THE LYRE AND SWORD.

From the German of Korner.

Green wave the oak forever o'er thy rest,
Thou that beneath its crowning foliage sleepest,
And in the stillness of thy country's breast,
Thy place of memory, as an altar, keepst!
Brightly thy spirit o'er her hills was pour'd,
Thou of the lyre and sword!

Rest, bard! rest, soldier!—by thy father's hand
Here shall the child of after years be led,
With his wreath-offering silently to stand,
In the hush'd presence of the glorious dead,
Soldier and bard! for thou thy path hast trod
With freedom and with God!

The oak waved proudly o'er thy burial rite,
On the crown'd bier to slumber warriors bore thee,
And with true hearts thy brethren of the fight
Wept as they veil'd thee: drooping banners o'er thee,
And the deep guns which rolling peal gave token,
That lyre and sword were broken.

Thou hast a hero's tomb: a lowlier bed
Is here thy portion, gentle bard, because thee lying—
The gentle girl, that bow'd her fair young head,
When thou wert gone, in silent sorrow dying,
Brother, true friend! the tender and the brave—
She pined to share thy grave.

Fame was thy gift from others:—but for her,
To whom the wide world held that only spot,
She lov'd thee!—lovely in your lives ye were,
And in your early deaths divided not.
Thou hast thine oak: thy cross!—What hath she?
Her own blest place by thee!

It was thy spirit, brother! which had made
The bright earth glorious to her thoughtful eye,
Since first in childhood midst the vines ye play'd,
And sweet glad singing through the free blue sky,
Ye were but two;—and when that spirit pass'd,
'Twas to the one, the last!

Woe, ye no long!—She lingered but to trace
Thine image from the image in her breast,
Once, once again to see that buried face
But smile upon her, ere she went to rest,
Too sad a smile, its light was o'er,
It aswerv'd hers, no more.

The earth is silent when thy voice departed,
The homing too lonely whence thy step had led;
What then was left for her, the faithful hearted?
Death, death, to still the yearning for the dead!
Softly she perished:—be the flower deplor'd
Here with the lyre and sword!

Have ye not met ere now?—so let those trust
That meet for moments but to part for years;
That weep, watch, pray, to hold back dust from dust
That love where love is but a font of tears,
Brother, sweet sister! peace around ye dwell—
Lyre, sword, and flower, farewell!

THE REVERSES OF A SEASON.

The evening of Thursday, the fifteenth of February, was one of the most delightful I ever remembered to have spent. I was alone; my heart beat lightly; my pulse was quickened by the exercise of the morning; my blood flowed freely through my veins, as meeting no checks or impediments to its currents, and my spirits were elated by a multitude of happy remembrances and of brilliant hopes. My apartments looked delightfully comfortable, and what signified to me the inclemency of the weather without? The rain was pattering upon the skylight of the staircase; the sharp east wind was moaning angrily in the chimney; but as my eye glanced from the cheerful blaze of the fire to the ample folds of my closed window curtains—as the hearth rug yielded to the pressure of my foot, while heating time to my own music, I sang in rather a louder tone than usual, my favorite air—"Judy O'Flanagan;"—the whistling of the wind, and the pattering of the rain, only serving to enhance, in my estimation, the comforts of my home, and inspire a livelier sense of the good fortune which had delivered me from any evening engagements. Men—married men—may expect at it they will, in good polished sentences, on the delights of their firesides, and the gay cheerfulness of their family circles; but I do not hesitate to affirm that we, in our state of single blessedness, possess, not only all the sweets of our condition, but derive more solid advantages from matrimony itself, than any of these solemn eulogists of their own happiness can dare to pretend to derive from it. We have their dinners, without the expense of them; we have their parties without the fatigue of those interminable domestic discussions which are inseparable from the preliminary arrangements; we share the gay and joyous summer of their homes, when they are illuminated for company, and escape the intervening winter of darkness and economy; and, having participated in the sunny calm, the balmy hours of the establishment, we depart before the unreal and transitory delusion is dispensed, and leave the husband to contemplate the less brilliant changes of the lady's countenance and temper, and to maintain a signal combat against the boisterous perversities of her offspring. No man can be really chez soi—can be in the full enjoyment of all the accommodation afforded by his own house and fireside, and furniture, and presume to exercise the rights of a master over them, unless he be independent of the fetters of wedlock. No man, I repeat it, can be in the entire enjoyment of life, unless he is a young unmarried man, with an attached elderly valet to wait upon him. I am so thoroughly persuaded of this fact, that nothing on earth but my love for you, Maria, could persuade me to relinquish my "unwounded, free condition." Not as but my adoration of such an union of various beauties, and almost incongruous mental accomplishments, could have induced me to abandon my present state of luxurious independence; but under my peculiar and most favored circumstances, I only pass from a lower to a higher degree of happiness.—True, the idle, the downy, the somewhat ignominious gratifications of celibacy are sacrificed; but they are exchanged for the pure and dignified enjoyment of laboring to secure an angel's happiness, beneath the cheering influence of her exhilarating smiles.

