Now the Prices you've been waiting for are here

The old year took away, for ever, we hope, the old burden of war prices. For months conditions have been working toward the great climax that brought the remarkable merchandise that is here assembled for this our greatest January Carnival of Economy.

The results came in two ways: first, the drastic lowering of prices on our own stocks, down to the new low basis, and often far below it—to double your interest in January buying in our store.

and, we have combed the markets—taking utmost advantage of the opportunities created by far sighted manufacturers who were ready to co-operate with us in presenting to you now the lowest prices that will be possible, for the next six months, at least.

We can just see the delight of our Customers when they see the splendid assortment of goods, in every department of our store, and then realize that prices are away down to the bottom, where it is a pleasure to buy things.

Many Manufacturers have Accepted Large Losses.

We shall forgo a large part of our profits on the new goods and accept large losses on our own mark-downs—to inaugurate this first New Year under the New Management and

THE MOST STIRRING PRICE-UPSET THAT THIS COMMUNITY HAS EVER KNOWN.

No matter what you need or desire, now is the best time for months to come to buy it. Some of the reasons are told on this page; but scores of others are here that can get no mention today, even in this broad space.

Rushing Out Of Church

How many of us have often reflected, with sentiments similar to those which follow, on the haste with which many Catholics leave the Church at or before the end of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass?

It certainly is a strange thing that so many Catholics who are sufficiently true to their religion to hear Mass every Sunday, find it necessary to rush out of church immediately after the last Gospel and before the brief prayers following the last Gospel are said—these brief prayers being offered by force of a Papal Decree for Holy Church and all the faithful.

Prayers with such noble and universal intentions, and in which it takes not more than two minutes to join, would certainly seem valuable and beautiful enough to make any Catholic feel that it is not only a duty but a privilege and a joy to hear them and to respond to them. And yet not a few worshippers at every Low Mass on every Sunday will hasten to rise and run out before these prayers are offered. Why? What excuse is there for their hurry? None, the world, and rarely does one find sufficient respect paid the celebration of the Mass by the congregation to stand quietly and permit him to leave the sanctuary before the noisy rush to the exits begins.

It is not so much a want of faith as a want of thought that is responsible for this unbecoming conduct in the House of God. Think it over and mend your practice.

Art and Science in Toys

While the making of toys is an art that is practically, as old as the world itself, it has been only within recent years that science has bothered itself about them. Less than half a century ago they were regarded merely as playthings—amusing diversions for children that were by no means necessary to their well-being. Today, however, science is that there is a well-defined philosophy underlying the use of toys; that they are the tool with which the little ones ply their trade; the paraphernalia necessary to the proper conduct of their society—that dolls, for example, are more to them than the associates that help to entertain them, in that they aid them in the attainment of their mental growth by stimulating the natural emotions which must be experienced in later life.

Whether this theory of the scientists is correct or not, the fact remains that children have always had the playthings requisite for their imitations of the domestic life and business affairs of older people; that they have always required their elders to provide them with such inventions and that, when they could not obtain these toys by any other means they themselves have sought and found objects that might be made to suit their purposes. Even the Middle Ages did not put an end to their pastimes. The toys in which they found diversion may have been more simple, but as they met the demands of nature they played their allotted part in the scheme of human development.

One sometimes wonders what particular devilry a liar would find in were he deprived of his tongue.

One sometimes wonders what particular devilry a liar would find in were he deprived of his tongue.

Doing Good Badly

Beneath a bluff exterior he hid a kindly heart. How often have we seen this statement about some well-known man of business, some banker, some employer of thousands?

But why, if he possessed so kind a heart, did he disguise and even nullify his charitable tendencies by doing his good badly? Why, if he sought to bring happiness to his fellow-men, did he do it in a manner that he should be proud of? Why should he continually cancel out his own achievements? If so, why interest himself in doing good at all?

To a hungry man a seven-course dinner paid for with a small brings much less pleasure than a small gift with a smile. Only a quick in the brain permits a man to enjoy the commission of a kindly act when he knows that his manner and his attitude bring disappointment and humiliation to the person he is trying to befriend.

Life is not long. We do not all get many opportunities to do material good to others. Why, if a man is impelled to courtesy and kindness, should he not so frame it that the beneficiary will get the fullest possible measure of happiness from it?

