Wilson And Mexico.

A couple of months ago we took occasion to refer to the attitude assumed by President Wilson of the United States towards the Republic of Mexico. We expressed the opinion then that the President's conduct in this matter was, to say the least, most extraordinary. It was, we considered, contrary to ordinary diplomatic methods, directly opposed to the position taken by the other great powers of the world, and had all the earmarks of a desire to intervene in the internal, domestic affairs of a neighboring sovereign country. Every move made by President Wilson and his Government since we then wrote, confirms and accentuates the conclusions then enunciated. As a matter of fact, the two countries still occupy about the same relative positions towards each other as they did two months ago, except that feeling has been worked up to a higher pitch of intensity.

Now what has been the manner of action of President Wilson in this matter? Shortly after the upheaval in Mexico, and the appointment by the Congress of that country of Huerta as provisional President, a meeting of accredited representatives of the great powers to the Mexican Republic was held in Mexico city, and the line of conduct to be pursued under the changed conditions, was discussed. On the initiative of the American Ambassador, Mr. Henry Lane Wilson, who appears to have been the senior of the diplomatic corps, a recognition of Huerta's Government was agreed upon.

This was about the time, or shortly after, President Wilson entered upon the duties of his office, as chief Executive of the United States. He repudiated the line of action adopted by the diplomatic representatives of the powers, recalled the American Ambassador, and refused to diplomatically recognize the provisional President of Mexico. All this he did, in contradistinction to the conduct of Great Britain and the other Great Powers of Europe. All this he did on the pretence that the country was in an unsettled state. But, as Premier Asquith said in his address at the Lord Mayor's banquet a few days ago, the powers were bound to deal with whatever was for the time being the de facto Government of Mexico and because there appeared no element except Huerta that offered any prospect of the restoration of order.

Not satisfied with withdrawing the American Ambassador from Mexico, President Wilson sent Mr. John Lind as his personal representative to Mexico, to act as a kind of diplomatic spy, to watch the movements of acting President Huerta, to thwart his actions and by a policy of bluff to force him out of office. This juggling has been going on for several months.

At first Mr. Lind was instructed to impress upon provisional President Huerta that a constitutional election for President of Mexico must be held, before the United States could recognize the Government of that country. That offered no particular difficulty, as the election was arranged for and would be held in the month of October. Then Huerta was given to understand that he should not be a candidate at the election for the Presidency. As the date of the election was drawing near, Mr. Lind intimated that whatever the result of the elections would be, the President of the United States would not recognize the President so chosen. Thus things went on, from day to day, each succeeding declaration of the United States authorities proving more and more that the ultimate object of all this tortuous pretence at negotiation, was intervention on some pretext or another, and finally the annexation of Mexico.

The Presidential election was held, but it appears that a sufficient number of votes for President were not polled to ensure a legal choice. But Congressional elections were held at the same time, and the Congress chosen was to meet on the 16th inst. This constituted another motive for activity on the part of Mr. Lind. This time his energies were directed to prevent Congress from convening and, if possible, to drive Huerta from power before it should convene. Neither of these things were accomplished.

Among the plans discussed by President Wilson and his Government to overcome Huerta, it is said, was the removal of the embargo on munitions of war, so as to enable Carranza, the leader of the rebellion in Mexico, to overthrow the de facto Government and drive Huerta from power. It is certainly carrying things pretty far, when the Government of a civilized and Christian country intimate their willingness to allow a rebel horde to capture, murder and destroy without distinction, with the view of removing a de facto administration not agreeable to the party of the first part.

President Wilson very well knows that General Carranza would not give stable government to Mexico, or attempt to do so. But the disorder and anarchy that would ensue, would afford a plausible excuse for United States troops going in and taking charge of the country.

The Government of Mexico is very likely not as good as it might be, and Huerta is probably not a paragon of perfection. But a reasonable opportunity should be afforded to the de facto powers to undertake the pacification of the country and the establishing of order. Instead of this, we have invited intervention, and the threat of the big stick by a bully. This is not in accordance with the eternal fitness of things.

A Sane Christmas.

