Don't Cough Your Throat Sore "Nerviline" Will Cure You Quickly

The Annoyance of a Bad Cough Soothed Away in One Day.

Nothing so bad for the throat as coughing, and nothing half so annoying as to have some one near by that is hacking, sneezing, or constantly clearing the throat.

Rub on Nerviline—it will save you all further pain and distress. Even one good rub with this soothing, penetrating remedy will bring the finest relief, will take out that rasping soreness, will stop that irritating tickle that makes you want to cough so much.

Nerviline isn't something new. It is a record of forty years of wonderful success behind it.

In rubbing on Nerviline you use something safe, reliable, and sure to cure. Its action is marvellous. The way it sinks in through the tissues—the way it penetrates to the seat of the congestion is really a wonder.

For chronic colds, coughs, or sore throat you can't beat this trusty old family remedy. Its name spells cure for any sort of pain in the joints or muscles. Try it for rheumatism, rub it on for sciatica or lumbago, test it out for neuralgia or headache—in every case you'll find amazing virtue and curative power in Nerviline.

Most families keep the large 50c. bottle always handy on the shelf; trial size 25c., at all dealers in medicine.

TRUE LOVE'S PASSION.

CHAPTER IV.

In Love With a Face.

THE owner of the voice which Norah had heard, under such peculiar and mysterious circumstances, felt his way down the steps to the lower terrace and from thence to the lawn, and there almost stumbled over a young man who was sitting on a bank with his knees clasped in his hands.

"Hallo, what the deuce—" ejaculated in a low voice the one who had stumbled; then, as he spoke, the moon cleared and he stopped short and stared at his companion. "Why, it's you, Jack!" he exclaimed, in amazement. "Where on earth did you come from?"

His companion, a fair young fellow, with a face of a somewhat dreamy and absent expression, heightened by spectacles, looked up and retorted, slowly:

"Where on earth did you think I'd come from?"

His friend stared at him, then laughed shortly. It was a pleasant laugh, that matched the voice and the face, which was strikingly handsome and manly.

"Why, you were up there just now!" he said, pointing to the upper terrace. "Was it?" said Jack. "Then I was quite unaware of it. My dear Cyril, I have never left this bank. I know a bank," he murmured.

"Do you mean to say you were not up there?" interrupted Cyril, incredulously. "Why, man, I heard you!"

"Did you? Extraordinary! I give you my word I haven't opened my lips."

"What!" exclaimed Cyril. "Oh, come now, Jack, you are playing it a little too low down. I tell you I heard you quoting that line about the moon from Romeo and Juliet!"

The other turned his spectacles up to the handsome face with slow and profound surprise.

"Upon my word, Cyril, this business, or the moon, has been too much for you. I quoted Shakespeare! My dear fellow, I have sat here since you left me, and I haven't opened my lips! In fact, I've sat here long enough to grow a crop of the very finest kind of rheumatism. This midsummer madness of yours is growing serious. For Heaven's sake, let us get away while we've a chance. Spout Shakespeare! why, my dear fellow, I've been in too much of a funk all the time, for every moment I've fancied I heard an 'honest watchdog,' or a keeper or gardener, or something of the kind. Come along!" and he rose and stretched himself.

"But—but if it wasn't you who were up there and spoke, who was it?" demanded Cyril.

"Ask me another," responded his friend with a stifled yawn. "Cyril, you have been star gazing or moon raking until you have lost your senses. Who could be up there? Do you think if any one had been, he would have stopped to talk poetry with you? Not he! He'd have rung the alarm bell, sprung a rattle, or rattled you with a revolver; and that's what will happen to both of us if we don't clear out," and he almost yawned his spectacles off.

Cyril laid his hand upon his friend's shoulder.

"Stop chaffing for a moment, Jack," he said, and at the gravity of his voice the other turned to him with serious surprise. "I tell you that I saw—no, heard some one up on the terrace! I went up there in the dark and was sitting on the top step waiting for the moon to clear, when a voice—yours, as I thought, imitating a woman's—said: 'Swear not by the moon!'—you know the lines. And I answered. I went on talking to you, as I thought, and though I got no reply, I fancied you were too frightened to carry on a conversation in such dangerous nearness to the house—and—and—" he put his hand to his brow—"Great Heaven," a blush rose to his tanned face, "I—I, thinking you had gone down, uttered some nonsense. No, it was not nonsense; but, Jack, I was not alone! Some one was there! Who was it?"

Quite serious now, his companion shook his head.

Such a Lot o' Strangers in This Here Town. By Dorgan

"Who's to tell! A woman's voice, you say. Are you sure?"

"Quite sure, now!"

"A housemaid, probably."

Cyril's hand fell from his shoulder, and he uttered an ejaculation of impatience.

"Well, my dear Cyril, it's the only suggestion I can make. 'Why shouldn't a housemaid quote Shakespeare? I tell you she is as likely nowadays to know him as her mistress is.'"

"Bah!" exclaimed Cyril, and he gazed up at the terrace, his face reflecting his surprise and bewilderment. "It was the voice of a lady."

"Thanks; you said just now you thought it was mine."

"I said—" retorted Cyril, then with a stifled sigh he allowed his companion to draw him away.

Keeping in the shadow of the shrubbery, they made their way through the ornamental grounds, crossed the park and reached the village, and stopped at The Chequers, as the inn was called. Inn is rather a dignified name for the little place, which was a rambling cottage owned by a widow of a former Court servant, who let two or three of the rooms as lodgings, and sold beer, candles, tobacco, and peg-tops, and other articles too numerous to mention, in one end of the tiny place.

The two young men entered the sitting-room, and Jack turned up the paraffin lamp, while Cyril dropped into a chair and stared thoughtfully into vacancy.

Jack got a pipe from the mantelshelf and lit it; then, adjusting his spectacles, gazed reflectively at his rousing companion.

Now that they were in the light one could see the contrast between the two men. The one, Cyril Burne, was tall and straight, strong-limbed, with the peculiar bearing of a man who has gone in for athletics, and with a face that was not only handsome, but possessed of that winsome ease and grace which one is accustomed to associate with good birth and high training. His hands were small, yet strong-looking; his clothes sat upon him in the fashion which brings delight to the heart of the tailor, and there was an air of command about the dark eyes and clean-cut mouth, noticeable even when, as now, he was in repose.

The other, Jack Wesley, was of a more commonplace type. He was rather awkward in appearance, with bent shoulders, and there was that look about him which belongs to the brain-worker. It was a good-natured, shrewd face, though the eyes behind the spectacles had acquired something of a cynical expression.

These two young men were fast friends. Jack thought Cyril the perfection of manhood, and admired him for all the qualities which he (Jack) lacked; and Cyril regarded his friend as a genius unrecognized as yet by the world, but as one whose light would shine out brightly some day.

And yet as Jack regarded his silent companion there was a certain curious questioning expression in his eyes.

"I am reluctant to disturb your meditations, on which no doubt the fate of nations depends," he said in his slow, good-naturedly cynical tone, "but my more material nature is craving for a whisky and soda, and the cupboard is immediately behind you."

Cyril Burne started slightly and wheeled his chair aside, then got up and began pacing the room with quick and restless steps.

Jack Wesley mixed, a couple of drinks with deliberate precision.

