To-morrow.

Time and tide for no man wait
Runs the adage trite and olden;
Call it musty if you will,
Yet it speaks a truth that's golden.

Why so oft do plans conceived
Wisely, bring chagrin and sorrow?
Seek the answer in delay—
Putting off until to-morrow.

Chances for a life's success—
Pleasure in anticipation—
Of fruition often fail
Through the blight—procrastination.

Alas, because of that one fault,
In obscurity grow hoary
Men who could have made their mark—
Names that might survive in story.

Lacking promptitude, success,
Like a phantom flies us ever;
And that word of promise, now,
Wanting this, is changed to never.

Opportunities once lost
We can neither beg or borrow;
Fortune fair attends to-day,
Failure grim awaits to-morrow.

EVERY DAY THROWS A SHADOW.

CHAPTER III.

Harry Nash rose, and placed his hand on Wilmot's shoulder.

"Add not yet further to my father's troubles," said the young man, darting fire from his grey eyes. "If he has wronged you, he has repented. Taunt him not on the fulfilment of your evil course. Leave him and me to our fate, both old and young are ruined, and will leave together."

The solemn way in which this last speech was spoken awed Wilmot.

"I desire not further to taunt your father, Harry Nash," replied his uncle; "for your sake I will spare him. My own dear sister was your mother, and my blood also flows in your veins. Your father's feelings will punish him sufficiently for his crime. Come here, Harry; you shall act as mediator between us. Nash, your hand."

The old attorney burst into tears, and he heartily clasped the hand held out to him.

"Forgive me, Wilmot," he said

"that money has been a curse to me. The thoughts of you, and of your poor brother, who died of grief, have prayed upon me sufficiently—a weight hung over me, and bent me down, it has furrowed my cheeks and dimmed my eye—aye, and ruined my son. Had it not been for that property, I should not have speculated this last time, I should not have been a pauper."

Wilmot was greatly touched, and he turned his eyes toward his nephew.

"Tis hard, Nash," said he, thoughtfully, "that your folly should have ruined your son."

"That son is doubly ruined," replied Harry Nash, huskily, "since he has, in consequence, been compelled to break his troth with her who in one month was to be his bride."

"Poor boy," observed Wilmot, "tis hard, very hard, indeed."

He passed his hand across his forehead, and considered for a moment.

"Nash," he observed, "your throwing that property into Chancery, and devouring it all yourself, though it left me then destitute, has made my fortune. By the dint of care, and with good luck, I am now worth ninety five thousand pounds."

"I would your poor brother had thus fared," said the attorney.

"His breath was feeble," returned Wilmot, "and his misfortune killed him."

Poor fellow! I am the only one left to bewail his loss."

Mr. Nash groaned.

"Your penitence comes late, but not too late," said his brother-in-law, "and I forgive you. For your son's sake the debt must be paid. Harry," said he, sitting down and writing a note to his bankers, "you shall yet marry her you love."

Mr. Nash and his son rose from their seats, and grasped Edward Wilmot's hand.

"There is one favour, dear uncle, which I would ask further," said Harry Nash.

"Tis already granted," returned Wilmot.

"Then I should wish you would live with us, and be—"

"Nothing will give me greater pleasure, my dear boy," said his uncle, "than to be always with you, and, he added, with a sly laugh, to welcome the future Mrs. Nash."

"Every day throws a shadow," The darker the morning shadows is, the brighter will the day prove. Life may be dull at the outset, but a clear day shall dawn. Surely then, let us place this foremost among our list of proverbs—"Every day throws a shadow."

THE END.

Slander.

Alas, how many hearts have been saddened, how many young lives filled with blooming prospects have been blighted, how much pain, remorse and agony have been caused by just one little word of slander, in envy or in malice spoken.

Some coated tongue, backed by an impure heart, first whispers the base accents. Oh, that it could rest here! But no! An eager ear catches the vile words and ready lips repeat it. Would that there were fewer eager ears to listen to slander, and fewer ready lips to repeat it.

There are also persons who will give credence to any scandal, and from the various motives of envy, malice and love of gossip, will spread the report. No matter how heavily it may be barbed with shame, woe, sorrow and agony when received, there will be added, by repetition, a little more diabolism to the already diabolical report.

Many young men, who have started out to live honest, sober, virtuous lives, have been turned away from the paths of ruin by vile scandal. The young man, in some dark hour, submitting, perhaps, to his friends, yields to the temptations around his path. 'Tis then that the scandal does the most effective work. The young man feeling sorry for his actions would fain return to the right path, but scandal denies him the right. The result generally is, the young man, thinking himself deserted by all his former friends, naturally seeks refuge in the lower ranks where dissipation and riot rule the hour; he tries to drown his remorse and disgrace in the cup.