There is a great deal of common sense behind the movement which has been accepted in the United States in favor of a sane Christmas, says the St. John Standard. The Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving has the matter in hand and, as its name implies, aims to strike at the practice of giving Christmas gifts "just because one has to." Its activities are not aimed at Santa Claus, who can go as far as he likes in making the children happy, but such cases as Mrs. A. who gives to her neighbor, Mrs. B. something that she cannot afford and the recipient does not want, simply because Mrs. A. fears Mrs. B. will think she is mean if she does not reciprocate the useless gift received last Christmas, arouse the ire of the S. P. U. G. The movement is well summed up by the Montreal Herald which says:

"It's the Jones that it is after, Jones being generic for the great class of people to whom you 'simply have to give something,' no matter how little you want to, Mrs.

Jones is the woman who gives your wife a lace dingus with pink ribbon on it, and who will be offended if, in return, she doesn't get a crocheted thingummy with blue ribbons. Mrs. Jones doesn't want to give up the dingus, and she has no use for the thingummy, but somebody started this amiable habit of giving Christmas presents willynilly, some centuries ago, and we have been hard at it ever since.

"Most of us will be inclined to think the S. P. U. G. has a big contract on its hands, in spite of the crescendo of roars with which Christmas bills are greeted year after expensive year, but the members and active workers in it point triumphantly to what has been done in the United States in making she once bloody butchery of July Fourth into a comparatively sensible day. If Uncle Sam has learned not to blow his thumbs off with a giant cracker, why shouldn't Canadians learn to keep their pennies, their dinguses and their thingummies, instead of spreading them around where they will do the least good?"

Lady Stratheona Dead.

Lady Stratheona, wife of Baron Stratheona and Mount Royal, Canada's High Commissioner in London, died on Wednesday last. She was the daughter of the late Richard Hardisty of Montreal, and was in her 89th year. Messages of condolence were sent to Lord Stratheona by both Premier Borden, who is absent on vacation, and by Hon. Mr. Foster acting Premier at Ottawa. Mr. Foster's message sent in the name of the Government, was as follows:

"The members of the Canadian Government desire to assure your Lordship of their profound sympathy on the occasion of the death of Lady Stratheona. They feel that in her all classes in this country have lost a warm friend, who, during a long lifetime, labored, not less effectively because quietly and unostentatiously, to assist your Lordship promote the well-being of her Canadian fellow subjects, while her kindly and gracious hospitality will long be remembered by those privileged to share it.

"We trust your Lordship may be strengthened to bear this great affliction and that you may yet be spared many years to continue your work on behalf of Canada and the Empire."

To the foregoing message of condolence, the following reply was received from Lord Stratheona by Hon. Mr. Foster: "At this moment of the deepest sorrow it is impossible to find words with which to thank you and your colleagues in the government of Canada for the words of true sympathy and solace conveyed in your message on the irreparable loss I and mine have sustained in the death of my beloved wife, who was my stay and trusted adviser during our long life together. From the bottom of my heart I thank you and them for your kindness."

From the emigration figures published by the British board of trade, about half the people who left the British Isles last year in search of new homes came to Canada. There is yet room for many more.—Ottawa Free Press.

Here we are in Canada, with provinces far larger than France, or Germany, or Austria or Italy, with no tariff barriers or armed frontiers dividing them, with free institutions, free schools, with freedom from aristocracy and militarism. There is no limit to our ambition, to what we might do if we would throw our whole souls into the development of Canada according to the ideas of the twentieth century and the new world. The progress that we have made in the first few years of the twentieth century is only a promise of the progress that we may make before the twentieth century is old, if we will only discard all narrow, sectarian, racial ideas, and rise to the height of our wonderful opportunities.—Toronto Star.

Eufala, Ala., Nov. 13.—Twelve persons were killed and more than a hundred injured some of them fatally early today, when three coaches of a Central of Georgia passenger train left the rails at a point seventeen miles south of here and plunged down a steep embankment. The train, which consisted of five cars crowded with excursionists, was en route from Ozark, Ala., to Eufala, where a fair is being held.

Among those who escaped with minor injuries was Jefferson D. Clayton, a wealthy Alabamian, and brother of Congressman Henry D. Clayton, of this state. A broken rail is said to have caused the accident.

As the crowded excursion train rounded a curve the three cars at the rear literally packed with passengers, rolled down the steep embankment. The coaches practically were demolished. Shrieks and groans of the injured rose above the rending crash of splintering timbers.

Occupants of the two coaches which remained on the rails immediately bent their efforts in rescuing the hundreds who were caught in the tangled mass of wreckage. Word of the disaster quickly reached Clayton, Ala., three miles away, and relief trains bearing surgeons and nurses were quickly dispatched from Ozark and Eufala, where most of the dead and injured were taken.

