'Mercy, My Lord.'

Mercy, Not for Me, but the Wife.

(Concluded.) It consisted in fixing my eyes and addressing my language to each juror one after the other. In this way each considers the address to be an appeal to his individual intelligence, and responds to it by falling into the views of the barrister. On this occasion the jury easily fell into the trap. I could see that I had got them into the humor of putting confidence in the evidence I had to produce.

The trial proceeded. The cause of the death was scientifically stated by two medical men. Next followed the evidence as to the finding of the knife in the bedroom of the deceased man; the discovery of the mortgage deed, and the large sum of money, in the prisoners' sleeping apartment; the finding of the key of the back-door in the male prisoner's pocket; and his demeanor and expressions on the night of the perpetration of the crime. In his cross-examination of the constable, several facts perfectly new to me were elicited by the very able counsel for the prisoners. Their attorney had judiciously maintained the strictest secrecy as to the nature of the defence, so that it now took me by surprise. The constable, in reply to questions by counsel, stated that the pockets of the deceased were empty; that not only his purse, but a gold watch, chain, and seals, which he usually wore, had vanished, and no trace of them had as yet been discovered. Many other things were also missing. A young man of the name of Pearce, apparently a sailor, had been seen in the village once or twice in the company of Mary Strugnell; but he did not notice what sort of hat he generally wore; he had not seen Pearce since she night the crime was committed; had not sought for him.

Mary Strugnell was the next witness. She repeated her previous evidence with precision and apparent sincerity, and then I abandoned her with a mixed feeling of anxiety and curiosity to the counsel for the defence. A subtle and able cross-examination of more than two hours' duration followed; and at its conclusion, I felt that the case for the prosecution was so damaged, that a verdict of condemnation was, or ought to be, out of the question. The salient points dwelt upon, and varied in every possible way. In this long sitting, were these:

"What was the reason she did not return in the evening in question to her aunt's to supper as usual?" "She did not know, except that she wished to get home." "Did she keep company with a man of the name of Pearce?" "She had walked out with him once or twice." "When was the last time?" "She did not remember." "Did Pearce walk with her home on the night of the murder?" "No."

"Not part of the way." "Yes; part of the way." "Did Pearce sometimes wear a black, shiny hat?" "No--yes; she did not remember." "Where was Pearce now?" "She didn't know."

"Had he disappeared since that Sunday evening?" "A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM. This is a condition for which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness--a breakdown, a weakness of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its cause (for they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same, the more prominent being, sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weakness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. None will tamper with it, and it is a sure sign of an approaching end."

"VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY to those of these, mental, physical, and experience proves that as night succeeds the day this may be made certain secure by a course of the celebrated, life-restoring tonic."

"THERAPION No. 3 as it is taken in accordance with the directions given on the wrapper, it will be the greatest health restorer."

"THE EXPIRING LAMP OF LIFE LIGHTED UP AFRESH, and a new chance is afforded in the case of what had been deemed a hopeless case."

"THERAPION No. 3 is sold by all chemists, druggists, and grocers. It is a pure vegetable preparation, and is entirely free from any element of danger. It is a sure restorer of vitality, and is a most valuable tonic. It is a most valuable tonic. It is a most valuable tonic. It is a most valuable tonic."

"THERAPION may now also be obtained in Drugge (Tasteless) form."

another, the charge of murder had been fixed upon him and his hapless wife. When his confession had been uttered, I felt a species of self-accomplishment in having contributed to his destruction, and gladly would I have undone the whole day's proceedings. The judge, on the contrary, was quite unimpressed. Viewing the harangue of Armstrong as a mere tissue of falsehood, he coolly pronounced sentence of death on the prisoners. They were to be hanged on Monday. This was Friday.

"A had job!" whispered the counsel or the defence as he passed me. "That witness of yours, the woman Strugnell, is the real culprit." I tasted no dinner that day: I was sick at heart; for I felt as if the blood of two fellow-creatures was on my hands. In the evening I sallied forth to the judge's lodgings. He listened to all I had to say; but was quite unperturbed. The obstinate old man was satisfied that the sentence was as it should be. I returned to my inn in a fever of despair. Without the approval of the judge, I knew that an application to the Secretary of State was futile. There was not even time to send to London, unless the judge had granted a respite.