"Walk up, walk up!" he murmured, "the lion is now about to be fed—or rather drunk. I wonder how much Mrs. Brown, the landlady, will charge for the carpet, perhaps if you'd take a 'lap' round the other side of the table—"

Thus adjured, Cyril stopped short, and taking up his glass, seated himself on the table.

"That's better," remarked Jack Wesley, dropping into the chair; "now we can talk—that is, if you can tear your mind away from the romantic episode of the mysterious voice on the terrace; and I should like just to ask you, my dear Cyril, what you intend to do?"

Cyril flashed his dark eyes on him, still rather absent.

"What I intend to do?"

"Exactly," said Jack, puffing at his pipe and nursing his knee, a favorite trick of his. "When a week ago you came into—burst into would be the more exact expression—my chambers with the proposal that I should accompany you on a trip to Santleigh, County Berks, you asserted, in response to my question 'Why?' that you wanted to make some sketches for the new picture which is one day to startle the artistic world, and blazon your name on the head roll of Fame. You also remarked that it would be a capital chance for my getting a few rustic ideas for a poem, a novel, or a play. Is not that so?"

Cyril nodded with a half-smile.

"In a weak moment, a very weak moment, I consented. I may remark that I always do consent to your proposals, and that I never fail to rue my weakness. This instance is no exception to the general rule. We have been in this secluded spot two whole days. Your sketches are represented by that insane outline of a tree," he pointed his pipe at a canvas on an easel, "and my rustic ideas have not yet suggested themselves. 'Instead of which,' as the magistrate observed, we have perpetrated a sample of mad trespassing which ought to have landed us in the village quod, or obtained for us a charge of shot or a revolver bullet apiece. I like adventures—for other persons; as for me, writing about 'em is good enough; and I beg to state that I politely, but emphatically, refuse to accompany you in any further exploit, whether it take the shape of prowling like burglars at midnight about a noble mansion, or breaking into a church. And I would also like to ask, when are you going to return to town?"

Cyril Burne laughed slowly again.

"Jack, if you'd been born dumb you'd have been as nearly perfect as a man could be," he said.

"Thanks for your kind appreciation, but allow me to remark that that is not an answer to my question. Please—I ask it as a special favor—don't begin to prance up and down again!" For Cyril had got off the table, and threatened to resume his restless pacing. He desisted, however, and went and leaned up against the mantelshelf, and looked down at the spectacled face with a curious expression, half-sad, half-wistful.

"Jack," he said, and there was a certain gravity in his deep, musical voice, "you are the only friend I have in the world, and sometimes I am sorely tempted to tell you, to confide in—" He stopped, and Jack Wesley regarded him seriously.

"Never give way to temptation, Cyril," he said, succinctly.

"And yet I have vowed to keep my secret."

"The fool makes a vow, the wise man keeps it," murmured Jack.

"Did it ever occur to you, Jack, that though you and I have been close friends for nearly a twelve month, you know as little about me as you did the night we met. You remember? The night you found me sauntering over Waterloo Bridge and looking at the water?"

"Yes, I remember," assented Wesley.

"I was without a penny, with the key of the street," his voice softened, and he leaned forward, and laid his hand on the other man's shoulder.

A Swiss Hero to the Belgians

Under the title of "The Belgian Army in the Field," the Swiss Military Review has published, in its numbers of June and July, 1916, a study which proves clearly the high esteem, the admiration even, that the Swiss military classes entertain towards the valiant little Belgian army. In the first part of his work, the author, Lieutenant Van Erde, sets forth what was the Belgian army at the time of its mobilization and what was its effective action during the course of the European conflict. The second part is more especially devoted to the psychology of the Belgian soldier.

"What as far as was believed, could have been expected from the Belgian army before the war of 1914-1917?"

"Not very much? That was the general impression. That was, even more so, the impression of the German military party. The latter valued at no more than a mere trifle the assistance of Belgium, such a deduction is clearly evident from their plans and the means of execution they adopted. The actual events have proved more than demonstrated that, in this occurrence, they had made a singular mistake."

The Belgian army, too weak from a numerical point of view—product of a country over-confident in the treaty of 1839 and generally averse to military charges—could not constitute for Belgium, so much exposed, a very satisfactory defence. No one could in any way place much reliance upon it.

"Nevertheless, in the course of the present war, the part played by the Belgian army has been considerable." The German plan, as the author explains, was as follows: To cross over

A Swiss Homage to the Belgian Army.

Under the title of "The Belgian Army in the Field," the Swiss Military Review has published, in its numbers of June and July, 1916, a study which proves clearly the high esteem, the admiration even, that the Swiss military classes entertain towards the valiant little Belgian army. In the first part of his work, the author, Lieutenant Van Erde, sets forth what was the Belgian army at the time of its mobilization and what was its effective action during the course of the European conflict. The second part is more especially devoted to the psychology of the Belgian soldier.

"What as far as was believed, could have been expected from the Belgian army before the war of 1914-18?"

"Not very much? That was the general impression. That was, even here, so the impression of the German military party. The latter valued it at no more than a mere trifle of assistance of Belgium, such a deduction is clearly evident from their means of execution they expected. The actual events have shown that demonstrated that, in this instance, they had made a singular mistake."

The Belgian army, too weak from a numerical point of view—product of country over-confident in the treaty pledges and generally averse to military charges—could not constitute for Belgium, so much exposed, a very satisfactory defence. No one could in any way place much reliance upon it. Nevertheless, in the course of the present war, the part played by the Belgian army has been considerable. The German plan, as the author explains, was as follows: To cross over

Belgium as a waterspout, fall upon France while the latter was calling its troops into active service, crush its first defence forces and occupy all the north and even Paris in superior numbers; then, France being thus overcome and muzzled, they would only have to run into Russia, too slow to mobilize its armies and which could be defeated by a series of successive routs.

A plan of Napoleon style, very simple, even too simple at that, since the slightest hitch could overset it completely.

Such a hitch some one gave it. "Belgium's armed intervention was the sandgrain which broke down this whole system of wheel-work so nicely organized."

The author then goes on to describe the heroic resistance of Liege against which the enormous wave of the German onslaught broke itself; the part played by Namur, then by Antwerp, and finally he comes to the battle of the Yser.

"Behind this small Flemish river, the Belgian army, whose original forces had been reduced almost by half, extenuated by this long struggle, by its retreating in uninterrupted marches, poor in arms and provisions as well as in men, sustained the full brunt of Prince of Wurtemberg's formidable army. During twelve whole days, the German troops developed every effort in their power to crush down or break through the obstacle."

"The Belgians did stand. They were very near giving away. Their energy and their obstinacy permitted them to hold on to positions which were believed to be lost. And when the first battle of the Yser was completed in front of the Flemish plains flooded over by the Belgian engineers, King Albert's army had insured the struggle's definite form. It was to be, hereafter, the immobility of the wings whose extremity rested upon the sea itself."

In the second part of his work, the author examines the organization of the Belgian army, as it was at the beginning of the war, when it was passing through a stage of transformation, and the modifications it has undergone during the course of the campaign.

"In short, says he, the crisis of the Belgian army, in 1914, unravelled itself in the midst of the cataclysm. One cannot but wonder and admire, from an exclusively objective and military point of view, how Belgium has been able, in full war times, starting from what was rightly called the phantom army, to constitute such an army as Lord Northcliffe qualified, in a recent writing of his as "a perfect army."

Lieutenant Van Erde then makes a psychological study of the Belgian soldier of whom he gives a glaring description.