Lloyd George

Master Of Men

When Mr. Andrew Bonar Law reappraised in the Commons to give his benediction to Irish freedom and Lord Birkenhead replied to Lord Carson in the Lords, there must have been many a Die-hard who thought that Old England had gone mad.

For Bonar Law and Birkenhead as defenders of an Irish settlement represent one of the strangest developments in British political annals. One has but to glance back to the bitter days of 1913, when Redmond, Asquith and Lloyd George were battling for Home Rule, to realize the depth of the change. Mr. Bonar Law and Lord Birkenhead were then in the forefront of the anti-Home Rule battle. Mr. Law, leader of the Unionist Opposition, openly preached physical resistance; Lord Birkenhead, then Mr. F. E. Smith, was the most virulent of the advocates of Ulster. Sir Edward Carson, chief lieutenant, known as "Gallagher" Smith, was one of the authors of the Ulster Covenant, a soldier in the Northern Volunteers raised to resist Home Rule to the death.

And now, eight years later, what a change! Mr. Law, older in years and experience, rises in the Commons to give his sanction to an Irish Bill ten times more drastic than that which he formerly opposed; and Lord Birkenhead, in the Lords, repudiates his old Ulster chief. Not even Mr. Gladstone, who from being the rising hope of the Tories became a prophet of Liberalism, or Mr. Chamberlain, who, from being the darling of the Radicals became a pillar of Unionism, afforded an example of such a profound change.

Nor is that all. Ten years ago names to conjure with in the resistance of Ulster were those of George Carson and Austen Chamberlain. Today, Mr. Chamberlain, now leading the party which his father founded—a party reared upon resistance to Home Rule—defends an Irish settlement in the Commons; and Lord Carson brilliantly champions the Unionist cause.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH CONSTIPATION

If you have suffered from constipation for years, tried all kinds of remedies without getting relief, if you have been subject to all the misery associated with constipation, wouldn't you consider it a blessing to be able to keep the bowels in a good healthy condition and prevent disease getting a foothold on your system?

WATERBURY'S

are indicated just for this purpose; these regular and relieving the worst cases of constipation.

What is the explanation of the change? First of all, perhaps, the war, which tore many old beliefs and prejudices from their moorings, and to some extent the patriotism which at all times and in all countries has caused statesmen to put country before party, but largely too, and perhaps the greatest factor of all, the power and the persuasive personality of David Lloyd George. Mr. George accomplished what most observers thought impossible; he took the Irish question out of politics which had been its Nemesis since the days of Gladstone, and won all parties to its support. It was a task for a superman, a task for a man of genius in the management of men and affairs, a task perhaps which no one man in the British Empire outside of Lloyd George himself could have achieved.

And tomorrow, should Ireland ratify the Treaty of Peace, the Empire and the world will hail Lloyd George as the mightiest figure of his time. The war was the sepulchre of great reputations. Clemenceau, Orlando, Wilson, Asquith—all have crossed the stage and disappeared. But while other leaders have vanished the "Little Napoleon" of Wales bestrides his time as a political Colossus, marching from triumph to triumph, riding the tempest, confuting his foes, and now crowning a dazzling career by the finest victory of all.

Well may the Empire doff its hat to David Lloyd George as the man who "weathered the storm."

Subscribers, Attention

We must call the particular attention of our Subscribers to the fact that the end of the year is close at hand, and that the time for remitting Subscriptions is fast slipping away. Very little attention has been given to this most important phase of our business of late. But the outlay, always heavy at this season, has not lessened. In view of these considerations, we most earnestly request all Subscribers who have not already paid to be so kind as to attend to this matter with as little delay as possible.

Important Announcement

At this particular season many industrial works of one kind or another close down for a space, in order to afford an opportunity to make needed repairs, to introduce improvements, and for other reasons. In accordance with this view, The Herald Publishing Company has decided to suspend active operations for some weeks; consequently, The Herald will not be published next week, nor until such time as the plans we have in view are brought to fruition. We have had this in mind for some time, and the present seems to afford an opportune moment for taking the step.

It has been evident for a while that several things in connection with our business required more time and attention than could be given them while going on with our usual work, and the only solution of the problem was to suspend publication for a space. We hope, as soon as possible, to start up again with such improvements that we will be able to do larger business and render better service to our patrons. The improvements we have in contemplation cannot be effected without the expenditure of considerable sums of money; consequently one of the very first things to be done is to collect amounts outstanding. We must, therefore, ask any of our friends who have not paid their subscriptions to the end of this year to kindly regard this announcement as an urgent request to remit, with as little delay as possible, amounts due for subscriptions.