All Saturday and Sunday I was in misery. I denounced capital punishment as a gross injustice--a national sin and disgrace; my feelings of course being influenced somewhat by a recollection of that unhappy affair of Harvey, noticed in my previous paper. I half resolved to give up the war, and rather go and sweep the streets for a livelihood, than run the risk of getting poor people hanged who did not deserve it. On the Monday morning I was pacing up and down my breakfast room in the next sitting town, in a state of great excitement, when a chaise-and four drove rapidly up to the hotel, and out tumbled Johnson the constable. His tale was soon told. On the previous evening, the landlady of the Black Swan, a roadside public-house about four miles distant from the scene of the murder, reading the name of Pearce in the report of the trial in the Sunday county paper, sent for Johnson to state that that person had on that fatal evening called and left a portmanteau in her charge, promising to call for it in an hour, but had never been there since. On opening the portmanteau, Wilson's watch, chain, and seals, and other property, were discovered in it; and Johnson, as soon as it was possible, set off in search of me. Instantly, for there was not a moment to spare, I in company with Armstrong's counsel, sought the judge, and with some difficulty obtained from him a formal order to the sheriff to suspend the execution till further orders. Off I and the constable started, and happily arrived in time to stay the execution, and deprive the already-assembled mob of the brutal exhibition they so anxiously awaited. On inquiring for Mary Strugnell, we found that she had absconded. At the evening of the trial. All search for her proved vain. Five months had passed away; the fate of Armstrong and his wife was still undecided, when a message was brought to my chamber in the Temple from a woman said to be dying in St. Bartholomew's Hospital. It was Mary Strugnell; who, when in a state of intoxication, had fallen down in front of a carriage, as she was crossing near Holborn Hill, and had both her legs broken. She was dying miserably, and had sent for me to make a full confession relative to Wilson's murder. Armstrong's account was perfectly correct. The deed was committed by Pearce, and they were packing up their plunder when they were started by the return of the Armstrongs. Pearce, snatching up a bundle and a portmanteau, escaped by the window; she had not nerve enough to attempt it, and crawled back to her bedroom, where she, watching the doings of the farmer through the chinks of the partition which separated her room from the passage, concocted the story which convicted the prisoners. Pearce thinking himself pursued, too heavily encumbered for rapid flight, left the portmanteau as described intending to call for it in the morning, if his fears proved groundless. He, however, had not courage to risk calling again, and made the best of his way to London. He was now in Newgate under sentence of death for a burglary, accompanied by personal violence to the inmates of the dwelling he and his gang had entered and robbed. I took care to have the deposition of the dying wretch put into proper form; and the result was, after a great deal of petitioning and worrying of authorities, a full pardon for both Armstrong and his wife. They sold Craig Farm, and removed to some other part of the country, where, I never troubled myself to inquire, Deeply grateful was I to be able at last to wash my hands of an affair, which had cost me so much anxiety and vexation; albeit the lesson it afforded me of not coming hastily to conclusions, even when the truth seems, as it were, upon the surface of the matter, has not been, I trust, without its uses.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By EDITH CARROLL

"If you want to see a stunning suit," said the man with me, "look over there!"

I looked. And having a particular interest in winter suits at that time, I did more than just look. I analyzed. And it wasn't a remarkable suit at all. Just a very good looking broadcloth trimmed with a fairly handsome braid. Not in the least more noteworthy than a dozen suits that had passed quite unnoticed. But the point was this. It was so stunningly worn that it looked stunning.

The woman had a good figure and she carried herself so splendidly that the effect was that she was exceptionally well dressed.

The entire unconsciousness of the man's tribute made me realize anew what a vast difference carriage makes in anyone's appearance.

Nothing sets off a good gown or redeems a poor one like a good carriage.

Take that same gown which our unknown friend, with her spry step, her shoulders squared, her head erect, and her abdomen well held in, made appear such a stunning affair, and put it on a woman who didn't know how to stand, and you would at once convert it into a commonplace garment which no one would look at twice.

First News of the Minty.

British Were Warned by W. Brendish, a Telegraph Operator.

The following story of the Indian mutiny is told in the London Daily Mail:

There has just been retired from the service of the Postmaster-General a servant who may be said to have practically saved India to this country. This is W. Brendish, telegraph master, the sole survivor of those who were present in Delhi in May, 1857, and who, in the courageous discharge of his duty on the memorable 11th of that month, rendered invaluable service to the state.

It was Mr. Brendish, who, without orders and acting on his own responsibility, dispatched the telegram which warned the authorities of the "Junjah" of the outbreak of the terrible mutiny. "The sepoy has come and are burning everything," he wired. "Mr. Todd is dead, and we hear, several Europeans. We must shut up."

The fatal news was sent to Lahore by Mr. Brendish, who was then but a youth, while the mutineers were pursuing their work of slaughter in every part of the cantonment. It has been acknowledged that this presence of mind on the part of young Brendish saved India. The story is told by Mr. Brendish in a modest narrative of his services on that eventful day the telegraph staff at Delhi, he says consisted of Mr. Todd, assistant telegraph officer, and two young signalers, Brendish and Pilkington.

On Sunday, the 10th of that month in the forenoon, the signalers at the Meerut office wired that eighty men of the 3rd Cavalry had been confined and were to be blown away from guns for refusing to bite the Enfield cartridges only recently issued to the troops. No further news was received, and at 4 p.m. the line with Meerut was found to be interrupted. On the following morning Mr. Todd took a dark and started for Meerut, to ascertain at what point along the road the break had occurred. He got no further than the bridge of boats over Jumna, for he there met the mutineers, the signalers remained at their post in the telegraph office, which was fortunately outside the city walls, about one mile distant from the Kashmir Gate and from the Flagstaff Tower. They saw a regiment of native infantry with two guns pass along the road from cantonments towards the city, and learned afterwards that they had joined the 3rd Cavalry. Later on, heavy firing was heard in the city, and Brendish, who was at the signalling instruments, kept on wiring to Lahore all news that was brought to him.