"The Belgian soldier is brave. He is brave, for he has that energetic, voluntary, headstrong courage which lasts and overcomes. Habitually, he has not the spirit, the overflowing enthusiasm, the 'storming folly.' However, in the course of the present campaign, the Belgian companies have more than once rushed forward to the attack with such ardor that positions were carried, even against all the staff's expectations."

A typical example of this impetuosity of King Albert's troops was given, says the author, by a mixed brigade of the 1st D. A. at the battle of Haelen, which he describes in a few touches.

"However," does he add, "it is rather the courage, quiet, calm, self-possessed, decided and immovable that more particularly characterizes the Belgian trooper. The whole campaign has been but one single act of bravery, stubborn and voluntary, either in the marches forward, or in the retreating, or again in holding out. The Belgian soldier who has received the order to hold out and to remain at any place, where so ever it may be, holds out, whatever may happen, until the order to retreat."

"This trooper, courageous and energetic, has physical qualities well adapted to his moral ones. Generally, rather clumsy for mobilization, he has an endurance beyond every test. He can stand with amazing resistance cold as well as heat, rain and snow, just as the sun's ardent rays. He has a considerable working capacity and his production is enormous. He has shown, more especially during the first battle of the Yser a wonderful persistency in maintaining his strength and will throughout privations of every kind and in spite of a total absence of rest. There, it was found necessary to call upon troops known to be decimated, reduced, believed to be incapable of any action, broken down, absolutely drained, from these troops it was necessary to demand an effort which brought worldwide admiration and which amazed even those who had asked it."

None shall ever know what amount of individual abnegation was required for that admirable resistance on the Yser during which the six Belgian divisions were all employed, almost without respite, during the first eleven days of the German push. As early as the third day the leaders thought it no longer possible to maintain their positions; the men were exhausted, and their re-creating was only done at haphazard between bombardments; they slept standing in the holes they used for trenches; they had to be re-located. The staff knew that these men were at the last cast; that they had given all the energy and obstinacy ever believed possible; that, materially, they were played out.

And yet they must hold on—they must.

"And the men exerted themselves, strained themselves, the officers, setting the example. They fought, they placed one another when on guard to keep awake. They continued to struggle, to hold, to resist all attacks, to stand an uninterrupted bombardment, to break the enormous waves of the German sea-let-loose, jostling against their chance positions. And they held! Not only for twenty-four hours more, but during fourteen days! It may be added that from a total effective fighting force of 50,000 men they had lost very near 20,000."

The author concludes that from these few observations (a portion of which only is here reproduced) taken off-hand and rather hastily noted, one impression is set out most clearly. Here it is:

"In the course of the war Belgium has unravelled her military crisis in the most happy way. From this formidable trial her army springs out, reformed, strengthened, regenerated. While accomplishing heroically, admirably its mission, it has been transformed under the direction of a staff worthy of it and of its country, into a perfect modern army."—Vancouver Sun.

Bolcke, Fokker Star.

(By Captain Bolcke, of the German Imperial Flying Corps.)

Captain Bolcke, the Fokker aviator, who has brought down 26 aeroplanes, has given an interview to Mr. Herbert Bayard Swope, of the New York World (reproduced in German newspapers), in which he discusses not only his own methods, but also those of the British airmen, whom he has so often met in aerial combat.

My twentieth victim was Captain Wilson, of the British Royal Flying Corps, attached to a division stationed near Pozieres. Wilson was flying over the German lines when I rose to meet him. I not only contrived to outguess him by divining his intentions, but was also lucky enough to outmanoeuvre and outshoot him. The Englishman dropped to the ground safely, landed with a broken propeller, while I came down in his immediate proximity.

As Wilson surrendered he asked for the name of his captor. "Bolcke," I replied. The chaplain and humiliate of defeat and capture disappeared for a moment, as the Englishman put out his hand. "As I shook it my prisoner said: 'If I had to be shot down, I'm pleased that it should have been by so good a man.'"

Wilson was sent back to Cambrai, and the next day I invited him to lunch at the officers' mess. The captured flyer expressed his appreciation of the exceptional treatment he had received and told of the high regard in which the English held the German flyers. That night he was sent to a German prison camp.

Only two of the twenty enemy airmen I have fought, unfortunately, lived after the fight. They all fought so well I was sorry luck was against them. I think most of the eighteen were killed by bullets from my machine, or died in the fall, a few meeting death in smashing on the ground. One Englishman, Wilson, and one French officer remained alive; the others died for their countries.

As to the comparative merits of the English and French flyers, I have noticed no great difference. Both are courageous and skilful, with perhaps a distinction to be observed in the spirit animating them, the English never lacking the inexplicable spirit of sport, while the French take it fatalistically, with the gravest earnestness. Flying to us is a duty, not a sport, as most Englishmen take it, to our bewilderment.

The London papers have credited me with saying I used to live in America, where I was a liftbody and got my flying experience in that way. I was never in America and never happened to be a liftbody. I lived in Dessau, did some flying just a few months before the war began, liked the work, and when called out went into the flying branch.

I was first an observer, later a pilot, and was shifted, because of my steady eye and sure nerves, into the fighting detachment, in which position I do nothing but fight off enemy aeroplanes—scouting over the lines or so to the relief of my own people attacked on observation duty. I always fly alone. There is an observer's seat in the machine, but he never fills it. In fact, most of the German fighting flyers travel alone to minimize the risk, and by engaging the enemy give the observation machines a chance to get back with their information.

The English say the German fighters and observers almost never cross their own lines but fly over their own troops.

That is not true as regards the observers. They have done much good work over the enemy's forces, but it used to be true in part about the fighters. It was due at first to the fact that there were several parts of our new Fokkers we wanted to keep secret; second, because it was important that we should remain on guard in our own territory to prevent the enemy observers from gaining information.

Of late circumstances changed, and we fly everywhere. Obviously it always is the best tactics to bring your man down behind your own lines so he can be made a prisoner if alive, and his machine kept from the enemy for repair. But each follows a flight through now, no matter where it takes us.

I use no special formula, except to try to get my man before he gets me. Almost all the fighting aeroplanes are similarly rigged, with a machine gun fixed in front of the pilot. Being stationary, it is necessary to bring my gun into position.

I have had five machines smashed under me, but always vol-planned to earth successfully. My favourite machine has the lines of a bird. Even close at hand it looks tiny, being much smaller than the English or French ones.

On the day following my twentieth prize two of my companions were killed trying to stop an English raiding party of eight aeroplanes that flew over the German lines bombarding railroad stations. The fight was at 5.30 in the afternoon, and showed the exceptional courage of the Germans in taking on a fight with such a superior force.

I hope to see you again in happier times. We Germans don't want to fight, but so long as we are forced to, you may be sure we will, and fight so we shall never be beaten. This thought and certainty is in every German's bosom.

Where Bolcke was there were three English prisoners, Lieutenant Ronald Walker, March Rectory, Cambridge; Second Lieutenant Smith, Cemetery-road, York, and Captain H. G. Salmond, Bedford, the last named very slightly wounded. His eyes were saved by the pair of heavy flying goggles, he wore, a bullet cracking the glass but not splintering it. Captain Salmond's observer was in hospital with a bullet through the neck. Salmond said:

"We all of us think the German flyers are very good, and that the chap Bolcke is to be reckoned, but I'm bound to say it's jolly hard to get a fight out of them. We've got to hang over the German lines for hours at a time before we can tempt the Germans to come up and have a go. I had bad luck in being bagged, though I must say my man was game. One of his shots glanced and broke a wing frame. I almost keeled over, but righted and managed to get down without hurting myself much, except for the wound and bruises I got in landing."

