CHAPTER XLIII.

"A hundred!"
"I ask but one, and that is that you will not open this envelope until I am gone."

"It shall not be opened at all, if you wish it," Gardner smiled. "I promise what you ask. If you are quite determined to return home, pray allow me to arrange for your comfort."

"Thank you, but my maid and the nurse are quite capable of attending to my wants."

She spoke coldly, but a softer light was shining in her eyes.
"I don't think so." His tones were masterful. "You see, it is a long, cold ride by rail, and it takes a man to secure a private compartment, and a good supply of foot warmers. I will escort you to the railway station, and send a telegram to Lady Craythorne to have a carriage to meet you. Ladies as a rule, make a bundle of these little things. I never saw one yet who knew how to send a telegram, or who did not shudder upon receiving one!"

He smiled pleasantly, and Ada involuntarily held her right hand out to him. He pressed it warmly, and she whispered:
"You are too kind—I do not deserve it. We are to leave here at two o'clock. I do not wish to put you to any trouble."

"At two o'clock," he interrupted, gently. "I shall be ready to see you safely on your journey."

CHAPTER XLV.

Herbert Gardner escorted Ada Craythorne to the railway station, and by a mysterious system of "tipping" secured for her and her servants a first-class compartment all to themselves. He gave the guard something, and the guard at once reserved that part of the carriage to the ladies alone.

It is usual to supply one foot-warmer between two persons, but half-dozen found their way into Miss Craythorne's carriage, the heat from which soon permeated the chilly atmosphere, and she could not help feeling grateful to the young barrister for his care and attention.

"Now, nurse, you look after your charge," he said, when the preliminary banging of doors began.
"Yes, sir," mumbled the old woman, staring violently, and eyeing him strangely, almost wistfully.

The guard's whistle sounded, and he leaned forward and whispered to Ada: "I will not open your mysterious letter until I am alone to-night."

"Thank you," she replied, "and, if you ever want me, or the nurse, to explain anything, we are ready. It is for your sake that I am keeping the woman within reach. Good-by."

The train began to move, so that there was no opportunity for further speech, and Herbert Gardner smiled a little in his bewilderment.

He waved his hand to her, and she never forgot the look in his eyes, as he stood on the platform and watched the train glide away.

He returned to the Hall in the waiting carriage, and had to confess that his heart was gone irrevocably. He took the letter that she had given to him from his pocket, and kissed the handwriting that was here; he kissed it reverently. What was inside? Her last words had made him curious; indeed, but he had given his promise, and he put it away again.

Upon reaching the Hall, he went direct to his friend's room, where he was greeted somewhat reproachfully. "I hear that you arrived a couple of hours since," said the baronet, "and have been all this time getting to my prison."

"You will pardon me when I explain, Charlie. I found Miss Craythorne upon the point of leaving without a male escort. I have merely seen her to the railway station."

CHAPTER XLIV.

For a few minutes a feeling of melancholy pervaded the little party. Sir Fulke broke the silence.

"There are many theories that might be started concerning this subtle sense of ours. When one smells a wood-violet, a picture of the spot where it grew often comes to the mind. Smell a rose, and a number of sweet fancies arise, bend over a bed of mignonette, and tender thoughts come into the mind. I believe a man or woman could be largely influenced by being made to breathe certain beautiful odors."

"I think," remarked Lady Craythorne, "that we are getting over fanciful. Out in the fresh air we may perhaps regain our senses. Evidently the odor of the orchids is too much for us."

"I enjoy discussing such thoughts," said Lady Iris.

"There is so much in the world that we seldom think of hidden mysteries and hidden beauties," observed Sir Fulke—which remark raised him considerably in Lady Iris's estimation.

They walked back to the long drawing-room; and there, while the carriage was ordered, the conversation turned on the Barons.

"You know them, of course, Lady Craythorne?" said the young heirless.

me to quit this cold northern clime and seek a sunnier one. I have read that certain odors have a most peculiar effect on some people!"

"I hope you will stop at the long-ling," observed Sir Fulke. "I should be sorry if the desire to rush away were accomplished."

"There is little fear; I like home best, Sir Fulke," and she turned to Lady Craythorne, as though it were with her that she desired to converse.

"There is another odor which has a wonderful effect upon me," she said—"that of southernwood. I have heard people call the plant vulgar—as though any such word were applicable. If I take a spray of it and rub it on my hands, beautiful and poetical ideas rise in my mind and transport me almost into another world."

"It is a strange thing," remarked Sir Fulke. "I must own that the odor of the lilac has the same effect upon me. I am not imaginative; but whenever I am near a lilac tree the odor seems, in some unaccountable way, to bring all the days of my boyhood back to me, and my heart softens. There are times too when it makes me melancholy. I am almost ashamed to confess that, man as I am, a spray of lilac has before now brought a choking sensation into my throat."

Lady Iris looked far more kindly at him than she had hitherto done. The words pleased her. She liked sentiment; and in a strong man she thought it doubly commendable.

"I may as well make my confession also," said Lady Craythorne. "The scent above all other which moves me is that of the jonquil—you know the creamy flower with the yellow heart? Its odor gives me a strange sensation, half-pleasant, half sad."

"Of what?" asked Lady Iris, deeply interested.

Lady Craythorne was silent for a few minutes; and then in a low voice she answered:—

"Of dead or ungratified desires."

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;

Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER III.

Sir Fulke could talk both well and cleverly when he chose. He changed both tone and manner when he spoke to her again. As she stood among the sweet-smelling orchids, he thought that he had never seen so fair a picture; when she touched one of them with her lips, Sir Fulke thought he could give his life to be one of the fair blossoms—yet he dared not say so. Lady Craythorne expressed her delight at the beauty of the flowers.

"There is something very peculiar," said Sir Fulke, "in the odor of some orchids. It is very beautiful—there is a subtle sweetness in it."

"Perhaps you will think me very foolish if I tell you what effect the odor of an orchid has upon me," said Lady Iris, smiling. "It makes me long at once to go abroad. I cannot account for it, but the moment I enter this house a wild longing seizes Greek Losses Estimated at Fifty Thousand.

 Turkish Forces Neating Smyrna --- Gompers Would Impeach Dougherty.

GREEK LOSSES.
 PARIS, Sept. 8. British advance grounds are now thirty miles from Smyrna, according to latest advices from Ankara. The Nationalist cavalry are reported making a dash for the coast of Smyrna. Greek losses since the beginning of the campaign are estimated by the advices at fifty thousand, including fifteen thousand prisoners. The remainder are killed and wounded.