Slander, however false, will cause all friendship for the one assailed to perish. There is a story told of a beautiful, delicate humming-bird that in a lily lay dreaming the bright spring morning away, that was killed only by the report of a gun, fired in sport by an idle boy.

Thus it is with slander; though it be report, merely sound, it kills friendship. How much less anguish, sorrow and sin there would be in this world if every one, instead of "rolling every piece of scandal beneath his or her tongue as a precious morsel," would let it rest with the originator.

Mr. Spurgeon says that the reasons which a good woman presented for objecting to a certain preacher were striking ones. She said that, in the first place, he read his sermon, in the second, he did not read it well; and in the third, place, it was not worth reading. Only Mr. Spurgeon's natural modesty prevented his giving the name of the preacher, of course.

THE ACADIAN.
SEMI-MONTHLY.

DAVISON BROTHERS
PUBLISHERS & PROPRIETORS

WOLFVILLE, KING'S CO., N. S.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.—The ACADIAN is published on the second and fourth Friday of each month at 50cts. per Annum in advance. Single copies 2 cents.

PUBLISHERS NOTICE.

We wish to double our subscription list before the first of the new year. Our aim is to place the ACADIAN in every home in the county; we have placed the price so low that all can afford to have it. We want a good Agent in every town or village, to whom a very liberal commission (25 per cent) will be given. Will not our friends and subscribers help us in this enterprise? You can make money easily, as all the paper needs is to be shown, and at the same time help us much. Now is the time! don't delay! subscribe yourself! and get your friends to do so.

To the person sending us the largest number of subscriptions between now and the end of the year a VALUABLE PRESENT will be given.

THE SILVER MINE BUBBLE.

The great Sonora Silver Mine bubble has at last burst. A quantity of money, reported as high as $150,000 has been lost by King's County. Among the victims are all classes, from the poorest to the most wealthy, and the smash up is a sad and heavy blow to many. It is not our place now to find fault with the projectors or agents in this place, but it goes a long way towards proving off repeated assertions in regard to Nova Scotia.

We are led to wonder how long it will be, and how much money and anxiety must be expended before our people will accept the experience for which they have already paid too much.

$150,000 is a large sum, and when we consider how much good it might have done if invested in some legitimate enterprise in Wolfville we are filled with sadness and regret. When money is invested at home our people expect immense dividends the first year. When they will ever learn anything is a question time alone will tell. We appeal to them now and ask have you not had enough of yankee sharpers? Will you not stop grumbling at hard times here and try to make them easier? $150,000 invested in a Pier at the mouth of Mud Creek would now be reaping a good if not a bountiful dividend. $150,000 in a Boot and Shoe factory would employ a lot of men and circulate more money here than has been seen for a long time. $150,000 in a Furniture Factory would make Wolfville look as if it were alive.

Now men of King's look around home. Try and build up your own county. Stop grumbling about protection and instead of paying high duties for American or high prices for Canadian goods put your money into factories at home and make your own goods and your own prices.

For the Acadian.
LOCAL PROSPERITY.

Any person who cares at all for the place in which he resides is glad to note reliable signs of prosperity, and he will be as glad to make such indications known, even if he is actuated by no higher motive than selfishness this will be the case, for whatever is for the interest of the locality in which he lives is for his personal interest also, and sometimes in a very unmistakable and direct manner.

It is not however always the case that this principle has its legitimate influence: indeed it too often apparently does not seem to have any influence at all. Here is an instance of unaccountable short-sightedness and selfishness, clearly visible in some individuals, who in other matters are remarkably shrewd, and who habitually leave no opportunity unused to further their private interests. But I have digressed.

Wolfville has, like most other places, had its seasons of prosperity and depression. It was thought that the Railroad would prove a great boon to the village and transform it speedily into a town. But although the road is a great convenience and advantage in many ways, it has not had the effect anticipated, but on the contrary, for Kentville having been made the Company's head-quarters, has rather diminished its business and stayed its growth. Of late however there has been a revival in business and the village is decidedly more prosperous.

One circumstance of a pleasing and advantageous character may be mentioned. More than one family of means and one at least of decided wealth have purchased properties in Wolfville, and made it their residence. The amount of influence for good which this will exert on the village will depend upon the interest they shall feel in the welfare and advancement of the place, and their disposition to be a benefit to it. But even the ordinary expenditure of a wealthy family will act favorably upon the trade and condition of the village. It may be hoped, however, that more than this will be attempted and experienced, and that we shall ere long have the good of which other communities know, to see a portion at least of the means of our moneyed men devoted to the origination and encouragement of industries, of which the village would be the appropriate home, and for which it furnishes such rare facilities. Want of space prevents the further prosecution of the subject.

