that came over the little comedian's manner. He stopped short, turned, with a deep touch of reverence in his look, voice, and even, fat hand, took the little fingers of the little child and bent over them.

"Always a word for you, Miss Pattie," he said. "Always a word for you. How do you like the snow?"

she answered.

"Well, Mr. Tubbs; I don't know. It looks very beautiful, very; falling ever so softly—down, down, as if it never meant to stop! But, but—is it not very strange to be out in it? Isn't it very cold, very ghostlike?"

Her eager, dreamy face posed the comedian and set his scratching his head—another favorite trick for gaining the gallery, but now done naturally enough.

"Well, yes, I suppose it is."

"Then I don't think I should like to be out in it," said the child, thoughtfully, and with an air of pity.

"Sometimes I think it must be very dreadful walking around in such a crowd and in the rain and dirt; sometimes I—" but there was rather getting another sausage. Stay and have a cup of tea, Mr. Tubbs."

There was a good fire in the small grate, and the pirate was employed in the most unspractical and peaceful manner trying to persuade an obstinate kettle to allow its contents to boil.

A comfortable little room it was, notwithstanding its plain furniture, worn carpet and lack of luxury.

Composite the pirate sat what looked like a little old woman, her figure wrapped in a shawl, her face turned toward the fire and hidden, her whole body completely enveloped in the wrap.

Five o'clock struck from a score of city bell-towers, and the shawl was agitated by a small, white hand, and a face—such an angelic, patient little face—emerged from the thick folds.

"Five o'clock, father, dear," said the voice belonging to the face—a low, thin little voice like the chirrup of a bird with suppressed cheerfulness.

"Five o'clock, father, dear, and Mary has not come back. I wonder what keeps her?"

"I'm, my dear? O yes," said the pirate, starting from a reverie, much to the disturbance of the sausage he had commenced to toast, which followed suit by starting into the grate, from which the pirate, extracted it, wiped it carefully, and impaled it again. "Eh? Yes, Mary is late, she is generally home before five, Pattie. Late, yes very late."

"A long rehearsal, perhaps," suggested the little one, drawing the shawl around her again, but leaving the faded little face, with its setting of bright golden hair, unconcealed.

"Poor Mary, it is snowing and so cold. I wish she were here."

"Aye," said the pirate, depositing the sausage on the plate with a sigh. "Poor Mary, I wish—but there's no use wishing, Pattie, no use wishing. Your father will never ride on his wishes, poor as he is."

"If wishes were horses beggars would ride—is that what you mean, father?" replied the little one, cheerfully.

"Well, there is no harm in wishing that I know of, and I wish that Mary would come before the sausage is cold and the tea spoiled. Don't hold the teapot like that, father, you'll scald your hand. Ah; there, I was afraid you would!"

And with a little scream of commiseration, she swung off her chair and picked up the teapot, which the pirate had with great cowardice deposited with a crash upon the fender.

"Oh, dear," sighed Pattie, with a smile, "what awkward things men are. Who ever would have thought of pouring boiling water into a tea pot in that fashion? There, sit down, you naughty dear, and let me put it straight before Mary comes home. She'll be shocked to see this mess."

With incredible swiftness and even grace, considering that the little body had been bent and twisted from its birth, the child-woman found a cloth, wiped up the spilt water, held the tea kettle, and with feigned severity, instructed the pirate in what manner to pour in the remainder of the water.

Scarcely were these things done, and the father scolded with loving sternness and bidden to take his seat, when the door opened and the looked-for Mary entered.

If the snow had turned everything else white, it had, by way of striking a balance, perhaps, brought a bright flush upon the girl's beautiful cheeks and added a brilliant sparkle to the large, gentle, loving eyes.

The pirate looked up with a smile of welcome which extended to a laugh as Mary, stepping aside a little, disclosed a companion in a short, thick-set man with a broad face, a big mouth, a rather flat nose and eyes that were good-natured and certainly that had been very generally termed goggle.

"Hello, Tubbs!" said the pirate, holding out his hand. "How are you?"

"I'm very glad to see you. It's very kind of you to walk home with Mary. Sit down, sit down."

Tubbs received the proffered hand and hearty welcome in a manner characteristic of his profession—that of a light comedian. He took off his hat, laid his hand on his breast, made a smile that stretched his mouth from ear to ear, and with turns of the eyes which always delighted the gallery and scarcely ever failed to produce loud applause from the pit, said with a solemn, tragic air—founded upon his host's stage one:

"Mr. Montague, I am honored, sir; how do you do, sir? I hope—"

The low comedian seemed quite alarmed, and went off into a long and hurried series of excuses.

"Oh, no, thanks; tea waiting at home; couldn't think of intruding; only just trotted here with Miss Mary—quite an honor, Miss Pattie, I assure you, quite an honor—can't; have a particular engagement—very particular engagement."

All of which Miss Pattie cut short with a wave of her tiny hand, and, pointing to the chair which Mary had sharp, gentle way:

"I don't believe you, you tell dreadful stories. Sit down at once, or you shan't come and see me again."

Thus commanded by her whom no one thought of disobeying, Mr. Tubbs seated himself at the table, put his comic, broad-brimmed hat underneath the chair, blew his nose with honest vehemence and made himself comfortable.

Bolshevism Kills Trade.

Striking evidence of the decline of industry under Bolshevism was given by the Senate Committee at Washington by Dr. W. C. Huntington, who was Commercial Attaché of the American Embassy at Petrograd from 1916 until near the end of 1918. "In nearly every instance," he said, "the nationalized factories have come to grief. When the decree of nationalization was issued the factories were placed in charge of committees of workmen. Then came factions and friction and quarrels between them. One would have supplies, another would not, and the result is that few if any factories are running now. The principal industry left in Russia now is printing paper money. I have seen the complete overthrow in Russia of all that we know in human life as it exists here at home. I have seen a condition of absolute chaos in all human relations develop in Russia. I have seen conditions attained that amount to nothing less than a reign of absolute terrorism."