TOWNS BURNED.
 SMYRNA, Sept. 8. The towns of Odemish and Thyra, sixty and forty miles southeast of Smyrna, have been reported burned. The Turkish advance is slow and cautious. Mustafa Kemal Pasha issued an order to-day announcing that molestation of Christians would be punished with death.

BRITISH CABINET DISCUSSES NEAR EAST QUESTION.
 LONDON, Sept. 8. The British Cabinet had an important meeting to-day, the session being presided over by Premier Lloyd George. It had been expected that the Irish question and inter-Allied indebtedness would be taken in addition to the situation in Asia Minor. The Near East situation however, fully occupied the Cabinet for the day.

IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS AT CORK.
 LONDON, Sept. 7. The interruption of telegraph communication between London and Cork and the reported interruptions between Dublin and Cork, leads the London newspapers to believe that events of great moment are happening there, especially since fighting was reported commenced there during the night.

EX-KAISER'S INTENDED BRIDE.
 LONDON, Sept. 8. The former Kaiser's intended bride is Princess Hermine of Reuss, thirty-four years old, according to a report quoted by the Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent. The engagement, he adds, will not be announced until after the anniversary of the ex-Kaiser's birthday on October 31st. The Times of London, Aug. 25th published a report of former Emperor William's betrothal to the widow of a German aristocrat of almost royal rank. Princess Hermine of Reuss is the widow of Prince Jean of Schonachcarolath who died in April 1920. She is the mother of five children and owns a large estate in Saarbr. Silesia.

LIVES THROWN AWAY.
 RUTHLAND, Vermont, Sept. 8. Hehly A. "daredevil" Smith, of Boston, was instantly killed at Rutland Fair grounds, when his parachute failed to open after he had dropped from a balloon at a height of fifteen hundred feet. Four hours earlier Lt. Belvin Hayward, the "flying parson" and two companions were killed when their airplane crashed at the Fair grounds.

TRYING TO IMPEACH DOUGHERTY.
 NEW YORK, Sept. 8. Support of the American Federation of labor in its efforts to bring about the impeachment of Attorney General Dougherty and Federal Judge Wilkinson, of Chicago, for their part in the issuance of the rail injunction, was pledged by Samuel Gompers, the Federation President. In a telegram received from Atlantic City to-day by the Central Trades and Labour Council.

IRISH POSTAL WORKERS MAY STRIKE.
 DUBLIN, Sept. 8. A strike of postal workers throughout the twenty-six countries which will affect the mail, telegraph and telephone services is believed inevitable in consequence of the reduction of the wages of the workers which becomes effective to-morrow.

THE DAILY HERALD.
 LONDON, Sept. 8. Financial responsibility for the Daily Herald has been assumed by the Trade Union Congress now in session at Southampton. Hamilton Fyfe, who has been editor of several London papers and special correspondent in many lands, has been appointed editor of the Herald which now becomes the official organ of the labor movement.

WILL PROVIDE AUSTRIA WITH LOAN.
 LONDON, Sept. 8. London bankers have agreed to offer Austria a loan of between twenty and thirty million pounds, according to the Daily Express. The loan would require the approval of the Reparations Commission, and would be secured by Austria's import revenue.

NO KNOWLEDGE OF THEIR ARREST.
 DUBLIN, Sept. 7. Any knowledge regarding the arrest of De Valera or Childers is denied to-day by the publicity department of the Free State Government.

HOPES DEFERRED.
 JACKSON, CALIF., Sept. 8. Hopes that the entombed miners in Argonaut shaft might be rescued seemed farther off than ever when it was discovered that three hundred and thirty-three feet of caved in debris and timber and thirty feet of solid rock must be penetrated before they can be reached.

What Bolshevism Is And Does.
 To proclaim publicly that Europe cannot exist with Russia, is to admit that Europe, in some sense, cannot survive without accepting Russia's terms. To make a compact with the Moscow autocracy it was necessary, as a first step, to make peace with the principles of Bolshevism. That was Lenin's price for restoring Europe, says David Jayne Hill, in "The North American Review."

And what is Bolshevism? It is a destructive, retrogressive, movement, inflated and perpetuated by violence, which has placed in the hands of a few desperate men the destinies of a vast empire. Having destroyed the motives as well as the machinery for the multiplication of the means of well-being and happiness in Russia, it operates only by the division of the little that remains. It has no plan of its own for restoring the capacity of the nation for production. It simply appropriates the proceeds of the past and aims to extend its area of expropriation. It takes all, but gives nothing. It is Nihilism translated into practice.

Having failed utterly in the area of its present control, Bolshevism seeks a bid from the outside. Having ruined Russia, it appeals to Europe. Having already exhausted the treasure extorted from its possessors by bloodshed and terror and harvested from the sacramental vessels of the Church, this oligarchy of brigandage and assassination is now endeavoring to the same that to revolutionize the rest of the world through its propaganda and to wring from the chaffinch of its legal authority an admission of its legal authority to the material means to carry on its procedure.

That Bolshevism entertains a desire to aid in the reconstruction of Europe it has endeavored to destroy is incredible. Such a reconstruction is, on the contrary, an achievement it purposes to prevent by weakening Europe through division. For this purpose it is ready to enter into economic partnership with the rest of the world, or more precisely with portions of Western Europe, in order that by creating rivalries and jealousies it may the more effectively destroy it.

The Superstitious Sneeze
 Among many primitive peoples a sneeze signified the critical moment at which an apparition became visible or a danger had passed. It was the occasion for congratulations and good wishes, just as it still is among the "civilized" whites to-day. When one barbaric monarch sneezed the word was quickly passed along by word of mouth until all the subjects had been informed, and on the letter then made solemn wishes for his Majesty's health.

At another African court the courtiers turned their backs and slapped themselves on the thigh at the royal sneeze. In a third country, at the sneeze of any important personage, those within earshot fell to their knees, kissed the ground, and wished the sneezer all manner of good luck. The Roman Emperor Tiberius made all hands salute him whenever he sneezed, but this seems to have been a personal matter, for Pliny had never the like.

The Greek's Feather.
 Among the ancient Greeks artificial sneezing produced doubtless with a feather, was used for a variety of troubles—hicoughs, cramps in the nasal passages, headaches, and difficulties in the Middle Ages, and, after the introduction of tobacco, snuff was used in a variety of disorders. Sneezing powders were also in common use, and attempts were made to break up epileptic seizures by their exhibition.