Many of the victims were cared for at Clayton, where the citizens turned their residences into emergency hospitals. All the physicians within a radius of many miles hurried to the scene and assisted in caring for the injured.

So large was the number of victims, however, that available space at Clayton soon was exhausted and many had to be placed on cots on porches and in front yards.

Because of the isolation of the place where the wreck occurred, and the confusion which necessarily prevailed, identification of the dead and wounded was slow.

Not until tonight were the names of a majority of the killed known with certainty. Many of the injured were brought here tonight from Clayton, those suffering most being taken to local hospitals by a special train. Others were transported by automobiles, carriages and other vehicles. A majority of the injured suffered painful scratches and bruises from splintered woodwork and cuts from flying glass. There were many, however, who suffered broken bones and internal injuries of a dangerous nature.

As the end of the year 1913 is almost upon us, we desire to remind our friends that remittances for subscription to THE HERALD are now quite in order. We have fairly kept our part of the annual contract and have sent out the paper every week since the beginning of the year, and have not troubled our subscribers to any great extent, about money. But this is the time of year when these matters are usually attended to and we shall be pleased if those, who have not already paid, will be so kind as to remit as soon as convenient.

Terrible Toll of Lives.

Port Huron, Mich. Nov. 12.—Each hour to day added to the toll of disasters which occurred on Lake Huron during last Sunday's storm, and tonight the end was not in sight.

Seventy-six pieces of mail are in the local post office at Detroit for men on steamers lost to the Great Lakes storm.

At Hot Springs, Virginia, on Monday of this week, Ex-Governor Draper of Massachusetts gave a luncheon in honor of Premier and Mrs. Borden.

Thirty lives are reported to have been lost in the wreck of the steamer Henry B. Smith, of Cleveland in Lake Superior near Marquette, Mich.

Twenty Italian laborers on construction work near St. Thomas, Ont., saw snow on Monday of last week for the first time. They threw up their hands in chilly indifference and left for sunny Italy.

War against legalized murder by surgeons who are commissioned to "wield the knife" before they are sufficiently trained was declared at the closing session of the Chicago Congress at Chicago on the 17.

The American of New York publishes a Vienna cable saying that the Czar's son cannot live more than six months, in the opinion of the surgeon he has rapidly tuberculosis of the bones.

Five masked men robbed the United Bank of New Rochelle near Seattle last Wednesday night. They wounded the cashier and escaped with $10,000 after a battle with the citizens. Six suspected were arrested.

On Saturday morning last two freight trains came into collision on the Intercolonial Railway near Londonderry, N.S. One driver was badly scalded and much damage was done to the track and to the rolling stock.

A London despatch says: This is the mildest November in 14 years. Because of the tropical winds summer flowers are in full bloom and in some places farmers have now spring corn. In Covent Garden yesterday raspberries grown outdoors were selling at 18s a basket.

An Indian on the 12th was fined $5 for trapping muskrats out of season near Cotuit, Ont. The Indian claims that by an old treaty of George III's reign they are entitled to hunt as long as grass grows and water flows. The matter may go to the Privy Council.

A telegram from Vancouver, B.C. to Mr. Angus McLeary, St. George's, a few days ago tells the sad news of the death of Hugh McLeary, a nephew of St. George's. No particulars of the sad occurrence came to hand.

One hundred and twenty people are known to have been killed, hundreds of others are believed to have succumbed and ten small towns in the mountainous Peruvian Province of Ayacucho were destroyed by an earthquake last Friday, reports of which reached the authorities at Lima Peru by carrier.

The insurance underwriters at Toronto give estimates of losses in the recent big storm. The value of the cargoes was one million dollars; the value of the ships two millions and a half; the cost of the ships nearly $5,000,000 and insurance $4,241,000.

The revenue cutter Tacoma sailed from Seattle for Kodiak Island on the 12th with medical and other supplies for the village where Indians have been stricken with measles. Two hundred and fifty cases, and thirteen deaths have been reported, and the Governor of Alaska has appealed to the federal Government for assistance.

The London Times learns that capital has been raised in Boston and Great Britain for necessary engineering works and the establishment of a line of steamers running direct from Blackhead Bay, County Mayo, Ireland, to Halifax and Boston. This project is in connection with the scheme for all British communication around the world.