St. Margaret's Guild.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The members of St. Margaret's Guild held their annual meeting and election of officers for the ensuing year, last night, in the Canon Wood Hall. The Secretary and Treasurer submitted their reports for the past year, which showed the Guild to be in a highly satisfactory condition.

Rev. C. A. Moulton conducted the election of officers with the following results:—
President—Mrs. F. M. Stirling, re-elected.
Vice-Pres.—Miss E. Ellis, elected.
Secretary—Miss E. Bremner, elected.
Assistant Secretary—Miss E. Wellman, re-elected.
Treasurer—Miss A. Hunt, re-elected.

Committee—Misses G. Edwards, E. Churchill, F. Morris, N. Willis and A. Tessler.

The past year has been the most successful in the history of the Guild. Besides raising large sums of money for church purposes the members have contributed through their efforts 203 pairs of socks, 51 pairs of mitts and 17 rifle covers for our soldiers at the front, and to the various patriotic funds they have forwarded several hundred dollars. The Penny Sociable last week realised the gratifying sum of $410.00.

Rev. C. A. Moulton has been appointed Spiritual Director of the Guild in succession to Rev. W. A. R. Cracknell, now in England.

Your Boys and Girls.

The realization of the extraordinary adaptiveness of the very young child should save parents many an anxious day and sleepless night. There is practically nothing easier than to impress upon the child whatever habits of daily and nightly routine one wishes him to acquire. If he be taken in hand early enough. The only requirements are knowledge of what is good for him and then inviolable regularity in everything which concerns him.

Under this training he will become an obstinate in being good as the opposite so called indulgent or capricious treatment always makes him in being bad. There is no reason why he should be walked with or held, why he should be taken up when he cries, why he should be trotted when he awakes, or why he should have a light at night. Things like these are simply bad habits for which the parents have only themselves to thank. The child adapts himself to his training and it is his treatment that his habits reflect.

VERDUN.

Much water has flowed beneath the bridge at Verdun since the bloody and spectacular struggle for the city came so far as the German offensive is concerned, to an end. Now it is recalled to our minds in a way which does much to efface the memory of the suffering and losses of the heroic defenders during those fateful weeks. In a lightning stroke the French have regained in one day the three months conquests of the Germans. Vaux, Damouville, Douaumont, Thiaumont—they are old acquaintances, we can hardly call them friends. They have passed now, beyond all doubt, forever into the hands of our Ally. It will give Berlin pause in its jubilation over the Roumanian successes. Even the German memory cannot be so short as to have forgotten that Verdun was a great victory, though it did not exactly run according to schedule or lay France altogether prostrate. Yesterday's performance has cost us much of victory; perhaps it was a strategic retreat.

Pages could be written of the meaning of this French come-back. It seems almost fantastic to connect it with affairs in Roumania, but one who thinks it so has not yet fully comprehended the unity of action and continuity of front of the Allies. Its effect may not indeed extend all the way to Roumania, but it will be felt far along the line and is certain to influence the disposition of the enemy troops, which is now so important a matter. That France could so abruptly switch her offensive from the Somme to this distant area, or rather duplicate it there, speaks volumes for the strength of our Western armies and her sweeping success speaks more. Further, it seems to have been completely unanticipated by the enemy. It is an invaluable bag of prisoners has been taken. Meanwhile matters are going none too well for our new Ally, and our troops are falling back on both sides. In Dobruja she is safe as long as she holds Tchernavoda, to which anxious eyes will be turned. Predeal, which Berlin claims to have fallen, is another important place, south of Kronstadt on the railway to Bucharest. But it is to be observed that the Germans are for the moment winning in Roumania by dint of an enormous concentration; they are winning at the expense of Verdun shows how thoroughly the British and French can control the Western front; Italy daily registers gains in the Trentino or the way to Trieste; Russia, if she does not move, is herself immovable; and in Macedonia the Allies are slowly overcoming not so much the Bulgarian as the formidable mountain barriers that block their way. With November nearly here, military commentators are busy forecasting the course of the war during the coming winter. When offensive operations are held up everywhere in the East, as past experience has shown to be almost inevitable, Hindenburg will then probably transfer his divisions once more to the West, when we may look to see the Somme offensive die down. There will thus be a marking-time until spring, and during the interval the last great reason will be forged that will bring Germany to her knees. Germany herself and her allies on the one hand, and British, France and Italy on the other, will obtain a corresponding lease of strength and renewal of preparations, but from Russia's millions will come the tremendous force that must finally overwhelm the enemy. We have seen how wonderfully last winter revived her strength and healed her wounds; much greater will be the effect of the enforced breathing space this year, and when Brusseloff takes the field again in the spring it should be at the head of an army such as the world has never seen and such as will sweep irresistibly through Poland and across the plains of Hungary.

Yesterday we had occasion, not without regret, to say a few words of farewell to the retiring Editor of the "Daily News." Today we have the pleasure in welcoming as his successor Mr. J. S. Currie, M.H.A. Our pleasure is the more genuine in that Mr. Currie is no stranger to the work he takes up and the duties he assumes but already a veteran in the ranks of journalism. We are able to congratulate both himself and his paper upon his deserved promotion. Though he has been entrusted to him a high standard, we have no doubt of its being maintained. A member of our House of Assembly and long attached to the staff of the "Daily News," Mr. Currie is possessed of a knowledge and experience, peculiarly valuable to an editor, and the many readers of our morning contemporary need have no misgivings that the attractive features that have always distinguished it will continue to do so.

Sir Philip Sassoon is private secretary to Sir Douglas Haig. It was known that Sir Philip, who is a Lieutenant in the East Kent Yeomanry, was attached to the headquarters secretarial staff, but no one had any idea that his position was such an important one. The youthful member for Hythe, who was the "Baby of the House" when he entered it in 1912 at the age of 24, is one of the richest men in the army. He inherited a large fortune from his mother who was a Rothschild, and from his father he receives $60,000 a year till he is 30, when, in addition, he will inherit another large fortune.

Series of Assaults and Hold-Ups.

Females Should Keep off the Streets at Night.—A Veritable Epidemic of Blackguardism.—One Scoundrel Routed up and Imprisoned. Some of the baser sort are taking advantage of the new lighting regulations governing the town and females will do well to take timely warning and remain indoors after nightfall. There appears to be a wave of blackguardism over the town and the question suggests itself: "Are we retrograding?" Since the new law was enforced or virtually so, within the course of a week, not less than a dozen cases of hold-up, robbery and assault on the public highways have come under the notice of the authorities. He then did, chased by passers-by, who identified him and last night was arrested under warrant. This morning he was arraigned before Judge Morris and convicted. In passing sentence His Honor remarked as follows: "It has come to my knowledge recently that scamps like you are taking advantage of the darkened condition of the streets since the enforcement of the light regulations, and some young ladies have been molested. In your case it was an unprovoked and most cowardly attack on a young lady, and not only did you attack and assault her by incessantly putting your arms around her, but you then struck her in the face. This was the action of a coward and a blackguard and I intend to teach such as you that the streets of St. John's, either by day or by night, must be free and safe to our women folk. I now sentence you to imprisonment for six months with hard labor without the option of a fine. Last night Thomas Dillon, who states his city, in a notice in a column of this issue, was held up by two unknown men near the section house on the Southside and only escaped by getting refuge at the residence of a stranger. The hold-up by a revolver and daring robbery perpetrated by Thomas O'Connell on you in yesterday's Telegram, is being investigated by the police, who hope to bring the culprit within the law." We would again strongly advise females not to frequent the streets after nightfall.