I thrust my hands into the pockets of my dressing-gown, which, by-the-by, is far the handsomest piece of old brocade I have ever seen—a large running pattern of gold hollyhocks, with silver stalks and leaves, upon a rich, deep, Pampadour-colored ground—and walking slowly backwards and forwards in my room, I continued—"There never was, there never can have been, so happy a fellow as myself! What on earth have I to wish for more? Maria adores me—I adore Maria. To be sure, she's detained at Brighton; but I hear from her regularly every morning by the post, and we are bound to be united for life in a fortnight. Who was ever so blest in his love? Then again John Fraser—my old school-fellow! I don't believe there's any thing in the world he would not do for me.—I'm sure there's no living thing that he loves so much as myself, except, perhaps, his old uncle Simon, and his black mare."

I had by this time returned to my fireplace, and, reseatting myself, began to apostrophize my magnificent black Newfoundland, who, having partaken of my dinner, was following the advice and example of Abernethy, and sleeping on the rug as it digested. "And you, too, my old Neptune, artn't you the best and handsomest dog in the universe?"

Neptune finding himself addressed, awoke leisurely from his slumbers, and fixed his eyes on mine with an affirmative expression.

"Ay, to be sure you are, and a capital swimmer too!"

Neptune raised his head from the rug, and beat the ground with his tail, first to the right hand, and then to the left.

"And is he not a fine, faithful fellow? and does he not love his master?"

Neptune rubbed his head against my hand, and concluded the conversation by again sinking into repose.

"That dog's a philosopher," I said; he never says a word more than is necessary.—Then, again, not only blest in love and friendship, and my dog; but what luck it was to sell, and in these times too, that old, lumbering house of my fathers, with its bleak, bare, hilly acres of chalk and stone, for eighty thousand pounds, and to have the money paid down on the very day the bargain was concluded. By-the-by, though I had forgot—I may as well write to Messrs. Drax and Drayton about that money, and order them to pay it immediately into Coutts—mighty honest people and all that; but, faith, no solicitor should be trusted or tempted too far. It's a foolish way, at any time, to leave money in other people's hands—in any body's hands—and I'll write about it once."

THE QUEBEC TRANSCRIPT.

"As I said so, I did. I wrote my commands to Messrs. Drax and Drayton, to pay my eighty thousand pounds into Coutts; and, after desiring that my note might be forwarded to them the first thing in the morning, I took my candle, and accompanied by Neptune, who always keeps watch by night at my chamber door, proceeded to bed as the watchman was calling "past twelve o'clock," beneath my window."

"It is indisputably very beneficial for a man to go to bed thus early; it secures him such pleasant dreams. The visions, that filled my imagination during sleep, were not of a less animated nature than those of my waking lucubrations. I dreamt that it was day-break on my wedding morning; that I was dressed in white satin and silver lace, to go and be married; that Maria, seated in a richly painted and gilt sedan chair, was conveyed to the church by the parson and clerk, who wore favours in their wigs, and large nose-gays in the breasts of their canonicos; that our hands were joined by Hymen in person, who shook his torse over our heads at the altar, and danced a pas de deux with the bride down the middle of Regent street, as we returned in procession from St. James; that I walked by the side of Neptune, who was, in some unaccountable manner, identified with my friend John Fraser; that I acted as father of the bride, and alarmed me in the midst of the ceremony, by whispering in my ear that he had forgotten to order breakfast for the party; that, on returning to my house, which appeared to be the Pavillion at Brighton, I found a quantity of money-bags, full of sovereigns, each marked eighty thousand pounds, ranged in rows on a marble table; that I was beginning to empty them at the moment—when my dream was suddenly interrupted by the hasty entrance of my valet, who stood pale and trembling by my bedside, and informed me, with an agitated voice, that he had carried my note, as ordered, to the office of Messrs. Drax and Drayton, the first thing in the morning, and had seen Mr. Drax; but that Mr. Drayton had decamped during the night, taking away with him my eighty thousand pounds, and five hundred pounds of his partner's."