At noon he went out on the road to see what was going on, and presently there passed a wounded British officer, driving from the city, who called out: "For God's sake get inside and close the doors."

"We did so," says Mr. Brendish, "but even then Pilkington and I did not feel we were secure, as we were but two lads encumbered with the wife and child of Mr. Todd, whose sad end was not yet known to us, and surrounded by servants who perhaps were prepared to take our lives, out who were doubtful as to the termination of events."

For two hours more the boys held on, listening to the firing within the walls. At 2 p.m. Brendish went to the Umballa instrument for the last time and signalled to the hands at the other end of the wire the historic message ending "and now I'm off," the meaning being that they were leaving the office.

He and his comrade had persuaded Mrs. Todd to accompany them to the Flagstaff Tower, where a number of Europeans had already congregated, as it was the only possible place of safety. They remained there until sunset, and witnessed the blowing up of the magazine. That night the refugees fled, and the two signalers eventually got safe to Umballa.

Fads and Fashions.

regular lines and muffs resembling huge bags are seen.

Hatpins mounted with roses fastened from black silk are used on mourning hats.

Ribbon flowers of white silk flat, applied to the hat of black beaver are most effective.

This is to be a fur season, and wraps and coats of sable and seal are in first fashion.

Lace veils are still with us. Bad net, maline and brussels have become the greatest favorites.

Metallic nets and laces play a very important part in the construction of most of the theatre caps.

Novelties appearing on the new outing hats are wings of suede. They are remarkably odd and pretty.

Moire is again used for afternoon and evening. It is combined with marabou, or with cut ostrich feathers.

Many scarfs have embroidered an silk crocheted lace ends, in self tone or in harmoniously contrasting color.

Large velvet bags with the persons touch of an embroidered monogram in one corner are very much favored.

Among scarfs, the newest material is the silk tricotee, like glove silk. These come in all the fashionable shades.

Many of the sleeves in the new evening gowns are slashed with other material appearing underneath.

Nets are gaining in favor as a foundation for chignon corsages, producing a much softer effect than silk.

Among the novelty buttons from Paris is one of china or glass, delicately tinted from deep coral color to almost white.

Fancy bows of all descriptions have come back again, and those with touches of Roman or Persian silk are especially popular.

Geneva, November 12.—A small balloon rising slowly in the air from Montreux caused much surprise to the residents and visitors, who had not been notified of the ascent. The occupant, an Italian named Luigi, threw out ballast consisting of advertisements. When relieved of its "ballast" the balloon drifted over the lake and fell rapidly. The Italian jumping from a height of 50 feet, made a splendid dive, and swam ashore. His balloon was towed to a wharf.

Sensational Affair at Bay Roberts.

DR. PRITCHARD SHOT AND DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED BY OPERATOR DUNLOP.

That Shooting at Bay Roberts.

Special Evening Telegram.

Dr. Pritchard called on Dunlop at hotel asking if he, Dunlop, had said certain things about him. Dunlop replied in the affirmative. The doctor then replied with an adjective and was turning to leave the hotel when Dunlop drew a revolver and fired at him three times. One bullet hit the ceiling and another grazed the doctor's side. The doctor then ran into a bedroom and closed the door, with his back against the door to keep out Dunlop. As Dunlop was the stronger man he pushed door slightly open and fired again, striking the doctor in the back of the leg. The doctor then called out, "Save me, when several rushed in and saved him. The doctor left for St. John's by yesterday's train to go to Hospital."

Further Particulars.

We learn the following additional particulars about the Dunlop-Pritchard shooting, at Bay Roberts, yesterday at Ryan's Hotel. The quarrel that arose between the two men originated in consequence of a report that had been circulated around Bay Roberts about Mr. Meredith, also a Western Union operator, who had been in the confidence some time ago and Pritchard kept it to himself, he says, taking it for what it was. The Marine Department reported the report or reported it up anybody. Meantime and within the past few weeks the rumour became general in Bay Roberts and it reached Mr. Meredith's ears. Dr. Pritchard heard that he had been accused of putting this report in circulation and he called on Dunlop at the hotel to demand satisfaction for what he considered a slander on Dunlop's part. One word brought another and both men lost their tempers. Pritchard drew the latter pulled out a revolver and fired three times. The last shot took effect and the bullet lodged in his side. It is said that Dunlop got the revolver a day or two ago.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

In the police court to-day two disorderlies were each fined $5 or 14 days.

The young man charged with loose and disorderly conduct was asked to give two sureties of $20 each to keep the peace or go down for 6 months.

Const. Nugent summoned two others for a similar offence on the 19th inst. They were each fined $10 or 20 days.

Three boys were summoned by P. Kavanaugh for stealing his horse and rig on the 19th inst. They were each with the fit-out and lost the rug. Two who were the principals in the affair were each fined $2 or 7 days; the other was discharged.

Sentenced to 9 Months.