Marriage of Lieut. I. Heygate and Miss Rennie at Congleton.

St. James' Church, Congleton, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, when the marriage took place of Lieutenant Lancelot Heygate, W.A.F.F., only son of the Rev. Canon and Mrs. A. Heygate, of St. James' Vicarage, Congleton, to Miss Edith Marjorie Rennie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Rennie, of St. John's, Newfoundland. The bridegroom only arrived in England on 8th September last, on leave from Nigeria, where he had been engineering for ten months. His furlough, however, was but of short duration, for on his arrival in England he immediately presented himself for military service. He was offered, and accepted a commission in the West African Volunteer Force, with instructions to proceed to West Africa on the 11th inst, and it was in consequence of this that the wedding was arranged to take place immediately.

Long before the service commenced the church was crowded; the Organist (Mr. R. Head, F.R.C.O.) played the following pieces, before, and during the service:—"Wedding March," (Mendelssohn);—"Fantasy in the National Anthem of the Allies," (Pearce);—"Barcarolle," (Offenbach);—"Tales of Hoffman," (Liszt);—"Bridal Chorus," from Lohengrin (Wagner), was played, (by request).

The service was fully choral, and a pretty scene was witnessed as the bride passed down the aisle, preceded by the Clergy and Choir, who sang the hymn "The voice that breathed o'er Eden." The bride was charmingly attired in a dress of pure white satin and silk net, trimmed with velvet ribbon and silver lace. She wore a tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses, carnations and heather. She also wore a cluster diamond ring, set in platinum (the gift of the bridegroom) and a necklace of aquamarines and pearls (the gift of Canon and Mrs. Heygate, the bridegroom's parents). The bride's maid was Miss Sheelagh Dodd, who was dressed in a dainty frock of white killed net and lace. She wore a wreath of silver leaves on her hair and carried a basket of pink chrysanthemums, and wore a gold brooch set with aquamarines and pearls, the gift of the bridegroom's mother. The bridegroom's mother was attired in a dress of heliotrope crepe-de-chene and nino, trimmed with sable fur and she wore a hat to match. The bride was given away by her cousin, Mr. F. C. Bowring, of "Ferra Nova," Setton Park, Liverpool, and the Rev. E. Mostyn Ellis (Vicar of Mossley) officiated as best man. During the service, which was conducted by the bridegroom's father, assisted by the Rev. Canon W. A. Heygate, of Parkstone, Dorset (uncle of the bridegroom), the hymn "O Perfect Love" was sung, and at the conclusion an address was given by the bridegroom's uncle, after which the blessing was pronounced by the bridegroom's father.

A reception was afterwards held by Mrs. Heygate at St. James' Vicarage, and later the happy couple left by motor for Crewe en route for Chester, where the honeymoon is being spent. The bride travelled in a pretty dainty green gaberdiene costume, trimmed with braid, and hat trimmed with silver and white ornaments, which were brought from Nigeria by the bridegroom. She also wore a handsome black fur stole muff, the gift of her cousin, Mr. Henry Bowring, of Liverpool. The bride and bridegroom were the recipients of many cheques and beautiful presents; a list of which will appear in a later issue.

There was an early Celebration of Holy Communion at St. James' Church on Wednesday morning before the wedding for the relatives and near friends of the bride and bridegroom, and this was conducted by the Rev. E. Mostyn Ellis and the Rev. E. N. Dodd.

MARRIED.

On Wednesday, 4th October, in St. James' Church, by the Rev. Canon A. Heygate, Vicar, assisted by the Rev. Canon W. A. Heygate, of Parkstone, Dorset, uncle of the Bridegroom, Lancelot Heygate, Lieutenant W. A. F.F., to Edith Marjorie, eldest daughter of Mr. and R. J. Rennie, of St. John's, Newfoundland.

DIED.

On the 1st inst, at Plish, Rhode Island, Annie, beloved wife of James S. Sexton, and daughter of the late Charles and Katherine Hudson, aged 25 years; leaving a husband, three children, and two brothers, Michael, residing in Quebec, and John, of Notre Dame Street, this city, to mourn their sad loss.—R. I. F. Passed peacefully away, on October 24th, at her daughter's residence, 13 Penryn Road, "Drusilla," beloved wife of J. Snow, aged 64 years. Funeral to-morrow, Thursday, at 2.30 p.m., from the above address.

SERBIANS WIN NEW SUCCESS.

PARIS, Oct. 24. Serbian troops operating in the Germa region on the Macedonian front have won a new success, according to today's announcement by the war office. A counter attack launched by the German and Bulgarian troops was stopped by the Serbian artillery. The Serbians then attacked the opposing lines and captured several trenches. On the Struma front there is inactivity. River floods are interfering with the movement of troops.

ROUMANIAN FIGHTING.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 24. At Vrancea there was a minor action, in which we took one machine gun. In the valley of Buzen there was artillery fighting at Table Bataca. Calm reigns at Bratocsa and Predoaia. Artillery fighting has become less violent. The enemy launched three attacks at Predoaia. Fighting continues along the border in this location. In the region of Dragoslave the enemy attacked violently. Our troops maintained the position in the valley, and we attacked and repulsed the enemy on the left bank of the river. In the Jul valley there were violent enemy attacks, which made slight progress at Fulghes and Bicas and Frouber valley. The situation is unchanged in Azul valley. The enemy is driven westward, and fighting continues with violence. In Dobruja the enemy continues attacks. Our left wing was obliged to retire toward Tzara Murat. Constanza has been occupied by the enemy.

GAINS SECURED.

LONDON, Oct. 24. The ground gained by us yesterday in the neighborhood of Guencycourt and Les Boeufs, on the Somme front, has now been fully secured. The war office announced to-day. During the night there was nothing to report except intermittent shelling on both sides. In answer to the enemy's claim that the gains of Saturday between Schwaben rehaut and Le Sars were won only at the expense of heavy loss on our part, it may be noted that the troops engaged, which took over one thousand prisoners, had only about twelve hundred casualties.

SOUTH OF THE SOMME.

PARIS, Oct. 24. French and German artillery forces were busy last night south of the Somme, where an artillery duel raged in the Blaches-Ablaincourt region. There was no infantry action along the French front in the Somme area. The war office announced to-day. Three German aeroplanes were brought down in the course of twenty aerial combats that occurred yesterday in the Verdun region, during a thick mist.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

The remarkable economy of the incandescent gas lamp is by no means either its chief—or even an important—claim for popularity. It meets better than any other source of artificial light the requirements of ideal light.

In the color of the light produced it is far superior to any other illuminant in general and universal use. The investigations of acknowledged authorities indicate that for the approximation of artificial daylight the gas mantle has at least one and one-half times the value of the carbon-filament electric lamp.

This quality is highly desirable, indeed absolutely essential where the approximation of daylight color values is important. For lighting shops, displaying haberdashery, suitings, gowns, millinery, etc. the incandescent gas lamp is not even remotely approached by any other incandescent lamp.