Certain people believed that sneezing by a sick man was of bad prognostic significance, while others took the exactly opposite view that if a sneeze could not be provoked the patient could not recover. In 1817 Double, a writer on symptomatology, believed that both prognostics could hold good, according to the case.

Her Reason.
 "I won't take it!" she cried with gusto. "I will have none of your money!"

"This is unusual, Serenica," he said mildly. "Did you not kindly accept a diamond pendant from me only three days ago? Did I not give you a five-pound note the day before yesterday, which you kept?"

"I won't have it, I tell you. Take back your money! I hate it."

"Why, Serenica, what is the meaning of this? Have you gone mad?" he asked, with concern.

"I don't want your money! I won't have it! Take it back! I—"

"And only this afternoon, Serenica," he reminded her reproachfully, "you graciously allowed me to confer a radium bracelet on you."

"There it is!" she stormed, and flung it on the floor.

"Honey!" he called, and, with a wild and joyous leap, snatched the bracelet up from the floor.

"The first time she ever gave me anything back in fifteen years!" he cried, and hugged the bracelet closer.

But before he got out of the room with it he—woke up!

For years I have never considered my stock of household remedies complete unless a bottle of Minard's Liniment was included. For burns, bruises, sprains, frostbites or chilblains it excels, and I know of no better remedy for a severe cold in the head, or that will give more immediate relief, than to inhale from the bottle through the nasal organ.

And as to my supply of veterinary remedies it is essential, as it has in very many instances proven its value. A recent experience in reclaiming what was supposed to be a lost section of a valuable cow's udder has again demonstrated its great worth, and prompts me to recommend it in the highest terms to all who have a herd of cows, large or small. I think I am safe in saying among all the patent medicines there is none that covers as large a field of usefulness as does Minard's Liniment. A real trust-in-good for man or beast.

Wanted to Find Out.
 Mr. Wiggles, who has a polite way of being rude to persons who deserve it, was paid a visit the other morning by an undesirable, who usually broke into Wiggles's privacy regardless of all etiquette. This morning, however, owing to the mat being occupied by a large dog, he paused and knocked.

"Walk right in," called Wiggles, "don't mind the dog."

"But will he bite?" was asked cautiously.

"That's what I want to find out," was the reply. "I only bought him yesterday."

Too Much Hurry.
 During a lecture a well-known authority on economics mentioned the fact that in one country the number of men was larger than that of women, and he added humorously:—

"Can therefore recommend the ladies to emigrate to that part of the world."

A young lady seated in one of the front rows got up in great indignation and was leaving the room rather noisily, whereupon the lecturer remarked:—

"It did not mean that it need be done in such a hurry as that."

DO YOU FEEL THIS WAY?

The Authorman has just been guilty of an extravagance. After hovering long over the thoughts of the purchase, he has bought for himself a luxury. His purchase home was high, very high. No woman with an extravagant and becoming hat, with a Paris label sewed right into the lining, could have been any more excited than he as he bore it home in triumph and placed it first in this position, then in that and stood off to view the effect—like the woman trying to pass through these same phases.

But today the Authorman is down in the dumps.

"I Must Have Been Crazy."

"Why," he says, "did I spend all that money for that thing? What's the good of it anyhow? What do I want it for? Think of the hours of work it represents. I must have been crazy."

And then wistfully (even as the woman with the new hat says: "Do you think it's really becoming?") "Do you think it really adds anything to the room?"

Then we come home in triumph either luging it or announcing to the family that it is to be sent. We are tremendously high that night. We desecrate the virtues of the article, we show it off to everyone who will look at it, we say what a bargain it was. We talk incessantly. We are drunk—you see, drunk with the stimulation of excitement.

That Fool in the Mirror.

And next day, of course, the reaction is bound to come. We look with dark disfavor on all the world including that person in the mirror who was fool enough to spend money that he could have better used some other way, and especially including the article itself. We begin to see flaws in that, to seek reassurance from our family as to its becomingness or beauty, and to wonder if it is a bargain after all.

Fortunately "this too shall pass away."

The Authorman is in the dumps today. He is casting dark glances at his little ship. But to-morrow or perhaps the next day he will begin to love it again. "Even as you and I."

CLOSE BY NATURE.

I landed on a South Sea Isle on which I planned to live, for I was tired of routine ruts, of labor's smarts and stings, and I would live on coconuts and drink from gushing springs. For I had read a thousand books concerning South Sea Isles, of dusky bellies in sylvan nooks, who cheer men with their smiles. I longed to dwell by babbling rills where summer moonbeams lurk, where people do not pay their bills, and no one needs to work. And for a week I languished there, from clanging marts afar, without a table or a chair, a book or a cigar. Then I addressed the dusky belle who had become my bride: "This sort of life may suit you well—to me, it's suicide. So I will say farewell, my lass, and sail across the seas, and leave you squatting in the grass, among the bugs and fleas. Some other gent will come, no doubt, and take you for his wife, some broken and world weary scoundrel who'll lead a quiet life. But I to some more rugged scene must haste to save my tracks, where I can smell the gas line, and pay an income tax. I know these woods have lovely tints, the scenery's sublime, but I must read the public prints, and note the wave of crime. So fare thee well, oh, greasy Grace, don't murmur or repine; for if I never shall see your face, you're spared the sight of mine."

When you're ironing, don't forget to take a bottle of STAP, FORD'S MOSQUITO OIL; 29c. Bottle; Postage 3 cents extra.

LIFE TRIES OUT A MAN.

His handsome and he's dressed in his hand is touched with gold. His brain is quick in learning. He doubts about his path. Said Life, "and so I'll test him." He summoned future glory and pointed out this eager and ambitious youth to him.

He winked his eye and whispered: "There's a secret I know in my bag, wreck his youthful dream and then we'll see tomorrow morning starts it up again."

"I've let him be untroubled, for there like the boy, but the notion that I'm easy thought I must destroy. So I took his way with danger, the worst that you can do, and I'll see if he's willing to go up and fight with you."

Then failure came and tried him. He cracked his castle down. And he killed his hopes in the end. He mocked him in the end. He encouraged him and forced him to pay, a piece of handsome furniture, a fine bit of sport equipment, to pass through these same phases.

Then Life smiled smiling Glory he said: "It's time to come man if you have discovered, with the levels of remorse."

He has found his way through the ups to his best he had ever true.

Now I know this stuff he's made and I know what he can do.

Buried Art Treasures of Rome.