"I was horror struck!—I was ruined!—What was to be done. The clock had not yet struck ten, but, early as it was, I was determined to rise immediately, and see Drax myself upon the subject. In an instant—in less than an hour—I was dressed, and on my way to Lincoln's Inn. Twenty minutes after, I stood in the presence of Mr. Drax."

"He appeared before me, among the last of the pigstails, with his powdered head, his smooth black silk stockings, and his polished shoes, the very immutabile Mr. Drax, whom I had remembered as a quiz from the earliest days of my childhood. There he stood in the same attitude, in the same dress, the same man of respectability, calculation and arrangement, that my father had always represented to me as a model of an attorney, but with a look of bewildered paleness, as placed him suddenly in a situation where his respectability became doubtful, his calculations defeated, and all his arrangements dis-composed."

"Oh, Mr. Lutterell!" he exclaimed, "I beg pardon, Mr. Lionel Lutterell, you've received intimation, then, of this most extraordinary occurrence—what will the world think—what will the world say? The house of Drax and Drayton! Such a long established, such a respectable house!—and one of the partners—Mr. Drayton, I mean—to abscond!"

"Ay, Mr. Drax, but think of my eighty thousand pounds!"

"Went away, Sir, without leaving the slightest instruction where he might be met with, or where his letters might be sent after him! A most extraordinary proceeding!"

"You'll drive me mad, Mr. Drax. Let me implore you to inform me what's to be done about my money?"

"Your money, Mr. Lionel Lutterell?—here has the same party taken off with him five hundred pounds of the common property of the house; and all the loose cash we had in our banker's hands; drew a draft for the whole amount; appropriated it to himself; and never took the ordinary measure of leaving me a memorandum of the transaction! Why, sir,

I might have drawn a bill this very morning—many things less improbable occur—and have had my draft refused acceptance!"

"Oh, Mr. Drax, this torture will be the death of me. Sir—sir—I'm ruined, and I'm going to be married!"

"A most unfortunate event. But Mr. Lutterell, you gay young men of fashion at the west end cannot possibly enter into the feelings of a partner and a man of business;—my situation—"

"Incapable of listening any longer to the lamentations of Mr. Drax, and perceiving that he was too much engrossed by the perplexities of his own affairs, to yield any attention to my distresses, I seized my hat, and hastily departed, to seek elsewhere for the advice and consolation I required."

"I'll go to John Fraser," I exclaimed,—"he's always sensible, always right, always kind. He'll feel for me, at all events; he'll suggest what steps are best to be taken in this most painful emergency."

"Upon this determination I immediately proceeded to act, and hastened towards Regent street with the rapidity of one who feels impelled by every second that elapses between the conception and the execution of his purpose. As I was pressing forward on my hasty way, my thoughts absorbed in the anxiety of the moment, and my sight dazzled by the rapidity of my movements, and the confused succession of the passing objects, I was checked in my course by Edward Burrell—the pet of the dandies—Stop, Lionel, my dear fellow, stop. I want to congratulate you."

"Congratulate me!—Upon what?"

"Your appointment: inspecting Postman for the district of St. Ann's, Soho; of course you're he—none but personages of such elevated station could be justified in using such velocity of movement, and in running over so many innocent foot passengers?"

"Nonsense!—Don't stop me!—I've just heard of the greatest imaginable misfortune. Drayton, my attorney, has decamped, heaven only knows to what country, and carried off the whole of my fortune."

"Oh! indeed!—So you're one upon the unnumbered list of bankrupts!—A failure!—a complete failure!—Don't be angry, Lionel! I always said you were rather a failure.—And so now the attorney man—what's his name?—has absconded and ruined you for life by his successful speculation in hops?"