Of all the manifold advantages of gas light, perhaps the most important is its favorable effect upon the eyes. The development of the incandescent electric lamp with its intense brilliant and glaring filament has been accompanied by hitherto unheard-of prevalence of eye troubles and diseases which are forcing themselves upon the attention of the medical fraternity. This is resulting in a greater appreciation of the soft mellow quality of gas light and is rapidly enlarging its field of use.—July 2, 1903.

personally overseeing the preliminaries for a formidable counter-offensive, in view of which the German army on the Somme front is said to have received strong reinforcements of infantry, and especially of artillery.

ON THE VERDUN FRONT.

PARIS, Oct. 24. In a powerful series of attacks on the Verdun front, the French have captured the village of Fort Douaumont, advanced beyond Thiaumont work and farm, and occupied also Handromont quarries, north of Verdun, according to a bulletin issued by the war office to-night. The prisoners captured counted thus far number 3,500.

NEW ALLIED LOAN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. An official announcement of the terms of the new loan to Great Britain by American financiers, is expected here before the close of the week. The amount will be $250,000,000 or $200,000,000. It is understood, bearing five per cent. interest with issuing price at 98 and maturing in two years. Negotiations with American bankers for another British loan, not less than $200,000,000 and which may be as much as $300,000,000, are approaching completion according to intimations conveyed to-day by the fiscal and commercial representative of the British Government. Inquiry by the loan from financial and investment sources is said to be so general as to insure its successful flotation.

John W. McGrath

Roosevelt's Popular Secretary, Vindicated.

The Appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York State today unanimously reversed the decision of the Lower Courts in the case of John W. McGrath.

Our readers will remember that Mr. McGrath, the brilliant young Newfoundland lawyer who has achieved celebrity as Mr. Roosevelt's Secretary, was some time ago subjected to the indignity of a clearly trumped-up charge of assault. Though the whole affair was a purely political scheme, the court decided against him. His many friends and admirers will learn with pleasure that the whole affair was a purely political scheme, the court decided against him.

A number of young ladies are now around collecting for the Bible Society Fund. They will no doubt meet a very good response from our people.

Among the passengers outward on this morning's train en route to the United States were Mrs. C. A. Child, who has been visiting her mother and other relatives here; Miss Gertie Morris and Miss Rita Hayden, both of whom will make their homes in Boston for the present.

A very large number of passengers arrived by the S. S. Sagona this morning.

The Salvation Army are holding their annual Harvest Festival in the Citadel on to-morrow (Wednesday) evening.

Rev. F. S. Coffin, who has been absent from the Synod, lately held at Truro, N.S., is expected home on Thursday. The rev. gentleman is, we understand, now at St. John's.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Munn and family, Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. J. J. Keefe, Mrs. John Taylor and family were among the passengers by the s.s. Sagona from Labrador this morning.

Mr. Robert French is receiving congratulations from his friends on the honor conferred on his son, Sergeant A. French—the receiving of a Military Medal.

Mr. J. Barnes, contractor of St. John's, is in town on a visit to his friends. He is a guest of Mr. James Garland, Cochrane Street.

A Memorial Service will likely be held in St. Paul's Church on Sunday next for the late Pe. Henry Martin, who died from wounds received in 1914.

Scientific Cure For Eczema.

New Discovery—Thousands Find Relief.

No scientific discovery in recent years has attracted such wide-spread attention among physicians in this country and throughout Canada as the wonderful D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. After years of debate, medical authorities are now agreed that eczema and other skin diseases are not caused in the blood but are caused by myriads of microcopic germs gnawing the flesh just below the epidermis. The patient is perfectly healthy, it is only the skin that is diseased. Hence, scientists are now agreed that you must cure the skin through the skin. The medicine must be in liquid form in order to penetrate properly. The true remedy has been discovered in D. D. D. Prescription. The instant you wash with this cleansing, soothing liquid, you will find the itch gone. Simple to use, absolutely harmless to the most sensitive skin. D. D. D. Prescription is the most scientific and efficient remedy known for Eczema in all its forms. Bad Leg, Pimples, Scap Troubles, Open Sores and Itching Rash, Salt Rheum, and Ring Worm; and all other skin troubles yield to D. D. D. The first bottle will prove it. Stop that itch now! Get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold everywhere.

Look at a Child's Tongue when Cross, Feverish and Sick

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative". Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what all your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Dear Sir—Kindly allow me space in your widely circulated paper to make reference to the closing of the stores at night.

Now that the lights have been ordered out it is not safe for a girl to venture out alone, especially when there's so many scamps around. There are girls working in the smaller grocery stores of this town who very seldom leave before 10.30 or 11, and for the amount of trade that's done it would be as well to close at 9.30, or earlier. In order to protect our girls from insult, and what is far more important, to preserve their health, this matter should be given careful consideration.

Thanking you for space, I remain, GILLES' RIGHTS.

NEW PASTOR.—The Rev. Gordon Dickie, M.A., who for the past two years was in charge of St. Stephen's Church, St. John's, N.B., has been invited to succeed Rev. J. S. Sutherland, M.A., at St. Andrew's. The new pastor is a son of the Rev. Alfred Brown Dickie, of Hantsport, is a graduate of Dalhousie and Harvard and a son-in-law of Dr. March, of St. John, N.B. The rev. gentleman is well known in the Maritime Provinces and is a brilliant preacher.

ROOT OF EVIL

When I have got a goodly wad, I say that wealth's an empty gawd, a cheap, deluding snare; with fluent tongue and aspect wise, I stand around and moralize, and roast the millionaire. I look with sorrow and disdain on those who sweat and strive and strain to get another plunk; I tell them money is but dross, a sordid dream, a total loss, a worthless lot of junk. But when I've had some small reverse, that makes my roll look sick, or worse, on here I am bent; I hustle till I melt my fat, and you may see me break a slat, to nail another cent. Forgotten all the platitudes that I dispensed in lofty moods, in times when I was flush; forgotten all the moral saws, and every text that ever was, as I pursue the cash. And when I've made a roll again, I sternly lecture weary men, and chide them for their greed, for striving for the picaune, and say the trail behind them's strewn with morals gone to seed.

Never Quite.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Two men looked out from prison bars, one saw mud, another stars,"— Stevenson.

There are some people in the world who never are quite satisfied. Give them the world and they'd be wanting a gold fence around it. Give them the fence and they'd be wishing the pattern of it were just a little different. She wishes the Waist Line Were a Little Bit Higher.

I have a friend who has never yet so far as I can find out, had a gown which she was perfectly satisfied. Sometimes she buys them ready-made and has them altered, and sometimes she has them made by a dress-maker. But never, in any case, are they wholly right. Frequently the fit of the sleeve does not quite suit her. It isn't that, it is the hang of the skirt. Or, maybe, she wishes the waist line had been a little bit higher. It's always, "I wish it were a little this, or a little that," always that big little that-stands-between content and discontent.

The Fried Chickens Were Wonderful. Two friends of mine spent their vacation at a certain inn. I met one of them and asked her how she liked the place. "My dear, it was charming," she said. "Such pretty surroundings and such a nice hostess, and on the whole the food was unusually good. The fried chickens were simply wonderful."

When I met the other, I said that I had heard they had found M—— a very pleasant place and the food unusually good. "Yes," she said, "the food was pretty good on the whole, but I did wish they would have cooked cereal in the morning."