Mr. Hutchings, K.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, had a message to-day from Grand Falls stating that a man named Milley, of St. John's, was yesterday sentenced to 9 months' imprisonment by Magistrate Fitzgerald for indecent assault on a little girl at that place. He will be brought in by train.

Badly Hurt In Thresher

Blood poison set in—Great suffering—Cure effected by Dr. A. W. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont. writes:—"I feel like shouting the praises of Dr. Chase's Ointment. While threshing grain, my son got badly hurt. One of the men who was pitching sheaves, missed the sheaf and ran the prongs of the fork into my son's leg. He did not take much notice of it at first in a day or two it got sore and very itchy and blood poison set in. We did everything for it but it would heal one place and break out in another and kept on this way for three months. Finally I thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment and in a week's time we noticed a wonderful change. By the use of three boxes he was completely cured and the wounds healed up. There has not been a sign of it since."

Wherever there is itching or irritation of the skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with every assurance that the results will be prompt and satisfactory. It is sold by all dealers, or E. J. Mansson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy Dr. Chase's Recipes.

Another Schr. Missing.

As far as can be ascertained there is no account of the boat Rose of May, which left Trepassay for Paradise Sunday the 6th inst. That evening very bad weather set in and it blew a gale with heavy rain during the night while a high sea ran on the shore. The vessel was laden with provisions and several schooners which left with her put back to Trepassay when the storm broke. The Marine and Fisheries Department at the request of the friends of those on board telegraphed to all the places along the shore but no tidings of the boat have been received. The skipper of the vessel was Jas. Dibbin, of Burin, and there were two others of the same place on board forming the crew.

A Runaway Horse.

This morning as Drunken's horse attached to a trap in which were seated a little boy and girl came down Prescott Street, it collided with a vessel filled with garbage and the horse took fright, running at top speed over the street and turning into Water Street, was stopped by a man opposite Bairds. The little boy was thrown out and had a narrow escape from being crushed under the wheels, but the little girl clinging to the reins with tenacity and remained in the carriage until the horse was stopped. Many who saw the runaway feared the child would be killed.

The Bonavista Arrives

The S. S. Bonavista, Capt. Frazar, arrived here at 10 a.m. to-day with a full cargo of flour and provisions, after a run of 13 days from Montreal. She hailed into the premises of A. J. Harvey & Co. to discharge and has on board from P. E. I. 40 head of cattle, 2 horses and 177 sheep. The ship had stormy weather on the run down and was 46 hours coming from Sydney during which time she had a heavy N.E. gale with high seas. It is likely that after discharging she will go to Prince Edward Island to return with a cargo of produce.

Old Style Wedding.

A real old time wedding took place at Torbay on Sunday evening when Mr. Michael Quigley united his fortunes for life with Miss Katie Morey of that place. Both are very popular all over the place and festivities incident to the nuptials were kept up with the old time vim. People from Torbay, Outer Cove, Fouch Cove, Flatrock and other places attended and the rejoicing did not terminate until 9 a.m. yesterday, all the guests having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

AT BAY BULLS.—The schr. Mary Joseph, Skipper Follett, is now at Bay Bulls, on her way here. She is now out nearly five weeks.

Crippen Confesses Before Execution.

Word was received here this morning that Crippen confessed to the crime of murdering his wife, before he was executed this morning at 8 o'clock, English time. The decision of the Home Secretary to refuse to reprieve him took away all hope of life, and nothing was to be gained by silence. The crime was one of the most atrocious and revolting in the annals of crime, but Crippen has paid the full penalty. His life has been exacted for the life he took.

Buckle and Butt Sentenced To-Day.

This morning the prisoners Buckle and Butt were brought up for sentence. Both had confessed that they had cast away the schooner Livonia in order to defraud.

On behalf of Buckle, Mr. Gibbs made an appeal for mercy. Mr. Justice Johnson sentenced him to three years with hard labour. He considered him the prime mover in the crime. He had most to gain by the castaway. He had insured fish at Bonne Esperance he had not got, and there was nothing he could see in mitigation of his crime. He had gone to Halifax to get $3,000 insurance on fish that was not on the wreck. This was a maritime country and the community had to be protected against such crimes.

The Judge sentenced William Butt to two years hard labour. He had confessed the crime. He had voluntarily returned from Boston knowing he would be arrested, and when arrested had made a clean breast of the crime. He had given him every consideration he could in mitigation of the punishment which must be inflicted.

We understand that the punishment of three years for barratry has never been exceeded except in one case.

BRUCE PASSENGERS.—The Bruce arrived at Port aux Basques at 7:25 this morning with the following passengers: K. J. Wersell, H. E. and Mrs. Warren, R. Wright, J. Matheson, Miss R. Dickson, C. N. Trelothen, Capt. W. J. Corkum, F. C. Harris and J. G. Joy.

Governor's Mishap.

A kerosene lamp exploded and fire destroyed one of the railway cars occupied by His Excellency the Governor while on the siding at Kitty's Brook last night. Owing to the fact that most of the clothing belonging to the party was destroyed, they had to give up the intention of remaining out longer deer shooting and are on the return trip to-day. When the lamp exploded the fire got headway very quickly. The train hands uncoupled the burning sleeping car from the others and by their prompt work saved it from total destruction.