Respecting Investments.

To the Average Man—Some one is bound to get your spare dollars, to say nothing of your spare 25-cent pieces.

The question is—who will it be? Will it be some one with a "gold brick," or will it be the Government which, in return, will pay you good interest? That's the question.

You know that in the making of investments you have made bad mistakes. You have put hard earned money into things that never will and never could give you a return. More than this, you have lost your principal. You can't afford to do this any longer.

You had better let the Government have your spare dollars; it will even accept 25 cents from you. In buying War Savings Stamps you let it have the use of your money for five years, for which it pays 4½ per cent. compounded half-yearly.

If Strength Declines As Age Advances Follow This Suggestion

So many women grow old before their time, perhaps your wife or sister. A little while ago, buoyant, full of vigor and activity—she enjoyed life and imparted pleasure to the whole family, but now in a few short years she has faded and lost color and strength. She is just ready to develop some disease that will further weaken and debilitate. You remember how it began, failure of appetite, tired in the morning, found housework burdensome, always nervous and a little irritable. It's a shame to let her go down hill further when you can build her up so quickly with Ferronole.

The change this nourishing tonic makes in a weak woman is surprising. It gives great zest for food, increases appetite and digestion enormously. The blood gets richer and stronger and adds new life to every organ in the body. A rebuilding process works through the entire system. The first week will show an improvement, and a month or two will fatten up the body. A rebuilding process works through the entire system. The first week will show an improvement, and a month or two will fatten up the thinnest, most run-down woman you can think of. Take Ferronole for lost color, for nervousness, for weakness—use it when run-down and feeling poorly—it will do you more lasting good, keep you in better health, than anything else. Just as good for men and children, too, because Ferronole is harmless and safe, 50c. per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from the Catarrhose Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Soldier Problem.

Rev. Lawrence Skey, who recently returned from France, says that the question of the returned soldier was one that would require great delicacy in handling.

The men who are returning could be divided into three classes:

Firstly: The men who had gone overseas and had done their bit, and who are coming home with the idea that they should receive everything from everybody, and were not willing to work for what they received. These men, he said, wanted to run affairs, and thought that because they had been overseas and had done their "bit" they should be given soft jobs, with no work, and big pay. These men were the men that were going to cause trouble at home.

Secondly: Another class were those who went overseas with the spirit of doing their best when they got there, and who would do their best when they got home. These men were and are a credit to their country.

Thirdly: The third class may be spoken of as those who have been partly and totally disabled, and these men should receive justice and more consideration than those of the first two classes. At the present time employers and capitalists do not seem to realize that it is necessary for them to be imbued with a spirit of leniency toward these men whom they have in their employ. A partly disabled man cannot be expected to do as much as a man who has the full use of all his mental faculties and physical strength. Of course, business is a practical undertaking, and employers could not be expected to give a man full wages for half time.

The Government should look after these men: train them and fit them for positions similar to those which they held before they went overseas.

In case that there should be any trouble with the men who belong to the first class there should be a military court appointed to deal with cases of returned soldiers. If this was not done there may be conflict between the civil and military authorities.

Tribute to Canada.

Canada has done wonderfully well thus far with its war finance, and there is every reason to expect that she will keep this pace to the end. Canada is enormously rich in undeveloped resources and her promises to pay are among the best securities in the world. As a matter of fact, there is practically no difference between Canada and the United States so far as financial responsibility is concerned. After the war there is bound to be a rapid development of Canada's resources with great increase in the visible wealth.—Buffalo Express.

Rev. Dr. Herridge.

Rev. Dr. Herridge, for nearly thirty-six years minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, is a national figure. He certainly would be included among the five greatest Canadian preachers, and there are many who will consider him pre-eminent. It is impossible to measure the extent of the influence that Dr. Herridge, preaching Sabbath after Sabbath at the capital, has exerted on Canadian thought in the course of thirty-six years. He has undoubtedly proved an inspiration to many Canadian leaders—statesmen, professional men, business men and "workers." Dr. Herridge has held firm to a strong belief in the power of the pulpit and the spoken word. Into his sermons he has largely rested the interpretation of his duty as a minister of the gospel. His studied reading of the scriptures, his appreciation of the religious value of good music, his sense of "atmosphere" in relation to congregational worship have attracted a host of lovers of the beautiful. Dr. Herridge is not what is colloquially known as a "mixer," and he has ever upheld the dignity of the pulpit, the solemnity of the church, and the profound sacredness of "the message"; yet there are hundreds who have learned to love him as a man. From time to time efforts have been made to entice Dr. Herridge away from Ottawa by the offer of a much larger income than he has received there, but he has measured his work, as all great artists do, by other than financial standards, and has remained in the pastorate to which he was inducted as a young man in 1883. With two sons and one daughter at the front, and a wife a leader in Red Cross activities at home, Dr. Herridge has been a real inspiration to Canadians during the war. Never in his whole life has he preached sermons that had so much moving vitality or such patriotic and spiritual effect.

It is a matter for general congratulation in Ottawa, therefore, that the elders and managers of St. Andrew's Church are determined to leave no stone unturned to persuade and assist Dr. Herridge to withdraw his suggestion, due to temporary indisposition, it is thought, that he should resign. The members and adherents of St. Andrew's are not alone in their desire that Dr. Herridge shall be retained in the position of influence that he has earned through the years in Ottawa and Canada.