Beyond a certain point, satisfaction is not a matter of what you have, it is a matter of what you look at in what you have.

In other words, it is a point of view. To take this humble instance—one woman saw the lack of cooked cereal, the other saw the fried chicken.

Because Thorns Have Roses. Some people go through the world complaining because their roses have thorns. Others are always happy because their thorns have roses.

A discontented, restless, never quite satisfied frame of mind is a mental deformity. He who possesses it is cross-eyed in the mind. Instead of seeing the roses, he sees the thorns.

Now, I hate the slushy, sentimental kind of optimism—no one more. I believe in resenting injustice, in admitting when things are wrong, and in trying to improve one's condition. But as a straight common-sense proposition, it doesn't pay to concentrate your attention on the minor flaws of life.

Vessel Sunk by Whale.

A report has been made to the Steamboat Inspection Service that on June 2nd, 1916, while the motor vessel "W. S." of 20 gross tons, was on its way to Masatlan, Mexico, a whale came up under the vessel when it was about 7 miles west of Geromino Island, Mexico, and knocked a hole in the craft, which filled so rapidly that it quickly sank. The crew took to the lifeboat 30 minutes after the accident, and were all rescued.—Scientific American.

LONDON, To-day's official from the British quarters last night reads: Some of the French have smashed German lines north and north-west over a front of four and three miles, penetrating it along the entire length and in the centre got a distance of nearly two miles. Dobruja region of Roumania the Bulgarians and Turks are fighting no rest to the Russian-Roumanian forces, who continue to retreat the entire front of the Black Sea to Danube River, although at some points they are vigorously opposing the advance of the invaders. Rachova, the river a short distance below Tarnavoda and Medjida on the railway midway between Tchernavoda and Constanza have fallen into the hands of the Teutonic forces. In the region cavalry are pursuing the retreating Russo-Roumanian forces to the north of the railway line. More than 6,700 prisoners have been taken by Field Marshal Von Macken. Constantinople reports operations Turkish submarines in the Black off the Roumanian coast, sinking 5,000 ton Roumanian transport sailing and supply ships bound Constanza with provisions. Pre-southward of Kransstadt on the Roumanian front, has been captured the Austro-Germans, according to the line, and the resistance of the Roumans in the Rothernthum Pass of Hermannstadt has been broken.

In the region cavalry are pursuing the retreating Russo-Roumanian forces to the north of the railway line. More than 6,700 prisoners have been taken by Field Marshal Von Macken. Constantinople reports operations Turkish submarines in the Black off the Roumanian coast, sinking 5,000 ton Roumanian transport sailing and supply ships bound Constanza with provisions. Pre-southward of Kransstadt on the Roumanian front, has been captured the Austro-Germans, according to the line, and the resistance of the Roumans in the Rothernthum Pass of Hermannstadt has been broken.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

10.50 A. M.

NOT MUCH DOING.

LONDON, To-day. An official from the British Headquarters last night reads: South of the Ancre there is nothing to report except intermittent hostile shelling. In this area yesterday and to-day we have taken eight prisoners. To-day there was heavy shelling on both sides, south of Arras. Early this morning an enemy party raided our trenches east of Loos, apparently with the purpose of destroying the mine shafts. They were immediately ejected.

WAR REVIEW.

LONDON, To-day. Switching their offensive from the Somme region in France, possibly as a counter advance to the Teutonic Allies in the Dobruja region in Roumania, the French have smashed the German line north and northeast of Verdun over a front of four and one-third miles, penetrating it along its entire length and in the centre gaining a distance of nearly two miles. In the Dobruja region of Roumania the Germans, Bulgarians and Turks are giving no rest to the Russo-Roumanian forces, who continue to retreat along the entire front of the Black Sea to the Danube River, although at some points they are vigorously opposing the advance of the invaders. Rachova on the river a short distance below Tchernavoda and Medlidie on the railway midway between Tchernavoda and Constantza have fallen into the hands of the Teutonic forces. In the latter region cavalry are pursuing the retreating Russo-Roumanian forces well to the north of the railway line. More than 6,700 prisoners have been taken by Field Marshal Von Mackensen. Constantinople reports operations of Turkish submarines in the Black Sea off the Roumanian coast, sinking a 3,000 ton Roumanian transport and sailing and supply ships bound for Constantza with provisions. Predeal, southward of Kranstadt on the Transylvanian front, has been captured by the Austro-Germans, according to Berlin, and the resistance of the Roumanians in the Rotherthum Pass south of Hermannstadt has been broken.

was wounded. The American commander attempted to arrest General Batista, who resisted and ordered an attack on the American forces. Fighting continued for a considerable time, but the rebels were eventually defeated.

HUGHES REPUUDIATES THE HY-PHENATES.

NEW YORK, To-day. Chas. E. Hughes last night told an audience he did not want the support of anyone who has an interest in America against any country whatever, who wants immunity from foreign aggression, or would have the power of this nation held captive to any foreign influence or swayed by alien machinations. This is the first public utterance of the Republican nominee indicating repudiation of pro-German support.

NORWAY'S LOSS IN SHIPPING.

SEATTLE, Wash., To-day. Capt. Louis Hannevig, Norwegian ship owner, who signed a contract today for the construction of two 8,800 ton steamers at a cost of more than $1,000,000 each, says the submarines are sinking Norwegian vessels faster than Norway can replace them. Orders for the new ships will be placed in all yards which can build them.

AUSTRALIA'S RECRUITING SCHEME.

MELBOURNE, To-day. The Australian Commonwealth is now in the throes of a campaign for and against compulsory military service which was brought on two weeks ago by the decision of the Hughes Government to submit the question to a referendum to be held on Oct. 28. The enlistment situation at this writing shows that 109,000 reinforcements have been voluntarily enrolled and additional reinforcements needed up to July 1st of next year are 100,000, and 125,000 men are available, according to the census, who are fit and single without dependants. The Government's plan is that voluntary recruiting will be continued and the deficiency will be made up by conscription. Men to be called up monthly as required, no compulsory calling up of men under 21 years of age and absolute exemption otherwise, first, to only sons, second to single men who are the sole support of their dependants, third, in families which have already furnished volunteers. No calling up of the remaining members of the family up to one half. The constitution of non-military tribunals to hear appeals for exemption.

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS OUT.

DENVER, Col., To-day. Col. Theodore Roosevelt told an audience here today that if he had been President and had sent Wilson's strict accountability message to Germany, there would have been no more ships sunk unless there was a fight afterward. The Lusitania was sunk with 1,284 deaths, he said, because other nations believed we did not welcome being kept out of war. If I had been President then I would have seized every international ship and every ship in the fleet ready down south of Porto Rico, and I got the arbitration I asked for because Germany knew what I said. If he had been otherwise we would have had a German stronghold in Venezuela and most of the present war would have been fought right here at our front door.

NORWAY AGAIN.

LONDON, To-day. The Norwegian steamers Secondo and Gronhang have been sunk, says a Røyer despatch from Kristiania. Lloyd's shipping agency reports the Norwegian barkentine Gunn burned by the Germans; the crew landed.

BAD WEATHER HAMPERS OPERATIONS.