What About the Engineers?

Editor Evening Telegram: Dear Sir,—Allow me to comment on an item which appeared in this morning's "News" to the effect that the good ship "Florizel" had on the voyage from Halifax to this port, made the record time for the Read Cross boats, and congratulating the Captain on that account, why not wish the cook and carpenter much joy also? They each contributed their little bit towards getting the ship along.

In the old days of "yards and canvas" the Captain played the leading role on board of his craft, but since the arrival of the "steam era" he has to share the honors with his brother the Chief Engineer.

This gentleman, whom we always overlook, plays his part quietly, on account of his work being performed out of sight, and not in a blaze of gold lace and with much shouting.

I have noted with interest in the past an item in the daily papers that Captain so and so had made a splendid run in a particular steamer to this port, then next trip the Chief Engineer had been discharged because the ship had been some days overdue. Why blame the Engineer? As the Captain was responsible for the smart voyage why not saddle him also with the blame for the long one.

Then, again, it seems as though the builders of new steamships go altogether on the wrong tack. When a new steamer does not come up to the required speed on the trial trip, instead of spending hundreds of dollars tinkering with the machinery why not try a new Captain, that might help some.

Another instance of lack of justice to the long-suffering Engineer is when a steamer breaks down, and after days of arduous and dangerous work on the part of the engineering staff she cripples into port under her own steam, thereby saving the underwriters a pile of money in salvage, the Captain receives a gold watch and chain, there is a glowing account of his bravery in the newspapers, whilst the men who really performed the work at the risk of life and limb are ignored completely.

Trusting that in future we shall see the credit handed out evenly, and thanking you in anticipation.

I remain, yours truly,
Nov. 22nd, 1910. ENERGY.

Nov. Athletic World.

The November number of the ATHLETIC WORLD, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ontario, which has just reached this office, is an exceptionally good one, and seems to indicate that the policy of steady improvement which this magazine has so far carried out so well, will continue in the future. The various occurrences of interest in the Canadian sporting world are well described and attention is also paid to events in other countries, while practically every branch of sport is covered. Lovers of athletics will do well to get this number, in which will be found something to interest everyone, whatever field of sport he particularly favors.

Wedding Bells.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the R. C. Cathedral on Wednesday evening, the 16th inst., when Mr. Jas. Rodgers, cooper, of the South Side, led to the altar Miss Annie Reardon, youngest daughter of the late George Reardon. The nuptial knot was tied by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Roche, and the bride, who wore a handsome costume of cream cloth with hat to match and carried a beautiful bouquet of lilies of the valley, was attended by Miss Katie Reardon, her sister, and Miss Maud Rodgers, sister of the groom. That happy personage was assisted by his brother-in-law, Mr. Robert Whalen, and Mr. Jas. J. Collins gave the bride away. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride, while later the wedding party adjourned to the future residence of the happy couple on the South Side, where a very pleasant evening was spent and the health of the bride and groom heartily honored. Both received many handsome and valuable presents, including several substantial cheques and a purse of gold from the employees of Ayre & Sons, where the bride was milliner for several years. The Telegram extends its felicitations.

Green Fish Purchased.

The Telegram exclusively reported a few days ago that a green fish buyer was up on the West Coast purchasing all the fish he could get at 3 cents per pound and shipping it to the United States. All that was procurable at Burlington, St. Lawrence, Grand Bank, Fortune, St. Jacques, Harbor Breton and other places, we learn by the Portia, was taken, and over 3,000,000 lbs., or nearly $100,000 worth, was bought, so that very little fall fish will be left on the coast to be cured in the spring and sent as usual to the European market.

The schr. Rescue, Capt. Patk. Keough, from Paradise, P.B., with a load of fish to Jas. Baird, Ltd., is now reported to be missing, as she is 35 days out from Paradise, P.B. The vessel is of 50 tons register and has 6 men on a crew. Telegrams were sent by Messrs. Baird to ports on the Southern Shore, but it could not be learned where she was. A number of schooners which arrived here during the past few days had no tidings of her, but it is hoped that she is in some port where there is no telegraph office, so that her captain could not communicate with St. John's. Joseph, no doubt, is detained by head winds and will turn up shortly O.K.

The schr. Fanny Smith, owned by the Gorton Pew Co. of Gloucester, left Bay of Islands Saturday with a cargo of 1,500 barrels of frozen herring. This is the earliest shipment of the frozen fish ever made in this country, and no doubt a handsome price will be realized for the cargo in the American market. The cargo was frozen artificially, and but that the vessel used all her ice, about 500 barrels more might have been taken on board. Capt. M. Wyse, a native of Placentia but fishing from Gloucester for years, is in command of the vessel, and he and his crew will make good wages also off the venture.

Placentia Notes.

