It is to be hoped that measures will be early taken to accomplish this reduction. One thing is certain, if there was no postage on letters between this country and Europe, the let-ters of the emigrant population would not be long in accomplishing a cottinestal re-volution. Every lotter from an emigrant to his friends at home, is a hand greende thrown into the powder-house of despoism The subject should be commended to tho suggestion by which the Bureau of Agri-culture might be made an instrument of vast and permanent utility. It is well known that the most serious drawback to the farmer's prosperity is the cost of la-bour. Indeed, it is sometimes impossible for farmers to find help enough to save their crops of grain and hay at any price ; and thus it not unfrequently happens that they suffer extensive losses, which would have been avoided had there been a large supply of laborers in the country To take such steps as would remove this drawback

The subject should be commended to the Continental rulers, as they seemed deter-mined to suppress every specery of rebellion and there is none more dangerous than to the farmers's prosperity, by the intro-duction of a sufficient number of agricultuthis.

Canada would go a near at a race that would astonish our most progressive neigh-bors. By adding to the Presidency of the Council and Bureau of Agriculture a Chief Commissionership of Emigration, we think that Mr. Cameron would have work enough on hand to give continual employment to his active mind.

Considerable noise has been made in Four emigrant agents in Ireland, one the political world latterly about the erec-tion of a new office by the Ministry under Liverpool, and one in Glasgow, or six in all at salary of, say £250 each, the designation of "The Bureau of Agri-culture." It is said that the object of or £1,500 a year for the six, would would do more for the future prosperity of agriculture in Canada, and indeed for It is said that the object of forming the "Bureau," (what a nice name) is to enable Mr. Malcolm Cameron to toke his seat in the Cabinet. Whatever objection we may have urged against the hon, gentleman for mention in regard to his connection with the pre-Commissioner of emigration, that is of the Bureau of agriculture, that is of the Presi-dent of the Council, for Mr. Cameron doing he could enjoy his otium cum digni-tate in the most handsome manner; but when to the duties of a Presidency are would, we are confident, undertake succes-fully the duties of the three departments. dded those of a Bureau of Agriculture, he will have no objection, so we are led to believe, to take his seat at the head of the The expenses of the agents may be defray-ed by a tax of a shilling a head on the emigrants, to be collected from the captains or owners of the vessels in which they ar-rive at Quebec. Or indeed the Province might well afford in consideration of the elementers which it would be sure to derive Council. Some people may smile at the idea of arranging matters thus, but in all sincerity we can see an cause for levity or objection. Mr. Cameron might have taken his seat in the Cabinet as simple advantages which it would be sure to derive President of the Council, but as he con-sidered that the duties of that office were from a regular, well organized system of emigration, to pay the expenses. We throw out these suggestions rather loosely, not of so laborious a nature as to entitle not of so laborhous a nature as to entitle him in function conscientize to  $\pounds$  1000 a year, why there was nothing for it but to make more work for him by making a new Bu-reau. I had the honor to guide the batallion of infantry under the gallant young Col Wheate of New Orleane. My instruc-tions were to attack the enemy in the Cathe-dral, and if Wheate thought it practicable, to take the enemy's artillery. We gained the desired position, but owing to a very deep ravise and creek, we were unable to storm the Cathedral, but took a position by storm, which placed our little army in pos-session of almost every important point in the city. It was in gaining this position that Col. C. R. Wheate, Capts. McLean and Chins wove bright laurels around their brows, which will never fade.—Col. Wheate charged to the port holes the enemy's for-tresses, and drove his sword through the heart of the officer in attempting to carry it. How easy it would be, by the mere statement of a few facts such as the fore-going, to divert a considerable portion of stream of immigration that has been setting in towards the States for the past few years, from its usual course, and direct it to the mouth of the St. Lawrence. Instead of cargoes of women and paupers from the poor-houses, we would have thousands of vigorous and to some extent comfortable emigrants landing on our shores yearly. They would scatter through the fertile agricultural districts of Upper Canada, and supply the farmers with abundance of hands to cultivate their farms and save their crops, while earning what would en-able themselves in a few years, to move back and clear out farms of their own .-By this means labour would be rendered cheap for the present settlers, the popula-tion of the country would be speedily in-

Doetry. THE MODERN BELLE.

Extract from Mr. Sark's Poem, read at th late Manchester (N. II.) Fair.

The daughter sits in the parlos And racks in her casy, chair ; She's clad in her sits and sating, Asd jewels are in her hair-See wisks, and giggles, and simpers, And simpers, and giggles, and winks, And though the talks but a utile, The yestly more than the thinks.

Her father goes clad in his reseatt, And ragged and needy at that— His scale are all out at the elbows, He wears a most shocking bad bat. He's hoarding and saving his shilling. So carefully day by day, While she, on her besux and poodless, Is throwing them all away.

She lies a bed in the morning. Thil peerly the hour of noon; Then comes down enapping and searling. Because she was called so soos; Her hair is still in the papers. Her chacks still dabled with paist-Remains of her last night's bluebes, Before she intended to faint.

She dotes upon men unshaves, And men with the "flowing hair," And men with the "flowing hair," She's elequont over moustashes, They give such a foreign air. She talks of Italias music, And falls in leve with the moon, And though but a mouse should meet he She aiaks away in a swoon.

Her feet are so very little, Her hands are so very white, Her jaweis are so very white, Her jaweis are so very heavy, And her head so very light; Her color is made of cosmetics, Though this she perer will own, Her body's made mostly of cotton, Her heart is made wholly of stone.

She fails in love with a fellow. She fails in love with a fellow, Who swells with a foreign air, He marries her for her money, She marries her for his hair ; One of the very best matches— Both see well mated in life, She's got a fool for a husband— He's got a fool for a wife.

EDUCATION OF THE HEART.

EDUCATION OF THE HEART. It is the voice of the age to substitute learsing for wisdom—to educate the head, and forgot there is a more important educat-ion necessary for the heart. The reason is sultivated at an sige when nature does not furnish the elements necessary to a success-ful cultivation of it; and the child is solicit-ed to reflection, when it is only capable of sensation and emoine. In infancy the at-tention and the momory are only excited strongly by the senses, and more the heart; and the father may instil more solid and available instructions in an hour spent in the fields, where the wisdom and goodness are exemplified, seen and felt, than in a month spent in the study, where they are expounded in a strootyped a sphorisms. No physician doubts that precocious child-ron, fifty cases for one, are much the worse for the discipline they have undergone. The mind esems to have been stained, and the foundation for insanity is laid. When the studies of maturer years are strided into the head of a child, people do reflect on the annomical fact, that the brain of an infant is not the brain of a man; that the one is confirmed; and can bear ex-repose; that to force the attention to ab-stract facts; to load the memory with chro-mological and historical or scinutif detail; in short, to expect a child's brain to bear with impunity the exertions of a man's, is as irrational as would be to hazard the same sort of experiment on its muscles. The first eight or ten years of life should be devoted to the education of the heart—be devoited to the education of the heart-to the formation of principles, rather than to the acquirement of what is usually term-ed knowledge. Nature herself points out such a course for the emotions as are the liveliest and most easily moulded; being as yet usalloyed by passion. It is from this source that the mass of men are hereafter to show their sum of happiness or misery. The actions of the immense majority are, under all circumstances determined much more by feeling than reflection; in truth, life present an happiness that we should feel rightly; very faw instances occur where it is necessary that we should think profoundly.