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE. To-day. Via London. The British are saying that if Germans had ordered the weather, it would not have suited their purpose better than during these past two days of persistent rain, which has turned the shell craters into bowls of porridge, made the trench sides fall in, kept every stitch of clothing of the men in the front line saturated and made the fumes which charges have to be made as slippery as glass where there are no wires. On Sunday and part of Monday, with clear cold weather which let the gunners see their targets, the soldiers were swinging their arms to keep warm. Now the gunners stare out in the walls of mist and the soldiers who have been in the trenches look like balls of mud. The artillery preparation necessary for the attack is impossible without visibility, and, as one gunner said, visibility is so low that the tanks will have to use for horns to prevent collision if they go wandering across uncharged shell craters. The Germans in their machine gun positions need only visibility to see a few hundred yards, but about Transloy, where the British attacked on Monday over a narrow front and took about a thousand yards of trenches, the heaviest and fiercest kind of fighting has been proceeding all day on Tuesday, the utter discomfort and mud and water were only to make both sides more bitter. Against the British here are veteran regiments which took the forts of Vaux and Douaumont. At present now they are as savage in defence as they were in attack last spring. The Germans have been making no attacks except counter attacks, and have driven the British out where they have got ground in any one of these trenches. The men of both sides are wallowing in the mud and strive to keep up some form of cover from shell fire and against the fire of machine guns which other wallowing men strive to keep from foundering while the French mortars splash fountains of mud over them.

DANES NOW THE VICTIMS.

LONDON, To-day. Lloyds announces that the Danish steamer Guildborg has been torpedoed and that the Danish schooner Libra has been set adrift by a German submarine. The crews of both vessels were landed.

THE DAY OF THE YOUTH.

LONDON, To-day. The war threatens soon to become a struggle between mere boys. The pace is said to be entirely too fast for the older men long to endure. It is asserted here that next year the Entente Allies will be facing boys of 17 in the German army. General Sir Douglas Haig is said to have objected to the sending out of men of middle age. He wants men from 16 to 25 years of age. After the latter year, it is said, the fighting value of human units shows rapid and steady decline. The good soldier of to-day, it seems, must be of the age which belongs in the more strenuous athletic games, the football player type. The older men have their place, but generally speaking it is said now to be in the army the men back of the line in the supply transport divisions, whose strain is not so great. These soldiers are too susceptible to trench disease to be of great use in the firing lines. England already is recruiting boys born in 1899 preparatory to calling them up when they attain their eighteenth year.

A GREAT VICTORY.

LONDON, To-day. Although the French communique announcing the recapture by the French of the Fort of Douaumont and the smashing of the German line over a four and one-third mile front north of Verdun, reached London too late for comment, exultantly in a special late edition the Times says this strikes a severe blow at German prestige and shows the German staff the danger of weakening its lines in the West. The victory will disquiet the enemy, hearten the Russo-Roumanian armies and inspire all the Allies with fresh confidence. The Daily Telegraph asserts the French have dealt a staggering blow, putting the finishing touch to the story of the heavy British blow delivered in the week end. The victory proves to what a pointed mastery our troops have attained in the business of grinding Germany in the mill.

ROUMANIA NOT OVER-ANXIOUS.

LONDON, To-day. The Roumanian authorities here express what in some quarters is regarded as an astonishing confidence in the later developments of the campaign. They have the military attitude that the capture of the Constantza-Cernavoda line is the utmost success the Central Powers can effect against Roumania in the course of operations. On the other hand, the fall of Sillistra and Tutraikan produced a demand for the recall of troops from Transylvania and Dobruja, and General Averescu fell between two stools, his army being so divided that he was unable to reinforce Dobruja in time to parry Mackensen's thrust. It is believed here that well-informed circles in Roumania's ability to put heavy effectives in the field against Roumania is chiefly due to her present opportunity of withdrawing a certain proportion of men and guns from her eastern front. In view of German reports of negotiating with Russia for a separate peace, special significance is seen in some quarters in a passage in Lord Grey's speech at the Foreign Press Association's luncheon, in which he said, speaking of the Allies, "we stand or fall together. The separating of one from the other means the destruction of the one separately and not its safety. For all of us unity is essential, not merely to victory but to our future life and success."

NIVELLE'S BRILLIANT STROKE.

PARIS (Delayed, dated 24th). Verdun, long lost sight of, sprang suddenly and unexpectedly to-day into the forefront of the public mind, which had been directed towards the battle on the Somme front. The German front on the right bank of the Meuse literally was swept away for a distance of four and a half miles like straw before the wind. General Nivelle for weeks past has been watching the German movements like a lynx, carefully calculating the effect of every withdrawal of troops for transfer to the Somme and eastern fronts. At the same time he judiciously made his preparations and when he judged the Germans had thinned their defences to the danger point, he struck like lightning. The result was one of the most brilliant operations of the campaign. The Germans who yesterday were pressing close upon the inner line of defences at Forts Souville and Tavannes have now been driven beyond the outer defences of the Fort Douaumont-Vaux line. The Vaux fort remains in possession of the Germans, but the French line extends beyond it on the north at Vaux Village and Fumit Wood, and also on the south of it at Dambloup battery and Chenols Wood, from both of which positions it can readily be attacked.

IS NOW IN FRANCE.

By last English mail word was received from Corporal Will H. Martin stating that Cyril, a son of the late Lord Balfour, had left here July 16th by the Sicilian, had departed for the front and on Tuesday, Oct. 10th B Co. was also despatched to France, having finished their course in musketry at Irvine. B Co. has done the best work in shooting of any of the previous companies of the Mid. Regiment. Corporal Martin, who received a prize as being a first class shot, was offered a position as sniper but preferred to be a marksman in the firing line. A number of the best shots were chosen as snipers. The young soldier says not to worry about him for if he should go under, he would not be the only mother and child in this war, and that far better men than ever he hoped to be are gone. He expected to be some time in France before being sent to the firing line.

Sagona From North.

The s.s. Sagona reached port yesterday afternoon from the Labrador mail service having got as far north as Hopedale. During the trip down the coast heavy winds and running seas were encountered and on Sunday the 22nd inst., a snow storm was experienced. The ship at the time was north of Cape Harrison and was forced to put back to that port. At West Point, a short distance from Cape Harrison the Sagona took on board most of the crew and passengers of a wrecked schooner owned by Hogan, of Carbonear which went ashore during the storm, leaving four men to try and salvage the cargo of codfish. Traps and other fishing tackle were also taken off by the crew of the Sagona. On Thursday night another severe storm sprang up, which delayed the ship for sixteen hours. On the return trip fair weather was experienced from Hopedale to St. John's. About 250 passengers, mostly Labrador coast fishermen belonging to Spaniard's Bay and Bay Roberts, came home on the Sagona and were landed at Hr. Grace. On the next trip north the Sagona will pick up the Marconi operators and lighthouse keepers north of Battle Hr.

McMurdo's Store News

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 25, 1916.

We have just obtained from England full stocks of Jeyes' Fluid and Cylind disinfectants. These well known articles are of strictly British manufacture and are of high germicidal strength. Jeyes' Fluid is more suitable as a disinfectant about farms, stables, outhouses, cellars, and in premises generally; Cylind comes in an antiseptic for surgical use and in first aid and personal hygiene; though either may be used for all purposes if necessary. Another new arrival is Zambuk Soap which with the attainment of the same name has achieved an excellent reputation in skin troubles and for the general purposes of bath, toilet, and nursery. Price 30 cents a cake; box of 3 cakes, 80 cents. A wing made wholly of spangles is a novel hat parure. Among the new blouses is one closting and of Jersey.