In my last notes I stated the condition of the town as regards the coal famine. A few days later I read an item in the Daily News saying that the M. T. White was laying up at Harbor Breton for 10 days, awaiting a favourable time to sail for Placentia with a load of coal. Reports reached here after that the vessel was discharged there owing to her condition. This caused another big delay. I understand that the vessel now chartered to bring coal is first to go to Spain and then to Sydney for the black diamonds. It is a shame to have a town like this left without coal. But I suppose it is our own fault, for if all hands would club together and charter a vessel and get the coal from Sydney we would not be left without it. Mr. J. Phlipard was married on Saturday to Miss R. Talbot. Their future residence will be at the South East. We wish them many years of married happiness. Placentia has done her part in contributing to the Regulus-Golden Arrow Fund. It will help to keep widows and orphans from hunger. All contributors did their best. The tide was exceptionally high during the past few days. In some cases it came over the road and people could not start out without getting wet. It also put back the business of the town, because people could not get around.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, Nov. 22.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen will be hanged at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning. This announcement was made to-day, and with it passed any hope that the condemned man might be reprieved. The British executioner, who is to guard against any hitch at the last moment. From the time his wife, Bell Elmore, the actress, disappeared, up to the day of his conviction, public sentiment against Crippen grew stronger, but in his last hours the condemned man is not without sympathy. Clara Ethel Le Neve, the woman for whom Crippen killed his wife, has continued her visits to his cell. There are others who shake their heads and declare that they would never convict a man on circumstantial evidence. From expressions in the papers, under the possibility of the street, it is plain that no other murder case of recent years has taken such a hold upon the feelings of all classes.

Special Evening Telegram.
TULA, Russia, Nov. 22.—Throughout the night and during the early hours of the morning special trains arrived at Jatzakelka, the railway station near Yasnyas Poliana estate, bearing delegations to the funeral of Count Leo Tolstoy. Students from Moscow occupied 23 coaches. Following Tolstoy's wishes, request his grave had been made under poverty oak, in the spot where, in childhood, he buried a green rocking horse. This reference was to an episode in the early life of Tolstoy and his cohorts who with childish rites consigned to the earth a hobby horse in the belief that when it was disinterred a reign of happiness would be inaugurated. The novelist often referred to the disposition of his body, and in directions left specified explicitly that the ceremony should be one of the simplest kind without the rites of the orthodox Greek Church.

The special train bringing the body from Astapova arrived at the Zaslavsk station at 8 o'clock this morning. The funeral party was met by throngs of mourning peasants, who since his death had been weeping in their way there from the surrounding countryside. According to Russian custom Tolstoy's sons formed a party of bearers and bore the casket on their shoulders over the two miles separating the station from the novelist's home at Yasnyas Poliana. The route was through a small wood, across gradually sloping fields, and through the wooded part of the estate to the house. The way was strewn with mourners. Peasants marched at the head of the procession carrying white banners, inscribed "Leo Nikolavitch, the memory of your goodness will never fade from the minds of us orphaned peasants." Following the peasants were two students' choirs chanting memorial hymns and four carriages filled with wreaths. They came the sons, trudging slowly under the weight of the casket. The Countess and others of the family followed the funeral afoot. Arriving at the house the cortege halted and the casket was borne to the parlor and placed upon a catafalque in the author's favorite room. This had been emptied of its furniture and was barren, except for the cherished book case, a portrait of Tolstoy's brother and a bust of Buddha. The body lay in state. The public was freely admitted to the room, and for several hours an unbroken line passed reverently by. The interment was deferred until late in the afternoon.

Supreme Court.

KING vs. OWENS.

AFTERNOON SESSION.
OWENS DECLARED NOT GUILTY.

The Court resumed sitting at 2.30. George Butt, one of the men who surveyed the schooner at the instance of the master, deposed to surveying the schooner, and of the report of the survey being drawn up by Owens, the accused. Upon its being read over by Owens, he objected to signing it, because it stated that the bottom of the vessel was broken. This was stricken out by Owens, and the report was then signed by Butt.

Samuel Butt was the next witness called; his evidence was a corroboration of that of the previous witness. The case for the prosecution here closed.

The prisoner was then put in the box by his counsel, Mr. Gibbs, and deposed that he was 65 years old, lived for a number of years at Bay of Islands. When he was asked to go in the vessel he objected to the rate of wages, and wanted $30.00 a month, which was agreed to. He then described the voyage of the vessel to the Labrador, and her arrival at Pigeon Island. When she got to Pigeon Island there was considerable water in her hold, which was pumped out. Butt, the Captain, remarked at the time that if this was the way she was going to act he would fly her. He then detailed the movements of the vessel until she anchored at Forteau, where trading began. While at Forteau, which, he said, was an unsafe harbour, he was left on board three nights by himself. In order to save the vessel at Forteau on a couple of occasions, while there, he had to drop a second anchor, as it blew very hard. He was not aware of any arrangement between Butt and Buckle to lose the vessel until they had been in Forteau some time. The first he knew of it was when Buckle told in the forecastle that he and the Captain had decided to lose her. Nothing was said to Buckle. He denied in the most positive manner having assisted in the casting away of the vessel. So far as he knew, when they left Forteau, the intention was to anchor under Green Island for the night, but on coming to Isle au Bois the Captain asked him to take the wheel, which he did, and while at the wheel he was ordered to bring her up in the wind.