"The poet of the dandies walked off laughing as immoderately as a 'professed exclusive' ever dares to laugh, and made what he believed to be a pun, the words of which I dare say the sentence is capable of some quibbling interpretation. The words are unintelligible, unless they contain a pun: Whenever I hear one man talk nonsense, and find others laugh, I invariably conclude that he is punning; and if the last parting words of Edward Burrell really do exhibit a specimen of his vulgar kind of solecism, the puppy was more than indemnified for the distresses of his friend, as any punner would necessarily be, by the opportunity of hitching a joke upon them. 'It will not be so with you, John Fraser!' I muttered to myself; and in a few seconds I rapped at the door of his lodgings in Regent street."

"They detained me an age in the street—I rapped and rapped again, and then I rang, and at the ringing of the bell, a stupid-looking, yellow-haired, stramy maid-servant, in a dirty lace cap, issued from the scullery, wiping her crimson arms in her check apron to answer the summons."

"Is Mr. Fraser at home?" I demanded in a voice of somewhat angry impatience.

"Mr. Fraser at home!—No, sir, he an't."

"Where's he gone to?"

"Where's he gone?" rejoined the girl, in a low drawing voice—"I'm sure, sir, I can't tell, nor I."

"Is his servant in the way?"

"Is his servant in the way?—No, Sir, the other gentleman's gone too."

"His servant with him?—Why, how did they go?"

"How did they go?—Where in a post-chay and four, to be sure—they sent for him from Newman's."

"Heavens! how provoking! Did they start early?"

"Start early? No, to be sure, they started very late; as soon as ever master came home from dining in Russell square."

"Russell Square, what the deuce should John Fraser do dining in Russell Square! How very distressing!"

"Master came home two hours before Mr. Robert expected him, and ordered four horses to be got ready directly."

"Indeed! what can possibly have happened?"

"What had happened? Oh, Mr. Robert told me all about what had happened; says he, 'my master's great friend, Mr. Lutterell, is clean ruined; his lawyer man's run off with all his money. Master's in a great quandary about it,' says Mr. Robert; and so, suppose, says he, 'that master and I are going out of town a little while to keep clear of the mess.'"

"Good heavens! and can such cold-hearted treachery really be?"

"And so," continued the girl, perfectly regardless of my vehement ejaculations, "and so I told Mr. Robert I hoped luck would go with them; for you know, sir, it's all very well to have friends and such like, as long as they've got everything nice about them; but when they're broke up, or anything of that kind, then it's another sort of matter, and we have no right to meddle or make in their concerns."

The following characteristic anecdote of a British sailor will be read with feelings of deep interest. The subject of it was the father of Sir T. Trowbridge, now one of the Lords of the Admiralty—

"A curious scene occurred on board the Sans Pareille on the morning of the 1st of June, (Lord Howe's action.) Captain Trowbridge, who had no account recently taken in the Castor, with his convey, bound to Newfoundland, was a prisoner on board the French ship just named, where Rear Admiral Ni-willy had his flag flying. After Lord Howe had obtained his position, and had drawn his fleet in a line parallel to that of the enemy, he brought to, and made the signal to go to breakfast. Trowbridge knew the purport of the signal, and telling it to the French Admiral, they took the advantage of the time allowed them for the same repast. Trowbridge, (whose appetite never forsok him on these occasions,) was helping himself to a large slice from the brown loaf, when the French captain observed to him by an interpreter (for Trowbridge would never learn their language,) that the English Admiral showed no disposition to fight, and he was certain did not intend to—

"What!" said the English hero, dropping his loaf, and laying his hand almost too emphatically on the Frenchman's shoulder, while he looked him furiously in the face, "not fight! stop till they have had their breakfast! I know John Bull—well, and when his belly is full, you will get up to engage. Trowbridge was sent into the boatswain's store-room, where for a length of time he leant against the foremast, and amused himself in pouring out every invective against the French, and the man appointed to guard him. Sud-'enly he felt the vibration of the mast, and heard it fall over the side; when grasping the astonished Frenchman with both his hands, he began to jump and caper, with all the gestures of a maniac. The Sans Pareille soon after surrendered, and Trowbridge assisted in getting her to rights and taking her into port."—Brenton's Naval History.