Publication will be resumed just as soon as the necessary adjustments, improvements and collections have been effected, and we ask our friends to assist us by promptly remitting amounts due. Our earnest hope is to resume publication at the earliest possible date, and to effect such improvements in the meantime, financially, mechanically and otherwise, as will be a guarantee of bigger and better business in the future.

St. Louis Star: As 1914 will go down in history as the year of the start of the Great War, perhaps will 1921 go down as the year of the start of the great peace. Nineteen twenty-two dawned with the nations of the world in more suspicious relationship than ever before in the era of the written annals of man. Sporadic warfare is progressing on the Mediterranean littoral and in the Balkan area, but as a whole the earth is resting from war and talking out of future wars, but of means of preventing them.

Canada Well Off

In a statement handed out on December 21st, Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, reviews the financial condition of Canada. He reports that business conditions slowly but surely improved during the last year, and declares that Canadians may well look forward to the future with confidence. The statement is as follows: "Notwithstanding a year of falling values and business difficulties the finances of the country have been wonderfully maintained. The revenue, exclusive of railways—the real consolidated fund revenue—instead of falling, as of December 1, has actually increased. The following statement shows the amount of this revenue set out for the eight months' period, i.e., down to December 1, for the past eight years:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Revenue. 1914 $ 81,407,910.05, 1915 $ 92,094,583.06, 1916 $ 127,740,735.58, 1917 $ 149,888,100.26, 1918 $ 167,015,849.54, 1919 $ 188,218,375.28, 1920 $ 264,978,586.91, 1921 $ 265,721,311.03

"The significance of this result is the greater when it is realized that in the current year in this period only $88,608,628 has been collected by customs as against $124,376,063 in 1920, a drop of $55,767,435. This deficiency has been more than made up in income tax collections, which amounted to $70,583,948.

"The amount raised by direct taxation through the income tax and business profits tax for the period was $83,574,403, as against $28,804,649 for the corresponding period last year. Notwithstanding the cancellation of the so-called luxury taxes, and the great drop in business, inland revenue special taxes, largely owing to the sale of the assets of the late last session, show an increase, the figures being for the period $49,587,620, as against $48,967,363 last year. The effect of the radically increased duties in spirits is shown by the returns of the Excise Department. Notwithstanding that only a fraction of the business was carried on, the country's excise revenues were nevertheless $25,870,331 for the period as against $26,072,771, the corresponding figure for 1920. In 1920 the duties had been increased. Under the old scale in 1913, with liquor freely selling over the whole country, the revenue collected was but $13,620,531. The total expenditures of the year amounted to $297,598,017. This included $10,378,503 on capital account, $62,643,214 for non-active investments (railways) a total of $73,021,717. The expenditure also included $106,511,826 for interest, $21,820,062 for pensions, and $9,988,306 for soldiers' civil establishments, a total of $138,321,185. The increased cost of administration, owing to the war and the railways, is very apparent.

"The actual increase of the debt for these eight months amounts to but $24,828,032, including capital and railway payments. Were these payments regarded as contributing investments, and old practices as to capital continued, the result of the eight months' operations would be a surplus of $46,138,685 over and above all expenditure, including war obligations. Business conditions have slowly but surely improved through the year. November was better than May, and December better than November. Orders are increasing, and the great shrinking of inventories in many lines completed and digested. The returns from the sales tax will improve, and the loss in customs revenue, as compared with the corresponding period last year, either altogether cease, or become very much less. In the ten day period ended May 10 the drop in customs revenue was $5,157,297; in the 10 day period ended June 20, $4,172,143; in the 10 day period ended July 10, $3,817,461. As against these very large decreases in the 10 days ended November 30 the drop in the customs revenue was but $397,728; in the 10 days ended December 10, $886,675, and the 10 days ended December 20, $214,736. Given courageous administration, a recognition of the superior condition of the country as compared with others, of its possibilities and advantages, of the necessity of work and development, Canadians can well look to the future with confidence.