The discovery by Professor R. Paribeni, in an underground structure in Rome, of what may be contemporary portraits of St. Peter and the other apostles is of unique importance to the antiquary and historian, writes Canon Meyrick. In the city of Rome, only one vest of the kind seems of parallel importance. That was when, in 1878, some labourers, digging in a vineyard two miles from Rome, accidentally came upon a subterranean cemetery. This contained Christian paintings, Greek and Latin inscriptions, and some sarcophagi or marble tombs.

It was soon discovered that this cemetery was but one of many. In the words of a contemporary writer "Rome was amazed at finding she had other cities, unknown to her, concealed beneath her own suburbs." There lived in Rome at this time, one Boesio, an advocate by profession, attracted by the wonder and mystery of this great city of the dead under the ruins of the Campagna, he gave his life and immense earnings to these "catacombs."

The Columbus of the subterranean world, he explored every vineyard and studied every record. His adventures were not without danger. On one occasion he and his friends penetrated about a mile into a newly discovered cemetery and like the hero of a Jules Verne story, could not find the path to take them back.

The extent of these catacombs is enormous, though they rarely pass beyond the third milestone from the city. They are excavated on various levels, three, four, and even five galleries, one above the other. They cross and recross one another of those levels. They are said to be at least 500 miles in extent.

These wonderful excavations were the work of the persecuted Christians. They were begun when St. Paul and St. Peter were still in Rome, and they were used as cemeteries for Christians till the city was taken by Alaric in 410. Then for 350 years they were rife by Goths, Vandals, and Lombards. Yet even to-day there are many paintings which still adorn the galleries and the chapels of the catacombs. There are symbolic pictures, the Anchor suggesting Hope, sometimes designed to contain a cross as well—flowers, though suffering. There is the Shepherd, a picture much loved by men who might at any moment be flung to the wild beasts of the arena—and, be it noted, the Shepherd carries a goat as well as a lamb, for the outlook of the infant persecuted Church was generous. Others of the ancient paintings represent Adam and Eve, the Child in the Mary Furnace, Daniel in the Lions' Den, Jonah swallowed by a strange sea horse.

Now it seems that Professor Paribeni has discovered paintings as old as, or older than, any that the Christians loved to paint over the tombs of heroic dead.

Unusual Laws.

A Bill to prohibit the holding of any carnival, pageant, theatrical or vaudeville show where any person shall impersonate a king or queen, or do anything to keep before the minds of the public the "idea" of royalty in a laudatory manner, was recently presented (and rejected) in the U.S. Congress. It has rivals in two bills lately presented to the California and New York assemblies. One requires the stamping on the backs of all crabs, the name of the place where they were caught, and the other requires that the distance be specified which should be kept between dancing partners, the positions they should take, and the steps they should dance.

Home's Report.

WAS DELAYED AT HAWK HARBOR. S.S. Home arrived at Humbermouth at 5.30 a.m. to-day, several hours behind her scheduled time. The Captain's report is as follows: "Made all points of call to Battle Harbour. Delayed 20 hours at Hawk Bay by 150 men on strike who demanded free passage and refused to leave the ship. Landed them at Humbermouth. The fishery is practically over on Labrador. Herring are scarce. The Home leaves again late to-day, for points as far north as Battle Harbour."

Missioners on North West Coast.

Two members of the American Branch of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, Rev. Fr. S. Palmer and Rev. Bro. E. Briggs are now at Bonne Bay preparatory to taking a mission tour of the North West Coast. The missioners expect to begin at Port aux Choix and work their way up the coast to Chalmers Cove holding special services and devotions in all the settlements between these points. The Society of St. John the Evangelist is one of the oldest and most religious order in the Church of England. It numbers amongst its members men of the highest spiritual and intellectual attainments. The parent house of the Society is in Oxford, England, but there are now independent branches scattered over the whole world, the order being especially in America from which house in America the above members come.

Fire on Cove Road.

A recently finished bungalow owned by Mr. P. Bulger, blacksmith and situated on the Cove Road was rased to the ground by a fire this afternoon. The blaze started about 1.15 o'clock and when first noticed a phone message was sent to the Central Fire Hall. The chemical and hose motor truck was sent to the scene but the fire had reached such proportions that practically nothing could be saved. The building, in less than a half hour the place was a smoking ruin. Mr. Bulger scarcely saved any of his belongings and the loss to him is a serious one. How the fire originated is not known.

Juvenile Crime.

"The law is an ass," said Sergeant Buzfuz, and while admitting the fallibility of this statement, we confess that there are times when our lawmakers have their obscure moments.

No clearer proof of this could be required than the Act for the Protection of Neglected, Dependent and Delinquent Children, which was passed at the last session of the House of Assembly.

Yesterday, eleven cases of larceny, in which children under the age of sixteen years were the criminals, were heard in camera, as the Act requires, and in no case was there a more severe penalty than a fine to cover the cost of the stolen articles which were not recovered.

Because the Act calls for no punishment that can be put in effect, crime among children is encouraged. The trouble with this Act is that, to use a colloquialism, it puts the cart before the horse, or in other words, there is no machinery in effect to carry it out.

Here is Section 18:— (1) The Judge instead of committing a child to prison may hand the child to the charge of a home for destitute and neglected children or Industrial School or Society for the Protection of Children, and the managers of such home, school or society may permit its adoption by a suitable person, or may apprentice it to a suitable trade, calling or service, and the transfer shall be as valid as if the managers were the parents of such child.

Our Greek Market.

Several severe blows have been struck at the fishing industry during the past few years, and now we are threatened with the total loss of our market in Greece.

months will approach one dollar. Late messages from Asia Minor state that the Greek forces have been utterly routed by the Turks, and even if this were not true, even if the Greeks were victorious in this war, the trade of the country would be so upset that the drachma would become almost valueless, and importations would have to cease.

We have heard that the Greeks have already had to descend to the method of barter, and that currants, of an equivalent value, have been offered in exchange for a cargo of Newfoundland fish which was recently sent over to Greece.

Pointless Discussion

The Advocate has stated that the Telegram is being quoted in Canadian papers as telling of 'destitution and starvation in the Ancient Colony.'

In proof of its assertion, our contemporary prints an extract from the Montreal Star, which is a copy of a news item that appeared recently in this paper.

Another Humbug Story.

HE HOAXED A TOWN AND AMUSED THE KAISER.

This is the story of the man who set the whole world arar with laughter by the most colossal, side-splitting hoax in human history.

It was the most daring, impudent, practical joke that ever insanity of man has devised; and Wilhelm Voigt appeared to be one of the last men to play the role.