THE TRANSCRIPT.

QUEBEC, WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1839.

No American or Upper Canada papers received by mail this morning, and Montreal papers of Monday are entirely destitute of interest. The steam-ship Liverpool which was to sail on the 13th ultimo, may now be considered due, and the news by her which cannot fail to be of importance, is anxiously looked for.

The Quebec Races are advertised to take place on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 3rd and 4th September. The Stewards appointed are H. J. Caldwell, (Chas. De-Lery, G. W. R. Land, Captain Daniel (Coldstream Guards), Captain Wington, (11th Regiment), G. B. Syme, D. A. C. G. Rout, Charles Duchesney, and A. C. Buchanan, Esquire; Secretary, Capt. Boyle, (Coldstream Guards).

The Literary Garland.—The eighth number of this popular and interesting publication has been received in town this morning.

The first number of a semi-weekly journal under the title of "The Canadian Colonist," was issued in this city on Monday last.

Mr. T. Mitchell has withdrawn from the editorial management of the Montreal Courier. The following intimation of it appears in the last number of that paper:—

The underigned terminates, with the present number, his casual connection with the Montreal Courier, intending, henceforth, to devote himself exclusively to the duties of the Legal Profession, which he lately had the honour of becoming a member. He has much gratification in announcing that the conduct of this Journal now falls into hands, that will give to its various departments, what his other and to him more important duties, while under his control rendered impossible—un-divided attention; and he has no doubt, it will become worthy of even a more liberal patronage than, through the kind indulgence, of the public to many short comings, it has hitherto received.

THOMAS MITCHELL.

Montreal, 1st July, 1839.

An extraordinary degree of excitement prevails among the Members of the Quebec Bar, in consequence of the nomination of Mr. Cochrane as a Judge of the Court of King's Bench.—It has been suggested that the Bar of this city should meet and sustain their brethren of Quebec.—Montreal Courier.

From the Mercury of yesterday.

Lieutenant Rubidge, Royal Navy, arriving on the ship Waterloo, from Limerick on the 28th May. This gentleman has brought her 181 emigrants, sent out by the Ennis migration Society, acting for Colonel Whydah, who has succeeded to the estate of the late Earl of Egmont at Petworth in Sussex. It is excellent to have the arrangements under which these people embarked, that not a case of sickness has occurred on board. The whole expense of the voyage is borne by Col. Whydah, and at his sole cost, under the direction of Lieut. Rubidge. They are to be conveyed to their destined location in the Newcastle District, Upper Canada.

Mr. Rubidge further reports that there will be an immigration of about eight thousand to Scotland this year.

From the same gentleman we have also received three numbers of a new monthly publication, The Canadian, British American, & West Indian Magazine.

On Monday last, the Honble. Messrs. Cochrane and Duval, were sworn in as assistant Judges of the Court of King's Bench of this District. It is generally said that one of the situations had been previously offered to a gentleman high in practice at the Quebec bar, and by him declined.

On Thursday last a body in a very advanced stage of decomposition was found, by some habitans of Ange Gardien, floating in the north channel of the St. Lawrence, opposite the Fall of Memory. From the clue given by the remains of the dress there is every reason to believe that the body found was that of Mr. Williams, Mate of Her Majesty's Ship Malaba, who fell into the river whilst at fireworks were exhibiting from the shipping, on the night of the 28th June, 1838, the anniversary of the Queen's Coronation.—If so was the case the body of the unfortunate young officer had been twelve months in the water.

A person was arrested on Tuesday, at Benmont, charged with some offence of a political nature, his name is Picard des Trois Mains; he had for some time resided out of the Province, and kept a public house in the neighbourhood of Lake George, in the State of New York.

D. BRANDETH requests a perusal of the following article:—

LIFE AND DEATH,

Every thing has two distinct principles to its nature; one

THE PRINCIPLE OF LIFE

THE OTHER
THE PRINCIPLE OF DEATH
So long as the principle of Life predominates, Health is enjoyed. When the principle of Death, sickness takes place. How is this accounted for? By the principle of Death, I mean the principle of decomposition or decay, which is each hour going on in the human frame from the hour of birth, to that of our final exit. While the natural outlets—the pores—the bowels—all other excretories of the body, discharge these decayed particles as fast as they are generated, we are in a state of health; we are free from the presence of the disease.