GENERAL NEWS.

Steamer Iris from Cardiff, Wales, for Port Said, Egypt, has been lost off Cape Vullino, Spain, and only one saved out of a crew of thirty-six.

The London police claim they have a clew to the authors of the explosion in the underground tunnel.

A great strike of weavers is imminent in Manchester.

The Aetna Life Insurance Company of Chicago has been pronounced a swindle in court.

United States troops have captured a tribe of marauding Canadian half-breeds and confined them in Fort Buford.

Pneumonia is spreading to an alarming extent among cattle in England and Ireland.

The four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther was celebrated in the principal protestant countries on the 10th. of November throughout the world.

A new India-rubber plant has been discovered in Southern India, originally a native of Cochin China forests, where its juice is used in medicine.

CASUALTIES.—On the morning of the 9th., off Ward's Island U.S. a tug-boat was blown to atoms and sank almost instantly. Seven persons were on the tug, four were killed.

A four story building in process of erection and almost complete on William St., Buffalo, was blown down by the late gale. Twelve carpenters and laborers were at work. Four were taken out dead and one will die; seven are seriously, some perhaps, fatally injured.

General Prior, the American lawyer sent to England to assist in the defence of O'Donnell, the slayer of Carey the informer, could only be permitted to speak in an English court by a great stretch of courtesy, but since the boasts have been made by O'Donnell's American friends of complicity in the explosions in the London Underground Railway it is doubtful if the American council will even be allowed to sit at the lawyers' table during the trial.

Local and other Matters.

OBITUARY.—Mr. D. Rupert Eaton, of the well known firm of D. R. & C. F. Eaton, died suddenly at his residence Lower Canard on Tuesday morning last, of typhoid fever. Mr. Eaton will be much missed throughout the county. The family have our heartfelt sympathy.

PERSONAL.—Mr. F. W. Hanright, of the Hants Journal called upon us last week.

Rain, Fog, Mud, Ugh!

TELEGRAPHIC.—The Acadia Rapid Telegraph Company placed the Post Office on its circuit last week.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A young lady named Marsh, who had been complaining some time, died very suddenly last Wednesday. At the time of her death it was supposed from the circumstances that she was not dead but in a trance; the medical men who were in attendance disagreeing on that point. She was kept until Thursday when all came to the conclusion that death had ensued and a Coroner's Inquest was held. A Post Mortem examination was ordered and it was then found that she had burst a blood vessel causing instant death. On Friday the jury again met and a verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts.

BALL'S

CORSETS

Every Corset is warranted satisfactory to its wearer in every way, or the money will be refunded by the person from whom it was bought.

The only Corset pronounced by our leading physicians not injurious to the wearer, and endorsed by ladies as the most comfortable and perfect fitting Corset ever made.

Local and other Matters.

BUSINESS.—Mr. John E. Palmeter has opened a Grocery Store in the shop formerly occupied by Mrs. A. Thompson.

LATEST.—Mr. Chas. A. Patiquin landed us a number of full-blown May Flowers, which he found a few days ago "blooming among the snow." Beat it!

DON'T FORGET.—That A. M. Hoare is still agent for the Scotch Dye Works.

SNOW.—The first sleighing of the season was duly enjoyed last Saturday. It was limited but was good while it lasted.

AUCTIONS.—Wolfville had two auctions last week and every-body is happy because they, in many cases were able to pay as high, in some cases higher than regular prices for inferior goods.

WOLFVILLE PLANING AND MOULDING MILL.—Mouldings of any shape or size to 9 inches wide, and stair rails on hand or made to order. Also pine boards planed and matched. Dry pine lumber always on hand.

D. A. Munro.
 Wolfville, Oct. 12th, 1883.

HORTON DYKES.—The highest tide since the great Saxby storm of 1869 occurred during the last week, and the dykes on the Basin of Minas were considerably damaged. The Wickwire dyke broke in several places and was with difficulty prevented from being flowed. The eastern part of the Grand Pre and especially the running dyke extending from the east point of Long Island was damaged to the extent of some hundreds of dollars. And it is said that the Avonport dyke is so badly damaged as to make it doubtful whether the proprietors will be able to repair it. Those west of Mud Creek on the Cornwallis River and the Gaspercau dyke near Judge Weatherbe's property were submerged in several places but no break of any account.