Harvey McCullough aged 7 and Johnnie McGregor aged 9 were playing in the wheat bin of the Farmers Elevator at Kinkardin, Ont., on Saturday last. They were drawn in with the chute and other things and the man at work below saw what was the trouble and was told by another boy. They tried to shovel the grain away, but the attempt was futile.

LOCAL & OTHER ITEMS

Three aviators fell into San Francisco Bay while in a contest on Monday. All were rescued.

It is reported that a Power Plant to cost millions is to be built on the Canadian side of the Niagara Falls.

One hung suspended by his head between beams and earth, caught by some cross-bars, and though he sustained slight concussion he is rapidly recovering.

The fastest regular train in the world runs from London to Plymouth every day in the year on the Great Western Railway, 235 miles in four hours and seven minutes, or 54 1/2 miles an hour.

LOCAL & OTHER ITEMS

$7,500 was the price paid for Thistle Patch, a green pacing horse at Queen's N.Y. on Friday last. His mark for a mile on the Lexington (Ky) track last fall is 2:04.

Two Polish Russians, an uncle and nephew, were suffocated at Santa Ota, by the fumes from fire while they slept on Saturday night.

All steamers plying Santa are flying flag at half-mast in honor of the good ships and seamen who are now sleeping beneath the water as a result of the blizzard.

A cable to the London Mail from Sydney C. B. says the Trans-Atlantic wireless telephone is now an accomplished fact.

Three workmen of a construction gang were killed and fourteen others injured on Wednesday, in a collision between a work train and a passenger train, the track of the Boston and Albany Railroad at Pittsford Junction last Friday night.

Hopes for the safety of the Dominion Coal Company's steamer Brigolite are now abandoned by her owners in Montreal. About three weeks ago she started from Sydney laden with coal for Montreal and she has not turned up. Search for her has been made in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and on the north side of the Island of Anticosti, but no trace of her has been found.

Man Killed By Friend.

Albert N. B. Nov. 12.—As the result of a horrible gunning accident at Stoney Creek, at noon today, Hiram Crossman was shot through the heart by a companion, Willard Dow, and killed.

The shooting was purely accidental. The men were on a hunting expedition and Dow, who is but 17 years of age, was walking behind the victim. They came to a pole fence which Crossman climbed without difficulty.

Every effort was made to save the rapid-riding life, but to no avail and in two hours the victim of the tragedy passed away.

A Great Icebreaker.

Ottawa, Nov. 4.—The Department of Marine and Fisheries will call for tenders within a few days for the largest and most modern equipped ice breaker that has ever been put in commission in this or any other country.

It is to be used exclusively for the St. Lawrence route and a noteworthy and significant feature of the conditions governing the awarding of the contract is that the vessel must be built in Canada.

Practically all the ice breaking vessels now in the Dominion were built in the Old Country, and while the plans and specifications for their construction were drafted by officials of the Marine Department, it has been found time and again that the lack of a proper appreciation of the conditions prevailing in the St. Lawrence and the Gulf resulted in the majority of the boats being inferior in some particular respect.

Let Us Be Kind.

Let us be kind; The way is long and lonely, And human hearts are asking for this blessing only— That we be kind.

We can not know the grief that men may borrow, We can not see the souls storm-tossed by sorrow, But love can smile upon the way today, tomorrow— Let us be kind.

Let us be kind; This is a wealth that has no measure, This is of heaven and earth the high est treasure— Let us be kind.

A tender word, a smile of love in meetings, A song of hope and victory to those entreating, A glimpse of God and brotherhood while life is fleeting— Let us be kind.

Let us be kind; Around the world the tears of time are falling, And for the loved and lost these human hearts are calling, Let us be kind, To age and youth let gracious words be spoken, Upon the wheel of pain so many weary lives are broken, We live in vain who give no tender token— Let us be kind.

Let us be kind; The sunset tints will soon be in the west, Too late the flowers are laid upon the quiet breast— Let us be kind.

And when the angel guides have sought and found us, Their hands shall link the broken ties of earth that bound us, And heaven and home shall brighten all around us— Let us be kind.

SHORT STORY

A Soldier's Sacrifice.