When, from breathing an impure atmosphere, living in a vicinity of swamps, or when we are in the constant habit of coming in contact with bad smells—effluvia arising from obnoxious accumulations of animal or vegetable bodies in a state of putridity, being infected from a living body under the influence of disease in a malignant state; or sedentary occupations; or, in short, any cause which promotes decomposition faster than the stomach and bowels and the other excretories can remove, naturally; we are then in a state of disease. And should the cause which produces this state of the body remain, and nothing be done to drive the accumulated and accumulating impurities out of the body, the principle of death or decomposition, will become paramount, and the last clattering of life depart from the once animated clay.

How then, shall we contract these death dispensing influences? How?—
PURGE!—Yes!—How?—I say Purge! The maxim is that we shall not let the matter stand, if this hand or brain can accomplish so mighty an explanation. Yes, purged be that pain in the head, the back, the bowels, the foot, the stomach, the side, the throat. Does it arise from internal or external cause, still say Purge!—For know this self-evident truth, that pain cannot exist, save by the presence of some impurity—some deposit of decomposed particles upon the organ or part where the pain is seated. And purging discharges this impurity by the bowels, and continuing the practice daily, will cure every complication of disease; and will prevent any one from becoming seriously indisposed; even when in constant contact with the most malignant fevers which cannot by possibility seriously affect the body, if we are continually and regularly in a pure state, by frequent and effectual purgation. Hippocrates says, "Purgation expels what must be expelled, and patients find relief; if on the contrary, they are tormented by purgation, it is a proof there are yet matters which must be expelled."

The subscriber of this has resided in every variety of climate, and by always purging on the first appearance of sickness, has enjoyed for the last ten years, uninterrupted health. For see, may call such the state of him who is never sick more than 6 or 8 hours, about the time it takes to secure the effect of a purgative. The purgative I make use of is my grandfather's pills, and they are, to my certain knowledge, the most judiciously balanced purge in existence. I have used them for 8 months daily, in doses of from 2 to 16 pills per day, to satisfy myself as to their innocency. It therefore, cannot be doubted. It is my opinion, that any person, be he ever prostrated by disease, provided he is capable of taking exercise at all, may lengthen his life to 60 years, by continuing to assist his natural functions with the BRANDETH VEGETABLE PILLS. Death never can take place until the Principle of decomposition puts out the lamp of life. And that would seldom be before 60 or 70 years, was this principle of purgation always resorted to on the first appearance of sickness.

In the hope that these remarks may be of some service, I am the public's obedient servant,
D. BRANDETH, M. D.
Great caution is required to procure the genuine Brandeth's Pills.
Druggists and Chemists are never in any place appointed Agents by Dr. B. All his authorized Agents have an engraved certificate of agency, signed by himself; unless this certificate can be shown, do not purchase. This caution is absolutely necessary to guard the public against spurious Pills.

NOTICE.

AN AGREEMENT having been entered into between the Phoenix Fire Assurance Company of London, and that of the Metellex of Glasgow, which provides for the continuation of the business of the latter, and the assumption of its risks by the former, we hereby announce the same to the public, and request that the holders of Policies issued by us as Agents of the Metellex will apply to the Agents of the Phoenix in all things relating thereto.
(Signed) TREMAIN, WHITE & CO.

In consequence of the agreement referred to in the above advertisement, we beg to inform the holders of Policies of the Metellex Fire Company of Glasgow, that the Phoenix has assumed the risks of that Company in the future, they are ready to issue new Policies of the Phoenix, free of charge, for the unexpired term of those of the Metellex.
(Signed)

GILLESPIE, MOFFAT, JAMESON & CO.
Agents for the Phoenix Fire Assurance Company for the Canada.

CALEDONIA SPRINGS.

THE favorable opinion I formerly entertained of the waters of the Caledonia Springs is MORE THAN CONFIRMED, as I have from the benefits I personally derived from its use, as from what I observed of their effects on others. The water should be drunk in moderate quantities before breakfast, and repeated in for some weeks at least.