Physically he was an unsoldier-like man as you could have found in Europe—of frail physique, with narrow, sloping shoulders, a pronounced stoop and bow legs.

By trade he was a cobbler, by choice a convict; for he had spent a fourth of his life in prison walls. He was comparatively an old man—being fifty-seven at the time—he was almost illiterate, and ignorant alike of the ways of Society and of the army.

Yet this caricature of a man masqueraded as an officer of one of the smartest regiments in Germany, and played the part so well that he took command of a garrison town; arrested its Mayor, dismissed leading officials, and emptied the municipal treasury.

And, after he had reduced the town to a state of submission and terror, he got safely away without arousing the least suspicion that he was not all he professed to be.

One morning this cobbler-convict entered the German town of Koepenick, a slouching, shabby, down-beat figure; explored the town, made his plans, and then entered a modest cafe for refreshment.

He emerged an hour later as a smart officer, in the gorgeous uniform of a captain of the First Imperial Guards, and took the train to Ploetensee, a small town a few miles distant.

Here he fell in with a detachment of eight soldiers of the Guards Fusiliers; and commanding them imperiously to halt, he told the uncommissioned officer in charge that they were to follow him, by order of the Emperor—an order which was instantly and unquestioningly obeyed, so impressed were they by his air of authority.

On the way to the station a second squad of four men of another Guard Regiment were met; and these in turn were sternly commanded to fall in, and as unhesitatingly obeyed.

The company thus augmented were ordered to "lead" their rifles; and it was at the head of a dozen soldiers, ready for immediate action, that Voigt made his second appearance that day in Koepenick, causing no little excitement and speculation as they marched through the streets of the town.

With consummate impudence the "captain" now commanded the assistance of the local police, and ordered two carriages to be in readiness for the prisoners he was about to arrest.

Then he proceeded to the town hall, which he surrounded by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

Dr. Langerhans, the dignified Burgomaster of Koepenick, was seated at his desk in his private room and engaged on his mayoral business, when suddenly his door was flung open, and in stalked the captain, followed by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

Amazed and indignant at this rude intrusion on his privacy, the mayor was about to ask its meaning when the officer demanded brusquely: "Are you the Burgomaster of Koepenick?" "I am," answered Dr. Langerhans. "What can I do for you?"

"You are my prisoner by his Majesty's command," thundered the captain. "You will be immediately taken to Berlin."

"Indeed, said the astonished mayor, "and what have I done to deserve arrest?"

"You have nothing to be," broke in the captain, roughly, "I have already told you that you are my prisoner. That is enough for you!" And he gave a sign to the two soldiers, who advanced towards the bewildered prisoner.

At their approach the burgomaster retreated from his seat. "Before you proceed further," he said, "I would like to see your authority for my arrest."

"By authorization," retorted the captain, in tones that admitted of no discussion, "is here" (pointing to the soldiers). "Anything more that you may want to see will be shown at the New Guard House, in Berlin, to which you will be conveyed."

When the prisoners, now reduced to submission, begged that his wife might be allowed to accompany him to Berlin, the captain granted his request.

"Certainly," he answered, with an air of graciousness. "But, I may inform you, you are not going to Berlin; you will be taken to the watch tower at Berlin, where you will be examined before any further step is taken for your punishment."

Meanwhile an enormous crowd had gathered outside the town hall, attracted by the unfamiliar sight of the armed soldiers surrounding it; and it was through a highly excited and roving avenue of spectators that the mayor and his wife, with a policeman for escort, were driven off on their journey to Berlin.

The whole town was soon in a state of excitement and turmoil as the news of the burgomaster's arrest

The Romance in Rings.

No article in jewellery means so much as the ring, chiefly because its most important use, is to pledge one's troth, and later to bind oneself to another in holy matrimony.

But the ring has woven round it many legends which date back many centuries. Rings were in use 1600 B. C. They were collected by the basketful on the battlefields during the second Punic wars, and to-day women of all races accept and treasure them.

We moderns are more restrained in our wearing of rings than were the ancients. At least one great Italian invariably wore sixteen at a time, while a Roman Emperor prided himself on never wearing the same ring twice. In those days gold rings could only be worn by freemen, or those with an income equivalent to a modern four thousand a year. Millionaire Romans seem to have worn rings on the principle we apply to underwear. They had rings for different seasons, heavy trinkets for winter and lighter for summer use. Their wives wore, as a matter of course, rings with a small key attached, these showing a position of authority.

The Greeks esteemed rings as highly as Romans, and had different sets for every week in the year. In Anglo-Saxon times gold rings were the sign-manual of nobility, and the third finger was spoken of as the gold finger.

In days of old, rings, as our national collections show, were made in many ways, some being cut out, others forged or hammered. At one time betrothal rings were invariably made of iron set with lodestone to typify a mutual surrender of liberty. Ordinary rings were then frequently given as birthday presents, and as St. Valentine's gift. Another favorite use for a ring was commemorative. Queen Victoria ordered no fewer than six dozen to be engraved with her likeness among her court ladies upon her wedding day.

Referring to a much more recent event, it might be interesting to note that our own Princess Mary had her wedding ring expressly made for her of Welsh gold mined by hand from small holdings in Wales.

For a Horse-Whipper.

A Boston driver, who recently whipped an old horse till there were ten ridges on his side, was put in court by an officer of the Massachusetts S.P.C.A. This is what the judge said to the defendant: "I wish the conditions had been the reverse that day you hit the horse. I wish you had been in the shafts and your horse had the whip. Then you would have known how he felt. I fine you $25." The fine was paid promptly.

The Power of Imagination.

Here is a golf story which ought to be true, because it is told by an abbot, the Right Rev. Sir David Hunter-Blair, in his book, "A New Medley of Memories."

A young man and a maiden were playing golf—the lady quite a novice—and had reached a hole which was on the top of a little hill. The youth ran up first to see the lie of the ball, and saw that the lady's ball had come to rest directly between his ball and the hole.

"A stymie!" he shouted. "A dead stymie!" The young lady came up with a sniff. "Well, do you know," she said, "I thought I smelt something as I was walking up the hill."

In the Realms of Sport.

TO-NIGHT'S NIGHT.