King's County Returns

Thursday last, December 22nd, was Declaration Day for King's County. The Returning Officer opened his Court at Georgetown at 11 o'clock; opened the ballot boxes and added up the totals for each poll. He then made his declaration. The totals by polls are as follows:

How Lloyd George Does It

Take the case of the Prime Minister, Lloyd George. No man is more careful of himself. He sips a single glass of burgundy at dinner for the obvious reason that he enjoys it, and not because it might stimulate his activities. He has given up the use of tobacco. Bellingbrooke as a master of manoeuvres would have had a poor chance against him. For Bellingbrooke lost his nerve in final disaster, whereas the Prime Minister would always be trusted to have all his wits and courage about him. Mr. Lloyd George is regarded as a man riding the storm of politics with nerves to drive him on. No view could be more untrue. In the very worst days of the war, in 1916, he could be discovered at the War Office taking his ten minutes nap with his feet up on a chair and discarded newspapers lying like debris of a battlefield about him. It would be charitable to suppose that he had fallen asleep before he had read his newspapers. He even takes his golf in very moderate doses. We are often told that he needs a prolonged holiday, but somewhere in his youth he finds inexhaustible reserves of power which he conserves into his middle age. In this way he has found the secret of his temporary Empire. It is for this reason that the man in command is never too busy to see a caller who has the urgency of vital business at his back. The Premier of the Conservative Party, Mr. Bonar Law, however-much he may differ from the Premier in many aspects of his temperament, also finds the foundation of his judgment, in exercise and caution. As a player of games he is rather poor, but makes up in enthusiasm for tennis what he lacks in skill. His habits are almost ascetic in their rigor. He drinks nothing, and the finest dinner a cook ever conceived would be wasted on him. A single course of the plainest food suffices his appetite, and he grows manifestly uneasy when faced with a long meal. His pipe, his one relaxation never far absent, seems to draw him with magnetic attraction. As it was, his physical resources stood perhaps the greatest strain that has been imposed on any public man in our time. From the moment when he joined the first Coalition Government in 1915 to the day when he left his office in 1921, he was beset by cares and immersed in labors which would have overwhelmed almost any other man. Neither this nor the succeeding Coalition Government were popular with a great section of his Conservative followers, and to the task of taking decisions on the war was added the constant and irritating necessity of keeping his own supporters in line with the administration. In 1916 he had to take the vital decision which displaced Mr. A. Quinn in favor of Mr. Lloyd George, and during the latter's premiership he had to enter the strain of constantly accommodating himself out of a feeling of personal loyalty, to methods which were not congenial to his own nature. In the face of all these stresses he never would take a holiday, and nothing except the rigid moderation of his life enabled him to keep the cool penetration of his judgment intact and his physical vigor going during those six terrible years. The Lord Chancellor, Lord Birkenhead (F. E. Smith), might appear to be an exception to the rule. This is very far from being the case. It is true that his temperament knows no mean either in work or play. One of the most successful speakers he ever delivered in the House of Commons was the fruit of a day of violent exercises, followed by a night of preparation, with a wet towel around his head. And yet he appeared perfectly fresh; he has the priceless asset of the most marvellous constitution in the British Empire. Kipling's poem on France suggests an adaptation to describe the Lord Chancellor: "Furious in luxury, merciless in toil, terrible with strength renewed from a tireless soul. No man has spent himself more freely in the hunting-field or works harder today at games. Yet, with all this tendency to be extreme of work and play, he is a man of iron resolution and determined self-control. Although the most formidable enemy of the Puseyfooters and the most powerful protector of freedom in the social habits of the people that the Cabinet contains, he is, like Mr. Bonar Law, a teetotaler. It is this capacity for governing himself which is pointing upwards to still greater heights of power.

We Wish All Our Friends A Happy New Year.

The sleighing in the city at Christmas was pretty good; but the country roads presented many obstructions.

Christmas falling on Sunday, the civil observance of the day was transferred to Monday, which was a public holiday.

The man who thinks that he is always right does more harm than the one who is willing to admit that he is sometimes in the wrong.

The Christmas market on Friday, 23rd, was quite largely attended and Christmas prices were well sustained. There was also a market on Saturday, 24th; but the attendance did not materialize to any extent.

Detective Cotter, of the narcotic squad, New York, recently found that his disguises availed him naught, because drug vendors always spotted him by two gold teeth. Cotter had them extracted. Next day he arrested his first man in three weeks.