The news of Travers' arrest and of the charge against him had spread through the camp like wildfire and caused the greatest excitement. The men, disregarding for once the authority of their officers, rushed at the prisoner as he was marching through the lines and would have torn him to pieces had they not been bawled back by the guard, who so vigorously used their muskets for clubs. As it was, when, half an hour later, he was taken before the drumhead court martial, over which Washington himself presided, he was feebly braced and covered with blood. He made no defense. He seemed to be completely crushed and returned no answer at all or responded in scarcely audible monosyllables to the questions addressed to him. It was agreed that his explanations to Col. Dayton were too weak to merit serious consideration when compared with the straight forward reports of the sergeant, given with great embellishment of detail. There was no time to lose. The safety of the force depended upon a hurried advance, Washington's anxiety was depicted upon his martial visage. But it was imperative that the execution should be summary and as imposing as possible, in order to properly impress the troops with the heinousness of the offense and to serve as a warning to the prisoner's accomplices, for it was not doubted that there were other traitors in the camp. It was deemed impossible for any member of the rank and file to obtain needed information that had been sent to the enemy, and the court had exhausted every means of inducing Travers to disclose the names of his fellow culprits. The army was drawn up in three sides of a square, with the commander in chief and his staff in the center space. The condemned man, after being marched along the front of the ranks, was placed against a tree. The muskets of the execution platoon were leveled at his breast and the officer in command had raised his sword, which, when lowered would give the fatal signal, when a shriek was heard; there was a commotion on one side of the square and a soldier rushed forward calling wildly upon the man not to fire. The general held up his hand as a signal to the officer commanding the firing party to wait. Col. Dayton sprang his horse toward the man who was the cause of this sensational interruption. The soldier clasped the officer's knee and said something to him as he bent from his saddle. Suddenly Dayton shook him off, ordered a sergeant to arrest him and gashed pale, galloped back to the chief, who was waiting with visible impatience and annoyance at the delay. A few minutes' earnest conversation passed between them, while the army looked on in breathless wonder at it all. The colonel's report resulted in the postponement of the execution and the immediate resumption of the march to the Delaware

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Meanwhile the condemned man had fainted.

The army had safely crossed the river and had quartered in a large village. Enthusiastic recruits were pouring in from every direction, and Washington was preparing to turn back and resume the offensive in New Jersey. Travers' imprisonment in an upper room of a farmhouse had roostered somewhat from the terrible emotions through which he had passed and the ill usage to which he had been subjected, but he was haggard and emaciated. He spent most of his time stretched upon his mattress. He did not know why he had been respited. None of the men who guarded him and brought him food ever spoke to him. He lived in hourly expectation of being led out to die, and indeed he would have welcomed death as a happy release from his sufferings.

Fifteen Thousand Miles In Canoe on Pastoral Visit.

Rev. Bishop O. Charlebois, O. M. I., the missionary of the far North, writes from his little log hut which he calls his 'palace,' in Le Pas, Manitoba, Canada: 'Here are a few words about my pastoral trip this summer. To visit seven missions, I had to travel about 1,500 miles in a small canoe with two Indians. Twice we were nearly wrecked by being caught in a frightful wind storm in the middle of a large lake. Humbly speaking, we were certain to be drowned but there was a Divine Power watching over His missionary. I slept on the ground under trees for fifty five nights. Once a rabbit came and sat on my blanket but quickly ran off when I jumped in surprise.

'At the end of September we saw a snow blizzard all day. I had to pass the night in the open, no shelter could I find. I was without food, without blankets and had hardly any firewood. It was one of the most cruel nights I ever had to endure although I have spent many a night in the bitter cold in visiting my Indians. I got a heavy cold that night which still grips me. I preached to more than 2,000 Indians, and confirmed 150 among them. I was much edified in seeing them receive Holy Communion every morning. I was touched by their great faith and by the respect they showed to me as their Bishop.

'They called me 'K'tohiyamin-awikimaw' 'the Great Chief of Prayer.' I was deeply saddened, though, by the poverty of my good missionary priest. Not one among them made a complaint or wishes to resign his heavy cross, nor do I. They all like their Indians and are ready to live and die amongst them. Four days ago (October 11) I received a letter from my two missionaries who are with the Eskimos in the Hudson Bay country. The letter was dated June 10. They said they were well and that they had hopes of converting the Eskimos to our holy faith. There was ice and snow still at their mission.

'I have written my experiences and have had them published in English in a small book entitled 'D'ebut of a Missionary Bishop.' I think it will be interesting reading for it is a truthful account of what I have witnessed in my life amongst the Indians. It will be a novelty also to many readers who have never seen this part of the world. I have 3,000 booklets and I wish to sell them, so that I can use the proceeds to help me in furthering the spread of the faith among the Indians. I will be glad to hear from anyone willing to buy a book.'