The most successful season of football that the League has ever known will come to a close this evening when the B.I.S. will play off with the Cadets. Neither team lost a game for the season and each had two draws. This is the third successive year, that the Irishmen have reached the top of the ladder, and apart from everything else it is certainly going to be hard luck if now that the cup which for nearly twenty years has been handed back and forth between the Clubs, is snatched from them at the last moment. However, real sport demands that their opponents shall do their best to wrest the honors from them, and it can be safely left to Capt. Galgley and his team of Cadets to do their utmost. In order to assure the same being completed before darkness sets in the match will start at 8:15 sharp. The probable lineups will be—

B.I.S.—Goal, J. Phelan; backs, Doc. Power, J. G. Higgins; halves, F. Brian S. Constantine, Doc. Fox; forwards, R. Halley, G. Halley, E. Phelan, H. Phelan, F. Phelan.

C.C.C.—Goal, Clare; backs, E. Kavanaugh, A. Galgley; halves, Morris, M. Madigan, T. Christopher; forwards, W. Carl, M. Flynn, R. Meaney, J. Canning, R. O'Toole.

MR. TRAPNELL EXPLAINS.

Sporting Editor Telegram
Dear Sir—I would be grateful if you would publish in your column reasons for my being away from the sports on Wednesday, as people may possibly think I had cold feet. My little boy was taken to hospital that day suffering from Typhoid Fever, and naturally it was impossible for me to leave home. I would certainly love to have been there, as I see the jump was won by 18ft. 9ins., while my jump the previous week was 14 ft., 5ins. so there may have been a chance at me carrying off the A.A.A. Title.
Thanking you in anticipation, I am,
Yours very truly,
K. S. TRAPNELL.

LAST NIGHT'S GAME.

A heroic fight was made last night by the Highlanders in their game against the Felidians, but it was all to no avail for the blue-and-blues hung up a score of 2 to 0 on them. The Kitties had several had several good chances but failed to avail of them. This was the final game of the regular League fixtures. The Felidians make third place in the standing of the Clubs. The B. I. S. head the scoring list by 21 goals and have had the least number scored against them, though the C.L.B. and C.E.I. both occupy the cellar, still they have good strong young material, which, when developed a little more, should produce a championship. Following is the table of what the various Clubs did this year:

Team	P.	W.	L.	D.	F.	A.	Points
B.I.S.	8	0	0	2	21	3	14
Cadets	8	6	0	2	20	4	14
Felidians	8	6	2	0	20	6	12
Saints	8	5	2	1	13	14	11
Guards	8	5	2	0	16	7	10

N. H.	8	2	6	0	5	16	4

CUBS CHAMPIONS.

Claudio Hall and his Cubs have annexed the baseball championship for this year. It was originally decided to play three rounds, but due to the lateness of the season and the fact that no available playing dates are open, the League has decided to award it on the result of the first two rounds. They will therefore be presented with the new Allen Championship trophy. The Lions and B.I.S. are tied for second place with the Wanderers bringing up the rear.

SOME SPEED!

By the way, did you notice that in the Championship Meet on Wednesday, Phelan ran the 200 yards at the same speed as he did the 100, and further, that he was only 1/4 of a second short of Geo. Knight's record of 24 seconds for that distance.

NO REPRESENTATION THIS YEAR

Mr. W. J. Higgins, Chairman of the National Sports Committee, received a wire yesterday from the Wanderers Club asking if it was the intention this year of having Newfoundland represented at the Maritime Championships. Owing to the fact that the N.S.C. were in debt after last year's work, and also the fact that there is too little time to properly organize a track team, it was decided that our athletes should forego an outside visit this season. In the meantime the receipts from last week's meet will form the nucleus of a fund to be accumulated with the idea of possibly having Newfoundland represented in the World's Olympic Games in 1924. This is certainly a wise resolve and will be an incentive for athletes to keep in trim and thus receive a tangible reward for their efforts.

A Tie That Has Lived.

"H.P." as you know, stands for "horse-power," and if, therefore, your motor cycle is a 4 1/2 h.p. one, you know that what is meant is that the engine has a power which is equivalent to that of four and a half horses. Not so! You would be incorrect to the extent of no less than 49,500 lbs! The h.p. unit of power is a fraud, and the late Mr. James Watt, of engine fame is responsible. He was a very careful engineer, in theory and practice, and he discovered, by many experiments, that the raising of 22,000 lbs. one foot per minute was a good average horse-power. But "horse-power," to-day, is reckoned at 33,000 lbs. per foot per minute—11,000 lbs. in excess! That is due to the fact that Watt, in his anxiety to encourage business, offered to sell engines which would develop 33,000 lbs. per foot as a horse-power—a third more than the actual!

Queer Fish.

THEY CAN CLIMB TREES AND BLOW THEMSELVES UP.

The angler, or fishing-trog, with its mouth almost as wide as its body is long, is one of the very queerest of fishes. On its back it has a number of thread-like appendages which other fish think are the small organisms which form their own food.

Before they have discovered their mistake they have fallen a prey to the frog, which does not miss much, with such a capacious mouth. Its appetite, too, is enormous; for in the stomach of one as many as 75 herrings were found.

The sea-horse of Australia lives among seaweeds, being camouflaged by a floating fringe resembling the weeds, which enables it to lure its prey close enough to be captured.

Fish that Travel Overland.

Another instance of camouflage for the sake of obtaining food is that of a prawn and a small fish which lives inside the mouth of a gigantic anemone. They are both white, with red lines, and these colors act as a snare to numerous small creatures which the anemone kills, and all three have a share in the spoils.

There is a curious family of fish to which the climbing perch belongs. They are constantly in and out of the water, and often travel overland. In the rainy season they pass from stream, and from pool to pool. When the hot weather comes they bury themselves in the mud, from which they omit a gurgling sound. If put in an aquarium they will escape if they are not covered in.

Five Days out of Water.

The callicthys, found in the rivers of tropical America and the est Indies, cannot live for more than a quarter of an hour under water, and have to rise to the surface to breathe. It has been known to live for five days entirely out of water. The periplathus, common on the shores of Indian and Australian shores, frequent roots of mangrove trees. When at rest it lies with its body out of the water, the tail only being immersed, and it goes ashore in search of food.

The many quite common leaves the water, apparently liking plenty of air to breathe.

Pilchard's Wonderful Smell.
In South African waters swims a fish something like a eel, and rejoicing the name of billy-blow-up. This is derived from its practice of putting itself out when caught. Another of its peculiarities is that of being poisonous.

Pilchard—to come back to our own fish—have a wonderful sense of smell and can detect a favourite food, consisting of the spores of olive seaweed, fully twenty or thirty miles away, especially after spawning when they are thin and ravenous.
It is a curious fact that, if food is abundant, the fish appear in shoals, but when it is not particularly plentiful, they do not arrive in such great numbers, as if some instinct told them just how far supplies would go round.