When this was done, he heard the anchors let go. It was then dark. When she brought up on her anchors, the Captain and Buckle came aft and tried to unship the rudder. The witness refused when called on to assist. The Captain, finding that he could not unship the rudder, prized the head off with the windlass bar. He did not assist or help in any way. When this was done, they all went forward, and the Captain and Buckle undid the chains. The Captain made a line fast to one chain, unshackled the other chain from the windlass, threw the shackle overboard, and then paid it out. Austin Butt had the dory ready for them to get into. They got into the dory, and Buckle cut the rope which held the chain, and then they rowed clear of the vessel, which went ashore on the rocks. There was a good sea on at the time. He swore that he had no interest in the loss of the vessel, or the cargo. He was not offered anything, nor had he received anything, in fact there was wages still due him. The prisoner gave his evidence in a clear and intelligent manner. He was submitted to a strict cross-examination, which failed to damage any of his evidence.

The Crown Prosecutor, Mr. Hutchings, then addressed the jury, pointing out the question which the jury had to try, which was, what part Owens had in the casting away of the vessel, that he (the accused) didn't make any protest against her being cast away. He argued that the subsequent actions of accused were a corroboration of the statements of witnesses Wm. Butt and Austin Butt, that by signing the protest made before magistrate March, he was a party to the action, and the fact that he stood by while the other men broke the rudder head and slipped the chains, showed that he was an accomplice, and concluded by asking the jury for the conviction of the prisoner.

Mr. Gibbs then addressed the jury on behalf of the prisoner for upwards an hour, pointed out that the case was unique in the history of crime, because every person who committed offence had some object in view, some motive actuating him, either revenge, gain, or some such object, but in this case, motive was entirely absent, because the prisoner had nothing to gain, was not promised anything, nor had not received anything. Then, why should he encompass his freedom for nothing? If he was anxious to lose the vessel, there must surely be some reason for it, but none had been shown. Mr. Gibbs made an eloquent and sympathetic appeal for his client, and several in the court were moved to tears by his remarks.

The jury retired at 9 p.m. and were out until after eleven o'clock, when they came back to ask the Court a question. The Judge ruled that it was a question for the jury themselves to answer. He merely gave them a few general directions, and pointed out that the point for them to consider was, whether the prisoner was a participant in the casting away of the vessel. That they must judge themselves from the evidence before them. His Honor said that the prisoner, in helping to work the vessel and bring her to the place where she was lost, was only doing his duty, and that only participation in the act of casting her away after they arrived at that place, would make him guilty. Whether he did, or did not, take part in this action was for them to determine.

The jury again retired, and were out only three minutes, when they returned and pronounced the prisoner "Not Guilty."

The Judge thanked them for their care and trouble in deliberating on the case, and then dismissed them.

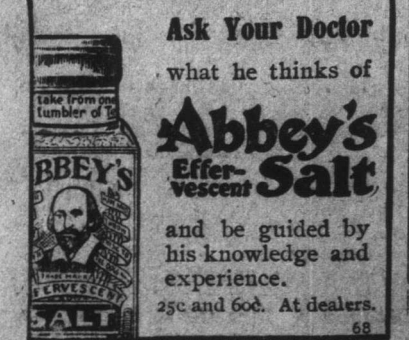

The prisoner also was discharged. Mr. Hutchings wished to withdraw prosecution against Austin Butt. The Court consented.

The Court then adjourned until the first Monday in December.

Schr. Total Wreck.
Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, Assistant Collector of Customs, had a wire last night from Trepassy saying that the schooner Elsie B. had gone ashore at St. Shott's Monday night, the crew having a narrow escape from being drowned. The vessel belonged to Tack's Beach, P.B., and had 400 qtls. of fish on board. The vessel evidently went ashore in the N. E. storm of Monday night.

Nfld's. Greatest Home-Furnishing House

That our idea of furnishing Complete Home Outfits at a low cost is right has been demonstrated over and over again. Instead of a small store, in which our plan was first put into practice—a few short years ago—the Biggest Retail and Wholesale Furniture Store and a gigantic MAIL ORDER BUSINESS, now stand as a MONUMENT TO THE VALUE AND SOUNDNESS OF OUR IDEA.

NO MATTER WHAT YOU BUY

The Popular Furniture store gives values in strictly up-to-date, seasonable furniture, greater by far than the price. And when we say that, we show you the actual, every day records of business done—promises kept and complete satisfaction to thousands of happy, satisfied customers who testify to these facts.

IT REQUIRES NO STRETCH OF IMAGINATION

to see the reason for the tremendous buying advantages of The Popular Furniture Store. The plain unvarnished facts alone are convincing, interesting and convincingly profitable enough for you to consider NOW as any price-saving story possible could be, for when a furniture concern buys the quantities we buy, the order MUST and does mean LOWER PRICES to it, and to you.