Postmaster Morgan announced that the New York post office on the 22nd had broken holiday records when it handled 7,915,254 letters and 559,536 parcels. The postmaster had recruited 2,500 temporary clerks to aid the regular staff of 15,000.

The proposal to convoke a European economic conference for the purpose of discussing means to reconstitute the economic system of European nations will come up before the approaching meeting of the Supreme Council at Cannes, according to Paris advices of the 22nd.

According to Geneva advices, Switzerland is the only country in the world where the United States dollar on December 21st was below par. The dollar was quoted at five francs 12 centimes on the Geneva Bourse. The normal rate before the war was five francs 15 centimes. The highest rate after the armistice was signed was five francs 99 centimes.

More than 10,000 people in Boston who invested money with Charles Ponzi last year on his promise of 50 per cent returns in 45 days will receive 10 per cent of their original investment in time for Christmas. The trustees appointed after Ponzi's postal scheme collapsed and he was sent to jail for five years, mailed checks for $344,244 to the investors on December 21st. This is the first dividend distributed by the trustees, who said that others would follow as soon as legal difficulties surrounding the collection of assets were cleared up. The largest check mailed was for $2,035, and the smallest for 29 cents.

The religious observance of the great Feast of Christmas was well carried out in St. Dunstan's Cathedral in this city. Solemn Pontifical Mass was celebrated at midnight, his Lordship Bishop O'Leary officiating. His Lordship was assisted in the Solemn Ceremonies of the Mass by Rev. Maurice McDonald as high priest; Revs. Lawrence Smith and Chas. McDonald as deacons of honor; Rev. R. St. John deacon of office; Rev. James Rooney sub-deacon of office, and Rev. William Monaghan as master of ceremonies. The Sanctuary and High Altar were beautifully adorned with colored lights, etc., and the grand edifice presented a beautiful appearance. An immense congregation attended. The sermon was preached by Rev. R. St. John. Immediately after the High Mass, his Lordship said his two additional Low Masses. The regular morning Masses in the Cathedral were as on Sundays. In the interval, the priests said their additional Mass allowed them on this great feast. In the evening his Lordship, the Bishop, again officiated at Solemn Pontifical Vespers and Benediction, assisted as of heretofore, in the basement Church the usual Christmas crib, suitably adorned, was erected.

Now the Prices you've been waiting for are here

The old year took away, for ever, we hope, the old burden of war prices. For months conditions have been working toward the great climax that brought the remarkable merchandise that is here assembled for this our greatest January Carnival of Economy.

The results came in two ways: 1st. The drastic lowering of prices on our own stocks, down to the new low basis, and often far below it—to double your interest in January buying in our store.

2nd. We have combed the markets—taking utmost advantage of the opportunities created by far sighted manufacturers who were ready to cooperate with us in presenting to you now the lowest prices that will be possible, for the next six months, at least.

We can just see the delight of our Customers when they see the splendid assortment of goods, in every department of our store, and then realize that prices are away down to the bottom, where it is a pleasure to buy things.

Many Manufacturers have ACCEPTED LARGE LOSSES. We shall forgo a large part of our profits on the new goods and accept large losses on our own mark-downs—to inaugurate this first New Year under the New Management and

THE MOST STIRRING PRICE-UPSET THAT THIS COMMUNITY HAS EVER KNOWN.

No matter what you need or desire, now is the best time for months to come to buy it. Some of the reasons are told on this page; but scores of others are here that can get no mention today, even in this broad space.

The First Christmas

And now the earth at last was still, The world so full of war...

Mr. Kinsella's Failure.

(Concluded) That night he did not sleep. He was busy with a thousand thoughts...

Pains in the Back

is symptoms of a weak, torpid or great condition of the kidneys...

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It was taken in with kidney trouble, and came so weak I could scarcely get around...

Mr. Kinsella said that he was not tired; but he said so rather sadly...

'Take us with you!' clamored the boys.

'Let's go! It is our turn! pleaded the little girls.

'Well, well! Get your hats, and you may all go.'

'This is your place, here beside me, father. I wasn't going to allow them to take you away from us this very first day,' she said...

'I was a little afraid you wouldn't want me, Susie. I was afraid I'd be a trouble,' he said, lamely.

'A trouble! Why, father! she cried, in amazed reproach.