Kyle's Passengers.

Funeral of Lord Northcliffe.

POWERFUL TRIBUTE BY FLEET STREET.—THE VACANT CHAIR.

Before the Westminster Abbey service a gathering so representative of the British Press as that which yesterday, August 18, attended the funeral service paid the most impressive tribute ever offered to the memory of a great journalist. Choir and transepts were occupied by newspaper proprietors, editors, and correspondents, and others connected with the London and Provincial Press. The Prince of Wales was represented by General Cotes, Mr. Edward Grogan represented Mr. Edward George, and Mr. J. E. Stephens represented Mr. Winston Churchill. The American Ambassador, Mr. B. H. Lunn, sat with the French Ambassador, the Serbian Minister, and the Rumanian Charge d'Affaires. Near them in the choir were many High Commissioners and Agents-General.

IMPRESSIVE VIEW.

The nave was crowded by the public and by members of the staffs of Lord Northcliffe's publications, delegates representing every department of newspaper production. Through the service the great West Door remained open, so that the many thousands who were unable to gain entry to the Abbey were granted a continuously impressive view of the ceremony as they looked up through the great arch of the nave, the entire length of the church.

Promptly at noon a muffled bell announced the arrival of the funeral cortege. The coffin, covered by a black and gold pall, was borne slowly in procession through the nave, preceded by the choir chanting the opening lines of the Burial Service. The coffin was placed before the High Altar. Brown candles of unbleached wax burned round the catafalque. There were eight motor cars lined with wreaths. An exceptionally beautiful tribute from the Daily Mail was in the form of an empty chair composed of copper chrysanthemums. The service was conducted by the Rev. Dean of Westminster and Canon Chapin, and as it proceeded in simple simplicity and beauty of music many members of the congregation were deeply moved. The Dead March in Saul concluded the service, the congregation rising with bowed heads. There was a short pause, and as the opening notes of Chopin's "March Funerary" sounded through the silent Abbey the coffin was taken up and borne past the grave of the Unknown Warrior to the great West Door.

HIS BROTHERS.

Lord Northcliffe followed by the Hon. Edmond Downes, M.P., and Lord Northcliffe's brothers on either side. Among the mourners were many members of the Harmsworth family. A hushed and reverent crowd of many thousands watched the departure from the Abbey, and at St. Dunstons Cemetery, Finchley, where the committal sentences were pronounced by the Bishop of Birmingham, great crowds had assembled. The grave was lined with white flowers and marguerites on a background of evergreens. Lord Northcliffe is buried beside his grandfather, grandmother, and his father, and not far from the Olenek memorial chapel to the memory of a nephew who was killed in the war. The Bishop of Birmingham was assisted in the service by the Rev. E. G. Bourne, vicar of St. Dunstons, the Rev. C. H. Compston, and the Rev. T. H. Leary. There were affecting scenes as the mourners looked down on the coffin and took their last farewell of a great personality and the foremost journalist of his time.

Unsinkable Ship Attained at Last.

That the unsinkable liner has been attained is the opinion of shipbuilders and marine experts who have made a survey of the two latest additions to the fleet of the United States Lines, namely, steamships President Roosevelt and President Harding. These two vessels known as the "President" type, were originally built as transports and built to be torpedoed. In both the President Roosevelt and the President Harding, which are constructed under government supervision, the element of safety was a primary consideration. Both vessels have 13 water tight compartments and shipping men, who have inspected them, declare that if cut in twain, each half of the vessel would float by itself.

Such ships are furnished with the latest devices to insure safety of the passengers. Among the interesting features in the matter of safety devices are the fire indicators. Throughout the ship these indicators are to be seen and connect with small tubes which register on the bridge. The slightest flame in the vicinity of any of the indicators and the commander is able to reach a force of men to the danger spot. The fire detecting mechanism is so delicate that the lighting of a

Gave the Show Away.

Field-Marshal Earl Haig tells the story of a regiment that was about to be inspected by a certain general. The latter was very particular that the officers commanding companies should know the names of the men in their units, and also where they came from.

When the regiment was drawn up on parade, and before the arrival of the inspecting officer, the captain of one company addressed his men as follows:—

"Now, men, as you know, I am away a good deal, and I do not know all your names, or where each one of you belongs to, but whatever I tell the general, mind, no contradiction!"

The general at length arrived, and as he passed down the lines he stopped before a man, and said to the captain: "This is a smart-looking fellow. What is his name?"

"Jones, sir."

"Where does he come from?"

"Devon, sir."

"Ah, I'm a Devonshire man myself. Fine country, Devon; is it not, Private Jones?" said the general.

Private Jones look startled for a moment, and then replied, heartily: "Bedad, an' there ain't a foiner country in the world, yer honour!"

Cruel to Cats—Fined $50.

The Massachusetts S.P.C.A. will prosecute owners of cats who abandon, or fail to provide for their animals, under Sec. 77, Chap. 273 of the General Laws. In the District Court at Cambridge, one Edward Bushman was convicted recently of unnece-sarily failing to provide proper food and drink for his cats. Bushman went away on a four days' vacation, leaving a mother cat and three kittens locked up in his home. The cries of the kittens reached the ears of neighbors, who notified the Society. Officer Enos obtained a search warrant and entered the house. He found the mother cat dead and the kittens dying of starvation. Kittens were removed to the Animal Hospital and their heartless owner summoned into court the next day. He was found guilty and fined $50. The Massachusetts S.P.C.A. issues a public warning against the criminal offense of abandoning a cat.

Where Trees Have Ghosts.

AND THE PEOPLE HATE TWINS.

Amongst the Kikuyu, a people of the Bantu race dwelling in British East Africa, there is a widespread belief that twins are unlucky.

If a person who is a twin crosses a river he or she must stoop down and fill the mouth with water and, facing downstream, spit it out into the river, saying, according to their custom, "May I not begot (or bear) twins as my father (or mother) did."

The above curious piece of information is contained in a new book by G. W. Hobbie, entitled "Bantu Beliefs and Magic." The author adds that there are very few adult twins amongst the Kikuyu, owing to the fact that twin babies are usually suffocated at birth, or directly afterwards.

Some people think that the Kikuyu are the descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel.

Be this as it may, it is certain that many of their beliefs and tribal ceremonies bear a remarkable resemblance to some of those recorded in the Old Testament.

Mustn't Annoy the Spirits.