BUYING FOR THIS GREAT STORE

has developed entirely new merchandising methods. Demands and conditions here in the city we found existed throughout the country. Manufacturers who withheld discounts on necessarily small orders, were only too glad to make special prices to an organization like ours, with a country-wide distribution—as a result the POPULAR FURNITURE STORE is now doing the Furniture Business of Nfld.

"Fair Play" to the Fore

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Two verses of doggerel, under the caption of "Brave," appeared in your issue of last evening, wherein the writer takes me to task for having the audacity to write a short letter in defence of a man who, through absence, is unable to defend himself. "Fair Play," that is the nom de plume of this local Byron (sic!), is mad, and no wonder. His brother sonneteer was sailing smooth, inditing his Byronian verses, etc., on a long-suffering public, seasoned occasionally with a timely pin-prick of Dr. Grenfell by others—was receiving shouts of encouragement from his few admirers, who (figuratively speaking) clapped him on the back and told him how brave he was, and what nice verses he made—against Dr. Grenfell—when lo! I had the temerity to cry halt and ask him for fair-play. I can assure this long-hated poet I tried to abstain from writing that short letter, but I had to do it; it was bound to a-cur! This local Byron, I gather from his doggerel, is vexed because I did not give the public my name—so much vexed, indeed, that he forgot to give his. He also believes, does this come-alley crank, that I am one that a foe is compelled to engage from behind. I am not surprised at his believing this, for I believe he believes he is a poet, but that don't or won't make him one. Now, Mr. Editor, I not only believe—I know—that the engagement-from-behind is his strong point, and I point as proof to his verses of doggerel, wherein he vainly tries to ridicule me solely because I wrote a short letter in defence of an absent man. He doubts—in the second last line, no doubts—if I could look a good Labrador dog in the eye. I was always under the impression that all Labrador dogs were bad; if that is so, how I could look a good one in the eye, I cannot say. I'll have to wait until I meet the writer of last night's doggerel before setting his doubt at rest. In conclusion, Mr. Editor, please allow me to localise a few of his lines of poetry (?), just to show him he has not a monopoly of turning out this stuff:—

"Musha now! 'tis a wonderful champion indeed
That the pin-prickers have found in this poet.
He's superior to Bacon, Keats, Byron or Scott—
Don't all of his backers now know it?
And anyone hearing his Shakespearean wit
Will acknowledge his wonderful mind.
Vex him and you'll have to G-I-T, git
From this wonderful champion of engage-from-behind."
Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, I am,
Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.
St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 23, 1910.

Harbor Grace Notes.

The funeral of the late Captain Daniel Pumphrey took place this morning at 9 o'clock. The remains were interred in the R. C. Cemetery on the hill.

Miss F. Ryan, stenographer with Archibald Bros., leaves by this evening's train for St. John's on a short visit.

Yesterday was very disagreeable, and as the walking was bad few people were about. Shop-keepers tell us that trade is dull for this season.

The schr. Beatrice arrived yesterday from Sydney with a cargo of coal to Mr. Andrew Rutherford.

Much regret was expressed in all quarters this morning when it became known that Mrs. Duckworth Tapp had passed away during the night. Mrs. Tapp had been in failing health for years, and during the last few days was known to be very weak, but few of her friends though the end was so near. Her kindly disposition made her loved and respected by all who knew her. Mrs. T. was 75 years of age, and a sister of Mrs. Gordon, of "Gordon Lodge."

CORRESPONDENT.
Harbor Grace, Nov. 22, 1910.

FROM THE RAILWAY.—A large number of men who had been working on the Bonavista branch arrived from Catalina by the s.s. Fogota. They went home to Conception Bay by train this morning.

The Fogota Here.

The s.s. Fogota, Capt. Baxter Barbour, arrived here at 2 o'clock this morning from the northward. Leaving here on Wednesday at 8 p.m. she had fairly fine weather on the run north, though a heavy sea was running. She arrived at Change Islands Saturday morning and left in the afternoon. She had stormy weather at the start and was unable to run to Dog Bay and entered Gander Bay instead. Stormy weather also prevented her entering Tilton, and she arrived at Newtown Sunday at 4 p.m. and Westville at 6 p.m. A N. E. gale with snow kept the vessel there until Tuesday morning and she had very rough weather until she anchored at Catalina at 3 p.m. Tuesday. She arrived at Bay de Verde at 8 p.m. and made a good run from that place to port. She brought about 200 packages cargo and her passengers were B. Tulk, W. Riggs, T. Riggs, D. Blunden, T. Blunden and 30 in steerage.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its Forms can be Cured. It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden. Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at

DR. F. STAFFORD & SON,
Theatre Hill. Small size, 25 cents; postage 5c. extra; large size, 50 cents; postage 10c. extra. Mail orders must be accompanied by remittance—oct 23, 10.

A LARGE FUNERAL.
The funeral of the late Phillip Field took place yesterday from his late residence, Quidi Vidi Road, and was largely attended. A squad of Naval Reservists went before the hearse, there being about 100 in number. Deceased was a member of the Reserve and went south with the first contingent. Interment took place at the C. of E. Cemetery. Rev. Mr. Birchby conducted the service at the grave.