Then the boys began to point out to their grandfather such pieces of interest as the parish church, a row of houses which their father owned, the baseball ground, and by this time they had reached the heart of the city.

Soon Mr. Swartzlander stopped the car before a large store, and leaning over the back of his seat, he said to Mr. Kinsella:

'Father, I want you to look well at the outside of our place before we go in; and, first of all, I want you to notice our new sign. It was put up only a few days ago.'

Mr. Kinsella did look at the handsome gilt-letter sign over the main entrance; and the sign read, 'Swartzlander & Kinsella.'

And then he wept, indeed; for the last wound in his old heart was forever healed.

Dad and The Bible

Who was Samson, Dad?

This is the question Dusty asked his dad just as the evening meal had almost come to an end.

An American admiral, son. I don't mean him. This man was a strong man or some thing.

Oh, yes. He was—let me see? A funny thing the tricks my memory is beginning to play on me. Samson? Well, now, can you beat that?

Ma hastily came to her husband's assistance and briefly informed the son that Samson was a strong man who killed a lion, fought bravely in his country's wars and pulled down a huge building.

Did he work for the movies, too, Maw?

Oh, no, you silly boy. He is a biblical character and lived many years ago.

Mr. Kinsella never knew; but soon they drove under an arched stone gateway and through beautiful grounds to a house far finer than any Mr. Kinsella had ever seen.

Mr. Kinsella had ever seen. After a breakfast which he was too happy to eat, the boys took their grandfather to see their dogs, and the little girls showed their rabbits and their birds.

And his daughter led him to the drawing-room and proudly displayed a picture which her husband had given her but a short time before. The old man

A SEVERE COLD

THE LIKE SHE NEVER HAD

Our advice to you is, never neglect what at first appears to be but a slight cold.

You think you are strong enough to shake it off, but colds are not so easily fought off in this northern climate, and if they are not attended to at once they may, sooner or later, develop into some more serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Edward Kincaide, 60 Bryden St., St. John, N. B., writes:—'I wish to express my hearty thanks to your valuable remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and what good it did me.'

Last fall I contracted a serious cold, the like I never had. My head and nostrils were so clogged up I could get no rest, and could scarcely get my breath.

I tried remedy after remedy until at last I tried I would try "Dr. Wood's." After the first dose I felt relief, and by the time the bottle was finished I was better. I wish to extend my thanks to your valuable remedy. After this I will always keep a bottle in the house.'

Ah, here you are, said Dad. It is all coming back to me now. Guess I will have to read up a little on the Bible for a review.

How easily you forget things! Been reading these cheap magazines so much that they have crowded out the useful information. I'll just go for that holy book now.

Presently he returned with a copy of the Bible that had been resting under some other books in another room. Maw reached for a duster and handed it to him.

Smells a little musty, too, said Dad, taking the duster and clumsily wiping off the dust.

I used to know a great deal about this book once. After this I intend to read it at regular intervals. Read it out aloud, too. You know it is a regular library in itself and it is most entertaining. Just has all kinds of good matter in it. Exciting things too.

Anything about wars and soldiers and such like? asked Dusty. Yes, indeed. And in it there is a section called the Book of Tobias, where there is a great deal of information about the direction of children, which I feel I must read up right away.

You need some of that advice, son. The same book has many things about travel, strange cities, etc.

Good advice to parents, too, said Maw. I like that book of Tobias.

Yes, wars too, said Dad, not meaning the domestic kind of course as Maw first thought. Take the Books of the Maw, see—say there are what you may call generals.

Dad went on turning over the leaves of the book, and as he did so he became more interested and his slight exclamations to himself, as what he saw recalled what he had read there a long time ago. At last he exclaimed: (To be Continued.)

PALPITATION OF THE HEART

WOULD HAVE TO QUIT WORK

Mr. Frank Lutes, 71 Terrace Hill St., Bramford, Ont., writes:—'I have been troubled with palpitation of the heart for a number of years, and by spells it would bother me a lot. The doctor told me it would stop on me sometimes if I did not get out tobacco. When I would get a spell my heart would pound and I would break out in a perspiration, and get so weak I would have to sit right down and quit my work; also in the night I would wake up and my heart would be going, I should say, about one hundred and twenty beats a minute. About three years ago I got a box of

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS took them and found they did the job, and I am feeling fine and have gained over twenty pounds in weight.'