Thus, they believe in one supreme god, and in the survival of the soul after death. They practise circumcison, sacrifice rams, and carry out exactly the curious Hebrew custom of the scapegoat, in which a goat, after having the sins of the people transferred to it by the priest, is driven forth into the wilderness and suffered to escape.

The Kikuyu are spiritualists to a man. They will tell in quite a matter-of-fact way of having met and conversed with friends and relatives long since dead.

Sometimes a human spirit will come and call in a peculiar voice outside a village, at night. The people believe that it is hungry, and next day sacrifice a ram.

This is in accordance with the prevalent belief that the spirits must not be ignored, for are they not their own kith and kin? And if they were neglected—well, what more natural than that they should be angry, and visit their displeasure upon their children?

A Curse on the Land.

The Kikuyu, however, go a good deal farther than our spiritualists. They believe that what corresponds to a soul in man is implanted in all things—trees, for example.

Because of this the Kikuyu people, when clearing a forest to make a cultivated field, leave one large and conspicuous tree near the centre of the clearing. Such a tree is believed to collect the spirits from all the other trees which have been cut down, and these tree-spirits, not being entirely displeased, and realising that clearings must be made, are not angry and do not vent their spite upon the people.

Another custom is that which consists in a dying person putting a solemn curse on land belonging to him, with the object of preventing it from passing out of the family. In this the author sees the first rude beginnings of our principal of entail, by which an estate is limited in descent to a particular heir or heirs.

The Kikuyu greatly appreciated Mr. Hobbie's interest in their customs, and even urged him to become one of their recognised elders, that he might be told of things they were compelled to withhold from the uninitiated.

During Dr. Jones' absence his surgery at Avondale will be attended every Wednesday. Parties desiring the visiting Doctor to call at their homes will please have their calls in before noon on that day.—aug22,21,22.

Salmon Taken at Highland River.

Dr. Nydegger, of Baltimore, had good sport fishing in the Highland River last week. On Wednesday he landed a 27 1/2 pound beauty from the bridge pool, after playing safe for two hours, and it required the service of a third man to effect a capture. This was due to the rough landing place and also to the weight of the fish, which practically had its own way until exhaustion set in, more or less, and the big fellow was gaffed and in the hands of its triumphant captor.

On Thursday there was quite a number of salmon seen at tidewater ready to take advantage of the high water on their way up stream, and M. J. Gillis landed a 23 pounder at the river mouth. Thomas Pumphrey also hooked a fish the same day and played it for a time, but it finally got away. On the following Friday Dr. Nydegger caught a 17 pound fish that was by the bridge pool. This salmon was very ramey and after heading down stream led the Doc at a strenuous pace through the boulder strewn waters for over a quarter mile before its progress was arrested by the guide (Allan McEneaney). The Doctor had about 90 yards of line off his reel when the prize was won, and all agree that his success was due equally to good luck as to expert handling of the rod.

John Nydegger, who accompanied Dr. Nydegger, fished for trout only and had all the sport he wanted, especially on the little Crabbes, where dandy catches were made. Both sportsmen were here about two weeks and expressed themselves as being delighted with Newfoundland's climate and her fishing.—Western Star.

Ambidexterity.

Captain Harry Davis, the "Ruler" (i.e. chief) of the Gravesend pilots, told me an amusing story the other day.

It concerned an Irishman who was writing articles on board ship, and who began to write his name with his right hand; then, changing the pen to his left hand, finished it.

"So you can write with either hand, Pat?" asked the officer.

"Yis, sor," replied Pat. "Whin I was a boy me father (rist his soul!) always said to me, Pat, learn to cut yer finger-nails wid yer left hand, for some day ye might lose your right."

Mr. H. W. STIRLING will resume lessons in Organ, Piano, Singing and Theory on Tuesday, Sept. 12th. Pupils of all grades received. Further particulars on application. Studio: 29 Victoria St. sept 4, 5, 8, 9, 11, 12

Untidiness.

(Public Opinion.)

Just now there is a good of effort being expended to show why Newfoundland might profit greatly from a tourist traffic. All are agreed we need hotels if we hope to induce a run of visitors to our shores.

Yes, we need hotels, and many other things, beside, but as space does not permit any extended discussion of the subject this week, I wish to remark we are hopelessly indifferent in a matter of even greater importance than the erection of hotels and that is in the matter of keeping inviolate our many suburban natural attractions.

We use our country lanes as dumping grounds for old tin cans and all forms of rubbish, and picnic parties are very careless in the manner of littering the countryside with papers, etc.

Our many pretty lakes are being robbed of their loveliness by making of their margins depositories of all forms of waste.

Burton's Pond and Long Pond are painful examples of this form of needless desecration.

It is time that a campaign of some sort be started with the idea of leading people away from such thoughtlessness and of cultivating a notion of respect for the margins of the nearby ponds.

It is a crime to continue longer in this state of indifference and some effort should at once be put forth to correct the tendency to disregard the sanctity of nature.

Newspapers may be able to accomplish much and the schools might do a great deal.

A little natural history such as botany taught in the schools could do a lot of good, especially if children be taught to love every lowly thing that grows, as an example of the handi-work of the Creator, who in the very multifariousness of His designs exhibits His wisdom.

When you back a load of rubbish into a lakeside you not only deface the scene, you destroy many beautiful and interesting, often rare forms of floral and faunal life.

We should keep this before us as a restraining motive when we are tempted to deface the beauty of nature.

For that worried feeling—try a pipe of Edgeworth Tobacco. sept 8, 21

A Good Impression.

He was a new curate, and it was the morning of his first sermon. He wanted to make an impression, and was determined not to neglect his personal appearance. In the act of smoothing his hair he said to the old verger under his breath, "Could you get me a glass? A small one will do."

The verger hurried away. Soon he returned, concealing something under his coat. "I know what nervousness is," he said. "I've brought you a whole bottle," and he produced a bottle of whisky.

The curate gasped. "But—"

"Sh!" said the verger. "I'd never have got it if I hadn't said it was for you."

One Way Round.

A Washington butcher one day delivered a pair of chickens to a tender-hearted housewife. She shuddered when she saw them. "I should think," she said, "you would never have the heart to chop the heads off these innocent chickens." "Ma'am," replied the butcher, "I haven't. That was one of the great problems of my life until I discovered a way out of it. Since then I haven't had a qualm of conscience." "How in the world do you do it?" "I don't chop the heads off the chickens any more. I chop the chickens off the heads."—American Legion Weekly.
